Maloney Reports Physical Threats About Neutrality

Connecticut Senator Asserts in Speech Supporting Revision Menace by Opponents; No Details as to Nature And Source Are Given.

Washington, Oct. 17—(AP)—Senator Maloney (D-Conn) reported today that he and some of his colleagues involved in the fight over neutrality legislative have received "physical threats."

The assertion was made in a speech prepared by the stocky, bespectacled New Englander to announce his support of the administration's neutrality proposals, including repeal of the arms embargo.

"Like other members of Congress," Maloney said, "I have undergone harsh criticism and have suffered political and physical threats."

In presenting his speech in the Senate Maloney left out the reference to "physical threats," although he made it clear to reporters he was standing behind this section of his speech. He decided on the omission at the last moment, he said, in order to avoid focussing undue attention on the situation.

Commenting on Maloney's statement, Senator Johnson (D-Colo) said he had received no physical threats but had had numerous threats of political retaliation for his support of the embargo repeal bill.

Senator Minton (D-Ind), another administration supporter, said that if there had been any threats in his mail they had not been called to his attention.

"There are always a lot of wild men who write in, but I never pay any attention to them," Minton said. "I got threats of all kinds when the lobby committee was active and during the court fight. They even sent me a shotgun shell in the mail—them!"

The reference to physical threats went unchanged in the prepared copies of Maloney's speech made available for publication.

He did not go into detail as to the nature and sources of the threats or against whom, other than himself, they had been directed, but at a subsequent point in the prepared speech he added:

"I know that the people who feel so intensely on this bill may one day put into effect the threats they have made, but to act otherwise than in accordance with one's judgment and conscience would be as a man washing his

Marcontonio Asserts International Labor Defense Group Non-Communist Organization.

Washington, Oct. 17—(AP)— Representative Marcantonio (AL., N.Y.), told the Dies Committee today that he took the office of chairman of the International Labor Defense in 1937 "with the distinct understanding that this was going to be a non-Communist organization" and that the policy had been maintained.

Pounding the witness table with his fist, he assured the committee emphatically that Communists exercised no control over the ILD and that the organization would defend a victim of Communist persecution as readily as it would a victim of Fascism, if such a case should arise.

Washington, Oct. 17—(AP)— The resignation of Elmer F. Andrews as wage hour administrator to be succeeded by Col. Philip Fleming of the Army engineers was announced today by the White House.

Andrews' resignation was effective yesterday. In a short time he will join the staff of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Fleming, who is now serving as district engineer for the Army at St. Paul, Minn., will be detailed to the secretary of the labor. She will assign him to be assistant to an acting wage-hour administrator who, until Fleming is ready technically to take full charge will head the agency.

Hartford, Oct. 17. — (AP) — The stalling of one of the plane's two motors, causing the ship to go into an "uncontrolled yaw" to the left, was blamed today at a Civil Aeronautics Authority hearing for the plane crash August 15 at Rentschler Field which killed two and injured three occupants.

Five Hunters Are Drowned

Equipment on Shore Is Mute Testimony of Fate During Storm.

Erroll, N. H., Oct. 17—(AP)—Hats, luggage and hunting equipment floated ashore on Lake Umbagog today, mute testimony that five Berlin hunters missing since Saturday had drowned during a furious week-end storm.

While game wardens and other officials patrolled the shores of the 15-mile long lake in the hope of finding the bodies, they expressed the belief it would be futile to attempt dragging the large body of water.

Officials theorized the hunters' boat might have struck a ledge and capsized.

Convinced Men Dead

Game Warden Harry Hurlburt said the men's luggage had been found scattered along the wild lake shores and their battered boat was discovered earlier. These facts, coupled with recollection of the fury of the week-end wind, convinced searchers, Hurlburt added, that the men were dead.

The missing men:

Emile Beaudet, 36, assistant superintendent of the Twin State company, a utility; Alcides Gagne, 34, a Twin State lineman; Alfred Lambert, 37, a member of the Research Department of the Brown company, large wood pulp firm; Nelson La Pointe, 26, a Brown company piper; Albert Morin, 28.

All were married except Morin.

Wrecked Boat Found

The men left Errol Landing, which is about 20 miles north of Berlin, Saturday evening for a camp on the other shore and were to have returned yesterday morning. Their failure to appear set searching forces in motion at once. The wrecked boat was found on the eastern shore of the lake, which divides a northern section of Maine and New Hampshire. Luggage was found on both east and west shores.

Hurlburt said dragging operations would be concentrated in an area about five miles wide between the points where the luggage was found. The lake is about 15 miles long.

Russian-Turk Talks At Temporary Halt

Saracoglu Announces Intention to Leave Moscow Tonight; No Indication of Next Move.

Moscow, Oct. 17.—(AP)—The protracted negotiations between Soviet Russia and Turkey came to at least a temporary halt today with the announced intention of Turkey's Foreign Minister Sukru Saracoglu to leave Moscow tonight.

Saracoglu has seen in Moscow nearly a month discussing with Soviet leaders problems in connection with the Black Sea and its outlet, the Dardanelles.

Turkish officials said Saracoglu would hold no further talks either with Stalin or Premier-Foreign Commissar Vyacheslaff Molotoff before his departure.

Can't Establish Blockade

Coincident with the announcement of Saracoglu's leaving was the appearance of an article in the government newspaper Izvestia which asserted Britain and France could not establish an effective sea blockade against Germany because of the economic aid the Reich would receive from Russia and Italy.

The article, signed by I. Vanoff, Soviet scientist, reflected support of Adolf Hitler's "peace campaign" and hinted that Russia was prepared to give Germany economic assistance on a large scale.

There was no indication of what

The Hague, Oct. 17—(AP)—The government announced that Netherlands planes were fired upon today by German anti-aircraft guns near the German port of Emden shortly after reports came from the frontier areas of an attempted British air raid on Emden.

The government announced it was protesting to Berlin.

Report 'Mystery Disease' Cripples but Doesn't Kill

Pittsburgh, Pa., Oct. 17.—(AP)—A new "mystery disease" which cripples people for a short time but does not kill them was reported today before the American Public Health Association.

It is a form of dysentery, one of the diseases which held up the digging of the Panama Canal and for centuries has stopped armies from marching more effectively than bullets.

Dr. Millard Knowlton and Dr. E. E. Lamoureux of the Connecticut State Department of Health declared that the disease is caused by some bacteria or virus which has not yet been identified. It is not the same as the bacillus of amebic forms of dysentery, the types usually found. The latter was the form which caused the outbreak of dysentery at the Century of Progress in Chicago and later at the Chicago stockyards fire in 1934.

Carried in Water Supplies

The great mystery of the new form is that it also is carried in water supplies, the Connecticut scientists said. Outbreaks of it usually occur in areas where water is obtained from reservoirs which gather water from small drainage basins.

"Material washed into a reservoir of small capacity by a heavy rainfall after a spell of dry weather is apt to contain vegetable matter including germs that affect plants," they added, and thus produce dysentery.

There also may be some relationship between this type of dysentery and the diarrhea epidemics in newborn babies which sometimes occur in hospitals and cause many infant deaths. If the disease is found to be the same, or even similar the research on the mild type in adults may be the stepping-stone to preventing or treating the disease in babies, Dr. Knowlton and Dr. Lamoureux said.

Rarely See Doctor

Persons who have the disease rarely see a doctor because they diagnose their symptoms as merely a "stomach upset" and therefore the germ or virus is probably much more common than public health authorities realize. If it is the same disease as infant diarrhea it should be tracked down as thoroughly as any epidemic of smallpox or scarlet fever, they added.

Drug addicts are signing their own death warrants with hypodermic needles which they trade around promiscuously, Dr. Harry Most of New York University reported to the association the discovery of outbreaks of malignant malaria which were caused by the common use of the same needle.

Bizarre Transmission Method

Ordinarily the disease is transmitted by mosquitoes but sudden outbreaks of several hundred cases in New York led the scientist to investigate and find the bizarre method of transmission. He was eventually able to trace more than a hundred deaths resulting from the bite of the "artificial mosquito."

Mosquitoes have been infected experimentally from the blood of drug addicts with malaria and from these experiments it is evident "that a large number of addicts partially or improperly treated who are at large constitute a grave menace to the healthy population," Dr. Most declared.

Nazi Bombs Damage British Navy Vessel; Four Planes in Raid

Nazi Raiders Attack Base Second Time

Scapa Flow Scene of Bombing Raid Today; Part of Series of Attacks Against British.

Berlin, Oct. 17.—(AP) — Scapa bay, important British Naval base north of Scotland, was attacked by German raiders for the second time today as part of what officials called a series of lightning attacks to bring Britain to her knees.

Today's raid was by bombing planes. Saturday a submarine sank the battleship Royal Oak in the same bay which is a base for British warships operating in the North Sea.

"After a week or ten days of this uninterrupted attacking Britain will see what is left of her fleet," one highly-placed person said tonight.

Crew Awarded Crosses

Commander Prien and the crew of his submarine which sank the British battleship Royal Oak Saturday and claimed to have torpedoed the battle cruiser Repulse were awarded iron crosses today for their exploits.

It was announced that they had arrived today at an unnamed harbor and that Grand Admiral Erich Raeder hurried there to extend the Reich's congratulations.

Adolf Hitler also elevated Commodore Doenitz, commander of the German submarine fleet, to the rank of rear admiral.

Second Raid on Warships

Officials said a second attack on British warships in Scapa Flow had been made today at 10:30 a. m. (4:30 a. m., e. s. t.), this time by planes. An official announcement was expected later.

(The British government announced that four German planes raided Scapa Flow today and damaged the training ship Iron Duke.)

Britain's first lord of the Admiralty, authorized sources said, would "in such form as the German supreme high command thinks desirable" be acquainted with photographs of bombing activity in the Firth of Forth taken yesterday by German fliers.

These sources tauntingly asked whether the first lord, Winston Churchill, would dare deny the extent of the damage inflicted in

Dutch Vessel Asks for Aid

Freighter Flashes Call Saying Steering Apparatus Broken at Sea.

San Francisco, Oct. 17—(AP)—The 4,436-ton Dutch freighter Djambi flashed an SOS at 5:55 a. m. (9:55 a. m. e. s. t.) today saying her steering apparatus was broken and asking immediate assistance, Mackay Radio reported.

The Djambi left Seattle Oct. 4 for Bombay and Singapore. Her position was given as about 1,500 miles off Seattle.

Built in 1919, the 445-foot Djambi engaged in trans-Pacific trade in the fleet of the transPacific Transportation Corporation. She normally carries a crew of about 40.

Heavy Gale Indicated.

Reports from the ship indicated she was in a heavy gale. Her position was given as latitude 47.55 north, longitude 150.30 west.

"She is asking the help of all ships in the vicinity," Globe Wireless reported.

The Djambi sailed from Vancouver, B. C., last Thursday for the Orient.

The Djambi crew included 18 British Columbia sailors hired in Vancouver after the original Dutch crew quit the ship in Seattle because their demands for increased wages and a war bonus had been refused.

The Dutch sailors said they learned the vessel would carry 600 tons of dynamite to the war zone.

Washington, Oct. 17—(AP)—The position of the Treasury October 14 is as follows:

French Report Nazi Thrust Is Halted at Line

Devastating Maginot Fire Stops Smashing German Offensive; Six Divisions in Attacks.

Paris, Oct. 17—(AP)—A smashing German offensive along a 20-mile sector east of the Saar river has broken down, the French reported today, in the face of devastating Maginot line fire.

At least six German divisions were known to have taken part in the offensive yesterday in two attacks, one of which carried 100 yards into French territory, military dispatches said.

Allied Army authorities estimated the strength of each division to be at least 10,000 men.

Outposts Drawn Back

"Our fire stopped the enemy," the French general staff announced after explaining advanced French outposts had been drawn back to prepared defensive positions in the face of the advancing Germans.

Military advices said the German Army threw a full division of more than 10,000 men into its first assault yesterday morning on a four-mile sector in the Moselle river valley. This thrust pushed forward a mile and a half, then across the border 100 yards into the French village of Apach, near the Luxembourg border.

Blocked by a curtain of French artillery and machine-gun fire, the Germans halted north of Apach.

The second attack, said French dispatches, put five German divisions into action yesterday afternoon on a 20-mile sector east of the Saar river.

Still In German Territory

There the German advance was said to have been stopped on "the line foreseen," still within German territory and well in advance of the main Maginot line.

This was described as the largest and most bitterly fought action of the war on the western front thus far.

The Nazis drove hard across No-Man's-Land in the Saar attack in the wake of an artillery barrage without the protection of tanks.

French artillery fire shattered the German drive, causing heavy losses, dispatches said.

With their first line of observation gone, however, the French command kept forces alert along the main line watching for a new assault.

This morning French military dispatches stated the Germans

Training Ship Iron Duke Target at Scapa Flow Where Battleship Royal Oak Sunk by German Submarine Last Saturday; No Casualties in Attack; Enemy Plane Chased to Sea.

London, Oct. 17—(AP)—German bombers damaged the British Naval training ship Iron Duke in a raid at Scapa Flow today, the government announced, and also disclosed that the battleship Royal Oak was sunk in the same harbor by a German submarine last Saturday.

Lord Chatfield, minister for defense coordination, told the House of Lords that about four enemy planes participated in the raid today at Scapa Flow, Orkney Island Naval base where German crews scuttled the German fleet after the World War.

Two bombs fell near the Iron Duke, an old battleship which had been converted into a training vessel, Lord Chatfield said. She was damaged, but there were no casualties.

Air Raid Warnings Sounded

A German plane was chased out to sea off the Yorkshire coast today while air raid warnings were sounded over a broad area of coastal area, the Air Ministry announced.

"Immediate action was taken by our fighter and anti-aircraft defenses" after "enemy air reconnaissance" activity was noted along the coast, the announcement said.

"No bombs have been dropped on any of these districts."

Prime Minister Chamberlain made a statement in the House of Commons identical with Lord Chatfield's, and Winston Churchill, first lord of the Admiralty, also told of developing warfare at sea.

One Plane Shot Down

Today's raid, the government spokesmen said, occurred at [illegible] a.m. (4:30 a.m., e.s.t.), with one German planes taking part. One German plane was shot down in flames and another probably damaged, Chatfield said.

The 21,250-ton Iron Duke, built in 1912, was one of the battleships demilitarized under the 1922 London Naval treaty. She was the flagship of the British commander, Admiral Jellicoe, in the World War.

(Jane's Fighting Ships reports that the Iron Duke's belt armor was removed and her boilers reduced when the vessel was converted into a training ship. Her 13.5-inch guns and twelve 6-inch guns were retained, however.)

Chatfield said it was still a

One of these officials, testified Fred N. Conte of Fremont, Calif., formerly a Chevrolet Pacific coast executive, was Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., then president of General Motors.

South Bend, Ind., Oct. 17.—(AP)—Government lawyers started in the second week of the General Motors Corporation anti-trust suit here by putting into the record more testimony of the firm's efforts to gain business for the General Motors Acceptance Corporation.

A Federal jury and Judge Walter C. Lindley of Danville, Ill., are trying the automobile firm, its GMAC, two other subsidiaries and 17 individuals on charges that they conspired to force dealers to finance instalment sales through the corporation's credit company.

Equipment on Shore Is Mute Testimony of Fate During Storm.

Erroll, N. H., Oct. 17—(AP)—Hats, luggage and hunting equipment floated ashore on Lake Umbagog today, mute testimony that five Berlin hunters missing since Saturday had drowned during a furious week-end storm.

While game wardens and other officials patrolled the shores of the 15-mile long lake in the hope of finding the bodies, they expressed the belief it would be futile to attempt dragging the large body of water.

Officials theorized the hunters' boat might have struck a ledge and capsized.

Convinced Men Dead

Game Warden Harry Hurlburt said the men's luggage had been found scattered along the wild lake shores and their battered boat was discovered earlier. These facts, coupled with recollection of the fury of the week-end wind, convinced searchers, Hurlburt added, that the men were dead.

The missing men:

Emile Beaudet, 36, assistant superintendent of the Twin State company, a utility; Alcides Gagne, 34, a Twin State lineman; Alfred Lambert, 37, a member of the Research Department of the Brown company, large wood pulp firm; Nelson La Pointe, 26, a Brown company piper; Albert Morin, 28.

All were married except Morin.

Wrecked Boat Found

The men left Errol Landing, which is about 20 miles north of Berlin, Saturday evening for a camp on the other shore and were to have returned yesterday morning. Their failure to appear set searching forces in motion at once. The wrecked boat was found on the eastern shore of the lake, which divides a northern section of Maine and New Hampshire. Luggage was found on both east and west shores.

Hurlburt said dragging operations would be concentrated in an area about five miles wide between the points where the luggage was found. The lake is about 15 miles long.

Russian-Turk Talks At Temporary Halt

Saracoglu Announces Intention to Leave Moscow Tonight; No Indication of Next Move.

Moscow, Oct. 17.—(AP)—The protracted negotiations between Soviet Russia and Turkey came to at least a temporary halt today with the announced intention of Turkey's Foreign Minister Sukru Saracoglu to leave Moscow tonight.

Saracoglu has been in Moscow nearly a month discussing with Soviet leaders problems in connection with the Black Sea and its outlet, the Dardanelles.

Turkish officials said Saracoglu would hold no further talks either with Stalin or Premier-Foreign Commissar Vyacheslaff Molotoff before his departure.

Can't Establish Blockade

Coincident with the announcement of Saracoglu's leaving was the appearance of an article in the government newspaper Investia which asserted Britain and France could not establish an effective sea blockade against Germany because of the economic aid the Reich would receive from Russia and Italy.

The article, signed by I. Vanoff, Soviet scientist, reflected support of Adolf Hitler's "peace campaign" and hinted that Russia was prepared to give Germany economic assistance on a large scale.

There was no indication of what

Dutch Protest German Firing Upon Aircraft

Reports from Frontier Of Attempted British Air Raid on Emden; Holland Planes Not Hit

The Hague, Oct. 17—(AP)—The government announced that Netherlands planes were fired upon today by German anti-aircraft guns near the German port of Emden shortly after reports came from the frontier areas of an attempted British air raid on Emden.

The government announced it was protesting to Berlin.

The announcement, which said the planes were not hit, followed upon reports from villages in northeastern Netherlands that heavy firing had been heard around Emden, which is three miles across Dollart Bay from Holland's province of Groningen.

Villagers along the bay said they saw a plane that appeared to be British flying toward Emden.

Report 'Mystery Disease' Cripples but Doesn't Kill

Pittsburgh, Pa., Oct. 17.—(AP)—A new "mystery disease" which cripples people for a short time but does not kill them was reported today before the American Public Health Association.

It is a form of dysentery, one of the diseases which held up the digging of the Panama Canal and for centuries has stopped armies from marching more effectively than bullets.

Dr. Millard Knowlton and Dr. E. E. Lamoureux of the Connecticut State Department of Health declared that the disease is caused by some bacteria or virus which has not yet been identified. It is not the same as the bacillus of amebic forms of dysentery, the types usually found. The latter was the form which caused the outbreak of dysentery at the Century of Progress in Chicago and later at the Chicago stockyards fire in 1934.

Carried in Water Supplies

The great mystery of the new form is that it also is carried in water supplies, the Connecticut scientists said. Outbreaks of it usually occur in areas where water is obtained from reservoirs which gather water from small drainage basins.

"Material washed into a reservoir of small capacity by a heavy rainfall after a spell of dry weather is apt to contain vegetable matter including germs that affect plants," they added, and thus produce dysentery.

There also may be some relationship between this type of dysentery and the diarrhea epidemics in newborn babies which sometimes occur in hospitals and cause many infant deaths. If the disease is found to be the same, or even similar the research on the mild type in adults may be the stepping-stone to preventing or treating the disease in babies, Dr. Knowlton and Dr. Lamoureux said.

Rarely See Doctor

Persons who have the disease rarely see a doctor because they diagnose their symptoms as merely a "stomach upset" and therefore the germ or virus is probably much more common than public health authorities realize. If it is the same disease as infant diarrhea it should be tracked down as thoroughly as any epidemic of smallpox or scarlet fever, they added.

Drug addicts are signing their own death warrants with hypodermic needles which they trade around promiscuously, Dr. Harry Most of New York University reported to the association the discovery of outbreaks of malignant malaria which were caused by the common use of the same needle.

Bizarre Transmission Method

Ordinarily the disease is transmitted by mosquitoes but sudden outbreaks of several hundred cases in New York led the scientist to investigate and find the bizarre method of transmission. He was eventually able to trace more than a hundred deaths resulting from the bite of the "artificial mosquito."

Mosquitoes have been infected experimentally from the blood of drug addicts with malaria and from these experiments it is evident "that a large number of addicts partially or improperly treated who are at large constitute a grave menace to the healthy population," Dr. Most declared.

Nazi Bombs Damage British Navy Vessel; Four Planes in Raid

Nazi Raiders Attack Base Second Time

Scapa Flow Scene of Bombing Raid Today; Part of Series of Attacks Against British.

Berlin, Oct. 17.—(AP) — Scapa bay, important British Naval base north of Scotland, was attacked by German raiders for the second time today as part of what officials called a series of lightning attacks to bring Britain to her knees.

Today's raid was by bombing planes. Saturday a submarine sank the battleship Royal Oak in the same bay which is a base for British warships operating in the North Sea.

"After a week or ten days of this uninterrupted attacking Britain will see what is left of her fleet," one highly-placed person said tonight.

Crew Awarded Crosses

Commander Prien and the crew of his submarine which sank the British battleship Royal Oak Saturday and claimed to have torpedoed the battle cruiser Repulse were awarded iron crosses today for their exploits.

It was announced that they had arrived today at an unnamed harbor and that Grand Admiral Erich Raeder hurried there to extend the Reich's congratulations.

Adolf Hitler also elevated Commodore Doenitz, commander of the German submarine fleet, to the rank of rear admiral.

Second Raid on Warships

Officials said a second attack on British warships in Scapa Flow had been made today at 10:30 a. m. (4:30 a. m., e. s. t.), this time by planes. An official announcement was expected later.

(The British government announced that four German planes raided Scapa Flow today and damaged the training ship Iron Duke.)

Britain's first lord of the Admiralty, authorized sources said, would "in such form as the German supreme high command thinks desirable" be acquainted with photographs of bombing activity in the Firth of Forth taken yesterday by German fliers.

These sources tauntingly asked whether the first lord, Winston Churchill, would dare deny the extent of the damage inflicted in

Dutch Vessel Asks for Aid

Freighter Flashes Call Saying Steering Apparatus Broken at Sea.

San Francisco, Oct. 17—(AP)—The 4,436-ton Dutch freighter Djambi flashed an SOS at 5:55 a. m. (9:55 a. m. e. s. t.) today saying her steering apparatus was broken and asking immediate assistance, Mackay Radio reported.

The Djambi left Seattle Oct. 4 for Bombay and Singapore. Her position was given as about 1,500 miles off Seattle.

Built in 1919, the 445-foot Djambi engaged in trans-Pacific trade in the fleet of the transPacific Transportation Corporation. She normally carries a crew of about 40.

Heavy Gale Indicated.

Reports from the ship indicated she was in a heavy gale. Her position was given as latitude 47.55 north, longitude 150.30 west.

"She is asking the help of all ships in the vicinity," Globe Wireless reported.

The Djambi sailed from Vancouver, B. C., last Thursday for the Orient.

The Djambi crew included 18 British Columbia sailors hired in Vancouver after the original Dutch crew quit the ship in Seattle because their demands for increased wages and a war bonus had been refused.

The Dutch sailors said they learned the vessel would carry 600 tons of dynamite to the war zone.

Los Angeles, Oct. 17.—(AP)—Southern California's Indian summer has even nature confused.

French Report Nazi Thrust Is Halted at Line

Devastating Maginot Fire Stops Smashing German Offensive; Six Divisions in Attacks.

Paris, Oct. 17—(AP)—A smashing German offensive along a 20-mile sector east of the Saar river has broken down, the French reported today, in the face of devastating Maginot line fire.

At least six German divisions were known to have taken part in the offensive yesterday in two attacks, one of which carried 100 yards into French territory, military dispatches said.

Allied Army authorities estimated the strength of each division to be at least 10,000 men.

Outposts Drawn Back

"Our fire stopped the enemy," the French general staff announced after explaining advanced French outposts had been drawn back to prepared defensive positions in the face of the advancing Germans.

Military advices said the German Army threw a full division of more than 10,000 men into its first assault yesterday morning on a four-mile sector in the Moselle river valley. This thrust pushed forward a mile and a half, then across the border 100 yards into the French village of Apach, near the Luxembourg border.

Blocked by a curtain of French artillery and machine-gun fire, the Germans halted north of Apach.

The second attack, said French dispatches, put five German divisions into action yesterday afternoon on a 20-mile sector east of the Saar river.

Still In German Territory

There the German advance was said to have been stopped on "the line foreseen," still within German territory and well in advance of the main Maginot line.

This was described as the largest and most bitterly fought action of the war on the western front thus far.

The Nazis drove hard across No-Man's-Land in the Saar attack in the wake of an artillery barrage without the protection of tanks.

French artillery fire shattered the German drive, causing heavy losses, dispatches said.

With their first line of observation gone, however, the French command kept forces alert along the main line watching for a new assault.

This morning French military dispatches stated the Germans

Resume Talks In Auto Row

Chrysler and Union Representatives Try to Settle Their Dispute.

Detroit, Oct. 17—(AP)—Still at variance on all of the principal points involved, representatives of Chrysler Corporation and the CIO United Automobile Workers resumed conferences today in an effort to settle the dispute which has kept more than 50,000 workers idle for a week.

Richard T. Frankensteen, UAW-CIO regional director, reported progress after yesterday's session, but said "no agreement has been reached on any point." Corporation spokesmen said they could see no change in the stalemate arising from an alleged "slow-down" in Chrysler's main Dodge plant.

Both Sides Presented

The union's demand for a voice in setting production speeds was presented at the conference, along with it's request for a change in grievance procedure. Robert W. Conder, director of Chrysler labor relations, said the corporation's position that production standards

Training Ship Iron Duke Target at Scapa Flow Where Battleship Royal Oak Sunk by German Submarine Last Saturday; No Casualties in Attack; Enemey Plane Chased to Sea.

London, Oct. 17—(AP)—German bombers damaged the British Naval training ship Iron Duke in a raid at Scapa Flow today, the government announced, and also disclosed that the battleship Royal Oak was sunk in the same harbor by a German submarine last Saturday.

Lord Chatfield, minister for defense coordination, told the House of Lords that about four enemy planes participated in the raid today at Scapa Flow, Orkney Island Naval base where German crews scuttled the German fleet after the World War.

Two bombs fell near the Iron Duke, an old battleship which had been converted into a training vessel, Lord Chatfield said. She was damaged, but there were no casualties.

Air Raid Warnings Sounded

A German plane was chased out to sea off the Yorkshire coast today while air raid warnings were sounded over a broad eastern coastal area, the Air Ministry announced.

"Immediate action was taken by our fighter and anti-aircraft defenses" after "enemy air reconnaissance" activity was spotted along the coast, the announcement said.

"No bombs have been dropped on any of these districts."

Prime Minister Chamberlain made a statement in the House of Commons (identical with Lord Chatfield's and Winston Churchill, first lord of the Admiralty, also told of developing warfare at sea.

One Plane Shot Down

Today's raid, the government spokesmen said, occurred at 10:30 a.m. (4:30 a.m., e.s.t.) with four German planes taking part. One German plane was shot down in flames and another probably damaged, Chatfield said.

The 21,250-ton Iron Duke, built in 1912, was one of the battleships demilitarized under the 1930 London Naval treaty. She was the flagship of the British commander, Admiral Jellicoe, in the World War.

(Jane's Fighting Ships reported that the Iron Duke's belt armor was removed and her boiler power reduced when the vessel was converted into a training ship. Her 13.5-inch guns and twelve 6-inch guns were retained, however.)

Chatfield said it was still a ma-

Dealers Tell Of Financing

Government Putting In to Record More Testimony on Sales Links.

Bulletin!

South Bend, Ind., Oct. 17—(AP)—Testimony was offered today in the anti-trust trial of General Motors Corporation that high officials of the big automobile manufacturing company made a special trip to Los Angeles to demand that Pacific coast dealers finance their car sales "100 per cent" through the General Motors Acceptance company. One of these officials, testified Fred N. Coats of Piedmont, Calif., formerly a Chevrolet Pacific coast executive, was Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., then president of General Motors.

South Bend, Ind., Oct. 17.—(AP)—Government lawyers started off the second week of the General Motors Corporation anti-trust trial here by putting into the record more testimony of the firm's efforts to gain business for the General Motors Acceptance Corporation.

A Federal jury and Judge Walter C. Lindley of Danville, Ill., are trying the automobile firm, the GMAC, two other subsidiaries and 17 individuals on charges they conspired to force dealers to finance instalment sales through the corporation's credit companies.

Seven dealers testified yesterday General Motors officials had urged them repeatedly to give most of their financing business to the acceptance corporation.

Charles J. Phillips of Oak Park, Chicago suburb, said his Pontiac dealer's contract was cancelled March 4, 1938, after he had taken

Advertising Circulars Sold as Paper Waste

Distributor's Driver Is Arrested for Theft; Allege Large Mercantile Firms Were Defrauded

A big handbill and circular advertising campaign went awry here last night when police investigation revealed that distributors of such publicity material, instead of passing it on to the public were selling it wholesale to a paper mill believed located in Versailles, near Norwich. Hartford department stores were among the heavy users in a whole cargo of advertising papers impounded here last night by police.

These stores, together with other businesses, have been using circular advertising in an attempt to boost their sales, apparently with scry results. Some nights ago police watched two trucks load together while the load of one was transferred to the other. Last night Policeman Joseph Martin and Raymond Griffin decided to question the drivers. They discovered more than they had suspected.

It was learned that one truck had left Hartford loaded with advertising handbills and tabloids for distribution in a large section of the state, but instead of carrying out the mission, the driver stopped on Woodland street where he was met by a truck doing business with the paper mill. The advertising material, produced at considerable cost, was then transferred, to be sold to the mill as waste. Paper prices are said to be very good now.

The driver of the distributing truck which belongs to the ABC Advertising Company of Hartford, was arrested on a theft count. He is Abraham R. Goldberg of 166 Branford street, Hartford. He will be arranged in town court tomorrow morning. State and local police today are investigating the paper mill to ascertain whether or not a charge of receiving stolen goods may be pressed there.

Today it was intimated several civil suits may arise as well as the criminal action.

Newspapers have long advocated advertising campaigns that may be kept thoroughly under the scrutiny of the advertiser. Evidently circular campaigns are not in this class. Even little while the futility of handbill advertising is illustrated by the reported finding of supplies of circulars thrown either in some out of the way swamp or piled up for sale as waste. Today's events prove only more strongly that the only dependable advertising is newspaper advertising.

Consolation Is Offered Those Feeling Underpaid

Boston, Oct. 17.—(AP)—For anyone who feels underpaid, the WPA Historical Records Survey offers this bit of consolation.

Daniel Cooley's daughter, who taught school in Chicopee, Mass., back in 1713, got three pounds and ten shillings for the year's work, while figures cost about 34 cents a week for explaining the mysteries of the three R's.

Protest Road Fund Slashes

Selectmen Send Resolution to Governor; Oppose Cut in State Aid.

Objecting to any move by state officials which would result in a reduction of state aid to towns for their highways, or in any increase in the required match money that must be put up by the towns to secure state aid, the Manchester Board of Selectmen last night adopted a resolution, copies of which today were sent to Governor Raymond E. Baldwin and State Highway Commissioner William Cox.

The resolution, which was prompted by reports that Governor Baldwin is seeking to diminish state aid to towns, is the first protest at such action to be officially raised in any of the affected towns.

Manchester officials have viewed with much disfavor the carrying on of a campaign which purports to have uncovered evidences of town "pork" in highway construction done with state and federal assistance. It is asserted here that the entire activity is blind behind which forces are working to raise state highway funds to other accounts at the expense of the smaller community.

Question Motive.

In the protest here there is no evidence of mishandling of funds, the only basis of the state's investigation being found in bookkeeping entries. Officials here have been at a loss to understand why, when the projects now being "investigated" were started over a year ago, there was no clamor set up. It is pointed out that the records were open and public, and all information as to costs of the construction were investigated and approved by state and federal agencies here. Why, at this late date, after the funds have been expended, is there such a hullaballoo aroused, is a question most small townsmen would like cleared up.

They believe here, according to comment, that they find the answer in inter-departmental politics and a move to reassign funds in directions which will not be of the same benefit that state aid for roads is now.

The Selectmen believe that the favorable financial situation under which the government previously allotted funds for road building here has passed, and any cut in highway aids will react to the distinct disadvantage of the residents in all of the smaller towns.

The resolution as adopted follows:

Resolution.

Voted: That the Board of Selectmen of the Town of Manchester views with disfavor any attempt to alter the present amounts and percentages of moneys devoted to state aid on local roads.

Thus the Selectmen go on record as opposed to any cuts in allotments or increases in the amount or in any increase in the percentage of match money that must be put up by the towns to release state aid for their benefit. Manchester's match money percentage now is 25 per cent.

Street Lights.

The Selectmen devoted time in their meeting last night to a discussion of the street lighting situation here. It was voted that the new demonstration lights erected on Main street at the center be changed from 1,500 watt bulbs to 1,000 watts to see what change in effect this attention will make. Several requests for further street light installations at points about town were referred to the lighting committee with the proviso that action be deferred until after the town secures the services of some qualified person to make a complete town lighting study. It is thought that such a study will result in better lighting and less expense to the town.

Soldiers Marrying Problem for Dutch

Amsterdam, Oct. 17.—(AP)—Netherlands authorities are closed today they were considering measures to stop an ice-cream in marriages attributed to the fact that married soldiers receive five times as much pay as single men.

It was understood an order would provide that soldiers marrying after a certain date will not get the benefit of the pay differential.

Unmarried soldiers at present get three guilders (about $1.55) a week and married soldiers 15 guilders (about $7.50).

Dept. of Labor Sets Hearing

Matter of Wages to Be Decided on Application For Mortgage.

The Department of Labor will conduct a hearing on Thursday morning on an application for a mortgage from the Federal Housing Administration. The hearing will be held in the office of the Manchester Trust Co.

The Housing Administration has received an application for a mortgage covering a proposed housing project in Manchester on which there is to be built a two-story wooden project (attached Duplex) housing project involving 12 family units.

The legal advertisement for the hearing does not name the location, but from past hearings before the Zoning Board of appeals for a change in the classification of property on Middle turnpike, west where Warren Keith has proposed such a construction, the hearing appears to relate to this project.

The hearing is held to determine the rate of wages paid for all construction work. Under the act that provides for the loan, it is necessary that the applicant must pay various classes of labor and mechanics not less than those determined by the Secretary of Labor to be the prevailing wages for similar construction in the locality. Opportunity to be heard on these questions will be given at the hearing Thursday morning.

French Confident

French confidence that the situation was well in hand was reflected in a War Ministry announcement that soldiers in a class of 1909 would be released from the Army starting Friday and the class of 1910 would be released immediately afterward.

Dispatches also stated some of the older officers in the army would be released.

In anticipation of the German threats, the communique added, "Our troops are prepared to meet but up by the towns to release state aid for their benefit. Manchester's match money percentage now is 25 per cent.

Plan Series Of Lectures

Center Church Women To Have Talks Given On Subject of Music.

Group 5 of Center Church Women, with Mrs. Arthur Williams in leader, as one of its major projects this season, will sponsor a series of six musical programs designed to promote the understanding and appreciation of music. They will be presented by Harvey L. Woodruff of Berlin, nephew of Rev. Watson Woodruff of Center church.

Mr. Woodruff gave an interesting talk on "How to Enjoy Music" at the Women's Guild meeting in Center church Wednesday afternoon of last week, using pianos and other songs, and illustrating his talk by means of an electric victrola.

The course prospect is not for the trained musician but for the layman who loves good music. The programs are designed for those who hear them and will make all music more enjoyable and understandable.

The first lecture will be given on Thursday, October 25, and on consecutive Thursdays for six weeks, except Thanksgiving. The hour is at 4 o'clock so that the young student of music or High school scholar may take advantage of them, either in single lectures or the entire series.

Mrs. Arthur H. Keeney and Mrs. Ernest Lyons, co-chairmen of Church street, are in charge of ticket distribution.

Drops Plans For Appeal

Williamson Enters Jail To Serve Sentence Imposed at Waterbury.

New Haven, Oct. 17. — (AP) — Charles E. Williamson, his plans to appeal to the State Supreme Court of Errors abandoned, now limited to the routine of jail life today at the New Haven county jail which he entered to serve a year's term imposed on his conviction in the Waterbury million dollar fraud case.

The once powerful Republican leader was served his first jail meal at breakfast today, for he had already eaten dinner when he entered the jail last night to begin paying the penalty imposed August 21. After he had been found guilty with former Mayor Frank Hayes of Waterbury and others on charges of conspiring to defraud that city of more than $1,000,000.

Near Others Convicted

Jail attendants said Williamson was placed in a cell near those in which five other defendants in the Waterbury case already have started their terms. They are Harry E. Mackenzie, ex-City Clerk; Jesse Williamson, was once a trusted lieutenant of the Hayes Republican back, Connecticut's Republican boss for 25 years; David Levy, New Haven lawyer, Thomas J. Shanahan and John H. Crary, former Waterbury city assessor. Judge John G. Purdie, New York private detective.

Williamson's lawyer, Frank Wilder of Bridgeport, who accompanied him to the jail last night, said notice of withdrawal of the Supreme court appeal had been forwarded to the Superior court at Waterbury.

Arrangements to pay the $500 fine and costs were completed.

The Bids

The bids are as follows: On stone, Cl. W. Glenney, $11.50; Pola, $10.80; Manchester Lumber company, $12.25, and G. E. Willis & Son, $13.75. In the same order, on buckwheat, $8.60; $7.95; $9.75 and $8.50. On pea coal, $10.20; $10.25, and $11. On chestnut, all $12 per ton. On Hughes No. 2 only Glenney bidding, $7.50. Pola did not bid. On Pea No. 4 Manchester Lumber and Willis each $7.

Seven local dealers received invitations to make the coal bids. A total of 436 tons of coal is involved.

It was reported to the Selectmen that three persons allegedly bitten by a dog owned by Horace Learned according to the medical report, had completed their rabies treatment. The Board voted to turn the matter over to the Dog Warden to determine whether or not the dog should be destroyed if action has not already been taken.

The Board named Lawrence Converse as a Grand Juror to succeed Joel M. Nichols, who submitted his resignation.

Report On Bridge

Town Engineer Frank Bowen reported on conversations he has had with New Haven railroad officials concerning ownership of the Park Street bridge. The town is seeking from the records to determine the town and the railroad liability as to expense if it is eventually decided to rebuild the bridge. Bowen reported the railroad holds the question of ownership is a point of law, as no deed was ever given for the bridge to the New Haven road. The bridge was at one time owned by Cheney Brothers and the South Manchester railroad. The New Haven road took over control of the branch road through stock control and not by property deed.

It was reported that some settlement might be made by referring the question to the Public Utilities Commission. A new bridge, it is estimated, will cost $50,000. It was voted that further investigation be made.

Firemen to Act As Inspectors

Fire Chief Roy Griswold of the Manchester fire department is to meet with the foremen of the local companies on the appointment of men who will serve as fire police and inspectors of buildings in the territory covered by the department. The number of men to be named has not as yet been decided.

Through inspections of buildings, recommendations are to be made to the owners which will result in the elimination of fire hazards.

Bay State Cities Picking Nominees

Boston, Oct. 17.—(AP)—Voters in seven Massachusetts cities balloted today to choose mayoralty nominees and candidates for other municipal offices, in the November run-off election.

In all seven of the towns—Cambridge, Everett, Gardner, Lynn, Pittsfield, Somerville and Waltham—the present mayors seek renomination. Particularly hot fights have been waged in Cambridge and Somerville while in Pittsfield and Waltham there was no contest for the top two places on the ticket.

Seek Fugitive Stealing Truck

Description Coincides With That of Convict Who Escaped.

Barkhamsted, Oct. 17.—(AP)—Widespread search is in progress in Barkhamsted and surrounding states for the fugitive who yesterday held up Sebastian Insolia, Winsted truckman, at the point of a gun, tied him to a tree and made off with his truck. No trace has been found of either the fugitive or the truck.

Descriptions of the holdup man, it is said, coincide with the description of Francis Reed, one of two convicts who escaped Sunday from the Vermont state prison at Windsor, Vt.

A short time before the holdup, a car travelling at a fast rate had passed the Insolia truck. Almost exceeding if from the road, a few minutes later Insolia reached Rogers corner here and discovered the car wrecked in the curve. The car, it developed later had been stolen from Frederick Bowman, the driver signaled to Insolia who stopped. According to Mr. Bowman, he was stuck a gun in his ribs and told to drive along. At a wood section, Insolia was ordered to alight and was escorted into the woods where he was tied to a tree with a pair of overalls, after which his assailant drove off with the truck. Insolia freed himself, walked to the nearest farmhouse and telephoned to the state police. Sergt. George Renner is in charge of the investigation.

Walker Seen 'Spoiled And Pampered Child'

Safety Congress Is Told Pedestrians Should Be Made to Obey Traffic Regulations.

Atlantic City, N. J., Oct. 17.—(AP)—The National Safety Congress, whose aim is to reduce auto deaths, turned its attention to the pedestrian today and heard that he has become a "spoiled and pampered child."

The manager of Denver's city Department of Safety, Gen. William E. Gulhane, gave that description of the average pedestrian, and said something drastic would have to be done to make pedestrians pay attention to traffic lights and stop lights.

General Gulhane said municipalities should see that a crosswalk is clearly marked, that a green light stays on long enough for pedestrians to cross and that safety zones are created for those caught in the middle of the street. Then, he said, pedestrians should be made to obey traffic rules "by punishment, if necessary."

New Blood Test For Drunks

The National Safety Council's committee on tests for intoxication reported a relatively new blood test was ready for use on a standard method all over the country.

Under the test, a driver is degreed to be too intoxicated to drive a car if he has alcohol in as much as 15 hundredths of one percent of alcohol.

The committee reported the test was "knocking the props from under the alibi defense." They are:

1. "I got a bump on the head in the accident and that's why I staggered."

2. "I've been taking insulin for diabetes, judge, and that's why I smell like a cocktail shaker."

3. "I just had a couple shots, your honor, but I can drink six or seven before I even feel it."

Reluctant To Quit

Juries have been reluctant to find men guilty in the face of such defenses, the committee said, because it involves taking the word of one man against that of another. The net result was that police resorted to charging reckless driving instead of intoxication because it was easier to get convictions, the report read.

"But all this," said the committee, "has changed in little more than a year, since the accuracy of field tests has been established and widely accepted in the courts. Both gathering momentum courts and enforcement departments are welcoming the chemical tests as the long-awaited answer to the drinking driver's alibi. Public opinion, too, has accepted the intoxication test."

There is one drawback: No state has passed a law requiring drivers to submit to such tests.

Labor College Plan Seen Successful

Buffalo, N. Y., Oct. 17.—(AP)—Catholic church leaders here consider successful today the establishment of a labor college "to enlighten the laboring man the philosophy underlying labor."

Some 500 men and women at the first weekly class last night heard Bishop John A. Duffy assert "these classes are intended to enlighten your minds so that you will be able to better your condition in life."

Boy Scout News

Troop 98 North Methodist

Patrol Leader Charles Hill opened the meeting with the Scout oath and law at 7 p. m. Then the troop prepared to visit the Manchester Fire Department where it received some tips on fire fighting and fire prevention. Chief Griswold showed the troop around the building explaining every detail of the equipment. A. 8:15, the troop left the fire department and held a short drill at the church. Because of the inter-patrol contests, the patrols have been reorganized. This contest is scheduled to run from November 1 to January 1.

On the program for next week is a First Aid demonstration by troop 58 of East Hartford. It will be held at the Y. M. C. A. because the troop meeting place will be used by the Epworth League.

Troop No 25—Center Church

The meeting was opened at 9:40 Saturday by S. Cutler. The color guard, Harry Straw, Bob Hurland and Joe Fontanella presented the colors to the troop.

The four patrols then participated in a knot tying contest. The results were Panthers taking first, Wolves second, Wild Roars third, and Bears fourth.

S. M. Irwin led a big blowing game. Next on the program was a relay where each boy passed one toothpick up to the wall with another toothpick.

During patrol corners, dues and attendance were taken.

Frank Zimmerman and Andy Biggerstaff led the troop in an excellent safety monitor drill. S. M. Irwin then announced there would be a hike a week from next Saturday.

It was learned, eighteen of the twenty-one scouts present, and bicycles, making it possible for the troop to have a bicycle hike soon.

The troop was then dismissed.

Triplets Born Five Weeks Prematurely

Fresno, Calif. Oct. 17.—(AP)—Triplets girls were born five weeks prematurely to 20-year-old Mrs. Dorothy Meneza.

Dr. V. G. Ghormley said the first child was delivered at 5:03 p. m. and the last at 10:40 p. m. last night. Two of the babies were strong but it may take two days to determine whether the other will live.

The first weighed five pounds and one ounce, the second about 4½ and the third five pounds. Two were put on normal baby diets but the weak one was given a whisky and water formula.

The children were the first born to the Menezes, who were married three years ago. The father, Richard Menezes, 24, is an apprentice bookbinder.

Boots Blamed For Reverses

Heavy Japanese Footgear No Match for Chinese Straw Sandals.

By James L. Stewart

With the Chinese Army at Nanyo, Hunan Province, China, Oct. 17.—(AP)—Japanese troops, slogging up and down the rough Chinese countryside, blamed their heavy boots for recent reverses at the hands of the defending Chinese. Gen. Chien Cheng told foreign newsmen today that Chinese soldiers, shod only in straw sandals, can negotiate the rough countryside with comfort, he said.

Japanese inability to use mechanized forces and heavy modern artillery also contributed to what the Chinese reported as the repulse of a long campaign aimed at encircling the city of Changsha, Chien declared.

Seen Impossibility of Conquest

He professed to see in this the impossibility of Japanese conquest of China.

On a tour of the Hunan battlefield, he reached this city 40 miles south of Changsha after a long trip by plane and train.

Leaving the Chinese provisional capital at Chungking, I flew 500 miles east to Kweiyang, capital of Kwangsi province. Then, in a car I made a 300 mile detour to Nanyang to the Lunghai Railroad's famed "Flying Express." I rode to Nanyang on the Canton-Hankow Railroad, and then I drove back to Kweiyang on the Canton-Hankow Railroad, the defending Chinese Gen. Chien Cheng told foreign newsmen today.

Verse:

Today a song we'll sing
We'll drink the cool sweet wine
And let our glasses clink
For come to part.

Chorus:

Give me your hand, your dear white hand,
Farewell, my sweetest love.
Farewell, my sweet, farewell;
Farewell, for we sail, farewell for
For we sail 'gainst England.

Verse:

Our flag, see it wave from the mast.
Of Germany's strength it speaks.
We want to halt at last
The Englishman's sneering laugh.

Of my sleep in ocean's floods,
Don't weep over me at all,
For the Fatherland flowed my

M. Reid and Sons reported after the sale. Sold also were 23 crates of second quality cauliflower for a high of $1.10 and an average of 90 cents. As an added treat for its audiences, the state has arranged with the General Electric Company, sponsors of the Spitalny radio show, for the regular weekly coast-to-coast "Hour of Charm" broadcast to originate from the theater stage on Sunday night at 10 o'clock. Audiences at that particular show will see one of the largest programs on the air and get a candid picture of what goes on before and during a broadcast.

Boy Killed By Date of Maverick Trial Not Yet Set

San Antonio, Tex., Oct. 17.—(AP)—Fiery Maury Maverick, former congressman and former mayor of San Antonio, faces another fight in his turbulent career—this time against the legal machinery of Bexar county.

A District court grand jury indicted him on charges of unlawfully paying poll taxes for citizens before the spring election. He posted $5,000 bond and called the grand jury investigation "cowardly stinking politics." The probe was conducted by his political foe, District Attorney John R. Shook.

Date of Maverick's trial has not been set.

Red Men Seek Sunday Permit

Would Hold Dances, Athletic Events; Other Board Action.

Petitioning the Board of Selectmen at its meeting last night, the Red Men's athletic club sought permission to hold dances on Sunday in the Wells street armory which the club now is renovating anu will use as a sports arena. The Red Men ask that they be given the right to hold Sunday roller skating, baseball, dancing and other such activities. Peter Vendrillo, president of the Red Men's club, stated that other nearby towns the permission sought here has already been granted. He stated that if the requested right to hold Sunday dances is granted, all such will be carried on in a manner which will not disturb neighbors or offend sensitivities of anyone in the section.

Vendrillo said that he understands some organizations in town now hold Sunday dances without permits, but that his club wanted to go ahead the matter in the correct legal way. Selectmen, in commenting, expressed belief that such organizations as now hold Sunday events do so privately. The Red Men propose to charge a public admission to their events it was said.

Defer Action

After some discussion, Board members voted to defer action for one week in order that they might obtain expressions of public opinion on the request before approving or denying it. The Town Counsel also will be consulted on the legal points that may be involved.

Makes Claim

Mrs. Ellen Storrs of Church street, appeared before the Board in asking that she had fallen on an allegedly defective sidewalk on Eastand Main streets Friday, October 13, and asked that such financial adjustment be made. The claim, filed by J. A. Storrs, was referred to Town Counsel William S. Hyde.

Will Discuss Radio

The Selectmen voted to accept an invitation extended by the Board of Police Commissioners that the Selectmen attend a meeting of the Commission dated for Thursday at 7:30 p. m., at which time explanation will be made concerning a proposed two way radio system for the Manchester Police Department. An increase in police appropriations this year has made it possible to allot funds for radio. Views of the Selectmen are sought by the Police authorities.

The Board received from Chesterfield Turkington of the old age assistance enumeration group notice of the resignation from that body of Bernard O'Neill who has quit due to reasons of health it was said. Turkington advised that the enumeration could be completed without naming a successor to O'Neill. The resigned man was just appointed to the job at the organization meeting of the Selectmen.

Protests Snow Bill

A letter was received from Adeline Cheney Olcott protesting against town charges made against her property at Forest and Main streets for snow removal last winter. The town claims $17.50 is due it for removal of snow after snow storms. Mrs. Olcott claims that the sidewalks belong to the town and that the responsibility for cleaning them rests with the town. She notes, however, that she was right pay the bill if it were "reasonable". The town, according to Engineer J. Frank Bowen, claims the bill is reasonable as over 30 hours of work by several men were required to keep the walks passable. It was voted to inform Mrs. Olcott that the town maintains its right to collect the sum claimed, but that action will be referred to the Town Counsel for action.

Accept Bonds

The Selectmen accepted bonds of Town Treasurer, George H. Waddell, and the Town Tax Collector, Samuel Nelson Jr., at $20,000 each. These are surety bonds furnished by the Century Indemnity company. Bonds of $1,000 each were accepted from Constables Joseph Shea, Newton Tarbart and Raymond E. Robinson. Only surety bonds now are acceptable in the town for performance of any officer. It was said, it be any considered reality bonds do not afford the town the desired protection.

Passage Seen Eliminating Embargo as 1940 Issue

Washington, Oct. 17.—(AP)—Political aspects of the neutrality fight were pointed up today by comments of two senators—Taft (R-Ohio) and George (D-Ga)—that enactment of the administration bill would eliminate the arms embargo as a 1940 campaign issue.

Taft, put forward by friends for the Republican presidential nomination, said that if Congress carried out President Roosevelt's recommendation to repeal the embargo, "there certainly would be no attempt to reinstate it by either of the major parties."

If repeal should fail, he decided, an energetic fight might be made in either the Republican or the Democratic convention to obtain a plank pledging repeal.

May Affect Congress, Campaigns

George, agreeing that the arms embargo would not be a national issue, said that if it repealed now, it would not be a factor in some congressional and senatorial campaigns.

If the administration neutrality mentsin should fail, he said, "there undoubtedly will be a drive in one party or another to be sure to go on record as favoring repeal of the embargo."

Both Taft and George favor repeal although the former has proposed several amendments to the executive powers. Taft told reporters that he has received letters pledging support to him for the Republican presidential nomination because of his stand on the neutrality bill. An almost equal number, he added, has come in stating that support was being withdrawn because of that stand.

Vandenberg Silent on Reaction

Senator Vandenberg (R-Mich) who has indicated that he would accept the Republican nomination if it was tendered, declined to say what political reaction he had received on his stand against repeal.

Although there has been little political discussion in connection with the neutrality issue, political plans have appeared that the positions taken by Taft and Vandenberg may have far-reaching effects on their influence in the 1940 party convention.

It generally has been agreed, however, that it would take some months to ascertain whether one or the other had gained or lost, politically, from the neutrality fight.

Making Few Speeches

Taft said that he was making few political speeches at present because the Senate debate was claiming most of his time. He added that he might speak more frequently if neutrality issue is out of the way.

Both Taft and George asserted that the 1940 conventions would write platform planks on neutrality but predicted that, if the embargo was already repealed, those would be simple affairs with little debate.

Taft said that the parties might give particular attention to the amount of money to be contained in the budget in the future handling of foreign policy.

Hungary Bans Nazi Writings

Orders Confiscation of Long List of 'Incitive' Publications.

Budapest, Oct. 17.—(AP)—The Hungarian government clamped down on Nazi pamphleteers today, ordering confiscation of a long list of publications termed "incitive"—including a pamphlet on Adolf Hitler's Danzig speech.

The government announcement said the pamphlets had been put on sale without submission to the censor.

Among the banned titles were "Reflect Brethren," "To Fire and in Blood," "Hungarian Justice," "English Politician," "Justice in France and Hovel," and a book of verse.

Claim After Arrests.

The country remained calm following yesterday's jailing of 140 members of the outlawed Nazi "Death Legion," who it was charged, planned to overthrow the government and assassinate it of their opponents and the more moderate Nazi leaders.

While the secret police sought others connected with the alleged plot, all news of the incident was kept from the general public. No mention of it was made on the radio, and not one of Hungary's 35 newspapers was permitted by the censor to print even the bare announcement of the arrests. Only one paper carried a report of the pamphlet confiscation order.

Writers-to-Congress

Several times recently The Herald has received telephone calls from residents who have asked for the names of their "representatives" in Congress and their addresses, explaining that they wished to write to them to learn whether they wanted the names and addresses of members of the House of Representatives or of the Senate, or both. We have previously said that they didn't know, or they didn't care, or, as one of them declared, that it was anything to do with senators, just wanted the names and addresses of his representatives.

None of these inquirers has volunteered an explanation as to what he wanted to write about, and The Herald has not suggested that the subject of the intended correspondence was any of its affair. It has merely supplied the required information, sometimes going to more than a little pains to make the inquirer understand the difference between a Senator and a Representative, and that while he is directly represented in the Senate by two members he is represented in the House only by his district Representative and has a one-fifth claim also on the state's one Representative-at-large.

While for the most part these potential letter writers are chary of information on the subject of their aims, it is a reasonable guess that in most cases if not all instances of the ninety day credit clause from the repeal measure insures its passage in both houses of Congress. This may very well prove to be the case.

It may be necessary, however, in order to make the spot-cash requirement effective, that the bill be closely re-examined with a view to forestalling any possible attempt to extend the credit provision through sales to private individuals or corporations who may be the duly authorized agents of governments. There would seem to be considerable danger of such sales unless the measure is further improved in the matter of any possible extension of short credits to private interests. It is obvious that the enactment of the ninety-day credit provision makes the bill an air-tight cash-and-carry, regulation, though doubtless that point may turn out to be unjustified.

As we see it, the major objection to any credit at all, even one of ten days, might defeat the purpose to compel the belligerent buyer to take full title to all goods before they are shipped. Because if any claim on the goods, however technical, remains in the hands of the shipper, and vessels are seized or destroyed, then there will remain a source of agitation for "protection", which would only be obtained through a resort to force. And that would mean war.

It should be on the barrel head for foreign government and foreign individual alike.

Great Battle On?

Yesterday's activity on the Franco-German war front in the vicinity of Luxembourg could be using today with what appears to be great determination on the part of the attacking Germans, as taking on many of the aspects of a major battle.

Whether the Nazis contemplate the actual assault on the Maginot line no one but the German commanders, of course, knows. But at present the immediate objective would appear to be to throw the French out of the German territory they have occupied since the first days of the war, possibly with a view to another "peace offensive" by Hitler as soon as there has been a demonstration of German might.

Or all this shooting along the Moselle may be a feint to cover the intended attack by the Germans through neutral ground, Luxembourg and perhaps Belgium.

At all events those who have been figuring that it is too late in the year for any real major operations on land to begin and who have been expecting that the war would go to sleep until spring are perhaps reckoning without consideration of the immense cost to Germany of maintaining a huge army in idleness, and the loss of prestige that such a course must inevitably bring to the spokesmen of the "blitzkrieg" type of war.

It puts no great strain on the imagination to assume not only that a great battle is opening on the Franco-German frontier but that it might even prove to be the only battle of the war because it conclusive one.

That Awful Bomb

It is a little disconcerting to find so widely known a writer as Vincent Sheean lending his voice to the circulation of such imaginative terrorism as this yarn about the Germans having an incendiary bomb of such devastating effectiveness that no weapon of the Allies could possibly compare with it. This "thermite" contraption is supposed to be capable of levelling large areas of steel and concrete buildings.

That, of course, is sheer rot. If the Germans had any such thing as Mr. Sheean describes it for an instant imaginable that they would not already have used it to blast the Maginot line into smithereens and to annihilate its defenders—instead of wasting the lives of several thousand good Nazi soldiers fussing around with the reconnaissance-in-force of the first three or four weeks? Wouldn't they have dropped at least one of these horrible creations on a British dockyard or munition plant as a demonstration instead of trying to frighten the British people with loud yells and fearsome grimaces?

Every war has produced a scare over some mysterious and secret engine of destruction supposed to be possessed by one belligerent. Before the Spanish war Thomas Edison promised to annihilate the Spanish fleet, if it appeared off our coast, with a "ray." The "ray" is forever appearing in the role of bogey. There was the slightest doubt that the German city-levelling incendiary bomb belongs in the same museum with it.

Possible Customers

The war continues to provide new extensions of economic education in now if not easily assimilated fields. In the form of a long dispatch from Berlin, discussing the development of Russo-German relations we are told that an enlargement of trade between the two countries will materialize soon. It is expected that among the German importations from Russia will be Persian lamb skins, peasant art objects, carved goods, jewelry and Caucasian wines.

These things may possibly contribute importantly to filling the bottles of several million hungry Hitlerite soldiers and to keeping them from shivering in the West Wall blockade during the coming winter, though it is a little difficult to see just how.

Still and all such imports may possibly have a market in Germany, if not elsewhere. It would be hard to believe that the German mind appears to be wholly preoccupied with such luxuries as furs, peasant objects and sauerkraut—with, of course, the always essential beer. It must not be forgotten that both Herr Goering and Herr Goebbels are both extensive customers for luxury items and are said to have, by now, acquired considerable tastes with which to gratify their desires for such things. Maybe they will take the whole job lot.

New York, Oct. 17.—The Union League, the Lotos, Harvard, Racquet & Tennis and N. Y. Athletic Clubs are not among your correspondent's fraternal orders, but I cannot invite you to join any of these clubby places. But planning through my card-case (which also serves as a tobacco pouch), I am surprised to see that I am quite a joiner anyway.

For example, a handsomely engraved card here certifies me as an'official Tinkler in the Tinkis Club. Just how I qualified for this turns out to be an organization founded by the songstress, Hildegarde and consisting of members who sat around a room beating on their highball glasses with glass swizzle-sticks. The club indicates that its membership drive succeeded so well that the Tinkler card will have influence on the traffic cop or the ticket-taker, so it is going into the waste-basket. Along with

Dunkee Dentoxe

A credential from the National Association of Dunkers which, I gather, is a Dunkee country club vate, to hold the donut twist the longest, to use a forefinger, dip lightly and hoist up.

It is good, according to the membership drive committee, to be the last drip. The card offers immunity from outraged persons who are shocked by such unclean conduct in the home and restaurant and my fellow members, the accompanying brochure says, are Dunkers.

Symbol of Screwiness

A special tag from the Society of Screwballs, which when worn on the lapel, certifies the wearer as a person of mad hatter attributes, permits him to stroll Broadway by his side-whiskers, remove the top off manholes, sing "Three Little Fishies" in a fake soprano at Fifth Avenue and Forty-second Street and, in short, do anything at the club offers immunity from the observation ward of Bellevue Hospital.

Swing Silly

Also a bletch which looks as if it may have been stamped out by a rhythmic sciatical instrument, is labelled the "Dipsy-Doodlers." I am a Dipsy-Doodler and did not know it, which proves how many honors may be heaped upon a modest man and take him unawares.

A Dipsy-Doodler is an offspring of Martin Lacy Clinton's special brand of swing music which, as it naturally follows, is known as the dipsy-doodle. Clinton members are no other requirements other than a susceptibility and any press agents' highjinks.

High Pressure Playwriting

Some Rialto raconteurs were recalling the flamboyant personalities of the previous era, and, of course, Wilson Miner's name came up and so did William Mack's. I would like to re-tell a story of the latter, David Belasco's favorite dramatist.

Mack was a last minute playwright, a "deadline" dramatist, who, like many a fourth-estater, had his back against the grueling pressure of a clock. Belasco had been after him to finish a play for the new season, but with characteristic laxity Mack had not even thought about it.

One day, however, he decided to placate the bombastic Belasco and called him up. "I've finished a play," he said, "and it's wonderful." As a matter of fact, he had not even started a play, nor had he a plot.

"Bring it up in an hour," Belasco said, "and read it to me."

An hour later, Mack was in the cloistered Belasco office. Under his arm were 120 manuscript pages of blank paper. In his mind was a hazy notion for a drama. He first warned the white-thatched turnkeys—Belasco's secretaries—that this a dramatic reading. Governor, I don't want to be bothered. It may take as long to read it as a play is."

"I have all day," said Belasco, "go ahead."

So, for four hours, Mack flipped the blank pages and read off action, dialogue, conversation with all the gestures, inflections, nuances, pauses and emotions. And when he had finished, Belasco asked, "It's a success."

Mack urged him to hold off a day or two while he revised the manuscript and typed it over and scribbled down all that he relied from his improvised reading. The play turned out to be a success. One of the most memorable of all Belasco dramas. It was "The Dove."

The Treatment of Eczema

The important cause of eczema appears to be the presence of irritants in the fluids of the body which seek an outlet through the skin. These irritants are produced by the systemic causes operating on the inside which shatter themselves by the skin inflammation seen on the outside.

The external causes arise chiefly from the use of a faulty diet, the most potent causes in the diet being an excess of starches and sugars, and their use in improper combinations with other food. One of the wrong combinations which may produce eczema, for example, is the combination of starch with acid fruit.

Although the primary cause is usually constitutional in nature there are various secondary causes which may play a part in inducing eczema. Rubbing or chafing of the skin may serve as a contributory cause, and the nervous have brought about a special capacity of the skin to be irritated. Contact with various chemicals may also serve as a cause.

It has been my experience in the treatment of eczema that the disease will not disappear permanently until the systemic causes are removed.

Removal of the internal irritants which are really responsible for the disease is best accomplished by the use of a fasting and dieting treatment. The best plan is to stay on a fruit juice fast for at least 5 days, using any of the following juices: orange, grapefruit, tomato or pineapple, using different juices may be used on different days if desired. The patient should remain throughout my given day upon whatever juice is chosen in the morning. One daily enema must be taken. Usually, within 3 days the eczema will disappear and the skin will begin to heal. Further treatment will then take place when the patient is placed upon a carefully selected diet.

In a general way the diet should be as follows: Breakfast—Ripe Melba Toast and stewed prunes. Lunch—Large salad olive oil dressing and 2 cooked non-starchy vegetables steamed with butter. Dinner—Lean meat, salad and 2 cooked non-starchy vegetables. Steamed puddings should be omitted until the skin has improved considerably.

Local treatment given to the affected patches with the ultra violet lights will speed up recovery. When soap and water appear to further the spread of the eczema, the involved patches may be cleaned with sterile cotton and olive oil.

The above method has proved satisfactory in many cases of eczema, producing a lasting clearing of the skin.

For further information, write for my article on ECZEMA, by sending your request to me in care of this newspaper. Please enclose a large, self-addressed, stamped envelope. An article on BABY'S ECZEMA is also available.

Questions And Answers

(Cold Sores)

Question: P. V. inquires: "What is the cause of cold sores? I have been troubled with them. Is there any sign of a cold."

Answer: The cold sore probably got its name from the fact that it is often found in people having colds. Although it may be accompanied by tenderness, there is no pain associated with it. The usual location is around the mouth. Sometimes the sore itself dries up and a scab forms over it like a crust. When the crust is removed there is a reddish tissue is left. The cold sore is generally due to a disturbance in which it may develop after exposure to a cold wind, after indulging in some a digestive warning and suggest that the best plan when it appears is to do nothing about it for a few weeks. You may apply some substance over the lesion itself, if you wish, to keep the surface moist. Take a fasting diet a day or two before the cold sore developed, you will usually reduce the intensity of the ulcerative selection of food.

Breakfast Meat

Question: Horatio G. asks: "Is rabbit meat considered a good protein food? Is it as nutritious as steak or fish?"

Answer: I consider rabbit a wholesome protein, which is equally as good as steak or fish. Small rabbits are best adapted for broiling, while the large ones provide excellent meat for stewing. In addition to having a delicious flavor, rabbit is easily digested.

Noah Webster And Connally Lose Debate In Congress

Washington — Special precautions taken to safeguard the White House and Congress a few weeks ago probably will be wiped out soon.

Soon after the outbreak of war in Europe the congressional galleries were closed to the public, except to persons having cards of admission issued by members. The Capitol was closed Sundays, the White House grounds were shut to tourists and a police guard was stationed all around.

To a lot of folks it seemed as if the government were trying to impress upon Washington the nearness of the European war so that opponents of embargo repeal could not talk easily of its being somebody else's war, and so on.

The thing reached to a degree Attorney General Frank Murphy had to deny half a dozen times that he had any part in ordering closing the Capitol. The President, when asked by the Capitol galleries were closed. That appeared to be an indirect way of asking him why all the special precautions about the White House.

The President tossed such questions aside. Instead he put extra safeguards about the White House were lifted.

Actually almost anybody who wants a card to enter the congressional galleries can get one. There hasn't been much evidence that special precautions were necessary. The galleries have been extraordinarily well behaved.

Once Mayor LaGuardia of New York, who frequents the White House, helped disarm an excited gallery visitor. Another time, at other time a woman was ejected from the gallery for nursing her baby.

Neither house has been subjected to such precautions during neutrality debate. People just sit and listen.

One of the most perplexed moments of the House during debate is Representative Havenor of Ohio. The speech he made came right in the heart of the San Francisco campaign in which Havenor is seeking to be mayor to succeed Mayor Rossi. Back after another four-year term Being mayor of San Francisco is a full time job. Mayor or Rolfe held the post 20 years and went to the governorship. Mayor Havenor is there now. Your diet is planned upon a carefully selected diet.

Havenor expects to "commute" by air 3,000 miles for a speech or two before election and by no chance. Havenor's opponents are sure what the public reaction will be to his absence. He is a congressman, but doesn't know for sure what the public reaction will be to his absence. He is a congressman, but doesn't know for sure what the public reaction will be to his absence. Oppose Change To Bus Service

Cape Cod Residents Favor Taking Over Railroad to Operate.

Hyannis, Mass., Oct. 17.—(AP)—Voicing almost unanimous opposition to a proposal by the New Haven Railroad to abandon passenger service on the Cape in favor of bus service, residents of Cape Cod held a Legislative hearing here today would like to see the towns on the Cape take over the road and operate it.

"We would rather walk to Boston than patronize a bus service," said Joshua A. Nickerson, Orleans banker. The Legislative Committee here here to sound sentiment on the abandonment proposal after holding previous hearings at Quincy, Plymouth and Brockton.

Road Operated

Speaking only a short time after New Haven officers reported the road was operating at a loss of $100,000 a month, several speakers, including U. S. Rep. Donald W. Nicholford, urged that Cape towns take over the road and operate it themselves. Henry L. Murphy, Hyannis banker, said the towns would be "glad" to do this.

Several speakers referred to the Cape as the "fastest growing section of New England," adding that the growth of the summer recreational business made the need of a railroad imperative.

ter of conjecture how this submarine penetrated the defenses of Scapa Flow harbor to attack the Royal Oak. He said the entry must be considered a remarkable exploit of professional skill and daring.

A Board of Inquiry is now sitting at Scapa Flow.

Lord Chatfield said it appeared that the submarine fired two starboard torpedoes at the Royal Oak, of which only one hit, striking the bow. The muffled explosion was first attributed to internal causes and the ship's alone of inflammables was flooded on the basis of the first conjecture.

He added that about 20 minutes later the submarine fired three or four torpedoes and these, striking in quick succession, caused the warship to capsize and sink.

The assertion that such photographs existed came shortly after the navy command announced that French troops had retired from the main part of German territory they had occupied outside the Siegfried line since the first weeks of the war.

Not Regarded Important

The retreat development was not regarded here as important, as news however German sources have emphasized constantly that the French merely entered two or three little "fingers" of German territory, in nine weeks, little strips only three quarters to 1 1-2 miles deep.

Those "fingers" were regarded as No-Man's-Land and their evacuation by the French raised satisfaction but no particular jubilation.

D N B (official German news agency) quoted Commander Prien as saying he succeeded in entering the Bay of Scapa Flow off the north coast of Scotland, where the Royal Oak and Repulse were lying at anchor.

The submarine succeeded in hitting both, D. N. B. said, and managed to escape despite mines and antisubmarine nets.

Maloney Reports Physical Threats About Neutrality

hands in the face of the possible threat of civilian casualties.

May Bring War to Door

Senator Walsh (D., Mass.), Maloney's predecessor in debate and an opponent of repealing the arms embargo, told the Senate that the sale of ammunition and war equipment by the United States might bring the European war "right to our front door."

He visualized submarines and warplanes of belligerent nations lurking off shore to attack vessels laden with munitions consigned to the other side.

As the 12th day of debate opened Senator Austin of Vermont, assistant Republican leader of the Senate, who is supporting the administration's bill, declared "Neutrality legislation expires with this session of Congress. He offered an amendment to accomplish that.

Majority Leader Barkley expressed hope speech-making might end and votes begin on amendments before the week-end is out. He said it had been impossible to get an agreement to limit debate.

Repealers' Relatives Eligible

Meanwhile, discussing opposition to quick repeal of the arms embargo would be a step toward war, Maloney said it was being advocated by 40 senators with some or other relatives subject to military duty.

He explained in detail the results of a questionnaire he reported having made among supporters of the administration bill.

Including himself, he said, found that six senators personally subject to army call, six sons, nephews or sons-in-law who were.

After reading the names of these, he said:

"This does not cover all of those whom the newspapers have stated will vote for repeal of the arms embargo, but it is a sufficient list to let the people of the country know that the majority of the senators of the United States who do not feel that the passage of this bill will be the first step toward war."

He said he thought that the present neutrality law has proved innocuous in its application.

Senator Reed, who has served 10,000 bombing planes to countries abroad, rose and asked if he could to deny to friendly countries in Canada the right to purchase planes.

As for the contention that a change in the act at this time would be unneutral, he observed:

Must Be What Appears Right

"We cannot worry about what some people in a distant land think of our actions here. We must the solemn obligation of doing what appears to be the right thing, though it may seem to tread upon the feelings of some of those across the seas."

Walsh, chairman of the Naval Affairs Committee, urged that United States efforts be directed toward building up armed strength and preserving strict neutrality.

Meanwhile, Senator Pittman, (D., Nev.), chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, told reporters an agreement had not yet been reached on proposed relaxation of the measure's prohibition against American ships transporting munitions. A meeting of interested members of the Foreign Relations Committee is expected some time this week to work out modified shipping restrictions.

Walsh told the senate it was his opinion that relaxation of a policy of strict neutrality "can scarcely convert our attitude from peace to the role of an aggressor."

The ship was owned by a New York advertising man, Arthur Kudner, and had been flown here to check a minor motor trouble which, in Bradford's opinion, had no bearing on the accident. Bradford, who lives at Flushing, L. I., was still hospitalized here today from injuries when he entered the hearing room on crutches.

The two men killed were Michael J. Madgano and Attorney Joseph Kurowski, both of Long Island, who made the flight as guests.

"Due to the international situation the committee has hundreds of important leads which cannot be developed until it is given more time and funds," a committee statement said last night.

"The committee is in possession of vital information which affects our national defense and which the committee has just gone into possession of, but which will take considerable time to develop and expose."

The committee, created in 1938 with Representative Dies (D., Tex.) as its head, was extended for a year by the House last winter and was given $125,000.

The committee announcement said that those members present at last night's closed meeting voted unanimously for renewal of the authorization. Among those present were Representatives Voorhis (D., Calif.) and Casey (D., Mass.) who had voted in the House against continuing the investigation. They were not members of the committee at the time.

Author Makes Protest

New York, Oct. 17.—(AP)—Anna Louise Strong, the author, today telegraphed Rep. Martin Dies, chairman of the Committee Investigating un-American Activities, protesting against the testimony of Martin L. Kaltman, former Communist, who named her as a Russian secret agent in the United States.

Kaltman, a witness before the committee last Friday, said Mme Strong, who has lectured at Vassar and Smith colleges and written several books on Soviet Russia, was head an OGPU agent.

In her telegram to Dies she described Kaltman's accusation "against my Americanism" and said she would hold Dies "personally responsible for knowingly transmitting and publicizing barefaced lies against 'decent Americans' of three hundred years standing."

Report Seeing Bomber

Winschoten, The Netherlands, Oct. 17.—(AP)—Villagers along Dollart Bay today heard heavy firing from the direction of Emden, and reported they saw a British bomber fly flying toward that German port.

The firing was heard very distinctly at Delfzijl, Oterdum, Pieter and Driebergen, villages three miles across the neck of Dollart Bay in the Netherlands coast to Germany.

Villagers expressed belief that Emden had been raided from the air.

Artillery fire was first heard about 7 a. m. (1:40 a. m. est) and again at 11 a. m., when it became so heavy that it rattled windows in Netherlands villages.

Observers saw columns of white smoke rising from the vicinity of Emden but it was not known whether any damage was done.

Naval Base Raid May Be New Phase in War

Daylight Attack Coupled With U-Boat Operations May Show Effort To Break Blockade.

By Dewitt Mackenzie

The German daylight air-attack on the great naval base of Rosyth, in Scotland's proud Firth of Forth (the first raid on British soil in this conflict), may mark the beginning of that new phase in the war which Herr Hitler so often has threatened darkly—maintaining from the sky.

This theatrical assault, coupled with the sinking of the British battleship Royal Oak, indicate a renewed effort to break the English blockade which is calculated to force Germany's capitulation.

With it may be expected further blows at British merchant shipping, with the aim of cutting off vital food supplies from England.

Hunger-Dust on is Earnest

The hunger-dust between Germany and Britain would seem to be no earnest.

Apropos of these developments, my mail brings from a member of the editorial staff of The Birmingham (Ala.) News an inquiry of which far-reaching importance that I am going to repeat it here for discussion.

"Can Britain's blockade," it reads, "be sufficiently effective to starve Hitler out in the end?

"While we are about it let's add another query here:

"Can German U-boats and bombing planes sink enough merchant shipping to starve Britain out, despite the British Navy?"

That's just equally pertinent question. Both England and Germany suffered privation in the last war.

I went into the Reich with the British Ministry of Occupation before never shall forget the hungry look in the eyes of the undernourished children, and grown-ups as well. Many of the little ones were suffering from rickets and other maladies because of lack of fats.

And I was in England when folk were going without sufficient food in order that the navy might be well fed. There was no shortage of food when there were supplies for only about six weeks in the country, at the height of the German submarine campaign. Those were the days when many good ships laden with foodstuffs were going to the bottom.

Answers Dependent on "Ifs"

The answers to our two inquiries are dependent on several "ifs." However, an analysis of them reveals interesting points.

Let's look at Germany first. Nazidom is dependent on imports for a fifth of her food in normal times. This figure represents obviously increases considerably during war.

Also the Reich lacks many vital war materials, such as the oil which is all-important in these days of mechanized warfare, manganese, copper, nickel, iron ore, bauxite, cotton and a long string of others.

If we leave Russia out of the picture for the moment, the position of Germany now as regards foodstuffs is much worse than it was in the World war. The Reich then had a call on about the same quantity of food-stuffs as the war materials from eastern Europe and the Balkans, the same neutrals were available for trade, and Germany could count on about the great bulk of Germany's iron ore.

And yet the British blockade starved Germany out.

Now, I should mention the source named couldn't fill the requirements of Germany's war machine. Allied oil, she knocked out by her blitz of revolution before the end of the war.

See Germany Squeezed

Looking at the matter viewpoint—and still leaving Russia out—many economic experts give Britain an excellent chance of squeezing Germany. If the blockade can be maintained. This possibility is strengthened by Germany's lack of economic reserves.

But now we have to consider Russia. Stalin's regime may be at least out to provide Germany with as many possible, regardless of payment, then the Reich might be able to carry on indefinitely, irrespective of the blockade.

However, we don't know what Russia is going to do. Many observers believe she may provide enough for Germany to cut them off, having in mind to smash Germany in the long run so to extend Bolshevik influence onward. We shall have to wait to see how this very important "if" comes out.

More Dependent on Outside

Now about England. This island-garden colony is far more dependent on the outside world than is Germany. Nearly one-third of all John Bull eats comes from abroad.

English existence depends on the king's Navy keeping the seas open for her shipping.

Like Germany, England already has tightened her belt. The little man, responding to the slogan "Dig for Victory," is busy grubbing in the soil of a tiny garden plot which one day will produce a bounty of food to supplement the chart.

Good land isn't easy to come by in England. An estimated half-million acres are under the plow this year, including parks, playing fields and gardens. Hundreds of thousands of acres are cultivated in the great estates. The little man gets his shoulder to soil which he can find it and tills it patiently and patriotically.

Then for Britain claims to have swept German ships from the seas. Hitler is sure he commands supremacy in the air. Yet the other day came the astonishing sinking of the big Royal Oak.

Will Cause Security Concern

Was the destruction of this fortress a fluke, or was it due to the development of some new technique or some a different type of torpedo? Does it presage further similar depredations? Certainly it is something to cause the British Admiralty much concern.

The whole affair is to learn the efficacy of bombing planes against warships. That hasn't been decisively determined yet in combat.

But what is most to be feared from the British standpoint is mass bombings by great numbers of planes against merchant shipping tied up in English seaports.

The Navy may be able to protect vessels at sea, but what saves it in harbor? Anti-aircraft guns and barrages? There again we must wait for the test.

Pitt Ranked as Nation's Top Grid Array

Panthers Lead Notre Dame in Experts' Poll

Have 79-Point Margin On Irish; Oklahoma Third, Tulane Fourth And Tennessee Fifth.

By Bill Boni

New York, Oct. 17.—(AP)—Pittsburgh's Panthers the team supposed to have been completely deflated and demoted from top-flight national ranking this season, has given No. 1 position today in the first Associated Press gridiron poll of the season.

Victor over Washington, West Virginia and Duke this season, Pitt again is riding high in the esteem of the public and of the 102 experts who contributed their ballots to this inaugural election. Though the Panthers were outgained by unlitted Tennessee, 24 1-3 to 18 in season's first gridiron votes, they gained enough support to give the line to get a total of 709 points.

This put Pitt, only eastern eleven to come out of the fray with 79 points over Notre Dame, which also has won three games but took them all by the narrowest of margins. The Irish, with 10 votes as first place, followed in order by Oklahoma, tied last season for Big Six honors, Tulane, southern conference power plant; Tennessee, which lost its first game by fire against Alabama Saturday; Michigan, Southern California, Texas Christian (which didn't get a vote last week), Ohio State.

Michigan and Ohio State opened their Big Ten campaigns impressively with the highly rated favorites for the conference title; Southern California, with seventh-place Oregon, which fought the Trojans to a tie, stand out on the west coast, and Texas Aggies drew most of their ballots on the strength of their 33-7 thumping of Villanova last week-end.

About Town

Carol Ann Robinson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Robinson of Eldridge street was five years old last Saturday. The event was celebrated by a party which was attended by 18 little boys and girls. Miss Robinson received many decorations and favors, and the refreshments were in keeping. Carol Ann was remembered with many dainty gifts.

Police last night announced recovery of a car stolen from a parking place on Pine street on Thursday. The auto belongs to Mrs. Kenneth Ray, of Tolland road, Glastonbury. It was found abandoned in the first block of vacant lot off Bidwell street, less than two miles from where it was stolen. Police Patrolman Joseph J. Fitzgerald and Policeman William Jr., were the officers.

Three years ago the tax delinquency in Manchester amounted to $535,000. As of September 30, the outstanding sum had been reduced by Tax Collector Samuel Nelson, Jr., to only $87,440. Adding in this delinquency with the amount still to be paid on the tax list of the past payment period, the total town tax delinquency is $160,000.

From a total tax delinquency of $15,000 three years ago, the outstanding sum due on the 1938 district assessment is $390. In the 6th-district the sum of $ 6.23 is still owing, and in the 3rd district $193 is due.

It was noted today that although the old age assistance tax of $3 is due on October 1, numbers of persons already are making payment in order that they will not later forget the obligation and be held for the one dollar penalty.

Silver Cityites Hold 7-5 Edge in Series to Date; Both in Running for Loop Title.

Meriden High is one of two schools in the Central Connecticut Interscholastic League that holds an edge over Manchester in football games played to date, the other being Bristol, but Coach Tom Kelley's grid warriors hope to get on a more even footing when the rivals clash this Friday afternoon at Mt. Nebo. The kick-off is scheduled for 3 o'clock.

Holds 7-5 Margin

Meriden has gained seven victories over Manchester in twelve games and has captured more CCIL titles in the fall sport than any other school, five in all and two in succession, from 1936 through 1938. Meriden's last win over the Indians came in a 14-0 decision in 1936, the rivals didn't meet in 1937 and last year the Manchester eked out a 7-0 triumph in the closing moments of a scoreless battle.

Last year's game seemed headed for a scoreless tie when Harry Squatritio recovered a fumble on Meriden's 42-yard strip. Then Ed Blanchard faded back and let loose a pass that Johnny Hilinski caught, the substitute end racing 25 yards for the only tally of the game. Hilinski's conversion from the front in the League race and the locals were never headed after that.

Still a Title Hope

Manchester's chances for the running for the 1939 diadem but another loss would practically end Meriden and Middletown to retain its title hopes. The Silver Lining club is a good one for sure, and no worse than last year's Red Sox club which finished in the cellar for the Red and White article.

Meriden battled to a scoreless deadlock with West-Hartford in the opener, showing several scoring opportunities, and then suffered a 14-0 setback from the Bristol High of Southington. Manchester trimmed Waterbury Leavenworth High 21 to 6 in a game that was bowed to Bristol, 13-0, and noted West Hartford team last Friday with a hair-raising rally in the final half, 13-12.

Philip Gerald Morris men gave testimony that the company required him to retain its title hopes. The Silver Lining Club is a good one for sure, and no worse than last year's Red Sox club which finished in the cellar for the Red and White article.

Meriden battled to a scoreless deadlock with West-Hartford in the opener, showing several scoring opportunities, and then suffered a 14-0 setback from the Bristol High of Southington. Manchester trimmed Waterbury Leavenworth High 21 to 6 in a game that was bowed to Bristol, 13-0, and noted West Hartford team last Friday with a hair-raising rally in the final half, 13-12.

Could Yankees Have Defeated Own Pitchers?

Fan Poses Moot Problem But Expert Analysis Leans Toward an Affirmative Answer.

Cincinnati, O., Oct. 17.—(AP)—Just to get the hot stove league going in some cool style, I hired a post-mortemizer on the late World Series acknowledge fan mail posing the query: "How would Yank hurlers—had they been Redlegs—have faced against the Yankees?"

So what? But of many "so whats" is baseball made, so, at the instance of C. J. England (212 South Parker) Springfield, Ill., here goes:

"The Yanks can hit," he writes, "but I don't think their pitchers were so hot. I'd like to see against their own team: and see how far they went.

"Put the outstanding player's name where it belongs—Paul Derringer."

Quite right, Mr. England.

But the strongest query concerned Yank hurlers against Yanks and that prompted a transposition of pitching staffs.

Granted their knowledge of batting, Cincinnati's Lee Allen, in "Margino line," it's probably true they'd give the late of Ruffing, Walters and Thompson in being hit for extra bases—and as visitors now and of course, in pitching.

It's still appropriate to reflect that while the teams each collected 27 hits in the series, the Yanks, New Yorkers, with seven homers, made theirs good for 34 bases while the Redlegs, without any extra bases, gained 32 to lose by a comparate score of 20-8.

The world champs boasted five 300 hitters, the DiMaggio among them with .384. Dahlgren entered the series as a low man with .324, Crosetti was the lowest, .250, and the Reds numbered only two above .300 mark but otherwise counted a lineup in which "low" was .237.

In the series itself, seven Yank hurlers fanned 22, Monte Pearson was scheduled for only 2 innings McCarthynmen were put down on strikes by Cincinnati pitchers, Ruffing, Pearson, Hadley and Gomez, Bonham, Walters, Thompson, Walters, Moore and Grissom a total of nine.

The latter pitcher appeared in two respects in entering the classic: each led its league in pitching, the Reds with .974 and the Yanks .970 and closed the series at .970 and .952.

Each ranked second in team batting, Cincinnati with .278 and the Yankees .239. The series close with them even cloberr matched at .203 and .206 respectively.

The whole situation, then, is one of delicate balance except for Yankee power at the plate.

Ruffing won 21 games, lost 7, allowed 211 safeties and 75 passes but whiffing 93, was scored on 88 times.

Pearson, hero of a two-hit performance in New York, won 12 and lost 5 last season, yielded 152 hits and 70 Annie Oakleys for 78 bases and struck out 78.

But even Pearson in Red uniform would have suffered Derringer's fate in that last-game here, considering the Reds' big mitted-and-hard-hitting lineup.

Pearson as a Redleg would have faced Derringer's fate in another game if for no other reason than that Cincinnati's pitchers hitting well satisfied with the performance of his charges, considering the first class opposition that has been encountered, and believes the Gas Houses have a fine chance of turning back the invaders Sunday. The team will practice tomorrow and Friday nights and all players have asked to be present with pads on.

Baldwin, Cross To Be Present

To Be Among Distinguished Guests at Dinner of the League.

Governor Raymond E. Baldwin and former Governor Wilbur L. Cross will be among the distinguished guests at the head table at the dinner of the Connecticut League of Women Voters at the Hartford Club in Hartford tomorrow evening, when Major George Fielding Eliot and Commander Eugene E. Wilson, U.S.N. will be the speakers.

The dinner will mark the opening of the expansion program which the League of Women Voters is conducting, and many distinguished men and women of Connecticut are acting as sponsors for the campaign.

Because of the unusually large demand for dinner reservations, which have taxed the capacity of the dining room at the Hartford Club, it was announced today by Mrs. Harrison B. Freeman of Hartford, chairman of the committee on arrangements, that it has been decided to allow people to come in after the dinner, so that they may hear the addresses of Major Eliot and Commander Wilson.

College Presidents

Five college presidents are among the sponsors for the League's expansion program. Lieutenant Governor James L. McConaughy, who is president of Wesleyan University; President Charles S. Seymour of Yale University; Dr. Katharine Blunt, President of Connecticut College; President Remsen B. Ogilby of Trinity and President Albert N. Jorgensen of the University of Connecticut.

Chief Justice William M. Maltbie is a sponsor, also State's Attorney Hugh M. Alcorn, Judge Carroll C. Hincks of the United States District Court, Mrs. Sara B. Crawford, Secretary of State, Horace D. Taft, retired head of the Taft School in Watertown, former United States Senator Frederic C. Walcott, and Morgan B. Brainard, president of the Aetna Insurance Company.

Six distinguished Connecticut editors also are among the sponsors for the League's expansion program.

Maurice S. Sherman, editor of the Hartford Courant, Ward E. Duffy, managing editor of the Hartford Times, John Day Jackson, editor and owner of the New Haven Register and Journal-Courier, Victor W. Knauth, of the Bridgeport Times-Star, and E. Vincent Maloney of the Waterbury Democrat.

said that since he is an engineer by profession he probably will have some kind of engineering work with the RFC. That agency makes loans which require checking by engineers before approval.

Fleming, a graduate of West Point in 1909, once was deputy administrator of the Public Works Administration. He also served as district engineer in charge of power development at the abandoned Passamaquoddy tide-harnessing project in Maine and later as coordinator of the Resettlement Administration.

Papers giving him his new assignment are in the mail, Early said; and he was expected to report for his new job immediately.

The White House made public an exchange of letters between Andrews and the president in which the latter commended the administrator and expressed his "heartfelt appreciation of all you have done to make the new (wage-hour) division operate smoothly and efficiently and in the best interests of all concerned."

Setback Tourney Starts Thursday

The setback tournament between teams representing St. James' and St. Bridget's Holy Name societies and Campbell Council K. of C. which will be played each week in the K. of C. home, will start Thursday evening. The games will get underway each evening of play at 8:15. The tournament was to have started last week, but because of the inability of George Patten, who is arranging the tournament, to get a list of players, the start was postponed.

Claim to Be First Ever to Climb Rock

Oakland, Calif., Oct. 17.—(AP)—Capitalizing on others' failures, four Sierra Club members claim to be the first men ever to climb the sheer 2,000 feet of New Mexico's famous Ship Rock.

The quartet asked advice of mountaineers from other parts of the world who had failed to scale the rock. They spent a whole day studying the slopes with a telescope.

The four — Bestor Robinson, David Brower, Raffi Bedayan and John Dyer—said the ascent required four days.

Russo-Turk Talks Halt Temporarily

the next move would be in Russia's negotiations with Turkey. Saracoglu was expected to confer shortly with Rumanian leaders.

It was considered significant that in concluding recent pacts with Baltic states, the Russians always announced them before the departure of visiting envoys.

Meanwhile reports here told of an increasing flood of Jewish refugees from German-occupied Poland, pouring into adjoining Polish territory now held by the Russians.

Scattered Remnants Fighting

The reports said that scattered remnants of the Polish Army still were fighting a guerrilla campaign in eastern Poland, hiding in woods and marshes and wearing uniforms of Soviet soldiers they had killed in ambush.

Vanoff's article in Izvestia said that Italy, as a neutral, could import commodities Germany needs then export them to the Reich, as a neutral, and that Russia is pledged to supply Germany with raw materials under recent agreements.

Britain and France, Vanoff argued, could make the blockade more effective only by "infringing upon the trade rights of neutral states, which inevitably would lead to new international complications."

Vanoff said the present scope of the "war on the seas" made it vital for the Soviet to strengthen her sea defenses. He added that British and French warships would be unable to penetrate into the Baltic to thrust at Germany from that direction.

Steady Stream of Refugees

There were numerous unofficial reports of the stream of Jewish refugees from the German side of the new boundary, estimated already to total 500,000 to 1,000,000.

For example, the population of Bialystok (Belostok), on the Russian side of the line, normally 100,000, is said to be nearly doubled. Wilno (Vilna), which Russia gave back to Lithuania, was also said to be jammed with refugees Jews.

Russians here say the Red Army is receiving the Jews cordially and providing work for them. The native population, however, is said to be fearful of Nazi spies among the refugees and to be receiving them with suspicion.

The future status of the wanderers remained unsettled.

Condemns Propaganda Drive

In the absence of developments on the diplomatic front with regard to the Finnish and Turkish negotiations, Russia was conducting a propaganda Campaign for approval at a plebiscite Sunday of her annexation of the Polish Ukraine and White Russian territory.

It was understood there were simultaneous steps against outspoken opponents of the Soviet regime in the occupied territories. Soviet officials insisted, however, that the vote would be fair and free.

See Specedy Conclusion

Ankara, Oct. 17.—(AP)—Speedy conclusion of negotiations with Soviet Russia and signature of a new pact were anticipated in Turkish political circles today as the result of a special cabinet meeting which was reported to have sent final instructions to Foreign Minister Sukru Saraoglu.

Wide speculation existed as to the nature and scope of such a pact, but it was stressed that it would not affect the status of the Dardanelles or the Black Sea or impair in any way Turkey's commitments to Britain and France.

Competent Turkish quarters insisted that this country never would subscribe to any combination refusing pledges to her Balkan allies or the western powers.

Finns Study Questions

Helsinki, Oct. 17.—(AP)—Finnish government officials studied questions raised in negotiations with Soviet Russia today but no definite change in the situation was expected until after the Stockholm conference of Scandinavian kings and the president of Finland Thursday.

Dr. Juho Kusti Paasikivi, Finnish minister to Sweden and chief negotiator with the Soviet union, was constant; at the call of government heads and was expected to remain here at least until the week-end.

President Kyosti Kallio and Foreign Minister Eljas Erkko prepared to fly to Stockholm for the conference tomorrow with other northern neutral nations to discuss their mutual problems.

● SERIAL STORY

JOAN OF ARKANSAS

BY JERRY BRONDFIELD

COPYRIGHT, 1939, NEA SERVICE, INC.

Cast of Characters

Joan Johnson—a mysterious coed, glamor girl of the Tech campus.

Keith Rhodes — Tech's star halfback, headed for All-America honors.

Dan Webber — the blocking back who clears Keith's way; a steady, industrious student.

Yesterday: Joan sees Keith Rhodes play brilliantly in Tech's first game. But she notices that Keith's spectacular runs. After the game, Keith calls to invite her to the Gamma house. The other girls are frankly envious.

Chapter VI

Eyeing herself in the full-length mirror next morning Joan felt there was little reason why she shouldn't progress. It wasn't conceit but a world of confidence.

She attached a blue velvet bow to her hair and stepped back to survey the result.

"Looks pretty slick to me."

Joan turned quickly at the sound of a voice in the doorway.

"Oh . . . Carol . . . c'mon in."

Carol sat down and regarded Joan meditatively. "Y'know," she began, regarding Joan's sleek curves and long, dark bob, "I've got a pretty good hunch that you'll have Mister Keith Rhodes all tied up and wrapped for delivery before many moons have come and gone."

Joan smiled. "Thanks, but I don't ever want to get my man in that condition. They don't amount to much."

"I can appreciate philosophy, but wouldn't it give you a lot of personal satisfaction to be Keith that way?"

Joan looked at her levelly. "I suppose it should, but I just don't think like that. Surprised?"

Carol's smile was warm. "No—and it's too bad a lot more of us aren't as sincere as you are. But this is an opportunity, kiddo, so make the most of it. Being invited to Sunday dinner at the Gamma house isn't exactly being presented at the Court of St. James, but it's something which a hundred gals I know would give their left arm for."

Joan winked. "I'll stand 'em out their collective ears before I'm through."

"You'll probably do just that, too," Carol murmured.

Keith called for her a little before noon and took her back to the house. Three other girls were there as guests.

Keith introduced her to Flo Biesel, a Pi Rho blond.

"So you're Joan Johnson," the blond purred. "We've heard so much about you."

"I can't imagine," she confessed innocently. "Just what have you heard?"

Keith didn't wait for an answer. He pulled her away for more, introductions. "Nix—she's poison—strictly," he muttered.

Suddenly a short, wiry redhead burst from the music room.

"Where is she? Where is she?" the redhead yelled. Then he saw Joan and Keith and swooped down on them.

"Ummmm," he murmured approvingly. "Rhodes, you wretch, you're a lady isn't beautiful—she's ravishing, divine, sik's—"

He ceased and took Joan's unwilling hand while Keith grinned.

"Neighbor, do you recognize this native twang of mine?"

Joan turned a startled look on Keith. "Wh-what—?"

"The specimen in front of you," Keith began by way of explanation, "is Tommy Peters, varsity cheer leader and noisiest man in seven counties."

Including Ouachita," the redhead added. "And don't tell me you've never heard of Ouachita county."

"Why—no, where is it?"

"Where is it?" he shrieked, "And they told me you were from Arkansas! What part of Arkansas you from, anyway?"

A sudden warning buzzed inside her. "Oh, you're from Arkansas, too. You see, I don't know the state as well as I should. Spent so much of my time in the east after I grew up I sort of lost track of the home stamping grounds. Was born in Little Rock, though. Have you lived in Arkansas all your life?"

He hooked his thumbs in imaginary suspenders and rocked back and forth.

"Nigh onto 22 years come first frost. Know everyone worth knowing down that way, and some that aren't."

She wondered at that. Tommy Peters was apt to know too many people.

Dan Webber sat at the table just across from them at dinner. "Nice day yesterday, sour-puss," she greeted, at the same time noticing the ugly red welt under his left eye. "And it's a nice souvenir you have, too."

"Thanks," he acknowledged briefly. "Just something I picked up when I wasn't looking."

She nudged Keith. "Cheerful ray of sunshine, isn't he?"

"I'll let you in on a secret," said Keith. "Web isn't half the sourpuss you think he is. He's really a swell guy and everyone likes him. Somehow you seem him don't hit it off so well, so you think he's a droop."

"Poor, misguided soul, he hasn't given himself half a chance to like me."

"And he doesn't have to as far as that goes."

"Jealous—already?"

"Terribly."

He showed her through the house after they had eaten. "This is where Dan and I park the bodies," he said, opening the door to their room.

"And I'll bet I know which is yours and which is his desk?" she mused.

"How?"

"Simple. The one that's barren of books and things scholastic in general would be yours. Very elemental. Ask me something tough next time."

She looked over the collection of cups and trophies in the spacious living room downstairs and had the background of each explained to her. Over the fireplace was a large picture of a football player.

"Bart Crowell," Tommy Peters offered. "Gamma's first All-America . . . center in 1921.

"Over there," pointing to another, "is Jimmy Ludwig, All-America tackle in '29. Maybe we'll be able to stick up another this year, hey Keith?"

"Hope so," Keith said, just as a pledge attracted his attention.

"Phone call," Keith told Joan. "Be back in a minute."

"Neatest thing I've seen in a long time," Tommy Peters was saying to her. "You will enjoy the game more—and earn eye respect of the other players.

Junior (at the postoffice) Please give me daddy's mail.

Clerk—Who is it for, sonny?

Junior—It says on the letters, "Fond Mother—Quiet, Dear, the sandman is coming."

Modern Child—Okay, Mom, a dollar and I won't tell Daddy.

Consider the new and the old as nearly as possible on their merits. It's easy to exaggerate the virtue of the good old days even as it is to over-estimate the great boon that is to be brought by the new.

Hostess — What part of the chicken do you like the best?

Guest—The meat.

Smiling Service

The reason people pass one door To patronize another store Is not because the busier place Has better cards, or gifts or lace. The real attraction, we believe Is in the treatment folks receive; Perhaps the secret really lies In pleasant words and smiling Eyes!

Foster Is Named By Waterbury GOP

Waterbury, Oct. 17.—(AP)—Charles C. Foster headed the Republican ticket for next month's city election today by virtue of a victory of the Hull faction over the supporters of Mayor Patrick M. Perrello in a bitter convention fight.

Perrello, elected as mayor by the Board of Aldermen after the resignation of former Mayor Frank Hayes following his conviction in the million dollar conspiracy case, was nominated by Foster, his executive secretary, by a vote of 17 to 13 at the convention last night. With one exception, all other Town Committee candidates were victorious, though not without a series of sharp contests.

The exception was in the balloting for the nomination for city clerk. The race for that post was so close that a deadlock between Joseph Bernier, former Democratic candidate, and John J. Bergin resulted in an adjournment after 12 ballots.

The convention was spotted by mail clerks among a mass of ordinary mail. The department will not supply such envelopes, but will permit any company or manufacturer to print them

Hartford Received Full Share of Aid

Hartford, Oct. 17.—(AP)—Hartford received its full 75 per cent share of state aid funds in connection with a paving program conducted under the Federal-state grant "pool" road program, City Treasurer George H. Gabb said today.

Since the probe launched by Governor Baldwin into the use of highway funds started, the question had been raised as to whether there has been discrimination between the town and cities with respect to amounts allocated by the state.

Towns, in most instances have received their full amounts as specified by state statutes—37 1-2 per cent, or 75 per cent, dependent upon the amount of their annual tax receipts.

It has been reported that at least one city received less than the 75 per cent.

Parisians Warned Of Raid Dangers

Paris, Oct. 17.—(AP)—Coincident with the German air raid on Scotland, police warned Parisians today that anti-aircraft batteries without advance notice.

Since five unexpected raid alarms in the first month of the war, Parisians, instead of seeking bomb-proof shelters, have slept through night warnings and during the day have rushed into the street. Unpopularity of the alarms has resulted in successive relaxations of the alarm system, and given now only "in danger of imminent attack."

— Sense and Nonsense —

Which Is What

An item in the Boston, Mass. Globe says:

"After it had appeared in the New York Sun that the modern girl can dress with only eight moves, one Sally Fize informed the editor that she could do it in six. 'One for each shoe and stocking, one for my scanties, and one for my dress.' Then, just in case the editor might be an old fossil, she informed him that 'scanties combine brassiere, vest, girdle and panties all in one'."

That's going some, maybe, but the old barefoot boy had it simpler and a city block, for he made his complete toilet in just two—one to get into his shirt and the other to get into his pants. And at that he had on just as much as Sally, for, though her explanation of what that garment is sounds like it was a lot, it certainly isn't.

The Decalogue of Cooperativeness

1. Be open-minded toward suggestions.
2. Meddling is the sand-in-the-bearings that causes friction.
3. Interest in the problems of others insures their interest in yours.
4. When layoffs loom, the grouch has few defenders.
5. Knowing when to stop arguing argues a tactful disposition.
6. To see the thing as others see it means good business eyesight.
7. Pettiness is the vice of little minds—they stress their pikayune importance.
8. Sincerity is the soundest currency of all business practice. The "Yes" man is a drug on the market.
9. Give credit when due. It will establish your own credit.
10. Play Madison Avenue. You will enjoy the game more—and earn eye respect of the other players.

STAMP NEWS

THE sale of new issues on the London market has been brought almost to a standstill by the war. Restrictions on mail from belligerents, and even from Poland and the Czechoslovakian protectorates of Bohemia and Moravia, are blamed.

British airmail services have been cut off except those operating to adjacent countries. The northern, or Great Circle, Clipper route from U. S. to England has suspended operations. Submarine warfare has slowed surface mails, and until the convoy system is effectively organized, mail dispatch by ships will continue to be delayed.

Dealings with enemy nations are forbidden British collectors and until neutral nations set up philatelic brokerage systems, stamp trade in Europe will remain stalemated.

The war is expected to produce a flood of occupational, charity, war tax and other special issues, similar to those issued in 1914-1918. There is no doubt that warring governments, realizing a vast potential revenue from sales in stamp sales, will make the best of the opportunity.

* * *

The Postoffice Department has approved the use of a new special delivery envelope to expedite service. The envelope will have a bright yellow and green border and can be recognized by mail clerks among a mass of ordinary mail. The department will not supply such envelopes, but will permit any company or manufacturer to print them

Driver Not Badly Hurt in Accident

Not believed to be seriously injured after an accident on Oak street late yesterday afternoon, Joseph Damato, 33, of 25 Walcott street, Hartford, was X-rayed at the Manchester Memorial hospital to determine the extent of his hurts. Damato, according to the report, was pinned between the door and cab of his truck at 120 Oak street when another car swung into the door of the truck as Damato was alighting from it.

After investigation, Patrolman Walter R. Cassella arrested Lawrence Peterson of 114 Charter Oak street on a reckless driving charge. It was said that a car which Peterson was steering was being towed backwards out of a driveway, and that it swung against the Damato truck, hitting the door.

Baldwin, Cross To Be Present

To Be Among Distinguished Guests at Dinner of the League.

Governor Raymond E. Baldwin and former Governor Wilbur L. Cross will be among the distinguished guests at the head table at the dinner of the Connecticut League of Women Voters at the Hartford Club in Hartford tomorrow evening, when Major George Fielding Eliot and Commander Eugene E. Wilson, U.S.N., will be the speakers.

The dinner will mark the opening of the expansion program which the League of Women Voters is conducting, and many distinguished men and women of Connecticut are acting as sponsors for the campaign.

Because of the unusually large demand for dinner reservations, which have taxed the capacity of the dining room at the Hartford Club, it was announced today by Mrs. Harrison B. Freeman of Hartford, chairman of the committee on arrangements, that it has been decided to allow people to come in after the dinner, so that they may hear the addresses by Major Eliot and Commander Wilson.

College Presidents

Five college presidents are among the sponsors for the League's expansion program. Lieutenant Governor James L. McConaughy, who is president of Connecticut College; President Charles S. Seymour of Yale University; Kathrine Blunt, President of Connecticut College; President Remsen B. Ogilby of Trinity and President Frank L. Jorgensen of the University of Connecticut.

Chief Justice William M. Maltbie will sponsor also State's Attorney Hugh M. Alcorn, Judge Carroll C. Hincks of the United States District Court, Mrs. Sara B. Crawford, Secretary of State, Horace D. Taft, retired head of the Taft School in Watertown, former United States Senator Frederic C. Walcott, and Morgan B. Brainard, president of the Aetna Insurance Company.

Six distinguished Connecticut editors also are among the sponsors for the League's expansion program.

Andrews Quits Pay-Hour Post

said that since he is an engineer by profession he probably will have some job of engineering work with the RFC. That agency makes loans which require checking by engineers before approval.

Fleming, a graduate of West Point in 1909, once was deputy administrator of the Public Works Administration. He also served as district engineer in charge of power development at the abandoned Passamaquoddy tidal harnessing project in Maine and later as coordinator of the Resettlement Administration.

Papers giving him his new assignment are in the mail, Andrews said, and he was expected to report for his new job immediately.

The White House made public an exchange of letters between Andrews and the president in which the latter commended the administrator and expressed his "heartfelt appreciation of all you have done to make the new (wage-hour) division operate smoothly and efficiently and in the best interests of all concerned."

Setback Tourney Starts Thursday

The setback tournament between teams representing St. James' and St. Bridget's Holy Name societies and Campbell Council K. of C. which was to be played each week in the K. of C. home, will start Thursday evening. The games will get underway each evening of play at 8:15. The tournament was to have started last week, but because of the inability of George Patten, who is arranging the tournament, to get a list of players, the start was postponed.

Claim to Be First Ever to Climb Rock

Oakland, Calif., Oct. 17.—(AP)—Capitalizing on others' failures, four Sierra Club members claim to be the first men ever to climb the sheer 2,000 feet of New Mexico's famous Ship Rock.

The quartet asked advice of mountain-climbers from all parts of the world who had failed to scale the rock. They spent a whole day studying the slopes with a telescope.

The four — Bestor Robinson, David Brower, Raffi Bedayan and John Dyer—said the ascent required four days.

Russo-Turk Talks Halt Temporarily

the next move would be in Russia's negotiations with Turkey. Saracoglu was expected to confer shortly with Rumanian leaders.

It was considered significant that in concluding recent pacts with Baltic states, the Russians always announced them before the departure of visiting envoys.

Meanwhile reports here told of an increasing flood of Jewish refugees from German-occupied Poland, pouring into adjoining Polish territory now held by the Russians.

Scattered Remnants Fighting

The reports said that scattered remnants of the Polish Army still were fighting a guerrilla campaign in eastern Poland, hiding in woods and marshes and wearing uniforms of Soviet soldiers they had killed in ambush.

Vanoff's article in Izvestia said that Italy, as a neutral, could import commodities Germany needs and then export them to the Reich. It also recalled that Russia is pledged to supply Germany with raw materials under recent agreements.

Britain and France, Vanoff argued, could make the blockade more effective only by "infringing upon the trade rights of neutral states, which inevitably would lead to new international complications."

Vanoff said the present scope of the "war on the seas" made it vital for the Soviet to strengthen her sea defenses. He added that British and French warships would be unable to penetrate into the Baltic to thrust at Germany from that direction.

Steady Stream of Refugees

There were numerous unofficial reports of the stream of Jewish refugees from the German side of the new boundary, estimated already to total 500,000 to 1,000,000.

For example, the population of Bialystok (Belostok), on the Russian side of the line, normally 100,000, is said to be nearly doubled. Wilno (Vilna), which Russia gave back to Lithuania, was also said to be jammed with refugee Jews.

Russians here say the Red Army is receiving the Jews cordially and providing work for them. The native population, however, is said to be fearful of Nazi spies among the refugees and to be receiving them with suspicion.

The future status of the wanderers remained unsettled.

Conducting Propaganda Drive

In the absence of developments on the diplomatic front with regard to the Finnish and Turkish negotiations, Russia was conducting a propaganda Campaign for approval at a plebiscite Sunday of her annexation of the Polish Ukraine and White Russian territory.

It was understood there were simultaneous steps against outspoken opponents of the Soviet regime in the occupied territories. Soviet officials insisted, however, that the vote would be fair and free.

See Speedy Conclusion

Ankara, Oct. 17.—(AP)—Speedy conclusion of negotiations with Soviet Russia and signature of a new pact were anticipated in Turkish political circles today as the result of a special cabinet meeting which was reported to have sent final instructions to Foreign Minister Sukru Saracoglu.

Wide speculation existed as to the nature and scope of such a pact, but it was stressed that it would not affect the status of the Dardanelles or the Black Sea or impair in any way Turkey's commitments to Britain and France.

Competent Turkish quarters insisted that this country never would subscribe to any combination refuting pledges to her Balkan allies or the western powers.

Finns Study Questions

Helsinki, Oct. 17.—(AP)—Finnish government officials studied questions raised in negotiations with Soviet Russia today but no definite change in the situation was expected until after the Stockholm conference of Scandinavian kings and the president of Finland Thursday.

Dr. Juho Kusti Paasikivi, Finnish minister to Sweden and chief negotiator with the Soviet union, was constantly at the call of government heads and was expected to remain here at least until the week-end.

President Kyosti Kallio and Foreign Minister Eljas Erkko prepared to fly to Stockholm for the conference tomorrow with other northern neutral nations to discuss their mutual problems.

COPYRIGHT, 1939, NEA SERVICE, INC.

Cast of Characters

Joan Johnson—a mysterious co-ed, glamour girl of the Tech campus.

Keith Rhodes — Tech's star halfback, headed for All-America honors.

Dan Webber — the blocking back who clears Keith's way; a steady, industrious student.

Yesterday: Joan sees Keith Rhodes play brilliantly in Tech's first game. But she notices that Dan Webber clears the way for Keith's spectacular runs. After the game, Keith calls to invite her to the Gamma house. The other girls are frankly envious.

Chapter VI

Eyeing herself in the full-length mirror next morning Joan felt there was little reason why she shouldn't progress. It wasn't conceit but a world of confidence.

She attached a blue velvet bow to her hair and stepped back to survey the result.

"Looks pretty slick to me."

Joan turned quickly at the sound of a voice in the doorway.

"Oh . . . Carol . . . c'mon in."

Carol sat down and regarded Joan meditatively. "Y'know," she began, regarding Joan's sleek curves and long, dark bob, "I've got a pretty good hunch that you'll have Mister Keith Rhodes all tied up and wrapped for delivery before many moons have come and gone."

Joan smiled. "Thanks, but I don't ever want to get my man in that condition. They don't amount to much."

"I can appreciate philosophy, but wouldn't it give you a lot of personal satisfaction to bag Keith that way?"

Joan looked at her levelly. "I suppose it should, but I just don't think like that. Surprised?"

Carol's smile was warm. "No—and it's too bad a lot more of us aren't as sincere as you are. But this is an opportunity, kiddo, so make the most of it. Being invited to Sunday dinner at the Gamma house isn't exactly being presented at the Court of St. James, but it's something which a hundred gals I know would give their left arm for."

Joan winked. "I'll stand 'em on their collective ears before I'm through."

"You'll probably do just that, too," Carol murmured.

Keith called for her a little before noon and took her back to the house. Three other girls were there as guests.

Keith introduced her to Flo Siesel, a Pi Phi blond.

"So you're Joan Johnson," the blond purred. "We've heard so much about you."

"I can't imagine," Joan confessed innocently. "Just what have you heard?"

Keith didn't wait for an answer. He pulled her away for more introductions. "Nix—she's poison—strictly," he muttered.

Suddenly a short, wiry redhead burst from the music room. "Where is she? Where is she?" the redhead yelled. Then he saw Joan and Keith and swooped down on them.

"Ummmm," he murmured. "Rhodes, you wretch, you're a master of understatement. This lady isn't beautiful—she's ravishing, divine, she's—"

He ceased and took Joan's unprotesting hand while Keith grinned.

"Neighbor, do you recognize this native twang of mine?"

Joan turned a startled look on Keith. "Wh-what—?"

Keith began by way of explanation, "is Tommy Peters, varsity cheer leader and noisiest man in seven counties."

"Including Ouachita," the redhead added. "And don't tell me you've never heard of Ouachita county."

"Why—no, where is it?"

"Where is it?" he shrieked. "And they told me you were from Arkansas! What part of Arkansas you from, anyway?"

A sudden warning buzzed inside her. "Oh, you're from Arkansas, too. You see, I don't know the state as well as I should. Spent so much of my time in the east after I grew up I sort of lost track of the home stamping grounds. Was born in Little Rock, though. Have you lived in Arkansas all your life?"

He hooked his thumbs in imaginary suspenders and rocked back and forth.

"Nigh onto 22 years come first frost. Know everyone worth knowing down that way, and some that aren't."

She wondered at that. Tommy Peters was apt to know too many people.

Dan Webber sat at the table just across from them at dinner. "Nice game yesterday, sour-puss," she greeted, at the same time noticing the ugly red welt under his left eye. "And it's a nice souvenir you have, too."

"Thanks."

She nudged Keith. "Cheerful ray of sunshine, isn't he?"

"I'll let you in on a secret," said Keith. "Web isn't half the sourpuss you think he is. He's really a swell guy and everyone likes him. Somehow you and him don't hit it off so well, so you think he's a droop."

"Poor, misguided soul, he hasn't given himself half a chance to like me."

"And he doesn't have to as far as that goes."

"Jealous—already?"

"Terribly."

He showed her through the house after they had eaten. "This is where Dan and I park the bodies," he said, opening the door to their room.

"And I'll bet I know which is yours and which is his desk?" she mused.

"How?"

"Simple. The one that's barren of books and things scholastic in general would be yours. Very elemental. Ask me something tough next time."

She looked over the collection of cups and trophies in the spacious living room downstairs and had the background of each explained to her. Over the fireplace was a large picture of a football player.

"Bart Crowell," Tommy Peters offered. "Gamma's first All-America . . . center in 1921."

"Ever there," pointing to another, "is Jimmy Ludwig, All-America tackle for '28. Maybe we'll be able to stick up another this year, hey Keith?"

"Hope so," Keith said, just as a pledge attracted his attention.

"Phone call," Keith told Joan. "Be back in a minute."

"Needs a hurry," Tommy chirped, and Keith threatened him with a look of mock severity.

Joan turned to find Tommy starting for her.

"Johnson . . . Johnson," he was saying softly. "Hey, tell me—do you have any relatives back in Arkansas?"

"Nope," she replied coolly. "Not a single one. Why?"

"Just makes me never mind. Johnson's pretty common name, I guess. Just thought you might be one of those old families back in that way."

Foster Is Named By Waterbury GOP

Waterbury, Oct. 17.—(AP)—Charles C. Foster headed the Republican ticket for next month's city election today by virtue of a victory at the polls. Committee over the supporters of Mayor Patrick M. Perrello in a bitter convention fight.

Perrello, elected as mayor by the Board of Aldermen after the resignation of former Mayor Frank Hayes following his conviction in the million dollar conspiracy case, was defeated by Foster, his executive secretary, by a vote of 17 to 15 at the convention last night. With one exception, all other Town Committee candidates were victorious, though not without a series of sharp contests.

The exception was in the balloting for the nomination for city clerk. The race for that post was so close that a deadlock between Homer Brooks, Town Committee candidate, and John J. Bergin resulted in a tie vote, 16 to 16 at 11:45 p. m., deciding to defer making the city clerk nomination until today.

Hartford Received Full Share of Aid

Hartford, Oct. 17.—(AP)—Hartford received its full 75 per cent share of state aid funds in connection with a paving program conducted under the Federal-state grant "pool" road program, City Treasurer George H. Gaze said today.

Since the probe launched by Governor Baldwin into the use of highway funds started, the question had been raised as to whether there has been discrimination between the towns and cities with respect to amounts allocated by the state.

Towns, in most instances have received their full amounts as specified by state statutes—87 1-2 per cent or 75 per cent, dependent upon the amount of their annual tax receipts.

It has been reported that at least one city received less than the 75 per cent.

Sense and Nonsense

Which Is What

An item in the Boston, Mass. Globe says:

"After it had appeared in the New York Sun that the modern girl can dress with only eight moves, one Sally Rice informed the editor that she could do it in six. 'One for each shoe and stocking, one for my scanties, and one for my dress.' Then, just in case the editor might be an old fool, she informed him that 'scanties combine brassiere, vest, girdle and panties all in one'."

That's going some, maybe, but the old harmed to be a bit skinned a city block, for he made his complete toilet in just two— one to get into his shirt and the other to get into his pants. And at that he had on just as much as Sally, for, though her explanation of what that garment is sounds like it was a lot, it certainly isn't.

No doubt the young woman will find out that marriage will not change her life half as much as she thinks. Now she stays up until midnight waiting for John to leave. After marriage she will wait until about the same time for him to come home.

STAMP NEWS

THE sale of new issues on the London market has been brought almost to a standstill by the war. Restrictions on mail from belligerents, and even from Poland and the German-Czechoslovakian protectorates of Bohemia and Moravia, are blamed.

British airmail services have been cut off except those operating to adjacent countries. The northern, or Great Circle, Clipper route from U. S. to England has suspended operations. Submarine warfare has slowed surface mails, and until the convoy system is effectively organized, mail dispatch by ships will continue to be delayed.

Dealings with enemy nations are forbidden British collectors and until neutral nations set up philatelic brokerage systems, stamp trade in Europe will remain stalemated.

The war is expected to produce a flood of occupational, charity, war tax and other special issues, similar to those issued in 1914-1918. There is no doubt that warring governments, realizing a vast potential income is available in stamp sales, will make the best of the opportunity.

The Postoffice Department has approved the use of a new special delivery envelope to expedite service. The envelope will have a bright yellow and green border and can be easily spotted by mail clerks among a mass of ordinary mail. The department will not supply such envelopes, but will permit any company or manufacturer to print them
