About Town

Mrs. Albert Robinson, Girl Scout commissioner, will be the guest speaker at the meeting of the North Methodist W. S. C. S., Wednesday afternoon of next week at the church. The hostesses will be Mrs. Esther Brown, Mrs. Harry Wells, Mrs. Lucy B. Allen, Mrs. John Wittman and Mrs. Griswold Chappell. The members are requested to bring articles for the supply department of the North Barre, Vermont, community house a list of which may be obtained from Mrs. Ellen Pickles or Mrs. Ellen Starkweather.

The Manchester Red Cross production unit has been requested to fold gauze for bandages, and the American Legion Post has granted the use of their rooms on Leonard street every Thursday from 2 to 4:30. All women of the town who are willing to give a few hours to this work of folding gauze into surgical dressings will be welcome. It is unnecessary to wear uniforms, although it would be advisable to provide aprons to protect their dresses.

Mr. and Mrs. William J. Hunter of 16 Lydall street returned last night after a visit with their son, Private Edward J. Hunter, who has been stationed at Camp Croft, South Carolina, since mid-January. Mr. and Mrs. Hunter spent nine days with their son who has just had an attack of influenza, and is now much better. John Bengston and Jack Puter are also at Camp Croft. Mr. and Mrs. Hunter traveled more than 1600 miles and encountered more than eight inches of snow in some sections.

Royal Black Preceptory No. 13 will meet in Orange hall tonight at 7:30. All members are urged to be present and give their new officers a good start.

Soldier Is Held On Drunk Charge

Private Charles B. Jones, Negro soldier of the anti-aircraft unit which is stationed here, was arrested late last evening by Officer Raymond Griffin, and was charged with breach of peace and intoxication. He was also alleged to have tried to enter a house which is located on Adams street.

Jones is being held by the local authorities, and will probably be tried in the town court.

Country Club Plea Denied

Zoning Appeals Board Acts on Petition Concerning Liquor Permit

The Zoning Board of Appeals, after a long session last night following a hearing on the application of the Manchester Country Club for permission to operate a club bar under a Club Liquor license at the Country Club on South Main street, denied the appeal. The Country Club is located in a Rural A zone.

Jay E. Rand appeared for the Club in the absence of Club President Fred T. Bliss, Jr., and William Rush of 214 South Main street objected to the granting of the license. Other club members were present but did not speak for or against the application. Mr. Rush spoke for property owners of the section.

Other Applications

No action was taken on the application of Edward J. Holl who had applied for permission to convert a two-family house at 104-106 Main street, the former Dr. Squires residence, into a three-family dwelling. The building is located in a Residence A zone.

The application of John and Joseph Pavan of 433 Keeney street to convert a single family dwelling into a two-family house was denied. The house is located in a Rural zone.

Cole Motors of 91 Center street received a certificate of approval from the board to seek a new car dealer's license to carry on business at 367 Oakland street in a Residence A zone. This location was formerly used for a filling station and service depot.

Local Youth Loses Money

Drops Billfold Containing Cash and License; His Week's Wages.

On his way to make a payment on an automobile which he needs to get to his employment, a local young man yesterday lost his billfold containing all his money and his driver's license.

The young man, who asked that his name be withheld, had just cashed his week's pay check and put this money in the billfold along with the money with which he planned to make a payment on his automobile.

When he went into the local automobile sales office he discovered his wallet gone. The young fellow is frantic, since he must meet the car payment and his weekly wage is needed at home.

Anyone finding the billfold is asked to telephone 4935. A reward is offered in a "Lost" advertisement in today's Herald.

Lenten Institute At Center Church

The third meeting in the Lenten series at the Center church will be held on Sunday evening at 7. This will be Church School Night and teachers, officers and parents of the Church School are especially invited. There will be a 15-minute preliminary musical rendition by Miss Helen Hawley, pianist. The speaker will be Everett A. Babcock, secretary of the Connecticut Council of Churches and Religious Education. He will discuss the latest methods in religious education and tell about the United Christian Education Advance which was launched last month in Chicago by the representatives of 40 Protestant denominations. Two thousand delegates attended this meeting which was marked by the growing harmony and earnestness of all protestantism in better religious education.

The soloist on Sunday evening will be a promising young singer from the Junior Department, Miss Betty Holl. James Elliott of the Young People's Department will lead the meeting.

Local Man Head Of Plane Project

The Navy Department has called for the manufacture of 500,000 model airplanes and Connecticut's quota has been placed at 7,500, Michael L. Vetrano of 52 Garden street has been named director of Connecticut to interest the different model plane clubs in the project.

The model plane idea is to acquaint persons with the various types of planes used in the countries at war and to help in the Civil Defense work of plane spotters.

Mr. Vetrano has been named because of his interest in the manufacturing of model planes and being known among the 20 club, in the state. The planes when manufactured will be placed on display for those engaged in spotting planes and also shown to the different branches of the Army and Navy. There are now about 300 active members in the 20 clubs in Connecticut.

The Epworth League of the South Methodist church will enjoy a roller skating party tomorrow evening at the Skating Palace in Hartford. Cars will leave the church promptly at 7:30 o'clock.

Five Killed, 100 Hurt In Delayed Explosion Of Munitions Truck

Detonation Heard Over Radius of 50 Miles in Eastern North Carolina; Hotel, Filling Station and Tavern Leveled to Ground; Cement Highway Ripped For More Than 30 Feet

Smithfield, N. C., March 7.—(AP)—At least five persons were killed and more than 100 were reported injured near here early today in the delayed explosion of a fire-ridden ammunition-laden truck, the detonation of which was heard over a radius of 50 miles in eastern North Carolina. A hotel, a filling station and a tavern were leveled to the ground and windows in Selma, a town about two miles away, were shattered. The cement highway under the truck was ripped wide and deep for a distance of 30 feet.

Failed to Heed Warnings

Dr. E. N. Booker, Johnston county coroner, said that at least five persons were injured fatally, two of them in an automobile which he said failed to observe highway patrol warnings. The others were killed in the leveling of the Talton hotel.

Dr. Booker said that George Stroup of Gastonia and Cecil Propst of Lawndale, in the automobile, were told that they would proceed around the truck, earlier involved in a collision with an automobile at the roadside community, at their own risk.

"They decided to take the chance of proceeding on their way," the coroner said, "and just as they got almost even with the truck it exploded with a terrible noise which folks in Rocky Mount, 30 miles away, reported they heard."

The three victims in the hotel were not immediately identified.

The injured were taken to hospitals in Smithfield, Goldsboro and Raleigh.

Dr. Booker said that all buildings within some distance of the explosion were badly damaged or leveled and that half the store windows in Selma were blown out.

Watched Truck Burn Two Hours

Most of the casualties were bystanders who had watched the truck burn for almost two hours before exploding.

State Highway Patrolman H. C. Bobbitt said the explosion, heard 25 miles away, occurred at 3 a. m. The auto-truck collision took place at 1:15 a. m. Firemen summoned from nearby Selma and Smithfield had succeeded in extinguishing the fire in the automobile when

Reds Report 40,000 Nazis Month's Toll

Recapture 263 Villages And Towns on Central Front in Period; Advance Still Under Way.

Moscow, March 7.—(AP)—The Soviet government announced today Red Army troops had killed 40,000 Germans and recaptured 263 villages and towns on the central front alone from Feb. 6 to March 5 in an advance still under way.

(Russians closing in on German centers of resistance behind their advanced spearheads were reported in a Stockholm dispatch to The London Daily Herald to have regained Loamino, only six miles south of Nazi-held Vyazma. This would indicate Soviet troops were within artillery range of Vyazma, on the Moscow-Smolensk highway 125 miles west of the capital.

"During March 6," said the Soviet Information Bureau, "our troops continued to repel enemy counter-attacks, advanced and occupied several populated places."

Air Warfare Tempo Rising

A rising tempo of aerial warfare—involving transport as well as fighting craft under Adolf Hitler's system of attempting to supply isolated garrisons by air—was indicated in a declaration that 79 German planes were destroyed Thursday. The total was the highest claimed by the Russians in weeks.

"Our losses were 14," the Information Bureau said.

(A Berlin dispatch to The Basel (Switzerland) National Zeitung said some German islands of defense—manned by "regiments and divisions"—were holding out far behind the Russian lines with supplies moved entirely by air. The sectors were not identified.

(The dispatch, however, may have referred to such forces as the 16th German Army now battling to hold Staraya Russa and Col. Gen. Heinz Guderian's besieged Oral garrison.)

Booty captured on the central front in the 28-day period ended March 5 was said to include 43 tanks, 285 guns, 28 aircraft, four gliders, 784 trucks, 1,012 horses, 15 locomotives and 595 railway cars.

Steady Flow Of Warriors To Australia

Striking Power of Allies In Southwest Pacific Being Strengthened by Stream of Americans.

London, March 7.—(AP)—The United Nations' striking power in the Southwest Pacific is being strengthened rapidly by a steady stream of American troops and equipment flowing westward to Australia, the London Daily Mail reported today.

The Mail printed a dispatch from Walter Farr, a correspondent it said was accredited to the United States Pacific fleet, describing the movement of "great quantities" of men and American troops, pilots, planes, tanks and guns. The dispatch was datelined "at sea Friday."

Speaks Guardedly of Battles

Farr spoke guardedly of "naval and air battles without parallel" which he said already were developing in the Southwest Pacific, but declared that details could not yet be divulged.

(The dispatch, subject to the usual censorship governing such communications, evoked no immediate official comment in Washington.)

Farr declared that "every ship in every convoy is a load of concentrated hitting power.

"These massive forces," he wrote, "will not only help to defend Australia. They are taking with them large quantities of materials to be used to build the foundations for a great offensive against the Japanese.

"They are carrying hundreds of

Nazi Spy Ring Found Guilty

Escape Death Penalty Because Crimes Preceded Pearl Harbor.

New York, March 7.—(AP)—Cocky Kurt Frederick Ludwig and five of his hand-picked operatives, described by the government as the core of a far-reaching Nazi spy ring, were convicted of espionage conspiracy last night but escaped the death penalty because their crimes preceded Pearl Harbor.

The six, including a Long Island housewife who opened her home to the plotters, will be called for sentence next Friday, the 13th, with 20 years each as the maximum terms.

Returns Blanket Verdict

An all-male jury deliberated only two hours and 40 minutes in returning their verdict in the nation's first espionage trial since war's spread to the United States. It was the government's second heavy blow at German spies, however, for 33 persons convicted in a previous trial, were sentenced here Jan. 2.

Those convicted last night were:

Ludwig, 38, born in Fremont, O., but a resident of Germany most of his life;

Mrs. Helen Pauline Mayer, 36, the Long Island housewife;

Rene Froehlich, 31, a former Army private who sold Ludwig defense magazines and gathered ship information;

Dr. Paul T. Borchardt, 53, a former German Army major who analyzed the data collected;

Frederick Schlosser, 19, who

Two Persons Riot Victims

Ten Wounded in Mexico City Street Fighting; Students Battle Police.

Mexico City, March 7.—(AP)—Two persons were killed and ten wounded in street fighting marked by the use of knives, pistols, rifle-butts and tear gas bombs as police and 5,000 striking college students clashed here last night.

The dead were Police Sergt. Adolfo Ponce, who was found with a dagger in his heart, and Virginia Marquez, 18-year-old hotel employe who was struck in the stomach by a stray bullet.

Eight Students Wounded

Eight students were wounded, three by bullets. A fireman and a woman pedestrian were the other casualties.

The fighting developed when officers sought to halt students marching upon President Avila Camacho's palace to demand dismissal of Education Minister Octavio Vejar Vazquez. They declared his administration was too conservative.

"Down with Vejar Vazquez" was the student rallying cry.

Phase of Students Strike

There were nine arrests. Later the students were permitted to

Target Areas Supplies Soon

Civilian Defense Officials Predict Orders to Be Sent Out at Once.

Washington, March 7.—(AP)—Civilian defense officials predicted today that orders would go out from the War Department "without delay" for the first supply of equipment to protect persons and property in the nation's "target areas" from bombing attacks, sabotage and other war hazards.

The first supplies will include steel helmets, gas masks, firefighting apparatus, medical material and arm bands. Manufacture of gas masks for the civilian population will come after the War Production Board has issued clearance orders.

$100,000,000 to Spend

An executive order yesterday authorized Director James M. Landis of the Office of Civilian Defense to procure essential equipment through the War Department. The OCD has $100,000,000 to spend on equipment, which will be made available on loan to authorities in cities which need adequate protection from air raids but are unable to furnish it.

Asking cities not to spend for equipment, Landis said allocations must be made only on the basis of likelihood of enemy attack, vulnerability, and the importance of war industries in each area.

A list of cities in the "target areas" has been prepared by the OCD and War Department. There are areas extend 300 miles inland from the Atlantic, Pacific and Gulf coasts and embrace 88 other inland cities where war goods are being turned out.

Each city under 200,000 population, as a general rule, will receive

Japs Extend Further Philippines Occupation

Landing of Small Force Accompanied by Tanks On Island of Mindoro Reported by Army.

Washington, March 7.—(AP)—The Japanese have extended further their occupation of the Philippines, the War Department said today in reporting the landing of a small force of invaders accompanied by tanks at Calapan on the Island of Mindoro. Mindoro is about 70 miles south of the Bataan peninsula fighting front, where a communique said activity had ceased except for slight artillery fire and an ineffective enemy air raid.

Patrols Fight on Mindanao

Desultory fighting took place meanwhile between patrols on the outskirts of Zamboanga, on the southern island of Mindanao, where new invaders landed this week.

The communique, Number 138, based on reports received until 9:30 a. m. e.w.t., said:

"1. Philippine theater:

"Except for slight artillery fire and an ineffective enemy air raid, there was no activity on Bataan.

"A comparatively small force of Japanese troops, accompanied by tanks, landed at Calapan on the Island of Mindoro. Several ports on the east coast of the island were attacked by enemy naval craft.

"There was desultory fighting between patrols on the outskirts of Zamboanga on the Island of Mindanao.

"2. There is nothing to report from other areas."

"Death or Victory" Struggle

Military quarters here today were talking about the battle of Bataan as a "death or victory" struggle for Gen. Douglas MacArthur and his valiant fighting men, the odds for death or possible capture being heavily against those for ultimate victory.

Yet the fact that there was even a slight chance for triumphant survival of the Philippines

Urges Islands Off Alaska Be Attack Bases

Reynolds Advocates Full-Scale Drive on Japan from Aleutians; Others Urge Action.

Washington, March 7.—(AP)—Use of the Aleutian islands as a base for full-scale attacks on Japan was advocated today by Chairman Reynolds (D. N. C.) of the Senate Military Affairs Committee.

Other members of Congress likewise were calling for speedy offensive action by the United Nations.

Reynolds, who has hunted walrus in Alaska, told reporters he believed the long chain of American islands extending westward into the Pacific from Alaska offered an ideal jumping off place for an assault on Japan which could be timed with northward offensive action from Australia.

Java Fall Soon Seen

Saying that Java was likely to fall soon to the Japanese, the committee chairman added it was likely that the Nipponese would concentrate their efforts thereafter on trying to fight their way through India toward a possible junction with German forces in the Persian gulf in the Middle East.

If an all-out Jap attack on Australia were delayed, Reynolds said he had no doubt the United Nations would gather sufficient forces in the Antipodes to launch an offensive to relax the Dutch

Stubby Beer Bottles Used For Floating Fishing Nets

Seattle, March 7.—(AP)—The low-priced "stubby" beer bottle, barely able to hold its neck above its shoulders all these years, can keep its cap up now.

It has become a "war baby." Fishermen are clamoring for the stubbies—empty. If you please—for fishing net floats.

No stalwart and sober fisherman has yet been observed pouring the contents of a stubby into the bay, just to get the empty bottle, but they want them about that badly.

Substitute for Cork Floats

The stubbies came into demand for nets because of the wartime scarcity of cork floats. They are prized especially in soupfin shark fishing, a highly lucrative 1941-42 calling.

H. E. Newkirk, purchasing agent for a supply company here, reported that the demand is greater than can be met. His firm is buying what bottles are available from breweries, incoming quarts, and shipping to the fishermen at about 85 cents a case, which means 24 in the case of stubbies.

Newkirk estimated that possibly 20,000 cases of bottles have gone into nets in recent months, and "since they apparently provide the most satisfactory method of floating nets, I think the demand will continue for some time."

Dipped in Asphalt

The bottles are capped and then dipped in asphalt to guarantee against any leakage. Then each is encased in canvas to facilitate tying to the nets and to give additional protection from breakage.

The stubbies have an edge over other types of bottles on air old principle of the clam family: If you don't have your neck sticking out, it won't get broken off.

Defenders of Java Cling to Positions; Japs See Fall Soon

Nipponese Say Bandoeng Within Few Kilometers of Encirclement, Naval Base of Soerabaja Closely Besieged and Collapse of Entire Defense Matter Of Days; Swing South.

Tokyo (From Japanese Broadcasts), March 7.—(AP)—Domei broadcast a dispatch today from the Japanese Army base saying that Bandoeng, war capital of Java, was within "a few kilometers of encirclement," if the Naval base of Soerabaja closely besieged, and the collapse of the entire Java defense matter of a few days."

Dispatch Dated Yesterday

The Domei dispatch was dated yesterday and the implication was that the invasion might have developed even further.

It declared that Japanese spearheads had been thrust to a point only three miles north of Bandoeng by last Wednesday evening.

Other forces which occupied Batavia were reported swinging southward to complete an encirclement of the munitions center to which the Java government withdrew before the island was actually invaded.

Dutch defense forces in the mountainous central section of the island were described as confused by the number of Japanese landings, the speed of their advance, and the lack of aerial reconnaissance.

Claim Five Ships Sunk

Domei said Japanese naval planes, raiding the south Java port of Tjilatjap last Wednesday, sank five of seven ships anchored there and set wharves and warehouses afire.

Imperial headquarters claimed today that Japanese Naval planes scored six direct hits on a specially converted enemy aircraft carrier before the Java sea Naval battle last month.

The Japanese announcement said the carrier was seriously crippled and later was seen listing to starboard.

At the same time, the Japanese said aerial photographs had confirmed the sinking of a medium-sized enemy aircraft carrier attacked in the waters northeast of New Guinea.

30 Aircraft Set Afire

Thirty aircraft on the deck of the carrier reported attacked in the Java Sea were said to have been set on fire and destroyed while other planes in the ship's hangar were damaged.

Two large enemy flying boats were shot down in nearby waters

Dutch Envoy in Washington Asserts Action Will Be One of First Deeds of Americans.

San Francisco, March 7.—(AP)—Dr. Alexander Loudon, Netherlands minister in Washington, told the people of the embattled Dutch East Indies by radio today that when the United States takes the offensive "one of their first deeds will be to set you free.

"Even if, in spite of your heroic defense, Java and the entire Indies should be occupied by Japan, our cause is not lost," he said.

"Your courageous attitude and admirable perseverance have again proved that the Indies and The Netherlands are one and in a unity

Drive on Japs Being Planned, Aussies Hear

United Nations High Command to Assemble Maximum Strength in Pacific for Offensive.

Melbourne, Australia, March 7.—(AP)—A United Nations offensive against Japan from Australian and Indian bases is being planned by Washington and London, information reaching the Australian government at Canberra said today.

The commonwealth government has been informed, these reports said, that the United Nations high command is planning to assemble its maximum strength in the Southwest Pacific at the earliest possible moment for such an offensive.

Again Bomb Two Points

Meanwhile, Japanese planes again bombed Port Moresby and Lae, on the southern and northeastern coasts of New Guinea about 300 miles from Australia's Cape York. Their attacks followed Australian bombing raids yesterday at Japanese air bases at Keepang, capital of Dutch Timor and Gasmata, New Britain.

Speaking at Sydney, Australian Minister of Supply John Beasley said "within the past week complete organization for allied strategy in the Pacific has been worked out.

"The enemy has a long supply line which we can cut, leaving him at the end of a line without supplies for his forces. Time is the only factor we have to deal with and has given time we, in association with our Allies, can drive the enemy to Tokyo and Yokohama."

Coal Shortage Seen Possible

Federal Allocation of Bituminous Supplies May Become Necessary

Washington, March 7.—(AP)—A possible shortage of bituminous coal which might necessitate Federal allocation of available supplies, was foreseen today by the Office of Solid Fuels Coordination.

Howard Gray, acting director of solid fuels coordination, advised Secretary Ickes, the coordinator, that consumers generally had failed to store coal to protect themselves against possible shortages despite repeated appeals from Washington.

"In the face of a substantial reduction in the number of days supply of bituminous coal held in consumers' stockpiles as of Feb. 1," Gray said, "the obviously complacent attitude of consumers and dealers toward storing reserve fuel is making it more likely that an emergency may occur which would necessitate the allocation of coal by the United States government to protect war industries' fuel supply."

34 Days' Supply Held

His report showed that soft coal held in consumers' bins and yards as of Feb. 1 represented an average of 34 days' supply, compared with an average of 40 days on Jan. 1 and 45 days on last Dec. 1.

Gray said the coal stockpiles of all classes of consumers held an estimated 58,015,000 tons on Feb. 1, a decrease of 4,722,000 tons in the 62,737,000 tons in storage Jan. 1. Not only did stockpiles shrink in January, but the consumption rate increased an estimated 8.6 per cent.

Battered Island Reported Cut in Twain; Soldiers Hold Bristling Mountain Defenses And Fight Fury of Attack with All Their Tiring Might; Troops At Naval Base Isolated.

Bulletin!

Bandoeng, Java, March 7.—(AP)—Japanese troops have broken through Bandoeng's northern defenses, it became known this morning. The situation of the western section of Java was admittedly critical, said Aneta, the Dutch news agency. Aneta said the breach occurred yesterday in defense lines on the northern slope of the famous volcano of Tangkuban Prahu. This was the first line of northern defense of the Bandoeng area of resistance.

London, March 7.—(AP)—With battered Java reported cut in twain, defenders of the last Allied stronghold in the Southwest Pacific clung stubbornly today to bristling mountain positions and fought the fury of the Japanese attack with all their tiring might. Japanese troops sweeping across Java from the Rembang beachhead invasion base have reached the south coast on the Indian Ocean, the German radio declared, quoting Tokyo advices. The advance apparently was in the area of Jogjakarta, 15 miles from the south coast, fall of which was acknowledged yesterday by the Dutch.

Regrouping for Desperate Stand

The troops defending the one important naval base of Soerabaja, where demolitions have been reported carried out, and other positions of eastern Java, thus appear to have been isolated from the main defense force which is regrouping for a desperate stand around Bandoeng.

Virtually all the western end of the 622-mile long island has fallen to the Japanese except Bandoeng and its immediate vicinity.

The German radio, quoting Tokyo advices further, said preparations for an all-out assault on Bandoeng had been completed and

Navy Reports 3 Ships Lost

Motorship Leif Torpedoed in Atlantic; Two Others Are Overdue.

Washington, March 7.—(AP)—The loss of three more merchant vessels and probably 75 seamen has been announced by the Navy.

The 2,850-ton motorship Leif was torpedoed somewhere in the Atlantic, bringing to 36 the total of merchant vessels officially reported sunk by Axis raiders along the Atlantic and Canadian seaboards. Fifteen men of the Leif are missing and believed lost. There were ten survivors.

In addition to the torpedoing, the Navy announced two ships are "overdue and presumed lost." They were the 2,677-ton American freighter Norvana, which operated out of Baltimore, and the 5,333-ton, Panamanian-registered tanker Olympic, which listed her home port as Los Angeles. The normal crews of the two vessels totaled 60 men.

Vessels Believed Lost

The Navy confined its announcement to the assertion that the vessels were believed lost, and maritime quarters speculated that they

Capture Two Axis Positions

Cairo, March 7.—(AP)—Britain's Free French Allies, striking into Libya from the east and south, have captured two Axis positions and penetrated the Fezzan section of the Libyan desert which lies south of Tripoli, a British communique announced today. Referring apparently to the eastern Libyan front, the war bulletin said "activity was again confined to patrolling. The garrison of an enemy post was captured by a Free French column."

Former Premier Leaves Teheran

London, March 7.—(AP)—Reuters reported from Teheran today that former Premier Ali Furanghi had left the Iranian capital after informing Parliament that "the crisis surpasses my power . . . It is impossible for me to accept the premiership and form a cabinet." Furanghi became premier last August after Iran signed a treaty with British and Russian forces, but was unable to complete his government and stepped down. He was asked, then, to form a new cabinet.

Orders Envoy To Return

Buenos Aires, March 7.—(AP)—The Argentine government ordered its ambassador to Germany, Ricardo Olivera, to return to Argentina in an unexplained move today. Olivera has been in Madrid en route home for several weeks, until the German ambassador to Argentina, Baron Edmund Von Thermann is on his way to Berlin. When Olivera was first ordered home, just before the Pan American conference in Rio de Janeiro, the government explained that it wanted him to report on European conditions.

NYA Projects Ordered Closed

Washington, March 7.—(AP)—Aubrey Williams, stationed Youth administrator, has ordered the immediate closing of all NYA projects and turning of war production work.

Flood Control Money Listed

Connecticut to Get $670,150 for Work to Be Done at Hartford.

Washington, March 7.—(AP.)—Army engineers have allotted $1,858,000 for New England states for flood control and rivers and harbors work for the year beginning July 1.

Their estimates were made public yesterday in hearings conducted before the House Appropriations committee.

If approved by Congress, Massachusetts would be allotted the largest share, $1,067,250, for maintenance of rivers and harbors and two reservoirs, Birch Hill and Knightville, respectively, to receive $670,150 for maintenance and flood control in Hartford; New Hampshire, $25,000 for the Surry mountain reservoir, and Rhode Island $66,000 for rivers and harbors.

Money Alloted

The allocations follow: Massachusetts: Birch Hill reservoir, $680,000; Knightville reservoir, $85,000; Cape Cod canal, $284,000; Pollock Rip shoals, $63,500; Harbor of Refuge, Nantucket, $26,000; Vineyard Haven harbor, $16,750, and Fall River harbor, $100,000;

Rhode Island: Newport Harbor, $12,500; Pawtucket (Seekonk) river, $56,000, and Harbor of Refuge Block Island, $17,500;

Connecticut: New London harbor, $175,000; Connecticut river below Hartford, $105,000; Bridgeport harbor, $132,000; Stamford harbor, $36,000, and flood control at Hartford, $183,000.

Power Development

Army engineers also reported to Congress that seven reservoirs planned for New England flood control in the Merrimack and Connecticut valleys had "definite possibilities" for development of power in areas where there is or may be a shortage of power for war purposes.

As outlined, with the estimates of capacity, these locations were: On the Merrimack—Blackwater, N. H., 14,000 kilowatts (Dam completed); Livermore Falls, N. H., 31,000 kilowatts; Franklin Falls, N. H., 14,000 kilowatts (Dam under construction), and West Peterboro, N. H., 4,000 kilowatts.

On the Connecticut — Knightville, Mass., 10,000 kilowatts, (dam completed); Tully, Mass., 20,000 kilowatts, and Williamsville, Vt., 180,000 kilowatts.

Army engineers also told the House that the only funds impounded by the Budget Bureau of authorized appropriations were for the Boston seaplane channel. Congress had approved a venture of $1,500,000 for the project.

Another $1,000,000 would be needed for completion.

on the eastern front had been repulsed.

The Air Force supported offensive operations by inflicting destructing blows on enemy positions and troop concentrations on the upper Volga and in the Lovat (Starya Russa) sector, the high command said.

The Lovat river flows into Lake Ilmen through the region in which Russians report they have trapped the 16th German Army.

Scatter Enemy Columns

"On the Karelian front, Finnish bomber and fighter formations scattered enemy columns and troop concentrations in the high command said in one of its rare references to Germany's northern allies.

It was declared that 197 Soviet planes had been destroyed by the Germans from Feb. 25 to March 5, against loss of 35 Red Air craft on the eastern front in that period.

Bad Weather Limits Libyan Front Fighting

Rome.—(From Italian Broadcast), March 7.—(AP)—The Italian high command reported today that bad weather limited fighting on the Libyan front and in the air but acknowledged that the R. A. F. had bombed Tripoli.

The raid caused neither casualties nor damage, the communique said.

Italian and German planes struck again at Malta, British Mediterranean island, and heavy bombs caused damage among submarines in the port of Valletta, the Italians reported.

More Japs Move Into Philippines

force, as the fourth month of Pacific war opened, was regarded as little short of a Japanese mistake in view of what has happened to the defenders of Hong Kong, Singapore and the Dutch East Indies.

See Thorough Planning

Actually, officers who have known MacArthur for years explained the "miracle" in terms of thorough preliminary planning for the defense of Bataan long before the Japanese began. Of equal importance, they said, is the fact that MacArthur has out-generaled and his troops have out-fought the Japanese in every engagement to date.

Eventually, perhaps MacArthur may have to withdraw his forces to Corregidor and the other forts guarding Manila Bay. There they should be able to continue the fight for some time longer, if their ditch hope that reinforcements will be sent.

"There is no doubt," said one of MacArthur's friends, "that he is determined to see the Philippines fight through to the finish. If he has any choice he will never leave —until death or victory. Only an order which, as a soldier, he would have to obey would get him out."

Full Preparations Made

The rugged Bataan peninsula had been chosen long before as the best section of Luzon island on which to make a stand against numerically superior forces. Full preparations for the defense were made before the war.

Since the country is mountainous there were certain valleys through which MacArthur knew the Japanese would be compelled to drive forward their attacks and strong points were established to hold those. The rest of the narrow front had to be only lightly held.

Thus while the enemy had a manpower superiority which some authorities have estimated at 10 to 1 in Luzon he has never been able to bring up at any one time a force so overwhelming that the Americans could not resist successfully.

High Cliffs Back Beaches

On the China sea side of Bataan the narrow beaches are backed by high cliffs. Handpicked detachments of the American-Filipino Army were trained to defend them.

A few weeks ago the Japanese landed several independent units on that coast, each with five days supply of rations. They were running on until their provisions ran out. Then the defenders moved in and mopped them up at little cost to themselves.

MacArthur's reports to the War Department have shown that he was thoroughly informed beforehand on every important move the Japanese made. Much of this intelligence came from Bataan itself occupied areas outside Bataan. He probably gained other data from reconnaissance operations of the city Air Force he has managed to keep intact. By being forewarned of a grand scale attempt to invade Bataan from Manila Bay early in the battle he was able to wipe out the enemy's entire concentration of boats and barges by artillery fire before it even set sail.

Corregidor Well Stocked

There is reason to believe that the question of supplies—food and ammunition chiefly—may not trouble the defenders of Corregidor for some time to come. Corregidor undoubtedly was well stocked with provisions for a large force against the day when it might become a last refuge. Bataan similarly may have been well supplied in advance.

But despite all the factors which thus far have worked in favor of the men who hold Bataan, the general belief in military quarters here is that when the Japanes get ready to take it without regard to their ever-ebbing manpower they undoubtedly can do so.

Corregidor and its satellite forts are not considered impregnable.

Urges Islands Off Alaska Be Attack Bases

East Indies and island stepping stones north ward toward Japan.

Reynolds said that while they were taking shape, the United States would do well to fall back from the Aleutian bases with all of the force it could muster in that area.

Senator George (D. Ga.) said some of the comments of his colleagues in this country could move 1,000 to 1,500 fighting planes of all types into the Aleutians and provide the necessary facilities and ground crews for a long stride forward leaving crippling aerial blows to Japan.

Urges Hitting Islands

American bombing of military installations on the Japanese islands has been urged by Senator Thomas (D. Utah) who declared in a message broadcast to the Japanese in their own language last night that one by one the areas their armies had occupied would be recaptured and freed by the United Nations.

Thomas made no predictions when such an offensive would get under way but other members of Congress have been urging that the Allies strike our boldly at once even if not fully prepared.

However, Senator Bailey (D. N. C.) said he thought the United Nations would make a serious mistake in attacking anywhere before they had superiority in the air on land and on the sea.

Bailey said we must take the offensive until we are able to sustain it, he declared. "Only a sustained offensive can win for us and we don't want any more Dunkerques."

Police Court

Elden Wilson of 9 Forest street, East Hartford, was found guilty of speeding and overcrowding a motorcycle on March 5 on McKee street but judgment was suspended by Judge Raymond R. Bowers in the charge of failing to obey the motor vehicle department of a change in address.

On the speeding count Wilson was fined $10 and costs and $10 on the overcrowding charge, with $5 remitted.

Wilbur Lewis was arrested by Officer Earl Seymour March 5 at 7 a. m. as the accused was traveling towards Chaney street. He pleaded with two others beside himself on the coin. He was clocked traveling at from 50 to 55 miles an hour around bad curves on the route to the mill.

Charles F. Stone of 889 Main street, charged with reckless driving and speeding, pleaded not guilty and was represented by Judge George Quiter of East Hartford. He was found guilty and fined $50 and costs. An appeal was taken and bond of $100 given.

Stone was arrested Wednesday on North Main street by Officer John Cavagnaro when the accused was caught speeding across the tracks at Depot Square driving passengers alighting from buses at that point to the sidewalk and endangering lives. There were from 10 to 12 persons in the street near the buses, changing over, at the time as Stone turned into North Main street, headed east.

Both Officer Cavagnaro and Chief Samuel G. Gordon, also a witness, stated that Stone did not slow his speed or apply his brakes at any point.

Frank B. Jones, a soldier serving with a local unit, was sent to jail for five days for intoxication and attempting to enter a house on Adams street while in that state.

The commanding officer of the local unit waived jurisdiction in the case.

Officer Griffin caught the soldier running towards the house following the receipt of orders from the station that a resident of the district was being molested by the man trying to enter a door in the rear of the home which was locked.

Gerald F. Sullivan of 16 Strickland street, charged with drunken driving, had his case continued until Wednesday to enable him to secure counsel.

Probe Ordered By Governor

Hurley Wants More Information About the Bridgeport Case.

Hartford, March 7.—(AP)—Governor Robert A. Hurley last night ordered an investigation into the operation of Bridgeport's relief record laws after a New York newspaperman from a Bronx family obtained a birth certificate in Bridgeport where he represented himself as a native.

Simultaneously, Mayor Jasper McLevy of Bridgeport demanded a special session of the State Legislature to correct the situation.

Authorities at the same time disclosed that there have been 20 similar cases in the last eight months where applicants, complying with the statutes, obtained certificates by having two witnesses swear that they knew that he was born in Bridgeport.

The governor and Attorney General Francis A. Pallotti were scheduled to confer during the day on the matter.

"The only way to correct the situation," Mayor McLevy said in a telegram to Governor Hurley and Pallotti, "is for the state to amend the state law, which is to correct the situation at present."

Needs Legislation

"I think it should be done by special session, rather than at a time through some constitutional power, if the governor has such power," said the mayor.

"Public Welfare Commissioner Martin, who is here about that," he added. "The situation, however, is one of sufficient importance that should be corrected at once."

"I have had no cases of sabotage here or labor trouble," he added, referring to the case which Pallotti said grew out of a "fifth column" activity.

Mayor McLevy proposed fingerprinting of future applicants whose birth certificates could not be located in the files.

The mayor, who said that he was unable to reach Hurley or Pallotti, talked to Dr. Stanley H. Osborn, state health commissioner, who, he declared certified City Comptroller Perry W. Rodman of Bridgeport, for his alleged "failure" to provide sufficient help in the Bureau of Vital Statistics.

"I don't think anyone should pass the buck to clerks in the bureau," Mayor McLevy said he told Dr. Osborn.

Rodman asserted upon hearing of Dr. Osborn's remarks "He doesn't know what he is talking about."

"If you had 22 persons coming in the bureau," he said, "you would be in a hurry, too."

Rodman said he was doing his job in the bureau, "as the law is laid down in the statutes, how are we going to stop him from getting a birth certificate?" he asked.

Milk Producers To Dine Tuesday

Hartford, March 7.—(AP)— The Connecticut Milk Producers Association will observe its 25th anniversary at the annual meeting to be held Tuesday at Hotel Garde.

Roger B. Corbett, formerly of the University of Connecticut and now director of the experiment station at the University of Maryland will be the principal speaker.

The program will include presentation of gold 25-year pins to 75 men who have been members of the CMPA since it was organized in 1917. Twenty-year certificates will be awarded to others.

Business of the meeting includes election of a member to succeed Arthur Sherwood of Easton, a director of the corporation. He was organized and treasurer since 1918. He has retired as a dairy farmer.

The bulletin of the association for this month announces that 40 dairy farmers supplying a Hartford dealer who withdrew from membership nine years ago, will return April 1.

There are still a few openings for registration in the Home Nursing Class which is now being started. It was announced today. There are to be held Monday and Wednesday afternoon at the Haynes street Clinic Building.

Another Home Nursing Class is starting at the Haynes street Clinic Building. This class will be held Tuesday and Friday evenings from 7:00 to 9:00 p. m., and will consist of 24 hours training, over a period of six weeks.

Mrs. Irving Spencer and Miss Margaret Hyde are the instructors in the above classes. It is requested that all women who start the course report every week, as it is only a waste of time on the part of the instructors if the students do not complete the course.

Registrations will now be accepted for the third Nurses' Aides Group. The course includes 80 hours of training. These are divided into 34 hours of instruction, two hours a day, five days a week for three weeks under supervision in the hospital. The class begins April 8. In order to qualify, an applicant must pass a physical examination, have a nigh school education or its equivalent, and be between the ages of 18 and 50. Applicants must also be willing to volunteer for duty of one year for three years to the local hospital.

One Nurses' Aides class has graduated and is now employed at the local hospital. The second class is now in training.

The Medical Civilian Defense Committee under Dr. Edwin Higgins, has asked the Red X Nurses Aides in order to take care of casualty and emergency stations.

"There still is ample mine and production capacity for consumers to build up stockpiles as insurance against interruptions in their customary supply caused by war. There was some recent evidence that consumers are beginning to take protective steps. Icy Highways Cause Hazards

Series of Crashes in Rockville Yesterday During Brief Snowfall.

Rockville, March 7.—(Special.)—The snow of Friday created a dangerous traffic hazard in this city for a few hours which resulted in several automobile accidents with only one person being injured.

Mrs. Margaret Hirth, 32, of 21 East street, was taken to the Rockville City hospital for treatment of lacerations to her forehead. She was injured when she fell on Minterburn Hill after alighting from a car that had skidded part of the way down the hill. The car was operated by Deputy Sheriff Gilbert W. Ahern. Mrs. Hirth is employed as stenographer in the office of the clerk of the Superior court.

Three cars were involved in a skidding accident on Union street, when cars operated by Earl N. McLean, 31, of Pinney street, Ellington; George Robinson, 32, of 130 Vernon avenue, and Francis Miller, 24, of 85 West Main street were involved. No one was injured, but the cars received damage.

Everett Thummler, 27, of Crystal Lake, reported that his car skidded as he was driving on Prospect street, and struck a hydrant, the car being damaged. He was uninjured.

Thomas Kaka, 24, of 74 West Main street, Stafford Springs, also escaped injury when his auto skidded on Union street, struck and broke of a utility pole.

Captain Peter J. Dowgewicz and Patrolman Alden Skinner investigated the accidents.

Mrs. Margaret Knoll

Mrs. Margaret Knoll, a former resident of Rockville and widow of George Knoll, died Friday at her home in Springfield, Mass. She leaves two sons, George and Louis, both of Worcester, Mass.; a sister, Miss Mary Ryan, of Rockville; two brothers, Michael Ryan of Rockville and John Ryan of Brooklyn, N. Y.

The funeral will be held on Monday morning at 8:30 at the Burke Funeral home in Rockville, and at 9 a. m. at St. Bernard's church. Burial will be in St. Bernard's cemetery.

Communication Held

Fayette Lodge, No. 69, A. F. & A. M., held a special communication at Masonic hall last evening at which the Entered Apprentice Degree was exemplified. Senior Warden Edward J. Williams was in the East during the exemplification.

On Tuesday evening, March 10, the regular officers of the lodge will confer the Fellowcraft degree.

Special Offering

In common with similar offerings being taken through the American Episcopal Church, a special offering for the Army and Navy Commission (Chaplains' Fund) will be taken on Sunday morning at St. John's Episcopal church in this city.

Business Meeting

At the close of the morning service at the Rockville Baptist church on Sunday morning there will be a special business meeting. All members are urged to attend, as action will be taken in regard to the recent candidate for the pastorate.

Old Fashioned Dance

Art Webster's Old Timers Orchestra will open a series of Saturday night dances this evening at the Princess Ballroom. There will be dancing from 9 p. m. to 1 p. m. This is the first time that the well-known radio orchestra has played in this city.

Services will start at the regular hour, 9:30 a. m. Dr. Brownell Gage will tell the story: "The Tree That Was on the Job." It is hoped a good attendance will be present at the reopening of the school.

Stafford Springs

John O. Nette
472, Stafford

Two of Stafford's oldest residents celebrated their birthdays on the same day this week. Mrs. Charles P. Bradway of West Stafford, the town's oldest woman, quietly observed her 91st birthday while Myron C. Heck of East Main street, a former resident of Union, marked his 87th year. Both have been residents of this section for more than 50 years. Mr Heck is known as the oldest living Democrat in Tolland county and probably in the state. Mrs. Bradway, a native of Pennsylvania, has lived here more than 50 years coming here from Monson, Mass., in 1880. Mr. Bradway, who died in 1939 at the age of 98, and Mrs. Bradway celebrated their 65th wedding anniversary in 1938. Mrs. Bradway is a member of the Second Congregational church and has been active in the church Women's Council. Each year she assists in the Grandmothers' supper held in May and which attracts considerable attention. She is in good health and takes an interest in daily events. She has three daughters, four sons, 16 grandchildren and eight great grandchildren.

Funeral services for Edmund J. Burke of Willington avenue, a resident of Stafford Springs for nineteen years, who died Thursday at the Johnson Memorial hospital will be held Saturday morning at the Browne Funeral Home, followed by a requiem mass at St. Edward's church at 9 o'clock. Burial will be in St. Edward's cemetery. Mr. Burke was 81, and born in Salem, Mass., Nov. 7, 1860. Before coming to Stafford Springs he lived in Springfield and was employed in the Springfield armory. He came here in 1923 and was employed for nine years in the local textile mills, retiring 10 years ago. He is survived by his wife Mrs. Ada E. Burke of this town.

Stafford's two leading basketball teams, the fire department and police department fives will meet two Rockville clubs at the Stafford High school gymnasium Sunday afternoon in a benefit double header sporting event for the Infantile Paralysis campaign. The police department team, Stafford's fastest semi pro club, with a season's record of six wins and one defeat will meet the Rockville Y.M.C.A. five. The Fire department quintet, the local team that recently reached the quarter-finals in the Springfield Daily News amateur tournament in Springfield will play the Rockville All Stars. Tickets are now on sale and the players are all donating their services for the cause.

Ellington

G. F. Herr
Tel. 495-3, Rockville

George E. Clark of Vernon Center, district fire warden of the Rockville district has issued a warning to refrain from building any fire in the open without a written permit. Several serious grass fires have been started recently in various sections of the district and in some cases valuable property has been endangered.

No fires may be started now or at any time until December 1 without a written permit. In addition to district warden Clark, permits may be obtained from the following Deputy Wardens: Stanley S. Meader, Mountain street; James Lyman of Talcottville Road and Edwin J. Davis, of Snipsic Lake Road, this town.

Any fire built in the open without the necessary permit is a direct violation of the law and can lead to court action. It is hoped that the public will cooperate with the wardens in holding the fires down to a minimum.

Emily T. Fluckiger has been appointed executrix of the estate of Anna Trittenbach late of Ellington.

Lucy M. Zwingelstein has been appointed administratrix of the estate of Jacob or Jacques Zwingelstein late of Ellington.

Friday evening the ladies in the L-R group will serve a supper in the social rooms of the Congregational church, followed by an entertainment.

The Ellington Center Parent Teacher Association will hold its regular meeting Monday night, March 9th, in Ellington Town hall, at 8 o'clock. Due to the First Aid class which has been meeting Monday nights, the association has been meeting Tuesday night. A special defense program will feature and a discussion "What Parent Teacher Association can do to aid in Defense."

At the annual meeting of the Cemetery Association the following officers were elected: President, Clyde A. Cordtsen; vice-president, Henry L. Hayden; secretary - treasurer, Morton E. Thompson; Henry Kloter was elected trustee for one year and Marshall E. Charter and Howard N. Kibbe for three years; auditors, Abbott B. Thompson, Mahlon S. Chapman, Harrison L. Hamilton will continue as cemetery agent.

Jeanie Morton, of Manchester, is visiting her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Howard of Maple street.

Clyde A. Cordtsen, Jr., has returned to his home on East street, from the Rockville City hospital, where he recently underwent an appendectomy.

Hebron

The blackout test in Hebron Tuesday night passed off successfully, with the exception of a few minor incidents. Signals were an improvement on those used for the first test some weeks ago, but were not wholly up to the mark. The Jones street people could not hear the combined ringing of bells and the short, quick blasts of the fire siren from the Green, but could plainly hear the Colchester and East Hampton sirens. The Jones street bell, bought for the purpose and hung at a private residence, was rung and gave the signal there, however, so they knew when the 'raid' was on, but some of them failed to hear an "all clear" signal, and after waiting an hour or more, gave up and went to bed in the dark. Blackout people, it is reported, heard the signals all right, and other parts of the town had some way of finding out. It is generally agreed that there is room for improvement, and First Selectman W. S. Porter says the matter will be taken care of. Many of the residents are saying that if they had not been expecting a signal the chances are they would hardly have noticed the siren and bells.

The long expected service of rededication will be held at the Hebron Congregational church Sunday afternoon at 2:30. This will observe the completion of the long, laborious task of the redecoration of the interior and there will also be a rededication of an ancient pulpit which has been brought to light in an interesting way. It is believed to have been part of the furnishing of the second church edifice here, which was taken down to make way for a third building, the one which burned down many years ago, but which some of the older people can well remember. The present church building is the fourth edifice. It is known that the old pulpit was used in the third edifice, as it can be remembered by Arthur Gillette, who as a small boy studied its outlines and admired the red tassels on its covering. For some reason it was discarded and a smaller pulpit replaced it.

The old pulpit, considered worthless, was passed along to Judson Strong, Sr., now deceased, a builder and interior worker, who stored it for a long term of years. After his death it came into the possession of the late Judge Leon Rathbone, who turned it over from his wood shed to Allan L. Carr, then conducting services as reader at St. Peter's Episcopal church. Mr. Carr was looking for an old high pulpit used at St. Peter's long ago, but finding this one and recognizing its fine design and the beauty of its workmanship he could not bear to see it dropping to pieces. He had it stored and through him it came to the notice of the Congregational church people. A friend generously financed its repair, and it now occupies the place of honor in the church. It is believed to go back to the 1700's, from its design, nails used, moulding, etc., and it was probably used by the Rev. Benjamin Pomeroy, a famous pastor of the church, in pre-Revolutionary times.

The church people have worked together under the direction of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Salling in the refinish of the interior, and all have given their time voluntarily. The walls and furnishings are done in a rose-beige color, which is very pleasing to the eye, and hangings have been placed over the windows and behind the pulpit, of a rich red, but harmonizing with the prevailing color. Floor and carpeting are of turquoise blue. The Sallings are experienced interior decorators and it has been fortunate indeed for the church people that they have been so generous with their time and talents. They have received no compensation for their work.

The order of service Sunday includes an organ prelude by Mrs. William O. Hayne and Miss Gertrude Gerhardt of Colchester. The invocation will be by the Rev. R. A. Lewis, a former pastor. The opening hymn will be "O God Our Help In Ages Past." The Rev. Howard Chandler, former pastor, will read the scripture lesson. The choir will sing an anthem, "Strike The Cymbal." The pulpit will then be unveiled and the Rev. George M. Milne, pastor, will tell the story of the Rev. Benjamin Pomeroy who used the pulpit. Miss Caroline Kellogg will read a paper on the Rev. Amos Bassett, a preacher in the church in the long ago. The congregation and choir will sing the hymn, "O God Above The Lifting Years." The Rev. Mr. Milne will tell how the work was done, following which Clement Wall of East Hampton will sing a solo from Handel, "Love Ye The Lord."

After the taking up of the offertory, which will be for the decoration fund, and an anthem by the choir, "I Will Magnify The Lord," a sermon will be delivered by the Rev. Ralph L. Woodward of New Haven. The Rev. Harry P. Leach of Willimantic will offer a prayer of consecration, and the final hymn, "The Church's One Foundation" will be sung followed by the postlude by Mrs. Seyms and Mr. Gerhardt. A reception will follow in the chapel with Mrs Gertrude Hough, Mrs. Alphose Wright, Mrs. Mary Mitchell and Mrs Rose Mott, as hostesses.

Chinese Nurse Breaks Tradition; Carries Paternity Case to Court

San Francisco, March 7.—(AP)—A shattering Chinatown's tradition that social disputes must be settled by its elders-governed elders, an attractive nurse turned to an American civil court yesterday in an effort to have a Chinese doctor declared the father of her unborn child.

Miss Victoria Chan, 28, asked that Dr. Harry S. Chong, recently married member of a merchant family, be named the child's father. It was the first time in years the name of a Chinatown merchant family appeared in the open records of the Superior court.

Miss Chan claimed she was a nurse and common-law wife for the doctor for five years and had repeatedly asked him to marry her.

"Harry had told the elders about me," she said, "and they had warned him not to marry me because I already had been married and divorced."

Miss Chan, a graduate of the Francis E. Willard Nursing school of Chicago, asked the court for $10,000 for medical and hospital fees and $150 monthly support for the infant.

Dr. Chong is now with the Army Medical Corps.

Air Power Will Decide War Victor

Nucleus of First All-Negro Squadron Told They Are to Take Place In Air Combats.

Tuskegee, Ala., March 7.—(AP)—First graduates of the advanced flying school here, who will form the nucleus of the first all-Negro squadron in the U. S. Air Forces, were told today that "it appears more and more plain that this war will be decided by air power."

The speaker was Maj. Gen. George E. Stratemeyer, commanding officer of the Southeast Air Corps Training Center, who told the new pilots that the school from which they have just graduated "is a sound step forward in the nation's war effort."

The class here was one of several to receive "wings" and commissions as second lieutenants at advanced schools throughout the center, one of three such centers in the country.

New Source of Strength

General Stratemeyer said of the Tuskegee school that "here today is opened a new source of strength to wage that fight." He stressed the importance of the air in both defensive and offensive operations of land and sea forces.

"In past wars," he told the graduate pilots, "American Negro soldiers have done their full duty with combat forces of the ground units. In this war, the American Negro is destined to take his place in defense of his country by performing combat duties in the air."

Average House Cost $460 Here Hundred Years Ago

Back 100 years ago the tax rate in Manchester was not figured in mills, but on percentage. The value placed on property was not high. The average value placed on a house in those days was $460. Land was figured in acres and the average value of an acre of land was just under $20. Manchester had five mill properties in those days and the average assessments was $300. The average value placed on manufactures was $475 and horses were valued at an average of $23 a head.

The value placed on neat cattle was less as the 982 neat cattle was but $15 a head and sheep were valued at $1 each. Carriages and wagons went in at an average of $15 each and clocks and watches were valued at $4 each.

Those who happened to own bank stock paid at the rate of six per cent, the value of bank stock being given at $3,500, and on $305 worth of insurance stock $49.30 was collected in taxes. Turnpike property was valued at $14490 and at 6 per cent $89.40 was collected, this being subject to a six per cent tax. Those who had money at interest were charged at the rate of 6 per cent for this and paid to the town $900, indicating that there was $15,000 so invested.

Poll taxes in those days were charged at the rate of $1 and there were 289 who paid poll taxes.

Thanks For Books

Editor, The Herald:

The committee for the Victory Book Campaign wishes to thank everyone who has helped in any way toward making the drive for books for men in the service a success.

The splendid cooperation given by local clubs and organizations and by the Manchester Herald is very much appreciated.

Over 4,500 books have been collected from various stations throughout the town, and from clubs, or have been brought directly to the library by the donors. The territory covered in this local drive included Manchester, Andover, Bolton, Coventry and Tolland. From these outlying towns generous contributions were received

The collection included many recent best sellers, both fiction and non-fiction, as well as many of the interesting and worthwhile older books.

After these books were sorted and graded, a group of Boy Scouts willingly gave their time and packed them in cartons. Men from the Burr nurseries strapped the cartons ready for shipping. Then Perret and Garvin Co. and Carlson Express provided the means of transportation. The books were sent to Camp Michie, Fishers Island, N. Y., to the American Merchant Marine Library in New York, and to places in Massachusetts.

For all this assistance which has been given, the committee is very grateful.

Jessamine M. Smith,
Regional Chairman.

New Bus Schedule To Start Monday

The Silver Lane Bus Company will start operating on their new schedule between Manchester and the aircraft plant Monday, the first bus to leave the Center will be at 6:15 in the morning and the other trips will be at 2:45 in the afternoon and at 11:15 at night. Returning the buses will leave the East Hartford factory at 7:15 in the morning, 3:45 in the afternoon and at 12:15 the following morning.

Many who are now driving to work are planning to use the buses to save tires.

Brings Civil Suit Over Rent Debt

Robert MacLachlan of 142 Eldridge street was the defendant in a special civil session in town court yesterday afternoon brought by Edward J. Holl in a suit to recover the sum of $313 which the plaintiff states is owed him for rent of a house owned by Mr. Holl at 160 Center street, and which was occupied for three years by the defendant.

The defendant was represented by Attorney McConnell and the plaintiff by Attorney Jay E. Rubinow

After the presentation of evidence Judge J. A. Bowers, sitting on the case, asked that briefs be submitted by the opposing attorneys.

Mr. Holl maintained that he had sent bills of the arrearage due him and at times had sent a collector to the MacLachlan home to collect on the back bill. The defendant stated that no collector ever visited him at his home and that he had no conversation with Mr. Holl about the debt after leaving the house at 160 Center street.

Good Speakers For Air Wardens

The weekly air raid wardens' school will be held Monday evening at the High school auditorium at 7:30 o'clock. It is urged that all those who are taking the present course should attend, as two excellent speakers will be on hand.

The main speaker will be Winthrop Tilley, of the University of Connecticut. Captain Allen Cox, of the Pratt and Whitney Aircraft Corporation, will also speak. Their subjects will be, "Rural Districts," and "Civilian Defense Against Gas Warfare."

Captain Cox will discuss the latter subject and it will be to the advantage of every prospective warden to learn something of this gas warfare new to fight it.

Last week's school was postponed from Monday until Wednesday evening because of the town meeting, which was held at the High school assembly hall. However, schools will now be conducted as before, on Monday evenings, Jay E. Rand, head of the local Air Raid Wardens school announced.

Limestone Consumption

Approximately 25,000,000 tons of limestone are used every year in the United States, chiefly in the smelting of iron ores.

Make Every Pay Day . . . BOND DAY!

TODAY, Americans are dying so that America, your free America, can live!

Today, the men in our Army and Navy urgently need more planes, more tanks, more guns! More than our enemies have, better than our enemies have, if we're going to smash our way to Victory!

We've got to get them. We will get them. But only if every man, woman, and child in America helps! And helps voluntarily, regularly, in the American Way—the Defense Bond way—every pay day.

Every dollar you can lend your Government is needed and needed now! Start getting your share of Defense Bonds and Stamps today. Get them regularly. Plan to set aside money every pay day—every single dime that you can. And remember, your Government guarantees that your money will come back to you with interest—as much as $4 for every $3 when Bonds are held to maturity.

You Get a $25 U. S. Bond for Only $18.75

FACTS ABOUT DEFENSE BONDS (SERIES E)

How much do they cost? You LEND Uncle Sam	Upon Maturity You GET BACK
$18.75	$25.00
$37.50	$50.00
$75.00	$100.00
$375.00	$500.00
$750.00	$1,000.00

When is maturity?
Ten years from the time you buy the Bond. If you need the money before then, you can cash the Bonds at any time after 60 days from issue date. A table of cash-in values is printed on each Bond. Naturally, the longer you hold the Bond, up to 10 years, the more money you'll get back. But you'll never get less than you put in.

What's the interest rate?
When held to maturity, the Bonds yield 2.9% per year on your investment, compounded semiannually—you get $4 for every $3.

What about Defense Stamps?
Buying Defense Stamps is a convenient way of saving money with which to buy a Defense Bond. Stamps are sold for as little as 10 cents.

When should I buy a Bond?
Start now; buy regularly. If your company has a Pay-roll Savings Plan, take advantage of it, NOW. INVEST IN SAFETY—WITH PERFECT SAFETY!

Too Light On Luxuries

Agreeing that the administration is correct in avoiding any general sales tax, we still think that, in Secretary Morgenthau's new schedule, it hasn't begun to go as far as it might in the imposition of excise, or luxury taxes.

In this section of the new tax schedule, there is not only room for a further general increase, but there are disparities which ought to be eliminated.

Studying the proposed new schedules, for instance, we find that some things which are not actually luxuries at all are to be taxed far more heavily than items which are indisputably luxuries.

It is proposed to increase the tax on photographic apparatus by 150 per cent, that on gasoline by 100 per cent, that on telephone bills by 66 per cent, that on "transportation by pipe line" by 50 per cent, and that on lubricating oil by 100 per cent.

There is no quarrel with such increases, even though they are on items which, to many people and to many businesses, are necessities.

But turn from these items to items which are pure luxuries, and you find that the increase proposed for the tax on beer is only 33 per cent, that on champagne by only 45 per cent, that on hard liquor only 33 per cent, and that on cigarettes only 50 per cent.

On the other hand, the more harmless luxuries, soft drinks, and candy and chewing gum, are to be taxed for the first time, a cent a bottle on the soft drinks, and a tax of 15 per cent on the manufacturers' sales price of candy and chewing gum. Neither the one as against no taxes on these items at all in the old schedule, mean that the new schedule is imposing a proportionately greater tax penalty on candy and soft drinks than it is on beer, champagne and hard liquor.

Beyond this, the new tax schedule completely passes over any increase in taxes on amusement admissions, club dues, or night club bills.

It all adds up to the fact that those Americans who may plan to fight this war by drinking and merrying are apparently the special pets of the Treasury Department. There will be many who think, and rightly so, that we haven't begun to tax these departments of American living as heavily as we could and should. It is not necessary to be a purist, or a moralist, or a prohibitionist, to think so. It is merely necessary to concede that a ten dollar bill spent for pure pleasure should have a companion ten dollar bill which would go toward the cost of the war.

In other words, let those who have the capacity to be gay at a time when our whole national existence is at stake pay heavily for the privilege.

If it is argued that a comparatively routine enjoyment of such amusements is necessary to preserve the morale of this nation, we shall respectfully disagree. If this nation is going to find the morale for the winning of this struggle, it will be the morale that comes from great and common sacrifice, not from luxurious and wanton privilege. This may be difficult for a Washington which is reportedly enjoying the greatest social season in its history to realize. Nonetheless, even Washington, some day, will have to come to the realization that we won't beat the Axis with champagne corks.

Insomnia Is Not Genius

For years, part of America's general amazement at Thomas A. Edison was not for his genius, but for his reputation of going without a normal amount of sleep. He thought nothing, we were told, of taking only three and four hours sleep a night. For a time, many Americans wondered if the barrier to their own genius and success might not be their exorbitant love of the pillow. Stay up all night, and be a genius! the Edison example seemed to say.

Then the truth came out. Edison did, indeed, get his bed far less than a normal assortment of time. But, he made up for it in other ways. He would take quick catnaps in the midst of his work. Fifteen minute periods on a couch, at intervals throughout his day, were the real and only explanation of why veen genius like his could continue to flower in the week-small hours.

If anything, the Edison originality consisted not in taking less sleep than the ordinary person, but in making better strategic use of it. He rested when he needed rest; he was not in the least blind to the healing and restorative function that only sleep can perform.

Only some one who is afflicted with an insomnia nothing seems to cure can have a full understanding of the miracle that is sleep—the magic capacity that body and brain develop for sinking into a state of complete and beneficial relaxation. But, however routine it may be to most of us, it is the deep well source of all our vitality and power. Take it in eccentric portions, if you are an inventor with your time your own, or take it eight hours on stretch, if your life must be ordered that way, but however you take it, don't feel guilty about it. Insomnia is no prerequisite to genius, and even an Edison mind can travel only so far without rest. Your body and brain are like any other mechanism; the more you deny them proper care, the sooner they wear out. Think of sleep as a basis for all your effort and accomplishment, not as something you bootleg away from more important parts of your life.

Worse Than Losing

There's something even worse than losing battles. It is having responsible officials violating what should be their trust to establish what events prove to be false optimism. Such attempts to beguile and comfort the public are what rankle in the public mind long after the defeat itself has been suffered; and they do damage in the public mind for they threaten to bring the time when the truth will not believe anything it is told.

The shocking fact about the first great Allied defeat in this war—that in Norway—was not the defeat itself, but the fact that, even as the outnumbered and outgun British troops were making their withdrawal, British cabinet ministers were issuing bulletins to the effect that their advance against the Nazis was proceeding full pace. The poison in the recent Lolayan campaign was not so much the fact that General Rommel did succeed in turning about, but the fact that British spokesmen counted the victory before they had it.

The worst thing about the fall of Singapore was the promise made, many times over, that the Japs were being held, or that the defenders were about to make a stand; and the most shocking development of all was the pronouncement of some high official, in the midst of the Malayan campaign, that the British would have "air superiority in three days time.

Now, in the battle of Java, we have been treated to equally irresponsible optimism, some of it from what should be responsible sources. There was, first, the great sea victory the United Nations reportedly won in the Java Sea. The United Nations fleet hasn't been heard from since. Next, after the Japanese had been advancing through Java for several days, some Dutch source reported the situation "well in hand." Only yesterday, the Dutch Lieutenant Governor, Dr. Huhva ha J. Van Mook, told his people to fight on, and said: "It may be expected that at any moment the attack on the enemy will be launched from another side." Well, we hope so; but, frankly, we doubt it. Along with the Van Mook statement was that of our own Secretary of War, to the effect that "during the past week we have increased our air support (of Java) materially." What is the good of making a statement like that when Japanese planes are having an unchallenged field day all over Java? Do we believe it? Do the Dutch? Does it frighten the Japanese?

We won't get back the mood for winning this war until we get rid of this apparently incurable, irresponsible habit of trying to kid ourselves into victory. In this respect, the peoples of the democracies everywhere are a lot nearer realism than their officials are. The people do not fear the bad news untruths, they'd rather get on with acceptance of all the bitter business at hand and then get on the other side of the pillow. Stay up all night, and be a genius! the Edison example seemed to say.

Comment From The River Road

By Malcolm Mollan

(Mr. Mollan, former editor of The Herald, has consented to write a weekly letter in which he shares with his former readers the philosophical benefits of his own peaceful retirement to the banks of the Niantic River. Look for his contribution each Saturday.)

This week—on Tuesday—we had the highest tide in the river that has been experienced here since the hurricane tidal wave of 1938. So, at least, our neighbors tell us, and they know about such things. One particular reason for their feeling lab on extraordinarily high tides lies in the fact that most of them get their water supplies from springs which outpour on the rather sharply sloping banks of our cove, and in some instances not too far above high water mark. Very infrequently, as in 1938, either through actual swamping under the tidal waters or through seepage, some of these springs have been known to be drowned out by the saline tide. And as most of the springs are walled up in shallow wells from which the water is pumped into the houses by electric pumps, it is easy to see that such a salting can cause a very considerable amount of trouble, including a great deal of scurrying around to find—and tote—unaffected water for use during the period of boiling out wells, emptying tanks and getting things going again after the phenomenal tide has receded.

Our own spring is pretty well down the bank, but not so close to the normal margin of the cove but that we feel pretty secure against its flooding. In more than twenty years it has only become salted once, and that was on the historic hurricane occasion. It was entirely unaffected this week. The tide did not rise quite high enough to flow into it, and perhaps the extent of the frost in the ground prevented any seepage—after all, the period of thrust in any event is not more than an hour or two in duration, at the very peak of flood water.

But, as you may easily realize, we did watch the last hour or two of that tide's rise with considerably more than an idle interest, just a stone's throw above our springs. Pretty soon some of us began to worry. And as the water crept higher and higher—spreading out over the flatter opposite shore until it was within less than a foot of the bridge deck and had covered the Oswegatchie Point road for a hundred yards to a depth which all but blocked automobile travel—one experienced a realization that has come to countless human beings in the world in the last few years, in far more serious relationship—that there just isn't a thing in the world that one could do about it. There the springs were; there was the rising tide. If the tide rose high enough the springs would be drowned out. It was an inevitable as death itself. No amount of ingenuity, no degree of effort, would make the slightest difference.

It didn't signify in the very least that we had all always thought of the flooding out of our springs as an extremely unlikely. Here was the tide, rising, and still rising—and at an astonishingly rapid rate. All any of us could do was look at it. It did no good at all to reflect that if we had cemented up our various wells several feet higher we could be perfectly secure. We couldn't do it. There was no time for it now. And now the whole thing was out of our hands.

Well, at that the tide reached its peak, and began to recede. We all breathed freer. The springs had just missed a salting.

Some Comparisons

It's a far, far cry from the springs and the tide and the little group of dwellers on the Road who felt this scare over their water supplies—from these to the state of the world and our worries about it. But the two things are, after all, quite analogous. We depend on the usual—and we take the most reckless and extravagant chances with the unusual but by no means impossible.

Another thing there's analogy. There are scientific physical limits to the height to which tides may rise, even if they are freed from the moon's influence. And there are scientific physical limitations to the destructive powers of the Germans and the Japs. However high the tides may rise they must, inevitably, recede. There must come a time when the crest has been reached; then, as the tide must turn and ebb, the waters must fall again. Just as inevitable, just as inescapable for Hitler or the Black Dragon, is the turning of their rising tide. And perhaps we are even now witnessing the last inch or two of its accretion.

Analogy between our tide and the war is imperfect, because there is a world of difference between our handful of dwellers on the cove basin and many of them and few of them burdened by any excess of means, and the great American nation, pulsating with strength and skilled with industrial activity. Even at the eleventh hour, when the tide of totalitarian danger had crept slyly up to the danger mark without attracting the slightest notice, it was not altogether too late for America to make safe her spring of freedom. And I am convinced that she is doing it, despite the carping and fault finding.

Change the Target

I don't believe that the American people are still either asleep or indifferent to the peril in the flooding tide. I have the impression that it is about time to give over scolding the people for an indifference which I do not believe exists—and to turn the criticism, instead, against those pinheads in Congress who, more than any other group in the country, have failed to sense what is going on about them, and what dolts and chuckleheads they are making of themselves, with their senseless and well nigh ruinous obstructionism.

I am not among those who believe that after this war is over, it is not unlikely that a decade—this country will slump back into the same old routine. I believe there will be many and great changes, not only in our individual and collective outlook, but in our system of law, even in the sacrosanct Constitution. And there is one Constitutional change that I very greatly hope will develop—one the effect of which will be that no person shall be eligible to a seat in either branch of Congress until, under competent examination, it shall be demonstrated that he possesses an I. Q. at least 30 per cent of that of a normal boy of 16. I can think of a number of persons in either House or Senate who would be seriously at a loss to qualify under such a requirement.

We'll Love 'em When—

Then there's the notion on the radio the professionally holy voice of some goof pleading with the people to banish from their hearts all hatred and rancor toward our enemies. I don't know who he was but I think I know what he was—and I don't like him. I think I like a pinhead better than I like the swollen Nazis or those rotten little stinkers the Japs, who couldn't lick a plate of soup in a fair fight with real men, as MacArthur has so clearly demonstrated.

For my part I wouldn't give a nickel-copper coin for the chance of shooting a cay citizen of this country who doesn't hate Hitler and the hissing adders of Nippon with every red blood corpuscle in his body.

Oh, let's love the Japs and the Nazis.

For aren't they human, too?
Aren't we told to love all creatures—
Not just the Yankee few?

All right, we'll love 'em dearly.

From toenails clear to head—
When we've prepared 'em for it.

Connecticut Yankee

By A. H. O.

Judge Harold L. Knapp of Greenwich has won the Probate sweepstakes, an unwelcome victory which was announced as the result of the fact that he started early and ran straightforward without deviating to any of the last-minute strategy some of the later and cannier starters used.

This was a race which no one wanted to win, and although there were times when it seemed that Judge Knapp would have to be beaten, the leading contenders drew themselves up short at the last moment, and eased over the line a pleasant second and third.

Could Judge Knapp be allowed to do it over again, there is no doubt that he, too, could manage to lose. He won the sweepstakes, for instance, with a total of $21,955.32, based on a gross income for his probate court of $28,332.65.

This gross income was comparatively reasonable. The trouble was that Judge Knapp didn't know how to manage it.

In Hartford, for instance, Judge Russell Z. Johnston had a gross income of $43,177.20, was the largest gross probate court income in the state. Judge Johnston had no intention of being caught out in front when it came to income.

Just as the whole state was expecting him to cross the line an easy winner, he announced that he was installing and financing a pension plan for his employes. By dint of taking the sum of $9,139 for this purpose, which financed the original pension payment and the next installment as well, Judge Johnston was able to reduce his net to $20,478.75, which still left the Greenwich judge the winner by some $500.

The next leading contender was Judge John L. Gibson of New Haven, who had a gross of $18,795, and who was therefore in danger of finding himself in trouble. Judge Gibson didn't have time to buy a pension plan, so his last minute adjustment consisted in charging his own income tax as one of the "costs" of the court. This brought him down to $20,607, in second place, with the Greenwich judge still the winner.

Had Judge Knapp known this sort of thing was going to happen, we have no doubt he too would have escaped the ignoming of first place.

In fact, any of these larger income judges might have made their figure still more respectable, by deducting campaign expenditures or political contributions, and the final net result, in some such case, would certainly have made our Superior Court judges less jealous.

Nonetheless, whatever these jobs may cost, there will, henceforth, be no shortage of candidates. This is the first time these judges have ever earned what they comes public. Up to this time, they have had to turn over their fees, which probably explains why the Judiciary Committee of the General Assembly has moved long before this to obtain the appointment of probate judges.

What an irony that so many hah judgeships should have been consummated without giving the probate judiciary reform will be necessary in the next session. Whether or not the salaries are reduced and stabilized, the Judiciary Committee should obviously have anything to say about who gets them.

Ask 24 Curfew

Hartford, March 7—(AP)—Because the situation in New England is "so serious," the executive committee of the New England Council yesterday wired Petroleum Co-Ordinator Ickes urging immediate closing of gasoline stations on weekday nights and all day Sunday. The committee also urged prohibition of sale of bunker fuel oil.

Washington in War Time

By Jack Stinnett

Washington—The Capital in Wartime:

The Red Cross says that since Pearl Harbor, more than 55,000 persons have donated to the nation's blood bank.

The following little item isn't intended to detract one bit from the credit due those 55,000 for their bit and more. But among them is a little group who deserves special mention in my book. Here's why:

They have never known a member of Congress to shy away from "helpful" publicity—that is, up until now. But up in the Capitol, the number of Congressmen who have volunteered blood has reached such a level that Dr. G. W. Calver, Congressional physician, has had to organize a Capitol branch of the blood bank. And one specific stipulation is that there is to be no publicity about it.

Typical of the secrecy surrounding these donations is the case of Sen. Tom Connally, of Texas, 64 years old. The Senator is no shrinking violet when it comes to getting his name on Page 1. But it was only by chance that it leaked out that he had been one of the first to get himself okayed. Today, if you ask him about his trip to the blood bank hospital, he'll tell you, "I don't know what you are talking about and besides don't you make out that contributing to the blood bank is a publicity stunt, because it isn't."

The Interstate Commerce Commission has had its share of complaints, but in Washington, at least, it always has been known as one of the leaders in government economy. When the order went out that all agencies should conserve paper, ICC was the first to slash paper use by half and more.

The commission's latest economy touch is a beaut. Each day, a mailing clerk makes the rounds of the offices to deliver mail directory to western clients. In each department, there are about 20 to 150 sheets and it has been customary to hand them to the clerk, rolled up and held with a rubber band. Now as the mail clerk reaches the last office, he ends up a Houdini, slips off the rubber band and drops it back into the box for use again.

Maury Maverick, the stormy petrel of Texas politics, one-time congressman and former mayor of San Antonio, has had a lot of offices in Washington and out, but I doubt if any of them have had that 17-by-10 room he occupies in Temporary Building E (it was there in World War I), where his title is director of (state and municipal) government relations.

If you know him well, he is sure to show you his "private little kitchen." It consists of three drawers in the filing cabinet. One contains a set of pinkish dishes; another, an electric hot plate; and the third, some canned goods and staples.

Mrs. Maverick, he'll explain proudly, bustles in at lunch time; cooks up a meal for him and any bustness guests he may have; and washes the dishes down the hall in a cubby-hole sink.

Man About Manhattan

By George Tucker

New York — Let's play What's My Name today . . . I'll give you some hints . . . In fact, I'll tell you everything I know about myself. Ready to go?

I was born in Chicago. My dad was a doctor. I'm the guy who started the Rent - a - Ford Plan. Later I sold 3 million dollars' com- pany and they made it into the Drivself-Yourself plan.

I became a promoter, and a prize fight manager . . . I had some good boys among my wing.

I managed Dave Shade, Art Lasky and Jack Roper . . . I managed Eddie Anderson, Eddie Shea and Tommy Grogan . . . I managed Ray Miller.

Not only did I manage fighters I became a night club operator on a big scale, and I managed three bands . . . I managed Louis Armstrong, Lionel Hampton, Glenn Garr, I manage Don Bestor, Andy Kirk, and Buck and Bubbles . . . Among the names I have helped to stardom are Noble Sissie, Lucky Millinder, and Jack Benny's Rochester.

I also lifted Stephin Fetchit from $35 to $3,500 a week.

But my real love is dogs . . . I breed white collies, Boston terriers and Pekes, but I guess I like Boston terriers most of all . . . I keep six ribbon - winning Bostons in my apartment . . . I live in a penthouse and each of these Bostons has a specially built kennel . . .

Some people say I'm something of a dandy, that I like to wear expensive clothes . . . That's true. Now, What's my name? I'll tell you at the bottom of this column.

Here's a story I picked up after the war started. It may be almost incredible, I'll admit—but so did Pearl Harbor last Dec. 7.

The story is this: A representative of Franco's Spanish government in New York is recounted as saying that Spain will become an ally of the United States and Great Britain in the war against Germany and Italy within 60 days . . . This man is known to be pro-Axis. He bitterly resents what he described as "Franco's decision." . . . His reasons for the allegedly contemplated move are based on the powerful influence of South America's anti-Axis sentiment. South American's mostly are Spanish speaking people. This man also points to the "bill" Mussolini sent Franco "for services rendered" after the Spanish Civil War. He thinks Franco is crazy to throw in his lot with the British and Americans, whom he despises, but says nothing can dissuade him.

Well, well see. It seems incredible. But, as you'll admit, so did Pearl Harbor.

Note: The answer to What's My Name is Joe Glaser. He is one of the town's foremost promoters. His latest "find" is Les Brown, whose orchestra in the last 18 months has come from nowhere to a point where it is challenging the leaders.

Helps in Eliminating Rheumatism

In the treatment of rheumatism, the one necessity to be kept ever in mind is the necessity of eliminating the rheumatic toxemia as quickly as possible. One of the best eliminative treatments for the purpose is the fast and drinking regimen. During the time the patient is fasting, the energy formerly used by the digestive organs is free to be used for elimination with the result that the body will cleanse itself four or five times as rapidly as would be the case if food were being used. In the fast, the body will use up the excess material and the most reckless and extravagant chances with the unusual but by no means impossible.

Another thing there's analogy. There are scientific physical limits to the height to which tides may rise, even if they are freed from the moon's influence. And there are scientific physical limitations to the destructive powers of the Germans and the Japs. However high the tides may rise they must, inevitably, recede. There must come a time when the crest has been reached; then, as the tide must turn and ebb, the waters must fall again. Just as inevitable, just as inescapable for Hitler or the Black Dragon, is the turning of their rising tide. And perhaps we are even now witnessing the last inch or two of its accretion.

Analogy between our tide and the war is imperfect, because there is a world of difference between our handful of dwellers on the cove basin and many of them and few of them burdened by any excess of means, and the great American nation, pulsating with strength and skilled with industrial activity. Even at the eleventh hour, when the tide of totalitarian danger had crept slyly up to the danger mark without attracting the slightest notice, it was not altogether too late for America to make safe her spring of freedom. And I am convinced that she is doing it, despite the carping and fault finding.

Change the Target

I don't believe that the American people are still either asleep or indifferent to the peril in the flooding tide. I have the impression that it is about time to give over scolding the people for an indifference which I do not believe exists—and to turn the criticism, instead, against those pinheads in Congress who, more than any other group in the country, have failed to sense what is going on about them, and what dolts and chuckleheads they are making of themselves, with their senseless and well nigh ruinous obstructionism.

I am not among those who believe that after this war is over, it is not unlikely that a decade—this country will slump back into the same old routine. I believe there will be many and great changes, not only in our individual and collective outlook, but in our system of law, even in the sacrosanct Constitution. And there is one Constitutional change that I very greatly hope will develop—one the effect of which will be that no person shall be eligible to a seat in either branch of Congress until, under competent examination, it shall be demonstrated that he possesses an I. Q. at least 30 per cent of that of a normal boy of 16. I can think of a number of persons in either House or Senate who would be seriously at a loss to qualify under such a requirement.

Boosts North End Again

Editor of The Herald:

I am glad to read the results of the Community Chest collection. Sorry to hear some housewives did not contribute. Perhaps if I thinking they will find the North End indifferent will be glad to use their frozen purches for defense work. Gosh I wouldn't mind having Hitler's bombs hang over my front door.

When those boys call we - ill have the paper ready. Now I think we could have a local metal scrap pile. We sold some to the Japs. Let's make a pile to give to Japs and pile it high.

Tell us where we can dump it and I know the farmers will donate old mowing machines and tobacco setters etc. We all have old lawn mowers and rusty stoves and junk. Let's make it a pile. Let's make it a place to bring it to and we will deliver the goods.

Herald Man Saw Service Where MacArthur Fights

Spent 14 Months in the Philippines with Marine Corps; Describes Terrain on Bataan Peninsula; Hints at Secret Source of Supplies.

The courageous defense of Bataan Peninsula by General Douglas MacArthur and his Philippine and American troops has elicited the praise of the entire world. Scant information comes from this strange, isolated jungle world where our men now serve. In the following article some interesting glimpses of what may be found on Bataan Peninsula are given by Archie Kilpatrick of the Herald staff, who served 14 months in this little known area.

By Archie Kilpatrick

I served on Bataan Peninsula for 14 months 33 years ago at the age of 18. Little did I realize then the importance that was later to be attached to this formidable neck of land between Manila Bay on the west and Manila Bay on the east, guardian to the gateway to Manila.

I will confess that in 1909 I did not know the name of Bataan, nor the names of the many barrios or villages in the interior of Bataan or on its seaside or on Subic Bay where I stood guard over Naval establishments and protected Filipino villages from excessive damages from disease epidemics.

It was shortly after noon on the 2nd of October, 1908, when the U. S. Army Transport Buford pokes her nose past Fort Mills on the island of Corregidor and steamed on into Manila Bay. I was a member of a detachment of 170 Marines ordered to duty at the Naval Station, Olongapo, Philippines, for two years.

Noble Sight

The troop sat on island down on sea and jungle. As we neared the City of Manila our eyes rested on one of the most noble sights the eyes of a service man may ever hope to see—the ever green mountain at a home port on dress parade!

The sea was mirror smooth and the entire fleet, fresh from its trip "around the world" was glistening in white paint and each vessel was bedecked from stem to stern with gaily waving signal flags, a beautiful contrasting picture against the blue Asiatic sky.

The Admiral's flag, I remembered, had been sent around the world on a good will tour and at the stage mentioned it had crossed the westerly possession—the Philippines.

Hard luck befell the personnel of the fleet, however, it was Friday, however. A serious cholera epidemic, which was raging at the time, kept the fleet at sea.

Familiar Scenes

Familiar state names flashed to us as we gave the national salute in passing the anchored fleet. Scores—thousands of Americans aboard each vessel, all the majestic, that flag, Vermont, New Jersey, Rhode Island, Nebraska, Nebraska, North Dakota, Ohio, Mississippi, Washington, North Carolina, Montana, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Maryland.

Manila Bay and adjacent Subic Bay, which dominates the entire southern part of the Peninsula. From the Manila Bay, Marivelles commands the city of Manila, about 30 miles to the east.

Dense Jungle

The terrain in the Bataan Peninsula is dense jungle, almost inaccessible in certain sectors, notably those lowlands near the mouth of rivers near the coast. At higher altitudes there are stands of bamboo and bataan trees grow, festooned with long, clinging vines which hang from the topmost branches of the towering trees. It is a natural defensive area.

Near the coast there are fishing villages of native Tagalogs. Inland there are mountain villages of Negrito tribes, wild and aboriginal, but relatively harmless in this day and age.

It was my good fortune to visit many of these Negrito villages inland in Bataan. This tribe constitutes one of the largest groups of near-aboriginal natives in all of the Philippines, and being friendly to whites in some sections close to the coast, I had an opportunity to watch them at work and at play for the duration of my tour of duty in the Philippines.

The Negrito tribesmen live principally by their cutting as hunters, and by trading game and the native spear. Their weapon is a small bow, one of few mammals on the archipelago, the native "tabong" or wild pig, of small size and one of the fastest moving animals I ever saw.

Wild Pigs

I have been out hunting wild pigs on Bataan at night (it is sweet potato, being the favorite vegetable feeding ground of the animal) and despite the most cautious stalking in the darkness, have watched the herd of from 15 to 20 and a half dozen pigs had rooted out camotes (sweet potatoes) by the bushel and had left the ground close by.

We have gone out in hunting parties for the small, elusive wild pig, and during the three-four months of this kind of sport we failed to kill one specimen for the pot—or frying pan.

It is a country of more natural fever than any place I ever saw or served in. Giant ferns guard the narrow native trails. The ferns are so thick they hang down over high cliffs shimmering white into fern forest covered ravines. Giant palm lands are tangled morasses of vines, huge green ferns and trees behind which a sizable army could hide.

There are few trails across the rugged terrain from Subic Bay to Manila Bay, and strategic positions on the interior of the peninsula since the occupying Imperial MacArthur has kept the invader at respectful distance except for a few isolated raids and one landing, which were promptly repulsed with the extermination of the attackers.

Supplies At Hand

The question of supplies, ammunition, food and necessary equipment, has been a vital factor in our during the weeks that General MacArthur has maintained such a gallant stand on Bataan, and heavily outnumbered. Supply was taken care of for years ago from throughout the foresightedness of the War Department, and with a military secret as far as the disposition of the supplies, it is safe to say that General MacArthur will be found to fear from this lack for months to come.

Now that Aiongapo, and the big Naval Magazine, or what was a magazine at Mariveles Point on Pataan Peninsula is in enemy hands, when General MacArthur withdrew so-th along the peninsula to the mountain ranges of high elevations at the tip, it can be said that here was located, deep in the Bataan jungle, one of the largest stores of fleet ammunition and supplies in the Orient. It was in this huge stock of ammunition could have been removed in the time to its tremendous amount.

For over a year I was one of many Marines detailed to guard the Naval Magazine on Bataan. From the air it was impossible to tell where the massive concrete and steel building were in the heavy surrounding jungle growth.

Base Lost

From an innocent looking wooden dock which was located in a shallow, narrow inlet, ship's boats docked and loaded shells, powder and fixed ammunition for ships of the fleet. But the strategy of the Japanese infiltrating into Olongapo and the Subic Bay area from the north rendered the magazine and the Naval reservation at Olongapo useless. It fell into their hands on January 15. Two days later the Subic Bay defense on Grande Island surrendered.

I served on Bataan early in 1909 as a member of a quarantine guard over the Lorrio of Maritan, a small village of Filipinos, most of whom worked as laborers at the Maritan Point coaling station, near Olongapo. This village was located deep in the jungle of Bataan.

As General MacArthur and his brave defenders retired to the southerly end of Bataan, he passed through Maritan. High above Maritan was located the water supply for Olongapo. This reservoir was also given up in the advance of the Japs. But throughout the entire terrain of Bataan there is ample water for all the troops that could be packed into the area.

Can Hold Out Long Time

Given food and water, a leader of the ability of General Douglas MacArthur can defend for a long time at relatively small cost to themselves a terrain such as Bataan Peninsula. There evidently have been supplies. The jungle in the interior affords excellent cover for airplanes. It is a Herculean task for an attacking force to penetrate the volcanic ridges with machine gun and heavier caliber gun emplacements jutting out from behind every hill and cliff.

By now members of General MacArthur's command have had the pleasure of sampling some of the tempting fruit growing wild on Bataan. Rice is a staple food in the Philippines, and the abundance of food, including the native Japanese arms depend upon rice as the staple food of the army. Rice is easily carried, preserved and served. Contained in the rice kernel is necessary to sustain life in active war. A little goes a long way. It is easily transported and stored.

Transportation is the big headache of the Japanese. Rice is usually piled with food in an isolated depository. In this connection the problem will be intensified when the annual "rainy season" begins in Bataan. There will be a certain period of intermittent cool and wet weather. This period will be exercised in protecting supplies from rot and mould in the jungle heat and humidity of several months.

"Rainy Season"

Few Americans realize just what is meant by a tropical "rainy season." It is not just a short period of showers and clearing; sunshine and rain. The rain persists for days and weeks on end. There is no "period of clearing." It is a continuous downpour. In Bataan in 1909 I experienced 17 days and nights of continuous downpour, night and day without letup. The constant rainy weather is a relative, one of the most depressing experiences that those American boys will experience if they maintain their present position during the next few months.

Then there are the storms—the tropical typhoons. They come later on the summer, in August and September. Earthquakes come at any time. The entire archipelago is volcanic with over a dozen volcances in the group, and earth tremors of slight or extremely heavy type will be felt in the coming months. There are some advantages and many disadvantages in this remarkable defensive state of a noble warrior on Bataan, both of which will place the instance high in the annals of modern warfare.

Must Prepare Youth

We might as well steel ourselves to the fact that we will, in future years, have to acclimate our youth to service of just this sort in tropic lands. . . . It will be a long road and one beset with dangers of many kinds aside from the most imminent threat of active warfare.

The youth who serves in tropic lands must be physically fit. Sub par youths will never survive the terrific tests of acclimatization that go with the varying heat and moisture of the tropics, all contributing to the undermining of efficiently active fevers. To this end we must, in our best interests, To win there is no other way. At best it will be a terrible price to pay. This writer, who has the sense of alarming or discouraging, must over the prospects of Far Eastern war. We are at a disadvantage in that we are fighting a race from the immediate war we are, in general, recruit our fighting forces and a temperate zone.

Many advancements in science have been made since the outbreak of the Insurrection in the Philippines nearly 45 years ago suffered tortures from malignant fevers such as dengue, malaria and the deadly yellow fever. Serums inoculations have in a large measure reduced the original dangers of such a minimum. In this warfare, as on Bataan, many deadly germs are being introduced. Its will ultimately reduce the vitality of the men. It is then that the most extremely virulent type will stalk to strike.

Fever Will Yield

The indomitable spirit of our defenders will either overcome of the possible dangers so imminent today, and in the future, as they did years ago when such similar troops, less effectively protected in all ways, fought doggedly on to free this same land from an invasion. Let us set it up as a model output of vibrant, free-thinking and free-acting Americans, in every sense.

We who have previously served on foreign shores are the first to scan the reports from the Philippines for word of our Far Eastern mission. On many of us it is like hearing from the old home town. Our duties were similar geographically.

War has brought General MacArthur's force face to face with the extremes. While we played the game in lesser degree of danger, those lads on Bataan are faced with a far more serious issue, dangers. May we all, through their noble example, be inspired to fight to encompass and eventually stamp out the greed and hate and mastery of such lords as have the minds of men that would make of this world an impossible, unthinkable place to live.

Refused to Sell Scrap to Aid Japs

Brookfield, March 7—(AP)—Because he refused to sell scrap metal four years ago on the grounds that it would be resold to Japan, Donald L. Thomsen, president of Fairfield County Farm Bureau, was able to report to Danbury's rural salvage committee yesterday that eight tons of old iron and steel are salvageable from his farm.

This amount, said Le Roy M. Chapman, Farm Bureau agent, is "a little greater than that expected to be found on a farm the size of one operated by Mr. Thomsen.

Four years ago Mr. Thomsen figured at a meeting of county farm leaders that he would not sell old metal from his farm as long as Japan was buying scrap iron in this country. He predicted that Japan would attack America.

With the need for scrap metal growing daily, Mr. Thomsen was contacted this week by the rural salvage committee. The size of the scrap pile on his farm was a surprise to him as well as to the committee.

Steps have been taken to get the large scrap pile on way by what furnaces furnishing steel for the nation's war arsenals.

Home Gardens In News Again

See Tremendous Rush This Spring by Big Crowd of Amateurs.

By Paul Gesner

New York, March 7.—(AP)—A flock of 150 Canadian wild geese, flying in a "V" formation, pinioned northward up the Atlantic coast aboard this week and back-yard gardeners from South Jersey to Aine, scenting spring, began packing last year's caked mud from their garden tools.

No matter whether the weather was warm or cold, millions of Americans were leafing through seed catalogues and drawing up plans for vegetable gardens.

Federal, state and county agricultural agencies throughout the fifty-eight states are urging the planting of gardens that they to help raise food to win the war. Every home can one of the backyard vegetable plot makes it possible for the big canners to pack a commercial bean thus saved for Army and Navy consumption.

The increase in vegetable gardens, compared with last year is going to be astonishing, Harry Candy, president of Peter Henderson & Co., a big wholesale and retail seed and plant house, reports. "But if you're planting a garden, don't plant potatoes. Plant green vegetables like tomatoes, beans and peas."

Candy, a veteran seed man, recalls that potatoes were planted in yard gardeners in the last World War. Everybody planted vegetables. Scores of people followed up their front lawns and planted potatoes. There was room for potatoes in the country when the crop was in the ground. But people couldn't eat them all and they rotted in cellars and barns.

Rural agricultural agents at the moment are more interested in getting farmers than city dwellers to plant gardens. The tendency has been growing, ever since Ford invented the Model T., for farmers to plant big crops like wheat and corn, then buy their green vegetables at the grocery store in town. There are 1,000,000 farms in the country and aim is to get as many of these as possible to put in a vegetable patch to supply greens for household use.

Incidentally, plans are going forward to provide adequate glass for rubbers for home canning of garden vegetables.

Taxes: Present view in banking circles is that income tax rates won't be doubled next year, as proposed by Treasury Secretary Morgenthau, although they may be sharply higher. Chances are held better than 50-50 that a Federal sales tax on everything except food will finally be resorted to as a revenue measure. A sales tax, Y. M. C. A. is putting on dances and parties at Camp Hale, Colo. The swimming pool is open all night. Bowling alleys in the city near the camp are open all night, shift workers have organized a "Twilight Bowling League" that plays games forenoons.

Much Interest In Nutrition

Well ... Attended Meeting at Y; 32 Women Register for Course.

A large group of local men and women attended a meeting last night at the Y. M. C. A. as Miss Nickerson of the State Department of Health officially opened the Standard Red Cross Nutrition Course. It was stated that men are welcome to attend future meetings.

Thirty women registered for the 20-hour course on nutrition which will commence next week. Classes will be held on Tuesday and Friday evenings from 7 to 9 o'clock at the Hollister Street school.

Explains Vitamins

At the session last evening, Miss Nickerson explained the every day terminology of vitamins. Many expressions which are heard daily in regard to vitamins were vague in the minds of those present, and the explanations that were given aided much in clearing up this subject in the minds of the audience.

Definite diets for definite reasons were also outlined as Miss Nickerson explained just what to eat and drink when you were seeking to better your health.

Miss Hannah Jenson, BS, an instructor of Home Economics in the Manchester schools, will be in charge of the nutrition classes. If enough women register, another class will be formed in the fall, it was announced. This latter class would be held in the South End if enough women were interested.

Five Die, 100 Hurt In Delayed Blast Of Arms Truck

they were forced to return to their stations for water.

Bystanders and persons in the nearby Talton hotel and Gurkins tavern in the roadside community watched as the flames gained headway again and soon consumed the truck.

Suddenly the truck exploded and Luke Gapps' filling station, about 150 yards away, and behind which I was sitting in my car, was leveled to the ground," Bobbitt said.

"My car was demolished and only by the grace of God am I living to tell the details."

Spectators Cleared Away

Bobbitt said that the highway patrol had cleared of spectators the cement roadway before the explosion for a distance of some 200 yards. A 30-foot gap was dug up by the blast.

"But all the flying debris after fire killed at least four and apparently injured about 100," he added.

The injured were taken to the Johnston County hospital here and a Goldsboro hospital, 20 miles away. Facilities at both hospitals were overcrowded.

The truck, Bobbitt said, driven by Raymond Avery, of Charleston, who was only slightly injured.

Was Sprayed With Gasoline

"The automobile caught on fire almost immediately after the collision and sprayed the truck with gasoline," Bobbitt said. "But the truck did not immediately flare afire.

"The firemen were making fine headway in controlling the blaze when the water gave out," he continued.

"We then cleared the highway of spectators for a distance of at least 200 yards but several of the buildings destroyed were within the area which we had cleared and some of those injured were in these buildings."

"The long burning fire, which lit up the heavens for miles around, naturally attracted folk from a wide area and it was difficult to keep them back from the scene."

Magnesium Plant Building Destroyed

Las Vegas, Nev., March 7.—(AP)—Wind-whipped flames destroyed the $2,000,000 administration building of The Basic Magnesium Plant, Inc., last night. The $63,000,000 project, financed by The Defense Plant Corp., is scheduled to begin producing magnesium for warplane factories about June 15.

Lawrence G. McNeil, head of McNeil Construction Company, the contractors, said he suspected sabotage because the flames started in a corner where wind would whip them through the structure.

Doubts Duplicates Made

He did not say whether engineers plans and blueprints were saved. An acquaintance said they would be the chief object of sabotage in the administration building. The latter added that because designers were racing to keep ahead of construction he doubted whether duplicates had been prepared.

The first magnesium processing building is scheduled to be ready for production in mid-May.

Five thousand men are employed in construction work.

Other Buildings Not Damaged

Other buildings were not damaged and no one was injured. The loss included engineering equipment and office equipment of the contractors and the Basic Magnesium Plant, Inc. The $63,000,000 plant is being financed by the Defense Plant Corporation, a government agency, and had been under construction since last fall.

McNeil said the building, to be used in the manufacture of magnesium, a substitute for aluminum in the aircraft industry, would be reconstructed immediately.

Crews working on basic buildings of the plan fought the flames unsuccessfully. The area has been under close guard by employes of the contractor during construction.

Three Burn to Death In Tenement Blaze

New York, March 7.—(AP)— At least three persons were burned to death early today in a tenement fire on the lower West Side and an undetermined number were injured.

Seven persons were taken to St. Vincent's hospital.

Firemen said they were unable to determine immediately whether any more persons were trapped in the four-story building, located at 239 West 16th St.

Fire officials were that the flames started on the first floor and quickly ate their way upward through the old structure.

A mother leaped out of a second story window with her infant in her arms and both were injured seriously.

Dead Tentatively Identified

Police tentatively identified one of the dead as Mrs. Betty Hasara, 22, and her eight-months-old daughter Loulou. The third body was burned so badly immediate identification was impossible.

Police and firemen were unable immediately to determine the cause of the fire.

Twenty persons died during the early morning hours in separate house fires in Brooklyn. They were John Holmquist, 65, and Fanny Lorch, 50.

Weddings

Sparks-Frisell

Pink carnations, white snapdragons and candelabra will decorate the home of Rowland Latham church for the marriage this evening of Miss Birgit Olga Frisell, daughter of John O. Frisell of 12 Short street, and Richard Langham Sparks, of Bloomfield, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Sparks of Wakefield, Mass.

The pastor, Rev. Thorsten A. Gustafson who will officiate at the ceremony at 7:30 o'clock will use the double ring service. Organist G. Albert Pearson will give a short program of appropriate selections as the guests are assembling and play the bridal marches. He will accompany Miss Eleanor Berggren who will sing "Because" and "I Love You Truly." Miss Clara Davoll of Hartford will be maid of honor and Miss Emily Sparks, sister of the bridegroom will be bridesmaid. Ralph Coleman of Everett, Mass., will be best man, and the ushers will be Herbert Frisell, brother of the bride and Emil Nielsen of Bloomfield.

The bride who will be given in marriage by her father will wear a gown of white chiffon with bishop sleeves and sweetheart neckline. Her full length veil of lace-trimmed net will fall from a pearl tiara. She will carry a bridal bouquet of white snapdragons and lace-trimmed net will fall from a pearl tiara. She will carry a bridal bouquet of white snapdragons and lily-of-the-valley and the bridesmaid's gown will be of pink marquisette and her arm bouquet blue delphiniums and pink snapdragons. The bridegroom's mother will wear sea green crepe with corsage of white camellias.

The reception will be followed by a reception in the church parlors for 100 guests. When leaving for an unannounced wedding trip the bride will wear a beige suit with brown accessories and white camellia corsage. On their return they will live at 12 Short street and be at home to their friends after March 15.

The bride's gifts to her attendants are compacts and the bridegroom gave to his best man and ushers, pens.

The bride is a graduate of Manchester High school and is employed by the Connecticut General Life Insurance company. The bridegroom is a graduate of the Stockbridge, Mass., School of Agriculture and is employed at Nielsen's Dairy, Bloomfield.

Going Into Service Are Given Party

Five employees of the Ellis Coat Company who have enlisted or soon will be leaving for service in the armed forces of the United States were honored last night at a party given by associates in the plant here. One of the boys, Dante Di Modica was not present in person since he is already in service, but he was represented by his father, Sabino Modica.

The party was held at Osanna's cottage in Bolton and those who were honored in addition to Modica were John Dogata, Gino Dogata, Thomas Raimondo and Max Handler. The Dogata boys and Handler will go with the next Selective Service contingent and Raimondo has already enlisted.

Following the supper there was entertainment by the salesmen of the Ellis Coat Company.

Ansonia Flyer Missing

Ansonia, March 7.—(AP) — Mrs. James Viselli has been notified that her son, Armando, a professional baseball player until he joined the Army Air Force four years ago, has been missing since Dec. 12 in the Philippines. The War Department's message said he was in a plane which failed to arrive at its destination. Viselli played at semi-pro teams and he was with two St. Louis Browns farm clubs, Palestine of the East Texas League and Lima in the Illinois-Ohio League.

Draft Director Hershey Knows What Makes Joe Doakes 'Tick'

By Tom Wolf

Washington—It is not surprising that when, in 1940, the U. S. Army was seeking an officer who could best wake the American public cheerfully swallow the then-bitter pill of conscription, it chose Brig. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey to head the Selective Service System.

The job called for a man who knew, liked and understood people. And Gen. Hershey has spent most of his army life trying to find out just what makes Joe Doakes, in uniform or not, tick.

When Gen. Hershey, then a young captain of artillery, returned from overseas service after World War I, he brought home with him some ideas about improving the U. S. Army. His ideas had little to do with material, strategy or tactics. His chief concern was the lack on the part of most officers himself among them—of an understanding of people.

Deciding to do something about it, he studied every book on psychology he could get his hands on, talked and corresponded with leading educators.

He'll Discuss Anything With Anybody

But Gen. Hershey's knowledge of people doesn't stem from books alone. He recently unconsciously summed up its source when he said: "I'm a combination of everyone who knows him will concur—from his subordinate officers, who tear their hair because the general's love of conversation and idea-exchanging throws his schedule hours behind; to his wife, who says: "He'll discuss anything with anybody as long as he can get a listener."

Gen. Hershey is the type of man that people naturally like to talk to. "Built like an ox, in the ruddy complexion, round face words of one of his staff, he has a graying mahogany hair which he wears close-clipped at the sides pompadour on top. His manner is genial, easy. He talks with a decided middlewestern accent, directly, colorfully, never beats about the bush. He's a great story teller, illustrates whatever he says with a profusion of smiles most of them involving either farming or human nature.

Both come naturally to Gen. Hershey. He was raised on his father's farm near Angola, Indiana, where he was born on September 12, 1893. And even before he went to college ("Tri-State" he was dealing with human nature as a school teacher near Freemont, where he himself had gone to school.

In high school, Gen. Hershey coached the school football team. One of the team's stars was a pretty girl named Ellen Dygert, who became Mrs. Hershey in November, 1917.

In his personal relationships the General is very sentimental. The attic and cellar of his modest, red-brick home in the Chevy Chase section of Washington are full of trunks and boxes packed with letters and mementoes. "He never throws anything away," says Mrs. Hershey. "I don't think there is any one who could be more attached to his family than the general is."

Unfortunately there isn't much time for family life for Gen Hershey right now. He has four children, but they are away most of the time at school or college. Both sons are following their father's military footsteps, one at a military school, the elder at West Point.

Also, the job confronting the General is tremendous. The army of 3,600,000 men this year. To get that job done, Gen. Hershey arrives at 5:30 a. m. in his office on the top floor of what used to be the department house. "The best general's office in town," one reporter called it.

Keeps Memories Servck Him Well

He does most of his work in person - to - person conversation, shinning memos. As one of his staff officers, telling of his prodigious memory, put it, "You have to be very careful what you say to the general, because six months later he'll feed it back to you word for word."

Gen. Hershey works at his desk usually until 6:30 or 7 in the evening, finds that he can get most of his paper work done best after his staff has left. Often he takes a brief case home with him.

Before the start of the war, Gen. Hershey was often out of town, average from five to nine speeches a week, touring the country making palatable, from his deep understanding of people, the nation's how's and why's of Selective Service.

Defense Plants Exempt

Hartford, March 7.—(AP)— Because of the importance of all-out production, defense industries will not be included in forthcoming state-wide surprise blackout tests unless they are prepared to black out and, at the same time, operate on full schedule, Stanley R. McCandless, state blackout committee chairman, announced last night.

Unorthodox General

So unorthodox in his dress was General Grant, commander-in-chief of the Union forces during the Civil War, that his own men frequently did not recognize him as a soldier.

Railroad Fuel

In 1840, the railroads of the United States used an average of 112 pounds of fuel to move 1000 tons of freight and equipment one mile. This was a new record low.

Bandits Use Machine Gun

Five Hold Up a Crap Game in Bridgeport; Flee with $1,500.

Bridgeport, March 7.—(AP)—Five gunmen who used a machine-gun and revolvers as aids in robbing players in the rear room of the Grand Cigar store, on Fairfield street, shortly after 4 a. m. today and escaped with an estimated $1,500, Police Captain James H. Bray said.

Police were scouring the city today for the armed robbers with meagre clues from the victims and Samuel Frank, proprietor of the cigar store.

State police were expected to join in the dragnet for the robbers.

The holdup was reported to police by Frank at 4:18 a. m. Frank said that he called police from two minutes of the departure of the bandits.

Police are reluctant to reveal details of the holdup beyond the fact that one of the five bandits wielded a machine gun and the others carried revolvers.

Capt. Bray who took charge of the investigation this morning, is expected to disclose further details after questioning the frequenters of the cigar store.

The holdup followed by less than two days a citywide cleanup of gambling and lottery operations initiated by State's Attorney Leon W. Willis with a squad of 55 state policemen which resulted in more than 20 arrests on bench warrants.

Java's Defenders Cling to Positions

that decisive operations could be expected shortly.

Dutch sources indicated the N. E. I. defenders were counting heavily on three inland defense positions in the mountains. Bandoeng, Magelang and Malang. The great Java plain running 600 miles along the north coast has been almost entirely evacuated or overrun by the Japanese.

Hope for Aid Gone

Hope for substantial reinforcements reaching the island was said to be gone. Dispatches reported the last usable port, Tjilatjap on the south coast, had been blasted and destroyed by the Japanese. It appeared impossible to send ships into Soerabaja.

The Dutch have concentrated much food, water and war material in Bandoeng, 60 miles southeast of Batavia. The city now is in the front lines, with the crash of cannon to the north plainly audible and with a full blackout in force.

The tang of burning paper was in the air as government officers destroyed records.

Bandoeng, the third largest city in The Netherlands East Indies, is on the Preanger plateau, 2,400 feet above the sea, and is surrounded by heights of 5,900 to 7,500 feet.

Impassable for Guns

Infantry may reach the jungle-Fresh Scottish soldiers and other fifteners, playing a bagpipe, led a British counter-attack against the Japanese in the Pegu sector of Burma, 40 miles north of Rangoon, it was reported today.

Official reports said the British attack cost the Japanese considerable casualties.

Appearance Heartens Fighters

The communique announcing that the tanks were in action parallel the disclosure that they had arrived in Rangoon only recently, and the appearance of the mechanized forces at the front was said to have heartened the fighters in Burma considerably.

The Japanese have not yet produced any armored vehicles to match what the British have thrown into the battle. The level jungle country west of the Sittang river is ideal for tanks and it was said they might prove a decisive factor if they could continue to receive some protection against enemy dive bombers.

The communique also said that low level bombing attacks had been carried out by British bombers against enemy communications, particularly staff cars.

Rangoon dispatches said Gen. St. Archibald P. Wavell, enroute from Java to India to his post as Commander-in-chief in the Indian-Burmese area, had stopped in Burma on an inspection.

Destroying Grounded Planes Vital Factor

San Francisco, March 7.—(AP)—Destruction of grounded Allied aircraft by Japanese attack is proving the vital factor in the Indies war, an Australian correspondent was quoted today by the Sydney radio in a broadcast heard here by the Blue Broadcasting System's listening station.

Jeoffrey Probak, who returned from Java, said the Japanese have concentrated on catching American-built flying fortresses on the ground because they were almost invulnerable in the air.

Most Destroyed On Ground

Probak said that in his opinion more aircraft probably have been destroyed on the ground in Java than in the air.

Airdrome raids, he added, were the swift that only a tremendous curtain of anti-aircraft fire could keep the attackers from their objective.

"The lesson for Australia, apart from the fact that the protectional fighter is replacing the anti-aircraft batteries around airdromes in that underground and other bombproof storage must be provided for airplanes," the broadcast said.

Funerals

Mrs. Mary A. Squatrito

The funeral of Mrs. Mary A. Squatrito was held from her late home this morning at 164 Oak street at 8:30 and from St. James's church at nine o'clock. A solemn mass of requiem was celebrated by Rev. Vincent Hines with Rev. Edmund Barrett as deacon and Rev. William Dunn as sub deacon. The floral tributes were large and the church was crowded with friends of the deceased.

Mrs. John Barry was organist and Arthur Keating soloist. The bearers were John and Anthony Iuliano, Nicholas Marcantino, Harry Ragguzzi, Joseph Adams and Salvatore DeMaio.

Burial was at St. James's cemetery where Rev. Vincent Hines read the committal service.

Memorial Mass

A requiem mass in memory of the parents of Mr. and Mrs. W. Rubacha will be celebrated in St. John's church tomorrow morning at 8:30.

with plans for calling all men up to the age of 60 for war duty, either as combatants or in labor corps.

Particular need for labor units was emphasized at Canberra where it was disclosed that there are a number of war work areas in which manual laborers were not available.

The war cabinet scheduled meetings to discuss rates or pay and working conditions with the Australasian Council of Trade Unions and the Australian Workers' Union.

Single Tax Authority

Government sources at Canberra disclosed a measure was under consideration for establishment of a single commonwealth tax authority to eliminate state income tax collection offices. It was estimated that the proposed release between 2,000 and 2,400 persons for war work. It would become effective July 1.

The Australian radio reported that enemy raids, reconnaissance and mileage signs within 100 miles of the coast are to be removed or painted out as a security measure against a possible invasion force.

All British subjects from 16 years up must register with labor authorities for identification cards, the Labor Ministry announced.

Japanese Predict Fall of Java Soon

at the same time, the Japanese added.

Even the United Nations have not acknowledged the loss of any aircraft carrier in the Battle of Java Sea. The Japanese often have made extravagant claims in an apparent effort to learn of ship movements.

The Japanese announced later that their Naval forces operating in Philippine waters between Feb. 28 and March 1 sank eight enemy ships ranging from 500 to 20,000 tons and one patrol boat and seized two vessels, one of 800 tons and the other of 2,000 tons.

Norse Sailors Join U. S.

London, March 7.—(AP)—A yellow Norwegian source said today that 12,000 Norwegian sailors—he called them "the best in the world"—had deserted Norwegian ships in American ports since Dec. 7 to join the United States Merchant Marine.

"The number is apart from those whose Nazi consuls paid two dollars a day to remain ashore because the United States entered the war," this informant said.

New Officials Are Inducted

Jay E. Rubinow and Aldo Pagani Are Sworn Into Court Offices.

Attorney Jay E. Rubinow of 26 Westminster Road and Aldo Pagani, of 167 North Main street, were inducted into the town court of this town yesterday afternoon at a meeting of the Saturday session. The oath of office was given Attorney Rubinow, who succeeds Attorney John S. G. Rottner as assistant prosecutor and Aldo Pagani who succeeds Thomas E. Dannaher, who entered the Marine Corps ten days ago. Attorney Rottner was commissioned a captain and ordered to report to the Judge Advocate General's department, in Washington, for duty two months ago.

Attorney Rubinow has conducted a law office here for the past three years and Clerk Aldo Pagani, a prominent member of the Manchester Italian groups, is a business partner of Robert Gorman in the insurance firm of Pagani & Gorman.

The court, now complete, includes Judge Raymond R. Bowers, Deputy Judge George C. Lessner, Prosecutor Charles S. House, assistant prosecutor Jay E. Rubinow, clerk, Aldo Pagani and probation officer James Duffy, and assistant probation officer Mrs Fannie G. Elliott.

Defense Plants Ready for Raids

Hartford, March 7.—(AP)—All plants in the Hartford area, which employ thousands of defense workers, can be alerted within minutes in the event of an air raid.

That information was revealed today by Norman B. Bertolette, chairman of the Hartford Defense Council, after hearing the report of Sidney E. Cornelius, chairman of the industrial plant committee of the council.

In another of a series of committee reports submitted by Porter H. Barrows, executive director of the council, Chief Charles J. Hallissey, head of the police affairs committee, stated that plans are under way to transfer old police equipment to 300 auxiliary policemen now in training.

The transfer, he said, will be made when the department receives new equipment. In addition, he reported, 300 arm bands will be purchased for the auxiliary unit.

Preparations have been made to feed up to 10,000 persons in the event of an emergency, according to the report of Edward Hale, chairman of the Red Cross disaster committee.

First aid equipment, he added, has been placed at 40 strategic central centers and identification arm bands have been procured for members of his committee.

Local Residents To Get Training

The Manchester Defense Council met this morning with the air raid warden service for the purpose of carrying out a program of training residents how to cooperate with the wardens in the event of a raid or fire. Wardens will soon hold meetings in each precinct to which the residents will be invited to attend and the wardens will demonstrate to homeowners and residents the uses of the various implements to be used in case of fire and incendiary bombing.

India's Rivals Unite for War

Factions Now Menaced By Japs, Forget All Differences; Will Fight

By Frank I. Weller

Washington, March 7.—(AP)—India's political and racial rivals, apparently fearing and hating the Japanese more than they do one another, seem for the first time in their fight for freedom to want to talk turkey about national unity.

If they do get together, England offers the possibility of independence and the United Nations offer everything they can throw together against the Burma sprayhead of Japanese invasion.

Surprisingly, Mahatma Gandhi, kingpin of Indian civil disobedience to England, started the ball rolling for unity when he voluntarily stepped down as leader of the powerful All-India Congress Party (Nationalist-Hindu) rather than hinder the war effort.

His parting words were, "not stab Britain in the back." His successor, Jawaharlal Nehru, who has been serving a prison term for obstructionism, when released was more cooperative toward England with his own country threatened.

Nearly 50 rich states-princes, among the 565 who control, in feudal states, perhaps 1/7 per cent of the total land area and 63,000,000 of population, have swung over to Britain and many more are preparing to follow.

Want Concentration Camp

Rising Sun, Ind.—(AP)—This little Ohio river town has rejected the suggestion that its name be changed because it is a reminder of the Japanese flag. And now the townsfolk have come forward with a suggestion of their own. Their idea is that a big concentration camp be laid out on nearby Mt Tabor for Japanese taken into custody on the east and west coasts. "Let them take care of them," said one resident, "in a way that will keep them that our Rising Sun will never sink—theirs will never rise again."

Pine Acres and Pine Acres Terrace are standing examples of the expert work being done by Johnson Brothers, local electrical contractors. Many of the finest of these developments were awarded to this up-to-the-minute firm due to their excellent reputation and guaranteed work.

When you offer your reputation to the public as a guarantee, the reputation must be of the highest grade. That is why Johnson Brothers are very careful in their work, paying especial attention to all small details.

This modern firm is run by four brothers who are life-long residents of Manchester. This fact alone makes Johnson Brothers worthy of your patronage. The brothers include Arthur W., Elmer J., Victor J., and Rudolph Johnson.

Had to Expand

In the picture above, one can catch an idea of what the interior of Johnson's headquarters looks like at present. This expansion was necessary for the brothers to do their work in time. Since that time they have grown even more, for this is the reason that everything in the electrical line can be had at their new, modern quarters located at 533 Main street.

Two phones are now installed at Johnson's so that prompt, efficient service may be maintained at all times. The numbers are 6237 and 7606. Why not call today and receive an estimate of the cost of your particular job? If you will be in need of electrical services in the spring, don't delay long either in making your preparations. There is a great demand for all kinds of skilled labor, and the local electricians are being kept busy day and night.

Modern Lighting

One of the features of Johnson's many services is fluorescent lighting. This modern system of lighting has increased in popularity during the past year, and many local residents and merchants have had it installed.

The brothers assemble their own fluorescent equipment and fixtures with the exception of sockets and lamps, and also handle the General Electric unit. Why not inquire about the qualities of this modern lighting system today?

For personal, expert, courteous and economical service consult Johnson Bros. at 533 Main street. Remember, the phone numbers are 6227 and 7606, and estimates are cheerfully given.

Do Not Delay Building Plan

First of Spring Approaching; See Dougan About New Home.

If you are planning to build in the spring, now is the time to make your preparations. Don't wait until the last minute or you may be out of luck.

Throughout the nation, builders are in great demand, and the need of them is increasing daily. New homes are being built, old homes are being remodeled, and many dwellings are still needed to house the families of defense workers, now without homes of their own.

Can Find Time

From this, it can readily be seen that all local contractors are swamped with work, and Paul W. Dougan, local general contractor and builder is no exception. However, despite the rush, Dougan finds time to accommodate his many local friends and customers whenever his services are needed.

He will be glad to sit down and talk over your particular problem with you, and advise you as to the best procedure to follow.

Alterations a Specialty

This contractor is located at 56 Gardner street, and can be reached by phone at 6105. In addition to his experience in the building line, Dougan also specializes in concrete and masonry. Alterations are also a specialty with this modern contractor and builder.

Why not drive to 56 Gardner street and talk over your problem with Dougan personally? Don't wait until the last minute. Let Paul W. Dougan give you an estimate today.

News of Vets and Their Auxiliaries

Mons-Ypres Post B. W. V.

Next Meeting On Wednesday

The regular monthly meeting of the Mons-Ypres Post will be held in the British-American club this coming Wednesday evening, March 11, at 8 o'clock. A full attendance is requested as much important business will come up for discussion.

Comrade Jack Herron, who has been on the sick list for the past three weeks, is still unable to work. We certainly hope Jack will be well soon.

We have received a letter from the Manchester Memorial hospital acknowledging receipt of two $25 Defense bonds for which they are very grateful. These bonds are given from the profits received from our Bingo games held in the Orange hall each Monday evening. One-half of the profits received go to the British War Relief while the other half is used to buy Defense bonds which are turned over to our hospital.

News from the sons of our members who are now serving in Uncle Sam's forces. Young Jackie, son of Comrade George Park, serving with the Navy, is now stationed at the U. S. Naval Air Station, Trinidad, British West Indies ,and hopes to be on one of Uncle Sam's airplane carriers very soon.

Harold Lindsay, son of our Commander, is serving with the Chemical Warfare Battalion in Maryland, while Rainsford Trotter, son of Comrade Charles Trotter, is with the 29th Infantry Battalion, Camp Croft, South Carolina. These three lads report that they are delighted with the service and we join in wishing them the best of luck.

Comrade Billy Moore reports via the "Portadown News" that young W. Uprichard, a flying officer in the R. A. F., has been decorated with the Distinguished Flying Cross by His Majesty King George. This award was given the young flyer for gallantry while attached to a bomber command. Many of our folks in town will remember the boy as a son of Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Uprichard of Mahon, Portadown. Thanks Billy, for this interesting item.

Young Robert Hamilton, son of Comrade and Mrs. Hamilton, is suffering with a badly sprained ankle. I am sorry, Robert, I did not recognize you while attending the doctor Wednesday morning. Maybe you certainly have grown, my boy. Recognize you the O. K. soon.

Don't forget our Bingo games in the Orange hall, Monday evening. Good prizes and lots of fun. All profits divided for Defense bonds and British Relief.

Young Tommy Bristow, who suffered a bad accident one week ago, is much better and able to attend school, and our young friend, Charles Trotter, is still in the hospital. Comrade Jim Hynes is still in Veterans' hospital No. 81. Good luck to all.

Postpone Annual Birthday Dinner

There will be a meeting of the Post Monday evening at the home on Leonard street. Commander Otto Heller wishes to have all of the questionaires filled out by that time and urges that members attend and do this for the State Commander.

Owing to a mixup, the anniversary dinner scheduled for March 11 has been postponed until Monday evening, March 23. This year the Auxiliary and post members will combine for the event which promises to surpass anything in the past.

Legion Praised

The part all Legionaires are playing in the emergency now is receiving plenty of favorable comments. The other evening, over the airwaves, a prominent speaker lauded the entire membership and stated, with positive conviction, that the membership of the Legion could be found in key positions throughout the nation.

All of this brings the question right back into our own backyard. Are you doing your part? Have you something worthwhile to offer? All of these things are vital, meaning, of course, that whatever you have in mind, submit it to your own Post. From there it will find its way to the proper authorities.

Unit Members Bake Cookies

The regular meeting of the Dilworth-Cornell Unit No. 102, American Legion Auxiliary, was Monday evening at the Legion Home on Leonard street.

The chairman of the Poppy Committee announced that she had contacted the ladies in regard to the Poppy Poster Contests, and it would be held in some of the stores, the usual prizes will be awarded.

In view of the fact that we are a patriotic organization, it was voted to purchase a Defense Bond.

Bake Cookies

A call for cookies for the Wind-sor Locks Air Base was read a short time ago, but we were notified that this work is a new aspect to take over. As a result a very orgy of baking took place in the members' homes on Wednesday after which the cookies were packed, and collected by our President, Mrs. Griffin. They were taken to the Base Friday, and we hope the case lasts week. Just "make yourselves to home," gentlemen.

Our next meeting, Monday evening, March 16, will take the form of a Pot Luck Supper, Fellowship supper. Supper will be served at 6:30, and the meeting will take place as soon as we are able to leave the tables. Our Department Officers have been invited to this meeting, and we hope you will be able to attend. If you have a problem you wish to have aired, bring her along. We only have a few more meetings to go, so pay up the membership quota. If you are not contacted, and wish to go, call Mrs Griffin, Tel. 6993.

Gauze Received

Mrs. Brosnan, the Red Cross Chairman, has been notified that the gauze for the bandages has been received. The first meeting will be held at the Legion Home on Friday, Thursday, March 12, from 2 p. m. to 4:30 p. m. Although this work will be done under the supervision of the Auxiliary committee in charge, Mrs. Ethel Jones, Ella Hamilton and Fannie Kelbish, were given a vote of thanks for a most enjoyable social hour.

Sister Jessie Bristow, won the mystery package, donated by Chaplain Annie Sloan.

It was a pleasure to welcome Sister Margaret McKee of Oak street back into our fold. Sister McKee said she was very happy to be with us again and anxious to take an active part in all Legion affairs in the future. She is the widow of the late James McKee who passed away over a year ago.

Former Members Return

It sure is encouraging to the officers of our, Mons Ypres Auxiliary to have so many former members coming back at each meeting. Since the reorganization of our Unit last November, President Margaret McConkey is delighted with the fine cooperation extended by her fellow officers, and all the members are working together for a successful year.

Member Nellie McIntosh, who is up housekeeping in East Hartford. We all join in wishing Sister McIntosh and her family, good luck in their new location.

At the present time we have three proud mothers in our Unit. Sisters Elizabeth Donnelly, Ella Hamilton and Elizabeth Cardy, each have a son in Uncle Sam's service. We wish the boys good speed as they serve our country.

Ailing Members Return to Homes

We have been doubling up on the dart league schedule and we may finish up the league tonight. No plans have been made for a dinner, but we know that Anna Holzheimer's Alley Cats, who won the first leg of the schedule, will take on the Champs of the second half.

Our old pal and comrade "Benny" Wilson who is living in Florida, is in town on a visit.

Members Return Home

We are glad to hear that Past Commander "Dave" McCollum, "Hank" Gowdy and Dave Galligan are home again and feeling pretty good after their treatment at Newington hospital. We still have more members at Newington and they would like visitors.

The regular monthly meeting of the Hartford District Council will be held in Unionville tomorrow afternoon at 2:30.

Jeems in the 'Clink'?

Perhaps you have noticed that my little friend from the Emerald Isle likes to give me the razz and of late he is a little cautious of what he says (since I have the badge and this last mouthpiece bit). He realizes a copper will always get the last word. Oh, how I would love to clang the old bracelets on that boy!

Well, I guess that is enough for this week. In fact I don't know of anything more.

Army & Navy Club

Club Schedules Smoker, March 11

Hear ye! hear ye! On the night of Wednesday, March 11, the Army and Navy Club will hold a smoker at the club house at eight o'clock.

The days of the old town crier have passed into history, but here is a date to be marked down on your calendar as a night that will be different. The speaker of the evening will be Lt. Col. Fiske, Regimental Commander of the 1st anti-aircraft unit. Besides his talk, Col. Fisken will also provide movies.

Guards Invited

Also on the list will be other entertainment and refreshments. Wednesday, eats for the gang. The committee in charge of arrangements and H of the local State Guard will be our invited guests for the evening.

The entertainment committee, under whom the affair will be held is grateful to Lt. Harry Mathiason of Company H, who was largely instrumental in making the night a success.

Your club is also glad to extend an invitation to the club house to the personnel of the Auxiliary Police for the remaining sessions of their school. It has proven more satisfactory to meet here than in the Municipal building. The fact that so many other groups elected to come here, is due to the fact that it is more adaptable for the showing or moving pictures was the case last week. Just "make yourselves to home," gentlemen.

Speaking of the auxiliary police, we understand they are doing well for a bunch of rookies last Tuesday evening. As you all know, many of its members are also members of the Club, so we have a real personal interest in Detective Sergeant Prentice and his troops. And he boys seem to be unanimous in that they are particularly fortunate having such enthusiastic and capable instructors as Chief Gordon and Sergeant Prentice.

The next regular monthly meeting of the Club will be held on Wednesday evening, March 18, at eight o'clock.

It is indeed good to see Steward Dave McCollum back among us once more. He looks great, and we may mention it, boasting a slightly increased avoirdupois, if you get what we mean.

What Brand, Pinkey?

The three telegraph lads at that Pinky is getting perturbed over the passing out due to priorities of some of the stable commodities which he dispenses. On one, in particular, he thinks the powers that be ought to stretch a point.

We see by our favorite newspaper that if we want to win the war, we shouldn't, in any case, lose our sense of humor. Well just watch Jack and George. It is going to be the first to eat at our smoker—or any other time—for one good laugh.

More Are Held In Alien Raids

Members of Two Japanese Secret Societies Objects of Roundup.

San Francisco, March 7.—(AP)—FBI agents detained additional prisoners today after the most far-flung drive in several weeks against possible Fifth Columnists in northern California.

The latest figures show more than 60 aliens arrested in raids on 31 cities. Members of two Japanese secret societies were the particular objects in the roundup.

FBI men moved as the Army worked out details of a new order to b. issued soon, that will clear aliens and American-Japanese from certain prohibited military areas in California, Oregon, Washington and Arizona.

The Army already has established two reception centers for evacuees in southeastern California, one in the Owens River valley, and another alongside the Colorado river in the Parker Dam-Blythe district.

To Minimize Disruption

The Western Defense Command and Fourth Army headquarters said that evacuation plans would attempt to minimize the disruption of normal life among both those required to move and those remaining in the affected regions.

"The Pacific coast program is proceeding along American lines, in accordance with Gen. John L. DeWitt's plan of temperate yet stern military necessity with every practicable safeguard for individual and property rights," the Army stated.

Inside the resettlement areas, the Army said, the evacuees will be allowed to live with a "minimum of restraint."

Another U. S. Sub Goes Down Way

New London Hartford 7.—(AP)— Less than ten months after her keel was laid down, the 56,000,000 submarine Amberjack was launched from the Electric Boat Company's Shipyard at Groton into the fog-shrouded waters of the Thames river at 12:10 o'clock yesterday afternoon, as wet snow came drifting down from leaden skies.

Twenty-ninth submarine to go from the Groton shipyard since 1933 and eighth in the Electric Boat Company's one-a-month program, the Amberjack was sponsored by Mrs. Harold Jacobs of Washington. She is the wife of Rear Admiral Jacobs, chief of the Bureau of Navigation of the Navy department. The Amberjack's keel was laid down May 15, 1941.

The launching was in the north yard, and the Amberjack moved swiftly into the river, with the champagne heads still on her bow.

Seeking Bodies Of Lost Fliers

Wide Stretch of Florida River Being Scanned By Army Men Today.

Stuart, Fla., March 7.—(AP)— A wide stretch of the tide-swept St. Lucie river was being searched by Army men today for the bodies of seven military fliers who plunged to their death in a storm-tossed Army transport plane.

Soldiers from Morrison field, West Palm Beach, kept civilians out of the area. A spokesman said there was no question that anyone aboard survived the crash. No bodies have been recovered.

Wing Torn Loose

The plane ran into a tropical squall early Thursday night. A wing was torn loose, causing a fire, and the craft plunged into the river three miles below Stuart.

Army authorities at Dayton, O. said Lieut. John A. Evans of Auburndale, Mass., was the pilot. Lieut. Harry E. Alcorn, Jr., Lexington, Ky., co-pilot; Sergt. Ercel Stallard, Lathar, Ky., aviation engineer, and Sergt. Clarence F. Ayers, Hungtington, W. Va., radio operator.

Also aboard were Lieutenants Clements and Simmons and Sergeant Rutko from the Middleton, Pa., air depot, whose first names and addresses were not available here.

Non-Defense Spending Hit

Saxon Says No Solvent Nation Ever Has Gone Totalitarian.

Hartford, March 7.—(AP)— Members of the New England Council, its 66th quarterly meeting brought to a close here, took home with them today a message from Dr. O. Glenn Saxon, Yale economist and former state finance commissioner, that "no solvent nation ever has gone totalitarian. If we go it will be because we are taking the bankruptcy route."

Declaring it was "a matter of extreme importance to whittle down" all non-defense spending, Professor Saxon, final speaker at the council's meeting last night, proposed that the CCC, NYA and that evacuation plans would attempt to minimize the disruption of normal life among both those required to move and those remaining in the affected regions.

"The Pacific coast program is proceeding along American lines, in accordance with Gen. John L. DeWitt's plan of temperate yet stern military necessity with every practicable safeguard for individual and property rights," the Army stated.

Inside the resettlement areas, the Army said, the evacuees will be allowed to live with a "minimum of restraint."

Jury Ponders Woman's Fate

Unable to Reach Decision Before Retiring For Night's Rest.

Bloomington, Ind., March 7.—(AP) —Was Mrs. Caroline Payne a woman driven out of her mind by jealousy at having been jilted by an ungrateful lover and protege or was she a scheming avenger who deliberately shot the man on whom she had bestowed love, influence and money?

Upable to choose between these opposite pictures of the 44-year-old former newspaper executive during six hours of deliberation, a Circuit court jury retired last night to referee tomorrow and continued study today.

Witness Tells Entered

Mrs. Payne has pleaded innocent to a charge of murdering Theodore A. Millingly, 51, in her testimony declared she could not remember the night of July 5, 1941, when the Indiana public service commission examiner, attorney was slain by five bullets into his back.

The court instructed the 11 men and one woman on the jury that they could find Mrs. Payne guilty either because she did not shoot Millingly in self defense, yesterday she was mentally unsound at the time. She has entered a special plea of insanity.

Conviction on a first degree murder charge could call for a penalty of electrocution or life imprisonment. The state did not demand the chair.

Noted Policeman To Retire

Chicago —(AP)— Police Sergt. Fred Tapscott, who, his buddies say, is probably the only man to have stopped a gunman by firing a bullet into another man's revolver, will retire from the Chicago force March 12. Tapscott and another sergeant trailed a fugitive into a tavern. When the man drew his pistol to shoot, Tapscott fired, the bullet ramming into and jamming the other man's revolver.

Goebbels Sees War Loss As End of Germany

Bern, Switzerland, March 7 —(AP)—Nazi Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbel's publication Das Reich exhorted the German people again today to make the utmost effort toward victory, saying loss of the war "would mean the end of the German Reich.

"Every man and woman will do well to remember this always," it said. "The present war is our big chance in history and it is absolutely wrong to reply that front troops alone bring victory. The German population has no right to sit in the grandstand and watch events go by."

The people were told they must do more and produce more and had "better not talk so much about the war, but do something about it."

New Remedy Is Discovered For Dangerous Leg Ailment

By Howard W. Blakeslee

New Orleans, March 7.— A quick, easy, apparently almost 100 per cent remedy for one of man's oldest, most painful and often dangerous leg diseases, thrombophlebitis, was announced today at the Tulane University School of Medicine.

The trouble is due to blood clots in the calf. The remedy is one, sometimes two, injections of novocaine at the base of the spine.

This was described in several medical papers by Michael DeBakey, M.D., and Alton Ochsner, M.D. of Tulane's department of surgery.

Such leg trouble may happen to anyone. It occurs more frequently in women immediately after pregnancy or operations. In fat persons, and in elderly people who have had heart or other debilitating conditions.

The clot occasionally escapes from the vein to endanger life by passing to the lungs or heart. More often it stays where it formed, and finally becomes a fibrous cord in the leg, swelling, ulcers or lifelong invalidism.

There are many treatments. The Tulane method is based on the fact that usually a spasm—that is, contraction—of the blood vessel helps the clot form. The spasm is under control of one of the nerves that run alongside the nervous system. This chain to the leg emerges from the spine near the base.

The novocaine at that point temporarily blocks activity of the nerve chain. The result is to relax the spasm in the artery, and the clots with this treatment have been analyzed.

Ninety per cent were completely relieved by the first novocaine injection. The remaining 10 per cent required a second shot. In other treatments the patients rarely have been able to leave the hospital sooner than two or three weeks, sometimes not for six weeks.

With novocaine, nearly half left within four to eight days. None remained longer than a week, except for troubles other than the thrombophlebitis with the new treatment, fever disappeared in two days in the majority of cases, and never lasted longer than eight days.

Treasure Hunting Ban for Duration

San Jose, Costa Rica, March 7.—(AP)—Treasure hunting on Cocos island, where pirates are popularly believed to have buried vast amounts of loot in bygone centuries, has been prohibited for the duration of the war by the Costa Rican government.

The step was taken, it was explained, because the island—situated about 550 miles southwest of Panama—is in the Panama Canal defense zone.

Peyton Won't Help

Chapter XXII

One day in a kind of desperation he went to see Peyton Graves. Peyton had a new office, better fitted up than any office in town.

Peyton leaned back in his chair. He did not rise or offer to shake hands.

Drake smiled at the surroundings. "Well, well! You look like a bank president in here, Peyton."

"Rather better than that, don't you think?"

"Well, maybe."

"What can I do for you, Drake?"

"Pretty busy, Drake, just now."

"Well, I'll come again."

"You've had a lot of bad luck, haven't you?"

"Yeh. Pretty bad. I'll get things straightened out, though. How's your big proposition coming on?"

"You mean the West End Crescent?"

"Is that what you call it?"

"Yes. Well, pretty fine. Drake. I finally got Macmillan St. George interested, and he talked old Thurston into it. They are going to let me put it through. Takes money, though."

"Yeh, I guess so."

"Thurston St. George, thinks I ought to build out there myself and make something out of it, to show how it would look."

"I see. Smart idea, smart, Peyte."

Peyton sighed and moved some papers suggestively. "Too bad you lost your money, Drake. That would have been a fine proposition for you and me."

"Yeh, I was just going to ask you, Peyton, if you don't need some help."

Peyton flushed. "Gosh, Drake. I haven't got a thing for you to do. You know of course, this thing's just getting going. I'm working altogether with other people's money—for the time being. Later—maybe."

"Well, I just thought—"

"So long, Peyte. Good luck."

Young Peyton Graves' new manner was the subject of much discussion. Of course, everybody knew that the St. Georges were back of Graves, but it did show what an enterprising young man could do in Kings Row. There was a boy now came up from the river-bottom country.

The new house, now being built on the knoll just above the public school, was a new kind of house to Kings Row. Peyton Graves was going "whole hog" on it. Mrs. Graves used such unfamiliar terms as breakfast nooks, dressing rooms, sun parlor, and breakfast room. Kings Row didn't quite know what to make of it, though most of the women read the same magazines Mrs. Graves read.

Each year in this part of the country the January weather repeated a familiar theme. Every bright cold after New Year, Then, in mid-month a few days—sometimes a week—of warm, spring-like airs. Immediately afterward would come a cold wave from the northwest whirling sleet and snow, and freezing the ground until it was hard as iron. Dark weather.

Drake walked west on a narrow street that dodged in a zigzag way across town. He was walking against the wind. Better to face it going than coming.

He had had a letter from Parris that morning—a longish letter this time. Parris said he was terribly lonely, wanted to see Drake very, but now that his stay was certain, he wasn't sure he could be begun to think about his return. He couldn't hope now to get home before September of 1902. He had been in correspondence with a Dr. Nolan, the medical head of the state asylum, the superintendent, Drake knew, who didn't Drake write? What was he doing? Had he really started that speculative venture? And how about Louise? Had Kings Row forgotten Louise? He must come to Vienna, and played with the royal Philharmonic. She'd made a real success. Vera had developed amazingly in every way. Musically, of course, she did Drake remember what a funny-looking little wanderer Vera had been and always been? Well, she was positively glowing. But she hadn't much news of Kings Row either. Vera thought of staying in Europe permanently. Of course, any kind of life must seem wonderful to her after all the years she had lived cooped up in those narrow rooms above the Lichinsky jewelry store.

Almost two years before Parris would come home. Not as long as the time he had been absent. And Drake felt lonely enternity. He had never told anyone how much he missed Parris. He couldn't explain that to anyone. It was hard for him to understand it himself. He had never felt that way about Parris. He was exasperating. He had his used to seem so much younger, and now he listened to advice. Advice—and from Dr. Nolan! Parris seemed to him to be wise, and steady, and older. If only Parris were here a lot of things would surely straighten out. Parris was always sane. He wouldn't drink if Parris were here: he wouldn't want to. He'd have to come to talk to—somebody who understood everything about him.

It was colder. The wind was leveling out into a steady cutting blast from the Gulf. He got in somewhere. Darned if he wasn't half frozen.

Drake made a wide arc about the Kings Row drugstore. He came presently to the railroad and followed it to Fritz Bachman's place with the familiar doorknob with numb fingers.

"Give me a drink, Fritz."

"Hey, there, Drake. You go out and rub a piece of ice on your face—you look like you frozen spots on your cheeks — end of your nose, too."

Drake stumbled out and returned presently with his face fiery red.

"All right now, Fritz?"

"Better step into the back room, Drake. I'll bring it."

Drake dropped into a chair at a small table in Fritz's back room. He couldn't think, and he couldn't even shape his feelings into my kind of order.

"Four me a glass, Fritz; my fingers are stiff as pokers. Here—fill it full. I need it."

Sheriff Sam Winters finished up a cup of coffee, and stood up. He walked over to the stove and toasted his fingers before putting on his leather-and-wool gloves. He glanced toward the back room.

"Who you got in there, Fritz?"

Fritz looked up from his account book. "Back room? Oh, it's that McHugh feller."

"Drunk?"

"Yeh. Dead to the world for the last two hours. Don't know what to do with him, neither. I ain't going to take him home, not tonight."

"Well, you can't turn him out. He'll freeze, sure as hell."

Fritz grumbled a little. "What I do, then? I want to close up and go home now pretty soon."

"Sure. Good stuff, too."

Sam looked straight at Fritz. "You'd turn that boy out, wouldn't you?"

"I got to go home."

"Well, I tell you what I'll do. I can't take him home my way where he's as drunk as that. You help me and I'll take him to the calaboose for the night so's he won't get froze somewhere. He'll be safe till mornin'."

"All right, I help you."

The town lockup was only a block away, but it was hard to support Drake that distance.

Fritz slipped and puffed. "Hell, what are we botherin' for?"

"Shut your mouth, and hold him up there."

"All right. An' the next time he comes in my place, I throw him out!"

"You do, and I'll kick you from here to McGowan's Crossing. Hold him up, I tell you."

Mandy Monaghan's father opened the door of the kitchen stove and laid several sticks of wood on the coals. It was Sunday morning, and he had had breakfast two hours earlier. But he didn't really know what to do with himself on Sunday.

There was a slow, undecided knock on the door. Mr. Monaghan opened it. Drake was half of the way a piece of rug carpet laid to keep the cold air from coming in the wide crack at the threshold.

"Good morning, Mr. Monaghan."

"Why, Drake, good morning. Drake. Come in, come in."

Mr. Monaghan stared hard at Drake. The boy looked like a drunkard. His face was puffy, eyes was tousled, and his shirt was unfastened at the throat.

"I want to talk to you a little while, Mr. Monaghan. Is Randy here?"

"She's upstairs."

"I don't want her to see me this morning, looking like this. I just came to talk to you."

"How about a cup of coffee?"

Mr. Monaghan's wife Sam Winters gave me some coffee."

"Well, I guess not."

"Yes. I was locked up in the calaboose last night, Mr. Monaghan."

Mr. Monaghan set the coffeepot down on the stove. "Drunk?"

"I got drunk at Fritz Bachman's place. I was feeling pretty low. Fritz wouldn't let me come along about the time Fritz wanted to close up. Sam Winters came in and said he wouldn't freeze somewhere.

Mr. Monaghan grunted.

"I want a job, Mr. Monaghan!" "What?"

The weather-beaten old man looked keenly at Drake. "You've sent strong enough to do the work, son."

"I'd get strong doing it, maybe."

"Tell you what I think I can do."

"Yes?"

"I'll talk to Mr. Turner tomorrow. I believe he'd give you a job in the yards—switchman, or flagman, or something. Sure you've got strong enough. Son, I think of a job, Drake."

Bobby Poison Ivy Meets Texas Boy Tuesday Evening

Tony Falco to Return To Hartford Ring on Same Card; Three Sixes and a Four Rounder Make Card One of the Best.

Hartford, March 7.—Making his first home showing since being crowned New England featherweight champion, Bobby (Poison) Ivy of Hartford's East Side, faces Chico Hernandez, a tough club-fighter of Houston, Texas, at Foot Guard hall on Tuesday night. Firmly convinced that the longer he bout the more effective he becomes, Ivy insisted it be a ten-rounder, and ten heats it will be.

His last start, against Luis Constantino of New York, in Madison Square Garden, gave Ivy proof enough he was built for distance battles and not eight-rounders. For he was just warming to his task and giving the unbeaten Constantino a few licks when the fight was over and he had lost the decision. But the fact that there were not a few scattered dissenters who voiced their opinion that Ivy had won indicates that Bobby must have made a sterling finish.

Training in New York because of lack of sparring partners locally, Ivy is due back in town Sunday night. Dan Florio, who trains champs and budding champions for Pete Reilly, Ivy's manager, is personally preparing Bobby for this bout. After that he leaves for the west coast to fight in Hollywood on March 27.

Three sixes and a four complete the card. Tony Falco, unbeaten Middletown welterweight who scored a sensational victory over "Red" Doty here a short while ago, returns to face Al Evans of New Bedford in one of the six-rounders. Dick Fuller of Bridgeport and Maxie Hartz of Waterbury tangle in another. While Billy Murray of Beacon, N. Y., takes on Frank Castogandy of Worcester. The opener pits Young Rickey of Willimantic against Art Nielson of Bridgeport.

Sports Roundup

By Hugh Fullerton, Jr.

Charlottesville, Va., March 7.— An old sport rule, formulated by General Phelan, the noted rule-promulgator of the New York Commission, is to keep your sensitive, to start at once in the matter of women for job.

"You can't wait until the machines are unattended before crediting women," he warns.

The Council's Executive Committee unanimously endorsed a proposal for closing gasoline stations nightly from 7 p. m. to 7 a. m. and all day Sundays.

Moslems Urge No Hasty Action

Bombay, March 7.—(AP)—Mohammed Ali Jinnah, president of the All-India Moslem League, cabled Prime Minister Winston Churchill today expressing concern lest the British government take action prejudicial to Moslem interests in a hasty attempt to settle the Indian problem.

The Moslem leader urged that no constitutional changes affecting India be adopted without approval of the league, which is demanding the establishment of an autonomous Moslem state.

The Moslems represent a minority of 77,000,000 in India's vast patchwork population, which includes about 242,000,000 Hindus.

Americans May Be Let Return

Tokyo (From Japanese Broadcasts), March 7.—(AP)— The Swedish consulate in Shanghai has put applications from United States nationals who wish to return home from that Japanese-occupied city. Domei reported today.

The Swedish consulate said the United States government was negotiating with Japan through the Swiss government to allow their return. It declared 1,600 Americans, including diplomats, were in Shanghai.

Suicides Nip Wapping Team In Hot Fight

Parachute Quintet Tops Highlanders After a Slow Start; Modean Leads Scorers.

Highland Park paced the Pioneer Parachute team all through the first three-quarters of their game in the Y league. But the chutists applied the pressure in the last quarter and drew ahead to win handily, 36-27. Modean and Conran gunned the net for the winners while Alvord and his mates showed the fans that a few more days of practice was all they needed to bring the lads from the Highland right up in the thick of the league standings.

When better basketball games are played here it will have to be a real struggle to beat the Suicides and Wapping Y stepped right out in the first period and played a red hot, ding dong battle that was not decided until the last second. The Suicides came through with a victory, 25-23 in what proved to be the best game of the year at the Y. The scores:

Weslevan Plan For Athletes

Faculty Approves Plan For Frosh Standings In Spring Sports.

Middletown, March 7.—The Wesleyan University faculty approved at its meeting Tuesday the following recommendation of the Faculty Athletics Committee that "Wesleyan be not interested in intercollegiate athletics to be effective after May 16, 1942:

"Pending the present eligibility rules be modified to permit the participation of freshmen in varsity teams for freshman teams, and permit freshmen to play on either varsity or junior varsity teams of the college;

"That the freshman eligibility rule be waived for the duration of the war;

"C. That the transfer rule be modified to permit transfer students to go into intercollegiate athletic competition after twelve weeks instead of one year;

"D. That a constant check be made upon the academic work of any freshman participating in varsity or junior varsity athletics during the first semester, and that at any time his work is unsatisfactory he be immediately declared ineligible by the Dean;

"E. That these changes in the eligibility rules be for the duration of the war only, and that the beginning of the college year following the termination of the war, the rules governing athletics shall be on the same basis as they are at present.

Earl Yost Shines With Jersey Team

Earl Yost local basketball star who starred in the Air Corps in December made an impressive debut with the Trenton Tigers in the Eastern Professional Basketball league last Monday when he led his team to victory over the strong Philadelphia Spakas, worlds pro champions, scoring 20 points. next Sunday the New Jersey club will play the Wilmington Clippers for the second round trophy. The local youth is expected to play a prominent part in the final outcome.

Yost played with the Fort Dix team in the 136th Observation Squadron at Fort Dix.

Leagues Tames Big League's Problem Boys

Charm, Bit of Blarney, And Star Players Do Well Under Pioneer Baseball Magnate.

Minneapolis, Mar. 7—You baseball old timers in the big show who lived in the spring and fade in the fall, should remember that there's a pal waiting for you down the line a notch or so.

He is Mike Kelley, pioneer baseball magnate and head man of the Minneapolis American Association club.

Big league scouts snort and snarl about losing out in the boonmajors. Some of them get booking for Minneapolis. A few of these still hoot around about the

Cleveland's Baseball Fans Welcome Peace After Years of Bad Guessing

By Harry Grayson
NEA Service Sports Editor

Clearwater, Fla., March 7.—Life must be wonderful in Cleveland this early spring.

Salon keepers along the lake front have no worry about short ages in case mobs jam the Municipal Stadium.

Yes, Indian supporters, who have for years taken the roughest rides of any devout sports following anywhere, are finally spending an early spring. The poor Wigwamites weren't even forewarned in the past when a team was upsy-Apri and upsy-May and downsy-July, but when they saw a squad that was taken so high so many times only to be let down with a dull-sickening thud.

Cleveland addicts have been pushed to the rear in the consideration by the unpredictable Redskins, who have blown hot and cold so many times that no man developed a psychosis.

Ah, yes, this year it is different. The Indians outfielding fire-bailer, Bob Feller, is in the Navy, which destroys Hitler's pip

Softer Details

Meet spring in a new frock! Here is a design of smart simplicity carefully planned for larger women and easy to make. Deep yokes at the shoulders frame a smartly shaped neckline which invites the decoration of a pair of jewelled clips. The softly gathered bodice fulness and the controlled slimness through the waistline and hips achieve a distinguished silhouette, which can be smartly interpreted in any of the new plain or print fabrics of the new season.

Pattern No. 8137 is designed for sizes 34 to 48. Size 36 requires 5¼ yards 35-inch material.

Questions and Answers (Poor Circulation)

Question: E. S. inquires: "Please answer through the paper how poor blood circulation can be improved. My hands and feet are sometimes cold and I would like to know how to prevent it. I get plenty of walking."

Answer: As a general rule, coldness of the extremities is due to lack of exercise. Since you say that you get plenty of walking this rules out insufficient exercise as cause. Some of the other possible causes are an anemic condition, a tendency to nervousness, low blood pressure, and various disturbances affecting the heart and blood vessel system. Without examining you, it is difficult to say whether any of these causes is present in your case or what methods would be the best for you to use in the prevention of the coldness in the future. One measure which you might try to see if it would improve the circulation sufficiently, is to place the feet and hands in hot water . . . 10 minutes then in cold water for 1 minute, before going to bed at night. Finish by rubbing briskly with a rough towel. The alternate hot and cold will have a stimulating effect which may banish the symptom. If the coldness continues, I would suggest you consult your physician, asking him to search for the cause.

(Wrinkles)

Question: D. P. asks: "Is there a remedy to eliminate wrinkles on a fifty year man's forehead?"

Answer: Wrinkles in this area, when very deep are usually hard to eradicate altogether. However, using the fingertips in an up and down movement across the wrinkles may help. The movement is the same as you would use in rubbing out a crease in tissue paper. Dipping a tooth brush in sweet almond oil and rubbing this in the bottom of the wrinkle may help as it improves the local circulation.

one auxiliary fire-fighting pumper for each pumper now operated by the city, plus another for each existing pumper over 15 years old. Two auxiliary pumpers will go to each city over 200,000, plus one more for each over-age pumper.

To Consist of Two Types

Military needs will not permit self-propelled pumpers to be supplied. Those to be lent to cities will consist of two types, one to be powered by a city motor truck and the other having its own power unit. Both would be mounted on trucks supplied by the city.

Other equipment will be furnished on this basis:

Arm bands, 60 for each 1,000.

Supplies for medical teams will be allotted on the basis of one casualty station and two medical teams for each 5,000 population. Tentative allocations for each 5,000 follow:

Stretchers, four; first aid belts, nine; cots, 12; identification tags for medical kits, on book of 25 tags for each 1,000 population.

Urges Action To Allay Red Peace Fears

United States which would allay all possible Soviet anxiety concerning post-war plans as well as prosecution of the war itself was urged today by The London Times.

It observed editorially that commentators had seen in Soviet Premier Joseph Stalin's recent order of the day commemorating the 24th anniversary of the Red Army a hint of dissatisfaction over relations with the Allies.

"Whether or not Stalin intended to express impatience," the editorial declared, "there is beyond doubt a growing inclination among Soviet leaders to feel that Russia has been called upon, with indirect and insufficient help from her Allies, to bear the main brunt of Hitler's assault.

"Anything calculated to foster the belief, however ill-founded, that the Allied countries are indifferent to Russian requirements and Russian aims would be disastrous.

"But Russia," The Times added, "asks for more than material supplies. . . . Russia claims the right, which London and Washington equally claim on their own behalf, of judging for herself the conditions necessary to her own security."

Declaring that political collaboration between Britain and Russia had "scarcely taken a step forward" since Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden visited Stalin in December, the editorial warned:

"The pamphlet war past two months have been only too likely to sow the seeds of mistrust in Moscow."

Manchester Youth Enlists in Navy

New Haven, March 7—(AP)—The Navy reported today that the Connecticut recruiting station had enrolled 1,538 volunteers since the war began three months ago, including those nine who signed up yesterday:

George E. Simons, 26, of 221 South Orchard street, Wallingford; Edward D. Lawler, 36, of 78 Whitmore street, Hartford; Frank L. Grossi, 21, of 7 Chapel street, Bloomfield; Ernest D. Town Confirms News of Grant

Word of the $40,000 granted the town for the expansion of its water system, as reported in The Herald of yesterday, was not received at the office of the superintendent of the water department until this morning. The $40,000 was offered on provision that the town would spend $62,000 more, or a total of $102,000.

The water committee of the Board of Selectmen had asked for this amount in order to install a filtration plant at the Howard reservoirs. There is one at the Buckley reservoir, but it will not be possible to give the town's reply in the 24 hours asked in the telegram, as two members of the water committee, Selectmen Chambers and Smith, are sick and could not be called into conference today.

Colonel to Speak To Kiwanians

Colonel A. D. Fisken, commanding officer of the 77th Regiment of Negro troops, stationed here, will be the guest speaker at Monday's meeting of the Kiwanis club to be held at the Y.M.C.A. Colonel Fisken has served in the Philippines and was one of the officers on a board of strategy that planned the type of defense General MacArthur is now employing.

Colonel Fisken is a Boston man and since being stationed at the armory here has made a host of Manchester friends.

Wesleyan Junior No-Breath Champ

Middletown, March 7 — (AP) — Wesleyan's junior hatted Eugene J. Prechette, Jr., a junior, as the new champion today for a performance that was literally breath-taking.

In the interest of science, the 20-year-old student stopped breathing for 20 minutes, five seconds, setting up what university scientists said was a new world's breath-taking record.

Frechette, who hopes to be a physician some day, handily beat the champion, J. Edward Burns of Wethersfield, in setting the new mark. Burns, holder of the old record of 16 minutes, 23 seconds, established a year ago, exceeded his own previous performance by 36 seconds just before Frechette dethroned him.

Everybody was very earnest and serious about the whole thing. Actually it was part of a laboratory test in experimental physiology to demonstrate the capacity of human endurance and prove that reflex action eventually will force a person to breathe even against his wish.

The technique calls for the subject to overbreathe for three minutes and then to inhale three deep breaths of pure oxygen. After that, the official time keeper goes to work while the subject sits as quietly as possible without breathing.

Frechette, who lives in New Haven, described the sensations he experienced as "terrible," with hard poundings inside my head."

"You feel like you're dying," he said in relating how he felt toward the close of the experiment.

Little bunny rabbits for your towels—and just in time for your Eastern gifts. Do you know why we are so fond of the time-honored Easter Rabbit? Well, in ancient times it was the custom of those who tilled the soil to send a live rabbit to a neighbor at crop-sowing time. The rabbit, symbol of fertility, was considered a good luck charm to insure an abundance of green crops growing in the earth.

So today, whether we are farmers or townsmen, we send Easter bunny cards, baskets and presents to our friends.

You'll have plenty of time to outline-stitch these seven rabbits on a set of kitchen towels before Easter. They would also be lovely on a crib quilt for a baby. The little rabbit is a home-body as you can see. Bunny-Rabbit engages in all the traditional work of the week, from washing on Monday to knitting on Thursday.

Each bunny figure is about 5 by 4 inches big and there are eight of them—one for each day of the week. Embroider them in quick outline stitch in red, yellow, blue and green.

Knit Knacks

Crocheting and knitting go out for a stroll. . .yes, shoes are now decorated with little afghan rosettes, and they look fresh as daisies on high heel spring pumps. . . I saw an all-crochet evening coat this week, told the designer, Wanda Koffier that she ought to give it to the Metropolitan Museum—for such a perfect work of art. . .It has thousands of tiny flowers and leaves worked in color in it.

Letter Box

Mrs. Marie Becker of Lincoln, Nebraska writes "I want the cross stitch fruit towels and a set of little duck towels. My canary tea towels were adorable when embroidered. They were the very first ten towels to be sold at the Bazaar". You'll like the Bunny towels even better, Mrs. Becker.

It's fun to have a collecting hobby—towel designs can be just as interesting to collect as far more expensive objects. . .I have many readers who make towel collections. . .Mrs. J. M. Morehead of San Francisco says she has a "wedding chest overflowing with embroidered towels"...the chest goes to her daughter, Josephine.

Readers who collect designs and makers who just like to have plenty of attractive kitchen towels for the ever-recurrent job of dish drying can obtain these 7 Bunny-Rabbit Towel transfers, (Pattern No. 5325) by sending 10 cents in Coin, Your Name and Address and the Pattern Number to Anne Cabot, The Manchester Evening Herald, 106 Seventh Avenue, New York City. Enclose 1 cent postage for each pattern desired.

The Old Home Newspaper
(By Prof. Bristow Adams)

Old mills have been abandoned!
I persist.
Old houses, and hotels of great renown
Have gone their way, but I, I still exist;
Upon my inky pages there appears
The story of this place throughout the years;
I told of youth and war, of girls who wed,
Of rich and poor alike, of thrift and sage,
And how they lived—though most of them are dead;
While ageless I am of the present age;
Man's varied acts have always been my text—
What happened long ago, and what comes next.
Though I am old, in truth I still can say;
Nothing can be so nearly up-to-date;
Both yesterdays and morrows I survey.—
Of ne'er-do-wells and those of high estate,
I lived because I served, and still shall live
Because, of all I have, to all I give!

Miss Case Attends Dance at Smith

Northampton, Mass., March 7.—Miss Dorothy Case, freshman at Smith College, and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Wells Case of Highland Park, Manchester, is attending the traditional Spring Dance at Smith College this evening.

Spring Dance, Smith College's outstanding annual social event, is held in the individual college houses and dormitories. This year, owing to the national emergency, several houses decided to curtail expenses by having their music supplied by recordings instead of orchestras. To provide additional entertainment for the week-end the Dramatic Association presented "Ladies in Retirement" last evening and this afternoon.

Boxers Give Fine Exhibit

Out of Town Pugilists Show Fine Points of Sport to Men's Club.

Three exhibition boxing bouts were held last night in St. Bridget's Parish Hall as a climax to the regular meeting of the Men's Club. A large crowd was present as the program, which was arranged by George H. Williams and Peter Vendrillo got under way.

Due to his being under doctor's care, Pat Vendrillo was unable to appear last night. It was announced that he will not be able to enter the ring for some time. His opponent, James Rooney of Springfield is an air raid warden in that city, and due to a test, was also unable to be present.

Boxing Exhibition

However, the three bouts that were staged held the interest of the men, as the boys went at it with no punches pulled. In the first bout, the "Florida Kid" was matched with Tommy Tucker of Rockville. Both boys showed excellent footwork, and the Kid's left jabs were perfect.

In the second bout, two colored fighters matched blows. Joe Jessup of Thompsonville and Len Nelson of Springfield put on a fine show as the crowd rendered vocal advice throughout the three rounds.

In Final Bout

Tommy Jesaup of Springfield and Vito Talarite of Thompsonville were the figures in the third and final bout. Jessup was highly acclaimed by those present.

Refreshments were served following the entertainment. Harry Stone of Thompsonville served as referee, and no winners were declared.

Prior to the bouts, the Men's Club held their regular meeting at which time it was decided to hold a Communion Breakfast at the nine o'clock Mass on Palm Sunday, March 29.

Tickets will be printed in the near future, and all men of the parish will be invited to participate.

Stations of the Cross and Benediction were held in the church prior to the meeting. The services were conducted by Rev. Francis Breen. He was assisted by the following altar boys: Charles Busky, Arthur Warrington, James Chemerko, Vitto Chemerka, Donald Duffy, Joseph Moriarty, Donald Genovesi, Jack Quish, James Campbell, Daniel Mikolowsky and Carl Mikolowsky.

Town Ranks 10th In Deeds Recorded

Manchester ranked 10 in the 1941 in the number of warranty deeds filed for record. Manchester had 738 deeds recorded and was just under Bristol with 772. Bridgeport led the state with 1,780 such deeds recorded and New Haven was second with 1,499.

West Hartford was next in line with 1,198 and Waterbury with 1,167 was ahead of Hartford, which recorded 1,143 deeds. Stamford with 1,030 was the seventh and Norwalk with 798 was eighth.

Heard Along Main Street

And on Some of Manchester's Side Streets, Too

Last Tuesday when it was pouring buckets of the wettest kind of weather we heard a lot of criticism of the fact that schools were not closed, especially for the lower grades. This was probably influenced somewhat by early morning radio announcements about schools in other nearby towns also pending school sessions because of the storm.

It developed that there is no alarm system in town for notifying parents that there will be no school sessions on that particular day. Formerly whistles in the various mills in town were sounded to announce suspension of school activities. However, that system has been abandoned gradually. At the south end the plan was abandoned when the fire alarm system grew to such an extent that a school alarm would have caused confusion with the fire alarm.

At the north end the school alarm was just dropped as being unnecessary.

Some of the largest cities in the state have such an alarm system, and after last Tuesday's experience we understand parents of the smaller children here wish some such plan would be adopted. There is no reason why some school warning plan cannot be worked out. We pass the suggestion along to the school authorities advising them that they will be thanked many times by parents who send their youngsters scurrying to the skin this past week.

A young fellow who works in town but lives in New Britain was complaining the other day in various living costs with a group of local fellows the other day. He remarked that the prices on haircuts had gone up high and said that he understood the price in New Britain for a haircut was going up to 80 cents. "Just imagine paying 80 cents for a haircut," he exclaimed. One of his listeners remarked, "You should kick. In New Britain that's only 20 cents a corner!" It sorta went over our head until someone in the group remarked something about "four by fours" or "squareheads" in the Hardware city.

Some 15 or 20 years ago a Board of Selectmen decided that there would be no avenues in Manchester. The board at that time went on the theory that none of the highways in town was laid out in such a way that it could be called an avenue. So when proposed real estate layouts were brought to the Selectmen changed any of the designated avenues to streets.

But look at the collection the Selectmen have to contend with today when a street is called a street in some of these new developments. We have drives, circles, places, turnpikes, lanes, terraces and courts—but still no avenues. Oh, yes, we have streets, lots of them, but it only when the imagination of the real estate developer is taxed that he resorts to calling a street a street.

By the way, the new town directory lists "Golfview Hill Road" in Manchester as "running from Grove Plain Road northwest to Hanover Place". Try to find any of those places. It's all a trick to catch anyone who might try to lift the directory matter bodily since the contents are all copyrighted.

The other monday there was a wild rush for candid cameras and binoculars among those who could get a look-see at what was going on at the rear of the building near the corner of Main and Birch streets. The Manchester Electric division's new bicycles were getting quite a play.

A group of girl employees were at the rear of the Electric Company offices trying to ride the bikes. Some could ride while others were attempting to learn. There were some spills, but those who ward as well as graceful poses—quite good subjects for candid camera fans.

But before the boys with their cameras—equipped with telescopic lenses, of course—could get to the scene the practice session had ended and another good batch of candid shots had been taken.

Weeks ago we were told that a number of real estate agents in town have been overselling the town's services in order to sell or rent their properties. It seems that some of them assure out-of-town prospects that the town collects garbage, ashes and rubbish every day in the residential sections. One such prospect called us the other day to complain that the garage at her home had not been collected in four days. A resident of East Center street called George Waddell also to complain that the garbage at her home wasn't being collected every day as had been promised. It developed that an agent for one of the areas had assured her this would be done.

No such promise has ever been made by the town authorities. An attempt was made to collect garbage throughout the residential sections twice a week. But, this schedule is upset quite frequently by the weather. The garbage collectors won't work during stormy weather. Holidays also interfere with the schedule. The hauling time for new Olcott street dump is much longer, also.

Another factor enters into the garbage collection schedule that few give consideration to. There are 500 more homes to be serviced this year and another 700 due to be serviced within this year. Also housewives are using more fresh vegetables than ever before and the capacity of the trucks is reached at one route much sooner than before. That means a longer hauling time per street or section.

Another truck, of the larger type, is to be added to the garbage collection department soon and that will help relieve the situation, but it cannot guarantee any such unreasonable service as some rental and property sales agents tell their prospects.

Have you met the automobile operator who absolutely ignores the parking lines on Main street? There are not too many of him, for which we are thankful. He is easily distinguished by the way he has parked with utter disregard for everyone else. He will straddle a parking stripe for no reason at all. If he has the slightest room on his right side, he will barely graze the car on that right side. He will be out from the driver's seat without the slightest inconvenience.

But the place where this hog has his best fun is in an unmarked loading zone. With the exception of other cars as asked to do by the parking lot attendant? Not on your life. When he is parked, after glowering looks at the attendant who asked to get in a close, there is enough room on either side of him to park two cars, if it were in one piece.

If you can't recognize him from the above description, you'll hear from him some day when you brush his automobile door with a slightly backing out of a stall. He'll almost call the cops if you've scratched his guard the least bit. And he's likely to ask you to pay—or else.

We're hoping he's short on tires. The quicker he's off the road the better we'll like it.

A lot of good hard effort is being put into war work in Manchester—much of it that is appreciated, and still considerable that goes by almost unnoticed. It all goes for a common cause and somebody, somewhere is thankful for what is being done.

There is a lot of duplication of effort, however, and we believe time and some hard work could be saved if there were more coordination in town. If one group of workers will be in one building, another in another section of town, or in some generous person's home to attend meetings, keep tabs of all that is being done, and frequently there is doubling up on some of the tasks.

This could be avoided very simply by the establishment of a War Bureau here. During the war in 1917-1918 the town had a War Bureau that was effectively handled and the effort of Manchester folk was not scattered. It was coordinated and properly directed. We have heard a good many persons mention this point and all agree that sooner or later Manchester will come to the establishment of such a central war effort headquarters.

Last Tuesday, through a pressroom error, a number of the issues of newsprint got into the hands of newsboys without a line of printing on them. Folded they passed for newspapers as far as bulk was concerned, but there was nothing to read.

One of the recipients of such a copy called us on the telephone to complain. "What kind of Herald is this you are putting out—to be read in the blackout tonight?" We were stumped and agreed to put some printing on his copy if he would bring it around.

Evidence of racketeering on the servicing of automobiles developed here this past week, we have been informed by a reliable source. A local man took his car to a filling station and while getting gasoline and oil inquired if the service man could make a small repair on the mechanism for him. The filling station attendant said he would try to do the job.

Some minor repairs were made at the filling station but it was seen that the job required the services of a garage equipped to do more and better work than a gasoline station attendant could do. The owner of the car took his machine to a garage and told the repair man what he wanted done.

When he got his bill he was dumbfounded. The charge made amounted to $75 and, during rather liberally, the filling station proprietor said he couldn't see how it should have cost more than $25 at the outside. Just for satisfaction's sake the car was taken to a third party—another garage man. He looked the job over and he also estimated the job as a $25 one.

We hate to be told that both the owner of the automobile and the gasoline station operator are taking steps to report the incident to someone in authority.

There have been a lot of funny stories about the Negro troops located here, but the best we've heard came from the Recreation Center where the boys were playing basketball. Seems there was one player who was considerable dark. One of the lighter hued fellows passed the ball to the dark-dark boy and the latter missed it. The passer called out "Come on, blackout, be on the alert."

Manchester housewives are warned not to be too credulous of the stories young folks glibly reel off to them when they open the door of their homes in response to insistent rings of the bell. We have it on good authority that a girl in her early teens came last week during the school vacation at homes in the Hollywood section of the town, soliciting funds for the "Girl Scout Drive." She wore no uniform, as the Girl Scouts generally do when engaging in Scouting or Defense work, neither did she wear a trefoil pin or any other emblem. Naturally she had no credentials, nothing but an envelope bearing names and amounts. One resident asked her name and from the reply she received her suspicions were at once aroused and she speedily telephoned an official of the local Girl Scout organization, who could find no such girl registered. By that time no trace of the youthful impostor could be found.

The Scout worker expressed her regrets that such a thing should have occurred and explained that, the Girl Scouts have only one campaign for funds and that is always held in the fall and is duly publicized.

A number of Manchester vacationers at Miami this season ran into Al Grezel, former local plumber and professional golfer. Grezel, familiarly known as "Mush", has been driving a taxicab in the Southern metropolis this past year. He was complaining to all he met that business has been terrible in Miami and that he had been lucky to make a dollar a day clear. He said he hoped to return to Manchester as soon as he could see his way clear. "Mush" always took great delight on the first day of the trout season in returning to town first with a string of "speckled beauties". He should have had great success in Miami, the city of fish.

We heard a lot of stories about experiences during the "blackout" last Tuesday night. We were told that one fellow in a tavern, who had fallen asleep before the alarm sounded was awakened when all was dark. He started to curse and was given a blackout treatment that saw him up before they closed this place up?

We also understand that included in the reports of the auxiliary police and wardens was a notation that one of the offenders during the blackout was a newspaper man and former town court judge. Seems his newspaper instinct was too great and he went out on the street to see how the town looked when blacked out.

The reports showed that only one family refused to shut off the lights. That was a family on North Main street. One member wanted to cut the service wires, but it was decided to try to use educational methods since perhaps the family didn't realize the importance of the blackout.

The police, the wardens, the auxiliary police and the public did a fine job, it was generally agreed.

British Fliers Raid Essen in Attacks On German Plants

Hammer at Home of Great Krupp Munitions Works in Keeping Up Schedule of Air Blows at Industrial Centers of Nazis.

London, March 9.—(AP)—The R.A.F. hammered at Essen, the home of Germany's great Krupp Munitions Works, last night, keeping up a 'round-the-clock schedule of air blows at industrial centers behind the German lines, the Air Ministry announced today. Essen, to which the R.A.F. has returned for the first time since last Nov. 8 and 9 when the Krupp Works also were heavily bombed, was the chief target of night raiders which spread over the industrial Ruhr district, the Allied air fields in occupied Holland and France and ports on Holland and Le Havre also were bombed.

Eight Bombers Missing

British bombers continued their daylight offensive over northern France today. Heavy anti-aircraft fire was heard from across the channel at a southeastern coastal town in England. The roar of the guns shook buildings on the English said at times.

Soon after the gunfire, R. A. F. planes came speeding back from the direction of Boulogne-Sur-Mer.

The assault followed a daylight raid on the Matford plant at Poissy yesterday—the second R. A. F. assault in six days on factories in the Paris area supplying the Nazi war machine—and was ascribed as "on much the same scale" as the heavy pounding of the Renault works near Paris the Tuesday night.

Flying something so high that low-flying British fliers could look up at them were left by the R. A. F. at the Battle of Britain.

American-Built Planes Used

United States-built Douglas "Bostons" carried out that raid, it was disclosed. Aircraft of that type have been used by the British fighter command for some time, equipped especially for night combat and known as the "Havoc."

The motor truck factory, eight miles west of the Russian-occupied French capital, reputed to produce 20 trucks a day for Germany, was hit directly by British bombs and others burst in the adjacent truck yard, the Air Ministry announced.

The raid was carried out in bright daylight virtually unopposed by the Storm Air Force, was the capping blow of a busy week-end for the R. A. F. Bomber Command, which Air Chief Marshal Sir Arthur Harris, commander-in-chief, called "a fine, fine week."

Bombers from the wintry battleline told of the sweep of the Red Army into within 125 miles due west of Moscow after a two-day battle in which it was stated virtually all of the 15,000 men of the German 48th division were wiped out.

Plan Beating Time Limits For Output

CIO Union Proposes Other Labor Bodies Ask Management to Consider Program.

Cleveland, March 9.—(AP)—A CIO union local started a "B" for "beat the schedule"—campaign today and proposed that other CIO unions ask management to adopt the production-boosting program.

Local 735 of the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers outlined the plan at a conference of union leaders from 21 war plants. They asked the Cleveland Industrial Union Council (CIO) to spread the plan.

The "B" symbol is patterned after "V for Victory." In international Morse code, three dots and a dash stand for "V" and a dash and three dots are "B."

Key To Plan

Wedge Driven In Nazi Lines By Red Units

Report Capture of City Of Sychevka, Midway Between Rzhev and Vyazma on Central Front.

Bulletin!

Moscow, March 9.—Russian soldiers fighting unceasingly in the snow to weaken the expected German spring offensive were reported today to have captured the city of Sychevka, driving a wedge midway between the Nazi strongholds of Rzhev and Vyazma on the central front.

Dispatches from the wintry battleline told of the sweep of the Red Army into within 125 miles due west of Moscow after a two-day battle in which it was stated virtually all of the 15,000 men of the German 48th division were wiped out.

Bomber Crash Fatal to Eight

Naval Lieutenant, Seven Enlisted Men Victims; Craft Missing.

Seattle, March 9.—(AP)—A Catalina flying boat bomber crashed into the Columbia river near Tongue Point, Ore., in an attempted takeoff today, killing a Naval lieutenant and seven enlisted men.

On the other side of the continent, the Army, disclosed six Axis bombers had been missing since Thursday on a routine flight over North Carolina and its crew of eight men was believed to have been lost.

Navigator Alone Escapes

The only man to escape death in the Tongue Point crash was the navigator, Ensign H. R. Garrett, Fort Worth, Tex., who was thrown clear as the plane nosed over. Salvage operations were started on the plane immediately.

The dead:

Lieut. Charles J. Reimann, Sheibeyville, Ind.; Robert H. Bryant, San Jose, Calif.; Marvin E. Grump, El Reno, Okla.; Roy S. Campbell, Portland, Ore.; James B. Davis, Jr., Allan, Okla.; Anthony Leszczynski, 3020 West 40th street, Chicago; Henry W. Strickland, Jr., Kentwood, La., and Leonard Ruzak, 12 Staple street, Adams, Mass.

Those Listed Missing

Those listed missing in the Army plane over Carolina and the next of kin:

Lieut. Col. Edward Flanick, pilot. Next of kin, his wife, Mrs. Helen Flanick, of Hampton, Va.

Lieut. James H. Miller, co-pilot. Wife, Mrs. Sylvia Miller of Langley Field.

Firemen Unable to Determine Cause of Blaze At Stoughton, Mass.

Stoughton, Mass. March 9.—(AP)—A spectacular fire swept through the 91-year-old First Congregational church today destroying the edifice.

The fire was discovered about 5:30 a. m. by Policeman Duncan Fleming. He said flames were eating through the roof when he first saw it.

Tall Steeple Crashes

The pastor, Rev. Hugh P. Hughes, estimated damage at $100,000.

Firemen were unable to determine the cause of the fire.

Treasury Balance

Washington, March 9.—(AP)—The position of the Treasury March 6:

Receipts, $45,130,188.95; expenditures, $107,835,179.90; net balance, $3,363,857,294.28; customs receipts for month $8,561,951.47.

Where New Northern Front Is Urged by Russia

Shaded area shows German-occupied or dominated sectors of northern Europe in connection with London reports of Soviet pressure for a second front—possibly at the top of Norway. (1)—to link British, United States and Soviet troops in a new strategy against Hitler. This is coupled with Russian urging for increased British and American bombing attacks on Nazi industrial areas. (2) to enable the Reds to put more effective pressure on the western Russian front.

Japs Consolidate New Landings; Send New General to Philippines

Yamashita, Conqueror Of Malaya Put in Command of Invaders; Successor to Homma.

Washington, March 9.—(AP)—The War Department announced today that the Japanese conqueror of Malaya, Gen. Tomoyuki Yamashita, had been transferred to command of the invaders in the Philippines. General Yamashita succeeds Lieut. Gen. Masaharu Homma, who is reported to have committed suicide because of his failure over his failure to destroy Gen. Douglas MacArthur's outnumbered defending force.

No Fighting for Day

The shift of commanders was reported in a communique which said for the past 24 hours, fighting had ceased altogether on the Bataan peninsula front.

Some 600 miles to the south, however, brisk skirmishes were reported in the vicinity of Digos, facing Davao gulf, on the southern Philippine island of Mindanao.

Single Buying Agency Urged

Congressional Committee Sharply Critical of Production Effort.

Washington, March 9.—(AP)—A single, centralized purchasing agency to furnish all military supplies—for the "death grapple of total war" was demanded today by a congressional committee sharply critical of the nation's production effort.

"Failure to organize the domestic front of the battle of production has already been translated into serious defeats for our own armed forces," said a report by the House Committee on Defense Migration, headed by Representative Toland (D-Calif.).

Manufacturers in the United States had "not begun" to match Germany, Italy and Japan in production, the committee said this was "traceable to our inability to coordinate the nature and scope of modern warfare and the length to which our enemies have gone to prepare themselves."

Recommendations Made

The committee, which spent months studying problems of labor supply and material procurement, recommended:

1. Creation of a special technical division under the civilian procurement agency to maintain an up-to-date complete inventory of industrial facilities, the supply of critical materials, and the supply of labor.

2. Labor-management cooperation through joint national, regional and plant committees headed by a paid government official, to production and procurement problems.

"Our enemies," said the report, "are operating along the inner lines, and even our defensive operations to hold them in check require deploying our forces around the world. For such warfare we shall

Senate Opens Debate Upon Langer Seat

Lucas Begins Plea for Exclusion; Says Moral Turpitude Charge Is Proven Beyond Doubt.

Washington, March 9.—(AP)—The Senate opened debate today on an election committee recommendation that Senator Langer (R-ND) be denied his seat because of "a continuous, contemptuous and shameful disregard of public duty" while he was a public servant of North Dakota.

Senator Lucas (D-Ill) began the plea for Langer's exclusion, asserting in a statement prepared for floor delivery that the committee had developed this fact:

"That the charge of moral turpitude against respondent is beyond reasonable doubt, and this decision was based upon the contemptuous, scandalous conduct of the respondent over a long period of years, while he was an officer of the court, attorney-general, or while he was governor of North Dakota."

Two Reports Offered

As the debate began, members had before them two reports from the Election Committee. The majority report, signed by its members, urged the Senate to deny Langer his seat in order to uphold "the integrity of the United States Senate."

The minority report, signed by two members and concurred in generally but not fully by a third, asserted that charges against the grey-haired North Dakotan had not been substantiated by evidence before the committee and that the North Dakotans' seeking his exclusion were asking the Senate to in-

Milwaukee Looks Forward To Cancelling All Bonds

Milwaukee, Wis., March 9.—(AP)—As this city's voters considered doubling its debt limit, Milwaukee looked forward today to an early fulfillment of an 18-year-old dream — cancellation of the city's bonded indebtedness.

Realization of the dream will come in 1943, nearly two years earlier than even the most optimistic city officials dared hope when the amortization fund was established in 1924.

Will Lift Tax Burden

Barring unforeseen developments it will mean the lifting of a $2,500,000 annual tax burden.

The amortization fund was born in the city treasury when, from pockets as a result of a policy permitting property owners to pay street improvement assessments in installments carrying six per cent interest.

This revenue, plus one-third of all other interest received on municipal funds, was set aside as a sinking fund and invested in such lucrative securities as delinquent tax certificates. Thus, the $400,000 baby had grown to $9,400,000 by the start of the current year.

While this growth was taking place the bonded debt shrunk from $36,000,000 through regular payments on the principal out of funds from the tax levy. By last Jan. 1, the debt was down to $18,000,000. Another year and the balance should be struck.

Stops Issuing Bonds

Concurrently with this activity the municipality went even farther in furnishing relief. It stopped issuing bonds for all except self-liquidating improvements. Then it set up a permanent improvement fund to finance needed future projects on a pay-as-you-go basis.

The improvement fund was built up this way: Whereas the tax levy could have been lowered from year to year as requirements to meet bonded debt retirement became smaller, the sum for such purposes was pegged in 1937 at $6,500,000. The difference between principal and interest payments the sum collected went into the improvement fund.

After 1943, only $3,500,000 will be needed annually from the tax levy to continue financing public improvements on a cash basis—and $2,500,000 thus will be saved each year.

Footholds Won on New Guinea Coast in Lightning Thrusts Covered By Guns of Warships.

Melbourne, Australia, March 9.—(AP)—Strong Japanese landing forces were engaged today in consolidating two footholds which they won on the northeast coast of New Guinea yesterday in lightning thrusts covered by the big guns of warships. The landings—at Salamaua and Lae, the capital of New Guinea—forged another link in the chain of potential invasion bases threatening Australia. The commonwealth war cabinet was summoned hastily to an emergency session to decide upon measures to meet the new danger.

More Powers Given

New defense regulations gave the commonwealth military authorities power to carry out complete destruction of roads, railroads, canals, waterways, airdromes, docks and wharves wherever necessary for Australia's defense.

Ten heavy Japanese bombers attacked Port Moresby, only 150 miles and an hour's flying time from Salamaua, the Australian War Ministry announced at Canberra. Port Moresby is only 300 miles from the Australian mainland.

Bombs caused some damage, but there were no casualties.

Reports from Sydney said 400 men and 1,820 women and children reached safety in Australia from New Guinea; all of the men were elderly or unfit for military service.

Predicts Air Assault

The Sydney Morning Herald predicted that the next move of the Japanese would be an all-out air assault on Port Moresby, already has been bombed several times from out-lying Japanese bases.

Japan Claims Dutch In Java Surrender; Admit Bandoeng Fall

Bulletin!

London, March 9.—(AP)—The Netherlands government-in-exile indicated tonight that there would be no armistice with Japan, regardless of the outcome of last-ditch fighting in Java.

London, March 9.—(AP)—Japanese invaders overrunning the final Dutch citadel of Java have captured the war capital of Bandoeng and their Imperial headquarters declared today they had forced the unconditional surrender of 93,000 Dutch and 5,000 United States, British and Australian troops. The Dutch stoutly denied there had been any general surrender, but, in Adelaide, Australia, Lieut. Gov.-Gen. Hubertus J. Van Mook told of the fall of Bandoeng.

People Still Fighting

The official Tokyo announcement heard here said the defending troops capitulated near Bandoeng and near the Naval base of Soerabaja at 3 p. m. (presumably Tokyo time, or 2 a. m. e.w.t.).

Bandoeng was headquarters of the Dutch Army and also the arsenal of the rich island populated by 48,000,000.

Van Mook said a fair number of Naval personnel had escaped from Java.

An authoritative Netherlands spokesman said although it was known that United States planes had fought in the battle for Java, he was "unable to state whether U. S. ground forces participated."

Asked whether another "Java" in an Japanese "land" would be attempted, the spokesman said that plans were to carry out complete destruction of roads, railroads, canals, waterways, airdromes, docks and wharves wherever necessary for Australia's defense.

British Report Rangoon Faces Critical Period

No Confirmation in London of Japanese Reports City Captured; Destroy Usable Goods.

Bulletin!

London, March 9.—(AP)—The British War Office said at 5:20 p. m. today (12:30 p. m. e.w.t.) that it was still in communication with Rangoon. But it said the Japanese say they have captured.

London, March 9.—(AP)—The War Office said was in contact with Rangoon this morning and although the situation in the city was described as critical a military commentator said there was no confirmation of Japanese reports that it had been captured.

Japanese Imperial headquarters in a communique broadcast from Tokyo declared its troops had broken the Rangoon defense and completed occupation of the city at 10 a
