A New Church.

The design for the new Episcopal Church has at length been determined upon and work will be commenced on the new building as soon as the frost is out of the ground. The new church will be built on the lot on Park street, which is large enough to give a surrounding broad lawn. The edifice will face the south and will have a low spire on the southwest corner with the two main doors in its base. It will be built of wood. The main building will be 35x70 feet with a broad chapel front to fifteen feet deep adjoining the rear. The architecture is of gothic design. The windows will be of stained glass. The main audience room will be fitted with pews of ash, trimmed with black walnut. On one side of the chancel, in the north-west corner of the church will be the robing room, ten feet by ten feet and nine inches. Opposite, across the chancel, is the organ loft of the same dimensions. The audience room will seat between 350 and 400. The basement will be divided into one large room, for a Sunday school room, and two small apartments to be used as classrooms. A winding stairway will lead from the upper vestibule into the Sunday school room, and there will also be an outside entrance.

The estimated cost of the new church will be $5000, all of which will be raised before the building is completed. Work will be pushed as rapidly as possible, and the church will probably be ready for occupancy early in the fall. Its extended accommodations are much needed as the capacity of the present house of worship is entirely inadequate to the size of the congregation and Sabbath school.

A Model Manufacturing Village.

From Holyoke Manufacturer.

One of the finest specimens of a manufacturing village that we yet have in this country is the village of South Manchester, Conn., which the Cheney Brothers, silk manufacturers, founded forty-four years ago. Very few places, even in favored New England, can rival it in beauty. Occupying an undulating site, of great natural attractiveness, the art of the landscape gardener has developed all its parts into a harmonious whole, which has no exact rival anywhere; the nearest approach to similar perfection is to be seen in the villages of the West.

The well-built mills, standing in the midst of spacious lawns, here and there overrun with climbing vines, and surrounded by groups of trees and shrubbery, might readily be taken at a little distance for public buildings or college dormitories. In this charming spot, hundreds of working men and their families, intelligent, thrifty and self-respecting, live on the best of terms with their employers. Not even a fence separates the cottage of one from the mansion of the other.

It must not be supposed, however, that the history of South Manchester is principally the history of a social enterprise. As a business enterprise it has been carried on with great and increasing success for more than forty years. The relations between employers and employed have grown up in the most natural way. The laborer has recognized the fact that form is of various grades of efficiency, and that to be most efficient, employees must be thrifty, must live in comfortable homes, and must be entertained to take an interest in their own intellectual and moral advancement. Moreover, they have been fed of refined taste and humane feelings, understanding and acting upon the truth, which too many employers disregard, that working men and women are more than machines, to do so much work for so much money, and that while the business relations of employers and employed should rest squarely on business principles, their relations as men and neighbors should be those of mutual respect and helpfulness. With such employers, and the employees they naturally draw about them, an industrial community like that of South Manchester is no idle experiment of Utopian reformers. It is the necessary product of the conditions given.

In L. F. Brockett's "History of the Silk Industry in America," we find the following condensed account of the origin and history of this enterprise: "It was in the midst of the wild speculation of the multicaulis fever, and the disasters which followed the bursting of that stupendous bubble, that the largest and most celebrated of our manufactures of silk goods had its birth. The brothers Cheney, the sons of a farmer, in South Manchester, Conn., had cultivated a few mulberry trees and reared some silk-worms, in their boyhood; but as they grew up they scattered about the manner of New England boys. Two became artists place under good influences, are most uniformly smart, of good habits, anxious to do well and appreciate their advantages.

It is not to be supposed that all the specific features of this South Manchester industrial life could be duplicated elsewhere. They have developed, as we have shown, out of conditions somewhat peculiar. But the general scheme here carried out, of maintaining relations with employees that are at once business-like, humane and mutually helpful, and should be generally imitated. Without any enormous outfit, surroundings can be provided that shall be pleasant, wholesome and home-like, and employees can be aided and encouraged to improve themselves and their condition. A more general and more assiduous attention to the needs of the laborer, to the great benefit of both capital and labor.

COLUMBIA.

A cold wave struck us on Monday last week, and on Tuesday morning mercury stood from 11 to 15 below zero in different parts of the town. It was evidently the coldest weather of the season thus far. Since the cold snap passed, the wind is blowing and the cold increasing; verily, if people like a variety of weather, the present winter should fill the bill.

The funeral of Des. Amasa B. Fuller of this place was attended at the church on Wednesday last week. We cheerfully commend his memory to all.

Considerable sickness prevails in this section among others. George Ellis, son of Robert Ellis, has been suffering from an attack of rheumatic fever.

The Masonic Fraternity of Lyon Lodge, number a dance and supper at Bascom Hall in this place, for Thursday evening of this week.

The school in the North district, Miss Anne B. Foote, teacher, closed its winter term on Friday of last week.

A Fellowship meeting of the churches in this vicinity is announced to take place on Wednesday of the present week.

Miss Jennie Hagar, an "eloquent" speaker, and who has several times spoken at the Spiritual Church, came over and addressed the people of this place at the Tuesday evening of last week. She spoke upon various subjects, and the audience both in presence and very well satisfied with the address.

The prospect for an early summer is not so good as it was this morning.

of rare skill and genius, another was a merchant in Providence, and had presently called one of his younger brothers to assist him; others were engaged in farming, and some of the younger sons remained on the old homestead, with their parents. There must have been something unusually attractive about that old homestead, for we find that, in the very prime of life, these sons, not after the manner of New England boys, came drifting back to it, one after another, not from any want of thrift or enterprise, for they were young men self-poised and energetic in all business matters; but because it was to them the dearest spot in all the world. Even the traveled artist, Seth and John Cheney, found no skies so bright, no landscapes so lovely, no residence so delightful as that that farm-house in South Manchester. On January, 1838, Ward, the son, Frank and Ralph Cheney started at South Manchester, the Mount Nebo Silk Mills. They had been for four or five years previous raising silk-worms and producing some silk, like their neighbors. The mills were closed for a time, when Ward, Rush and Frank returned temporarily to Burlington, N. J. They established there mulberry orchards, eucalyptus, etc., and conducted and published from July, 1838, to July, 1840, the magazine known as the Silk Grower's Manual. Other members of the family established mulberry plantations near Augusta, Ga., in Florida and at Mt. Healthy, Ohio. In 1841 they returned to South Manchester, heavy losers by the failure of the Mount Nebo Silk Mill, and with new machinery commenced the manufacture of sewing silk and twist, using mostly imported raw silk, as the supply of American grown silk was too scanty to supply their needs. They added, after a time, ribbons, handkerchiefs and eventually broad goods to their manufacture. They made their first experiments in the production of spun silk from the pressed cocoons, loss, silk waste and whatever silk cannot be reeled. This by carding, spinning and weaving, by machinery especially adapted for preparing it, is now made into substantial and durable goods, somewhat wanting in lustre, but admirable for their wearing qualities. It required more than five years of patient and costly experiments before they were able to utilize successfully this material. At first spun silk was made into pongees and handkerchiefs, and subsequently was used for filling, foulard silks, etc. Eventually they perfected processes by which it was

Miss Mary Houghlin, a young woman about twenty-five years old, died suddenly on Sunday night. Her funeral took place from the Catholic Church here, the services having been performed by Rev. Mr. Gleason of Thompsonville, in the absence of the pastor, who was in New York.

A party of twenty-four ladies and gentlemen started from the residence of Mr. N. A. Crane on Thursday evening last, in two large sleighs, drawn by two horses each, to give Rev. L. S. Brown of Tolland a substantial surprise party. Some twenty in number were added to the party in the village of Tolland, and the party proceeded to the residence of Mr. Brown, he being engaged elsewhere in religious services. In a short time, on arriving at his home, he found a large number of friends present, of whose coming he had no previous knowledge or even intimation. The reverend gentleman was presented with a beautiful handsome suit of clothes, and the party, and the family were presented with a large quantity of substantial table supplies as an accompaniment to the full dress parade, which had been previously made. Thanks were given very graciously, and all parties departed with the best of wishes. The ride home by the light of the moon, and with the best of sleighing served to heighten the pleasure of the evening, which all felt had been well spent.
