Engineer Certain Bridgeport Span Safe for Travel

Sumner Concedes Workmanship, Quality Not at Standard of Specifications Due to Difficulty in Getting Right Kind of Steel.

Hartford, March 24.—(AP)—A Connecticut Highway Department engineer expressed the conviction today that, from a safety standpoint, the Stratford avenue bridge in Bridgeport was "entirely satisfactory." Leslie G. Sumner, resuming the witness stand as the second day of the hearing being given State Highway Commissioner William J. Cox on removal charges got under way, voiced that opinion after conceding that "workmanship and quality" of the structure did not attain the standard of the original specifications because of difficulty in getting steel.

Believed Satisfactory

Replying to a question by Joseph Berry, attorney for Cox, as to whether there was any doubt in his mind that the bridge's decking, as built, "conforms to the specifications insofar as safety is concerned," Sumner declared "no, sir, I believe it's entirely satisfactory."

Berry then asked whether there was "any danger to life or property from the use of the deck on the bridge," and the witness again said, "No, sir."

Queried by Richard S. Corkey, assistant attorney general, what he meant by saying that he believed the bridge was entirely satisfactory, Cumner answered that he meant that it could safely carry an H20 live load. The witness explained that H20 load meant a bridge could bear the weight of a 20 ton truck.

Among his 22 complaints against Cox, Attorney General Francis A. Pallotti charged that "the bridge decking of the Stratford avenue bridge project is not adequate to carry an H20 loading as specified."

Exceeds Army Specifications

Sumner pointed out that the Army is now requiring an H15 load, and the Stratford avenue bridge exceeds the Army specifications.

Referring to the difficulty in getting the specified type of steel, Sumner said that as a substitute they used the best available type of steel that was available at the time.

Asked by Corkey "Do you think that the work as installed was equal in workmanship and quality to the (original) specifications," Sumner who under cross-examination testified that he had designed several of Connecticut's biggest bridges, replied:

"I am under the impression that it was not."

One of the 22 charges filed by Pallotti against Cox alleged that the specifications for the bridge were not followed, and that the

Bonuses Bring Action Demand

Prosecution of Those Responsible for Contracts Is Sought.

Washington, March 24.—(AP)—Disclosure of huge bonuses paid out under government contracts by Jack & Heintz, Inc., Cleveland airplane parts company, prompted a demand on the house floor today that those responsible for such contracts be prosecuted.

Representative Andresen (R-Minn), leading off a series of one-minute speeches for legislation to speed war production, made the demand after calling attention to the story as related to the House Naval Subcommittee yesterday.

"The responsible parties should be promptly dealt with as criminals," Andresen declared, adding:

"If this is a sample of government efficiency the war will cost twice as much as it should. If these stories are true I don't blame labor for demanding higher wages."

More Millionaires Seen

Representative Young (R-Ohio), also referring to the Jack & Heintz case, told the House that unless Congress acts to limit war profits "this war will produce more millionaires than World war I."

"All profits over 3 per cent should be taken by the government in taxation," he urged, adding:

"We hear member after member denouncing labor, but meanwhile what war profiteering is met with smug complacency. We should take the profit out of war. Before yielding to anti-labor propaganda instigated by the hate-Roosevelt boys, let us immediately put an end to war profiteering such as

Plan Ready To Produce War Goods

Government Prepared To Go Into Direct Production If Not Furnished Privately.

Washington, March 24—(AP)—Congress was informed today the government is prepared to go into direct production of strategic war materials if it is unable to obtain them through private industry.

This disclosure was made by Secretary Ickes to a House Appropriation Subcommittee during hearings on the interior supply bill which was reported today.

Discussing preparations to develop and obtain war supplies, Ickes said:

Germans Drawing From Areas as Far Away as Yugoslavia and Norway; 2,500 Killed.

Moscow, March 24—(AP)—Germans piled reserves into Russian front positions from areas as far away as Yugoslavia and Norway today for Adolf Hitler's coming effort to regain the initiative.

The Soviet Information Bureau told of scattered actions in which Soviet troops killed 2,500 invaders on the neighboring Leningrad and Kalinin fronts and recaptured several communities elsewhere, but the continued report that there had been no material changes gave a feeling of calm before the storm.

Many Factory Workers

From prisoners, Red Army men said they learned that many of the Nazi replacements were German factory workers only recently called into military service.

Two settlements in the southwestern combat zone were reported recaptured in two days of fighting which cost the Germans heavily and several inhabited localities were liberated in another area.

"Units operating on one of the sectors of the Kalinin front annihilated in fighting about 700 enemy officers and men," a communique said. "Seventeen enemy tanks were put out of action."

Burn Dead and Wounded

The 16th German Army, fighting against encirclement in the Staraya Russa sector of the Kalinin front, was officially alleged to be burning both the bodies of its dead and its immobilized wounded to conceal losses before withdrawals.

"While retreating from the village of 'K' the Germans burned 60 of their wounded soldiers," the communique said.

"It was not explained how the Russians would know that such

French Waited On Land Mines

Not Ordered by General Staff Until Ravages In Action Seen.

Riom, Unoccupied France, March 24—(AP)—The French general staff did not even order land mines until after seeing the "frightful ravages" caused by German mines among advancing French troops in the brief French offensive of 1938, Former Premier Edouard Daladier told the Riom court today.

Daladier, one of five men on trial on charges of responsibility for France's defeat in 1940, spoke in answer to testimony by Lieut. Gen. Joseph de la Porte du Theil, now commissioner-general of the compulsory youth labor service in the Petain government.

Saw Frightful Ravages

"There never was a single land mine ordered before October, 1938," said Daladier. "The Germans had laid mines in the Meuse valley and I myself was able to see with my own eyes the frightful ravages they caused among our men who made that offensive.

"It was only then that the general staff decided to order land mines, which were purely and simply copies of the German mines."

Italy Claims British Loss Is 19 Ships

Sunk, Damaged or Hit In Air and Naval Engagement; Cruiser Claimed to Be Sunk.

Rome (From Italian Broadcasts), March 24—(AP)—The Italian high command claimed today that a total of 19 British warships and merchant vessels were sunk, damaged or at least hit in an air and Naval engagement that ranged from the Gulf of Sirte off the Libyan coast into the eastern Mediterranean.

Torpedo-carrying planes, three of which were reported lost in the operations, were credited with sinking a cruiser, an unidentified Naval unit and a 10,000-ton merchant ship, while German bombers which joined in the attack on the convoy were said to have sent another merchant ship to the bottom.

(The German high command listed three merchant ships sunk and three others, a cruiser and a destroyer damaged. It said the attack was carried out by Nazi and Italian planes, and located the British convoy as sailing towards Malta.)

Admit Ships Hit

(British sources acknowledged last night that some of their ships had been hit, but none sunk.)

Listed as damaged were three cruisers, a destroyer and three merchant ships, all by Italian torpedo planes, and two merchant vessels, by German bombers. Italian warships were said to have scored hits on one cruiser and two destroyers, while a "Naval unit" was torpedoed by an Italian submarine.

All of this action took place in the Gulf of Sirte, the high command said. It asserted that in the eastern Mediterranean a British Naval squadron "probably returning from the battle area" was attacked last night by Italian planes which hit a cruiser with two torpedoes and registered one hit on a large destroyer.

Down Five Curtiss Planes

Italian fighter planes were credited by the high command today with having shot down five United States-built Curtiss planes and having machine-gunned "many others" in action against British bombing forces in the Martuba area of Libya.

The communique said a sixth British plane was shot down by German anti-aircraft fire and declared there were no Axis losses.

Nazis Claim 13 More Merchant Ships Sunk

Berlin (From German Broadcasts) March 24—(AP)—A German high command communique declared today that U-boats off the coast of North America had sunk 13 more merchant ships totalling 80,300 tons.

The Germans only last Saturday claimed that two U. S. coastal patrol vessels and 11 freighters totaling 76,000 tons had been sunk off the U. S. Atlantic coast in the previous week. The report declared that a total of 14 Allied merchant ships totaling 92,000 tons were sunk during that period.

Seven Tankers Included

The high command's report today said the 13 ships included

Meets Heads Of Provinces

Cripps Swings Into Conferences to Sell India Self-Government.

New Delhi, India, March 24—(AP)—Undaunted by the outwardly reserved attitude of India's Moslems, Sir Stafford Cripps today swung into a strenuous schedule of conferences aimed at selling the country's diversified elements on a single plan of self-government in a time of peril.

The British emissary met the governors of the important provinces of Madras, Bombay and Bengal this morning after attending a meeting of Viceroy Linlithgow's Executive Council yesterday and receiving Gen. Sir Archibald P. Wavell, the commander in chief yesterday evening.

To Begin Round of Meetings

Tomorrow the persuasive representative of the British war cabinet was expected to begin his round of critical meetings with the Indian political leaders themselves.

Mohammed Ali Jinnah, leader of India's minority of 77,000,000 Moslems, told his followers today that Moslems must reserve judgment on the proposals Sir Stafford Cripps brought to India and must be prepared "to face all consequences of any scheme detrimental to the interests of Moslems is enforced."

Jinnah referred to the Cripps mission during a speech in observance of Pakistan day. The Pakistan goal is separate Hindu and Moslem states.

Nelson Asks 30 Days To Settle Double Pay

Promises to Seek Legislation If He Is Unable to Get Voluntary Suspension Pact.

Washington, March 24.—(AP)—War Production Chief Donald Nelson asked Congress today to give him a 30-day time-limit to obtain voluntary suspension of double pay for overtime through agreement with leaders of organized labor before enacting legislation on the matter. He promised the House Naval Committee that he would ask for legislation himself then if he was unable to obtain that agreement, but simultaneously entered opposition to suspension of Federal maximum hour legislation and a ban against closed shops in industries handling Army and Navy contracts.

Men at Bench Patriotic

"The men at the bench are just as patriotic as you or I," he told Chairman Vinson (D., Ga.), of the committee, who with Representative Smith (D., Va.), drafted the far-reaching measure.

"The present law," he said, "does not prevent men from working more than 40 hours a week. It has not set the pattern for the length of our work week in our war industries. It governs wages rather than the hours in which a man may work."

He told the committee that men in the "highly strategic" machine tool industry now were working an average of 55 hours, that those in the shipbuilding industry average 48 hours and those in aircraft plants 49.

No Working Time Gained

"If we abolish the 40-hour week by law," he said, "we do not gain one hour of additional work in our war industries, but naturally we create a widespread demand for increases in wage rates, throw the entire wage structure out of adjustment, and remove an important incentive for labor to shift from non-essential industries into war production jobs."

Senator George (D., Ga.) earlier had predicted that public demand would force drastic and perhaps

Japs Destroy Key Facilities In Air Raids

Claim Series of Attacks Since March 17 Successful in South Pacific, Bay of Bengal.

Tokyo, (From Japanese Broadcasts), March 24—(AP)—Imperial headquarters announced today that important military facilities have been destroyed in a series of Japanese air attacks on points in the South Pacific and the Bay of Bengal since March 17.

The announcement said Japanese Naval aircraft had repeatedly bombed Darwin, Broome and Wyndham, Australia; Horn Island; Port Moresby, New Guinea; Tulagi, Solomon islands; and Port Blair, South Andaman Island in the Bay of Bengal.

Naval Ensign Hoisted

The Japanese Naval ensign was hoisted on Buka Island, in the Solomon group, on March 10, Domei said today in a dispatch dated aboard a Japanese warship. It said the flag raising followed the landing that morning of units of Japanese bluejackets at Carola harbor.

Easter May Be Last Gala Occasion for War Period

Washington, March 24.—(AP)—It may be the last gala springtime occasion for the duration, but this year's Easter parade promises to be the fanciest in history.

All reports received by the Commerce Department indicate that sales of Easter merchandise are running about a fourth larger than last year, and far ahead of 1929.

Stores' Stocks Larger

On spring clothes, both for women and men, officials found stores generally had larger than usual stocks, with at least the customary profusion of fashions and colors. Silk stockings, first casualty of the war, apparently were the only important exception.

Despite sugar rationing, confectioners seemed prepared to furnish all the candy Easter eggs and other holiday sweets that tradition demands. Florists also were well prepared.

May Suffer Some

Easter vacations and visits may suffer a little this year, with so many people saving tires and gasoline, or just too busy with war work to get away.

The big supply of holiday merchandise was attributed to the fact that much of it was manufactured before Pearl Harbor.

But next year—the government looks for a more somber observance. One official suggested:

"Maybe next year, you'll have to ask Mr. Henderson (Leon Henderson, price administrator) before you do your Easter shopping."

Firms Clothing Rationing

With predicting such an eventuality, he foresaw the possibility that clothing might be rationed and mildly ought want to count on Easter bonnets being carefully before asking for a new bonnet. Style changes definitely will be under official frowns.

The sugar shortage, another official said, definitely implies curtailment next year of special candies and cakes.

By then, the issue of Easter visiting may be settled by the fact that tires of many cars will be threadbare. Transportation Coordinator Eastman also has suggested the possibility of imposing priorities on railroad travel.

About the only bright spot in next year's prospectus is flowers. There appears to be no reason for a shortage of flowers or plants—unless the flower beds are turned into vegetable gardens.

Chinese Admit Japs Advance in Burma; Corregidor Bombed

Only Slight Damage Inflicted by 54 Heavy Bombers in Attack on Fortress and American Positions in Bataan; Several Sharp Encounters Reported In Peninsula Area.

Washington, March 24.—(AP)—A heavy bombing attack on the fortress of Corregidor and American positions in Bataan by 54 Japanese heavy bombers was reported today by the War Department, which said only slight damage was inflicted. Several sharp encounters occurred in Bataan as fighting was resumed there, the department said. Three of the enemy bombers were shot down by anti-aircraft fire.

Artillery Fire Heavy

American artillery also laid down a heavy fire on enemy positions in Bataan, and the department said Japanese losses were believed to be considerable.

The bombing of Corregidor was the first large-scale aerial attack reported on that fortress since early January. Intermittent air raids of minor character have been made by the Japanese against the inland forts at the entrance of Manila Bay and on the American-Philippine ground forces in Bataan during the last two months, but the last raid directed specifically against Corregidor was by nine heavy bombers on Jan. 15, two of the attacking planes being shot down.

25 Japanese Ships Sunk by Submarines

Washington, March 24—(AP)—Far-ranging United States submarines were credited in Naval records today with having sunk 25 Japanese ships, probably having sunk 10 more and done damage to six others.

This was the known bag for the subs including the six ships reported last night as having been sunk or damaged in Japanese waters.

Previously a total of 22 enemy vessels had been reported sunk by submarine action in the western Pacific and last night's report of three destroyed raised this total to 25.

Nine had been reported probably sunk and last night's one raised this to 10.

Four had previously been reported damaged and this figure was in creased to a total of six by last night's report.

Latest Sinking Claims

The latest claims were that three more Japanese merchant ships, a 7,000-ton tanker, a 6,000-

Germans Raid English Coast

Dive-Bombers Hit Destructively at Three Areas in Heavy Attack.

London, March 24.—(AP)—German dive-bombers hit destructively at three areas of the southeast English coast by dusk and moonlight last night in their heaviest attack since the major raids of 1941 and a number of persons were killed.

British anti-aircraft batteries and night fighters challenged them with heavy fire and finally drove them back across the English channel.

Bomber Squadron Inactive

The weather, however, was said to have kept the R. A. F. bomber squadron inactive again, for the 10th successive night.

One town was attacked by relays of dive-bombers. A shelter was hit squarely. A whole stick of bombs blasted a street. Several other areas were struck by high explosives. There were a number of fatalities.

Hundreds of residents of another town watched bombs spew from four raiders which sped in low from the sea at dusk. Three persons were killed and seven injured. R. A. F. fighters streaked aloft and drove the Germans away. Street crowds cheered.

At a third community Home Guardsmen found their exercises suddenly turned into real warfare. They blasted away at attacking planes and expressed belief they hit one, helping the regular defenders to bring it down.

Port Moresby Again Target Of Jap Fliers

Two Waves of Bombers, Protected by Fighter Planes, Center Their Attack on Airdrome.

Melbourne, Australia, March 24.—(AP)—Japanese airmen made their second big attack in two days on Port Moresby, outer island outpost of Australia's northeastern defenses, sending over two waves of bombers protected by fighter planes today.

The bombers first centered their attack on the New Guinea port's airdrome in a persistent effort to rub out combined Australian and American Air Force which has been made Japanese positions in this area so coulty to maintain.

Then they attacked targets near the town while Navy Zero fighters sought to drive off defending planes.

No Damage or Casualties

Prime Minister John Curtin, who announced this, the only military action on the whole Australian front today, said no damage or casualties so far had been reported from the raid and added that one of the raiders was damaged by anti-aircraft shells and probably was unable to get back to its base.

Following yesterday's strong attack in which 19 heavy bombers dropped 67 bombs about the Port Moresby airdrome, it appeared the Japanese were concentrating their remaining air strength in the northeastern island area to knocking out this objective.

(German broadcasts of Japanese reports declared Port Moresby harbor had been made useless for embarkation purposes by yesterday's bombing.

Three transports leaving the harbor were declared to have been sunk, two capsizing immediately and the third turning over soon afterward.)

Britain to Send Representative to Washington to Head Group.

London, March 24.—(AP)—A British government representative, possibly of ministerial rank, will be sent to Washington to "preside over various bodies" set up to coordinate United States-British supplies production, Oliver Lyttleton, minister of production, speaking in the House of Commons said today.

Lord Beaverbrook, former British minister of production, now is in the United States advising on the formation of an international organization, Lyttleton said.

The government representative will be sent as soon as the organization is completed.

Communique Reports 'Vigorous Fighting' Only Seven Miles South of Toungoo, One of Key Points in British-Chinese Position; Six Japanese Air Attacks Yesterday Admitted.

London, March 24.—(AP)—A considerable Japanese advance against the Chinese-held left flank of the Allied lines in Burma was acknowledged today in a Chinese communique reporting "vigorous fighting" only seven miles south of Toungoo, one of the two key points in the British-Chinese position. In the last official report on this sector, action was located along the Pyu river, which flows into the Sittang some 30 miles below Toungoo.

Without Air Support

Today's communique acknowledged six Japanese air attacks on Toungoo yesterday, three of them against the Chinese troops which were said to be without air support.

However, American volunteer squadrons were reported to have carried out "two powerful and simultaneous attacks" on Japanese-held air fields in Thailand.

In the land fighting, the communique said, the Chinese were holding their "original outpost lines" after being driven back by a reinforced enemy assault and then regaining their positions in a counter-attack.

Suffer Heavy Casualties

Both the Chinese and the enemy forces—identified as the 121st and 143rd Japanese regiments, with Thai and Burmese detachments in support—suffered heavy casualties in fighting that frequently broke out into hand-to-hand, bayonet-wielding encounters.

Japanese artillery also subjected the Chinese outposts to heavy bombardment, but casualties were said to be few, and the communique reported that "the Chinese forces have the situation well in hand."

The A. V. G. operations apparently were counter-thrusts against the mounting strength of a Japanese Air Force which has been reinforced in the last few days.

Reuters reported from New Delhi that the Royal Indian Navy sloop Jumna had just returned from Dutch East Indies waters, where, on convoy duty in Sunda strait, her guns brought down at least four Japanese dive-bombers in a daylong battle.

Warden Class Held As Usual

But When First Signal of Blackout Received All Off to Posts.

Prior to the blackout last evening, the regular Air Raid Wardens' School was held in the High School auditorium. The wardens were informed by the control center upon the receipt of the first signal, and the school was dismissed at 8:15 to give the wardens an opportunity to get to their posts before the alarm was sounded.

Chairman Jay Rand distributed the answers to forty-eight important questions to the prospective wardens at the session, and wardens who were present also took the sheet in order to brush up on their knowledge. Report forms and hypothetical air raid incidents were also distributed, and the students were instructed to study the incidents at home and fill out the forms in preparation for the final examinations to be held next week.

Dr. Knapp Speaks

Dr. Robert P. Knapp, Chairman of the Manchester Chapter of the American Red Cross, was the first speaker on the program. The doctor spoke on the subject of First Aid, its organization under Air Raid Precaution effort and the wardens' cooperation with First Aid units.

"Very often it is what is done during the first few minutes of an emergency which determines whether or not the patient will live," he stated. He emphasized the fact that one out of every ten residents of Manchester should be first aiders. This would give the town 2,400 men and women experienced in first aid work. There are about 350 already trained and another 150 are undergoing training. Classes are being held throughout the town, and there is still time to be held for the duration. All interested were asked to keep in touch with The Herald's new column, "Manchester in The Week" which appears daily with latest facts about the doings of the Red Cross and Civilian Defense.

At Dressing Stations

In regard to the allotment of first aiders, Dr. Knapp explained that one first aider will be attached to each sector warden when ever an air raid signal is received. Those unattached will meet at the local schools which will be used for dressing stations. Certain first aiders have also been chosen to man the mobile units and these will also be attached to each sector and will be despatched from them wherever they are needed.

The first aid courses now are careful and scientific, the doctor stated. There is no room for the old hit and miss treatment. The great danger, however, is that the first aider may go too far. He must know where first aid stops and medical aid begins. He will only remember the word, "First" Aid and draw the line there, he will not run into trouble.

Local Hospitals

It was stated that the local hospitals which are ready for emergencies are the Manchester Memorial hospital, Cheney Bros. Medical department, the YMCA and the Union school. Women were urged to sign up for the courses now being offered in Home Nursing and Nutrition.

In regard to the question so often heard, "Who should be qualified for first aid?" Dr. Knapp stated that all of us should be qualified if we put our mind to it. The speaker finished his interesting talk with a request for questions.

Edward H. Davis Speaks

Although the blackout signal cut short his talk, Edward H. Davis related many interesting facts to the prospective wardens. Mr. Davis who is with the Civilian Defense Council opened his talk with a few humorous remarks, after which he went to work on the subject, "Sophistication."

Like a Superman

"Sophistication," he stated, "is what I experienced in my first air raid warden school. I was in my class of that school I had told me what an air raid warden was and why. In the second class they told me how an air raid warden worked. I was immediately filled with wonder and amazement at the things a warden could do. The qualifications which he had would enable him to function like Superman. In the third lesson we took up fire, in the fourth, explosive bombs and in the 5th, gas. It was then that I began to realize that all those talks were swinging me around the compass of the world, why and how of an air raid warden. It was just a different stage setting for the facts I had learned in the first school. When I came to the end of the course, I suddenly became disillusioned and sophisticated. Light years from what I had a strange and impossible thing after all.

Blackout Signal

"Why all this hullabaloo about fires, accidents, floods, hurricanes and explosions? We've always had these things. A fire is a fire regardless of whether it is started with an incendiary bomb. However, now we have the finest organization to take care of all this, an organization that cannot be beat.

"At this point, the blackout signal was received, and the school dismissed. Many of those present went away with deep regrets at not being able to hear the remainder of Mr. Davis's address.

Next Monday evening, all prospective wardens are urged to bring back their report forms filled out, and be ready to take the final examination which will qualify him for a certicate as an Air Raid Warden of World War II.

May Pool All State's Autos

Plan to Put Them in Four Cities and Save $30,000 Each Year.

Hartford, March 24.—(AP)—Governor Hurley today approved preliminary plans for pooling and centralizing 325 state-owned automobiles in four cities at a net annual saving of $30,000 annually.

The governor authorized Edward C. Geissler, supervisor of state purchases, to request Public Works Commissioner George Burke to "investigate the possibility and practicability of leasing suitable buildings in the locations tentatively established for central garages."

The centers are: Hartford, with 225 cars; New Haven, 50 cars; Bridgeport and Norwich, each 25 cars.

In January, Governor Hurley established the office of transportation engineer as a division of the state purchasing department. Out of a travel survey by Curt Wurlitzer, transportation engineer, came the recommendation that some of the state's 1,058 cars, which travel 21,741,884 miles annually, be housed in central locations.

Million Miles of Travel

Regarding this plan, Hurley or which was approved by the governor, Mr. Geissler writes Governor Hurley:

"The establishment of central garages . . . would eliminate an estimated million miles of travel now performed by individual employees from their places of residence to their office or assignment and return, or a possible saving to the state of $30,000 annually.

"In addition, much of the cost of storing state-owned cars at the expense of the state is now assumed by several thousands of dollars annually, would be eliminated.

Wear and Tear

"Added to the reduction in mileage, would be the saving in wear and tear on cars and tires, the conservation of which is so vitally essential during this emergency.

"Central garages, if established, should be equipped to provide essential services, such as furnishing gasoline and motor oil, greasing, washing, motor adjustments and minor repairs, which are now, and which is now furnished by public service stations.

"However, in view of the strict rationing of tires and cars, it may be necessary to remove many of the state-owned cars from active service by application of some of the least essential services and by greater use of public transportation facilities whenever possible."

Exchange Breaks Rule; Boosts Defense Bonds

New York, March 24.—(AP)—The stock New York Stock Exchange has broken its 150-year-old rule against recommending the purchase of a particular security.

President Emil Schram announced yesterday that in a series of newspaper ads the Exchange will urge the buying of defense savings bonds.

Only one other time in its century-and-a-half existence did the Exchange break this rule—in the last World war it told the public to buy Liberty bonds.

Bon Ami Mill In Australia

Branch of Local Concern in Operation for Last Twelve Years.

The present phase of the war in far off Australia is really close to Manchester although separated by approximately 12,000 miles. In Sydney, the branch mill of the Bon Ami Company is operating steadily under Managing Director H. James Roper. This town, 20 years ago Mr. Hope left Manchester for down under to open and operate a branch factory for the company. He has been back twice in this time, once in 1933 and again in 1936.

Mill in Operation

General Manager Jay E. Rand of the home office in Manchester said this morning that the mill is in operation at the present time and working steadily. Mr. Rand stated that the last letter he had received from Mr. Hope was on January 5 of this year and at that time things were not so threatening in Australia.

Letters Are Censored

Although Sydney is situated about 1,200 miles from the scene of actual fighting around New Britain and Port Moresby the war is actually felt on the opposite side of the continent. Mail to Australia from Australia to here is censored and closely scanned by the censor.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Hope live just outside Sydney but the city itself is made up of many group of places a good deal like those that go to make up Manchester.

The mill which is under the control of Mr. Hope employs about 20 hands except at peak times.

State Blackout Test Seen Almost Perfect

Surprise Alarm Heeded In All But One of 169 Towns; Railroads, War Plants Exempted.

By The Associated Press

Connecticut's civilian defense officials acclaimed today the almost-perfect response of the state's 1,509,000 residents to last night's surprise blackout test which extended from the busiest city thoroughfares to the loneliest farmsteads.

The alarm, given without warning at 8:30 p. m. and lasting for 20 minutes, was sounded over every one of Connecticut's 4,899 square miles and was heeded in all but one of the state's 169 towns.

The Army exempted the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad and the state's many war production plants from participating, but reported that almost all lights be doused, hospitals darkened and all motor and pedestrian traffic halted.

Infractions and Mistakes

Among the few infractions or miscarriages reported were:

(1) Waterbury remained slight, its officials claiming they failed to receive the signal from Waterbury headquarters.

(2) A girl air raid warden was beaten in Waterbury when she ordered three youths to seek shelter.

(3) Illuminated advertising signs on stores in Hartford, New Haven and other cities did not be lighted during the test.

(4) One minor traffic accident occurred, although no one was injured.

(5) Through a misunderstanding, the town of Fairfield blacked out on the "blue" signal, instead 14 minutes ahead o, time.

(6) Mrs. Harry Hall of New Britain reported a blackout 10 minutes after the blackout ended and found that her house had been ransacked. She reported cash, defense bonds and jewelry with a total value of about $400 missing.

"The surprise test served as a prelude for a simultaneous blackout of all New England states which Joseph M. Loughlin of Boston, director of civilian defense for the first area, said was "not far away."

Alarm "Generally Successful"

Guy R. Holt, deputy state defense administrator, said the mock air raid alarm was "generally successful in first reports," although he took a serious view of the failure to turn off four hundred lighted advertising signboards in Hartford.

State Police Commissioner Edward J. Hickey said his observations in New Haven and reports from police barracks throughout the state showed the test to have been "satisfactory."

Prof. Stanley McCandless of Yale, chairman of the State Blackout Committee, said the response showed "tremendous improvement" over yesterday's emigres were those who will prepare the camp for arrival of their families next week.

The site is a valley, once made fertile through irrigation. It became unproductive after the city of Los Angeles bought up the land 20 years ago for a reservoir. The Army commandeered the land from Los Angeles for the $1,000,000 project.

Civilian engineers propose to divert sufficient water to irrigation ditches to make the valley again. Resurrecting the old irrigation system is the first work the evacuees were assigned as camp organization got under way today.

Mrs. Ethel Tappan, who is in charge of morale, said the sentiment among the emigres "rather there is a tendency to underprehension of the problem facing them regardless of their personal

Urges Breaking Lights; Realizes It's His Car

New Haven, March 24.—(AP)—Hearing of the St. Brendan's bowling team, holding their annual banquet in a Yale fraternity house when the test blackout was called last night, rushed to the front windows to see what could be seen.

Their attention was attracted immediately by an automobile which was parked with its lights on. "Smash them! Put them out!" they shouted to air raid wardens clustered about the locked machine.

Finally a policeman came along and smashed the headlights and tail-light with his night stick.

Soon the blackout was over and the bowlers went back to their meal enthusiastically praising the action of the officer.

Suddenly John Kenefick, one of those blacking the policeman, stopped in midsentence.

"Hey!" he exclaimed, "that was my car."

planned to view the effectiveness of the blackout from a plane, but weather warnings forced him to call off the flight from Boston.

Connecticut was not alone in the test last night. At least seven Massachusetts towns and cities blacked out later in the evening. It was not a surprise test there, however, as 100,000 residents in the area having been notified some time ago by newspaper

To Make Plywood Planes For Use as Transports

New York, March 24.—(AP)—Plywood planes for use as military transports were announced today as The Curtiss-Wright Corporation made its initial entry into record aircraft without using strategic materials.

Only at points requiring extreme strength will metal be used in the new aircraft, type which Corporation Vice President Burdette S. Wright said would be produced at a new plant at an undisclosed location.

Designed to transport personnel, equipment and supplies to distant combat areas with the speed required by modern warfare, the wooden planes will be exported by subcontracting many of their parts.

Wright said the new factory would be the fifth to be operated by the corporation's Airplane Division which he heads and the new enterprise is to be designed that some parts can be built in the plants of furniture manufacturers and other woodworkers, Wright said, adding that this would allow utilization of much manpower, equipment and materials not already engaged in the war effort.

Experts in the design and manufacture of wood and plastic planes have been enlisted by the corporation throughout the country in the new project, and include engineers who helped build the famous wooden Fokker planes a decade ago.

George A. Page, division coordinator of engineering, developed the design of the plywood military transport, on which no further details have been announced.

Jap Evacuees Reach Center

800 Comprise First Large Scale Exodus From Critical Areas.

Manzanar, Calif., March 24.—(AP)—Eight hundred Japanese evacuees arrived at this Owens valley reception center at dusk and bedded down for the night on straw-filled mattresses.

En route they had come through miles of desolate mesquite and sagebrush. Some were glad it had helped make this picturesque valley a profitable orchard section 20 years ago.

"You wait, we'll make a little Heaven out of it," a Japanese voice proclaimed from the darkness.

Many Vegetable Farmers

Many of the 10,000 Orientals to be brought here from Los Angeles within six weeks will be vegetable farmers.

The 800 comprised the first large scale evacuation of Japanese from critical areas around Los Angeles. Five hundred came by special train, the remainder from their own cars, loaded with a few belongings in a long line of motorcade convoyed by 50 Army cars. Because of hourly rest stops, the 300 mile trip took 12 hours through the Mojave desert, requiring 12 hours.

The evacuees found a boom town camp of 38 completed and 76 partly finished barracks-type dwelling buildings, thrown up in five days by 300 workmen under supervision of the Wartime Civilian Control Administration. When completed, the camp will comprise 490 buildings, including a 150 bed hospital, administration buildings, mess halls and laundries.

All Of Group Volunteers

All of the Japanese were volunteers who had expressed a desire to lead the exodus.

An advance group of 100 Japanese volunteers had Saturday lined up the newcomers and checked them in. Then the evacuees were given blankets, comforters and the cackings for mattresses which they filled with pine needed straw.

The barracks were divided by movable bulkheads into four tenantive apartments, planned to accommodate a family of four. Most of yesterday's emigres were those who will prepare the camp for arrival of their families next week.

The site is a valley, once made fertile through irrigation. It became unproductive after the city of Los Angeles bought up the land 20 years ago for a reservoir. The Army commandeered the land from Los Angeles for the $1,000,000 project.

Plane to Bear Name of Hero

Widow to Christen Huge Bomber at Ceremonies Set for Tomorrow.

San Diego, Calif., March 24.—(AP)—A Consolidated B-24 bomber will be christened "the Colin Kelly" tomorrow in memory of an America's first hero of World War II.

Mrs. Colin P. Kelly, Jr., widow of the ace flier who died after bombing a crippling Japanese battleship, will christen the huge plane at ceremonies at Consolidated Aircraft Corporation's main plant.

Now residing in Los Angeles with her son "Corky," Mrs. Kelly will be photographed nearby with a defense plant in that area and expressed a wish to remain out of the public spotlight.

Part of Defense Program

Acceptance of the invitation to christen the bomber was made only after the War Department assured the plant in which Mrs. Kelly works that her participation in the dedication would be considered a part of the national defense program. This was necessary, considerable of the good balance of Mrs. Kelly's endeavor to establish herself as an employee of a war industry, without a day's absence from work.

The dedication will take place at noon with all employees of the main plant attending.

The bomber, one most recent accepted by the Army for Kansas, will shortly thereafter take off as "The Colin Kelly."

Canadian Schools Ready To Train U. S. Aviators

Ottawa, March 24.—(AP)—Ninety-one air training schools stretching from the Atlantic to the Pacific under a vast British Empire plan are now operating at full speed in Canada, it was today, unthurbed thus far by the stoppage of a considerable flow of American volunteers since the United States entered the war.

The actual monthly output of trained crews, and the intake of new men, are military secrets but it is known to be so substantial as to make serious, perhaps in the near future, the problem of obtaining sufficient recruits.

Under the plan, Canada trains pilots, observers, and wireless operators-air gunners from the United Kingdom, Australia, New Zealand and this country.

Majority Complete Training

Some 6,000 Americans enlisted in the Royal Canadian Air Force but by far the majority of those have completed their training and gone into operational units overseas.

Air Minister C. G. Power has said that the schools contain 1,000 American recruits if the United States wished to send any here but he also said he understood the United States was expanding its own training facilities and might not be interested.

It is known some discussions have been carried on at Washington on this point.

Owing to the shipping situation in the Atlantic, it is considered unlikely that more Australian and New Zealand recruits will come to Canada for training and the entrance of the United States into the war also at first the number of recruits.

Most Exilist More Recruits

If the establishment is to keep going at capacity, Canadian recruits must be enlisted in larger numbers than in the past or the schools must be used to train more men from the United States forces.

A considerable number of Americans are employed as instructors, technical officers and ground crew in the schools but officials said they could be replaced by trained men if they desired to join U. S. forces.

Watchman Put Under Arrest

Detained as Result of Investigation Into High Standard Fire.

New Haven, March 24.—(AP)—Police announced today that an elderly Hartford watchman was held as the result of an FBI investigation into the fire which destroyed at a small arms plant of The High Standard Manufacturing Corporation here.

The watchman was identified by Det. Detectives Carl A. Gustafson and John C. Caporale as William Smith, 67, who they said was a watchman at the factory and reportedly rang in the first of three fire alarms which were all recovered.

Arrested last night on a technical charge of silence after FBI agents had questioned him at length, he was held in lieu of $2,000 bail.

The detectives and the local office of the FBI would not reveal what motive, if any, that, but after the Eugene J. Coble, local head of the investigation, said his men were "looking into" the circumstances of the fire's origin to determine whether it was the result of sabotage.

First firemen to arrive at the factory, Fire Marshal Jeremiah Dunn said, found several fires burning simultaneously in various parts of the plant which is turning out target pistols and machine tools. It held at least one government contract, while larger units of High Standard are producing machine-gun

Surprise Blackout Test Finds Town "on Alert"

Wardens, Auxiliary Police Respond Quickly—Cutting of Lights Is Near to Perfection.

Raids Wardens Carry Sirens Around Necks

Striking with a suddenness that caught everybody off their guard, Manchester experienced its first undesignated blackout last night at 8:32 with generally satisfactory results. Unexpected for yet another 24 hours, the alert came last night with receipt of the "purple" or warning alert at exactly 8 o'clock, 32 minutes before the general or "red" signal was given from the control station in Hartford.

The blackout came as it might in a real raid. The Selectmen were in session, there was a banquet in progress at the Legion home and the Manchester Motorcycle Club meeting was in full swing at the South Methodist church. Special classes were halted and thousands were caught unawares. In general the public responded satisfactorily.

Wardens in School

Jay Rand received the yellow warning while attending the session of the air raid warden school in the High School and the blackout was announced. There was a big rush to get to stations and within three minutes the entire building was cleared. From 8 to 8:20 there was a heavy traffic in Main street and other streets as wardens and sector wardens hurried to get to their posts.

The blue warning came in at exactly 8:20. This signal found seven of the eight control board operators on duty in the Municipal building also control dispatchers, messengers, and heads of services assigned to the control center. Four minutes after the red warning came in the first warden reported. Ten minutes afterward all wardens had reported.

There were many odd situations last night due to the suddenness of the blackout. Thomas Weir, Chief Air Raid warden, was attending the meeting of the Assistant Chief District Warden Charles S. Burr was at the Air Raid Warden's school. Several of the control board operators were at household duties when the first signal came in.

The auxiliary police received the first alert at 8:20 and through a prearranged system all auxiliary police were called by phone. Twenty minutes later, when the alarm was sounded, the new police force had reported for duty or they were en route to their stations.

Selectmen Meeting

The Selectmen were in the midst of the regular monthly meeting, the blackout caused postponement of the meeting until this evening after a small amount of business had been transacted.

The signals came in, in the following order: Yellow 8:00 p.m. Blue: 8:20 p.m. Red (or alarm signal) 8:32 p.m. White (all clear) 8:51 p.m.

The Mother's Club of Manchester was in session when the alarm sounded. Dr. W. A. Bousfield, guest speaker, was speaking at the time he asked, "Is this a blackout?" Miss Ella Washburn, president of the club assured him that everything was in readiness and that he could continue with the lecture, which he did.

According to the preliminary report given Thomas Weir, Chief Air Raid Warden, there were but four complaints turned in concerning lights. Three houses were lighted and the residents were away at the sounding of the alarm.

One Neon advertising sign was left burning which could not be put out from the street. At another location a light was left burning in a filling station.

At the Legion Home the joint anniversary banquet of the Legion and Auxiliary was in progress. Notified of the blackout alarm, members of the post and unit hurried to their posts in the blackout and later returned to the hall for the rest of the program.

On the West side of the town the long Cheney whistle began to blast at 8:35 and the average

Ickes Urges Auto Sharing

Proposes Organization Of Groups and Establishing of Bus Service.

Washington, March 24.—(AP)—In appeals made today by Secretary Ickes, the petroleum coordinator, for citizens of the east and Pacific northwest who drive to work to share their automobiles with their neighbors, as a means of conserving gasoline and saving tires and wear.

He proposed the organization of groups of neighbors and employes for sharing transportation among workers and the establishment of cooperative bus service where feasible to reduce the number of cars needed from the road-from the work purposes.

Program Cited

Ickes said informal plans for "car pools" and bus service already had been established in some localities. As an example, he cited the program of H. Harmon, vice president of the Baldwin Locomotive Works, Philadelphia, as follows:

"Approximately 110 gallons are saved daily in addition to the saving in 40 private autos and 160 tires by 40 employees of the Baldwin Locomotive Works Southern Division who have organized a daily cooperative bus service from Berlin, N. Guthrie Probe To Be Dropped

Congressmen Say That But Two More Witnesses to Be Called.

Washington, March 24.—(AP)—A Congressional investigation of the resignation of Robert R. Guthrie as head of the textile, clothing and leather goods branch of the War Production Board may be soon dropped.

Several members of House Military sub-committee which started the inquiry last week said privately they expected it would be ended after two witnesses named by Guthrie testifies. Called were Philip Reed, head of the General Electric Industries branches, and Thomas Fryas, Philadelphia refrigeration manufacturer.

While Chairman Faddis (D-Pa) declined to say that no more witnesses would be called, he said plans for further hearings were in abeyance.

Guthrie had complained of interference and lack of coordination and told the committee delays cause him to lose "some business connections often found it difficult to discover their private interests from the public's interests.

One committee member said he believed his colleagues were convinced that any lack of coordination or inefficiency caused by the difficulties complained of by Guthrie had been remedied by the latter's resignation. He emphasized that the committee would not be understood to be censuring Guthrie, but rather to have sought to iron out difficulties with other officials.

Faddis said the committee will hold its regular meeting on Monday at 7:45 in the small lodge room in Masonic Temple. At 8:30 the semi-public installation of the 1942-43 officers will take place in the main lodge room.

Miss Marion Crawford will be installed as Worthy Matron, succeeding Mrs. Dorothy Little.

Invitations to the installation are by card.

MacArthur Will Give Press Aid on News

Pledges He Will Not Suppress Stories; Promise Made in Off Record Discussion.

U. S. Army Headquarters, Australia, March 24.—(AP)—Gen. Douglas MacArthur, though saying "I am an old censor myself," has pledged himself to get news for correspondents covering his headquarters rather than suppress it.

The general's promise was made yesterday during an off the record discussion with correspondents and it was permitted to be published today.

"My main purpose," he said, "is not to suppress news but to get news for you.

"The reason for efforts by the United States and Australia to inform the public what is going on is that if it does not know the truth its imagination operates thereby reducing confidence.

Silence Seen As Crime

"Silence will begin to rear against you. It therefore is a crime. It is important that the public should be told so it can summon confidence and determination for purpose in support of the war effort.

"I want your help, without which I cannot get that mission.em effort needed to win.

"I am an old censor myself. What I have said does not mean that what we give out here you are to take and use or that you are limited to canned news and cannot use your brilliancy.

"It does not mean you must abstain from criticism but I hope that before you criticize you will put yourself in our place. If you do you will find most criticism disappears.

"When you start to tear down public confidence in military leadership you practically destroy an Army.

"I am always glad to give you my full knowledge or opinion on any subject but as background only.

Public's Support Necessary

The supreme commander of the United Nations in the Southwest Pacific declared there had been "nothing more astonishing in the progress of this war, which is really the production of the mechanics of force to human nature, than the positive support by public opinion.

"One cannot wage war under present conditions without the support of public opinion, which is strengthened by knowledge, truth and other propaganda forces.

"Men will not fight and die without knowing what they are fighting and dying for. The care with which the enemy keeps the truth from his people and tries to incline their minds towards certain channels and to implant certain ideas shows the weight he lays upon it.

"In the democracies it is essential that the public should know the truth.

"The old days called for a censorship method of control in which the emphasis was placed upon preventing the leakage of information of military value.

"The censorship of these days has gone infinitely beyond that.

Almost Voluntary Censorship

"There is almost a voluntary censorship now. No one wants to help the enemy. The moment the public knows that anything printed or broadcast is unwittingly helped the enemy it will demand that such aid be stopped."

MacArthur reminded newsmen that in 1910, War Secretary Newton D. Baker gave him the task of United States Army press relations and that he had handled them for a long time.

He declared that he had placed two of the most brilliant officers of his research staff—Col. LeGrande A. Miller and Lieut. Col. Lloyd Lehrbas, formerly an Associated Press correspondent—in charge of press relations in Australia.

Corporations Tax Warning Given

State Tax Commissioner Charles J. McLaughlin calls the attention of all corporations carrying on or having the right to carry on business in Connecticut to the fact that corporation business tax returns for the calendar year 1941 are due in his office on or before April 1.

Attention is also called to the fact that payments for the full amount of taxes found to be due must accompany the returns, and further that all returns must be properly signed and acknowledged before they are acceptable.

All returns received after April 1 will, of necessity, be subject to the statutory penalty of $5 for delinquency in the matter of filing and also to interest at the rate of 6-10 of 1 per cent per month or fraction thereof.

Commissioner McLaughlin also suggests that returns be filed as early as possible.

To Take Workers Direct to and From the Aircraft Factories.

Rockville, March 24—(Special)—The Connecticut Company announced Monday afternoon that special accommodations were to be provided for local employes of the Pratt & Whitney Company from Rockville starting Wednesday morning, March 25. The preliminary survey made by the transportation committee of the Rockville Civic Association revealed more than 120 persons from this city employed on the day shift at the Pratt & Whitney plant.

Blackout Generally Successful

In spite of the fact that there were many lapses in the business of Rockville when the surprise blackout occurred on Monday night, and that there was still some confusion because of the fact that the sirens have not yet arrived, Chief Air Raid Warden John Dailey reported that it generally successful. A rubbish fire started earlier in the day near the corner of Village and Union street smouldered during the blackout and a truck was dispatched from the Fire department. Paper Pick-up Next Saturday

Junior Chamber and the Boy Scouts to Again Canvass the Town.

Following completion of preparations in the collection of waste paper bi-weekly system of waste paper collections in Manchester, the Public Works department announced this morning that the next canvasses for waste paper materials will be made next Saturday, March 28.

Individual waste paper accumulations will be solicited in the area south of Center and East Center streets, the district being bounded on the East by Bolton and on the West by East Hartford.

Expect Good Cooperation

The initial canvass made in the southern section of Manchester was solicited by the Junior Chamber and Manchester Boy Scout field workers on Feb. 28. As a result of this canvass, slightly over 22,000 pounds of scrap paper was collected in this territory. It is anticipated that with good public cooperation again in evidence, tonnage expectations should equal and possibly exceed the total collected a month ago in this district. This viewpoint is taken by Salvage Committeemen for the reason that in the canvass conducted on Feb. 28, public cooperation was lacking and many homeowners failed to heed the request to place their waste materials in bundles and to place their bundles of waste paper materials out on front walks. Patriotic public cooperation, it is anticipated, will be much better now that many more home owners have become cognizant of the necessity of supplying a vital material to the munitions industry.

About three Boy Scouts, representative of various local troop units, will take an active part in Saturday's drive. Scout troops will be under the direct supervision of John M. Foley, president of the Manchester Scoutmasters' Association.

To Start at 8

The third paper collection in the new bi-weekly system of canvassing, which will be made next Saturday, will start promptly at 8 o'clock in the morning. The public is urged to have individual accumulations out on the streets before this time. According to Dispatcher William Burgess, town trucks will be routed to initial pick-up points in all sub-divisions of the southern district promptly at 8 o'clock and only those bundles which are out on the streets at that time will be collected.

Chairman Samuel Hilliard of the Junior Chamber of Commerce revealed that an effort has been made to determine the necessity of a blanket insurance policy to protect Scouts actively engaged in the bi-weekly collection system. Various insurance authorities have offered their opinions. Scouts may be interpreted as being paid for their work of solicitation. In view of this interpretation, insurance policies are not necessary for these individuals, it stated.

Town Doing Its Part

Local interest and enthusiasm over the local paper collection campaign, stating that "when one figures on a country-wide scale—the national fire hazard reduced considerably and Manchester's citizens are certainly doing their share in this endeavor."

Registering of Women For War Jobs Backed

Congressmen Apprehensive Lest Shortage Of Skilled Labor Develop In Arms Plants.

Washington, March 24.—(AP)—Registration of women for war work—a measure proposed recently by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt—was advocated today by members of Congress who have become apprehensive lest a shortage of skilled labor develop in munitions plants.

Chairman Thomas (D., Utah) of the Senate Labor Committee said the enumeration of women willing to undergo training for war industry jobs not only should prove helpful in filling the places of men called to the military service but should foster higher morale.

Should Be Voluntary

It was his opinion, however, that any registration of women should be on a voluntary basis as contradistinguished from the compulsory method employed in Britain, and this view was shared by Democratic Leader Barkley of Kentucky.

Senator Bilbo (D., Miss.) called for the enumeration of all men and women 18 years of age and offer in legislation he introduced in the Senate yesterday, but Barkley indicated the Administration was not prepared at this time to undertake a program of such vast scope.

Bilbo told his colleagues that "patriotic Christian men and women were being thrown out of work because of manpower requirements had been hit by war priorities. He argued that total registration of all persons would aid in placing these persons in vital war jobs as well as uncovering further reserves of potential workers.

Will Protect Women

Barkley pointed out, however, that the s-hedule April 27 registration of men from 44 through 64 years old would provide Federal authorities with information on a large group from which production workers might be drawn. Special new Selective Service questionnaires will elicit this data.

Barkley thought voluntary registration of women "might be good thing," but Senator Chandler (D-Ky) said he felt the government ought to finish the job of mobilizing men up to 65 and classifying them as to skills before it took on any such new task.

Thomas said he had been informed that women were needed particularly in small arms munitions plants where they were considered as capable as men.

New Careers For Salesmen

Disappearance of New Autos Threw Thousands Out of Jobs.

Washington, March 24.—(Wide World)—What's happening to the salesman—forgotten man of the wartime economy?

Is the organization and aggressiveness of the skillful salesman going to waste in a world of priorities, government contracts, rationing and freezing orders?

Because our highly competitive system of free enterprise produces more salesmen than in other nations, the problem of the salesman place in America's war effort has become vital to hundreds of thousands of American families.

But a sampling of automobile salesmen—one of the first groups hit hard by war restrictions—indicates that the talents of the good salesman are helping these men to adjust quickly to a bad situation.

Most automobile salesmen work on a commission basis. When sales stop, their incomes stop.

We asked the sales managers of four leading Washington car dealers what had happened to their men. Three of the dealers said they have shown a readiness to accept personal responsibility.

Here are some of the jobs that Washington automobile salesmen have landed:

Paymaster, construction job; office worker, truck body concern; account man, garage; steward, pullman dining car; machinist, navy yard; chicken farmer; taxi driver.

The Navy Yard has taken four or five who had some mechanical skill, and two or three have become paymasters.

A number, however, have found new jobs in the narrowing field of salesmanship. Among their employers are department stores, furniture store, oil company, bug exterminator, insurance company, real estate firm. Two men joined forces to try the locally-sluggish used car business.

Government jobs have warped out some of the salesmen. Some men on the optimistic side. One company reported that half of its former sales staff were working for the government.

For salesmen out in the country, of course, the chances of landing government jobs are not equally good. The low salaries which some former salesmen have accepted in government work would not warrant a man's moving his family to this high-cost town.

Automobile men and job-placement experts agree that the average salesman has three tough personal adjustments to make:

1. A lower standard of living.
2. Taking orders from the boss instead of the customer.
3. Working regular hours.

Will Protect Women

Barkley pointed out, however, that the s-hedule April 27 registration of men from 44 through 64 years old would provide Federal authorities with information on a large group from which production workers might be drawn. Special new Selective Service questionnaires will elicit this data.

Barkley thought voluntary registration of women "might be good thing," but Senator Chandler (D-Ky) said he felt the government ought to finish the job of mobilizing men up to 65 and classifying them as to skills before it took on any such new task.

Thomas said he had been informed that women were needed particularly in small arms munitions plants where they were considered as capable as men.

Greek Relief Ship Sails Tomorrow

New York, March 24—(AP)—Bound on a humane voyage to save from starvation an area in which warring humans are taking them, a brightly lighted ship sails for Europe tomorrow symbolic of the underlying brotherhood of man even in the fury of war.

The Swedish motorship Sicilia, sails conduct granted by Allied and Axis nations after months of negotiation, will depart for Piraeus, Greece, with 2,000 tons of flour, 10 tons of medicine and supplies and eight tons of concentrated vitamins for starving Greeks.

The Greek War Relief Association, which obtained the consent of the United States, Britain, Germany and Italy for the passage, said the ship would follow a pre-determined course and be painted chrome yellow, under the ghoils of the belligerent nations.

Labor In The "Hot Seat"

Two weeks ago, it was the farm bloc which was the target of American public opinion. Today, it is labor which is in the "hot seat." Labor's favorite recourse, when in trouble, is to concentrate on the evils of industry so that, perhaps, in another week or two, the nation's thinking will be shifted to condemnation of some of the profits being made.

But labor is in the "hot seat" today. It is in trouble not merely because there are die-hard labor haters who are seeking to use the war as an opportunity to shove the cause of labor back twenty years. It is in trouble not merely because there may be foreign propaganda seeking to divide unions along economic as well as along racial and religious lines. It is also in trouble because it has within itself, elements which have not yet developed the capacity to absorb the power and privileges which became theirs when the New Deal handed labor its Magna Carta. To this power and privilege, they have not developed a sanity and responsibility of their own. Having, after long decades of struggle, come out on a basis of equality with management, they do not know how to stop with equality; they head on toward domination. They do not, seem to the elements within labor itself, wear their power well. They threaten to become just as irresponsible as the most libertine capitalist of yesterday.

A picture of what this type of irresponsible domination can mean was given by Assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold, himself a New Dealer, in his testimony last week. Mr. Arnold went to Washington to "beat monopoly" wherever he found it. He found it in some big business. And he has also found it in labor.

In actuality, his testimony was more future prophecy than present truth. But present proof of the trend is not lacking. There have been many instances in which labor has been seeking mastery, not equality. There have been proven instances of labor leaders who were racketeers first or, if not criminal in practice in records, concerned with their own power and profit.

There is short-sightedness in labor—the kind of short-sightedness which insists upon keeping established jobs and methods even though they stand in the way of progress for the whole nation. This is the sort of thing which keeps this nation from getting the kind of housing it should have because carpenters would rather make their money driving the nails to erect one house than make it by assembling the units for fabricated houses. It is the sort of thing which stands in the way of new methods and new machines, because, at first glance, they seem to threaten the loss of a job.

There is short-sightedness which frowns upon individual effort and excellence among employes, and makes it a matter of union loyalty to refrain from giving too much performance for a given rate of pay. This concept of labor's obligation to itself stands, at this dramatic moment in our history, as an ugly block to the appeals of Mr. Donald Nelson and of Mr. Philip Murray, himself the head of the C.I.O., both of whom ask labor to contribute every last ounce of production energy, to the end that this nation shall have victory. In contrast to these appeals, Washington columnists offer us the story of a woman worker whom her union had fired because she insisted upon [illegible] of her individual production in an effort to do her part toward winning this war.

Such Mr. Arnold's case against labor. It ties in with the case the public is now holding against labor. Perhaps that case is exaggerated and distorted. Labor, in general, is keeping its no-strike pledge. There are few fair-minded people recommending that all overtime should be abolished. But there is, and labor should know it, no longer any justification for doubletime pay on Sundays and holidays just because they are Sundays and holidays. Pearl Harbor made all days alike on the American calendar. And so long as labor insists upon denying this fact, so long will the tide of present criticism of labor have at least one just basis.

In such policies, labor is being just as selfish and short-sighted and contemptuous of the public welfare as the bloated capitalist of the old cartoons ever was. The enemies of labor are very happy about the whole thing. They will be still happier, in the future, if labor does not undertake to set its own house in order. For they see in this a rare opportunity to convert popular wrath against labor. In the past few years, labor has had great and good friends, who have been quick to defend it against injustice. Now these alone cannot do the job. Labor must become its own good friend, and win this argument by developing responsibility and restraint and common sense and patriotism to match its power.

No "Bushido" For Bataan

"What dishonor is there," the latest Japanese ultimatum smoothly asked General Wainwright on Bataan Peninsula, "in following the example of the defenders of Hong Kong, Singapore and the Netherlands East Indies in the acceptance of an honorable defeat?"

It is a clever appeal, quite in accordance with "the humanitarian principles of Bushido." It truly states that there isn't very much hope for the defenders of Bataan. Why, therefore, should these defenders not avoid bloodshed and concede the battle? How can there be "dishonor" in "acceptance of an honorable defeat?"

To be sure, there wouldn't be any. The only trouble is that, if the Japanese are conceded enough of their "honorable defeats," they will win the victory in this war. The spirit on Bataan has, to date, been that there is no defeat possible which can be called "honorable." We suspect that is the spirit General MacArthur left behind him, and the spirit he himself took to Australia, and the spirit he found waiting for him, among the Australian troops and people.

We have, it is to be hoped, passed through and beyond any notions that this war, like ancient Japanese "Bushido," is a polite game in which the army which is outnumbered and outplaned goes into battle expecting its own speedy surrender.

The hard truths about the United Nations in this war to date is that they haven't been playing the game as toughly and realistically as the totalitarian nations do. There has been one exception to this rule—Russia. The Red Army has never considered surrender or an honorable defeat. Russia has chose to stand and die, and then, as soon as it was able, to push forward again and die. If every Russian force which has been surrounded in this war and apparently cut off from any aid had surrendered, the Russian campaign would have been over last December. The Russian campaign and Bataan have illustrated, for this war, the eternal military truth, that one soldier who is willing to stand and die is worth ten who will fight up to a point and then listen to the suggestion of "honorable surrender." It is this spirit which has held the Japs motionless on Bataan for three long months. Only this spirit can guarantee the holding of Australia, or any other point. We need many more Bataanas—battlefronts where defeat is never acceptable until the last desperate ounce of resistance has been tried—if we are to have the victory in this war.

Should Be Nation-Wide

When the governors of the New England states take the lead in the argument that the gas rationing Oil Administrator Ickes promises six weeks from now should be nation-wide, and not just limited to the East and the Pacific Northwest, it may, on the surface, look as if they were just trying to pull the rest of the country down into their hardship.

That is not the case, and they are reported to have important backing for their position from Price Administrator Leon Henderson. The case for nation-wide rationing is not only that it might be a good thing for morale to have all sections of the country making the same sacrifices. It rests, also, upon the realization that a major purpose of gas rationing is to conserve the automobiles and the tires which constitute the civilian transportation of the whole country.

These automobiles and these tires have got to last, and the most important function they can perform is that of seeing that defense workers get to their jobs.

Seeing that these cars and these tires are conserved for this essential purpose is a national, not a sectional, responsibility. We will not meet this responsibility efficiently or fairly if we say to one section of the country that it must conserve its cars and tires while we allow another section to use its cars and tires up as fast as it pleases. If it comes to requisition of civilian cars or tires, there is no fair reason why this requisition should be limited to one section of the country because the other sections have been allowed to wear their cars and tires out. A car in Missouri should be just as much a part of this nation's civilian transportation reserve as one in Connecticut or Oregon.

President Roosevelt, when asked for the 40 mile an hour limit, asked that it be applied to each of the 48 states. That speed limit, like gas rationing, is a measure primarily directed at the conservation of cars and tires. Gas rationing should be nation-wide too.

Connecticut Yankee

By A. H. O.

Perhaps the most unpleasant awakening as a result of the publication of probate court income returns came to those local town and city governments which have, over the years, contributed annual appropriations to help these courts keep going.

The general practice has been for the local municipalities to provide office space for the probate court, to maintain its fireproof vault, and to appropriate a certain sum for office supplies and equipment.

The Waterbury Republican has pointed out that the statutes seem to make provision of the vault maintenance upon the towns, and that they also give the probate judges the legal right to use the cost of keeping the record book on to the communities he serves.

But there seems to be, on the other hand, no legal compulsion upon the communities to provide office space other than the vault, and there is a question whether the provision of supplies would necessarily include purchase and maintenance of all office equipment.

In most instances, the sum allotted to the judge of probate has become fixed over the years, and it has been strangely noted, in periods of depression emergency, that probate judges did not complain too loudly when slight cuts were made in their appropriations. The appropriation was one of those "formalities," and the judges were careful to keep in no position to be in opposition to the efforts of the local municipalities to make economies in the cost of operating their courts.

Well, it is possible, now, to understand why they were always so gentlemanly.

In not a few instances, the need for politeness has been increased by the fact that the probate judges had to obtain these appropriations from local administrations of an opposite political faith, which made the situation even more delicate.

Some of these administrations are now rubbing their eyes, and wondering how they ever were so generous.

Their chagrin, too, will be present when there is that meeting of the reform minds in the next General Assembly. In fact, it looks as if the whole state of Connecticut, entirely sympathetic with the tortuous effort some of these judges made to reduce their own incomes to a presentable figure, will join in the pleasant task of reducing these incomes permanently, in as many ways as possible. Instead of having the cities and towns supplying the probate courts, the cities and towns will be presenting bills for board and room. The long century old honeymoon is over.

Washington in War Time

By Jack Stinnett

Washington,—Another storm is rattling the boards in Washington as while it probably won't assume the proportions of that which recently swept through the Office of Civilian Defense, it's likely to be a worthy successor.

This one resulted when it was discovered that behind the rough board fence that baffled sidewalk superintendents in the block between Fourteenth and Fifteenth on Pennsylvania Avenue is a $600,000 two-story building to house Lowell Mellett's office of Government Reports is being built, and that a new adjunct of the office will be a super-information bureau. According to preliminary plans, uniformly dressed girls would hand out information to all comers have to do business with the government.

It was estimated that this corps of answerettes could handle about 50 per cent of the queries. Persons asking the other 20 per cent would be referred to OGR staff specialists.

Editorially the new information service has been called Mellett's "brainwave" and "the great Washington boondoggle."

Mellett says that there is considerable misconception about his building and plans for the new information service. He disclaims that the idea was his, but says it originated in the President's cabinet when department heads expressed positive ideas on a need for such an overall informational service. He points out that it is only an expansion of OGR's present U. S. Information Service which is now answering some 2,000 telephone calls and personal queries a day.

The building is being built from funds administered by the Public Buildings Administration from a "blank check" appropriation made by Congress to take care of the government's skyrocketing office needs under wartime conditions. Where funds will come from for hiring the 140 additional employes estimated necessary to man the superservice isn't apparent yet. The Senate appropriations ignored a request recently from the Budget Bureau for a tentative irritation is to be removed. When the new building is ready for so far, surgery is the only way out; however, results which are satisfactory in every way, may often be obtained in cases not too far advanced by conservative treatment.

Answer: I do not hold the opinion that successful reducing can be accomplished by the use of any preparation applied to the outside of the body. I find that diet and exercise are the two most reliable methods of reducing.

Enlargement of the Prostate Gland

After fifty, one of the very common disorders of men, is an enlargement of the prostate. The prostate gland is made up of three lobes, weighs about one-half ounce, measures a little over one inch, surrounds the neck of the bladder, and is composed of numerous tubes which are full of mucous and fibrous tissue. The prostate gland has long been considered an important part of the male reproductive apparatus in man. In many cases, a disturbance of the gland because of inflammation or enlargement will tend to induce a loss of vitality.

The prostate may undergo either acute or chronic inflammation. Chronic inflammation is very common, constituting one of the most frequent conditions which the doctor is called upon to treat. As a general rule, the average patient with a chronic enlargement of the prostate delays treatment for a considerable period and often the prostatic involvement continues for as long as five years before help is sought.

Enlargement of the prostate is common in a man past fifty is due to an overgrowth of the muscular, glandular, and fibrous tissue normally found in the gland. The enlargement or overgrowth will occur without a previous infection or inflammation being found in a study of the patient's history. Some of the common causes which lead to congestion and congestion of the prostate are: Wrong diet, constipation and kidney or bladder trouble. Or, the trouble may result from a three-to-six-year infection thought to have been eradicated.

Due to the location of the gland, an enlargement of one or more of its lobes may tend to obstruct the outflow of liquid waste leaving the bladder. Sub-acute irritation will in turn produce most of the symptoms to be found in prostatic enlargement. The severity of the symptoms will depend upon the degree with which the passage of the bladder is obstructed.

Some of the usual symptoms of prostatic enlargement are: (1) First, a reflex ache or pain which may appear in the lower back and which the patient may call lumbago; second, irritability of the bladder which induces a need of frequently emptying the bladder, which may disturb the patient's sleep at the night; third, a burning sensation while voiding; fourth, an inability to empty the bladder completely; and fifth, difficulty in starting the elimination of the fluid which is retained in the bladder may undergo decomposition than leading to cystitis. Urethral discharge may occur which will cause the first portion of fluid to take on a cloudy appearance.

The mental symptoms seen in prostatic enlargement may cause the patient to be depressed, irritable, lacking in self-confidence and given to worry.

In the treatment of the average case, such measures as massage, dilation and diathermy will usually bring considerable relief. The hot Sitz bath may also be used to good effect. The use of a better diet and the avoidance of constipation and kidney or bladder irritation is to be removed. When the prostate gland is too far, surgery is the only way out; however, results which are satisfactory in every way, may often be obtained in cases not too far advanced by conservative treatment.

Dr. Frank McCoy's article on Prostatic disorders will be sent to anyone desiring a copy who writes to the Health Bureau care of this newspaper and enclosa a large, self-addressed envelope and six cents in stamps.

Man About Manhattan

By George Tucker

New York.—It does your heart good to see a guy like that. He wasn't very strong. He had to wear glasses. But if he was a little shy on the brawn, he had plenty of that stuff up under his hat.

I remember when he came out of Harvard a year ago. He was 22. He was just a boy with his class. Majored in economics. At once he went in with a shipping concern. Then came the war. He left the navy, because he has a lung ailment. Graduate of the Academy the year before, but his eyes were not good enough. Tired the army. They turned him down. He kept trying.

One day, he made it. A few weeks later he bobbed up again, home on his first leave.

He bounced through the door, grew taller and broader and heavier and let out a spiel on army life that would have fascinated Kipling.

"It's wonderful," he said, "and I mean every word I say. Look at this coat. Feel it." He leaped up and slapped the coat into my hands. "Feel it. Guess what the army has to pay for that coat. Twenty-five bucks. It's wonderful.

"How do they feed you? I wanted to know.

"Today, I had roast chicken, dressing, lima beans, gravy, bread, pickled peaches and ice cream."

He went on to exclaim over the mountains of ammunition and shells that had been issued them, the shoes, the raincoats. He sustained this level of enthusiasm until I broke in:

"I have heard of the boys say they don't get enough things to keep warm," I told him.

He looked at me his astonishment. He asked, "Do you believe them?"

"No."

"If they complain, it's because they are whiners, because they are selfish, because they are so spoiled that they don't have the ability to adapt themselves to a changing situation. If anyone told you U. S. Army equipment is bad, they lie. If they tell you new men inducted into the army aren't given plenty of everything they need, they lie. If they tell you there is confusion and wasted effort and extravagance, they lie."

The rawest private in Uncle Sam's army who spoke these words had been used to driving his own car. He had an annual tailor bill. He was a great deal about the future. I always dreaded Drake's growing old. It was frightful that he had to die as he did, but . . . poor Drake!" Randy's eyes dimmed. "Ill be able to make sense out of it all some-day. I know I can. I owe it to the night of each other, Parrie. You have to go home, don't you?"

"Yes."

"Parrie, I'm just 32 years old—will be 32 on my next birthday, and I feel as though I had lived half a dozen lives."

"I can understand that, too."

"Whatever was done, Parrie, we did together, you and I—the only people in the world really loved Drake." She looked up quickly. "Do you know anything about Louise Gordon?"

"Not a word."

"Sometimes I did hear that her condition was worse and that there seemed little hope of her recovery."

"Parrie, all of that seems a mighty strange, dark business to me. There are worse things about it than we know."

"I know."

Parrie thought of what Randy had said about her age. His own age, as he said, he didn't, of course, feel old, as Randy did, but he had a disagreeable letdown feeling, as if many things, many courses were suddenly finished. He, too, had lived through experiences that had been too violent.

Mrs. Skeffington's denunciations of King's Row came back to her mind. And yet, a clear, cool judgment told her that again like a thread of crystal through his words was brought to her mind the feeling was wrong. Kings Row was only a small unit in a world that was disintegrating. Mrs. Parris Mitchell—was not Parrie Mitchell—ruled Kings Row, but Parris Mitchell of the world. So stained, there was nothing in Kings Row that could ever read. Through to touch him. He had lived too much of the vast, interweaving effort of men in all places, and in all times, who strove to connect and link up the scattered labors of the world into a beneficial whole to have sense of his own destiny.

Late in the spring Parris crossed the Aberdeen campus one afternoon just as the high school across the way was being dismissed for the day. He heard the mixed chatter of the released prisoners, and the clash upon clash of soprano dissonances chopped the air.

Parris watched the crowd of children thin and go away. Just a few years ago he had been one of them. Drake's Randy, Parrie, Randy, Vera, Peyton, and all the others.

He looked across the schoolyard, down across the hill, beyond the wide meadows in which used white and pink crepe paper streamers in profusion in decorating her living and dining rooms. Alone in House, Hand Is Caught

Mrs. Wilfred Barcomb, of 83 Main street, was given first aid treatment at the Manchester Memorial hospital for a hand burn. She was at her home, alone, doing some washing and her hand became caught between the rolls of the electric wringer. She was unable to extricate the hand herself and it was several minutes after the accident before her call for assistance was heard by persons living in the same house. They gained entrance to the house but succeeded in releasing the hand. She was taken to the hospital by Francis Limerick. After being given first aid she was discharged.

U. S. Turning Out Superior Airmen; Fronts Tell Story

(Editor's Note: Wide World's aviation editor, Devon Francis, has just completed a five-week tour of Army and Navy air training fields. He is rounding up his findings in three daily stories, of which this is the first.

By Devon Francis

New York, March 24.—The dispatches from the front tell the story.

American fliers, fighting against odds, come off victors in scraps with the Japanese.

A lone American pilot outsmarts an entire squadron of the enemy and breaks out of a cordon thrown about him.

A Navy pilot in a single engagement shoots down a half dozen enemy bombers.

The United States is turning out superior airmen for a war in which air power has been the fulcrum for consistent successes by the enemy in the western Pacific.

The foundation stone for this air force is the nature of the training. It is an adage in Whitehall that British wars are won on the playing fields of Eton. This war can well be won for the United States on sun-washed flying fields dotting the landscape of California, the southwest, Texas, Florida and the deep south.

We are turning out superior airmen. The need is quantity.

Not Yet Out of Woods

It is tempting to state after a five-week tour of some of those fields, that our problem of production of a numerically superior air force is about to be effaced. It is not. We are doing a prodigious job, but a more prodigious job lies ahead of us.

The Germans were first to recognize the need of numbers in building their air power. They started with youngsters in their early teens. They taught them the rudiments of flying. Then, as they grew older, they inducted them into the German air force proper.

The United States is not going to talk indefinitely in terms of futures. Already we are doing an encouraging job on those training fields, the Army and Navy alike. Thousands of pilots, bombardiers, navigators, air gunners and radiomen are being graduated.

Fed in Three Months

I believe the output will be felt before another three months have passed. But the task ahead is embodied in the estimate by members of the American Association for The Advancement of Science, named by the War Department to study the matter, that the army alone must have at least 375,000 airplane crew members in the next two years. That includes, of course, other flying personnel as well as pilots.

The remainder of the projected 2,000,000-man air force consists of ground crews, tactical officers, meteorologists and the like.

As for pilots, if only 75,000 of the 185,000 planes which President Roosevelt has asked for by the end of 1942 go into the service of the Army and the Navy, we should have 150,000 pilots for their cockpits. Warplanes are tireless. Men become exhausted.

Most encouraging to the officers directing the flying training is the standard of excellence of the aviation cadets who are being fed out to the scores of primary schools from replacement centers in the south, the gulf coast and California.

The Army's educational and age requirements have been relaxed in the interest of mass training. The standards have not.

I talked with one officer told me during my tour, "that we can obtain 80,000 pilots a year, of spirited caliber, without a great deal of trouble. We have a million young men coming of age in the United States annually. We ought to be able to process 8 per cent of them."

Are Surprised By Children

Mr. and Mrs. James Lennon Honor Guests on 42nd Anniversary.

Mr. and Mrs. James W. Lennon of 210 Charter Oak street were surprised last night at their home when their children and grandchildren came to help them celebrate the 42d anniversary of their marriage, and to remember them with individual gifts, money and flowers.

The daughters prepared a delicious repast and one of the sons showed reels of motion pictures, and all enjoyed the reunion immensely.

Mr. Lennon and the former Miss Winifred Dickinson were married in St. Mary's Episcopal church by the late Jacob Biddle, rector at the time. Twelve children were born to them, two of whom died in infancy. The others, seven daughters and three sons, all live in this vicinity.

Formerly employed by Cheney Brothers, Mr. Lennon and all three sons now work at the Pratt and Whitney Aircraft plant. They have ten grandchildren and one great grandchild.

Port Moresby Again Target Of Jap Fliers

of New Guinea, is about 300 miles across dangerous Japan sea from the Bisak Cape York peninsula of the Australian mainland.

Sort of Northern Anchor

It is a sort of northern anchor of the great barrier reef defenses of northeastern Australia. These coral reefs, which skirt the Australian coast at a distance varying from a few miles to about 125 miles, reach for more than 1,200 miles from north of Sydney almost to the Fly river mouth in New Guinea.

The narrow, dangerous passages through the reefs have been reported mined, and so long as the Australians and Americans hold Port Moresby with strong Air Forces, passage around the northern end for an attack on the eastern Australian coast from the east by sea is barred.

The Japanese, from their landing places at Lae, Salamaua and Buna, on the north coast of northeastern New Guinea coast, have been repeatedly bombed and strafed by American pursuit, possibly for an attempted land attack on Port Moresby, which they hope to capture in what no further word of this expedition today.

Master Draft List Arrives

When Correct Order for This District Compiled It Will Be Published.

The local Selective Service board this morning received the master list of serial numbers in the order drawn in Washington last night and today. This afternoon Chief Clerk Mrs. Clara J. Turkington began the work of compiling the proper numbers over 1772 (the total registrations to date) in the correct order for the Manchester district can be determined.

This is a difficult task and will probably require several days. When completed, it will be the official list of order numbers for Manchester. As soon as possible the complete list will be printed in The Herald.

Men Are Reclassified

The local Selective Service board yesterday began to reclassify a large number of questionnaires since the advice that registrants has changed because of new regulations. Many of the employes of the Pratt and Whitney and Hamilton Propeller divisions of United Aircraft are not now given further deferments since the employers are not asking for them. Unless a man is absolutely essential to the production effort the aircraft manufacturer does not, warranted in asking that he not be drafted.

As To Married Men

The local board discussed also the possibility of a change in policy regarding married men whose wives are not dependent. The local board has not been inducting married men with dependents, as it has been ordered to do by the Selective Service headquarters, but if the order is changed, it will be published in The Herald.

pyres were used for living men. Soviet agencies have quoted prisoners at length as to losses suffered by the 16th Army.

1,800 Germans Killed

The Russians claimed today that 1,800 Germans had been killed and 20 blockhouses, bunkers, shine-gun nests destroyed in 48 hours of fighting on the Leningrad front, although battle positions generally were essentially unchanged.

Red Army troops have surrounded an ancient Russian city believed to be Novgorod, a Nazi stronghold north of Lake Ilmen, Stockholm dispatches to London said, and pushed westward through Staraya Russa to the Rzhev-Vitebsk road on the central front.

Soviet aerial squadrons, reinforced by American-built Airacobra fighters, were officially credited with a 3-for-1 edge over the German Air Force in operations through the week, the Soviet Information Bureau said. Russian fliers destroyed 275 German planes from March 15 to 22 and lost 68 of their own.

Admit Powerful Russian Attacks

Berlin (From German Broadcast, Rebroadcast in English)—Russian attacks in the Donets basin were acknowledged today by the German high command, which asserted that these were beaten off at every point, including the drive on the Kerch peninsula in the Crimea.

In a Caucasian port south of Sevastopol, the besieged Russian fleet was hit by a heavy blow, a merchant ship and a submarine were reported sunk by Nazi bombers.

Rev. O. L. Monson To Speak Here

At a special Lenten mid-week service at 7:30, the Rev. Olin Lee Monson of Willimantic will be the guest preacher at the Methodist church of that city, has been achieving results in his year zone scale, he results in pastoral and lay visitation and in unusual Sunday evening programs.

This mid-week service bridges the gap between the Methodist and Life programs of the North and South Methodist churches which closed last Wednesday and the Holy Week services. The service is conducted by the pastor of the South church.

Another Shower For Miss Gardner

Miss Alyne Gertrude Gardner, daughter of Mrs. Ruth W. Gardner of 60 West Center street, whose marriage to William A. Moshier of Albany, N. Y., will take place in St. James's church on April 18, was honored with a second miscellaneous shower last night. The hostesses were Mrs. Mary Michael Mooney at her home on Cooper Hill street, and she tended by about 25 friends of the bride-elect from Hartford, Rockville and Manchester. The church used white and pink crepe paper streamers in profusion in decorating her living and dining rooms. The bride-elect unwrapped her lovely gifts seated under an canopy of streamers from a large watering can. A feature of this buffet table was a beautifully decorated wedding cake.

Young Boys Wait on Customers When Drug Store Left Unlocked

Berkeley, Calif., March 24.—(AP)—Spring brought a great thrill to 10-year-old James Wilsox and his chum, John Kellogg, 12. They climbed up on a soda fountain stool at George Donaldson's drug store today.

They sat and waited. Other customers entered and likewise waited.

Noting that everything in the store was priced, the lads went to work. They waited on nine customers, wrapped packages and rang up cash in the register.

One customer, amazed at the youthfulness of the boys, called Patrolman Sam Wilkes, who summoned the drug store owner.

Donaldson said he had closed up shop at noon but forgot to lock the door.

His personal investigation showed Jimmy and Johnny had not made a single error. Donaldson plied them with sodas and promised them jobs in the store when they grow up.

"All of these resources and processes we propose to make available to the War Production Board and any other war agency."

And, he added, "if they want the material and can't get it otherwise, we will go into direct production."

Kansas City—(AP)—Mrs. James K. Parr, Jr. wired her husband in Los Angeles that she was expecting the stork. Hubby rushed for his motorcycle and started the 1,900-mile 68-hour trek. Nelson Asks Delay To Fix Double Pay

"unwise" legislative curbs on labor unless the administration acted promptly to seek a modification of the 40-hour week law.

Would Make Relations Worse

Discussing proposals to abolish the 40-hour week by law, Nelson expressed the opinion such action would not improve relations in general worse, rather than better.

But he carefully avoided the question of paying doubletime for Sunday and holiday work. Such work "is a different matter, which has no relation to the 40-hour week," he said.

"I believe that this practice of demanding premium pay for work ended and holiday work has in many instances slowed up war production."

"Yes," he added, "I do not believe that the time has yet arrived for this situation by act of Congress. I believe that we can gain a general suspension of that problem through voluntary action on the part of our responsible labor leaders."

Wouldn't Eliminate Overtime

He made it clear, however, that he was not in favor of eliminating overtime pay, and that he favored the equivalent of time and a half, for the seventh day of consecutive labor.

Discussing the clause which would ban the closed shop, Nelson contended that it would "very likely have a bad effect on labor morale and on labor relations—and ultimately, on war production itself."

He entered opposition, too, to the provision to limit war profits to a maximum of six per cent, although expressing his conviction that excessive profits should be curbed and his belief that six per cent "is plenty in the average case."

Would Impede Conversion

But the war production chief argued that the provision would interfere against profits higher than six per cent would impede the conversion of small business to war work.

He said also that the clause failed to take into consideration return on capital investment, turnover, the time required to fill the contract, and the financial structure of the contracting firm, and probably would, if written into the law, cause many contractors to insist upon cost-plus-fixed fee contracts.

"What we need to do," said Nelson at one point, "is to get everyone in the country conscious of his responsibility."

He said, too, that the nation must see to it that essential civilian services are maintained, illustrating his point by saying that "if transportation bogs down, then production bogs."

Mothers' Club Hears Lecture

Psychologist Gives Interesting Talk Here on Child's Reactions.

Dr. W. A. Bousfield, professor of Psychology of the University of Connecticut, gave the members of the Manchester Mothers' club an enlightening and thoroughly enjoyable talk last night on the subject of "Emotional Development Through Childhood and Adolescence." He was introduced by Superintendent Arthur H. Illing of the local public schools, who said it was gratifying to him to find that the Mothers' club had invited Dr. Bousfield to deliver the address at the March meeting. Parents and teachers alike are vitally interested in this subject and often wonder why a child or young person reacts as they do, what makes them do it and what may be done to improve the situation. Superintendent Illing went on to express his satisfaction in noting that the University is appointing on its faculty young men who are outstanding in their different lines, and it was a pleasure to him to present Dr. Bousfield who was on that category.

Contrasts Times

The speaker contrasted the attitude of educators and parents today as contrasted with 100 years ago, and quoted some of the sayings of eminent people of the day, as for instance the great divine Jonathan Edwards, who referred to children as "young vipers."

As for the impact of the war on children's minds, he said we had learned a great deal from the experiences in England, and the method of treating behavior problems and temper tantrums. He advised against corporal punishment of the child of two or under. They cannot be reasoned with and it does no good to attempt.

Use the Rod

Children use techniques that work, that gain them something. By the temper tantrum he is getting attention, he is reducing parents to submission. What should be done? And the reply from students in his class, said the professor, is, "Use corporal punishment applied in the right place." The speaker acknowledged that the experience gained with his own children was worth more than theoretical knowledge. If you spank them every time they get into a tantrum, they will stop, but you will find it engenders resentment, and as an illustration he told that statistics have proven where parents used corporal punishment their children later became worse with unpleasantness, although they may show resentment indirectly. Again, the failure of many students in college is attributed to this early harsh treatment by parents.

Behavior Problems

Dr. Bousfield read a number of letters from distracted mothers asking that remedy or method to pursue when children refused to eat, and a variety of other behavior problems, many of which caused laughter among the mothers as it mirrored the conduct in many of their own children.

As for the eating problem, experiments had been made with a variety of different foods, such as eggs, fruits, vegetables, cereals, milk and so on, allowing the children to eat just what they chose. It was found a balance did, but proved in the end that the children allowed such terrors gained by the experiment.

Again as to punishment, he asserted the child under eight is not intelligent enough to connect the punishment with the offense. Telling a child out of "circulation," temporarily is a frequent form of punishment. Isolating them as it were from the playmates. Simply making him say he is sorry is unwise, he may be sorry for the punishment but as a rule repetition does not go far with a child.

The speaker discussed a number of child problems and made some humorous remarks as to remedies advanced for them. The attachment or "mother fixation" of the young child is remarkable. The father is of little consequence, and this leads to a feeling of responsibility on the mother for guidance. He said the child who showed freedom emotionally, free of fears, things, as in the case of a child who cried and cried when it was kept from her, died—these always matters should be referred to a physician or psychoanalyst, rather than the youngster given to tantrums. On general principles he chiki never does anything without a reason for it. The question is what is the reason.

A question period followed which brought out a number of problems of the mothers, and the treatment of them was suggested by the speaker as far as possible.

A short business meeting followed the lecture, after which coffee and home-made cookies were served by the hostess committee under the direction of Mrs. Ed-ward Daly and Mrs. Robert Hasley.

ten ship, and a 5,000-ton freighter were sunk, six enemy destroyers and anti-submarine vessel was probably sunk; and two 7,000-ton freighters were damaged.

All the actions announced in last night's communique occurred in "in Japanese waters," indicating that offensive actions are progressed ever closer to the island empire.

The new victories brought the official American tally of Japanese ships destroyed or damaged to 118 since the start of the war. The telling blows were struck by Gen. Douglas MacArthur's ships, submarines and planes.

In the last roundup of allied convoys into American ports, issued on March 12, the Germans said their submarines had sunk a total of 172,000 tons of Italian submarines had sunk 50,000 tons, making a combined total on that date of 823,200 tons.

Patrols Capture Axis Transport Vehicles

Cairo, March 24.—(AP)—British patrols operating in the face of enemy artillery fire captured a number of Axis transport vehicles in the Libyan desert, a brief headquarters communique reported today.

It acknowledged "some enemy movement" in the area south of Tmrim, apparently in advance of the main German and Italian forces.

American-made Kittyhawk planes shot down two Messerschmitts yesterday during a bombing raid on the Martuba airdrome, 150 miles northwest of Tobruk, an R. A. F. communique said.

Two other Axis bombers were reported destroyed by Spitfires and Hurricanes during attacks on British shipping in the Mediterranean. Three British planes were missing.

Kept on Selling Tires After Order

Los Angeles, March 24.—(AP)—Guy O. Bryan, retail tire dealer, has been ordered discontinued by the government's tire freezing and rationing order.

Bryan submitted a recently filed government charge that he sold $28,000 worth of tires after the freezing order but argued that it violated the due process of law section of the Constitution.

"The Office of Price Administration doesn't say We need these tires for the armed forces and will take them off your shelves," pleaded Bryan's attorney, Webster Hazelhurst, in court yesterday. Bryan simply says, 'We can't sell any tires.' You can't dispose of your property."

Freezing of his stock would have bankrupted him, Bryan said.

Talbot Smith and Francis Carroll representing the government, insisted that as a rule "people put personal welfare ahead of the nation."

Judge Ben Harrison issued a restraining order prohibiting Bryan from selling tires. He said a question of law was involved and he would hear argument on whether a permanent injunction. No date was set.

"If there is any violation of this temporary order," Judge Harrison warned Bryan, "you won't have a chance to sell tires for some time."

Politics Begin In Southwest

Spring Starts Reports of Candidates in Several Of the States.

This is the second of a series of stories telling how the public feels about the nation's first war elections in 24 years. It rounds up sentiment in the central plains and southwest. More stories will follow from other sections of the country.

Kansas City, March 24 Politics like the weather is just now showing signs of warming up over the big southwest farm area. But already the politicians are developing ear more listening to the Grass Roots murmurs.

For the war has brought the politician almost as many new problems as growers have the businessman. What the new currents of thought and emotions edifying over the country will mean when translated into votes is something most observers haven't figured out.

In the solidly Democratic states of Texas and Oklahoma the experts appear to feel no great upheavals are yet in sight. In Iowa, Nebraska and Kansas, and to a lesser extent in Missouri, where Republicans are in control, apparently scarcely it out in the November elections, trends are not so clearly defined.

Voters have been rather silent on the war, which it appears is watchful rather than an apathetic silence. They were vocal enough when the Congressional pension bill was passed to help bring veterans of the last war back from Oklahoma and parts of Kansas and Texas have flooded congressional delegations with demands for measures to outlaw strikes and to abolish the 40-hour work week in defense industries.

This latter development, partly organic sentiment, stemmed from the Grass Roots although at Washington William Green, AFL leader, has called for an investigation of the movement.

Farm sentiment has not crystallized, either in keeping the "lids" on for a complete upheaval. Most well depend, observers concede, on how the war goes.

These six states will elect five United States senators, five governors, 62 congressmen and numerous state officers. The number of congressmen is lower by four than two years ago. Kansas, Nebraska, Iowa and Oklahoma each lost one in the redistricting.

The situation by states:

Texas: Interest is on the Lone Star which usually takes its democracy at high tide. Seven in the campaign of Sen. W. Lee O'Daniel, not so long ago a radio flour salesman, for a full six-year term. He left the governorship last year to be elected to the unexpired term of the late Sen. Morris Sheppard. Reports persist he may be opposed by two other ex-governors, Dan Moody and James V. Allred, now a federal judge. For the most part, no serious opposition has developed for the 21 incumbent congressmen, all Democrats. The state primary election will be July 25, the runoff Aug. 22.

In Oklahoma

Oklahoma: Sen. Josh Lee, a New Deal charter member, is out for re-election with Orel Busby, former State Supreme Court justice his only avowed opponent in the Democratic primary July 14, although former Gov. William J. Alfalfa Bill Murray has made some motions in that direction. Gov. Leon C. Phillips, vigorous advocate of states rights, must step out under the one-term law, and a crowded field for the job is in prospect. Eight congressmen and 24 state seats ticket also will be elected, with nothing in sight to alter the predominantly Democratic complexion.

Kansas—Only Democratic opposition has shown up for Sen. Arthur Capper, veteran Republican running up for his sixth term. Former Sen. George McGill and former Rep. Randolph Carpenter will contest for the Democratic nomination. The state's six Republican congressmen will have spirited Democratic opposition. Re-districting after the census threw the lone Democrat, John Houston, into the same district with Rep. E. H. Rees. Gov. Payne Ratner, Republican in his second term, isn't saying what he intends to do next. Democrat W. H. Burke, who lost a close race to Ratner in 1940 and has been urged to try again, is showing signs of an imminent decision. Former Secretary of War Harry Woodring, who once was governor, is a Democratic reserve.

In Nebraska

Nebraska—Retirement of George Norris, the veteran independent Republican, leaves the Senatorship race wide open. So far only Hugh Ashmore, farmer and former State Senator, has filed. Kenneth Wherry, Republican State chairman, may file. Governor Griswold filed for reelection after considering the Senate race. Democrats have shown little activity and the public little interest in home politics to date. Farmers have grown over the growing shortage of farm labor.

Iowa—Sen. Clyde L. Herring, Democrat in a mostly-Republican state, must stand for reelection this year. He has an open opposition so far and figures his prestige with Democratic Secretary of Agriculture and James I. Dolliver, nephew of a former senator, will seek the Republican Senatorial nomination. Re-districting will send only eight Congressmen back to Washington. Seven Republicans and two Democrats now represent the state. The governorship race already has bloomed, with two Republicans and two Democrats in the field.

Missouri—Absence of statewide races has held down early political interest. Democrats now hold ten of the 13 Congressional seats, and expect to concentrate on the 6th District where Republican Phil A. Bennett, outspoken OCD and agricultural program critic, won in 1940. Republican organization claims a good chance of taking some border districts.

Bonuses Bring Action Demand

Amazed at High Pay

Congress was amazed today at the disclosure of war orders showing that a small company of a manufacturer has been drawing salary and extras at the rate of $18,295 for the first 10 weeks of 1942.

The manufacturer, W. S. Jack president of Jack and Heintz, Inc. Cleveland, in a statement that the bonus system under which the secretary was paid actually decreased costs. He told the House Naval Committee yesterday that the firm which makes airplane parts, had given out $600,000 in bonuses last year.

"And the money all came from the government," said Representative Vinson (D-Ga), chairman of the committee.

The secretary, plump Miss Adade Bowman, said of her employer: "He's generous and the most wonderful man in the world."

She acknowledged yesterday that she had received $39,356 last year and $18,295 for the first ten weeks this year—an annual rate of $95,108 for 1942.

Patients Quiet During Blackout

The blackout at the Manchester Memorial hospital last night was a complete success. The faint alert was flashed to the nurses and doctors and when the red signal was received the switches were pulled and every room in the hospital was plunged into darkness.

The night nurses having been given the first warning secured flashlights and went along with their work as usual. The signal came just at the time the visiting hours were over and the patients were being prepared for the night.

The lights in the hospital were extinguished before the whistles started to sound. As the lights went out the street lights were shut off and automobiles in nearby streets came to a stop and turned out their lights.

The supervisors in all of the wards reported the patients acted well and there were no births or deaths during the time the lights were out. It was necessary to reset the clocks as all are operated by electric power.

Manchester in the War

Civilian Defense Phone 2-0107 — Red Cross Phone 6687

Red Cross

The Manchester Chapter of the American Red Cross is planning on the formation of a blood donor unit to be used for civilian defense. The committee working in this area includes Dr. Edwin C. Hipp Jr. and Mrs. Betty Ladd. Volunteer donors will each give a pint of blood which will be converted into plasma and then stored on the convenient location where it will be immediately available for transfusions in event of civilian defense disasters. This plasma, kept at proper temperature, will keep indefinitely according to medical authorities and may be administered to any victim, regardless of the blood type.

All healthy people between the ages of 21 and 60 may volunteer. The actual bleeding will be handled by a doctor and trained nurses with a corps of volunteer workers to take care of clerical work and canteen service. The donation will require approximately 45 minutes including a ten-minute rest period, after which refreshment will be furnished by the canteen which is a part of the unit.

Connecticut Leads States

Actions to a communication received at Red Cross headquarters from the State Defense Council, Connecticut leads the entire United States in the number of trained First Aiders on a population basis. In addition to the slogan "One First Aider in Every Ten," the Red Cross has adopted another slogan, "One First Aider in Every Family" in order that they may be sure that each family in the State has someone who can temporarily take charge of the family in the event of an accident.

Instructors Report

All instructors of first aid and Nurses' Aides groups are urged to expect a complete list of their headquarters at once giving the names of all persons they have trained by them prior to March 1, 1942.

Public Nurse Funds Sought

Letters Appealing for Contributions Towards Their Work Sent Out.

The Manchester Public Health Nursing Association has had one of the busiest winters on record and is appealing through letters sent out today for funds to carry on the work of their organization. Not only are the visiting nurses answering their usual calls, including care daily, but are also preparing themselves to be ready in emergency arising from the present situation.

The visiting nurses are organized and on hand in case of an air raid and have been having regular drills so they will know just what to do when the occasion arises. They assemble at the clinic rooms with the nurse who is on duty and for their calls. When a call comes in the nurse goes out with the doctors and the medical unit is transported by volunteers in a beach wagon. They then assist the doctors, give first aid treatment, and the nurses have taken the Red Cross First Aid Course and are well qualified to administer first aid or call an ambulance to have the victim taken to the hospital. Then they return to the clinic and wait for their next call.

During the last income tax all ways remains at the clinic rooms ready in case of an emergency.

Besides having taken the first air course the nurses have taken the air raid course. Not that they these things are necessary in their work at this time and so are trying to prepare themselves for anything that may come up.

Anyone not receiving a letter of appeal who would care to contribute may do so by either sending their contribution to Mrs. Raymond H. Staples, 47 Cedar street or leaving it at the clinic rooms in the hospital.

Selectee Asks Early Service

Warren W. Kelly Requests Prior Induction —Is Unusual Case.

Warren W. Kelly, of 12 Brainard place, a Selective Service registrant, has volunteered for prior induction and will be given his medical examination this week. If accepted he will be presented at the army induction center in Hartford within the next two weeks.

This is an unusual case. patriotism since Kelly could have chosen the branch of service he preferred to enroll with and could then have enlisted. However in volunteering for early Selective Service induction he is willing to accept whatever branch of the service he is assigned to.

His order number is well down the local list and he would not have been summoned for some time.

Revisions In Welding

Sumner testified that in addition to the changes in specifications made necessary by the lack of steel, revisions had been made in the method of welding the bridge's grid decking.

He said that, as the work progressed, the contractor, The Merrimack Construction Company of New Haven, experienced difficulty in meeting the specified weld. One of his assistants, Charles L. Nord, visited the project, he said, "took corrective measures" and advised him by telephone of the changes.

Sumner testified that he approved the welding revisions which he said "would produce a better result."

Responsible for Changes

Sumner said he alone authorized the changed specifications without consulting his superiors.

Asked whether the manufacturer's recommendations in respect to the welding had been followed, Sumner said that they had not. He declared that in approving the grid for the bridge he had made no mathematical calculations.

During cross-examination, Joseph Berry, attorney for Cox, brought out that the type of grid decking was a comparatively new engineering development and that it was used in Connecticut for the first time in 1937.

Berry then asked if that manufacturers of this type of decking had found it difficult to set up a mathematical formula, but decended to pursue the method trial and error in determining its quality.

Yesterday Sumner gave testimony that manufacturers of steel had found it difficult to set up a mathematical formula, but decended to pursue the method trial and error in determining its quality.

20,000 Engagements In Year

An official spokesman for the Japanese army at Peiping in north China said today that Japanese forces had fought 20,000 engagements, large and small, in that area during the past year.

He declared that 81,000 Chinese were taken prisoner and at least 44 of the Chinese strongholds in north China was destroyed.

Coal, iron, salt and raw cotton industries of north China already have been developed to a stage where they can fill almost all of the requirements of Japan proper, he added.

Ceaseless Offensive Urged for Japan

Berlin (From German Broadcasts), March 24.—(AP)—A Japanese Navy spokesman was quoted by the German radio today as advocating ceaseless offensive as the key to victory and naming Australia and the Indian ocean as areas which must be seized "as strongholds for big future military operations."

The quotation was from article Rear Admiral Ryokichi Hirata in the Tokyo newspaper Yomiuri, to argue against prolonging Japan's pause in almost attack—an interlude since the conquest of Java by which he said, "Japan is now on the defensive and the Anglo-American powers on the offensive.

"Defensive lines do not, never, lead to victory," he contended.

"Japan, therefore, must win the present war by offensive tactics.

"It must continue its offensive by occupying the Indian ocean and Australia as strongholds for big future military operations.

"Although over 50 enemy submarines and four out of a total of three enemy aircraft carriers have been sunk since the outbreak of war in the Pacific the enemy is expected to reinforce his fleet this year by another 10 special carriers. The enemy will then be able to attempt attacks from Hawaii, New Zealand, Samoa and other points.

Hirade then discussed the option prevailing in some Japanese circles that the wealth of southern regions already yielded to Japan's disposal and that the Japanese empire thus was invincible.

The captain termed this a great mistake.

"The raw material sources of the southern regions will be more accessible, although in Japanese hands," he wrote.

"Only when Japan is able to make a practical use of these sources will her position be invincible. Until then, numerous difficulties must be surmounted. Indeed, one of which is the transport question."

In his conclusion, he asserted that the Japanese Navy was determined to renew military influence entirely from the Pacific and Indian oceans.

Japan Seen at Peak Of Military Glory

Chungking, March 24.—(AP)—A Japanese authority admitted today that Japan has "reached the peak of her military glory and the fortunes of war now will gradually turn in favor of the allies.

The Japanese military prestige grown appreciably as a result of developments in the Pacific last week," the spokesman said.

Among the favorable factors cited were Gen. Douglas MacArthur's transfer to Australia, the successful escape of United States convoys to Australia, the liaison of Chinese and British troops in Burma and the arrival of Sir Stafford Cripps in India in an attempt to smooth political differences.

Labor Hearing Over Arms Co.

Witnesses Say He Was Not Allowed to Leave Place He Worked In.

New Haven, March 24.—(AP)—Cornelius W. Scott, a chief steward for the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of America (CIO), today declared the Winchester Repeating Arms Company had transferred him from one job to another and had placed limits upon his movement about the munitions plant.

Scott's testimony opened the second day of NLRB hearing into charges brought against the manufacturers of Garand rifles by representatives of the union, who allege employes were discriminated against because of union activity.

The witness said he went to work at the Winchester plant here on January 29 and had joined the union almost immediately. Scott, a college graduate, stated that he was a publicity man for the entire U.S.O. with offices in New York City prior to coming to work as a laborer at the munitions firm.

Yesterday afternoon, Scott declared, he had been told by John Coutts, his immediate foreman, that he would no longer be allowed to talk with other workers in his department, and several weeks ago, he said, he was informed that he could no longer leave the building where he worked to go to other parts of the shop. He admitted that he had written a memo on conditions at Winchester's which have appeared in various Negro newspapers.

The examiner also heard testimony by Sam Kolinger, 72, who said that Neil Cahill, his departmental supervisor had told him that the company would make no application for a draft deferment for him if he engaged in union activity. He obtained a deferment, but subsequently entered the coastal grade school and has been reclassified as 1-A because he no longer functions in a defense job.

Vincenza Chiarabisc, who failed to answer to a subpoena to testify yesterday, was also placed on the stand this morning. He denied that any of the company supervisors had ever approached him first, on the matter of unions, and said, instead, that he had asked his foreman for advice on the matter.

Somewhere

Somewhere a trail of sweetness
Is underneath the leaves;
Caused by the trilling arbutus
That yearly fragrance receives.

"From somewhere the birds are winging
Straight for New England hills:
They cream of the elms and maples
Awaiting their springtime trills.

Somewhere the ferns are sleeping
With leaves all tightly drawn;
But when spring comes a little green
They'll awake with a mighty yawn.

Somewhere the brooks are calling;
Our banks need some trimming too;
And we hope to see them covered
With Forget-me-nots of blue.

Newsom, Now Fit, Wants Pay Raised Or Given Release

Tiger Twirler In Fine Shape Now; Works Out Daily, But Officials Ignore Him; Mates Like His Spirit This Year; May Be Let Out.

By Gayle Talbot

Lakeland, Fla., March 24.—(AP)—Our old and esteemed pal Buck Newsom—he of the greatest pitchers that ever lived, on his own admission—finds himself in a position that might embarrass the average man but not Buck. In training camp of the Detroit Tigers. It even has Buck a trifle discomfited.

Last of the important baseball holdouts, the big fellow from South Carolina is being permitted to work out to his heart's content. He is running and sweating and pitching to the batters. He is in surprisingly good condition, some 20 pounds lighter than he was a year ago, when, as the beaten hero of the 1940 series, he was toiling around grandly in a car whose horn plays "Dixie" for a tune.

Silent Treatment

The only thing is, this time, that Buck doesn't have a contract to play for the Tigers and is being pointedly ignored by official of the club. He works out, puts on his clothes and walks out the door, saying bewildered. Not even the Detroit sports writers ask him for his views. Only his teammate Josh him a bit. Buck is being given the "silent treatment."

It is tough stuff for the big man who pitched the Tigers to a pennant only two seasons ago, with 21 victories and five defeats, and who proudly proclaimed last year that he was making the largest salary of any pitcher in the game—$22,500. The club has offered him $12,500 this time, representing perhaps the most drastic reduction in baseball history, and Buck is so rebellious that it looks doubtful they ever can get together.

Needed Greenberg

It seems more likely he will be with another club when the season opens. That will suit Buck, he makes it more than clear. In the clubhouse, streaming with honest perspiration, he kept saying: "I'll either pitch for 'em or again 'em. But whoever I pitch for will pay old Buck the salary he wants—not what they want to pay."

Buck feels, and perhaps with some reason, that he is being unjustly penalized for the fact that he won only 12 games last year while losing 20. He claims it wasn't that he was any worse than usual, but that the Tigers simply had lost the services of Hank Greenberg to the Army. Hank's big bat, he points out, had contributed to the difference between winning or losing those 1-0 and 2-1 games.

Hank's big bat, he points out, had contributed to the difference between winning or losing those 1-0 and 2-1 games.

Buck Newsom is not the only veteran of the Detroit Tigers in exile. Outfielder Jimmy Outlaw, who was with Detroit in 1940, is in the Pacific the enemy is expected to reinforce his fleet this year by another 10 special carriers. The enemy will then be able to attempt attacks from Hawaii, New Zealand, Samoa and other points.

Loud Speaker MacPhail Has Club Baffled

Signs Billy Sullivan To Outsmart Clark Griffith; Sideshow Antics Please Fans.

Tampa, March 24. — Analyzing Brooklyn's chances, don't overlook Red Ruffing.

Repair Man MacPhail.

The acquisition of Billy Sullivan is the latest example of Larry MacPhail's value to the organization he heads.

And how Sullivan was waived out of Washington, Clark Griffith is another one of those unsolvable baseball mysteries.

At least four American League clubs were crying for catching, and it was Sullivan who brought old Bo-Bo Newsom to his pennant-winning Detroit club in 1940.

In addition to that, the old Nestor Dorer is one of the more dangerous left-hand hitters who is made all the more formidable by his cannon.

Yet Washington, with Al Evans the only left-handed hitter, has only one experienced backstop, Jake Early, let the highly competent Sullivan go to Flatbush.

That's the difference between Clark Griffith and Loud Speaker MacPhail.

Griffith saddles Bucky Harris with an impossible burden. It's tougher than ever this trip with Cecil Travis and Buddy Lewis already in the Army.

Builder MacPhail everlastingly seeks to plug leaks, even when they can't be seen by others.

For instance, the Dodgers were amazed when Boss MacPhail bobbed up with Sullivan Mickey Owen was in 128 games in 1941 and large Cliff Dapper from Hollywood appears to be a find.

But Owens and Dapper are right-hand batters and Herman Franks, the only left-hand hitting catcher the Dodgers had after Blimp Phelps walked out last season, is headed for Boston.

But Dapper still has to prove himself and MacPhail wanted a left-hand hitting catcher. He takes no chances when they can be helped.

Speaking of catching, there's nothing about the Brooklyn club that's catching.

It's a certain flair for showmanship, nurtured by MacPhail, who is the pioneer of the type of hokum that made P. T. Barnum a whopping success and Billy Rose a rich man.

Where else would you find such crazy stunts as Fathers' Johnny Allen, which might be entitled "MacPhail's Mad Men Get Hit Man."

Here was John, no easy character, by the way, having some innocent fun in Havana while on his way to the spring training camp in Moto, in the employ of Philo MacPhail.

Of course, the whole thing was straightened out and Allen was not sent to the Brooklyn training camp. But what fascinating reading it made in the sheets, and how riotous things happen in Brooklyn!

The Brooklyn sideshow—or crude sideshowism—pervades the Dodger camp. I think it's an act, but Dodgers have more odd fellows than, say, the colorless Senators. Take Curt Davis, for instance, a baseball magnate.

Curt is an artist. He knows how to exploit his players.

Under Leroy MacPhail's guidance, the Brooklyn publicity mechanism

Pick Director Of Land Army

Mrs. Joseph G. Pero Is Selected to Secure Help for Farmers Here

Mrs. Joseph G. Pero of Oakland street has been named local director of the State Land Army it was announced today. The appointment was made by Mrs. Joseph Alsop of Avon, State Land Army Director.

Mrs. Pero accepted the appointment and has named a committee to assist her composed of Miss Marion Tinker, Mrs. Ernest Kritzmacher, Mrs. Frank V. Williams and Joseph Pero.

Mrs. Pero stated today that Mrs. Charles S. House, chairman of the Volunteer Service Bureau, has expressed cooperation in the plan to secure additional farm help in the emergency and registrations for the Land Army will be received at the Volunteer Service Bureau in the Municipal building and in the YMCA.

To Raise Emergency Force

Superintendent of Schools Arthur H. Illing will work with the committee in the local schools on assembling an emergency force to assist local farmers. Fruit growers and berry growers in the planting and harvesting of the season's crops, Mrs. Pero stated.

Mrs. Pero stated today that she would add more members to her local committee as the need arises.

The work of the State Land Army is designated to register labor for farm help to expand production to save the season's crops, Mrs. Pero stated.

Part Time Work

Women, boys and girls and men are needed for regular farm work. They may register for regular farm jobs or for parttime work throughout the summer, she stated. They may even register for short periods of work, such as a week or two, or even for a few hours on certain days.

Men and women who will be willing to work on farms, Mrs. Pero stated, if called in an emergency may register as a Reserve Labor Supply. These Land Minute Men and Land Minute Women will be called only if their help is needed to save the crops.

Strawberry Crop Saved

During 1941 the strawberry crop was salvaged by 500 men and women enlisted for the emergency for a few days. To have an emergency organization set up for a possible emergency, to save this season's crops of berries, fruit and other farm produce, may save many crops that would be otherwise wasted. And this is no time to waste anything, Mrs. Pero stated.

All registrations, either for regular farm jobs or for emergency work, will be on cards of the United States Employment Service. Boys and girls will register through their schools or colleges, probably about April 1. Men and women will register in their communities at the Volunteer Service Bureaus. Business men and women who will give their time after working hours will register with the same agencies.

Paid Regular Wages

Volunteers who work in Connecticut Land Army will be paid, Mrs. Pero states. The pay will be either by the month, if it is a permanent summer job, and wages and board may be given by the farmer, or by the day, or by the hour, or piece work. The volunteers will be paid regular farm wages according to their ability.

Great emphasis has been placed on using local labor for local farms in order to save transportation. The units of boys and girls will be under supervision and some girls, boys or women may be housed directly with the farmers. Living conditions also will be supervised.

Bicycle Racks Again in Style

Local Store Asks Permission to Erect Them On the Main Street.

Application for the construction of three individual bicycle racks, each to house six bicycles, to be constructed in front of the House & Hale Building was made last night to the Board of Selectmen by the J. W. Hale Company.

This request was made by members of the firm due to current dangers to plate glass in the store fronts seen in recent parking of an increasing number of wheels. The firm asks that the three bicycle racks be placed at the curb fronting the store to obviate the dangers noted.

Ample Room There

Herbert B. House, declared that the frontage on Main street in 120 feet with a depth of 15 feet from the building line to the edge of the curb, ample room for three racks. Each rack, he said, would occupy three square feet sidewalk space.

Parking of bicycles against the building has become a hazard, it was stated, endangering the plate glass of the show windows and interfering with pedestrian traffic.

Layouts Approved

Layouts for a new subdivision in the northwest part of the town, formerly owned by E. J. Holl and presented to the Board last night by Attorney George C. Lessner for George Griffin, builder, were approved by the Selectmen with the provision that all streets in the tract would be brought to grade. The new subdivision will add 120 moderate priced homes to the town's growing residential districts, all under FHA financing. The homes will cost approximately $4,500 each.

The Selectmen approved an extension of Pine Acres Terrace developed by the Manchester Corporation. Sixty additional houses will be constructed west of the present tract to total 240 in the group.

Bills totaling $12,132 were approved and ordered paid. Selectman Harold Symington acted as secretary of the board in the absence of Secretary S. Raymond Smith who is ill.

The Selectmen adjourned last night's meeting to tonight when the surprise blackout occurred.

Story of MacArthur's Hazardous Trip Told

General's Long Fight For Recognition of Motor Torpedo Boats Seen Vindicated.

By C. Yates McDaniel

U. S. Army Headquarters, Australia, March 24.—(AP)—The full story of Gen. Douglas MacArthur's hazardous voyage from the Philippines was told today by the supreme commander's spokesman, who emphasized that MacArthur did not escape from Bataan but "came through to a greater task" in compliance with a presidential order.

Col. Legrand Diller told newspapermen that MacArthur's fighting race against time, darkness and Japanese warplanes and warships was vindication for the general's long fight for recognition of motor torpedo boats.

Urged to Use Submarine

Some advisers, Diller said, urged

Captain Bulkeley

MacArthur to use a submarine to make his way to Australia but the general and United States Navy Capt. John D. Bulkeley, commander of six "PT" boats which rescued the Philippines shortly before the war, pinned their faith on the speedy craft.

Strong opposition was based on fear that the attempt was too desperate.

This was Diller's story:

The sun dipped into the China sea out past Corregidor on March 11 when, in the deeping darkness, the forms of torpedo boats moved slowly through the minefields toward the entrance of Manila Bay.

Bulkeley, who had won the Distinguished Service Cross for his work in the Philippines—the sinking of a 5,000-ton Japanese ship—was at the wheel of the leading craft as the little convoy started the hazardous trip which some advisers had warned was a "fantastic venture."

But the general said, "We go with the fall of the moon. We go during the ides of March."

Signal Lights Seen

It seemed strange after living in blackouts for three months to see automatic light houses operating. Along the shore (Japanese) signal lights were seen, flashing the warning of the approach of (what were presumed to be), enemy aircraft.

The roar of the "PT" boats was confusing even to the Japanese.

Just before the departure of the MacArthur convoy we received word of the presence of enemy warships in these waters but we roared out into the night.

The boats pounded terrifically through heavy seas. The general was unable to stand on his feet. Everyone was soaked. Many of the party were violently seasick.

Separate In Darkness

The boats kept well together until early in the morning when, still before dawn, they separated one by one in the darkness. When the rendezvous was reached at an early hour of March 12, only one boat was there at the designated hour.

The other boats pressed on individually in dangerous daylight, open prey for enemy surface ships and planes.

As the general's boat approached one of the islands in the rendezvous group, another which had arrived earlier was so convinced the approaching craft was the enemy's that it cleared its deck for action and "only the merest chance identified the general's boat in time to avoid opening fire with 50-caliber guns."

One of the boats had to be abandoned to continue the voyage later.

Fin Faith On Speed Boats

At the first rendezvous, where a submarine had arrived, many urged a transfer but MacArthur and Bulkeley pinned their faith on the speed boats.

The party members, therefore, were distributed among three boats, two of which pressed on in the night of the second day while the third, a late arrival, left later.

During the second night all three boats sighted Japanese destroyers but all slipped through by altering their courses and increasing their speed, thanks to the courage and skill of the navigators.

The two leading boats reached the second rendezvous at daybreak but the third did not arrive until noon.

Wait For Planes

The party assembled inland, awaiting planes from Australia, but the planes did not come that night or the next. Every moment party members feared some information of the desperate voyage would reach the enemy, whose planes were based only a half hour's flight away.

Three nights and days were spent on the island rendezvous without enemy attacks materializing or rescue planes arriving.

Finally, word came that the planes were en route. Three were expected but only two came so it was decided to place the entire party in two planes, leaving behind baggage, arms and equipment.

With little more than the clothes they wore, the party stowed away in the two B-17s and took off about midnight of March 16.

They flew through the night but daylight still found the planes over Japanese-infested areas. Gunners and observers manned their stations, searching the skies for enemy fighters which, however, did not appear.

Land Finally at Darwin

The big bombers landed finally at Darwin, just after an air raid alarm had sounded in the northern Australian port.

A hurried transfer was made there, the party had a quick bite to eat and was off again southward.

"Few not on the voyage can realize the fortitude, stamina and determination to get through with which the general imbued the entire group," Diller said.

"Mrs. MacArthur was a splendid soldier. She stood the trip very well."

To Serve the Flag

You're in your country's service now, the flag you live for seems A symbol new, each star, each stripe with added luster gleams. And only you can know the thrill, can feel the heart and fame— For you have sworn to serve her true, and keep her folds from shame. You're in your country's service now; what better place to be? You stand with men who dare to go and fight for liberty. And honor—yes, its great to live and greater still to die. For noble are the-hearts that heed the voice of freedom's cry. You're in your country's service now, March on! The bugles blow. A nation's blessing take with you and know, where'er you go. America is you, yes, you her consecrated might. That's pledged to make the world secure for justice, peace and right.

—Private Roger A. Porter.

Deep Faith!

He's gone—he's gone—so far away, to do important work. He's young and strong and capable. I'm sure he'll never shirk. He's always been a care-free chap, so full of cheer and wits. But that will help, for those who're sad can always lean on him. He's honest; he's dependable; he'll win his comrade's trust. He wouldn't fight, except for this —to keep us free, we must. Deep faith in God permits no doubt; so, in my heart, I know The God will watch and guide his moves, wherever he may go!

Roomer—I don't think that man upstairs likes to hear Junior play his drum, but he's certainly tactful about it.

Landlady—Why?

Roomer—This afternoon he gave Junior a knife and asked him if he knew what was inside the drum.

Mother—How did you get that black eye?

Junior—I was protecting a little boy.

Mother—That's noble; who was he?

Junior—Me.

Visitor—Well, Junior, how are you getting on at school?

Junior (Aged seven)—Fine! I ain't doing as well as some of the other boys, though. I can stand on my head, but I have to put my feet against the wall.

Little Harold had just fallen down the stairs and lay on the floor, groaning. His mother rushed to him and asked:

Mother—Did you miss a step?

Little Harold—No, I hit them all.

Sue—Mother, could I marry a man who lies to me?

Mother—Sue, do you want to be an old maid?

In referring to the reported shortage of petticoats, we wonder how they can get any shorter. Others have probably wondered about that, too.

Talent Scout—I'm looking for fresh faces.

Man—Well, don't look at me. I've had this one for years.

Junior—What's repartee, Dad?

Dad— Repartee, Son, is the clever conversation a man thinks up on the way home from the party.

The only way most sailors get marooned is with lipstick.

Kind Lady—How would you like a nice chop?

Beggar— That all depends, madam. Is it lamb, pork or wood?

I never heard a tuneless bird
There may be no such thing:
But night and day these dance bands play
A tuneless noise called "Swing!"

Its a long time since we've missed an opportunity to lose money.

FUNNY BUSINESS

UNCLE EF

Here's a question on that new Wages and Hour ruling which says that the boss has to pay the employe for five minutes' time at the start and end of the day if he changes his clothes in the plant. What happens if he's a slow dresser—does he get overtime or go home naked? That ought to be a big item of concern for the boys with General McArthur, who probably haven't had their clothes off for weeks.
