Willingness Shown To Ponder Longer On India Problem

Negotiation of Compromise Solution on Independence Indicated By Both Cripps and All - India Congress Party Attitudes Today.

New Delhi, India, April 2.—(AP)—Both Sir Stafford Cripps, special British envoy to India, and the All-India Congress party indicated today a willingness to negotiate a compromise solution of the Indian independence problem. The Executive Committee of the party, India's most powerful political organization, was expected to deliver tonight its detailed rejection of a British offer of post-war dominion status in return for full war participation now under British guidance.

Drafting Counter-Proposals

But it was understood that the committee also was drafting counter-proposals to be submitted to Cripps if the British war cabinet member so desires.

By postponing his departure for home in the midst of the evident stalemate over Britain's take-it-or-leave-it offer, Cripps seemed to have left the door ajar for negotiation on counter-proposals.

Before he did this and before it became known that the Congress Party Committee was drafting a counter-plan, virtually all hope for the success of the Cripps mission had vanished.

Cripps received the Congress party's resolution of reply to the British proposal this afternoon when he was visited by Maulana Aboul Kalan Azad, party president, and Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru, past president.

The two Indian leaders stayed for an hour, and upon their departure, Cripps told reporters, "I hope there will be many more meetings between us."

Detailed in Reasons

The party's reply, approved after five days of deliberation, was reported to be detailed in reasons for the rejection.

It was understood to criticize the British proposal that direction of Indian defense remain entirely in British hands rather than Indian military men, and to question both the option which British would give certain provinces to remain outside the Indian union and the representation of the Indian principalities in the future constitution-making body.

It was possible that the text of the resolution of rejection would not be published immediately. Thus, before it is brought into the

Possibly Some Norwegian Vessels Able to Pass Nazi Blockade.

Stockholm, April 2.—(AP)—German warships blocking the Skagerrak were declared today to have battered or sunk two and possibly four of 11 British-chartered Norwegian merchant ships which risked a daring dash to England from Goteborg, Sweden, and although several others were reported turned back the possibility was held out that some might yet be at large and racing toward safety.

The merchantmen which slipped out of Goteborg in a blinding snowstorm Tuesday night ran into a blockade of Nazi warcraft which had laid in wait for them since the Germans found themselves unable to seize control of the ships through action in the Swedish courts.

Record of Fate Compiled

From the stories of fishermen and residents of the little southern towns which smoke with cannonading Tuesday night and yesterday, Swedish newspapers compiled this record of the fate of the ships:

Two of the merchantmen, the 12,255-ton whale oil ship Skytteren, and the 6,222-ton Buccaneer, were sunk by German gunfire almost as soon as they passed the three mile territorial limit outside Goteborg.

One ship went aground; one was seen burning at sea and perhaps sank; two, cut off from hope of escape, turned back into a Swedish port yesterday afternoon. At least two more were said to be returning, perhaps damaged.

Seeing for Open Sea

At least two large cargo vessels were given at least a fighting chance of breaking through. Fishermen said they were last seen yesterday, undamaged and racing for the open sea.

A Vichy report reaching London said gunfire off the Swedish coast began about 2 or 3 a. m. yesterday and lasted to about noon. It

Idle in Auto Field to Aid Army Repair

Salesmen, Mechanics, Dealers Going to Get Chance to Join to Do Jobs Best Known.

Denver, April 2.—(AP)—Out-of-work auto salesmen, idle motor mechanics and war-stymied car dealers are going to get a chance to join the Army and work shoulder-to-shoulder at the job they know best—repair and maintenance of motorized equipment.

At the request of the Army Ordnance Department, the National Auto Dealers' Association is organizing two ordnance regiments to be composed mainly of auto industry workers whose jobs vanished when the industry quit making family sedans and began turning out battle-wagons.

The 301st Ordnance regiment will be recruited in the NADA's western region, one battalion each from the Chicago, San Francisco and Denver areas and another battalion from the region at large. The 302nd regiment will be drawn from the association's eastern region, with battalions from the New York, Atlanta and Dallas areas and one from the region at large.

Inspector Says Police Took Him for Quizzing

Brought to Attorney General's Office; Not Allowed to Telephone His House on Matter.

Hartford, April 2.—(AP)—A Highway Department inspector testified today at the removal hearing of State Highway Commissioner William J. Cox that on two occasions in January he was taken off the job by a state policeman without warning, at the site of two Ledyard bridges, and brought to the attorney general's office. The inspector, Roland D. Brown, said under cross-examination by Defense Attorney Joseph Scully that 'the first time the policeman took charge of him was Jan. 23 when he was not allowed to telephone his house or to tell his superiors that he was going.

No Warrant Shown

Brown said that he believed himself under arrest, although no warrant was shown him.

He first learned where he was going, Brown testified, when he reached the Capitol grounds. Three or four hours later the same thing happened, he said, and on the latter occasion, he was shown a graph of "apparent idle time for equipment."

Asked by counsel if he was told who prepared the graph, Brown replied that he understood that it had been drawn by Mr. Upman (Frank Upman, Jr., now acting highway commissioner). Upman, before Cox's suspension, was deputy highway commissioner, hav-

Hillman Tells Value of NYA

Says 'Appreciable Part Of Trained Manpower' Furnished by Agency.

Washington, April 2.—(AP)—Sidney Hillman, labor director of the War Production board, told the Senate Labor Committee today that the National Youth Administration had furnished "an appreciable part of our trained manpower for war work and was a going concern" that should not be abandoned.

"The manpower training program cannot afford the delay which will result if we slow down or stop one of our training agencies and transfer the important load it carries to another organization," he said.

Opposes McKellar Bill

Hillman, testifying against the McKellar bill to abolish the NYA and the Civilian Conservation Corps, said 17,720 NYA-trained workers had gone into private industry last month alone, most of them into war plants.

In a prepared statement, the former union leader said 8,600,000 more war workers would be needed this year to augment the present 7,500,000.

Asserting the NYA provides training in areas where there are no vocational school systems, Hillman said:

"If the NYA goes, the danger is that in some states training of young people for war work will be

British Bomb German And French Factories

Communications Also Hit in Far - Ranging Raids; 15 Bombers Missing; Aid to Russia

London, April 2.—(AP)—The British Air Force bombed industrial objectives and communications in west and northwest Germany and the environs of Paris last night in far-ranging raids from which 15 bombers are missing, the Air Ministry said today. An authoritative British interpretation saw these attacks as new blows in the Battle for Russia, since they were directed primarily against railway lines which carry munitions from the Ruhr to the eastern front and against a truck-making factory eight miles outside Paris.

Docks and Shipping Hit

"In occupied territory," the Air Ministry said, "bombing attacks were made on the Matford (truck) Works at Poissy (a suburb of Paris) and on the docks and shipping at Le Havre.

"Mines were laid in enemy waters."

Fighter command aircraft attacked objectives in Belgium and northern France and during these thrusts an enemy bomber was destroyed, the ministry reported.

(The Ford Motor Company has an interest in the Matford works, but at Ford headquarters in Detroit it was said there had been no contact with the plant in the Paris suburbs since the conquest of France.

(The Matford concern was formed about 10 years ago. Ford interests combining with the Matbis company, a French Alsatian

Planning Poor Senate Probe Group Finds

Committee Recommends War Production Board Draft Aircraft Executive to Push Drive.

Washington, April 2.—(AP)—Criticizing the nation's armed forces for a "poor job of over-all planning," the Senate Defense Investigating Committee recommended today that the War Production Board draft a trained aircraft executive to direct a drive to break the bottlenecks which are "holding up peak production" in the war plane program.

Summarizing a subcommittee's visit to the west coast, the committee reported that plane assembly lines in big plants were not running to capacity because of recurring shortage of some vital parts being produced by subcontractors.

"A poor job of over-all planning, from aluminum ingots to finished aircraft, by the armed services and the old OPM (Office of Production Management) must be blamed for the present situation," the committee said in its report. "The usual red tape and delays in making contracts also were partly responsible."

The committee recommended that the WPB set up a section charged with over-all planning for aircraft production, headed by a trained production executive drafted from the industry.

"The subcommittee had been

Heebie-Jeebies Grow More On Water Than Whiskey

Boston, April 2.—(AP)—It is better to drink whiskey than water if you want to avoid the kind of heebie-jeebies which doctors call peripheral neuritis.

This was shown in a report today to the Federation of American Societies for Experimental Biology by J. V. Lowry, W. H. Sebrell, F. S. Daft and L. L. Ashburn of the National Institute of Health, Bethesda, Md.

These heebie-jeebies, which run to anything from wobbly eyes to pink elephants, afflict chronic drinkers. Until a few years ago these woes were attributed to strong drink. Then doctors discovered that the cause was not alcohol but the fact that the hard drinkers didn't eat enough, especially not enough vitamin B-1. On a quart of whiskey a day they were cured simply by making them eat.

Diet Given to Rats

Now comes the pay-off. The National Health Institute doctors gave the heebie-jeby diet to rats. Some of the animals were given water to drink with this deficient diet, some alcohol and some whiskey.

The animals all got the heebie-jeeby condition. But without exception the rats drinking only water got it earlier than their brothers drank either whiskey or alcohol.

The rat state of seeing pink could be prevented, no matter what they drank, by giving them vitamin B-1.

Over-60 Endurance Tested

Now that Uncle Sam is registering men over 60 for work work, Prof. Percy M. Dawson, University of Wisconsin, famous for his lifelong habits of taking plenty of exercise, comes through with a study showing about how much hard work can be expected of the hardier lot in the over-60 class.

As measured on a 68-year-old man who has kept fit, this is better than 70 per cent of the physical work he could stand at 30, the best age for endurance. This man, accustomed to some exercise, was able repeatedly to work himself to physical exhaustion and yet come back with no ill effects. He could not work as fast, as measured by pedalling a bicycle, at which he was 12 per cent slower than at 30.

Collaborating in the report with Professor Dawson was F. A. Hellebrandt of the University of Wisconsin.

Leningrad Front Reds Annihilate 3,000 Nazis

24 German Planes Destroyed Against Loss Of 13 Russian Craft; Differences Dropped.

Moscow, April 2.—(AP)—The Soviet government said today Leningrad front troops had effected a number of successful operations in the last two days, annihilating about 3,000 German officers and soldiers. Twenty-four German planes were reported to have been destroyed Tuesday, against a loss of 13 Russian planes. (Recent differences among Axis junior partners in the Balkans were apparently submerged again in the interest of Adolf Hitler's spring military operations.)

Bulgaria Purging Army

(Although traditionally a friend of Russia, Bulgaria was reported by Bern sources to be purging her Army of hundreds of officers with Soviet sympathies through transfers and arrests. Axis accounts say King Boris has pledged some 200,000 Bulgarian troops for the eastern front.

Foreign Minister Mihail Antonescu of neighboring Rumania declared his nation intends to carry on the war against Russia to the end because "we are fighting for a new state and a new human being." Antonescu described the statement as an answer to foreign reports that Rumania wished to withdraw her soldiers.)

Two Loyalties Charge Made

Standard Oil Official Disputes Contention On Synthetic Rubber.

Washington, April 2.—(AP)—Senator O'Mahoney (D-Wyo) contended today that cartel arrangements it had with the German dye trust had caused the Standard Oil Co. (New Jersey) to be "bound by two loyalties," but a company official disputed the contention.

These relations, protested Vice President F. A. Howard of the company, did not produce any "conflict of loyalty with the United States."

Howard was on the witness stand of the Senate Defense Investigating Committee when the discussion arose.

O'Mahoney read a letter written by the manager of The Standard Oil Development Company on Jan. 20, 1941, saying that under 1939 agreements with I. G. Farben it would be necessary to refer Japanese and South American synthetic rubber customers to the German concern.

Not Owner Of Patents

Howard said this was due to the "simple fact that we did not own the patents in the countries in question, and I. G. did own them."

Standard, he said, could have been sued by I. G. Farben if it attempted to sell products covered by the patents in South America.

O'Mahoney declared that the

Skirmishes Reported On Bataan Peninsula; Expect Sea Assaults

Nipponese, Halted in Attempted Drive Overland in New Guinea By Torrential Rains, May Soon Launch Sea-Borne Attack on Port Moresby; Ship Movements Give Hint.

Melbourne, Australia, April 2.—(AP)—The Japanese, halted in their attempted overland drive in New Guinea by torrential rains and robbed temporarily of air superiority by the rising Allied strength, soon may launch a sea-borne attack on Port Moresby, it was predicted today. The likelihood of such a move against the key position on New Guinea's south coast, which lies within 300 miles of the Australian continent, is "suggested by recent movements of enemy ships, which are constantly being attacked at Lae and Salamaua by the Allied Air Forces," said The Sydney Sun.

Air Supremacy Not Permanent

At the same time, the newspaper reported, the Japanese are obtaining "aerial reinforcements which must be described as considerable.'" Because of this, the Sun declared, "the air supremacy we have gained may not be permanent and at most will dislocate the Japanese plans only temporarily."

The Japanese kept up their air attacks, giving Darwin its 11th raid of the war this afternoon.

A brief communique on this, the only action reported from the Anzac war zone during the day, said the raid was carried out by seven bombers, escorted by fighters, but that there was no damage or casualties.

(The BBC, quoting a message from Sydney, reported that United States and Australian planes have "destroyed or crippled 96 Japanese planes with a loss of 12 of their own" since March 10, and added that the crews of five of the Allied aircraft were saved. The Australian radio broadcast a report from Darwin that the red circle in the insignia of U. S. planes is being changed to white to avoid any possible confusion with the solid red emblem of Japan.

(Both broadcasts were heard in New York by CBS.)

Named Corps Commander

The reorganization of the Australian Army rapidly being keyed to a peak war pitch, was virtually completed today with the appointment of Lieut. Gen. Henry Gordon Bennett as a corps commander and the assignment of San Francisco, April 2.—(AP)—America must send help to its heroic soldiers in the Philippines, Mrs. Francis B. Sayre, first woman to return from Corregidor since the Japanese struck, declared today.

"The job of winning this war is ours," said the wife of the U. S. high commissioner to the Philippines. Her husband preceded her to the United States and now is in Washington.

"The men over there in the Philippines, the men on Corregidor, on Bataan, have their eyes on the sea and the sky, looking for help that is coming," she related in an interview.

Japs' Landing At Akyab New Burma Threat

Brings War Within 100 Miles of Indian Frontier; Not Minimized By London Observers.

London, April 2.—(AP)—A Chinese spokesman in Chungking said today that Japanese troops, covered by a force of cruisers and destroyers, had landed at the chief west Burma port of Akyab, bringing the war within 100 miles of the Indian frontier and posing a new flanking threat to the main British lines guarding the central Burma oil fields.

Japanese Artillery and Dive Bombers Shell And Bomb Defenders' Positions But No General Action Follows Yesterday's Battle; Intermittent Air Attacks on Harbor Made.

Washington, April 2.—(AP)—The War Department reported sharp skirmishes on the Philippines' Bataan peninsula today in the wake of the latest large scale Japanese attack on the American-Filipino defenders there. Enemy artillery and dive bombers shelled and bombed the defenders' positions but no general action followed yesterday's battle, a communique said.

Forced to Fly High

Meanwhile intermittent air attacks continued around the clock on the Manila bay harbor defenses, but the War Department said the Japanese bombers were forced to fly at such altitudes their bombing was ineffective. At the same time the big guns of Fort Mills on Corregidor island engaged in a duel with Japanese batteries on the south shore of the bay.

The communique said neither bombing nor shelling inflicted damage on the forts.

(Japanese broadcasts in Tokyo quoted imperial headquarters today as claiming that anti-aircraft batteries, an airfield, barracks and other military establishments on Corregidor had been damaged beyond repair by repeated Japanese Naval air attacks between March 24 and 31.)

Raid Japanese Bases

American-Filipino commando troops have raided two Japanese bases on the southern Philippine island of Mindanao, and military observers predicted today that the invaders would be attacked frequently by the thousands of native fighters hidden in teak and ebony forests of the island.

One raid was on the hamlet of Digos, 23 miles south of the main Japanese base at Davao. A small force of U. S. troops burned 22 warehouses of food, gasoline and ammunition, destroyed military equipment, and escaped to the forest of Cotobato, some 10 miles to the west, without losing a man.

The supplies were believed to be part of the stores the Japanese are accumulating for the drive against New Guinea and Australia, and such raids may upset the enemy's timetable. Units engaged were

Norwegian Tanker Sunk

Gloucester, N. J., April 2.—(AP)—Battered and set afire by torpedoes from an enemy submarine, a medium-sized Norwegian motor tanker sank under a hail of shells off the Atlantic coast early on the morning of March 21, the Fourth Naval District announced today. Eight of the crew of 37, including most of the ship's officers, are missing and believed dead. The 29 survivors were picked up by a Portuguese freighter after spending about seven and one-half hours in two lifeboats and were brought here March 31.

quoted Swedish fishermen as saying they saw lifeboats filled with survivors from sunken ships.)

The nearest landfall across the North sea would be Aberdeen, about 500 miles from Goteborg, and the Swedish coast would be in constant danger of discovery by patrolling German air and Naval forces virtually until they were berthed in the Scottish port.

Skagerrak Perilous Passage

Even before reaching the open sea for the final, 300-mile dash to join Britain's merchant marine, they would have to thread their way through the mined and closely patrolled Skagerrak. It separates the German-held coasts of Norway and Denmark, a perilous passage of about 200 miles from Goteborg, scene of the 1916 Battle of Jutland from northernmost Denmark.

The only names reported were those of the two ships said to have been sunk. They were the 12,358-ton Bahamas oil tanker, the Skytteren and the 6,222-ton Buccaneer, both registered at Oslo.

No Confirmation of Story

A British source in London said there was no confirmation of an attempt by the U ships to run the Nazi blockade. It was pointed out, however, that the admiralty holds merchant ship movements in strict silence which it would be unlikely to break unless such an exploit were announced later in a communique.

The ten Norwegian ships were freed from an order of arrest by a Swedish Supreme Court decision March 17.

The ships, laid up in Goteborg, were requisitioned by the Norwegian government before its flight to England and later were chartered by British maritime interests. The court ruled that the charters were legal and the ships —valued at about $25,000,000—were entitled to clearance at any time.

The Germans had been attempting to get control of the ships.

Going to Continue Hunt

Fort Leavenworth, Kas.—(AP)—The number of legs on his quarry is the only distinction Pvt. Darrel E. Brady can see between Army life and his civilian job. A hunter of predatory animals for the Department of the Interior before he was inducted, Brady opined: "I used to hunt wolves. I am going to continue the hunt, but for another species."

Capt. Jenney Given Watch

Members of the State Guard Unit Present Beautiful Gift.

Members of Company G, State Guard unit located in Manchester, presented to Captain John L. Jenney a beautiful wrist watch last night at the regular weekly drill. Former members of the unit also contributed and were present when the gift was handed to Captain Jenney, who will leave shortly for regular army service.

His Successor

Ever since the organization of the local State Guard unit Captain Jenney has been in command of Company G. At various times during the past seven months the company has been complimented on its excellent appearance and conduct. It could not be learned last night who would assume command when Captain Jenney departs but it is understood that Frank Schiebel, who recently took the examinations for a commission, would be given orders to take over.

Following the drill and presentation last night, the members held a social hour at the American Legion home on Leonard street where refreshments were served.

business." To join, a man must first enlist in the Army.

The NADA is wasting time, either. Recruiting offices are being established in all the key cities, with auto dealers aiding in the recruiting.

"This thing has to be done fast because the 301st regiment has to be on hand in South Carolina to start training May 1," Goodin said.

He said recruits "are offered a chance to pitch in together, working in shop teams with men they've known and worked with for years.

Flitted For Work

"They'll be doing the kind of work for which their civilian training has fitted them—working on American automobiles, equipment, engines, carburetors, ignition systems, generators and gear assemblies.

"We hope these two regiments will be the first of many to come. This idea must succeed because there isn't time to gather and train large groups of motor specialists in roundabout ways.

"I feel it will succeed because it's an American natural."

More Are Liable For State Taxes

Hartford, April 2.—It is expected that several hundred additional Connecticut employers will become subject to the State Unemployment Compensation law this week as a result of new legislation which became effective at the beginning of the year. Under the terms of the new law, concerns which employ four or more persons for a period of any 13 weeks during the year will have to pay Unemployment Compensation taxes.

Previously, only employers of five or more persons were subject to the tax. It is now 13 weeks since the law became effective and questionnaires are, therefore, being mailed to approximately 1,500 employers who, it is felt, might be subject to the tax.

Unemployment Compensation officials state that it is impossible to know precisely at this time the names of all liable employers, and urge all employers of four or more persons who are not now paying unemployment taxes to obtain a questionnaire by writing to the Unemployment Compensation Department, 285 Broad St., Hartford.

Will Have Snug Fox Hole

Seattle—(AP)—If Mrs. O. B. Ripley's bundle for Bataan arrives, one private is going to have a snug fox hole. A letter dated Feb. 10 from her son, Jay Ripley, a mechanic in a tank battalion in the Philippines, contained this request: "Will you send me some cigarettes and razor blades? Also send some chocolate candy bars, stationery and pencils."

During 1938, 488 hunting accidents, with 78 fatalities, occurred in Pennsylvania.

Girl Scout Notes

Troop 4

Troop 4 began its meeting Monday at 2:45 o'clock. Patrol corners were held and we discussed opening a library for the benefit of the girls. We decided that starting next Monday a troop library would be opened with Jean Wiley as librarian.

A working period was held and many Scouts passed tests.

The girls marched into a horseshoe formation and an investiture ceremony was held.

Joan Stratton, Ruth McKenney, and Jean Bidwell were welcomed into our troop by Mary Ann Pazianos, who lit candles representing our steady flame of devotion to our Scout standards.

Jean Wiley, Troop 4.

Troop 5

A scavenger hunt was enjoyed by the Girl Scouts of Troop 11 recently. The winning team received a prize of a box of lollypops. On the winning team were the following girls:

Betty Pagani, leader; Florence Pagani Jean Carlson, Patricia Murphy, Phyllis Flaherty and Barbara Fortin.

Refreshments were served and the meeting closed with games and then taps.

cause they know we will not let them down."

Mrs. Sayre, her 15-year-old son, William Graves, and staff members of the commission arrived by transport after an uneventful voyage whose circuitous route remained a Navy secret.

Mrs. Sayre, tall, brown-haired and smiling, described the stout island fortress of Corregidor as a man's land, where women soon learned to shift for themselves.

She was one of less than a dozen women who fled from Manila to Corregidor. Another was Mrs. Douglas MacArthur.

Even Home-Made Cuffs Are Barred

Washington, April 2—(AP)—Even home-made cuffs on trousers are out, the War Production Board cautioned today.

Under orders effective yesterday persons are prohibited from buying suits or trousers at retail, having them delivered with the trousers unfinished, and having cuffs put on them at home or by a local tailor.

WPB called attention to a paragraph in the cloth-saving order which reads:

"No person shall finish a pair of trousers made of wool cloth with cuffs or cause such to be finished with cuffs by others for his account."

Three Arrests Made in Town

Max York, 19, of 174 Brussels avenue, Wethersfield was arrested by Sergeant John McGlinn at 1:30 this morning for a road rule violation. The infraction occurred on Main street in front of the Silk City Diner.

Arrested also were Charles H. Thompson, of 139 Williams avenue, Glastonbury for making a U-turn on Main street in a restricted zone and Leo Lareau, 63, employed on the Olcott estate as a laborer, for drunkness.

There are fewer accidental traffic deaths in the spring than in any other season of the year, statistics reveal.

told," the report commented, "that the WPB still does not have a single notch activated production man in its organization."

Should Break Bottlenecks

The report recommended also that "instead of wasting its energies on a generalized plea for 'all out production,' which has confused management, labor and the public, the WPB concentrate its efforts on breaking those bottlenecks which are, in the aircraft industry to the subcommittee's certain knowledge and probably in other fields, really holding up peak production."

Reviewing the production of aluminum, the committee said that evidence gathered by its subcommittee "indicated there is still something seriously wrong in the production program of the War Production Board, successor to the old OPM section, which failed miserably to anticipate and prepare for the greatly increased demand for these metals."

"Truly Amazing" Progress

The committee said that its investigation of ship building work had disclosed "truly amazing" progress in meeting needs. It commented also that labor relations in the industry generally were "excellent."

The committee found that employes in most west coast plants were working 48 hours a week, adding that "complaints of several executives indicated that the overtime pay for the 8 hours over 40 was figured as part of weekly earnings and that if it were eliminated, it would be necessary to increase hourly rate to provide approximately the same weekly earnings."

It found only one employer, the committee said, who complained of "slow downs" or who said that modification of the 40-hour week might lead to greater production. It said that employers generally there were neither casualties nor damage.)

The high command said two British planes had been destroyed in Libyan operations and in the Cirenaica front there were clashes on patrols and normal air activity."

The thrust at Gibraltar was described thus:

Fires And Explosions Seen

"Fires and explosions were observed in the region of the fortress, where military installations were repeatedly hit in spite of immediate intervention by British fighters, which lost one plane.

"Our air formations were able to complete their tasks and to return to their bases without loss."

Couple Honored At Shower Party

Miss Evelyn Orr and her fiance, Lennart Torstenson, were honored with a party last night at the Highland Park Community club. Mr. and Mrs. Herbert A. Bengtson were host and hostess for the affair, being uncle and aunt of the bride-elect. Seventy relatives and friends from this town, Hartford, East West Hartford attended. The guests of honor had a gay and busy time opening the numerous packages containing electrical appliances, glassware, silver, pottery, linen and other choice gifts.

The entire party was seated at tastefully decorated tables. Yellow, green and pink paper and candles with spring flowers were used and a salad luncheon was served. The head table was reserved for Miss Orr and Mr. Torstenson and their parents. The centerpiece was a beautifully decorated wedding cake with miniature bride and bridegroom. The cake was baked by Mrs. Catherine Keish of Highland Park.

The remainder of the evening was devoted to games and dancing. The marriage will take place on April 11 at 3 o'clock at Emanuel Lutheran church.

Sees Pending Bill Aiding War Effort

Washington, April 2—(AP)—Senator Murray (D., Mont. said today that pending small business loan program, together with the power given to the RFC, Army, Navy and the Maritime Commission to make advances to business, would do "a substantial job in the war production effort."

Murray's measure, providing for loans aggregating $100,000,000 and establishing the smaller plants corporation to "link up small industrial enterprises" for the war effort, passed the Senate yesterday without a dissenting vote and was sent on to the House.

Murray said it may be necessary later on to expect more funds, "but the $100,000,000 is enough for a trial and it will not interfere with the RFC loans."

Tuberculosis Bars Public

Salt Lake City, April 2—(AP)—The public will be barred from the famed Latter Day Saints church tabernacle for the duration of the war. Daily noon-day recitals on the massive organ will be continued, but the audience will hear the programs from public address system in the assembly hall, another structure on Temple square.

Young Lieutenant Tells How He Sank Jap Sub

Gives All the Credit to His Crew, However and Wonders Why He Was Praised for His Job.

By Wendell Webb

Honolulu, April 2—(AP) — The sinking of a Japanese submarine by a U. S. Army bomber, skippered by a youth who battled through the December holocaust in his bedroom slippers, came to light today as the result of a commendation by Secretary of the Navy Knox.

The skipper was First Lieutenant James V. Edmundson, 26, of Santa Monica, Calif., former football star at Santa Monica Junior college, an eager, rugged youth who "would do almost anything to get to Australia or anywhere else to fight."

He was decorated with the Order of the Purple Heart today, but not for his feat in the air. It was because he was knocked down by a bomb fragment Dec. 7 and got up again to do what he could to stem the Japanese attack. He still carries the scar on his forehead.

Lieut. Edmundson has flown more than 40,000 miles on Hawaiian dawn patrol, but the highlight of his career came when he fired a submarine periscope just breaking the water off the Island of Oahu a few weeks ago.

Gives Crew Credit

"Yes, I saw it, but it was my crew that got it," he declared, modestly. "They really sank it."

He interrupted his conversation frequently to such phrases as "Give at plane-towed targets high over Wheeler Field. The interview took place in the shade of a hangar. We sat in a couple of steel chairs, with the planes roaring and drowning the conversation time and again.

"We were flying along in pretty heavy weather. Lieut. Edmundson continued. "All of a sudden I happened to see the periscope just breaking the water. And within 40 seconds my crew had flashed word to our base, the bomb doors were opened, the bombs sights adjusted, and we had dropped two bombs right at the stern of the submarine."

"The decks were barely awash when the first two bombs were dropped. The navigator and the gunner told me some big metal pieces flew up astern when they hit. That's probably why he did not submerge right away. He couldn't.

"Anyway, we made another turn and the bombardier dropped three more bombs that practically blanketed him, and on the third time around a bomb hit him right on top. He just blew up and disintegrated, apparently, and all we could see was a great circle of white foam of sulphuric acid from his batteries. The concussion even shook our plane a thousand feet above. A few minutes later all there was to see was a big oil slick, and after circling awhile, we went home."

And that's the story of the dawn patrol flight which brought medals and which was the reason Secretary Knox said yesterday in Washington that Edmundson should be cited for "keen observation, flying skill and successful attack with bombs."

Struck by Fragment

Bombs weren't anything new to Lieut. Edmundson. He was on the receiving end of them Dec. 7. Fragments went right through the house where he lived with his wife, the former Lee Turner, who now is with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lomax Turner of Long Beach, Calif.

He was stationed at Hickam Field then, and saw his buddies struck down right and left.

Edmundson was born in Hollywood June 13, 1915. He formerly worked as a salesman, window trimmer and stock clerk, attended University of California at Los Angeles, then it was timekeeper at the Douglas Aircraft plant in Los Angeles.

Interested in Flying

"I saw all those planes coming out and knew someone would have to fly them," he recalled, "so I wrote to the War Department asking where the schools were."

In 1937 he went to Randolph and Kelly Fields in Texas and later had a tour of duty at Lowry Field in Denver. He came to Hawaii in 1939. He was married here Thanksgiving day, 1940.

Of the Dec. 7 attack by the Japanese, he recalled:

"I heard planes, and looked out the window, to see the enemy flying toward Pearl Harbor. I got on what clothes I could and went out. I certainly wore out those bedroom slippers before I got home four nights later."

Edmundson insisted his crew was more to be credited than he for the destruction of the Japanese submarine off Oahu.

They were:

Co-Pilot Second Lieut. Arnold Johnson (address unavailable); Bombardier Master Sergeant Joe Wilderman of Oklahoma City; Navigator Second Lieut. Edwin Lanigan of Boston; Engineer Technical Sergeant Frank Bowen of San Antonio, Tex.; Radio Operator Sergeant E. P. Smith of Columbus, Ga.; Assistant Radio Operator Corporal Russell Hultgren of Lavarne, Calif.; Gunner Staff Sergeant Leonard Taliaferro of Atlanta, Ga.

Lieut. Edmundson never approached being boastful, but he commented "I'll bet everyone of that plane would like a good crack at something in the air."

Lew Ayres Starts Working in Camp

Wyeth, Ore., April 2—(AP)—Work in the conservation camps in this country started today for Hollywood's Lew Ayres, who chose life in a conscientious objectors' camp rather than enter military service.

Ayres, who appeared in the picture star of "All Quiet on the Western Front" and the "Dr. Kildare" series, turned in last night with some 50 dormitory mates who came from farm work benches and office jobs.

He will work until the end of the war Ayres will arise at 6 a.m. and leave for the woods at 7:30 to new trails, make clearings and if need be—fight forest fires.

He has another assignment that of first aid, which he shares with another enrollee.

His work day will end at 5 p.m. and his light must be out by 10 p.m. Three times a week he will be permitted to leave camp for walks in the woods.

Cole Is Retired At Higher Rank

Hartford, April 2—(AP)—Col. George E. Cole, commander of the 118th Quartermaster regiment, has been retired from the Connecticut National Guard with the rank of brigadier general, closing a military career spanning almost 40 years.

Cole's retirement was announced yesterday by the adjutant general, Brig. Gen. Reginald B. DeLacour, who said the officer would continue his work in the quartermaster general's department.

Cole, who was quartermaster general of the 43d (New England) Division until relieved from duty because of physical disability a month ago, enlisted in the guard with the old Troop A in New Haven July 3, 1902. He is the son of the late George M. Cole, former Connecticut adjutant general.

Blind Man Captured Burglar

Salt Lake City, April 2—(AP)—Police today credited a 55-year-old blind man with the capture of a burglar. Herman Reinhard told police he sensed someone in his room when he returned home. Quickly he backed away, locked the door and called for help. A 34-year-old man was arrested and charged with unlawful entry.

Blamey Should Prove Good MacArthur Aide

Anzac Has Fought Lot Of Battles in Many Lands; Helped to Direct 1918 Offensive.

By Don Whitehead

New York, April 2 — (Wide World)—It was just about inevitable that "Old Tom" Blamey should team up with General MacArthur to lay the groundwork for the United Nations' offensive in the Southwest Pacific.

It's fought a lot of battles in many lands, this chunky, bullet-headed Anzac who has been placed in command of the Australian and American ground forces under MacArthur.

He's smelled the smoke of battle in front-line trenches; he helped plan and direct the big Allied offensive that broke the Hindenburg line in 1918; he tried to stem the Nazi tide in Greece—and Crete with pitifully outnumbered troops.

Is Biggest Campaign

Now this 56-year-old soldier, Lieut. Gen. Sir Thomas Blamey, is in the biggest campaign of his long military career—against an enemy threatening invasion of his homeland.

It's a tough job they've given this one time schoolteacher. Ask then Australians will tell you that Tom Blamey is a tough nut, a man who doesn't direct a battle from the textbooks but from experience gained on the firing line.

Returning from the Middle East last fall, where he had fought under Sir Archibald Wavell's right hand man, Blamey told his countrymen of the story of Greece and Crete Arthur's flair for phrasemaking.

"And so I came home to Australia and from Olympus, and from the icy winds that swept down from the mountains, our soldiers retreated, fighting steadily rearguard actions.

"Hard pressed at Pencos, pressed at Turnavos and Demakos and finally out to the position at Thermopylae. Two divisions—one Australian and one New Zealand, against five to six German armored divisions, armored and mountain divisions, motorized divisions and infantry.

"The task was too much, and it was decided to withdraw the troops.

Instigates Countrymen

Blamey castigated his countrymen for their complacency with typical disdain for his own personal popularity:

"To come from that atmosphere and its scenes back to Australia gives one the most astonishing feeling of helplessness. You are like . . . a lot of gazelles graazing in a dell on the edge of a jungle, while the beasts of prey are working up toward you, apparently unseen, unnoticed. And it is the law of the jungle that they spring upon you, fiercelee."

Blamey's beasts of prey have sprung and it's Old Tom's job to help keep them at bay until the Allies can strike back toward Tokyo.

Not Armchair General

But none can say Blamey is an armchair general. He was with Australian troops in the First World War when they faced the Turks on the shell-pocked Gallipoli peninsula from which an Allied Army was withdrawn after eight months of fighting.

Blamey helped direct that gigantic withdrawal, carried out without the loss of a single man.

His intelligence work was not done in the safety of a tent behind the lines but often in dangerous night patrols.

Promotion followed quickly for Blamey. Superiors admired his energy, coolness and technical skill. Later he became the right hand man of Gen. Sir John Monash with a rank of brigadier general.

There two collaborated on the great offensive of 1918, and Sir John said of Blamey:

"Some day the orders which he drafted . . . will become a model for staff colleges and schools for military instruction. They were accurate, lucid in language, perfect in detail and always an exact interpretation of my intention."

And the orders did become a model for staff training in Camberley, England.

In that great offensive, Blamey's job was to bring no less than 44 battalions into positions under cover of darkness undetected by of the enemy—without the Germans becoming suspicious.

He had to bring up guns and shells and a Canadian corps of 80,000 men with no detection. Too, he had to conceal the arrival of 200 tanks.

To accomplish the latter, Blamey sent a squadron of Handley-Page bombers roaring over the German lines. Nothing could be heard above the din of the planes and the anti-aircraft fire of the Germans.

Thus the stage was set for the big show. The drive led straight to the armistice.

The verdict of those who know him is that "Old Tom" and the fox of Bataan, General MacArthur, will make a great team.

Board Grants Fleming Parole

Waterbury, April 2 — (AP) — Thomas J. Fleming, superintendent of streets in the administration of former Mayor T. Frank Hayes, has been paroled from the Wethersfield state prison after serving the minimum of a one to three year sentence imposed following his conviction in the municipal fraud case.

Fleming was given his freedom yesterday following the monthly meeting of the Board of Parole, and returned to his home here.

Stango Loses Police Post

Italian-Born Army Veteran Dismissed by Waterbury Board.

Waterbury, April 2.—(AP)—Patriotism Anthony Stango, 42, Italian-born veteran of the U. S. Army, has lost his job despite his plea that "anyone who was good enough to fight for this country ought to be good enough to belong to the Police Department."

The Police Board, notified by the FBI that Stango had registered as an enemy alien over a month ago, dismissed him yesterday after a departmental trial on the grounds that he was an Axis sympathizer and had falsely stated he was an American citizen when he joined the force in 1938.

Stango, who served with the Army in the Mexican border campaign in 1916, refused to resign, contending:

"I'm not guilty of any crime. I still think I'm a citizen because of my Army discharge."

Stango, who did not serve in the World War, said he believed he was a citizen when he made his application to become a policeman, but had registered as an enemy alien because of later uncertainty as to the exact status.

Members of the board, of which voted unanimously for the dismissal, asserted, however, that prior to the trial Stango had admitted he was not a citizen when he filed his application.

Bermuda's Play Days Over; It's Grim War Work Now

Hamilton, Bermuda, April 2—(Wide World)—This one time happy hunting ground for the tourist is no place for a playboy today.

The big days of pre-war Bermuda began changing when the United States leased sites for defense bases from Great Britain. They came to an end with the entrance of the United States into the war.

American workers are laboring five days a week to complete defense projects, so they don't have much time to think about the lack of recreation.

When told they would have to give up baseball games this summer, the men said, "let's get on with the job."

There was a lot of gambling among the base workers at first. They were making good money and could find few outlets for it. Spending. The men took a dare and ruled out dice games. They play only cards.

Girls Gain Confidence

Bermudian girls gradually have gained confidence in their American visitors, and now the base swains who favored the American girls when they came here in droves in 1937, 1938 and 1939 find them selves out in the cold.

There have been a few marriages between Bermudians and the men of the U. S. Military and civilian establishments.

It was thought that these marriages would bring a new race to a colony where there has been little intermarriage. Time, however, it is believed the situation may be acute after the war because the Bermudians will go back home with their husbands.

It is accounted an anomaly that the soldiers and sailors who brought American wives to Bermuda with them have had to send them home while their buddies, being the bachelors they are, live the life of a benedict.

The U. S. Army is the largest contributor to the matrimonial market but the Marines are the most popular with the girls.

The influx of military forces and laborers has created many problems for civilian and military authorities alike, one being the clause in the leasehold agreement which gave Americans the right to use motor vehicles.

They were criticized by assemblymen for driving at the scandalous speed of 20 to 30 miles per hour when the limit was 15 miles. However, here again confidence was built up. There have been no accidents and sentiment is shifting in favor of general use of motor cars.

Hurley Takes Envoy's Oath

United States Army Headquarters in Australia, April 2.—(AP)—Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters announced today that Brig. Gen. Patrick J. Hurley had been sworn in as U. S. minister to New Zealand after reverting to inactive status in the U. S. Army.

Hurley, a former secretary of war in Washington, assumed the ministership yesterday in Wellington, capital of New Zealand, after a period of active duty with the U. S. Army in the Southwest Pacific area.

Prison Term Not Feared

Noble Willing to Serve Sentence If Found Guilty of Sedition.

Los Angeles, April 2 —(AP)— Robert Noble, founder of the Isolationist Friends of Progress, looked across a back high partition in the county jail and said "I shouldn't mind" going to prison if convicted of sedition.

"I've never cared about myself. I'd feel that I was doing something worthwhile, and that's all any man should want."

Last week Noble shouted "To Hell with MacArthur. He's a phoney . . ." at a meeting of his followers.

Noble and Ellis O. Jones, co-leaders of the Friends of Progress, were jailed Tuesday by the Federal Bureau of Investigation on Charges of making seditious utterances in Wartime. They were held in default of $10,000 bond each pending a hearing April 15.

Attorney General Earl Warren, who already had charged them with criminally libeling Gen. Douglas MacArthur, followed up yesterday with a complaint charging they failed to list their organization under the subversive organizations registration act.

Noble said he was "amazed at these new charges. I made a thorough study of the sedition laws and I am positive I have violated no law. I do not believe I am guilty of malicious conduct or sedition in saying these things."

"These charges" referred to his repeated public attacks on President Roosevelt's international policy and General MacArthur's military leadership and strategy; to repeated demands that Japan be permitted to rule the Orient and Hitler be left alone to rule Europe; and to his reiterated statements that he admires Hitler.

Farm Labor Pinch Coming

Shortage Will Spread All Over Nation in Opinion of Observers.

Dallas, Tex., April 2.—(AP)—Cotton is just beginning to come up in the lush Rio Grande Valley and at the far southern tip of Texas, and with it arises a farm labor problem that will spread over the nation, say government and private observers.

Victor H. Schoffelmayer, agricultural editor of The Dallas Morning News, points out that a triple squeeze will be applied: Not only will farm labor be drawn into the armed by the draft and wartime industry, but the demand has grown because of increased plantings in the food for war program, and meanwhile the supply has grown short for lost manpower.

Always Scramble for Workers

The pinch will be felt when cotton chopping time arrives. For most of Texas, that means the month of May. Another call will go out—for pickers—in the autumn. Cotton-growing states have always scrambled for workers during these two critical periods.

But this year there will be even keener competition for farm laborers; other sections of the nation are having their troubles, too.

B. J. Walker of the Farm Security Administration's regional office cites a survey which shows that 80,000 persons will be taken out of this state, alone, to the sugar beet belt for the six-months' growing and harvesting season.

Increased livestock creates another problem, that of raising feed as well as caring for the animals. Farmers generally have not experienced a labor shortage. Some herds have been sold because there was not enough help to care for them.

R. D. McCrum of the Work Project Administration, says WPA workers will be required to accept farm work if they are capable of performing it and if prevailing wages are paid—no matter how low the prevailing wages may be.

Mrs. McAdoo Will Aid Bond Sales

Washington, April 2.—(AP)—Mrs. Eleanor Wilson McAdoo, daughter of the late President Wilson, described herself today as "back on the job and doing business at the old stand—helping Uncle Sam sell stamps and bonds."

In World War I days she was chairman of the Women's Committee in the Liberty loan drives. Her former husband, the late Senator John said of Blamey:

"Some day the orders which he drafted . . . will become a model for staff colleges and schools for military instruction. They were accurate, lucid in language, perfect in detail and always an exact interpretation of my intention."

And the orders did become a model for staff training in Camberley, England.

In that great offensive, Blamey's job was to bring no less than 44 battalions into positions under cover of darkness undetected by of the enemy—without the Germans becoming suspicious.

He had to bring up guns and shells and a Canadian corps of 80,000 men with no detection. Too, he had to conceal the arrival of 200 tanks.

To accomplish the latter, Blamey sent a squadron of Handley-Page bombers roaring over the German lines. Nothing could be heard above the din of the planes and the anti-aircraft fire of the Germans.

Thus the stage was set for the big show. The drive led straight to the armistice.

The verdict of those who know him is that "Old Tom" and the fox of Bataan, General MacArthur, will make a great team.

Board Grants Fleming Parole

Waterbury, April 2 — (AP) — Thomas J. Fleming, superintendent of streets in the administration of former Mayor T. Frank Hayes, has been paroled from the Wethersfield state prison after serving the minimum of a one to three year sentence imposed following his conviction in the municipal fraud case.

Fleming was given his freedom yesterday following the monthly meeting of the Board of Parole, and returned to his home here.

News of Our Boy Scouts

The Boy Scout Court of Honor which was scheduled for the first Friday in April has been postponed due to it being Good Friday, this living up to the 12th Scout law, "A Scout is Reverent." The court will be held on Friday, April 30 at the usual time. Following the presentation of Scout badge certificates, there will be an important meeting of the Scoutmasters' Association, and all local Scout leaders are urged to attend.

Local Scouts still have a week, therefore, to submit their applications for merit badges, and those wishing to come before the April court are urged to send in their applications at once.

Land Army

Local boys 14 years old and over and girls 16 and over are to be given an opportunity to do their part in the nation's war effort. This week in junior and senior high schools all over the state, boys and girls have a chance to assist in the new Connecticut Land Army, which this summer will go to work to help out in the "Food for Freedom" movement.

Messenger Service

The second session in the Messenger Service Supervisor's Course was held at the West Middle school in Hartford Tuesday evening, and a repeat session will be held tonight for those who were unable to attend. Two important subjects were covered, "Map-making and Blackout." The former instruction was given by Charles W. Cook of the Hartford Defense Council. The maps were added according to paces so that a Messenger may find his way to a certain location more easily during a blackout.

Each messenger must have a map of his own area and they will make sample ones at the course which they will attend following the completion of the present one for Supervisors.

The second period was in charge of Austin Purvis of the Office of Civilian Defense in Hartford.

Mr. Purvis distributed pamphlets entitled, "How to Blackout Your Home." He stressed the fact that the boys taking the Messenger Service course will be trained in the principles of blackout, and will become useful in their home and neighborhood.

Chief Nelson A. Sly of the Charter Oak Council stated that a boy wishing to become a messenger must have the physical and mental capacity to be such a messenger, must be resourceful and dependable and must be able to read, speak and write English clearly and legibly. This latter point is important when they are transmitting messages during a raid.

The qualities which the supervisor must look for before approving a boy as a messenger include: the ability of taking and carrying out orders with speed and efficiency, the receiving, understanding and repeating of verbal messages with accuracy within a reasonable time, the care- safe-keeping and transmission of written messages and packages, the obtaining of evidence when and if possible of having completed a mission in order that he may be safeguarded in the performance of his task, the location of any place or person at any time under all conditions and the performance of any and all reasonable functions necessary to the completion of an assigned task.

Applicants for Messenger Service will be taught all these principles during their course. They are the result of a job analysis that was done for this service by the University of Pennsylvania.

All Scouts who are planning on taking the course are urged to study up on their conventional signs in map making, as the knowledge of these will greatly aid the boy during the map-making period of the course.

There are four more sessions to the present course for supervisors, after which courses will be started all over the state for all boys who are interested in doing their part in national defense by volunteering their services to the Messenger Service program.

And now we turn to our troop scribes to get the reports on the activities of the local troops during Holy Week. On behalf of the Scout Executives of the Charter Oak Council, Nelson A. Sly, Philip Johnson and Alan Tucker, this column extends its best wishes to all Scouts and Scouters for a "Happy Easter."

Troop 98

William Barclay, Scribe

The weekly meeting was called to order at 7:30 last Friday evening. Short patrol business meetings were held, and reports made by the Scoutmaster. Tests were passed by Frank Vichi and Ed Palmer. The entire troop continued the practice of emergency subjects.

A short game period was held from 8:30 to 9:00 p. m. during which time "Grab the Bottle" was played. The Scouts were dismissed at 9:10 with the Pledge of Allegiance.

Troop 15

Joseph E. Cunningham

The weekly meeting of Troop 15 was held in St. James's School on Thursday evening at 7:15. The presiding Scoutmaster was Francis Peckenham who opened the meeting with the Scout Laws and Oath. Several Scouts passed their Second and First Class First Aid tests.

A discussion was held by many of the Scouts and the Scoutmaster on the subject of Scouts used as messengers for Civilian Defense. Mr. Peckenham explained some of the courses and requirements which are necessary in this connection. Joseph Falkowski, a former member of the troop has resigned.

A hike was planned and was held on Sunday, March 29, by the Panther Patrol. Victor Glangrave was promoted to the rank of Junior Assistant Scoutmaster, and this leaves a vacancy to be filled at a future meeting.

Janting Leaves

Richard E. Jansing who was recently appointed Assistant Scoutmaster of Troop 15 in charge of the younger Scouts, has been called to the service of his country in the United States Army as a Second Lieutenant. Mr. Jansing's fine work with the Scouts has given them a firm foundation for their work in later Scout life. He will be missed by all and his fine training as a soldier has served as an inspiration for the troop. We hope to hear from him when he arrives in camp.

Scouters and Scouts of Troop 15 St. James's School

Troop 13

A. E. Snow—Scribe

The weekly meeting of Troop 13 was held at 7:15 p.m. with the recitation of the Scout Oath. Most of the time was spent in the conditioning of boys in test passing requirements.

We had a brief talk from "Doc" Reynolds. During the Blackout which was called at this meeting, most of the boys went to a secluded room in the church, kept calm and studied Morse Code. We also had a Rough and Ready game of Pull Across the Line.

Just as the boys were about to be dismissed there was a little excitement. A Scout caught a mouse (one less in the church basement now).

The meeting was concluded with the Scoutmaster's Benediction.

Note: Next week there is to be a special meeting of Troop 13 at the Scoutmaster's home at 55 Middle Turnpike East. Meet at the usual time.

Troop 25

Kenneth Barrett—Scribe

The meeting of Troop 25 opened at 7:15 with a line-up in which the boys got ready to play a game.

This game was a patrol game in which the Scouts were obliged to write the Scout Laws according to number. The Eagle patrol won the game.

Detective Sergeant Joseph Prentice gave the troop an interesting talk on fingerprinting and the ways of catching thieves. A talk was also given on Messengers. Scouts will have to be second-class to become a messenger, and some of the boys have already volunteered to take the course which will be started as soon as the present course for Supervisors in Hartford has been completed.

The boys then played a knotting game. Some of the Scouts received their registration cards and badges. John Hansen and Kenneth Barrett received their Patrol Leader insignia. James Hooker, Wendell Gates and Paul Brindley received Assistant Patrol Leader's badges, Kenneth Barrett, scribe's badge and Chester Groehel received his First Class badge.

Tests passed included first class cooking by Earl Schelsinger and fire and tracking by James Hooker.

Troop 47

Leland Grimason—Scribe

The meeting opened with the customary Scout Oath and Pledge of Allegiance. The troop then prepared for inspection after which they were dismissed to their patrol corners. After all patrol business was dispensed with, the troop lined up for a short, snappy drill period. The drill was conducted by Second Lieut. Sidney Scott of the United States Air Force who was a guest of the troop.

A signaling contest was held, after which Ray Mercer conducted a knot tying contest which proved that many of the Scouts needed brushing up. Three tenderfoot Scouts received their badges.

It was announced that a bicycle trip will be held a week from Saturday. The meeting was closed at 9:30 with the Scout Law and Scout Master's Benediction.

Note: Fourteen Scouts of Troop 47 enjoyed a test-passing hike last Sunday. Many outdoor tests were passed.

Troop 126

Parker Vetrano, Scribe

The meeting was opened at 6:15 Tuesday night by the picking of color guards who were: George Rachel, Edward Murphy, Elmer Phelps and James Chipps. James Vetrano led in the Scout Oath. This was followed with patrol corners where attendance was taken and dues paid.

A test passing period was held followed by a game, Snatch the Bacon. A discussion period followed and the Scouts had an opportunity to ask many questions in regard to Scouting.

The Scoutmaster made his weekly announcements after which the meeting was closed with the Scout Law led by Helmar Johnson and the Scoutmaster's Benediction.

Greenhar Council

Following Troop 126's meeting, the Greenhar Council had a meeting and planned an individual contest which will last for ten weeks. The Scouts will compete against each other in various contests and will receive points for tests passed, church attendance, and attendance at troop meetings. There will probably be three prizes, each a week at Camp Pioneer.

A Good Friday hike was planned and the Scouts will leave the church at 7:00 Friday morning and will bring two meals, breakfast and dinner. Those who go on the hike will receive points toward the contest.

With Our Cubs

Pack 2

Robert Jensen, Scribe

Meeting of Den 3, Mrs. Hubbard, Den Mother. The meeting opened at 6:30 and the Cubs played games outside until 6:45 p. m.

A discussion was held on the play, the Den will give at the Pack meeting on May 29. Some of the Cubs passed tests at the meeting.

At the next meeting each Cub is supposed to bring a suggestion for the play. The meeting closed at 7:30 p. m.

Editor's Note: We are sorry to see that Pack 4 is missing from our line-up this week, and hope that Douglas Anderson will be back with us in the next column.

Scouters, don't forget to get in to the West Side School tonight and sign up for that Messenger Supervisor's Course. By attaining this knowledge, your boys will be insured proper training as messengers during an air raid. The session starts at 7 o'clock.

Scoutmaster John Derby and several members of his staff have signed up for the course and are attending each session. Information can be obtained either from him or your columnist at any time in regard to the course for Messengers which will soon be started in nearly every section of the state. No boy will be allowed to serve as a messenger unless he completes this course, according to a statement made by Chief Nelson A. Sly.

Following the course, this column will print the names of supervisors who have been found qualified to teach the boys so that Scoutmasters may contact them for their services.

Special Church Services Planned

Washington, April 2.—(AP)—The Army's chief of chaplains, William R. Arnold, said today that more than 1,000,000 soldiers were expected to attend the special Good Friday and Easter services being planned for all Army units.

Since the Easter observance begins at noon Friday, Chaplain Arnold said commanding officers have been authorized to issue passes excusing men in their commands from duty from noon until 3 p. m. that day to permit them to attend Good Friday services. Similar passes will be granted for Easter morning.

Seven Out of Ten Own Radio

Washington, April 2. — (AP) — More than seven out of every 10 homes or apartments has a radio. A decade ago, the ratio was less than 3 out of 10. The percentage of radio ownership varied, however, from 39.9 per cent in Mississippi to 95.7 per cent in Connecticut and Rhode Island. Urban householders averaged 85.1 per cent, compared with 71.5 per cent in small towns and 52.4 per cent in farm areas.

Grace Opposes School Troops

No Pre-Military Training of Students in Connecticut.

Hartford, April 2.—(AP)—There's to be no "goose stepping and sounds left" for the high school students of Connecticut.

Dr. Alonzo G. Grace, state education commissioner, said yesterday that the State Board was "absolutely opposed to the proposed inauguration of pre-military training for high school students."

Could Handle Training Better

The Army, he asserted, could handle such training better at regular military bases, and, moreover, it would be impossible to secure competent instructors for such training.

Dr. Alonzo G. Grace

"We are absolutely opposed to anything which might be like or similar to the Students' Army Training Corps or the Reserve Officers Training Course in high schools," Dr. Grace said.

"We don't want any squads east or squads left in high schools, and the Army doesn't want it either."

The commissioner added, however, that some phases of the proposal for military training might be used, such as a thorough course in calisthenics.

The state board's policy for war-time training, he said, has these provisions:

(1) A program of health and physical education in high schools.

(2) Emphasis on vocational training or specialized courses to impart a thorough knowledge of particular skills, and with physical examinations would teach pupils to know how to take care of themselves.

(3) Preliminary military training in summer camps for high school pupils is approved.

Former Convict Seeking Office

Indianapolis, April 2.—(AP)—Olin H. Holt, elected mayor of Kokomo after serving his first Federal prison term, is running for Congress after serving his second.

Holt filed yesterday with the Indiana secretary of state his declaration of candidacy for the Democratic nomination for fifth district representative in the May 5 primary.

A lawyer, he served 18 months in Leavenworth penitentiary in 1931 and 1932 for conspiracy to violate the Volstead act through the "Hoosier Protective Association."

"Less than two and a half years after his release, he was elected mayor and obtained a full presidential pardon so he might serve his four-year term.

He subsequently was convicted of diverting WPA labor to private gain while mayor, paid a $5,000 fine and served a year and a day in Leavenworth and Terre Haute prisons, getting out in June, 1940.

Man Found Dead In Auto Trailer

South Windsor, April 2.—(AP)—Andrew Beuka, about 50, of Hancock, N. Y., who came here a week ago to work on an East Hartford housing project, was found dead in his auto trailer here.

Medical Examiner H. J. Oppenheimer said the man died of accidental carbon monoxide poisoning, blaming an oil stove in the trailer and improper ventilation.

New License For Minors

Autoists, 16 to 18, to Be Given Forms Attesting to Insurance.

Attention of state and local police will be called by Motor Vehicles Commissioner John T. McCarthy to a new license form for minors, that is, drivers between the ages of 16 and 18, a department bulletin reported today.

The new form, to be used for the first time during the 1942 license period which begins on May 1, is printed on green paper and carries the statement: "This license is valid only for the operation of insured motor vehicles."

Previously, a standard license form was used for minors with the word "minor" stamped on it. The new form is meant to give added emphasis to the fact that the young operator has no right to be driving an uninsured car.

Connecticut law requires that a minor have the written permission of his parents or guardian before he can be licensed to drive. A minor who drives an uninsured car is subject to a fine of not more than one hundred dollars, or imprisonment for not more than 30 days, or both.

1941 licenses expire at midnight April 30. An application blank for a 1942 license is attached to the 1941 license certificate. The application must be signed in addition to signing one's full name.

To Distribute Testaments

United States Army Headquarters in Australia, April 2.—(AP)—With Easter just three days away, it was disclosed today that U. S. Army authorities were preparing to distribute to the American forces pocket-size testaments containing a foreword by President Roosevelt.

Personal Freedom in Paraguay Is Sought by Mennonite Family

Lancaster, Pa., April 2.—(AP)—Elmer Martin's household goods "were all" today—sold at auction—as the Mennonite farmer and his family prepared to leave for Paraguay in search of more personal freedom.

Nearly everything the Martins' owned—including overcoats which won't be needed in Paraguay's warm climate—were put on the block.

Martin, 52, his wife and eight children plan to sail for the South American religious colony as soon as arrangements can be made with the State Department.

Expect Others to Follow

Other "plain people" of this area expect to follow the Martins to the Mennonite Mecca where the government regulations — among them conscription and compulsory school attendance—are not as binding as in this country.

A large colony of the deeply religious Mennonites was established in Paraguay's Gran Chaco region in 1926, with the government granting members of the sect permission to live under their own customs.

Production in 1942 Now Chief War Aim

Urge "to Get Bigger Production of Airplanes, Ships, Tanks and Arms Rolling.

By Paul Gesner and William Mathews

New York, April 2.—(Wide World)—Produce in 1942!

Those three little words are fast becoming war-minded industrial America's slogan.

The urge is to get bigger production of airplanes, ships, tanks, guns and ammunition rolling now.

The war program is being slanted accordingly. There is more talk now about actual 1942 production—a striking contrast when compared with the view of three months ago that 1942 would be a preparatory year with 1943 the production year.

Industry Showing Resiliency

Main reason 1942 production is getting more emphasis is that American industry in its war job is showing a resiliency and adaptability of a quality few people realized it had.

More and more plants are adding new workers and new shifts and getting increases of up to 25 per cent in their output per man-hour. The automobile industry is converting to war work with only one-half the unemployment that was expected at this time. Small delivery schedules are getting raw materials and sub-assembly parts on the line where they are wanted on the dot.

Some optimistic observers feel war production rates by Oct. 1 may be two months or more ahead of schedules anticipated a few weeks ago.

Officials Revising Plans

War production officials are reported to be revising plans, with the view of pushing the biggest volume of materiel possible into fighters' hands this year.

"There is no such thing as a building program today, as far as war plants or factories are concerned," reports Government Poor's, a statistical agency. "True, there are plans to build additional aluminum capacity, additional shipways, more munitions and other plants, but as far defense schedules on construction and completion, they mean little.

"As the situation stands, materials to build such plants are scarce, and decisions as to whether the materials will be supplied are not a matter of long-range planning but of current military expediency," the agency adds.

Must Keep Point in Mind

War contractors, says the agency, must keep this point in mind: If they are being held up because materials have been delayed, the explanation is not necessarily that Washington is blundering. Military plans of the moment may demand the materials for some more pressing use.

Shipbuilding: Better flow of steel plates to shipyards, metal circles say, will enable shipyards to produce this year at least the 8,000,000 tons of merchant shipping President Roosevelt has asked for, possibly more.

Business picture: General business conditions are on an upward trend, according to the National Association of Purchasing Agents, an organization usually shrewd in gauging the outlook. Better business is reported in the east, due largely to expanded war goods production and higher payrolls from plants converting to war work.

In regard to supplies in the hands of industrial concerns, the association says: "Inventories are generally reported to be at about the levels of a month ago. Some recession, however, is indicated in the east and mid-west.

"It is encouraging that reports indicate a policy of keeping production lines running to capacity, but at the same time building down inventories," the association adds.

Foods: Don't be surprised if there is a sharp expansion in dried foods this year. Reason: Dried foods don't require tin cans. In fact, not requiring air-tight containers, they may be sold in bulk.

Prediction: Despite current slowness of the stock market, one astute Wall Street observer is betting two-to-one that million share days will be seen before the end of 1942. He won't say when he anticipates a bull or bear movement.

Present Cantata At Talcottville

The tuneful cantata by John Stainer — "The Crucifixion" — "A meditation on the Sacred Passion of the Holy Redeemer"—will be presented at the Talcottville Congregational church, Sunday, the Friday meditation. This justly popular sacred composition is arranged for chorus and two male solo voices. The libretto, which was written by the Rev. W. J. Sparrow-Simpson is based almost verbatim on the text of the new testament narrative. All who are acquainted with the rich heritage of music to which the christian church is heir will remember such numbers as the tenor solo: "Could ye not watch one hour?"; the Prophecies to Calvary, for chorus, "Fling wide the gates"; the Quartet and Chorus, "God so loved the world" and the tenor solo "King ever glorious."

The Talcottville choir, under the fine leadership of Wilfred Kent is known for its excellent work. The regular bass soloist, who is in much demand Gay Simoncelli, will sing the solo. Kent the solo numbers.

This cantata, unlike most others, is interspersed with hymns which are intended for the congregation to sing. A copy of the libretto will be provided for the use of all who attend. This service, which will begin at 7:30 is open to the public and, indeed, strangers are cordially invited to attend.

There are now 6000 chinchillas in the United States.

War Profits Ceiling Urged

Taft Proposes Creation Of Board; Limitation Compromise Sought.

Washington, April 2.—(AP)—Senator Taft (R-Ohio) proposed today creation of a board to fix ceilings on war profits, while administration leaders moved to compromise a six per cent profit limitation inserted by the House in a pending military appropriations bill.

Taft told reporters he had little doubt that the Senate Appropriations committee would strike the House amendment out of the $10,301,000,000 military measure. However, Chairman Donald M. Nelson of the War Production Board and Army and Navy officials were working on a substitute which they planned to present to the committee.

Senator Taft

Nelson was reported to have told the committee yesterday that flat limitation was unworkable. Agreeing with Nelson's conclusion, Taft said he was drafting an amendment which would set up a board of Army, Navy and War Production experts, charged with fixing the "margin of profit that could be made on individual military items."

For instance, he said, this board could establish a fair profit for the manufacture of a medium tank or of a certain type of airplane, making, all revenue above that amount returnable to the Treasury.

"I don't think you can successfully set a flat profit limitation on everything," Taft said. "In some instances, two per cent might be a very fair profit for the amount of capital necessary to manufacture a certain military article, while in others, the percentage of profit might have to be much higher because of the slow turnover."

Democratic Leader Barkley of Kentucky likewise has declared that the imposition of an over-all limitation on profits would be ineffective.

Barkley said he thought the question could be handled more intelligently in the new tax bill but Senator Byrd (D.,Va.) said it was likely that profit amendments would be advanced April 20 when the Senate argues a motion to take up the Connally bill to permit the government to seize stricken-bound war production plants.

Senator Connally, (D., Tex.) agreed yesterday to let his motion go over while the Senate takes a belated Easter recess of two weeks, but he told reporters he expected a full crop of labor amendments among operations of the 40-hour wage law, as well as others outlawing strikes and freezing the present status of unions in war industries. Connally's bill would freeze working conditions in armed plants, but would permit wage adjustments by a special board.

San Francisco Japs Moved

Evacuation from San Diego Also Begun by Army Today.

San Francisco, April 2.—(AP)—The first evacuation of Japanese from San Francisco and San Diego began today.

All persons of Japanese ancestry living in specific areas were ordered to report to civil control stations to receive instructions about their departure.

Lieut. Gen. J. L. DeWitt, commanding general of the Western Defense Command and Fourth Army, said Japanese who failed to comply would be subject to immediate apprehension and internment.

2,000 To Be Evacuated

It was estimated that 1,000 Japanese would be evacuated from San Francisco and a similar number from San Diego.

Meanwhile, the evacuation of families was under way from Los Angeles to the government's new Owens valley camp at Manzanar, Calif.

tion of the statement in London. But British observers did not minimize the threat, and predicted that any Japanese flanking attack from such a base soon would make the present British position untenable, the town of Prome 180 miles southeast of Akyab, untenable.

Chinese Lines Threatened

At the same time the Nazi-controlled Paris radio broadcast reports that powerful enemy forces lined up the Sittang river to land at Yedashe, some 18 miles north of Toungoo, were threatening now the Chinese lines centered on Kangyun, only 12 miles above Toungoo, along the Mandalay-Rangoon rail line.

Akyab, on the western coastal plain, is separated from the Irrawaddy river basin by the Arakan Yoma mountain range. But observers pointed out that a trail leads from Akyab across the mountains to Minbu, on the Irrawaddy 100 miles north of Prome and 20 miles below Yenangyaung, center of the Burma oil fields which are the chief goal of the Japanese drive.

Already Outnumbered

The British and Indian troops now holding Prome already are outnumbered by the Japanese and hostile Burmese forces.

Akyab, which at the last census had a population of 28,084, lies 100 miles across the Bay of Bengal from Calcutta. It is one of the few serviceable ports between Japanese-held Rangoon, the former Burma capital, and Chittagong to the north.

British dispatches from Chungking said that as a result of recent conversations there, the Chinese forces in Burma would remain under the command of Lieut. Gen. H. R. L. G. Alexander, the British commander in chief for Burma, and that Lieut. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell, the United States officer commanding the Chinese, would be under Alexander's orders.

No Substantial Change Since Yesterday

New Delhi, India, April 2.—(AP)—A British communique on the Battle of Burma reported today there had been no substantial change since yesterday on the western, or Arakan, front, where the main British forces now are holding a line south of Prome.

It said that "a reconnaissance in force down the railway line (to Rangoon) destroyed an enemy pillbox; otherwise there has been no contact with the enemy."

British sources in a state of keen excitement, that the people of Burma should concern themselves in a particular direction at rather too early a stage.

open, Cripps could devote further efforts to narrowing the difficulties referred to in the press conference in which he announced delay of his departure, first scheduled for today.

Considered Hopeful Sign

Coupled with yesterday's decision not to turn down the Cripps offer without suggesting an alternative constructive plan of action, again, especially as Cripps had indicated there might be a chance of compromise on the defense issue.

Editorials in the Nationalist Indian press expressed resentment over what the editors understood to be the tone of the American press. They have received word of unfavorable reaction to the reluctance of India's leaders to strike a bargain with the British.

Indian nationalists charged that American editors do not understand all the special problems of the Indian political situation and that American press reaction would not affect their stand.

Official Washington, however, was under close watch for any sign that the United States government might use its influence to obtain a British-Indian settlement.

Confers with Roosevelt

(Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai, Indian agent general here, conferred with President Roosevelt for an hour and a half late yesterday. Leaving the White House, he said that the Pacific war situation and other matters were discussed but that the talks did not concern British-Indian relations.)

Announcing that he was proceeding "home" for a short time, Cripps said that "points of difficulty are coming down to fairly narrow limits and with good-will we may be able to solve the difficulties."

The implication was that Britain, which had submitted her offer on a basis of all-or-nothing, might modify her terms lest the whole scheme be doomed by Indian opposition to some points.

Whether India, already under the shadow of Japanese invasion, would direct her own defense will apparently be the crux of the issue. There were indications that Britain might give up her insistence on keeping India's defense in her hands until after the war.

Cripps, who had arranged to leave London Monday, said he had postponed his departure because "I think I can possibly do something useful next week."

He told a press conference that "it was rather natural, in a state of keen excitement, that the people should concern themselves in a particular direction at rather too early a stage."

Sobering Down Little Now

But, he added, "I think that sobering process has taken place. The press this morning that it is sobering down a little now to a more inquiring state of mind."

Cripps said there was no substitute for the plan on which India's divergent peoples have been delegating but he parried inquiries about the possibility that they might win authority over their own defenses.

Asked whether, if he had no power to agree to the appointment of an Indian defense minister, he could obtain such authority from his government, the envoy replied:

"I can obviously consult the cabinet at any moment if I consider it necessary."

To the question whether he had referred that issue to his government, he answered:

"I have kept His Majesty's government informed but I have not got any alternative scheme or plan on which to consult them."

Before his optimistic announcement, it was evident that there was a general desire to avoid any hasty conclusions and especially to find a satisfactory formula concerning the defense portfolio.

To Get Resolution Tonight

The All-India Congress party working committee, representing India's Hindu majority, has approved its draft resolution on the British offer and it will be handed to Cripps tonight.

Advance predictions during the five days of the committee's deliberations had been that its verdict would be unfavorable. The committee has been summoned again for tomorrow morning, presumably to discuss Cripps' reaction to the resolution.

Cripps said he had received no word as yet of the attitude of the Moslem League, the dominant minority voice.

Two lesser elements—the Sikhs, warriors of the Punjab, and the Mahasabha group of Hindus—already had given a definite "no" answer but Cripps intimated that a re-formula could be worked out with the others they might reconsider.

On the defense question, Indian nationalists have set up three lines—first, only an Indian could rally the Indians to the all-out war pitch Britain seeks, and, second, India's defenses could be entrusted safely to such a man as Capt. Sir Sikander Hyat Khan, premier of the Punjab, which provides the present bulk of Indian troops.

To Discuss Defense Issue

The name of Gen. Sir Archibald P. Wavell was thrust into the picture by a dispatch from New Delhi saying he will confer with Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru of the Congress party would meet to discuss the defense issue.

This was presented as a new tack by Cripps with his mission described as "on the brink of failure."

Although there was no confirmation of this report in other British quarters, it was stated in London that Wavell, long interested in India and now charged with her defense, might influence the discussion.

An editorial in the authoritative Times of London—the third on the India question in succession days and entitled "Eleventh Hour" suggested such a possibility.

Although it declared that it was essential that Wavell should retain supreme command in India, it pointed out that India might have a share through a member on the Allied Defense Council in a position analogous to that of the war secretary in the British cabinet.

Two Loyalties Charge Made

1939 agreement, which he described as a "modus vivendi" for operations during the war, requiring Standard to have one policy in the United States and another in South America although "South America is bound to the United States by the closest ties in this war.

"Your difficulty," he told Howard, "proceeds from that fact that you are bound by two loyalties. First you are bound by your loyalty to I. G. Farben and secondly you are bound by loyalty to the United States and its policies. I have no doubt of your choosing the course but it illustrates the difficulties."

Disagreeing, Howard said O'Mahoney was saying that because Standard bought patents in one country and not in another it was creating a double loyalty.

The Wyoming senator also referred to a cablegram, read into the record earlier, from a Standard representative at Yokohama in 1939, suggesting that arrangements be made with Japanese partners who would be influential in helping Standard, following "any interruptions of trade."

Mr. S. Farish, Standard president, interpreted that the proposal was turned down.

O'Mahoney observed that nevertheless the cablegram showed "the difficulty a company faces when dealing with the primary interests of the country to which it owes its loyalty."

"Every company engaged in international trade," Farish replied, "has the same difficulty."

"Quite," O'Mahoney agreed.

Before today's session, O'Mahoney asserted to reporters that relations between Standard and I. G. Farben before the war illustrated a "device whereby economic opportunity for the masses has been restrained.

"The meaning of this should be made crystal clear to the people of America. It is that the managers of I. G. Farben and the managers of Standard Oil have been engaged in a very successful joint effort to maintain complete control of a tremendous segment of our economy.

"It certainly ought to be clear now that the masses of the people cannot hope to maintain their economic, and ultimately their political, freedom while organizations of that kind dominate the trade of the world."

O'Mahoney made these comments before the Senate Defense Investigating Committee after Mr. Farish to the witness stand for the third day to continue a reply to testimony by Thurman Arnold, anti-trust chief.

Arnold testified that through its agreements with I. G. Farben, Standard frustrated development of synthetic rubber in the United States.

O'Mahoney, who was chairman of the now defunct Monopoly Investigating Committee, yesterday challenged testimony by Arnold that Standard gave "full information" to the Army and Navy in 1939 covering Standard's synthetic rubber activities.

essential change on the front during the night.

It reported, however, that more than 300 German officers and men had been wiped out in one fighting on the Kalinin front northwest of Moscow while 150 officers and men were killed in fighting in another sector.

Leningrad Suburbs Artillery Targets

Berlin (From German Broadcasts), April 2.—(AP)—The high command reported today that military installations in the suburbs of Leningrad were subjected to heavy artillery fire" in German offensive operations on that front.

"Effective results could be observed," the war bulletin added.

In several other sectors of the Russian front the Red Army is continuing its attacks on German positions, suffering heavy losses, the communique reported.

It said the Russian Air Force lost 45 planes yesterday in air combats and on the ground.

Book's Loss Inconvenient

Buffalo, N. Y.—(AP)—Peter Gust Economou, host at the Park Lane hotel, doesn't find the wedding and party reservation book quite as "full of everything" as going to happen. For without the book, which disappeared from his banquet rooms, Economou doesn't know how many reservations have been made, how many waiters to have on hand or what dishes to prepare. Through newspaper advertisements he is asking his patrons: "If you have any reservations with us or know of anyone that has, please call us."

Superstition to Overcome

Ravenna, Neb.—(AP)—If drillers don't strike oil on the Minnie Stocker farm, the superstitious will say, "I told you so." Drilling equipment was moved onto the field on a Friday the 13th. The site is Township 13, Range 13. Minnie Stocker, owner of the farm, has 13 letters in her name. So has R. Ernest Spelts, head of the firm drilling the well, as well as H. Arthur Spelts, another firm member.

Axis Bombs and Torpedoes Punctuate Life Line Between Britain's Isles

By Paul Manning
NEA Service Foreign Correspondent
NEA-Herald Writer Radios Saga Of Convoy on Vital West Africa Route.

In Convoy Off West Africa—The Germans bombed Liverpool the night we sailed. They slowly down the Mersey, dropping magnetic and acoustic mines. On the blacked-out deck of the 6000-ton ship Lewis we set up a chattering barrage. Every fifth bullet was a tracer, creating a streaming cross-pattern of light.

It didn't last long, this raid. No 200 Junkers like last spring. Yet it gave the convoys a headache. Maybe the Germans knew it would. When dawn broke we began slipping down toward the open sea, with mine sweepers ahead of our ship and others following. Some of our ships flew red flag of the ammunition ships, whose crews get extra money for carrying nitroglycerine and lyddite. Mines, lidite ours, mere-ly had scattered over the above deck, two Glenn Martin bombers, below, a ton or two of TNT, dismantled Hurricane fighter planes, lubricating oil, copper wire, guns and food.

SOS Heard From Freighter On Rocks

The convoy accelerated speed when the Irish Sea was reached and then began the 30-day voyage to malaria-ridden West Africa. It was 3000 miles in peacetime, but more than 4000 now by the deceptive, circuitous route we followed.

A storm prevented the ships from swinging into line abreast the formation that first day. It chopped the Irish Sea into fury by midnight. First SOS that we consciously received was from a Belgian freighter, bound for the Belgian Congo, which the rocks had claimed. By morning another SOS was reported aboard.

But by the third day, the 43 numbering ships were finally moving eleven abreast across the ocean in a majestic zigzag. Patrol boats occasionally dropped low out of cloud banks. They were progressively Lockheed-Hudsons, Whitleys, then Sunderlands, then long-range Catalinas which kept a watchful eye on the convoy as we passed slowly through the darker zone which is the shuttle route of the German Focke-Wulf condors.

These big Luftwaffe babies swing out on patrol each day from Bordeaux to a point about 200 miles west of Ireland before turning inland to head for their base in Stavanger, Norway.

U-Boats Informed About Sailings

Aboard ship, life settled into routine. But let's not kid ourselves. Germans do sink ships every day. Anyway that's what we were ordered to think, the Eurasian Rodrigues and I.

This was his second attempt to reach the Red Sea at Massawa, where he's a junior engineer on British harbor clearance. He was 18 days in a lifeboat, and during that time covered 1080 miles, ending up in Brazil.

But Rodrigues shows no effect of that ordeal, unless it's a passive quietness and respect for German espionage, which, he says, informed the U-boats of the sailing time, the route and munition-carrying ships. One vessel went high into the air when a torpedo struck, and another vessel with cargo of steel rails parted like a severed eggshell and disappeared in 20 seconds.

At nightfall tension takes command. On deck there's a blackout of a kind. Lifeboats look like a carnival city of lights and yo-yos. Below, the night-time pattern of placing lifebelt, passport and money within quick reach when flight charges begin is practiced with their vicious crack. When near, they just about roll you out of bed.

That happened the first week off the Irish coast. Passengers later said they were thinking of a freighter which had been reported sunk up ahead that night and the purser says he thought of the futility of launching a lifeboat into the giant sea which was then running.

Ship Food Better Than In London

Each day begins at seven a. m. when Jimmy, the West African, slips to each bunk, with tea and the announcement "Boys, time to get ready." The food is only fair, yet it is better than you get in London and the breakfast of two eggs which was served each Thursday and Sunday night was something any habitue of the Savoy or Ritz would want, but couldn't get.

It was during the first 20 days on any clear afternoon that you could see the little Russian and his wife striding slowly around the narrow deck, a little apart from the liner which plowed forward at head of the third column. Their route lay to Capetown, then up the Persian Gulf to Bandor Shapur where they were to entrain for the Caspian Sea and home.

That first morning in Liverpool they had offered me transportation from the Adelphi Hotel to the docks.

They had been laughing and cheerful. This Russian and his wife had said it was fine to be going home. You knew what they meant. At breakfast we had washed down the porridge and fish with vodka which the Russian had mysteriously produced as a toast to the journey which lay ahead. And they had told me of their two sons in the Red Army and of their daughter Tatiana, who would be with them every fortnight outside a city between Moscow and Kuibeshev.

A Sudden Flash On the Horizon

When the latitudes of the Azores and Cape Verde Islands had passed, the ship over at the head of that third column, and a lone oil tanker steamed from the left flank to take the place of the convoy toward the Mediterranean and Capetown. They didn't quite make it.

You could see the sudden flash of an explosion on this side of the horizon and then through glasses you could watch the lean-thousand tonner settling slowly at the stern. A destroyer later flashed a signal that the U-boat had been accounted for. The tanker had long ago shuttled back to safety.

But there never was any signal flash for the little Russian and his wife, who were not listed among the survivors. That was too bad. For they were going home and they had felt so good that morning the Liverpool sun had shone on two sons in the Red Army and of their daughter Tatiana, who works in a gun factory just outside the city between Moscow and Kuibeshev.

The German bombers moved slow ly down the Mersey River.... the ship's Lewis guns set up a chattering barrage various other high officers to important posts.

The appointment of Bennett, who commanded the Australian forces in Malaya and escaped after the surrender of Singapore, was announced by Army Minister Francis Forde.

Bennett's chief of staff will be Brigadier Mr. Anderson, who formerly was attached to an armoured division and served in the Middle East last year.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur, supreme commander, was expected to disclose soon how United States higher commands would be divetailed with Anzac commands.

Millions of pounds already have been allocated to provide United States forces in Australia with air bases, living quarters and some forms of equipment, Air Minister Arthur S. Drakeford disclosed, and more millions will follow.

A number of former Royal Australian Air Force stations will be training purposes, aircraft assembly factories and other facilities also have been turned over to the United States forces, he said.

Drakeford said he declared that Americans were taking part in the conversion of Royal Australian Air Force pilots from advanced trainer types of aircraft to fast combat machines.

This aspect of the cooperation, he said, "is a pretty fair guide to what the policyholder should pay for the picture is reversed and it is he who has the use of the money."

Mr. Blackall explained the protest has been referred to the actuarial section of the life insurance department for study.

Divorce Is Granted To Local Woman

Hartford, April 2.—(AP)—Frances Wanda Blake, of 717 Tolland turnpike, Manchester, was awarded a decree of divorce from Leslie J. Church, East Hartford, on grounds of desertion today in Superior Court, together with custody of three children, $10 a week alimony and $15 a week for support.

They were married Feb. 20, 1928, in East Hartford. G. C. Leasner appeared for the plaintiff.

This was the second of four uncontested divorce cases heard today instead of on Friday, which is a court holiday. Decree were granted in the other three, as follows:

Antoni Szczykowski, Hartford, against Emilia Karalis Szczykowski, of Hartford. Decree were granted July 7, 1920 at Bridgeport. Attorney J. M. Bailey.

Claire D. Hudson, Hartford, against Walter Hudson, Hartford, for desertion. They were married April 12, 1923, at Bangor, Me. Attorney M. M. Savitt.

Josephine Jenkins Williams, Hartford, against Joseph Williams, B. Williams, Hartford, on grounds of cruelty. Change of name to Josephine Jenkins granted. They were married June 28, 1925, at South Mills, N. C. Attorney M. M. Savitt.

Sent Jap Hunting Licenses

Chicago—(AP)—Col. R. M. Montgomery, head of the Marine Recruiting Office, has received a request from Marines defending Midway Island for some hunting licenses to shoot Japanese. Corp. William C. Spalek wrote they had heard Montague broadcasting about the "open season on Japanese" hunting licenses the Marines were issuing. He said he and his buddies on the island wanted some for their scrapbooks. Col. Montague sent the licenses and commendation of the heroism of the Marines.

Raps Interest Rate On Loans

Protest Filed with the State Insurance Commissioner Today.

Hartford, April 2.—(AP)—A protest against "the exhorbitant interest rate" being charged by life insurance companies on policy loans has been filed with the state insurance department, Commissioner Carl C. Blackall disclosed today.

The complaint was made by Harry Miller, president, American Policyowners Association, which has headquarters in New York City.

"To charge policyholders 5 or 6 per cent on loans under present day conditions is little short of scandalous and borders closely on usury," said Mr. Miller, who estimated that he was protesting on behalf of American policyholders generally and those of Connecticut in particular.

Quite a number of financial houses will make insurance loans at 3 per cent interest, said Mr. Miller in asking "why should a policyholder be asked twice that much for borrowing his own money from the life insurance company?"

Insurance companies usually pay between 2 1-2 and 3 1-2 per cent for the use of dividend money by the policyholders, according to Mr. Miller, who then inquires, "doesn't this seem a pretty fair guide to what the policyholder should pay for the picture is reversed and it is he who has the use of the money?"

Mr. Blackall explained the protest has been referred to the actuarial section of the state insurance department for study.

Drive on Subs Being Stepped Up Fast Now

Summer Campaign by 300 to 400 U-Boats Is Expected; 28 Sunk or Presumed to Be Sunk.

Washington, April 2.—(AP)—America's anti-submarine campaign is being stepped up rapidly to meet an expected all-out summer drive by 300 to 400 U-boats, reliable sources said today.

The Navy announced late yesterday that 28 Axis submarines had been sunk or presumed sunk by U. S. forces thus far. Naval observers said, however, that the rate of destruction was still too low to check the German drive. They gave this picture of the situation:

Germany had at the very least 120 ocean-going submarines before Dec. 7 and 180 more building for service by mid-summer. New evidence indicates that this figure is ultra-conservative, and salvaged parts of destroyed submarines show the Germans have developed very rapid methods of construction.

Although Germany has suffered heavy U-boat casualties thus far, the rate of sinking has not slowed up present U-boat activity appreciably and would be of dubious effectiveness against a more intense drive.

Fail to Deter Nazis

Even so, the Germans have failed to divert U. S. Naval strength from more vital operations to form convoys in American waters—the second line of defense, for instance. The number of merchant craft sunk off the Atlantic and Caribbean coasts is negligible—the 80 mark, but this rate might prove far from crippling to the speed of the tremendous ship-building program and development of land transportation facilities to bear some of the load.

The United States is making large increases in patrol forces, particularly in the air, and is developing new methods of locating and destroying U-boats. Placing Army planes on the patrol under direct command of the Navy has eliminated the submarine hunt. Further large increases in the patrol area by the Navy and Army anti-submarine craft and the training of crews.

Bend Right Just Beginning

Naval observers emphasized that while the battle of the Atlantic can coast is far from won, it is also far from lost. The real fight is just beginning.

Of the total of 28 Axis submarines announced sunk or presumed sunk, seven were in the Pacific. Donald Francis Mason, a 25-year-old Rochester, Minn., Naval flier engaged in the fall of Bataan, of the preliminary campaign.

Mason is the Atlantic pilot who recently reported "Sighted sub, sank same." The Navy added enough words to that report to explain that Mason spotted a submarine cruising at periscope depth, dived and dropped, two bombs from a low altitude which straddled the periscope and blew the sub back out of the water. It then sank and a large patch of oil covered the area.

Mason Rescues Mason

On a later patrol Mason blew up another submarine with depth charges. He has been awarded a Distinguished Flying Cross, a silver star to the cross and a commission as an ensign.

Another U-boat sinking in the Atlantic was accomplished chiefly by Ensign Donald Chic, 22, of San Francisco. Tepuni bombed a U-boat until it lay helpless on the surface and was finished off the next day by destroyers. He was awarded a Distinguished Flying Cross.

Army Will Have Own Newspaper

Washington, April 2.—(AP)—An Army newspaper, to be known as "Yank" and written by soldiers for soldiers, will begin publishing soon, the War Department announced today.

"Two members of the staff of "The Stars and Stripes," the Army weekly published in France during the last war, helped start the new weekly—Adolph Shelby Ochs, general manager of the Chattanooga, Tenn., Times, and Egbert White, vice-president of Batten, Barton, Durstine and Osborn, New York. Working with them were Robert Martin Fuoss, managing editor of The Saturday Evening Post, and Alfred C. Strasser, art editor of Liberty magazine.

"Yank" will carry no advertising, and it will be edited and managed by soldiers. Special editions will be prepared for task forces serving overseas.

Melton Museum Bids Are Sought

Hartford, April 2.—(AP)—Public Works Commissioner George M. Burke today issued an invitation for bids for construction of the James Melton museum, educational and scientific display building in Stamford which will house Melton's collection of "antique" automobiles.

Melton, radio and screen singing star, donated the site to the state with the understanding that the state would erect a suitable building for their display.

The call for bids cover general construction and electrical work. Bids will be received at the State Office Building until 2 p. m., April 21, following, which they will be read.

Japs May Be Feeding Fliers Benzedrine Pills

Boston, April 2.—(AP)—The possibility that the Japanese may be supplying their fliers with "air pills" made of benzedrine to enable them to withstand extremely high altitudes was advanced today by scientists attending the meeting of the Federation of American Societies for Experimental Biology.

The theory was expressed following coincidence of a report from the war zone that certain pills had been found on captured planes and a report made to the meeting that rats had been enabled to withstand simulated altitudes of more than six miles through administration of benzedrine.

Overnight News Of Connecticut

By Associated Press

Hartford — The State Public Utilities Commission today approved a State Highway Department project for strengthening and widening an eight-mile stretch of railroad tracks on Route 6 at Willimantic. The state's share of the project will cost $90,000.

Washington — Rep. Lilian Liberatore, organizer for the Amalgamated Lithographers of America (AFL), said today that she had gone on strike yesterday at the greeting card plant of The National Printing Company here, demanding a 12½-cent-an-hour wage increase. The strike was "100 percent" in the lithography department, she said.

Watertown—Watertown, which has been in error all the first half of rest of Connecticut's towns in the statewide tribal blackout last week, will be blacked out from 9 to 9:30 tonight, Col. John Thompson of the First Connecticut Regiment, commander of the Boston Civilian Defense Command, stationed in Watertown, said the rehearsal was satisfactory.

Hartford—Sugar may be scarce, but Attorney General Francis A. Pallotti ruled yesterday that the use of saccharin, dulcin or any other sweet substitute in the manufacture of preparation of ice-cream, other than sorbets or non-alcoholic beverages was taboo in Connecticut.

Scientific Facts Displace Faddism

The prevention of diseases by scientific health practices is many times easier than curing them, James C. Hart, M. D., Epidemiologist, Bureau of Health Education, pointed out in the weekly broadcast of the State Department of Health, Old-fashioned ideas such as hanging camphor or asafoetida bags around the neck in spring doses of sulfur and molasses have been replaced by ideas based on scientific developments in disease prevention and treatment which were believed impossible years ago.

A healthy body is one of our most priceless possessions, said Doctor Hart. To keep healthy, let its live moderately and eat well-balanced meals, using only pure water and milk pasteurized by pasteurization. Let all children be immunized against the common communicable diseases and protect them from unnecessary exposure to sickness. If illness comes, promptly call a doctor.

There are still some people who are either superstitious or foolish about health and illness, he explained. They neglect to immunize their children not only against smallpox and diphtheria but also whooping cough, scarlet fever, lockjaw and typhoid fever. Some mothers still run to the caster oil bottle for every abdominal pain in her child despite the fact that such pains are often caused by appendicitis which invariably becomes worse when a physic is given.

Bomber Sets New Ocean Hop Mark

London, April 2.—(AP)—The New Newfoundland-to-British flight record is 400 minutes, the holder is a U. S.-built Liberator (Consolidated) bomber and the pilot isn't going to be penalized for carrying speedier fuel, a British authorities disclosed today.

The old trans-Atlantic mark was shipped by an hour. The average speed for the 2,200-mile trip was 330 miles an hour.

The pilot was warned when he landed of prospective "strict disciplinary action" and he said he believed he had pushed the bomber's four motors beyond its limit assigned for ferry operations, but he was exonerated at a Ferry Command inquiry.

"A combination of the qualities of the airplane, an exceptional tail-wind and magnificent navigation" were then credited.

The Ferry Command said the bomber, after arrival at night over its destination, was circled about in the air for three hours because it still had too much gasoline to be landed safely in the darkness.

Lend-Lease Aide Arrives

Melbourne, April 2.—(AP)—Aiden G. Smith arrived today from Washington to become a member of the U. S. Lend-Lease Mission headed by W. S. Wasserman. He noted that Great Britain and Australia were the only two places outside the United States where the lend-lease administration had set up offices.

Mother Called Brave Woman

Baby Born in Packed Lifeboat Following Torpedoing of Ship.

Norfolk, Va., April 2.—Courage was the only necessity his mother and his doctor had when Jesse Roper Mohorovicic decided to enter this life Sunday night in a packed lifeboat plunging through darkness and 15-foot Atlantic waves. So they used much of it with success.

The eight-pound baby boy's birth amidst the rolling waves followed the torpedoing by an Axis submarine of an American passenger-cargo ship on which Mrs. Desanka Mohorovicic, 28, of New York, was traveling. Three crewmen were killed and 29 other persons were still missing today, but the mother, her baby and 87 other survivors reached Norfolk safely.

Young Jesse was born 13 hours after the launching of the lifeboat in which rode 24 persons. The mother, wife of an attache of the Yugoslav consulate of New York, had then been in labor three or four hours.

Doctor's Ribs Fractured

Dr. L. H. Conly, of Brooklyn, N. Y., ship's doctor, suffered from the fracture of two ribs received in a drop from the ship into the lifeboat.

He had no anesthesia and only the "simple instruments" of the life boat's medical kit.

A sail, only cover at hand—was stretched across one end of the lifeboat as a makeshift protection for the mother, and the job was done.

Jesse did his part by living out the twenty hours after his lifeboat vessel came, cradled in a woman's lap and tucked beneath the mother's dress against the cold wind of the sea.

Show No Ill Effects

The infant, his mother and a 6-year-old sister, Vana, were in a Norfolk hospital today, showing no ill effects from the experience.

The crew of the rescue ship and surviving passengers of the torpedoed vessel put together $210 and presented it to Mrs. Mohorovicic. The Norfolk branch of the Navy Relief Society presented a layette.

The doctor, who told the story to newsmen here, said of Mrs. Mohorovicic:

"She was a brave and lovely woman."

To Become Physical Director

Litchfield, April 2.—(AP)—Delmar A. Knox, baseball, basketball and soccer coach of Litchfield High school for the past four years, will leave Saturday to become a junior director of physical training in the Army Air Corps at Maxwell Field, Alabama. Mr. Knox, native of Woodbury and former Springfield College athlete, combined coaching with the position of science teacher at the local school.

No Man Is Old at Forty Nowadays at Plane Plants

Los Angeles, April 2.—(World-Wide)—The days when factories called a man old at 40 have been shelved here.

Old? Hey mama from beaven to Los Angeles airplane plants if he can tell a drill from a squeezer.

Los Angeles airplane assembly lines have swallowed tidal waves of new workers the past three years like New York's Grand Central station gobbles commuters at 5:31.

The numbers here now are a military secret. But they could easily swallow a thousand workers and thereby put them nearer their homes. But the workers object—

A Visit to Detroit

Perhaps we Americans, from this point in, will be laboring under a delusion of we think that Washington—the place toward which all discontent and controversy heads, and in which can find answering discontent and controversy—is any longer the capital of this country. Perhaps the real capital, from this time on, is a place called Detroit.

If you don't believe us, believe the long list of erstwhile Washington correspondents who have been stealing away from their preoccupation with the Washington feuding of capital and labor and taking trips out to the place where capital and labor are too busy to have much time for fighting each other. A good many of these correspondents seem to have gone out to Detroit, or some other production center, in the past week or so, and it has done all of them good—just as, perhaps, the award of a Navy E in East Hartford startled the malcontents of this community into an awareness that, despite all the headline controversy, production itself is marching ahead.

Today we propose to take our readers out to Detroit. We must travel through the mind and ears and eyes of Arthur Krock, chief columnist of the New York Times, but that is no hardship.

"This is the forge of Vulcan," begins Mr. Krock, "and it is roaring with his fires in which the tools of battle are being fashioned. The conversion of the automobile industry into factories of the weapons of total war has been rapid and efficient, the results already overwhelming.

"Within a wide circle around Detroit huge prairies have, in a few months, been covered with plants for war production, and already the means of transporting this to the distant and scattered regions where the Axis must be thrown back has begun to make conversion as a major problem. The Detroit area is now pouring out the engines of death that are designed to maintain and restore the freedom of human life, and yet it seems but a brief time ago that men were arguing, first over whether swords could be wrought from the tools that had made ploughshares, and second whether the war would not be ended before the tooling changes could be made.....

"A visit to the great Ford bomber factory, now coming to completion, and to the Chrysler tank arsenal, where the monster wagons of battle have for some time been rolling off the assembly line, dispels much of the concern that beets all observers of the war's direction in Washington. Here are to be seen—in the Chrysler plant—armament production on a scale undreamed of when the plans were made; in the Ford plant—speed-up processes that seem only American industrial genius could devise; and in both factories a combination of skill, celerity, volume and working space which will assure any spectator that the growth and strength of this country came from no accident, but from the native ability of the people themselves.

"What are being and will be produced here are the deadliest and most efficient engines of destruction the world has ever known. Yet, with the ultimate objective in mind, a visitor traveling toward the plants feels he never beheld anything so stimulating and glorious as their huge outlines looming through the snowfall of a belated Spring. And once he has entered the colossal structures he is suffused with the feeling that, if American industry can triumph over every obstacle that has been set against it—Hitler and the Japanese as well as politics and other forms of internal selfishness.....

"In the Chrysler plant production has not exceeded in hundreds of per cents the original capacity design. . . . So vast is the operation that five of the same type of tanks can be lifted and set down further along the assembly line in one operation of the giant cranes.

"Workers in the plants appeared to this correspondent to be cheerful and talked that way, and to be giving full concentration to their tasks. In the women of management, he found ready exchanging of tools and facilities, strong support of proposals that companies with war contracts be limited to a 6 per cent profit, and no disposition to haggle with the government over the fixation of costs to be allowed. 'If the cost turns out to have been fixed too low, we can fight that out later,' said E. T. Keller, head of the Chrysler Company.

"The forty-hour week came into every discussion. But, said one executive, 'the public must pay time-and-a-half overtime on that basis, not us. The government must figure it into our production costs. If the public wants to pay it on forty hours instead of forty-eight, that is the public's business. We are not permitting the argument to affect the production schedules.'"

There's sanity, you see, as well as miracle production, in Detroit.

Well, then, by courtesy of Mr. Krock, our visit ends. But we, like Mr. Krock feel better for having made it. It would be a foolish gambler who would sell this America short.

The Yankee and His Season

The true New Englander leaves arbitrary rules and schedules for his own climate to the carpet-bagger; as for himself, and his own gardening practice, he knows that the exceptions are the rule, and that there has never yet been one season exactly like another. He adjusts himself accordingly.

Thus, although this spring, as in other springs, he may be told that "there's no sense doing a thing about a garden until May 1," the true son of this soil and climate has his own private almanack as well, and this he trusts, his strain having, in two or three hundred years, found nothing better to follow.

What precise rule about May 1, normal bargaining instincts and step forward to a free and equal place in a free world, or to run the risk of increasing the odds that all this world, India included, will be a slave world.

The issues at stake are far beyond any previous concept of the Indian problem as such. It is not British or Indian statesmanship, but world statesmanship, in which Sir Stafford and the Indian leaders are engaged. It is to be hoped that, realizing their great responsibility, they will persist and persist until a solution, no matter how impossible it may seem at certain stages, does arrive.

Connecticut Yankee

By A. H. O.

The recent controversy between Milk Administrator Donald O. Hammerberg and Attorney General Francis A. Pallotti seems, in a way, to pass judgment on the new system of milk control in Connecticut.

The judgment is that, not yet, by any means, has the problem of milk been resolved into simple terms the average citizen might ever hope to understand. We may be pardoned for believing that until the problem itself can be reduced to simple terms which can be understood by somebody beside the administrator himself and a lawyer, we shall still linger far from any true solution of the problem.

Perhaps that is the rash judgment of ignorance. Perhaps it was ordained, by some mysterious fate, that the business of taking milk from a cow and getting it on the consumer's cut table must forever and infinitely remain a mystery, veiled in language which only those who devote a lifetime to it can ever hope to understand. But we suspect that, in American life, every day, a good many more complicated industries have got themselves down to a simpler basis and simpler terms, and, although much less natural in origin, are committing a good deal less offense against the simplicity of nature which is typical of Elsie, the source of all milk.

At any rate, we have before us the Market Bulletin of the Milk Administrator, sent out, we presume, for the understanding of all, and this Market Bulletin concerns itself primarily with an exposition of just what it is the Milk Administrator wants Attorney General Pallotti to do with regard to enforcement of the milk control act, and why he wants him to do it. From our perusal of this remarkable document, which covers some six pages of close, wide typing, we have managed to cull a few elemental facts.

It appears, for instance, that the administrator has been running into two kinds of trouble—the first from dealers who do not agree with him as to what the milk control act itself says, and the second from dealers who will have nothing to do with it, no matter what it says. But from that point on the matter becomes more and more involved; it develops, as you read, that the chief violation of the act is that dealers are not reporting the prices they are paying so the Administrator can determine the price they should pay, and so on, into refinements of interpretation which we plead our selves unable to follow.

We gain an impression that the Administrator is aiming at something which may be right and sound, and we have no doubt that he is making an excellent try at following, with a sound and level head, all the intricacies which have been permitted to grow into the milk industry. But if Administrator Hammerberg set out to convince the people of Connecticut that he is right, as he may well be and probably is, in his attacks upon Attorney General Pallotti, we feel it necessary to tell him that he doesn't stand a chance—not until he presents a case the layman can understand.

From all this it is easy to suspect that the very system the Administrator is trying to enforce is so onerous and unwieldy that its proper organization would require more calculators and interpreters than there are Einsteins. And we venture to conclude, again, that the way to solve the milk problem is not to make it still more complicated, which seems the result of the new administration, but to cut this Gordian knot and begin anew with a resolve that the history of milk shall run from "a cow gives milk" to "People drink milk" with a like standard of simplicity covering all the stages between those two simple facts.

"We Are Aryan Moslems Have to Stick Together!"

Washington in War Time

By Jack Stinnett

Washington—Notes from a capital cuff:

You can't credit it to the administration, the Army, the Navy or anybody, but one of the frequently heard phrases around here these days is: "Don't put MacArthur on the spot." What is meant by this is simply, don't expect the miracle man of Bataan to turn the tide of battle in the southwest Pacific.

Maybe, however, an air force and naval support, General MacArthur might be able to take the war to Australia. But the well deserved laurels he has earned so far were based on just the opposite. With an inferior (in numbers) ground force, practically in the gulf and walled with Miss Davis while the fiddlers fiddled and the onlookers clapped hands.

This Stage Door Canteen has become one of the bright havens for men in uniform on leave. It is a contribution of the acting fraternity. Eddie Sobel, the producer and theatrical manager, is its director. A man in uniform can't spend a nickel in the canteen. Sandwiches, coffee, snacks, all are free. The orchestras come in by assignment, and donate their services. The actors and actresses from the New York theater and the Hollywood studios come in and donate their services. Five hundred New York show girls have devised a method to come in and play hostess to the soldiers. Not just to entertain the soldiers want to dance. They talk when they want to talk.

When the canteen was opened a couple of months ago there was a sort of preview put on by the entertainment committee. Everyone donated food. There were cans of coffee, baskets of fruit, cakes, hams, a roast turkey, and strangest of all, wine, real expensive "Bette keep your eyes open for trouble, eh?"

"Indeed, I will be most careful," promised the colonel of intrigue. "And meanwhile, senor, permit me to thank you once again for a kindness. I shan't forget it."

They went into the hotel together, chatting casually. Escobar continued on his way to the patio and Allen halted at a graphic from Sun Su behind the desk. The Chinese was holding out a telegram, which Allan took and ripped open in some mystification. He wasn't expecting a wire from anybody.

The message was signed with the name of the magazine editor in San Francisco, and the text was brief. It said: "When are you going to send us some pictures?"

Allan grinned to himself. He recognized the fine Italian hand of his chief in this. It was he who had sent it, not the editor, and it was merely designed to bear out his avowed reason for coming to Colonel Escobar. It could also be construed as a delicate hint to get down to his real job! That reflection wiped the grin from his thoughts. He stuck the envelope in his pocket, glanced cautiously about as usual to make sure there were no eavesdroppers, then spoke quickly to Sun Su.

"I'm going for a spin in the car directly after lunch—looking for photographs, you know. Thought I might be there a while, so look along the shore road and see what you find."

"Be careful, senor," murmured the little man, nodding wisely. "If I might suggest something—"

"Please do. I'll welcome any tips you give me."

"Inland about half a mile there is a second road, not too rough, which takes the same direction as the first, but much more private. When you are abreast of the islands I mentioned, you'll find a steep little hill with a clump of pines at the top. Lying in them, you can examine your pair of glasses I noticed you carrying, you can see much without being seen yourself."

"Right! Thanks a lot, Sun Su." Allan held the other's eye a moment. "If I don't come back, you'll know where I went last!"

"I understand, senor. I quite understand."

Allan went into the corridor leading to his room. Some yards beyond it the door of another room was slightly ajar; a shadow passing to and fro across it told of movement within. That would be Jack Zaimis, Allan reflected, her nose before joining her constant escort in the patio; the telegram signed with the center of the hall, went into his room, shut the door and fell to powdering his own.

A moment later he smiled at himself in the glass above his washstand in light footing had come along the hall, paused just an instant, then went along toward the lobby. The chance had caught the mouse. Asia had picked up the envelope, but she was going to have a look at its contents before returning it to its owner.

Half an hour later, coolly clothed in a fresh linen suit and feeling pleased with himself, he selected a table in the patio and ordered lunch. The boy had no sooner gone than Colonel Escobar came sauntering across the court and laid a familiar missive on the table.

"Senorita Minor asked me to hand you this; she picked it up in the corridor, where she thinks you must have dropped it."

"A thousand thanks. Just a word from my editor asking why I haven't been sending him pictures."

"Yes. And apparently the impelling a bit himself." Escobar's hand was at his mouth, either to shape his small mustache or to hide a twitch of his lips. "You said his office was in San Francisco, did you not? Yet I observed the wire is dated from San Diego."

"The devil!" said Steele sorely. It was disconcerting to have the chief's well-meant gesture turn into a boomerang, but Allan forgot that in a temporary irritation. "Do you always read lost correspondence before returning it to its owner, Colonel?"

Arrangements have been made by the Department of Commerce to permit seamen to make allotments from their salaries for the purchase of defense bonds and stamps.

Man About Manhattan

By George Tucker

New York.—Shy, resolute Bette Davis came to the Stage Door Canteen in West 44th street to entertain the soldiers. She stood in front of the microphone twisting a pale blue lace handkerchief in her hands. The place was full of men in uniform, sailors, soldiers, marines. . . . Just before her a comedian had been telling fast-cracking gags. Before this a Broadway torch singer had wailed a melancholy lament.

"I can't sing or tell stories," Miss Davis said, "but I'll be glad to dance with anyone who cares to dance with me."

The men arose en masse and advanced on Miss Davis. For the moment that she was free from the arms of man after man in the fighting forces of Uncle Sam, Private Sam Pansington, of Rural Route Three, Lakes, Maritnes Island, walked with Miss Davis while the fiddlers fiddled and the onlookers clapped hands.

Scabies A Common Cause Of Itching

The skin trouble called scabies is produced by the itch mite. The mite burrows beneath the skin and the presence of this small, insect-like animal then causes a characteristic itching which becomes worse at night immediately after going to bed.

Scabies may be very easily transferred to one person from another by way of bedding as some of the mites usually stay in the blankets. A second person using the same bedding may thus pick up the unwelcome visitor. Sleeping—the summer vacation when there is more traveling around than at other times, scabies is often widely distributed and may pass from the visitor to the visited and vice versa.

There is little danger of the itch mite being carried from person to person by the bed linen as the laundering usually kills the mites, but the blankets used first by one person and then by another may transmit the mite.

Very often the patient with scabies does not know what is causing the itching of the skin. In the first place, this skin parasite is not easy to see and will be overlooked unless a careful search is made. The female parasite is of a grayish color and is just barely seen with the naked eye, while the male can not be seen at all. Unless the patient examines the skin with a lens he may fail to find either the parasite or the characteristic burrows made under the skin by the female.

Another reason why the possibility of scabies is overlooked is that the patient will do considerable scratching in an effort to relieve the itching and the skin is injured by the fingernails in such a way as to cover up the real trouble.

Other names for scabies are prairie itch, Norwegian itch, Cuban itch, etc. When a physician does not recognize the cause of the trouble and makes no search for the little parasite, he will find his itching will continue. It is not unusual for the itch to have existed for a period of several months, or even years.

The patient may discover the cause of his annoyance and take a suitable treatment. He may kill the body of the parasite, but may not understand the importance of thorough cleansing of the clothing and bedding, and the parasite may be picked up again from these sources.

The characteristic sign of the itch mite is the itching, which is usually absent during the daytime but is especially noticeable after first going to bed. After the female mite has burrowed a tunnel under the epidermis, making small pimples or blisters, she deposits her ova. The usual places for these burrows are in the skin between the fingers, at the wrists, the ankles, the folds of the armpit and around the breasts.

Dr. Frank McCoy prepared an article on Scabies which describes a simple treatment which usually proves effective in stopping the scabies and killing the mites. If you wish a copy, write to McCoy Health Service in care of this newspaper and enclose a large, self-addressed envelope and six cents in stamps. It is generally easy to rid the body of this parasite, if a few simple rules are observed by the patient.

Questions And Answers (Eyestrain and Indigestion)

Question: "Anxious" writes: "Have been bothered off and on with indigestion and getting my worst attacks on Sundays. It has occurred to me that on Saturdays I get a weekly magazine which I read from cover to cover. Do you thing the indigestion is coming from straining the eyes my making them work too hard in doing so much reading in one day?"

Answer: Quite possibly. Have the eyes examined.

Be yet his wealth, he spent his health
And then with might and main
He turned around and spent his wealth
To get his health again

Bride's Death Is Mystery

Pajama-Clad Body Is Found with Head Submerged in Bathtub.

New York, April 2—(AP)—Police looked today to an autopsy to explain the mysterious death of a 19-year-old bride of 10 months whose pajama-clad body was found bent over her half-filled bathtub with the head submerged.

A trail of blood from the bedroom to the bathroom of Mrs. Sylvia Stern's Bronx apartment, discovered when the young matron's mother, Mrs. Edith Gooding, found her dead yesterday, caused the homicide squad to list the death as "undecided."

Bruises on Lip and Chin

Although Dr. Louis Lefkowitz, assistant medical examiner, said he believed death was from natural causes, he ordered the autopsy on finding a bruise inside Mrs. Stern's lower lip and another on her chin, both suffered before death.

The medical examiner said he thought Mrs. Stern might have suffered a hemorrhage of the nose or mouth as she lay in bed and that the blood found was left as she ran to the bathroom.

About $42 Missing

Both Mrs. Gooding and the bride's husband, Bernard, said about $42 was missing from the apartment.

Capt. William Rice of the Bronx homicide squad discounted the robbery theory, after observing that Mrs. Stern wore an engagement ring with a large diamond, a wrist watch, a gold wedding ring and a gold necklace, none of which had been disturbed.

Soldiers Scuffle With Policemen

Lowell, Mass., April 2—(AP)—A group of 30 to 40 soldiers scuffled with an equal number of Lowell policemen early today in an attempt to obtain release of a dozen other soldiers who had been picked up earlier for "safe keeping." Police Sergt Walter L. Kivin reported.

The encounter occurred on the steps and street in front of police headquarters, and the soldiers retired after ten of their number were locked up along with the one whose release had been demanded, Kivin said.

Except for a few bruises, apparently no injuries were suffered. Military police later took the locked up soldiers back to Fort Devens, about 20 miles from here.

Key Workers Join Second Walkout

Fall River, Mass., April 2—(AP)—Key workers in 17 of Fall River's 28 cotton textile mills joined the second walkout in two weeks today, pointing to the eventual shutting down of all plants unless mediation is successful in the very near future.

Wide loom fixers, slashertenders and knot tiers walked out representatives of rival unions prepared to meet in the state house at Boston with Charles H. Cole, chairman of the State Board of Conciliation and Arbitration, and Theodore W. Kheir, principal mediation officer of the War Labor Board. The session was expected to begin at 2 p.m.

Longevity Jumps Nearly 11 Years

Hartford, April 2—(AP)—During the last 30 years, average longevity has been increased by nearly 11 years, said Dr. N. Herbert Dailey, director of the Bureau of Communicable Diseases, in a radio talk today.

Dr. Dailey traced the development of methods for controlling communicable disease. He instanced diphtheria. Last year Hartford had only three cases, as compared with 429 in 1920. Typhoid fever had dropped to three cases as compared with 51 in 1920.

Use Of Inland Waterways

Editor Manchester Herald:

Gasoline is being rationed to the Service Stations. Soon it may be rationed by card to the consumers. Fuel Oil deliveries have been restricted for several months. The sale and installation of conversion burner units has been stopped. So also has the sale and installation of Boiler Burner units been ordered discontinued after April 24, except in new homes already under construction.

What does this all add up to? On the one hand, it means a reduction of our living standards, and on the other—the lack of petroleum products in seventeen states along the Atlantic Seaboard. But there is no shortage of oil! Some Texas refineries are already closed because they have no more room to store petroleum products. This shortage of petroleum products on the East Coast is caused by the war. Tankers were loaned to England last fall before we entered the war, and now our government has taken a large number of them in our war effort, leaving some to the Pacific Ocean and others to various parts of the globe.

Many tankers have been sunk right off the Atlantic Coast, so close that one might stand there and watch the operation. Lives are many courageous and patriotic citizens are being cut through this emergency, endeavoring to continue to make possible our war effort and keep homes warm and cars running.

Yes, all this, and what's being done about it?

A pipe line from Texas to New York was refused because the steel could not be spared. Patrols and routes are being established, but tankers are still being sunk and we are being subjected to worse. Isn't it the height of folly to let this happen when parallel to our shores from one end of the coast to the other, from Boston to Key West, and across the Florida peninsula from Stuart through Lake Okeechobee to the Gulf is a great Inland Waterway, safe from submarine attack.

Fuel Oil and other supplies from Texas, New Orleans, Mobile, and Florida parts could move up the coast in perfect safety. A thousand or so barges 150 ft. long, 37 ft. wide and 12 feet deep could relieve the situation, save lives, keep industry operating at top speed, houses warm, and cars on the road.

There are men in Washington who can act in this matter; our Congressmen know who they are. Why not, therefore, write your Congressmen today. Tell them we want action on this matter at once. With the loss of the Netherlands oil supply which we must now supplant and with continued sinkings of tankers, still fewer tankers will be available to us for oil. Why not use some of the steel in the barges that has been prorated for tankers, or if feasible, build barges out of other available material like lumber. There will be a permanent source of transportation where tankers are not, due to sinkings and the war effort. Hundreds of barges can be built during the next three or four months and all Eastern points supplied by a moving row of small barges. Write to your Congressmen today and tell your friends to write. A moment cannot be lost, if you want to keep your homes warm next winter.

Strike of Milk Drivers at End

Rochester, N. Y., April 2—(AP)—A one-day strike of milk drivers that had paralyzed deliveries to approximately 115,000 homes here ended early today in favor of arbitration.

Termination of the walkout of 60,000 members of the Milkwagon Drivers union (AFL) followed City Health Officer Arthur M. Johnson's ultimatum to union leaders and dealers that deliveries must be made to the young, aged and infirm.

The union voted 460 to 98 to submit the dispute to arbitration and return to work when neither side could agree on methods of delivering the 60,000 quarts Johnson warned they must in the interest of health.

Fasting Theories Proved Harmful

Spokane, Wash., April 2—(AP)—Liberty Grey's theory that if a 30-day fast is good, a 40-day one is better, landed him in the emergency hospital.

Grey told hospital attendants that he was benefiting by a month's fast in 1935, and decided to continue it 10 more days this time.

His condition is critical.

Labor Hearing To End Today

All Testimony In On Charges Brought by New Haven Union.

New Haven, April 2.—(AP)— A formal National Labor Relations Board hearing on union charges against the Winchester Repeating Arms Company, manufacturer of the Garand rifle, was expected to close late today with presentation of oral arguments by both sides.

The United Radio, Electrical and Machine Workers' Union (CIO), basing its action on testimony by T. I. S. Cook, plant manager, sent an amended complaint to the NLRB regional offices in New York.

Cook testified that no employes representation plan had been in effect at the company for more than seven years despite statements in the Winchester Employes Manual that such a plan "is in force."

Emil Scherer, Cornelius Cahill, Henry Carotta and John Coutts, supervisory employes of the munitions plant, testified during the forenoon that they had never made any attempt to discover union relationships of men in their employ or to discourage any organization activities.

Jack C. Paradise, board attorney, indicated that he would have notes on reprimands given employes over a period of years and made by Charles E. Mackley, general foreman of the box and printing department, examined by a handwriting expert.

MacAleer produced the notes in a record book.

The foreman testified that work records kept by Ernest Cruse, discharged union steward, were inaccurate alleging that the amount of material claimed by Cruse as hauled to the packing department was beyond the capacity of machines making boxes in the printing plant.

Couple Celebrates 40th Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Albert E. Eagleson of 54 Fairfield street were the honor guests at a surprise celebration of their fortieth or ruby wedding Tuesday evening. The party was given at their home by their children and grandchildren and a few close friends, who brought with them a beautiful supply of good things for a buffet luncheon, flowers and gifts, which included an easy chair and a radio. They were also remembered with congratulatory letters and telegrams. Singing old-time songs and dancing the old-fashioned set were among the evening's pastimes.

Mr. and Mrs. Eagleson were married in Winifred Episcopal church, Belfast, Northern Ireland, 40 years ago March 31, and have lived in Manchester for 37 years. Formerly employed by Case Brothers, Mr. Eagleson has been with Cheney Brothers for many years. Eight children were born to them, one of whom died in childhood. There are two daughters and five sons, also eight grandchildren, all of whom live in Manchester.

Desirable In Program

"At a time when our nation needs every trained worker it can mobilize for war output, we must continue to draw upon young organizations which have proved themselves useful. In recognition as an agency providing pre-employment training, the NYA is a desirable part of our over-all industrial manpower program."

He declared the tools used by the NYA were "old, reconditioned and largely unsuitable for war production."

He added:

"Recent surveys of NYA machine tools conducted by the Tools Committees of the War Production Board and the Army and Navy Munitions Board disclose that very few tools of the type which are critical in war production are used in NYA shops. These are being investigated carefully as to their condition and suitability for war production. Any that are found to be more useful for production in war industry or for in-plant training will be transferred from NYA to the plants."

Andover Crash Causes Deaths Of 3 Persons

Anthony Gambardella, 29, 23 Newman street.

The Injured

Critically injured is:

Katherine Anna Kotopoulos, 27, 143 Hollister street.

Samel, a native of Chicopee, Mass., was the operator of the automobile, a convertible sedan, and with Miss Petrakos, was killed instantly as the car overturned at least once. Gambardella was alive when removed from the wrecked automobile but died in the Willimantic hospital. Miss Kotopoulos is not expected to survive.

In Training Here

The two girls and Gambardella have been taking a training course at the local factory and were to leave in a few days to be operatives in a new factory in Lowell, Mass. Samel has been employed at the local plant for several months and was living with his sister, Mrs. Theodore Grzybek, on the Consolidated Cigar Company's farm on Lydall street.

At Farewell Party

A farewell party for the soon-to-depart parachute workers had been held at the Log Cabin, well known roadside resort on Liberty Hill, Lebanon, last night.

The girls had been staying about a half hour after midnight the automobile, traveling at a fast rate, went out of control round the sharp curve on the hill just before the intersection with Route 6 in Andover.

Truck Is Halted

The car swerved back and forth on the highway two or three times and then overturned. Donald L. Cummings, of Lebanon, operating a tractor-trailer type truck loaded with crushed limestone was driving towards Columbia, up the hill, and saw that the approaching automobile was out of control. He halted the truck just as the overturning car crashed into the front of his truck. He was unhurt. The wrecked machine hated 450 feet on the Andover side of the Columbia town line. A passing autoist took Gambardella and Miss Kotopoulos to the Windham hospital and Mark Holmes, local undertaker, was summoned and given permission to remove the bodies of the dead.

Lived On Hollister St.

Miss Petrakos boarded while here with Mrs. Gertrude M. Lawrence at 143 Hollister street as did Miss Kotopoulos. Miss Petrakos' home in Lowell was on Prince street and she was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Petrakos. She leaves her sisters and three brothers, one of whom is with the U. S. armed forces in the Philippines.

Gambardella's home was at 621 Broadway, Providence, R. I., and Samel's father, Stanley Samel, lives in Chicopee, Mass. Miss Kotopoulos' home is at 76 Suffolk street, Lowell, Mass.

Fair Rental Units Meet

Conference Called in Final Attempt to Secure Local Control.

Hartford, April 2.—(AP)—A statewide conference of Fair Rent Committees was called here today in a final attempt to secure local control of skyrocketing rentals before imposition of more drastic supervision under the new emergency rent control act passed by Congress.

Summoned by the State Defense Council, upwards of 200 fair rent committeemen from a score of Connecticut communities affected by the war boom convened at Hotel Bond for discussion and discussion of the housing and rental problems. Brig. Gen. Sanford H. Wadhams, chairman of the State Housing Committee, opened the session.

Situation More Critical

Among the highlights of the conference will be a report by John W. Andrews, director, Housing Division of the Defense Council, on the results of a questionnaire sent to fair rent bodies, covering rental conditions in their respective communities. Sample replies to the questionnaire, released yesterday by Mr. Andrews, showed that the situation was growing more critical despite the imminence of federal control.

The survey of the Hartford Real Estate Board on increased operating costs in connection with the ownership of rental properties, mentioned last week, will also be discussed by the conference. Richard F. Lucas, chairman of the committee which directed the survey, will outline the results, while Theodore W. Slack, president of the Realty Board, will discuss adjustments for improvements to properties. Comments on the survey will be made by John A. Cauliffe, Hartford realty man, and Benjamin J. Abrams, member of the Hartford fair rent group.

Will Study Effect

The opening discussion will be concerned with the effect of the new rent control legislation on voluntary efforts to stabilize rentals. Mrs. Beatrice G. Rosahn, assistant director of the Defense Council's Housing Division, will lead the panel.

Harold Strauch, vice chairman of the Hartford Fair Rent Committee, will discuss the use of existing fair rent bodies as a court of first instance in settling rent disputes, after appointment of a Federal administrator under the new law.

ing been appointed eight or nine months ago. Reports had it that he had been at odds with Commissioner Cox before the latter was faced with charges.

Graph Defense Exhibit

The graph was introduced as a defense exhibit.

Previous to the start of cross examination, the attorney general adduced testimony from Brown that a contractor was credited for idle equipment at a time when it actually was in use.

Seeking to support his contention that, in effect, double payment was sought by The Carl Gammino Company of Providence, R. I., for equipment which it contended was kept idle because of changes in the plans for two Ledyard bridges, Assistant Attorney General Richard F. Corkey questioned the inspector, Roland D. Brown of Norwich in detail concerning what equipment was in use on specific dates.

Against State's Interest

Attorney General Francis A. Pallotti in charging Cox with 22 counts of "misconduct, malfeasance, neglect of duty or incompetence," held that the commissioner's approval of a $7,145 claim by the Rhode Island bridge builder was against the state's interest.

The claim, filed in 1939, was approved by Cox on the ground that when the state altered plans for the bridge pilings, after Brown had discovered faults, certain of Gammino's equipment was held idle.

Corkey asked Brown, on the witness stand for the second successive day today, to compare his diary listing equipment in operation with a schedule of idle equipment which the witness testified yesterday he had made up some time after the claimed periods of idleness.

The assistant attorney general first asked Brown if his diary showed that on July 15 and 16, 1938, three trucks were operating on the job to which the witness replied "Yes."

Listed as Idle on Schedule

Corkey then drew a statement from Brown that the schedule listed these trucks as being idle on those days.

Corkey sought to show that other equipment including a shovel, a bulldozer, and hammers were listed as idle on various days when actually they were in operation.

Corkey also brought out that on Oct. 30, a Sunday, a shovel, only one on the job, was not in operation because it was being repaired.

Brown testified that his schedule credited the company with an idleness allowance for that piece of equipment on that same day.

Corkey also questioned Brown in detail concerning four compressors that were on the job. Asking how he determined whether these compressors were working or idle, the witness replied that he did not remember.

Then, Corkey asked whether he had used any record as a guide, and the witness replied "I still don't remember."

Shows Contractor's Record

Brown testified that the contractor's superintendent had shown him a record of when he claimed the compressors were brought on the job.

"Did you accept the record in that respect?" asked Corkey.

"I accepted them," replied Brown.

"You had no records yourself?"

"That is right," the witness replied.

Pallotti recently introduced as evidence a letter written by Cox to Carl Gammino, chairman of the Commissioner Cox before the latter was faced with charges.

Red Cross

The Production Department of the Manchester Chapter, American Red Cross is donating 40 sweaters to the soldiers here. It was announced today by the local headquarters.

Registrations are now being accepted for the third Motor Mechanics Course which is expected to be started in the near future. Registrants should apply to the Volunteer Service Bureau in the Municipal Building.

The Volunteer Service Bureau in the Municipal Building will be open tonight from 7 to 9 in charge of Miss Nancy Richardson. Due to the holiday tomorrow, the office will be open only from 2 to 5 p. m.

Letter From Scotland

The following letter has been received from Dundee, Scotland, by the local chapter:

"I am writing on behalf of the Women's Volunteer Services, Dundee, Scotland branch, to thank you very sincerely for your gift of pullovers.

"So far this town has fortunately suffered very little from air raids, but we are holding these gifts against anything that may happen this winter, and we are very grateful to you for helping us in this way.

"Please convey our thanks to all the members of your chapter who have contributed in any way to this gift and please write to Dundee and tell them it is very comforting and encouraging for us to know that we have so many good friends in America.

"Yours sincerely,

"Edith Lee, Secretary."

This letter was written in December 1941 and reached the local office today.

Letter from London

The following letter was also received at the local Red Cross headquarters today from the Women's Volunteer Service for Civilian Defense in London, England.

"We thank you most sincerely for all the loving-kindness that comes to us in the form of warm and useful frocks for our children in the bombed area of Battersea, London.

"You may rest assured that your gifts are distributed as widely as possible and that we in England are deeply appreciative of the good will of our American partners.

"Yours sincerely

Civilian Defense

School children who have been registered for the Civilian Army in the schools will bring back their registration cards this afternoon and Monday, it was announced today. Superintendent of Schools Arthur H. Hanson has sent bulletins regarding this to all teachers, enclosing cards which were distributed to all the children. The plan was discussed in the local schools Tuesday and Wednesday, after which the children took the cards home to their parents and explained the procedure to them.

There are 16 different kinds of farm work listed, and the boys and girls can pick the one they feel they would like to do best. They can sign up for full or part-time, or, if they wish, they can state that they do not want to work at all except in an emergency in such instances as to save a berry crop and so forth.

These cards will be filled out in school, as soon as they are brought back from the homes, and the number of children who are registering for the work is expected to be known in a short time.

Messengers Needed

High school boys, or any boy from 14 to 18 years of age, interested in becoming messengers for the Civilian Defense, are requested to register at the Civilian Defense Bureau in the Municipal building. The patriotic service these boys will be able to render, especially in cases where telephone service is disrupted, is of great importance. Messengers will be paid wardens's right hand man. It is planned to begin a messenger instruction shortly, and it is hoped as many boys as possible will sign up for this important service.

Need More Cooperation

Not nearly enough of local parents or relatives of the boys in service are responding to the appeal to establish a local roll of honor register of persons in service. There certainly has been sufficient publicity concerning this phase of the war work.

If you have a son or relative in the Army, Navy, Marines, Coast Guard—or any service branch—won't you write to Miss Reynolds, Municipal Building, giving all details you can on your boy? We want his name on the local Roll of Honor and are depending on you, to assist in this worthy work.

Send name and address Reynolds or phone her at her office or apartment.

Military Police At Camp Niantic

Boston, April 2.—(AP)—Activation of the 708th and 109th Military Police Battalions at Camp Niantic, Connecticut, April 9 was announced today by Brigadier General Thomas E. Troland, commanding general of the provisional military police command, First Corps Area.

Comprising 75 officers and 1,000 enlisted men, the units will be housed and trained at the former Connecticut National Guard camp and will live in winterized tents and permanent buildings.

General Troland said the two battalions will remain at Camp Niantic only for training and later would be utilized in various parts of New England, as directed by Major General Sherman Miles, commanding general of the area.

Slayer Caught On Dark Road; Three Victims

a dark road far from the scene of the deed swiftly today and announcing his confession.

Trooper Roy Perkins, one of the arresting officers, said that 20-year-old Dominick Piccone, convict two weeks out of prison, had admitted shooting one farmer for death in vengeance and killing the two others to protect his flight, meanwhile stealing a fourth man to help him flee.

Within a space of 24 hours two Oxford, Mich., farmers, Chastine E. Barber, 71, and Romaine C. Potter, 75, had been slain with rifle fire in their neighboring homes and Carl McKenzie, 43, was killed on his farm at Concord, 90 miles distant.

Sought Since Tuesday Night

Formally charged with murdering Barber, his former employer, and wanted as suspect in the other two shootings, Piccone had been sought since Tuesday night. It was then that Barber and Potter had been killed.

Early today a state police car containing Trooper Perkins and companion officers was cruising in the vicinity of Otisville, a Genesee county town some 45 miles from here. A car drove by with its lights dim.

A few minutes later, Perkins said, the short-wave radio from headquarters sounded the call to look for such a car as one suspected in the Oxford murders. Trooper Thorpe, 36, a neighbor of the Oxford victims who was believed behind a car ahead, signaled the car to halt.

Seized Without Struggle

Trooper Thorpe was the officer who overtaken and stopped. Piccone was seized without a struggle and taken to Otisville where Perkins described as "very nervous." Piccone was then "frisked."

Trooper Perkins said that his youthful prisoner spoke little at first but began to talk freely when ted he had shot Barber because "he had a machine gun with him" and then had killed Potter for fear that the latter might identify him.

The confession went on to say that Thorpe was killed because of his car commandeered, Perkins said.

Shot Because Number Seen

The third man to die, McKenzie, was shot on his farm yesterday afternoon because he had seen the license number of the automobile, Perkins said. Piccone was being sought for him.

Further questioning of Piccone was undertaken to fill in the gaps and explain how he seized Thorpe and escaped afoot for the night. Approximately 30 hours he spent in flight and hiding, Perkins said, and kept him with him for the approximately 30 hours he spent in flight and hiding. Thorpe, a Pontiac defense worker, was a neighbor of the Oxford victims.

When the arrest was made, Thorpe was at the wheel of the car, Perkins said. He said a .22 calibre rifle, believed the weapon used in killing Barber, and a .32 revolver were found in the car.

Trooper Perkins said Piccone told him he "didn't want to kill all three men, only Barber—because of something he held against him."

The farmer had employed Piccone as a juvenile. Officers said that Piccone at that time had come into conflict with authorities and had been turned over to Barber under an arrangement for such care of young offenders.

Widespread Hunt Begun

A widespread hunt, which involved the blockading of roads, began for a mad rifleman after the shootings of Barber and Potter. It was intensified when McKenzie was slain, yesterday as he presumably approached a shack on his farm to investigate the presence of a strange automobile.

At about the time of McKenzie's shooting, a warrant was being issued in Pontiac charging Piccone with murdering Barber. Officers meanwhile theorized that the slayer had stolen Thorpe's car and forced the owner to accompany him.

Shells from a .22 calibre rifle were found by the bodies of both Barber and Potter, who were slain in their Oakland county homes. Sheriff Howard Capron of Jackson county said eight empty shells from a .22 rifle were found at the scene of McKenzie's death, 90 miles from the homes of the other victims.

Sheriff Spencer A. Howarth of Oakland county identified Piccone as a former convict who had served a prison term for attempted rape in his home city of Highland Park, a Detroit suburb.

The man was employed at one time by Barber on the Oxford farm, and Sheriff Howarth said the farmer had testified against Piccone in connection with the rape case. Piccone had taken a dollar belonging to Barber, the sheriff said, and had it in his possession when arrested.

Howarth said he was informed that Piccone had threatened Barber afterwards with the remark "I'll get you for this if it's the last thing I do."

Sheriffs Howarth and Capron said they believed the same man committed all three killings in view of the fact that the .22 calibre rifle shells were found at each scene.

Two Are Hurt As Trucks Hit

Auto Catches Fire But Drivers Escape in Wapping Collision.

Two Massachusetts men are in the hospital with injuries received as the result of a triple truck collision which occured this morning at Stoughtons' corner in Wapping. They escaped with slight injuries.

According to witnesses, the men were lucky, as immediately after the collision, two of the three trucks burst into lames. Damage was slight, however, as the result of fast work by the Wapping Fire Department.

The flaming trucks were but ten feet from a barn owned by Miss Etta Stoughton, and for a time was in danger of catching fire.

One of the trucks was owned by the H. Toule Transportation Company of Boston, and the other by Robert Crocker of 680 Essex street, Lawrence, Mass. The truck which was not burned escaped with slight damage.

The men who are in the Memorial hospital are William Clemons of Lawrence, Mass., and William Reid of East Weymouth, Mass. They are reported as resting comfortably.

Report Skirmishes In Bataan Area

identified in the Army's communique yesterday as "your Tour troops," with no indication of whether they were American or Filipino.

Make Surprise Raid

Some 500 miles south of Digos, across the Moro gulf, a native guerilla unit raided the heart of the important Japanese-occupied city of Zamboanga in a surprise raid that reportedly destroyed several machine-gun nests, inflicted heavy casualties, and withdrew unscathed, apparently to the forests just north of Zamboanga.

Mindanao has thousands of miles of rough country where guerillas can mass for sudden attacks—mountains, swamps, and forests of ironwood, ratan, teak, ebony and jungle. The Lanao Moros of the island already have taken to heavily quoting the Koran to drive out the Japanese or die.

Military men pointed out that pressure by bush-fighters may impede Nipponese plans to realize on garrison duties. It also would detract from the Japanese drive further north, where General Wainwright's troops have replied the heaviest attack on Bataan.

No Material Change

Heavy fighting on the peninsula ended early yesterday. Although superior numbers of Japanese forced some U. S. outposts to withdraw a short distance, there was no material change in the situation. Wainwright's losses were slight, but the Japanese suffered heavy casualties.

There were occasional sharp clashes of patrols throughout the day yesterday, but otherwise ground activity was limited. Japanese Naval vessels shelled the west coast of the peninsula and dive bombers attacked the front lines and the Island of Corregidor, but no serious damage was reported.

Boy Drops Dead While at Play

Bristol, April 2—(AP)— Robert S. Reed, 14, Fourth Grade student at the South Side school, fell dead today during a recess period while he played with other boys.

Dr. Arthur S. Bracketti, medical examiner, said the death was caused by a heart condition. Asked the boy had been suffering from such a condition for years causing many absences from school.

Principal Ralph S. Strong said that while this was true, Reed had seemed improved lately and attended classes with regularity.

Besides his parents, he leaves brothers and sisters.

Two Arrested On Drug Charge

New York, April 2—(AP)—Ralph Prisco, 27, who was slain by a patrolman Monday after he and his girl companion had been talkes out of holding up a Brooklyn automobile driving school, would have been alive today if police plan had gone aright.

He also would have been charged with violation of the Anderson narcotics act, Detective Lieut. Edward Cooper of the narcotics squad said early today when he arrested two men on that charge.

Cooper said he had been trailing Prisco and the two arrested to day—Thomas Russo, 20, and Ed was Karnebeck, 25, for seveers weeks and were ready to pounce on them Sunday or Monday.

The three had cashed $1,500 worth of morphine somewhere on the lower East Side, Cooper said but had moved it just as the detectives were closing in.

THE HIGH SCHOOL WORLD

VOL. IX, NO. 27 THURSDAY, APRIL 1 Compiled by Students of Manchester High School Miss Helen Estes, Faculty Adviser

M. H. S. Heads At Meeting

Mr. Bailey, Mr. Illing Represent Professional Groups at New Britain.

Supt. Arthur H. Illing and Principal Edson M. Bailey attended the annual meeting of the Connecticut Association of Secondary School Principals at Teacher's College, New Britain, Saturday, March 28. Supt. Illing, who is president of the Conn. Association of Superintendents, was a guest of the Principals' Association, while Principal Bailey, who is president of that organization, presided at the morning and afternoon meetings.

The morning meeting was given over to committee reports on the activities of the association and to the consideration of business. A report on dramatic activities presented by Principal George Shattuck of the Norwich Free Academy was prepared for him by Miss Helen Page, faculty director of Rock and Buskin. Other reports included such matters as the U.Y.A., the scholastic press, debating, music and testing.

The Association voted to cooperate with the State Defense Council and the State Employment Office in two important actions affecting the national war effort. The first concerns the matter of registering high school pupils for farm work during the summer vacation. All secondary schools were urged to join in this effort. The second involves cooperation with the State Employment Office in the matter of reporting all high school senior placements so that this office may have more accurate information regarding the available labor supply.

Principal Harvey Fuller of the Wethersfield High School was elected president of the Association to succeed Principal Bailey, who has completed two terms of one year each in that office.

The afternoon session was addressed by Paul Collier, director of the Bureau of Youth Services in the State Board of Education, Dr. Alonzo Grace, Connecticut Commissioner of Education, and Dr. William Sutcliffe, Dean of the School of Business Administration of Boston University. Dean Sutcliffe, the principal speaker, stressed the need of consumer education in the secondary schools but continued that it must be a constructive nature. He also gave as his opinion that American society after the war would still be a capitalistic society based on the profit motive. This society would not necessarily be the same as the one existing before the war but much like it with more cooperation between labor, capital, and consumers. He urged the teaching and practice of thrift, predicting that out of present savings would come the reservoir of purchasing power which would present a depression after the war. He made a strong plea for the maintenance of a balanced program of secondary education and deplored efforts tending to make this program too vocational.

Other guests of the association were Superintendents Carlyle Ring of New Britain and Karl Lee of Enfield.

Home Ec. Classes Study Nutrition

Know your foods! Why study vitamins? Is vitamin A nutrition? Why bother to plan a well-balanced meal? Why drink milk? Nutrition, a word often seen in print today, is being studied by the girls of Home Economics classes, for it is not only a valuable subject for personal welfare, but it will help to make America strong.

The radio, newspapers and articles in magazines say that everyone should be food conscious. The startling discovery that American youths are not being fed enough of the proper foods was made during the first draft of the present war.

Many of the men were rejected primarily because they had not received the proper food. Poor teeth is one part of the body which is effected by some lack in the daily diet.

Posters have been made by the students to emphasize nutrition, and are now being exhibited on the bulletin boards of the Main and Franklin Buildings.

The Home Economics III girls contributing articles on nutrition for a notebook which is being kept by the whole class. Here are three golden rules for good health:

Golden Rule No. 1. A sound foundation for bouyant health is built by seven ordinary foods: milk, meats, sea food, egg, green vegetables, fruit, bread.

Golden Rule No. II. Every day one should: drink a pint of milk and eat enriched bread or biscuits, whole wheat bread or whole grain breads, eat a tomato, orange, grapefruit, or their juices.

One should also have a large helping of green leafy vegetables, raw or slightly cooked.

For fruit one should have an apple, a peach, a pear, or any other fruit in season.

Golden Rule No. III. Eat anything else you like.

Every patriotic American the class feels should make good food its first step toward victory. We must be strong not only in men, guns, and material for mechanized warfare, but we must also be strong in body.

—Eleanor Carlson, '44

Legion of Honor

Anyone who takes part in girls' sports at Manchester High will recognize this M. H. S. student—Anna Staum, '42. "Staumy," a very popular student, has engaged in practically every girl's sport at M. H. S. for four years, including basketball, softball, volleyball, badminton, bowling and soccer. She is a member of the "Just Us" t.m, which is made up of a group of Senior girls who take part in these sports, and she is also in Leader's Class.

Although sports take up most of her time, "Staumy" is also a member of the Girl Reserves, vice-president of the Shorthand Club, and social chairman of the Typing Club. In her first two years, she was also a member of the Commercial and Home Ec. Clubs. Recently she was chosen by her classmates to be a member of the Class Will Committee and she is also the Publicity chairman for the coming Hi-Y-Girl Reserve Dance.

On top of this busy schedule "Staumy" is a "soda-jerker" at the Pinehurst Soda Shop occasionally.

Among her hobbies is collecting four-leaf clovers, of which she has from 75-100. She also loves dancing.

"Staumy" followed the Commercial Course in her freshman and sophomore years and then switched to the secretarial course. After graduation she plans to obtain a secretarial position. The class of '42 wishes the best of luck to one of its most ambitious and popular members who is certainly an "all-around girl."

Sport Yarns

By Florence Palleria

A certain Senior girls' team by the name of "Just Us" has won the basketball championship finals. Previous to the winning they played the Aces" and defeated them. Three cheers for the "Just Us." Good luck to other members on that team eh?

You know volley ball is really a popular sport among us girls or why else would there be 16 teams with nine girls on each team? We've off to a great start. Wonder which team will take the championship?

We have a swell basketball varsity this year. Usually the eight best players from each class make up the team. This year there has been quite a little competition. For names of varsity members look elsewhere on this page.

The Frosh and Sophs are having their second quiz in Health discussions this week. We hope they'll be hundreds.

You should have seen some of the girls playing volleyball last week. We were rusty but considering we haven't played for a while we weren't too bad. A couple of girls (not mentioning any names) had some power behind their serving. another group of girls did pretty good for the first time they played. The score at the end of two games we know was 2-0 but there was a slight hitch—Miss McRae happened to be playing on their team.

Juniors and Seniors certainly have been having a busy time this week with Fraction splints. They used the Keller-Blake and also the improvised splints. They ought to be getting good, pretty soon.

Only twenty girls remain in the bowling tournament open to Junior and Senior girls. The score at the end of six strings finds the following girls in the lead—A. Quaglia, L. Sartor, A. Barrett, and M. Turek (the latter two are tied and C. Stavnitsky ends the list).

Swimming Club tryouts were held Tuesday and, from what we hear there will be a few additions to that particular club. The new members will be announced in next week's issue.

Art Head At Convention

Miss Hope Hedderson, head of the Art Department of M. H. S. attended the Eastern Arts Convention held in New York last week, March 27 and 28.

The theme of the convention this year was "Art Alert," for art is of great importance in these times of national emergency, both in the field of art education and art appreciation.

Baseball Season To Begin April 24

Five returning lettermen will form the nucleus of this year's baseball team. Captain Bob Skinner, Ken Chappas, Al Zamaitis, Herb Phelon, and Vic Taggart, are expected to be the mainstays.

Taggart and Phelon are pitchers, Skinner an outfielder, Zamaitis a catcher, and Chappas an infielder. This leaves plenty of positions open. A large number of candidates are expected to turn out April 8 for the first practice session.

The opening game is scheduled with Meriden at Manchester on April 24. This will be about two weeks of practice to get into playing form.

April 24—Meriden .....Home
April 27—Open.
April 29—Middletown .....Away
May 4—East Hartford .....Home
May 6—Bristol .....Away
May 8—Open
May 11—East Hartford .....Away
May 13—Meriden .....Away
May 15—Middletown .....Home
May 18—West Hartford .....Home
May 20—West Hartford .....Away
May 22—Bristol .....Home

Gymnastic Show Seen by H S Group

An exhibition of physical education that was given by the students of Sargent College in the Boston Arena last week-end (March 28) was visited by Miss Eleanor Whitney, the gym teacher at East Hartford High School; Miss Helen Donahue, the art teacher of the Ware Public School of Ware, Massachusetts; and Miss Violet McRae of M. H. S.; as well as three M. H. S. students: Mildred Turek, Elsie Kleinasmidt, and Lorraine Hansen.

The exhibition commenced with the Star-Spangled Banner and the Boston University Band. The student body then proceeded to do marvelous exercises—it was a wonderful sight, the girls said, to see such a large number of students doing exercises as though one.

Selected Freshmen and members of the "Tumblers Club" did some very intricate rhythmic tumbling which consisted of rolls, cartwheels, pyramids, stunts, etc.

A very fifting exhibition of formal dancing was given by some of the students who were in formal dress and had for dancing partners men in Army uniforms.

A novel exhibition of roller skating in a body was done by the sophomore class, beginning the V for Victory and ending with the Sargent 8.

The Seniors danced and acted out in pantomime: "Her Ladyship Buying an Easter Bonnet."

The Sophomores, Juniors, and Seniors did a patrioic rhythmic dance on stairs, boxes, and drums in red, white and blue colored costumes.

The four classes of students each exhibited a dance composed entirely by that class.

1. The Freshmen class executed a Primal Dance which was a modern conception of the primitive man in prehistoric times.

2. The Sophomore class presented a very inspiring number called "Magna Gloria" (Great Glory) in which the Union Baptist Church Choir sang.

3. The Junior class presented a number called "The Blues": the music was gay and lively.

4. The Senior class and Dance Club did a very beautiful number entitled "To Victory," which ended very fittingly with a large V.

The latter part of the program gave an exhibition of first aid. This included some of the ingenious ques such as artificial respiration, lifts and carries, and bandaging.

The student body had a military review before Dr. Daniel March, president of the University, after which a campfire and candlelight service took place.

After the show, was over the alumni of the college had a reunion in a nearby drug store.

Original Posters Advertise Dances

Original and attractive posters catch the eye while one is passing through the Main and Franklin building halls these days. Made by Fran Dearden, these posters are advertising the Sub Hop. The posters are of two kinds. The first one has a girl's head in one corner and a boy's in another corner. Colored pieces of paper have been cut to make the eyes, nose, and hair. The girl (a blonde) has recently acquired a permanent wave of wrapping paper. The originator decided to curl the yellow paper with a curling iron.

The boy's dutch hair-cut of fringed crepe paper is really becoming.

Another poster shows a boy and girl dancing. They are made the same way and of the same material as the first poster.

Want to Buy a Bike? Survey Shows Situation

Bicycle purchases among M.H.S. students and faculty have been many recently, according to Mr. Pearson, Mr. Hurlburt, Betty Barstow, and Miriam Mosley. What the bicycle future holds for others who may be interested is indicated in a survey made by Lorraine Hansen as a try-out for the High School World staff.

The manager of one store said that week during an interview: "The supply of bicycles is not nearly as great as the demand is needed; more adults are buying bicycles for themselves than they are for their children.

The bikes that were on sale there were priced $39.50. The approximate rise in price since last year is about $.

Some of the improvements in the bikes of today as compared with those of a few years ago are: Shock absorbers have been attached to the front part, making riding smoother; tail lights and headlights have been improved and handlebars help the rider to keep his balance, the kick-stand is replaced by the other stand, and there is a new method of braking.

This manager does not believe that tires for bicycles will be rationed, but he does believe that a very short time tires will be only two kinds of bicycles made—men's and women's, no more children's bikes. When asked about the kind of tires there would be, he said that as the old Model T cars changed from thin tires to balloon tires, he believes the same will hold true of the bicycle tires—they will be balloon tires. The bikes made during the war will not have all the added accessories that the bikes now have; they will be very plain although sturdy, but they won't have anything but the necessary equipment on them.

This store likes the Roll Fast and Selby Bicycles best; they have been selling these two for many years now.

The manager of another store's bicycle department says that "Before the war the ratio of the sale of bicycles was 20 men's bikes to one woman's, today the ratio is three men's to one woman's." Of the 50 bicycles sold in the last two weeks 90 percent were men and adult sizes sold to adults. It is also surprising that some of the women have been buying men's bicycles.

This year there is being made in the whole nation only one million bicycles; whereas last year two million were sold. From the chain store's point of view, rationing of bicycles has begun already because they can only get a certain amount. The manufacturer sells bicycles to the company as a whole and then the company allots them to certain stores. This manager ordered about 550 bicycles but he will probably only get about 50, he says.

The only independent bicycle agent in town says, "I have so much work to do now that I'm two or three days behind in my repairs." From January 1st he has sold 52 bicycles, which is all that he has. Nearly half of these were sold to men who are using them to ride to work. He has been told that in April both balloon and light bicycle tires will start to be made again.

Since January 1, 1941, the price of bicycles has gone up $7 in price. Nobody knows as yet whether bicycle tires will be rationed or not. While being interviewed this man had five people come to him with bikes to be repaired.

"Inside Japan" Is Topic of Talk

"The Japanese still live in a Homeric Age" was a statement made by George E. McReynolds at the Spring Meeting of the Connecticut social Studies Teachers Association at Hall High, West Hartford, in a talk entitled "Inside Japan."

The meeting was attended by two teachers from Manchester High, Mrs. Marguerite Campbell and Miss Catherine Putnam.

Mrs. Campbell said she enjoyed attending very much, and also enjoyed the delicious luncheon that was served. She felt that one of the most interesting talks given was "Inside Japan."

Mr. McReynolds went into detail in talking about these dreaded enemies of the allies.

Mr. McReynolds explained that the Japanese think they are the divine race and that they think they cannot lose this war.

"Their whole life revolves around their emperor, who, they think is descended from the sun. Although the Japanese have a governmental constitution, it can be amended only by the emperor; if the common people suggest an amendment, they are arrested for laughing the judgment of the emperor.

The present ruler has navy and military forces in the land are trying to take away the emperor's power. One Japanese doctor tried to reveal this fact to the people so he immediately disappeared and was never heard from again.

Mr. McReynolds said the education of 90 percent of the Japanese ends at the age of 14 years, they are very literate, and therefore the easily influenced by propaganda. Yet there is one fact of which few people are aware; that is, that the Japanese have the most superior cotton and rayon machinery in the world.

The highlight of Mr. McReynolds' talk was his discussion of the Japanese beliefs and religion. He said that there are three words that are the key to this belief. They are: shinto, koko, and bushido. Shinto, is the Japanese word for the "way of the gods" and it symbolizes their devotel loyalty to the "empire of divine origin." Kodo expresses the Japanese's blind loyalty and worship to the emperor. The emperor is considered the ancestory of their emperor, back to Jimmu Tenra in 1790 A. D. The third key word is the Japanese religion, said Mr. McReynolds. It is bushido, which means "way of the warrior," and emphasizes chivalry and loyalty. Yoshitomo Kari, the Japanese method of suicide, is connected with "bushido." Mr. McReynolds ended his talk making three conclusions. They were: Japan cannot be discard our ill-conceived notions about Japan. We should realize that the idea of a Japanese revolution if they should lose this war; and we should also be cautious of the fact that the Japanese feel a great need of winning this war, and winning it soon.

Behind the Curtains

By Ruthmary Wirtalla

Presuming that you have all passed your exams with flying colors, (hem) and that you have enjoyed (ahem) news of Paint and Powder rehearsals with peace of mind.

You really haven't seen anything until you see Rita Hilliard practicing dancing the La Conga with his French friend!

At the beginning of "Eternal Life," John Fitzpatrick and James Elliott are presumably sound asleep. It is so realistic that one can almost hear the snores. What will happen to the play if they really go to sleep?

During "Three Pills in a Bottle" Joseph Palkowski has merely to sit in a large chair and during "Eternal Life" George Kanehl has an easy time reclining on a couch. Let us hope that they will not become habitually lazy.

If you hear any sounds resembling the mooing of cows or the cackling of hens, you will know that it is Richard Hubbard rehearsing for the play in which he describes his new automobile horns.

If you want to see David Gallup (who is now enjoying the role of a father) come to see the Paint and Powder plays on Friday Eight, April 17. They're sensational.

Safety Discussion in Homeroom

"What do you think should be the minimum driving age," was a question recently discussed during Safety Period in Miss Mary Burke's homeroom. The answers were: Sixteen, because it was hard to eighteen years.

Many boys want a low minimum driving age in order to secure jobs. On the other hand, there were many girls who brought out the fact that most boys at the age of sixteen are too reckless. Both was said on each side and all opinions were duly respected.

This discussion brought out the fact that this generation is more driving and safety conscious than any preceding one.

Sport-Wise

By Frank Zimmerman

The best team we ever saw played in Manchester last Saturday and showed a style of play which is the most effective any team ever used, according to one of their stars. The team has no plays, says the star, just one simple 'system'. From this system, which is merely a pivot style of play, the team develops various passing and shooting antics which are invincible. The player says, "Our entire system is based on getting the ball". The players do just that. The passwork is so fast and so tricky that in little time one of the five colored stars is left unguarded and a bullet-like pass is thrown to him. Then he has a passing player can block the resulting shot.

Last Saturday's victory for the Rens was the third in 24 games this season. The Rens have just returned from a western tour and are now traveling throughout New England on exhibition. The team consists of eight players and each one is a specialist in one method of play. The Rens have a dependable pivot men and both are over six three in height. Their height enables them to play the backboard and generally dominate the loose ball scrambles.

The scoring power originates in the person of Sewell and Isles. These two are the "hawkeyes" of the squad and they are credited with the high scoring in each game.

The team has a home floor in New York City, the Renaissance Casino, and they spend two weeks at the beginning of each season just practicing and planning their comic and serious playing for the season. The Rens have players from all over the country. Their youngest star, Woods graduated from a New York City High school last June.

With the climax of basketball games the Ivy Leagues of intercollegiate Track has brought more fame to Manchester High and to this town than any other sport. Two national champs were graduated from Manchester High.

Some sports fans wonder just what the attraction is in the sport of track. It has a different type of appeal. Perhaps the runner who has sensed the thrill of winning a race can describe the essence of the sport. At a track meet, as at no other sporting event, is the enthusiasm which follows a 3-ring circus. The individual events all have a particular interest.

More Bicycles

Undoubtedly cars will soon be curtailed almost completely for national emergency continues many more months. People will begin to ask, "What can I do? I can never get along without my car."

There will, be at least three methods of travel in the near future by oxen, on foot, and on bicycle. If a student who has been regularly coming to school by car, has no bus station in the vicinity of his home, our other two modes of transportation are the only alternatives left. Perhaps a pupil who lives far in applying the this high school to walk in a reasonable length of time. Walking limited our methods of travel to one, riding a bicycle. Why not ride a bike, even now? We don't have to wait until pleasure cars are completely removed from our highways.

By riding a bike at this time, civilian automobiles will remain in use for a longer time, than if we continually use them for unnecessary purposes. For special occasions use your car, but for school take out your old bike, dust it off, get up a few minutes earlier, and ride it to school.

We all know bicycle riding is as numerous for pleasure as transportation it will remove a few pounds from those desiring such.

The weather is just fine, the exercise is beneficial, and the idea is patriotic, so let's see many more bicycles in the stands beginning next week.

—Howard Major Jr.

Hear Recordings

Junior and Senior English classes, who have had or will study "Macbeth," recently heard recordings of various selections from the play through the courtesy of Russell Porterton, local radio and record dealer. The records were brought to Miss Isabel Worth by his son Russell.

The actors heard on the recordings were Lionel Barrymore and Judith Anderson, whom many of the students recently saw at the Bushnell Memorial in the presentation of the same play, "Macbeth."

Lower Class Briefs

By Mary Sullivan,

As our regular columnist has been confined to bed with a broken wrist because of a cold, this reporter will attempt to take her place. We all hope you hurry back, Betty.

Exams! Marks! Report cards. These are mighty popular words around M. H. S. at this particular time. The breathing spell between these exams seems to be getting shorter 'n shorter, lately. Relax then cram—etc, etc. Don't you think this is a suitable motto?

The other day we were studying with Miss Todd in preparation for our coming Spanish exam when all of a sudden came a tap-tap-tapping at the window. Everyone looked up in time to see Sammy the Crow, (at least we thought it was Sammy) peeking in. How we wished he would change places with us as he seemed to be anxious to do so.

March certainly lived up to its name and went out like a lion just when Spring seemed to be around the corner. For a while everyone was worried about having to wear new Easter clothes with a background of snow.

Have you noticed the realistic posters advertising the Sophomore Hop and Hy-Y and Girl Reserve Dance which are decorating the bulletin boards? "The Hy-Y and Girl Reserve poster was made in the Art Club, and the Sophomore Hop poster was made by—guess whom—you're right, it was Fran Dearden.

Good-bye now; don't forget to have a good time on your one-day vacation.

Have Supper Party For Flying Fingers

Good food and good fun were the order of the evening at a supper party Tuesday evening when Miss Avis Kellogg, faculty adviser, played hostess to the Flying Fingers Club at her apartment.

The table was attractively decorated in red, white and blue. Each person had to unscramble her name on the place card before she could find her seat. The evening started off at a lively pace with each one reading the joke written on the reverse side of the card.

Chocolate bunny favors, hot dogs and rolls, baked beans, an assortment of delicious salads, cold meats, pickles and a choice of milk, tea, or coffee made up the menu. Ice cream (three flavors) and home-made cake were served as dessert.

Various parlor games were played. Helen Ennis, Nancy Paisley, Mildred Turek, Mrs. Reed, Leslie Murphy and Adelle Krauzaitis received candy as prizes for their supremacy in such things as blind drawing, pencil rolling with the nose, and finding the largest number of names of groceries hidden in a paragraph.

The social committee responsible for the party consisted of Anna Staum, Theresa Deyoria, Carol Stavnitsky and Shirley Weden. The meal was planned by Adelle Krauzaitis and Ann Zwick.

Ten Are Inducted To Hi-Y Tuesday

Ten Hi-Y candidates were properly inducted at a special meeting held on Tuesday evening in room 27B. Ronald Carlson, Donald Barrett, Herbert Phelon, Harold Wilson, Stanley Nicholas, William Muldoon, Charles Hathaway, Philip Scudieri, Donald Porterfield and Douglas Turkington are the juniors who were elected to become members of Hi- Y.

A business meeting preceded the induction service. The dance committees reported that plans are well underway for the Hi-Y Girl Reserve dance which is to be held on April 24. Members of Girl Reserves and Hi-Y are selling tickets in the main building nomerooms. Plans were also discussed for the annual outing to Camp Woodchuck.

College Frosh Beat Trackmen

Local Runners Lose to Wesleyan Freshmen in Close Dual Meet.

The Manchester trackmen just missed bringing home the bacon from the Wesleyan Indoor Track Meet last Friday when they were forced to concede the meet to the Wesleyan Frosh by the abnormally close score of 37½ to 36½. Considering that the boys were up against next year's varsity material, they actually won a moral victory.

The 45-yard dash was done in exceedingly fast time, and one week ago, would have equaled the former State Indoor record of 5.1 seconds. The Wesleyan man won it, but Aldo Bellucci was right behind him.

The 600-yard run finished along the same line, Jackie Olson snapping the tape in the fast time of 1:20. Jack is a Manchester alumnus. Charlie Campbell took second, and Bill Bennett came home in third place.

Then Manchester got down to work and cleaned house in the 35-yard hurdles, Bill Bennett placing first to the time of 2:56.6. Van Wyck snatched second, and Al Moriarty completed the sweep by nosing out his college competitor.

M. H. S. men had a disappointment in the four-lap relay, Wesleyan was the winner by a specialty of the team. Wesleyan won to the time of 1:20.1, but it was a tough battle all the way, Bill Bennett and Bellucci handing the Wesleyan relay runner that for a minute it looked like a dead heat.

However, their disappointment was alleviated by the 3-lap relay, for the Red team made up of Allen, Campbell, Mansfield, and Bellucci crossed the finish first in the time of 3:00.5.

But whatever gloom that had been dispelled by this victory was recreated by the broad jump, for the only place captured was a third by Aldo Bellucci.

Manchester rooters got a lift in the high jump, for both Zemanek and Eggleston placed first in a four-way tie between the two competitors, each notching 4½ points. The height at which the contestants balked was 5' 4".

All in all, the boys made an even better showing than had been expected; and as Coach Wilgress says, "There is no basis for comparison between the indoor and outdoor seasons."

Sock, Buskin Sees Make-up Applied

A demonstration on how to apply theater make-up was given in the Sock and Buskin Club on March 31. Two of the club members, under the supervision of Miss Helen Page, applied make-up. These two girls, Lois Gustafson and Lillian Fagerlin, will make-up the cast for the Paint and Powder Plays on April 17.

The method demonstrated was as follows: Cold cream was applied and then removed. This gave a smooth base for the foundation cream which was applied over the face and neck. Then cream rouge was applied to the high bones, that get the fleshy part of the cheek bones. A little rouge was applied very small for the stage without makeup, they were advised by Miss Page to use a little eyebrow pencil just above the eyelashes from the center of the eyes to about 3-8 inches beyond the outer edge. This completed the make-up which was the type for a "Straight" character, male or female.

Miss Page pointed out that care must be taken in applying the make-up to prevent its appearing like a mask, as it will if the foundation cream does not cover the neck and the face right to the hair line. She also advised the persons require less make-up than blondes.

Paint and Powder Choses Committees

Some of the numerous committees needed for the play to be presented by Paint and Powder on April 17 a month hence have been selected.

The costume committee consists of Elda Flora, Nancy Gosiee, Lois Whitcher and Betty Pagani. Helping them will assist Miss Anna McGuire; the latter two, Miss Helen Page.

Betty Fitzgerald and Shirley Frederickson will aid Miss Worth in locating all of the necessary properties; Alice Karash and Betty Buckley will help Miss McGuire.

Harriet Hillary will prompt "Three Pills in a Bottle" and one of the two plays being coached by Miss Worth, and Faye Parrie will prompt the other, "The Ghost Hunters". The two prompters for the plays of Miss Bernice Stone are Betty Burnham and Mary Gorman. Mary will prompt "Sugar and Spice" and Betty "Eternal Life".

The Stage Crew is composed of Robert McCann and Philip Polyotti. Other committees for the play will be announced at a later date.

Suicides Win Title Over Ramblers, 33-28

Holmes Breaks Loose To Put West Siders On Short End; Fast From Start to Finish.

The Suicides are town Intermediate champions.

The north end club downed the fighting Ramblers, at the Y, 33-28 in a game that fairly bristled with action. Holmes tried the yet for 19 points and managed to play an important part in the second half drive that sunk the Ramblers. Taggert led the losers with 11 points but was closely guarded by the winners -throughout.

The first half play was dominated by the Ramblers, who led at half time by a 19-17 score. They increased this by four points as soon as play was resumed and managed to keep two points ahead until Holmes broke loose in the final quarter.

Rough Four Minutes

It was a rough final four minutes. The losers, fighting with everything they had could not get back into the winning tracks. Both teams gave all they had and the Suicides had more to give, apparently. For the West Siders tried everything in the book and still could not stem the tide.

Again those back court chaps, who seldom figure in the limelight, stopped the Ramblers. Bob Holmes led two minutes. Martin and Phelon were not able to give Taggert any support. Taggert had a total stage of the game and at times was guarded by two men.

But Rubber at Their Feet

Just to keep matters on an even keel, Willis' men took two games last night from Moriarty Brothers as the Wednesday Night Y bowling league played its final matches at the Y.M.C.A. Had Moriarty been able to cop all three points they would have had a clear cut shot at third place. Bryant and Chapman tied in second place and at one time were right on the heels of the garage men.

Harold Burr and Hilinski tied for high three-string putting together 360 each. Chapman and Barton also tied for high single with 124.

Next week the league will have its rollicking party. April is the annual banquet which will be held at Osano's cottage in Bolton to wind up a season's bowling.

Country Club Course Ready

Greens and Fairways In Fine Shape for Official Opening.

According to Rickey Anderson, pro at the Manchester Country Club, the course will be open officially tomorrow. While many members have been taking advantage of the unusually good spring weather the 18 holes have not been declared open to the members and the public since Sunday. The course is in excellent shape and greenkeeper, George Moquin and his crew are to be congratulated upon this year.

Good Friday generally opens the course and this year is no exception. These early birds, however, that get the jump for the feel of a good, long drive have been a lot of year. It must be admitted that a hardy foursome ventured out January 1, which was quite a little of a record. Even then the course was far fast shape.

It was said this morning that due to the fact that there are many newcomers in Manchester that an invitation to them might not be amiss. Those who have played golf for years and on many other courses, declare that the Manchester Country Club is better than most and as good as any in the State.

Two new holes that were started last fall will not be ready until next year and a possibility that they might be opened late this fall.

Grid Coaches Finally Stop Dirty Sneers

College Heads Forced To Be Careful Now That Army Demands Physical Perfection.

By Harry Grayson

New York, April 2 — War changes the complexion of many things. It changes valves and it revises opinions. We have left the snoring twenties and thirties, those incredible decades of distortion, and with them a good many pre-conceived ideas.

Many of the men who were buried in oblivion or thoroughly maligned are national heroes today. Gen. Douglas MacArthur is one. It seems only yester

Wapping

Mrs. W. W. Grant
789s, Manchester

This evening, Maundy Thursday, the South Windsor Congregational church and the Wapping Community church will hold a united service at the Wapping church, at 7:30 p. m. Rev. Randall Mason will give the meditation. The decorations of both churches will assist at the Communion Service.

Miss Mary E. Bragg, daughter of Harry G. Bragg of Saunders street, East Hartford, is to be married Saturday, April 11 to Robert W. Beebe, son of Mr. and Mrs. Olin M. Beebe of Talcottville, which will be held at the home of her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph W. Bragg of Chapel street, East Hartford. The Rev. Truman H. Woodward of the East Hartford Congregational church will officiate. Mrs. Emerson C. Reed of Glastonbury will be matron of honor. Ralph B. Lyman of Portland will serve as best man.

The bridegroom, Robert W. Beebe was formerly a Wapping boy.

South Coventry

Sunday evening at 7:30 the choir of the First Congregational church will present "Christ Victorious," an Easter cantata by Roy E. Nolte. The text of the cantata is completed in fourteen separate numbers including three solos, "Ride on in Majesty," to be sung by Mrs. Edwin Brannan, "The Glory of the Cross," an alto solo to be sung by Miss Ann Ledoyt, and "My Redeemer Lives," a soprano solo to be sung by Miss Adeline Hoff. In addition to the three solos mentioned there are several short solos, and several duets, trios and quartets throughout the cantata. Mrs. Thomas Welles, organist and choir director, has directed the work on the cantata. The public is cordially invited to attend the performance Sunday evening.

Columbia

Miss Gladys M. Rice
575-12, Willimantic Division

Joseph N. Clarke, 73, died Monday at his home here after a two month's illness. He was the son of Willard and Lucy Ford Clarke, and a native and life-long resident of the town.

During his early years Mr. Clarke taught school in Coventry, Hebron, and Columbia. He served a total of eleven years as selectman during two different terms, and also was a Board of Education, and as Justice of the Peace.

He was well known among the political and county leaders of the state and was chairman of the town Democratic committee, vice-chairman of the Tolland County Democratic Association, and a charter member of Columbia Grange.

Mr. Clarke leaves a son, Raymond E. Clarke of Columbia; one sister, Mrs. Emily Randall of Rocky Ford, Colo.; and a brother, Willard Clarke of New Haven.

Funeral services were Wednesday in the Columbia Congregational church and burial was in the Columbia cemetery.

The home nursing classes of Columbia and Andover held a joint meeting in Yeomans Hall on Monday night. Dr. Edwin H. Hasden of Willimantic was the speaker and moving pictures about pediatric nursing were shown.

Miss Anne Dix had as week-end guests her sister, Mrs. Newton Failor and her children Robert and the Misses Dorothy and Betty of Montclair, N. J. The latter who is attending Connecticut College in New London celebrated her twenty-first birthday on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Holt have as guests Mrs. John Walsh of Forest Hills, L. I., and her grandchildren Jacqueline and John DeBhatties, English refugee children who are in this country with their mother for the duration of the war. Their father is in the diplomatic service in Turkey.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Szegda who have been living in Willimantic have rented the apartment recently vacated by Mr. and Mrs. Fred Sorscchi. Mr. and Mrs. Szegda are the parents of a son born Monday at the Windham Community Memorial hospital.

Mrs. John Vadney of Shelton has been visiting her mother, Mrs. Ethel Blakeley.

George G. Pinckney of Cheshire and George E. Pickney, of Storrs, were recent visitors at the home of the former's sister, Mrs. Howard Rice.

There were four tables of bridge and ten of whist at the card party which was given by the Grange at Yeomans Hall on Friday evening. About $20 was cleared. Prizes were won by the following: whist, first, Mrs. Hallie Bragg; whist, consolation, Miss Lois Clarke; bridge-first, Mrs. Archibald Sharpe; bridge-consolation, Carlton Hutchins; door prize, Mrs. Lester Hutchins, and a cake which was raffled off was won by Mrs. Harry Jones. Harold Evans will be in charge of the next card party which will be given in two weeks.

The United States Army has requested that all who are engaged in defense work be identified by pictures and fingerprints. One hundred thirty-nine local people complied with Dr. on Friday night when Gerry of Willimantic was at Roy E. Nolte. The text of the cantata is completed in fourteen separate numbers including three solos, "Ride on in Majesty," to be sung by Mrs. Edwin Brannan, "The Glory of the Cross," an alto solo to be sung by Miss Ann Ledoyt, and "My Redeemer Lives," a soprano solo to be sung by Miss Adeline Hoff. In addition to the three solos mentioned there are several short solos, and several duets, trios and quartets throughout the cantata. Mrs. Thomas Welles, organist and choir director, has directed the work on the cantata. The public is cordially invited to attend the performance Sunday evening.

Nearly 100 Are Present At Pomona Grange Meet

Stafford Springs, April —(Special)—Nearly 100 members attended the meeting of East Central Pomona Grange held last night at the Stafford Grange. The meeting was conducted with Master Perry Lathrop of Vernon in the chair. The attendance banner was won by Ellington Grange. the Grange took action and recommended that dues be rationed to milk dealers. This action was forwarded to the legislative committee to be taken up with the proper authorities.

Farm and Home Program

Lecturer Mary Hills of Wapping presented a farm and home program with the Home Economics Committees of the various subordinate grranges taking part. The program opened with the group ringing; "Dear Old Farm;" greetings from Stafford Grange followed, Russell Anderson of the Farm Bureau gave an interesting talk on "Victory Gardens;" piano solo by Flora Walburn of Stafford Grange and a song by the group, "Smile, Smile, Smile."

A skit "Three Old Maids" was presented by Coventry Grange with June Loomis, Lane Brown and Rosa Johnson taking part. Miss Adelia Loomis of Bolton read a paper entitled the "farm" written by Catherine Marshall also of Bolton Grange. Mrs. Cyrena LaBonte of Tolland Grange gave a humorous reading that was well received.

April Pool Skit

Lecturer Mary Hills carried out the April Fool theme in a novel way. Telling the group that they would now play "Truth or Consequences" she called first on Master Perry Lathrop and Secretary Laurel Loomis who promptly missed their questions. For their consequence a wheelbarrow, had been decorated and the master took the secretary for a ride around the Grange hall. Upon completion of their consequence they settled down to enjoy the misfortune of the other contestants only 15 find that they were the sole victims.

Program Continued

Vocal solos, "The Little Cottage," and an encore were given by Lucy Birdsall of Enfield Grange. The program concluded with the group singing, "There Will Be No Harvest."

Fine Dinner Served

At noon a dinner prepared by the members of Stafford Grange was served to all members present. The menu: roast meat loaf, mashed potatoes, cabbage and pineapple salad, rolls, coffee, apple pie and cheese.

Degrees at May Meeting

The next meeting of the East Central Pomona will be an evening meeting at Columbia when the fifth degree will be conferred on a class of candidates and the Grange will have inspection.

Hogan Feels Golf Burden

Leading Pro Needs Let Down After Winter Tournament Grind.

Asheville, N. C., April 2—(AP)—Ben Hogan, who is just as serious as he looks out there on the golf course, was under pressure again today as he began defense of his title in the 72-hole Land Of The Sky Open.

Hogan, for all his icy nerve, feels under pressure as much as any man playing golf; and he's been under it so much that he feels the difference when it is off. Leading the North-South last week by a wide margin, Hogan took stock on number ten both rounds of the final day. He was so far ahead that he couldn't concentrate. "I japed to shake myself on the eleventh tee, to get rid of the let-down," he said. The rest of the afternoon was a birdie three on the next hole.

Today the pressure was on again, because Belting Ben was the favorite and defending champion.

But it was not all concentrated upon him. Byron Nelson got a share, not only because he was favored back of Hogan but also because he was seeking to finish in the money for the 34th straight tournament.

Chandler Harper, newly named along with Chick Harbert to play in the Masters at Augusta, Ga., was set to keep intact his mark of finishing in the dough in every meet this year. Last Sunday, the Portsmouth, Va., pro barely squeezed into the money circle at Greensboro, N. C. living with two others for last place.

Escapes From Hong Kong

Chungking, China, April 2.—(AP)—W. C. Choy, former Davis cup tennis player for China, has escaped from Hong Kong and is expected in Chungking shortly, it was reported today.

That's sweet thought, but the Germans and Japs are fighting us, not just our government. The German people and their offspring we got so tender about in the last war are the ones who are directing and fighting this one. And the Japs are the same ones to whom we gave millions of dollars when they had their last earthquake. We've already done our necessary good deeds for our enemies. Now's the time to be tough.

About Town

Friends of Miss Mildred Morrison who underwent a major operation last Friday in a Boston hospital are asked to refrain from sending flowers at present. Miss Morrison must have absolute quiet and visits from anyone except her immediate family are barred at present.

A convoy of many trucks and jeeps, passed through town this morning at about 10:30 a.m. Evidently low on gasoline, they stopped at Moriarty's service station on Center street for refuelling purposes. All of the trucks were empty. They were at the gas station for about a half hour.

In observance of Good Friday, the Whiton Memorial library, at the North End of town, will be closed all day tomorrow.

Harry Field, who lives at 709 Main street, was admitted to the Hartford hospital yesterday to undergo an operation.

Miss Emma Reynolds of Lowville, N. Y., has just taken the position at Mary Cheney Library vacated by Miss Barbara Nellis who left to be married. Miss Roberts is a graduate of St. Lawrence University and has had a years library training at Geneseo Normal College. She has held the position of Librarian at the High School Library at Belleville, N. Y., and also at Crown Point, N. Y.

James O'Brien of 71 Charter Oak street, who was admitted to the Memorial hospital two weeks ago is reported as well on the way to recovery. He is being treated for a skin infection caused by oil at the United Aircraft Corporation, where he is employed. The infection covered his hands and face.

Salvatore Billenghiri, of 293 Spruce street, has been admitted to the New England Deaconess hospital in Boston for medical treatment.

Miss Edna Terrill, of 84 Prospect street, has been appointed at the New Weston Hotel, 50th street and Madison avenue, New York City.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest A. Roy of Stephen street, returned from Miami, Fla., where they had been spending the last three weeks in March. Mr. Roy was at his office today, the Depot Square Garage on North Main street.

This Is Quoted From McCall's Magazine Washington Bulletin...
CANNING
"Washington officials believe there will be plenty of sugar for canning unless there is a great deal more home canning than usual. Even though you should throw a wrench into the statistical machinery in Washington, you should plan on doing a great deal of home canning. And you will be wise to get your supply of jars early, for it doesn't look as if there will be too much glass around. Laying in your jars early doesn't make a hoarder of you. It is all important that food be allowed to waste this Summer and you can help prevent a rush on the market in June if you get your jars now."

Baseball Fans to Mourn Removal of Big Oak Tree

The big oak tree that stood for many years just behind first base on the West Side playgrounds is no more. The Park Department employees took down the shell that remained to prevent serious injury to baseball fans. The tree was an immense one, about three feet thick and in recent years, especially after the hurricane in 1938, was nearly stripped of its branches.

It afforded a nice shady spot for bleacherites as it practically covered the entire first base bleacher seats.

Is Given Party On 82nd Birthday

Mrs. Julia Haling, of 239 Middle Turnpike, was pleasantly surprised yesterday afternoon by several of her friends, the occasion being her eighty-second birthday.

She was the recipient of many gifts, cards, fruit, candy and two beautifully decorated birthday cakes, the latter of which she shared with her guests.

The time was occupied with music and it went all too swiftly for Mrs. Haling who enjoyed every minute of the party.

She is unusually keen and active for one of her age, is a great reader, and her quick, elastic step gives one the impression that she is much younger than her age.

Twelve were present to congratulate her and to wish her well.

Boys of Town Are Honored

Three Youngsters Get Recognition for Paintings in New York.

Three young Manchester art students have received recognition for the works which they have submitted for the Seventh Annual Young American Paints Art Exhibition which is being held at the American Museum of Natural History, New York City, from April 2 through April 19th. The three are, Joseph Moriarty, aged 9, and Carl Mikolowsky, aged 11, both of the Hollister street school, and Philip Linnell, 10, who attends the Manchester Green school.

From the offices of the exhibition comes the word that these youngsters have impressed the visitors with the fine painting which they have submitted. Probably the most startling of the three paintings was the one originated by Carl Mikolowsky, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Mikolowsky of 33 Mather street. It was of the trucks driven by the colored troops recently stationed in this area.

Familiar Sight

With water colors he painted with astounding skill a scene with which all town residents were familiar. In the center of the drawing he has placed a jeep, which is manned by Negro troops. He has captured the most vivid details of these queer little vehicles. Also in the picture are two Army trucks, leading and following the jeep. For a background he has placed the typical hills and pine trees which are prominent in Manchester.

Rural Scene

Ten year old Philip Linnell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Linnell of 230 Woodbridge street, used still another theme in his painting. He has pictured a typical hill scene of a Connecticut farm. Prominent in the painting are large pine trees which stand out in bold relief against the sky which lies on the ground. In the center of the picture is a roughly constructed cabin, and out in front is a man with upraised axe, cutting up logs which he is using to build still another cabin. It is a good composition.

No word has forthcoming about the painting which Joseph Moriarty, 9, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Moriarty of 41 Strong street, submitted. However, the composition which he submitted must have been good, as he was mentioned in the release which was sent from New York.

There are more than 1,200 paintings and drawings on exhibition at the show at the American Museum of Natural history. There are no prizes awarded for any outstanding works which are submitted by the children, who range from kindergarten age to high school age, and are at the Museum for exhibition purposes only.

Annual Exhibition

This is an annual exhibition at which is featured the work of children in 638 schools in 354 cities, in 41 states of the Union. It is most interesting to observe the type of work which these children produce. Last year the theme which was announced for the works was "What I Like Most About America." Over 80 per cent of the children participating submitted waving flags, the Statue of Liberty, and a variety of various other such patriotic figures.

Few Think of War

According to the drawings which are submitted by the youthful artists, 94 per cent of them, who attend public and parochial school throughout the country, are indifferent to the war problems which confront their parents. This year, despite the fact that young America has been given the "go ahead" which means absolute freedom in the choice of their subject, only about 75 out of the 1,200 received, bear directly on the war and patriotism.

List Services For Holy Day

Churches Announce Day And Evening Rites for Good Friday.

Among the churches in Manchester who list Good Friday services during the day and evening are the following:

St. Mary's Episcopal

At St. Mary's Episcopal church the special Good Friday program will consist of meditations on the "Seven Words from the Cross." During the three-hour devotions from 12 to three o'clock parishioners may come and go during the singing of hymns.

At this service the rector, Rev. James Stuart Neill will be assisted by young laymen of the church, and will deliver the first address entitled "My Faith" with appropriate hymns by the choir.

Robert Johnston will give the meditation on the First Word—"Father forgive them for they know not what they do." The second word by George Johnson—"Verily I say unto you, today shalt thou be with me in Paradise." Third word, Robert Herrmann, "Woman behold thy son;" fourth word, Wilfred Maxwell, "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?" fifth word, Robert Lawrence, "I thirst." Sixth word, Arnold Cleveland, "It is finished." Seventh word, James Stevenson, "Father into thy hands I commend my spirit."

A committee of women of the church will serve a luncheon to the members of the choir at 11:15 a. m. in the parish hall.

Salvation Army

Special meetings will be held at the citadel on Good Friday at the following hours: 11:00 a. m., 3:00 and 8:00 p. m. The topic for all services during the day will be "Looking Around the Cross."

The special speakers will be Major and Mrs. Harold Zealy and Adjutant and Mrs. Slater of Hartford, also Major and Mrs. Clifford Brindley of this town. All these officers are connected with the Hartford Salvation Army headquarters.

The band and songsters will take part in the evening service. All these meetings are open to the general public.

Second Congregational

Tonight at 8:00 o'clock the annual Holy Thursday Communion service will be held in the chapel. It will be a candle light service with music by the choir. Young people in the pastor's class will be received into membership of the church, with baptismal service for those who desire it.

Concordia Lutheran

The morning service at the Concordia Lutheran church Good Friday will be in the German language only, with Holy Communion preparatory service at 10 a. m. and the regular German service at 10:15.

In the afternoon at two o'clock tomorrow the intermediate Luther League will again conduct a devotional service, to which members and friends of the congregation will be most heartily welcome. Tonight there will be Holy Communion in the English language, with preparatory services at 7 and at 7:15 the regular service.

Emanuel Lutheran

The service at Emanuel Good Friday at 10:30 a. m. will be in English and will be for the benefit of defense workers and their families and all others who desire to attend. Again at 7:30 p. m. there will be a Good Friday Holy Communion service.

Zion Lutheran

The service at this church on Good Friday at 10 a. m. will be in the German language. Tonight, Maundy Thursday, confessional service at 7:10 and 7:30 Holy Communion service.

South Methodist

The service at this church tomorrow will be at 10:30 a. m. and for children.

St. John's National

Requiem vespers at 7:30 p. m. is the only service at this church Good Friday.

Chiang Sends Note Urging India Take Britain's Proposal

Chinese Generalissimo Conveys His Views to Nehru by Special Messenger; Advice on Defense Contention at Issue Not Known.

New Delhi, India, April 3.—(AP)—Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek, advocate of war collaboration between 400,000,000 Chinese and 390,000,000 Indians, was reported today to have intervened in British-Indian negotiations, urging acceptance of British aim's proposal of post-war dominion status for India. The generalissimo was said to have conveyed his views through a special messenger to Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru, a former president of the All-India Congress party and a key leader in the Indian National Congress.

Contents Not Disclosed

The contents of the message were not disclosed. Whether Chiang had committed himself on the special Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt—Britain's proposal that the Indian responsibility for Indian defense—was not known.

The generalissimo on his February visit with Indian leaders expressed hope that "the people of China and their brethren people of India....give their united support to the principles embodied in the Atlantic charter and in the joint declaration of the 26 United Nations and stand by themselves with the anti-aggression front."

He voiced hope and belief then that Britain, "without waiting for any demand on the part of the Indian people, will as speedily as possible give them real political power....(a policy) which will redound to the credit of the British Empire."

Adjourns Until Tomorrow

(The Congress Party's Working Committee, which replied to the British proposals yesterday after detailed objections, met for an hour and a half Sunday and adjourned until tomorrow. The party president, Maulana Abul Kalam Azad, said no release time had been fixed for the resolution of reply which was based on the special British envoy, Sir Stafford Cripps.

Some quarters suggested that publication would be delayed until a date more in tune with the British commander for India, Gen. Sir

5 Army Fliers Crash Victims

Names Will Not Be Announced Until Confirmation of Deaths.

Bulletin!

West Greenwich, R. I., April 3.—(AP)—An Army medium bomber crashed here today and exploded, killing all five occupants, the First Corps Area announced. Military intelligence at Mitchel Field on Long Island identified the victims as Second Lieut. George L. Dover, 24, pilot, Shelby, N. C.; Second Lieut. N. W. Frame, 24, co-pilot, Forterville, Calif.; Staff Sergt. R. H. Trammel, 21, radio operator, Brunswick, Ga.; Pvt. R. R. Mirenda, 21, bombardier, Memphis, Tenn.; Pvt. T. J. Rush, 27, gunner, Philadelphia.

West Greenwich, R. I., April 3 —(AP)—An Army bomber crashed in a field here today and was feared to have killed five occupants.

Military intelligence officers at Mitchel Field, Long Island, confirmed that the plane, which burned after the crash, was an Army bomber and that the most vivid details of these queer little vehicles. Also in the picture are two Army trucks, leading and following the jeep. For a background he has placed the typical hills and pine trees which are prominent in Manchester.

Rural Scene

Ten year old Philip Linnell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Linnell of 230 Woodbridge street, used still another theme in his painting. He has pictured a typical hill scene of a Connecticut farm. Prominent in the painting are large pine trees which stand out in bold relief against the sky which lies on the ground. In the center of the picture is a roughly constructed cabin, and out in front is a man with upraised axe, cutting up logs which he is using to build still another cabin. It is a good composition.

No word has forthcoming about the painting which Joseph Moriarty, 9, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Moriarty of 41 Strong street, submitted. However, the composition which he submitted must have been good, as he was mentioned in the release which was sent from New York.

There are more than 1,200 paintings and drawings on exhibition at the show at the American Museum of Natural history. There are no prizes awarded for any outstanding works which are submitted by the children, who range from kindergarten age to high school age, and are at the Museum for exhibition purposes only.

Annual Exhibition

This is an annual exhibition at which is featured the work of children in 638 schools in 354 cities, in 41 states of the Union. It is most interesting to observe the type of work which these children produce. Last year the theme which was announced for the works was "What I Like Most About America." Over 80 per cent of the children participating submitted waving flags, the Statue of Liberty, and a variety of various other such patriotic figures.

Few Think of War

According to the drawings which are submitted by the youthful artists, 94 per cent of them, who attend public and parochial school throughout the country, are indifferent to the war problems which confront their parents. This year, despite the fact that young America has been given the "go ahead" which means absolute freedom in the choice of their subject, only about 75 out of the 1,200 received, bear directly on the war and patriotism.

Dutch Units To Reform For Battle

Queen Wilhelmina Says Forces Escaping in Indies to Be Rearmed And Will Fight Again.

London, April 3—(AP)—Queen Wilhelmina told the people of the Nazi-occupied Netherlands over Radio Orange tonight that Dutch East Indies forces which escaped from Java and Sumatra would be rearmed and formed into units "to take part again in the fight at the earliest opportunity."

She called for the abandonment of party politics and announced the formation of an extraordinary advisory council to advise the Dutch government "as long as it has to exercise its power outside The Netherlands."

The council is to be composed of Dutchmen compelled to flee their homeland and the colonies.

LaFollette Bill To Safeguard Labor Rights

Wisconsin Senator Offers Measure Fixing Criminal Penalties for 'Oppressive Practices'.

Washington, April 3—(AP)—With the assertion that labor needed to be assured that the war emergency would not be used to deprive it of its rights, Senator LaFollette (Prog-Wis) introduced a bill today fixing criminal penalties for "oppressive labor practices."

LaFollette, chairman of a Labor Subcommittee that made a four year investigation of anti-union discrimination that made a fear the activities, took cognizance of other pending labor legislation, including proposals to suspend the 40 hour week, when he said:

"If the time has at last come for consideration of any labor legislation, then, by all means, this proposed measure should be carefully weighed."

$10,000 Maximum Penalty

The measure, an amplified version of an oppressive-labor-practices act which passed the Senate in 1940 only to die in the House labor committee, sets maximum penalties of a $10,000 fine or six months imprisonment for proscrib-

Three Dead, Five Hurt In Soldiers' Race Riot

Furious Exchange of Bullets Ends When Negro and White Officers Appear on Scene.

Fort Dix, N. J., April 3.—(AP)—White and Negro soldiers fought a bloody 15-minute battle on the darkened plains of Fort Dix last night in which three men were shot to death and five others killed in a furious exchange of bullets. The sudden, bitter outburst ended when officers of both races appeared on the scene and ordered the embattled white military police and Negro enlisted men to cease firing.

Bullet "Tired Over Head"

A score of military police had been hastened to lay siege to barracks housing Negro troops from which, Maj. Asaga Woddlie said, a fusillade of shots had answered a bullet "fired over the head" of a passing Negro soldier.

The battle, termed by Major Woddlie, post public relations officer, the "first manifestation of any ill-feeling among different states at the post," flared from a dispute in a nearby amusement center over a "next" on a telephone.

Negro and white soldiers had gathered as before in the Waldron sports palace, in the community of Fordville on the edge of the post. Major Woddlie recounted, when a scuffle occurred among soldiers waiting in line to use the telephone. The place contains a bar, a lunch

Guard Quarrel Cause of Duel

Two Retired Majors Climax Prolonged Feud In Deadly Gun Fight.

Santa Barbara, Calif., April 3.—(AP)—Two retired majors climaxed a prolonged feud over respective merits of the Army and Home Guards in a deadly gun duel last night.

Maj. William H. Wenstrom, 45, was killed on the porch of his home. He was shot twice just over the heart.

Maj. Buel Hammett, about 42, shot in the hip, was given a chance to live after a blood transfusion.

Mrs. Evelyn Wenstrom, the slain officer's widow, was seriously wounded. A bullet tore through her jaw and her palate, emerged just below her eye.

The two officers, both socially prominent, had organized a Home Guard unit here. They disagreed on policy and Major Wenstrom ordered out Hammett because he criticized the unit; advocated affiliation with the State Guard. He wrote letters to The Santa Barbara News-Press.

Demands Attacks Cease

Last night, after a particularly violent exchange, Hammett hurled her Wenstrom's name, Hammett telephoned his demand that he cease his attacks.

Police Chief Fred Hoelscher said Wenstrom replied:

"If you come over and tell that

Taxing Plans Of Treasury Seen Beaten

House Ways and Means Committeemen Predict Rejection of Many of Revenue Proposals.

Washington, April 3. — (AP) — House Ways and Means committeemen predicted today that many of Secretary Morgenthau's revenue proposals would be rejected when the committee draws a new $7,610,000,000 tax bill.

Chairman Doughton, ruling the committee seems willing to accept right now is the amount, committee members said. Morgenthau had recommended the $7,610,000,000 mark over this year's record-breaking revenue law.

To Reach House in June

Completing exactly one month of hearings on the Treasury Department's recommendations, Chairman Doughton (D., N. C.) said that closed-door sessions on the new tax bill probably would begin about April 30. There seems yet little possibility that the measure would reach the House before June 1.

A survey of the committee members indicated that if were not taken today the administration proposals would be as follows:

Morgenthau's recommendation against sales tax: A clear majority favors either a "manufacturers" or retail sales tax, in order to be

British and Germans Exchange Air Blows

Royal Air Force Fliers Inflict Heavy Damage on Matford Factory Near Paris Again.

London, April 3.—(AP)—In the fiercest exchange of air blows in many months, R.A.F. planes inflicted heavy damage on the Matford truck plant outside Paris, raided docks at Le Havre and carried out fighter sweeps over Nazi-held airfields last night while the Germans countered with smashing blows at English south coast targets. A German high command identified the Nazi objectives as Dover and the naval base of Portland, the latter a logical takeoff point for the recent Commando raid on the St. Nazaire U-boat base and the Brunval radio detector station.

Fear Further Sorties

Observers interpreted this claim as proof that the Germans fear further sorties against the French coast now are being prepared at Portland and other south coast cities.

The Air Ministry said bomber pilots returning from the Matford raid reported they had carried out an effective bombardment of "this important munitions factory" in the French industrial plants in the Air Ministry's master plan for demolishing Nazi and Nazi-controlled war industries.

Only two British planes were lost, the Ministry said.

Nazi Bombers Damaged

The Air Ministry reported that a number of Nazi bombers were damaged on their return from the attacks on England by British planes hovering over German airdromes. One squadron leader alone reported two hits on two Nazi planes which approached their base with their landing lights on.

The fury of the moonlit German assault, sudden and brief but of extraordinary intensity, suggested to some Britons that the invasion tables may have been turned. They speculated that the Germans may be paying back the recent British hit-and-run invasions of occupied France, might

Discuss Order to Freeze Consumer Goods Prices

Washington, April 3—(AP)—An order freezing prices of all consumer goods not already under price control was learned today, is under discussion between high officials of the Office of Price Administration and the War Production Board.

Such a blanket freezing order, to be applied at both retail and wholesale levels, has been discussed for some time, responsible OPA sources said and "the meetings have been more frequent recently." A definite decision has not been reached, it was said.

The action, if forthcoming, would take the form of a permanent freezing order, cutting prices back to the levels of some chosen date, probably several months ago, it was reported.

Hold Methods Too Slow

Numerous administration officials have voiced dissatisfaction with present price control methods, holding them to be too slow to check an inflationary trend.

This feeling has been accentuated with the food of new WPB curtailment and production stoppage orders of recent weeks, affecting radios, phonographs, vacuum cleaners, electrical appliances and many other major and minor consumer items. As each curtailment order has appeared, a buying rush has occurred and prices have moved up, resulting in such emergency action as last night's freezing of bicycle sales.

American Forces in Bataan Standing Alert Against Third Japanese Assault in Two Days, Ready Again to Meet Superior Numbers and Fire-Power With Counter - Attacks

Washington, April 3.—(AP)—American front line troops stood alert today against a third Japanese Bataan assault in two days, ready again to meet superior numbers and fire-power with determined counter-attacks. U. S. forces were reported officially to be mopping up Japanese units which penetrated the main defense line in two heavy attacks yesterday, only to be pocketed by an American counter drive.

Considerable Number in Pocket

The War Department said "a considerable number of Japanese units" were in the pocket, indicating that whole platoons, armed with grenade-throwers and machine-guns, faced the encircling American troops.

Each Japanese infantry platoon of 42 men has three rifle sections and a grenade-thrower section. The rifle sections each have seven riflemen and a light machine-gun. The grenade-thrower, or tekidan, sections have three grenade discharges capable of throwing powerful 50 mm. projectiles from 45 to 250 yards.

In addition, the Japanese riflemen themselves carry both hand grenades and "stick" grenades. The stick grenades, a favorite with Germans and Italians as well as the Japanese, have small iron pots of explosive on five-inch wooden handles. These grenades have the heft of claw hammers.

The Japanese hurl them for considerable distances. The stick grenades depend mainly on heavy powder charges for their effect rather than on the fragmentation of the iron pots as they burst. Each grenade has two ounces of explosive, giving it about half the explosive power of a stick of dynamite.

Expect Japs to Dig In

Officers familiar with Japanese tactics said the encircled troops doubtless would dig in during the night in individual foxholes. These holes have space for only one man and in Japanese are called "go."

Individual Japanese may be able to hold on in their gos for several days. In a sack on his back each man carries one day's emergency rations and five days' supply of rice.

It was considered unlikely that the Japanese would try to aid

Tells Refusal To Halt Sale Of Plane Gas

Berle Asserts Standard Supplied German and Italian Lines Until 'Black List' Imposed.

Washington, April 3—(AP)—Adolf A. Berle, Jr., assistant secretary of state, testified before the Senate Defense Investigating Committee today that Standard Oil Company (New Jersey) refused to stop selling aviation gasoline to German and Italian air lines in South America until its Brazilian subsidiary was placed on the "black list."

Berle said "in fairness to Standard Oil" that the company had cooperated wholeheartedly with the State Department since then.

Senator Mead (D., N. Y.) declared it was "regrettable" that the department "had to use so much force" to bring about cooperation. He said Berle's testimony did not cear out the sentiment expressed by Standard Oil officials who have appeared before the committee.

The "black list" is a listing of business firms prepared by the State Department with which trading by United States firms is forbidden on grounds those blacklisted have had dealings with enemy powers.

Provided Fuel Supply

Earlier a Commerce Department official testified that the oil company had provided the fuel supply for a German-Italian airline which served as a means of delivering Axis propaganda and spies to this hemisphere and returning valuable commodities to Axis countries.

The lines which had been supplied by Standard's Brazilian subsidiary, Berle said, were the transatlantic service, Latl, built by the Germans and operated by Italians, and the German-controlled Condor line, operating in Brazil.

The black listing was applied to Standard's Brazilian subsidiary last October, Berle said.

The State Department requested the company twice to stop supplying the lines before resorting to the black list, Berle said. The company, through an attorney named Palmer, he said, contended that it

Chinese Bases To Raid Japan Said Wrecked

Japanese Press Quoted As Asserting Recent Bombing of Airfields Has Frustrated Plan.

Berlin, (From German Broadcasts), April 3.—(AP)—A Tokyo dispatch quoted the Japanese press today as asserting that the recent bombing of airfields at Lishui (Chekiang) and elsewhere in Chekiang province had frustrated plans of Anglo-American enemies and Chungking to bomb Japan from Chinese bases.

(Lishui, in Chekiang province, is about 200 miles southwest of Japanese Shanghai and off the east coast of China. It is reported to be a principal concentration point for Japan's invasion forces.)

The Tokyo newspaper Asahi was quoted as saying that plans had been drafted as far back as February, 1941, for construction of airports in the provinces of Chekiang, Fukien, and Hunan "which were to serve as bases for American bombers, including the so-called flying fortresses.

Work Started in June

More Than 25,000 Nazi Troops Slain by Reds

Huge Supplies of War Stores Captured in 13 Days of Fighting Still Growing Intense.

Moscow, April 3.—(AP)—More than 25,000 German troops have been slain and huge war supply stores captured by Red Army men on the neighboring Leningrad and Kalinin fronts in 13 days of large-scale fighting still growing in intensity, the Russians said today. The military reality ratio tables have been upset by quirks of 1939-42 style warfare, but a death toll of 25,000 probably indicates a total of from 15,000 to 125,000 killed, wounded and captured. Russian concentration upon northern offensives would be logical to train Nazi reserves from the south, where observers expect Adolf Hitler to try to center his spring operations.)

Sharp Fighting Reported

Sharp fighting also was reported on the southern front where the Soviet Information Bureau said the Germans had hurled fresh infantry reinforcements into unsuccessful counter-attacks which cost them more than 200 dead. The Russians claimed local successes in various other s
