About Town

Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Blackburny of Talcottville will receive their friends informally at their home on Tuesday evening, August 25th from 7:30 until 10 o'clock in honor of their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary.

In order to make repairs as soon as possible on the walks along the east side of Main street from Russell south to Oak street, Kenneth Smith who has the contract is using ready mixed cement. This will be appreciated by merchants along the street.

The town's water department started a force of men this morning repairing the hydrant along Brainard place and Main street. The hydrant has been leaking and the water has been flowing into the cellar of the Triple X store.

Knute Anderson, of 11 Orchard street, has enlisted in the United States Naval Reserves and will report at New Haven Friday morning for examination and assignment to duty. He has been employed by Case-Lockwood and Brainard, printers, in Hartford.

Mr. and Mrs. John W. Pratt, of 27 Brainard place, are entertaining relatives from Quincy, Mass., and Rockland, this town. They are Miss May Parkes, Master Donald Pratt and Master David McIntosh.

Donald E. Dayo, of 56 Bigelow street, is a patient at the Hartford hospital where he submitted to an operation on Tuesday. He is progressing well.

The annual outing and meeting of the Manchester Improvement Association will be held Sunday, August 23, at Osano's cottage, Bolton Lake. Members will leave Depot Square at 11 in the morning. A luncheon of clam chowder will be served at noon o'clock and a full course chicken dinner at 5:30.

Business besides choosing officers for the coming year will be that of selecting a committee to have a service flag for Depot Square. Edward F. Moriarty is president of the Association and he will undoubtedly pick a committee to raise money by public subscription to finance the flag. Tickets are on sale for the outing but returns must be in by Saturday morning.

Shower Is Given For Miss Hampton

A miscellaneous shower party was given last night for Miss Inez Hampton, of Summer street, at the home of Mrs. John Scarlato, of 277 Spruce street. The party was arranged by Mrs. Scarlato. Her home was decorated in white, pink and blue for the occasion.

Twenty guests, relatives and friends of Miss Hampton, attended. All were from this town. Gifts were hidden about the home and Miss Hampton found them by the guidance of notes attached to streamers suspended from a decorated watering can. Refreshments were served and games were played.

Miss Hampton is to be married on September 3 to Robert Clouchman, Jr., of East Hartford.

Odd Fellows Building At the Center to Be Sold by Corporation.

The Odd Fellows' Building located at the corner of Main and South Center streets, owned by the Odd Fellows Corporation is being offered for sale and yesterday afternoon there was placed on the building a large sign to this effect. The notice refers any person interested to his own broker, or to the janitor of the building.

The building is a three-story concrete structure with a drug store, flower shop, barber shop and newsroom, cobbler shop, a cigar manufacturing establishment and a grill located on the ground floor. In the basement is a large pool room. There are two large lodge halls on the second floor in addition to offices and on the third floor there are apartments and offices.

The building was erected about 30 years ago and is at what is considered one of the best business locations in Manchester. The building was set back from the street for a number of years because of lack of interest by the fraternal lodges who at one time met in the hall. More recently the hall has been doing a good business in the building and it was a surprise to many to learn that it appears that the property was to be offered for sale.

Board of Appeals To Meet Tonight

The Zoning Board of Appeals will give hearings tonight on four petitions for changes in the zoning regulations. One of them has been considered by the board, but at that time the property was under different ownership. It asks to be allowed to convert a two-family house at 115 Main street into a three-family house. Andrew Anaidi and Company want to erect a building for storage of machinery on Hilliard street, which is in a zonal zone. David Gaffney wants to be allowed to erect a portable stand for sale of soda, sandwiches and candy on Adams street, near the aircraft plant and John M. McCann is asking to be allowed to convert the third floor of a house at 30 Laurel street into an apartment.

Members of the board are expected to reach a decision on the request of G. L. Fish for a change in the building line on Harvard street which was heard at their last meeting.

Called to Duty Elsewhere

Major N. J. Curtis

Mrs. Major N. J. Curtis

Major N. J. Curtis, Commanding officer of the Manchester Salvation Army Corps for the past two years, received notice yesterday from staff headquarters of his detachment from the local command for duty elsewhere. Major and Mrs. Curtis and family have been in command here for the past two years, coming to Manchester from the Corps at Passaic, N. J.

A farewell meeting will be held in honor of the departure of Major Curtis and family in the Salvation Army Citadel on Sunday, Aug. 30.

Major and Mrs. Curtis have cooperated with local civic interests in the national defense and war work and have served in many capacities in this connection.

Their new command has not yet been announced but is expected within a few days, Major Curtis stated today.

Soldiers Here Party Guests

Group of Civilians Entertains Men from Unit Here in Bolton.

A group of 50, about evenly divided between members of the Anti-Aircraft unit stationed here and local civilians, enjoyed a fine dinner and get together at the Villa Louisa in Bolton last evening. The soldiers were guests of the civilians.

The party gathered near the State Armory and made the trip to the Villa Louisa in private cars. After a short sports program the party gathered in the pavilion to enjoy a chicken and spaghetti dinner. An unusually fine menu had been prepared consisting of antipasto, spaghetti with meat sauce, individual plates of half broilers, sweet corn, rissole potatoes, cabbage salad, fruit and coffee. John Albasi, proprietor of the Villa Louisa, had promised to put on an extra fine dinner for the soldiers and he lived up to his word.

The after dinner program was informal. The soldiers and civilians were seated alternatively around the tables and each in turn spoke a few words. The soldiers were grateful for the good time given them and were praiseful of Manchester and the treatment that has been accorded them here. The civilians in turn were lost in their acclaim of the good fellowship among the soldiers. It was remarked during the speaking program that it was good to see a group of soldiers and a group of so many defense industry workers getting together with such fine relations. It was pointed out that this sort of relationship does not exist in some sections.

The party broke up early since many of the soldiers had to report back for duty.

Leaves Tomorrow

See Increase In Students

School Enumerators to Get Special Training This Year.

Ensign George Leary

George Leary, oldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Leary, of 66 Florence street, will leave tomorrow for basic training, as an ensign in the United States Navy. His brother Francis, a former student of Fordham University is in training now at the Chicago Vocational Training school at Chicago, Ill.

Ensign Leary will, after his training at the submarine base in New London, enter Harvard College for further training. A graduate of Fordham four years ago he has been employed by the Southern New England Telephone Company in Hartford.

Both Leary boys were outstanding athletes at Fordham. George was anchor man on the Rams championship relay team and while attending the Manchester High school set several records which still stand on the books. Francis' records have not been broken since he left for college.

The State Board of Education is expecting an increase in the number of children of school age in Connecticut this year. So that the different towns may secure the best service special schools will be opened throughout the state where the men or women named as enumerators, will be trained for the work. In Manchester two enumerators are named. One takes the section of the town to the west of Main street from the Glastonbury boundary to the South Windsor line and works west to the East Hartford line. The other works on the east side of Main street from the same town lines on the south and north and works as far east as the Bolton town line. The work starts on September 8 and they are given about a month to make the canvass.

In both of these sections considerable building has been done during the past year and homes are now occupied that were not built when the school enumeration was taken last year.

The school to be attended by the Manchester enumerators will be held in Hartford at the State Administration building, 249 High street, on next Thursday.

Bombers Attack Jap Units Based On Timor Island

Touch Off Great Explosions at Maobisse in Interior; No Nipponese Aerial Resistance Mentioned in Report of Assault.

General MacArthur's Headquarters, Australia, Aug. 21. —(AP)—While General MacArthur's air patrols searched the waters around the embattled Solomon islands for new evidence of Japanese naval activity, Allied bombers made another attack yesterday upon enemy forces based on the island of Timor, northwest of Australia. A communique announcing the raid on Timor said that medium bombers had touched off great explosions at the Dutch-occupied town of Maobisse in the interior of the half-Dutch, half-Portuguese island, indicating that fuel or ammunition dumps had been hit.

Not a Raiders Return Safely

All the Allied raiders returned safely from the mission, said the bulletin, which made no mention of any Japanese aerial opposition.

One of the pilots returning from the Maobisse raid told of seeing "a lot of Japs soldiers running for their lives for the shelter of the jungle."

The bombers dropped to low levels to attack the place, a native settlement 17 miles south of Dili in the Portuguese part of the island.

Diving on their targets, the bombers hit fuel or ammunition dumps and when they pulled out of their dives their gunners peppered objectives with machine-gun bullets.

The leader of the bombers was so satisfied with the success of the raid that he ordered a bottle of beer issued to each member of the "flying party—a luxury in their northern Australian base.

Terse Line On Situation

The only reference to the situation in the Solomons where Allied bombers were reported to have attacked Japanese warships the previous day in the Bougainville area at the extreme northern end of the archipelago—was a terse line in the communique saying:

"Northeastern sector — reconnaissance activity only."

A spokesman at General MacArthur's headquarters declared, however, that no inferences should be drawn from the lack of activity reported from that sector.

(A communique issued last night by the Navy department in Washington said United States Marines were engaged in mopping up remnants of Japanese forces on islands "recently captured" in the Solomons. The statement said it reported that a Japanese destroyer or cruiser had been set afire by

Seek to Halt Metal Strike

Federal Officials Try to Head Off Vote by Aluminum Workers.

Pittsburgh, Aug. 21.—(AP)—Government officials struggled today to head off a strike vote by the CIO Aluminum Workers of America over the War Labor Board's rejection of a demand for a general wage increase in the industry while they sought a peaceful solution.

A conference of 20 local union representatives from seven plants of the Aluminum Company of America, employing 32,000 workers, was to commence at 3 o'clock this afternoon (3 P. M. e.w.t.).

It was expected to consider formally the plea of Charles R. Ward, commissioner of the Conciliation Division of the U. S. Department of Labor, that no further strike steps be taken until he had explored the possibilities of settlement.

Describes Acute Danger

Ward's request came after Lieut. Col. George R. Strong of the Army Air Corps had described the acute danger of a work stoppage in aluminum.

"This nation cannot wage a winning fight against the Axis if we are allowed adequate air power," the colonel told the union men. "We certainly cannot have adequate air power if there is an interruption in aluminum supply."

Two representatives of the War Production Board also were in attendance at the hotel where the meeting at which began Friday night have been held.

The delegates were scheduled first today to hear the explana-

Dodd Asserts Molzahn Not Real Citizen

Declares Pastor Neimoller Present in Spirit at Trial of Co-Religionist; Case Ends.

Hartford, Aug. 21.—(AP)—Prosecutor Thomas J. Dodd, Jr., charged today that although the Rev. Kurt E. B. Molzahn, on trial here on an espionage conspiracy charge, was naturalized in 1940 "he isn't a citizen . . . in his heart, and he never can be because the terrible God of Nazism gets into you it pickles your soul."

Dodd, delivering his government's final summation of its case against the German-born clergyman, stated dramatically that Pastor Neimoller, the famous Lutheran clergyman imprisoned by the Nazis, was present in spirit at the trial of his co-religionist.

"Ladies and gentlemen," Dodd told members of the jury that will retire later today to weigh Molzahn's guilt or innocence, "I have a spiritual adviser in this courtroom.

"I have seen him standing behind the witness chair pointing the finger of accusation at this defendant. Ask yourselves who it is this defendant, in all his sermons, has never once risen to condemn the treatment of that martyr."

Asserts Defense Dishonest

Dodd asserted that Molzahn's defense "has been a strange de-

Bahr Claims Aid Offered

Alleged Nazi Spy Tells Of Effort to Help Trap Germans in U. S.

Newark, N. J., Aug. 21.—(AP)—Herbert Karl Friedrich Bahr, alleged Nazi spy on trial on a charge of conspiracy to commit espionage, testified today he had offered to aid the United States government trap Germans doing espionage work in this country.

The former Buffalo (N. Y.), war student and athlete, who was questioned for three hours yesterday, returned to the stand today as his trial in United States District Court entered its fifth day.

In a reply to a question by U. S. Assistant Attorney Thorn Lord as to whether he told Federal Bureau of Investigation agents that he would like to serve the United States as a counter espionage agent, Bahr replied:

Gave Up Name

"I said that the United States might use my name in such a way to lead Germany to believe I was doing things they had asked me

Seized Jap Plane Given Test Hops

May Be Used for Practice Dogfights by Flying Dragons; Flier Praises Performance.

Chungking, Aug. 21 — (AP) — A captured Japanese Army plane has been taken up for test flights over China by Maj. Davy L. Hill of Hunt, Tex., and may be used for practice dogfights by Brig. Gen. Claire L. Chennault's Flying Dragons.

Hill, six-foot two-inch former American Volunteer Group fighter and now a member of Chennault's force, had trouble crowding his long frame into the new built for pint-sized Japanese.

"My darn knees were up to my chin," he said.

Seized By Chinese Last Year

The plane, a 1940-model 1-19 was seized by the Chinese last year when it was forced down in Fukien province.

"The short turning radius and maneuverability of the plane are unbelievable," said Hill. "It takes off and lands with very short runs. Its acceleration is terrific. Instruments are simple and all gadgets are handy. It has no armorplating and no self-sealing gas tanks, which are sacrificed for performance."

Allied Losses Set at 5,300

3,500 Killed and 1,800 Captured at Dieppe, Vichy Cabinet Told.

Vichy, Aug. 21—(AP)—Fernand de Brinon, Vichy representative in Paris, told a French cabinet meeting today that the allies lost 3,500 men killed and 1,800 captured at Dieppe Wednesday.

The majority were Canadians, with a few De Gaulle French, De Brinon said. He cite as his source the German report on the coastal raid.

(The German high command gave no figures on Allied casualties but was 10,000 prisoners were taken. There was no confirmation from any Allied source of either claim.)

German dispatches insisted the allied landing failed from the beginning and that German troops never had to enter into action because of the defense put up by German coastal guards alone.

Much Destruction In Raid

Other sources, however, indicated that important installations of coastal defenses were carried out, that the Germans suffered severe losses, and that the raid demonstrated a bridgehead could be established with a single division and held for at least nine hours. The British Broadcasting newspapermen the Allies "had three or four divisions aboard ships in addition to the one-which landed."

On the second day after the Allied raid on Dieppe, Vichy still was pouring out accounts and explanations and holding press conferences on the subject, which continued to occupy the main place in all French newspapers.

The conference were to support the official position, taken since

World Cartel By Nazi Link Set up—Denied

Standard Oil Head Contends Agreements Provided for Use of Patents Outside Reich.

Washington, Aug. 21—(AP)—W. S. Farish, president of Standard Oil Company (New Jersey), insisted before the Senate Patents Committee today that his company's pre-war agreements with Germany's I. G. Farbenindustrie did not constitute an international cartel.

Under a fire of questioning by Chairman Frank Wheeler, Democrat, Farish denied the agreements were intended to divide trade territory, control production and fix prices.

Farish and Frank Howard, president of Standard Development Company, a subsidiary of the New Jersey company, contended the agreements, reached in 1927 and 1929, provided principally for Standard's use of I. G. patents in the rest of the world outside of Germany. The agreements were terminated by an antitrust consent decree last March.

"Do you mean the whole Standard-I. G. relationship was not an effort to stifle competition?" Farish asked.

"Yes, sir," Farish replied.

Farish then read from a letter

Clipped Wings of Nazi Fliers Attack Dividend

Allied Mastery of Air Is Seen Beyond Challenge Even Deep Into Enemy's Territory.

London, Aug. 21.—(AP)—The clipped wings of the German Air Force in western Europe was rated by British observers today as the first big dividend of Dieppe. Allied mastery of the air, they asserted, is complete beyond challenge, not only over Britain and the channel but even deep into enemy territory itself. These commentators, whose identity is withheld, gave credit to the big dividend of Dieppe. Tank Car Use In 20 States Fully Curbed

Railroad Delivery of Auto Gasoline Prohibited to Release Fuel Oil Tanks for East.

Washington, Aug. 21—(AP)—Petroleum Coordinator Harold Ickes today prohibited railroad delivery of motor fuel gasoline in 20 states in the middle west and southwest in a move to release an estimated 3,000 to 7,000 tank cars for supplying the east.

The ban brought under the ban were Texas, Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Tennessee, Kentucky, Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska, Iowa, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, North Dakota and South Dakota.

Deputy Coordinator Ralph K. Davies said it remains to be seen whether rationing of petroleum would be made necessary in those states as a result of the order.

He added that the diversion of additional tank cars would not aid the east's gasoline rationed motorists since the railroad cars would be used almost exclusively to build up fuel oil stocks in the east, particularly in New England, against the coming of winter.

A spokesman from the coordinator's office said the diverted tank cars would add approximately 100,000 barrels to the more than 1,000,000 barrel daily movement of all types of petroleum into the east.

He said that the east's present needs including allowances of fuel oil for storage with an eye to winter requirements, is in excess of 1,400,000 barrels of petroleum

Boilermakers at Shipyard Vote for Women in Union

Oakland, Calif., Aug. 21.—(AP)—The time has come when the boilermakers have to make up their minds about women.

With women flocking to war plants by the hundreds, they have to decide once and for all: Will they or won't they admit women to the union?

Members of the AFL Boilermakers union Local 39 at The Moore Dry Dock Company, have started the ball rolling. This week they took a poll of day shift workers, and determined that, locally, the boilermakers favor taking union cards to women by a vote of 120 to 60.

But with the three months or more, Ed Ryan, business agent of the local, has entered, before the nationwide vote of the national brotherhood of boilermakers is in.

Operate Under Work Permit

Meantime those feminine welders, burners, and sheet metal workers among the 100 women presently employed at Moore must operate under a work permit issued to them free of charge by the local.

The AFL Shipbitters and CIO Machinists unions at Moore are firmly anti-feminine in attitude. They will not permit a woman to work at their trades at the Moore yards, even though it is generally conceded that precision machine work is one phase of women's industry in which women excel.

Members of the pro-feminine contingent today spoke with women newspaper representatives taking part in the National Association of Manufacturers tour, but those of the anti-feminine contingent were nowhere to be found.

Of Nationwide Significance

The battle raging at Moore, one of the largest shipbuilding organizations in the country, is of nationwide significance.

It may determine the post-war attitude of the craft unions toward women in industry.

Officials of the company are exceedingly pleased with the work their women laborers are doing.

Joseph A. Moore, Jr., president of Moore, told the visiting newspaper women that, although at the moment only a fraction of the company's personnel is made up of women—240 full-fledged workers, and 300 trainees—he hopes to raise that figure to 10 per cent in the very near future.

"They're good at their jobs, why shouldn't we use them?" he asked.

Strong Red Bayonet Charges Block Nazis After Don Crossed

Germans Fight Violently for Pathway to Stalingrad; Complementary Thrust Hurled Back by Counter-Attacks; Two Fresh Divisions Moved Up After All Exterminated.

Moscow, Aug. 21.—(AP)—German forces which, crossed the Don river loop southeast of Kletskaya fought violently for a pathway to Stalingrad today, but field dispatches said strong Russian bayonet charges pinned down the vanguard and the complementary thrust from the southwest was hurled back by counter-attacks. Izvestia declared that almost all the Germans who sought to establish bridgeheads along the Don have been exterminated, but two fresh Nazi divisions moved up.

Bodies Cover Approaches

"This report from the government publication came as the Army newspaper Red Star said approaches to the river were covered with the bodies of Germans, Italians, Hungarians and Rumanians, even while the crossing effort persisted.

German airmen supported the assault operations.

Soviet air scouts discovered a large concentration of Italians in two settlements and Red Army ground troops were reported to have wiped out virtually all of them in surprise attacks with machines.

The Axis dead totaled thousands, said the Communist newspaper Pravda. It reported 47 tanks led a charge into Red Army positions at one place, but six were destroyed and the others turned back.

Heavy Soviet artillery and fighters were called into action to thwart a charge of 35 tanks upon the Russian lines in another sector during the critical Battle of the Don bend.

Setbacks to the southern arm of the German pincers aimed at Stalingrad led to the assignment of new planes, tanks and reserve troops to the battle zone, Red Star said.

A dispatch to Izvestia said a great area was set afame when German bombs fell in a Volga oil field. Soviet fighters swept up to shoot down the raiders, the paper attacking Red Army lines, but

Warning Given On Retribution

Roosevelt Acts After Attention Called to Slaying of Hostages.

Washington, Aug. 21 —(AP)— President Roosevelt warned enemy nations in a formal statement today of "terrible retribution" to come for what he called their "barbaric crimes" against civilian populations in Axis-occupied countries.

The chief executive issued his warning after Secretary of State Hull had given him a communication from the Netherlands ambassador and the Yugoslav and the Luxembourg ministers calling attention to Nazi slaying of hostages.

Acts of Desperate Men

Describing these as acts of desperate men, and promising that they would result in fearful retribution, the president said the government of the United States had been receiving information from Axis atrocities from numerous sources and would welcome more.

When the United Nations achieve victory, he asserted, it is their purpose to make appropriate use of the assumed evidence.

The time will come, Mr. Roosevelt said, when the guilty persons will have to stand up in courts of law in countries they now are oppressing and answer for their acts.

Hopes for Judicial Action

Asked at his press conference whether he could commit the people of ravaged countries to acting through courts of law once "they got a chance" at their oppressors, the chief executive admitted probably he could not do so, but said he was expressing a hope that judicial processes would prevail.

Mr. Roosevelt said he had heard of pleas from the oppressed na-

Russians Hold At Leningrad For Full Year

More Than 1,000 Germans Wiped Out in 48 Hours; Reds Capture Important Place.

Moscow, Aug. 21— (AP)—Adolf Hitler launched his unsuccessful assault upon Leningrad a year ago today, besieging the former capital with 200,000 soldiers.

After 12 months, the city's defenders fight on.

The Soviet Information Bureau announced at noon that more than 1,000 Germans had been wiped out in 48 hours of local fighting on the Leningrad front and that Russian troops captured an important strategic position in a limited offensive.

"We destroyed 10 machine-guns, three mortars and two ammunition dumps and seven enemy artillery batteries were wiped out," the Bureau said in summing up the latest developments of the struggle joined when the Germans struck Aug. 21, 1941.

Reds Helped In Civilians

Civilians called into action by Marshal Klement Voroshilov from the population of 3,000,000 helped the Red Army divisions to stem the onslaughts.

"Stand firm to the end" was his order, and they did even more.

The Communist party newspaper Pravda said the Nazi high command aligned 52 infantry divisions, four motorized divisions

Tank Arsenal Work Halted

Construction Workers Quit at Detroit on Labor Official's Order.

Detroit, Aug. 21—(AP)—A Chrysler corporation spokesman said today 475 AFL construction workers stopped work at the Detroit tank arsenal this morning on orders of Eit Thal, secretary of the Building and Trades Council.

H. L. Weckler, Chrysler vice-president, said "this is sabotage against the government of the United States just as much as willfully holding up the production of war material or willfully destroying war material."

Weckler said Thal had threatened to call off the job all AFL men employed on expansion of the tank plant unless a subcontractor handling installation of plant hookups and ovens fired CIO employes and hired 40 AFL members to do the work.

E. J. Hunt, operating manager of the tank arsenal, said that

Dodd Asserts Molzahn Not Real Citizen

Declares Pastor Neimoller Present in Spirit at Trial of Co-Religionist; Case Ends.

Hartford, Aug. 21—(AP)—Prosecutor Thomas J. Dodd, Jr., charged today that although the Rev. Kurt E. B. Molzahn, on trial here on an espionage conspiracy charge, was naturalized in 1940 "he isn't a citizen . . . in his heart, and he never can be because the terrible God of Nazism gets into you it pickles your soul."

Dodd, delivering his government's final summation of its case against the German-born clergyman, stated dramatically that Pastor Neimoller, the famous Lutheran clergyman imprisoned by the Nazis, was present in spirit at the trial of his co-religionist.

"Ladies and gentlemen," Dodd told members of the jury that will retire later today to weigh Molzahn's guilt or innocence, "I have a spiritual adviser in this courtroom.

"I have seen him standing behind the witness chair pointing the finger of accusation at this defendant. Ask yourselves who it is this defendant, in all his sermons, has never once risen to condemn the treatment of that martyr."

Low-Carbon Steel Cargo Plane Urged

Material Usually Used For Stove Pipes Is Seen Possible Supply For Air Freighters.

New York, Aug. 21 — (AP) — Cargo planes made of the low-carbon steel usually used for stove pipes were advocated today by Col. Royal B. Lord, assistant director of the Board of Economic Warfare, as a way out of the submarine menace.

Writing in Collier's Weekly magazine, Colonel Lord, a member of the Requirements Committee of the Board, said that "we have already comparable with those in other war industries." He said the program would also include steps to recruit and train more men for through the U. S. Employment Service facilities and to prevent duplicating or competing metals miners for jobs in war plants.

Six Nazi Fighters Destroyed

London, Aug. 21.—(AP)—The Germany's Focke-Wulfe 190 fighters were destroyed or damaged over the North Sea today by a flight of eleven U. S. Army Flying Fortresses, U. S. Army headquarters in Britain announced. The 9-minute battle, in which one Fortress was damaged heavily also when 20 to 25 of the speedy German fighters swarmed in attacking the American planes, was fought out. The damaged Fortress returned to its base.

agencies, Mr. Roosevelt said, as to make other countries think they are the rule instead of the exception. He said British leaders had gained the same impression but that he had told them the total production affected was infinitesimal and they were much surprised.

Because of what he termed a disproportional exposition of the news, he said false impressions were spread not only in Britain, but also in the Near East and were seized on by our enemies. Reports that ten men walk out are front page stuff for these enemies, Mr. Roosevelt declared.

So, he continued, he had asked Willkie to tell the truth on the other side of the Atlantic.

Reporters reminded him that there were sometimes statements by competent authorities, members of Congress, for example, that production was falling off, and that this constituted legitimate news at times.

Yes, the chief executive agreed, with a note of skepticism in his voice, but he said it depended largely on what paper the reporter works for.

Raw Materials Chief Problem

A principal problem now, he said, is getting adequate raw materials to plants. Priorities made at the beginning of contracts do not always work out, he said.

He replied to one question by saying he would never be satisfied with our war production and distribution of munitions but he said he was not "blue" about it.

He remarked that every nation in the world on our side, and neutral nations, would like to have all the munitions we turn out. But it is a world war, he said, and we do not always have all the implements of war we would like.

Parenthetically, he remarked that he would like to have a million men in Australia, American men, plus all the Australians there, but we can't get them there.

Kwangfeng Recaptured By Chinese Forces

Chungking, Aug. 21.—(AP)—An official Chinese military report today said Chinese forces had recaptured Kwangfeng, one of the Japanese had developed into one of their most powerful strongholds in Kiangsi province.

It was stated the recapture had dispelled the threat of the third overland Japanese invasion of Fukien province.

The Chinese were said to have retaken the city yesterday morning after by-passing it in the Kiangsi campaign in which they have recaptured Kweiki, Shangjao and other points to wrest from the Japanese the control of a 60-mile stretch of the eastern Kiangsi railroad.

A Chinese communique, saying Kwangfeng was recaptured Thursday at 8 a.m., confirmed previous reports that the Chinese had recaptured Kweiki and Shangjao and said the Japanese were falling back on Kiangshan with the Chinese in pursuit.

The Japanese are ready to quit Sungping in Kiangsi Chekiang province, it added.

The town is under Chinese attack and several fires have been started, indicating Japanese withdrawal preparations, the Chinese said.

Ten or more Japanese small boats were sunk and a number of soldiers were killed when the Chinese intercepted the loot-laden Japanese fleeing Wenchow, in Chekiang province, toward Tengtien, the communique said.

Japs Report Landing By Americans Repulsed

Tokyo (From Japanese Broadcasts), Aug. 21.—(AP)—A Japanese communique reported today that some 200 American troops effected a landing at dawn Aug. 17 on Makin island, at the northern tip of the Gilbert islands, but were "repulsed completely." There was no Allied confirmation of such a landing attempt.)

(The Gilbert islands are on the greater 2,400 miles southwest of the Hawaiian islands. They are a cluster of 16 small islands, with an area in all of 166 square miles.

(Makin island itself is north of the equator and about 1,100 miles northeast of the Solomon islands where U. S. Marines have been consolidating positions won from the Japanese in the first Allied offensive in the Pacific.

(The Gilbert islands, along with the Marshalls just to the northwest, were bombarded by air and naval artillery in the first offensive thrust by the United States Navy late in January.

(Jaluit island, one of the main bases in the Marshall group which a Navy communique announced on Feb. 1 had been attacked in that bombardment, is only 250 miles northwest of Makin island.)

The full communique follows:

"The Japanese garrison on Makin island at the northern tip of the former British-owned Gilbert islands, in spite of their numerical inferiority, repulsed completely some 200 American troops who effected a landing at dawn on the island Aug. 17."

The communique was issued by Imperial headquarters.

The Gilbert islands were occupied by Japanese forces at the outset of the war in the Pacific.

Young Findlay Now Sergeant

Local Man Completes Course at Army Air Force Gunnery School

Panama City, Fla.—(Special)—It's Sergeant James Findlay, Jr., now. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James Findlay of 489 Main street, Manchester, Conn. Promotion of this man at the Army Air Forces Gunnery School at Tyndall Field was announced today. He will return to his home field at Harding Field, La.

The promotion was earned for the sergeant's successful completion of the intensive five weeks course given picked men who qualify them as top-notch aerial gunners. Heretofore, graduates have been made corporals.

It is a rigorous schedule with a lot of instruction crammed into a short period. The first two weeks are devoted to class room lectures and study. During this time, the student is taught the mechanism of a machine gun and studies trajectory, gun installations, ballistics, harmonization, sighting and aircraft and Naval recognition.

Two Weeks On Range

The next two weeks are spent on the range. First, he fires a .22 caliber rifle, then a .45 caliber at a moving target. This target is made in the form of a miniature Nazi plane, decorated plane and is towed a three quarters mile circular track at a fast driverless and armored jeep. It operates along a monorail. The students vertically mounted gun is placed on a shambles when they finish.

There also is skeet shooting at moving targets and other range firing culminating in the final week's instruction when the student is taken aloft to fire a real machine gun, from a fast moving plane. He aims at a long sleeve target being towed 600 feet to the rear of another ship. He must score a specified number of hits to qualify for his wings and later task of protecting American and shooting down enemy aircraft.

May Go Into Combat

Leaving here, the man, now a sergeant, goes back to the outfit that assigned him here for the special training. His next step may be transfer to parts unknown for actual combat duty.

The course is difficult, officers admit, but the men say they like it. It's not all work, of course, as plenty of recreational hours are allowed. To keep the men fit, they cover a unique exercise course three times every afternoon. It consists of parallel bars, horizontal bars and three walls of increasing height which they learn to scale within a few seconds.

They're mentally alert, physically fit and in a fighting frame of mind when they finish this course, all admit.

Express Wrecked In Sabotage Wave

London, Aug. 21.—(AP)—A fresh wave of sabotage by Yugoslav partisans was climaxed Saturday by wrecking the Zagreb-Belgrade express train, with 21 persons killed and 32 injured, Yugoslav sources reported today.

The German field commandant at Nis, named Von Bothmer, offered rewards for arrests of persons who recently cut the Belgrade-Salonika railroad at three points, they said.

The report added that Serbian villages near the scene had been "severely punished" and two Bulgarian regiments were coming to the area north of NIS in search of Chetnik forces.

The Vichy radio said the wreck Saturday occurred 40 miles southeast of Zagreb.

Block Tracks Two Weeks

Yugoslav sources in the Middle East said Croat guerrillas also had blocked rail traffic between Zagreb and the Italian border for two weeks.

A Reuters dispatch from Zurich quoted a Swiss correspondent in Berlin as saying 10 men had been shot in the eastern Croat town of Stara Pasova for undisclosed reasons.

Other reports told of "revolts by Communist elements and partisans" in eastern Slavonia during the first half of August in which German soldiers were attacked, food stocks burned and farm machinery destroyed.

Yugoslav circles in Jerusalem reported fierce battles between Croats and Axis troops near the Slovenian towns of Gorenjske and Rogaska-Slatina.

The Yugoslav report added that Ustachi (pro-Axis Croat) garrisons in several villages near Zagreb had been annihilated by patriots and that Axis troops had taken a number of villages near Ljubljana.

To Draft Iron Clad Building Line Rules

Selectmen and Zoning Boards to Confer On Subject on Next Thursday.

A joint conference of members of the Zoning Commission and members of the Zoning Board of Appeals was held last night at which session the Zoning Commission presented extracts from city zoning ordinances of West Hartford, Hartford and East Hartford for study as they affect the building line requirements of these cities.

The two boards, under authorization of the Board of Selectmen, have been asked to form a local building line ordinance for the local Zoning regulations which will eliminate all appeals by builders and others for zoning exceptions for encroachments on street lines, resulting from faulty engineering or no engineering at all, in the construction of new homes.

Seek Iron-Clad Rule

In the past year several exceptions have been sought by builders and others to the street line regulation and at a recent meeting of the Selectmen, and on the motion of Selectman Ray Burnham, a committee from the Selectmen was named by Chairman David Chambers to meet with the Zoning Commission and the Zoning Board of Appeals to establish an iron clad building line regulation.

A meeting will be held Thursday night in the Municipal building at which the committee from the Selectmen, the Zoning Commission and the Zoning Board of Appeals will decide, the issue and prepare a suitable regulation which may be included in the March Zoning Rules.

It is expected that when the new regulation is passed, a small fee will be charged for such capable engineering and inspection as are required, thereby insuring adherence of building line regulations.

It was also mentioned that the West Hartford zoning regulations requires the establishment of side lines on building lots, assuring the adherence by builders of this phase of construction regulations.

The West Hartford fee for such engineering supervision and inspection as is required to assure compliance with the zoning regulations as it affects street and building lines, is from $3.00 to $5.00. The Hartford regulations have been in force for ten years and were said to be complete in detail and effective in operation. The cost of such inspection in Hartford is carried in the annual city Zoning Commission budget, it was stated.

Sugar Stamp No. 8 Good for 5 Pounds

Only Sugar Stamp No. 8 will be valid in War Ration Book No. 1 after midnight this Saturday, it was announced today by Local War Price and Rationing Board 11-76. Persons who have not used the No. 8 and No. 7 stamps by that time will not be able to purchase sugar with them after that date.

Sugar Stamp No. 8 will be valid for the purchase of five pounds of sugar any time in the ten-week period between August 23 and October 31. The period is thus terminated at the end of a calendar month, so that if it is found desirable, future ration periods may be set to coincide with the calendar month.

The effect of this ruling is beneficial to retailers, wholesalers and consumers as it gives them the privilege of dealing in five pound units of sugar.

More Companies Pay Dividends During 1942

Actual Cash Paid This Year to Stockholders Less Than Amount Received in 1941.

By James Marlow and William Pinkerton

New York, Aug. 21.—(Wide World)—Wall street isn't going off the deep end with hearty predictions about stockholders' future dividends but it has figures to show that:

Stockholders received dividends from more common stocks listed on the New York Stock Exchange in this country's first half-year of war than in the first six months of peaceful 1941.

But—not as much money was paid.

In spite of high taxes and great shifts in manufacturing activities, 560 listed common stocks in the first six months of this year paid dividends totalling $895,712,000, compared with 550 stocks which yielded $761,315,000 in dividends in the same period of 1941.

Although 249 of the 560 of the dividend-paying stocks reduced their half-year payments, 25 per cent increased them.

Aggregate Payment Less

The estimated net result, however, was an aggregate dividend payment, 6.5 per cent less than the six months ended June 30, 1941.

"The Exchange," magazine published by the New York Stock Exchange, says that the half-year performance, as a whole, "indicates statistically that apprehension let rising taxes and could cause heavy dividend casualties was not borne out by results."

But this does not mean that what was true in the first six months of the year will be repeated in the last six. The result of heavier taxes cannot be forecast nor can changes in corporate reserve accounts and operating costs.

The street was particularly impressed by a 56.9 per cent increase of aggregate dividend distribution in the electrical equipment group which has 16 issues listed on the exchange.

Thirteen of those listings paid dividends, three of them at an increased rate, totaling an estimated $30,949,000.

Railroad Utility Payments Drop

While railroad dividends went up 614 per cent, public utility payments dropped exactly 6.4 per cent. The farm machinery group climbed 15.8 per cent, the tobacco group dropped 17.3 per cent.

Shipbuilding, working at capacity now, paid its stockholders 28 per cent more in dividends this year although the iron and steel group—an industry in record production—increased dividend payments only 3.9 per cent.

Wall street analysts say the future trend of dividends is particularly difficult to foresee at this time. Of course, one of the immediate uncertainties is taxes. Rates have not been finally fixed, and it is pretty commonly expected that the tax bill in the making will be superseded by a new one next year.

Many Other Uncertainties

But, in addition to taxes, there are many other uncertainties. First is the question of profits made on war business. The Army and Navy now are renegotiating contracts with suppliers. Also, there is some opinion in Congress that a new measure putting a flat percentage limitation on profits on war business should be enacted.

On top of all this, there are further uncertainties over the longer range. What reserves should corporations set aside to convert back to peacetime work? There is no uniformity of opinion. Increasingly, plants and industries are being turned over to strictly war operation. How much of what the concerns have at the time will be useful for peacetime operations, when peace comes?

In many instances, equipment is being subjected to exceptional wear and tear. Also, great technological change is expected as a result of the war, so that much of the present plant may be obsolete before the nation gets far into the new peace time. In view of all uncertainties, most Wall Street users feel stockholders have fared pretty well.

O C D Puts Ban On Political Use

Washington, Aug. 21.—(AP)—Reproduction of OCD insignia in connection with any printed matter for political purposes was prohibited today by James M. Landis, director of the Office of Civilian Defense.

Landis said that while it was "obviously improper to use the organization for political purposes," the ruling did not interfere with "the personal political activities of our volunteer workers, who have the same rights as any other private citizens."

Release Case Hits Leaders

Bridgeport Democrats Ordered to Give Evidence About Genova.

Bridgeport, Aug. 21.—(AP)—Two Bridgeport democratic leaders have been summoned by Common Pleas Court Judge John Clark Sullivan to appear Aug. 31 to give evidence in the case concerning the premature release of Thomas J. Genova, 25, from the Fairfield county jail.

Judge Fitzgerald issued an order yesterday for the appearance of State Senator Cornelius P. Mulvihill, chairman of the Democratic Town Committee, and Edward R. McPadden, secretary of that organization and assistant superintendent of the county court house.

The order was issued just before Judge Fitzgerald adjourned until Aug. 31 the trial of Coldhty Attorney Kenneth J. Zarrilli, who formerly acted as counsel for Genova and is charged with two counts of contempt of court in connection with his ex-client's jail discharge.

Statements Mentioned Frequently

The judge said that the names of Mulvihill and McPadden had been mentioned frequently during the two-day Zarrilli hearing and for that reason they should appear to explain their positions.

Testimony in which the names of the two men appeared was conflicting. Zarrilli testified that he did not discuss his case with the two men, but Zarrilli testified that Genova told him that he had been told by the latter he was connected with the board of pardons in June and that they advised him to take a 30-day term so that they could do about getting him out.

The prosecution contends that Zarrilli prevailed upon Former Attorney Jaffee William A. Tamburri, now serving a year in jail, to release Genova on July 5, ten days before the expiration of his term. Tamburri testified he released Genova at Zarrilli's request.

The Department of Commerce has files on 600,000 foreign business firms.

Senators Split On Mead Loss

Most Legislators Beg To Be Excused from Commenting on Vote.

Washington, Aug. 21.—(AP)—Senators split today on the significance of the nomination of John J. Bennett to succeed Senator James A. Farley, Democratic state chairman, who had backed Bennett. But among those willing to talk on or off the record were some who believed the state convention result increased Farley's political stature in the 1944 presidential picture and others who thought it would boomerang later against the former Democratic national chairman.

Farley managed President Roosevelt's 1932 and 1936 campaigns, but balked at the third term and let his own name go before the national convention for the nomination.

"Bad Effect" Seen

Senator Norris (Indep.), long a supporter of the president, said he thought the New York nomination fight would have a "bad effect on the country" because it would be taken as a very severe slap at the president.

"It means the Democratic party will be badly split up," he added. "As for 1944 the New York delegation might be for Farley for the Democratic nomination for president or be Farley-controlled, but that does not mean he would control the rest of the state delegation."

A Democratic senator from the south, commenting anonymously, said the Bennett nomination "makes Jim Farley a national figure in his own right.

"It also means," he added, "that the 1944 delegation to the national convention from New York will be either controlled by Farley or be an open delegation. It might even be for Farley."

Senator Bridges (R., N.H.), a candidate for his party's presidential nomination in 1940, commented:

Sees Republican Victory

"It leads me to believe we'll elect a Republican governor of New York. There will be such a row among the Democrats that they'll cut each other's throats."

A prominent Republican from the west also thought the Roosevelt-Farley encounter was "bound to leave some bad feeling which would help Dewey." He referred to Thomas E. Dewey, another 1940 candidate for the Republican presidential nomination who is generally believed headed toward his party's gubernatorial nomination to oppose Bennett in November.

Still another Republican expressed the view privately that Farley would be a "powerful factor" in any fight against a possible fourth term for the President in 1944.

Idle Workers' Claims Lessen

Layoffs Due to War Conversion May Be Tapering Off Now.

Hartford, Aug. 21.—(AP)—Industrial layoffs due to war conversion may now be tapering off, Labor Commissioner Corneliu J. Danaher said today on the basis of a report of the Unemployment Compensation Department indicating that initial claims for unemployment compensation for July dropped 16 per cent from the previous month.

Initial claims number 10,908 in June and only 9,153 in July, Danaher said, and this trend was evident throughout the state with Middletown, Bristol, Meriden and New London showing the greatest drop.

Conversion Layoffs Slackening

At the same time compensable claims which started to climb upward several months ago, due to materials shortages and other similar causes of layoffs, continued their climb but at a lower rate, indicating that the trend toward conversion layoffs was slackening.

The amount of unemployment benefits paid in July also increased, going from $388,026 in June to $450,036 of July, but the number of cases closed during the month exceeded new cases by 1,140.

Danaher said there would little change in the unemployment load during August but industrial expansion now under way will probably result in a quick diminution of unemployment before winter.

Total benefits paid to unemployed Connecticut workers during the first 7 months of 1942 amount to $2,333,872, Danaher said, as there is now more than $71,000,000 dollars in the unemployment compensation fund the state is well prepared to take care of any possible increase in unemployment due to materials shortage or otherwise.

Keith to Seek Assembly Seat

Former Selectman to Be Candidate for Republican Nomination.

George E. Keith, head of the G. E. Keith Furniture Company, and former Selectman, will be a candidate for Republican nomination for General Assembly from Manchester. His proposal for nomination in the Republican primary on September 8 will be filed by Monday, Attorney Charles S. House and

George E. Keith

Leland T. Wood, Republicans, who was elected from this district in the 1941 session of the Legislature, will not be candidates this year. Attorney House is now Assistant State's Attorney and cannot give the time he would like. Mr. Wood's business has increased to such an extent that he feels it would be unfair to give the time to Legislative duties.

Has Served Town

Mr. Keith served Manchester for several years as a Selectman and as a member of the Board of Education. He has been a student of local government and keenly interested in legislation. While a member of the Board of Selectmen he prepared the present Bidgetary plan, whereby the standing of appropriations can be understood clearly and the amount of financial picture presented so that the taxpayers can best understand it.

Mr. Keith's community consideration in public office and if named will make a considerable sacrifice of time to Manchester's interests in certain labor considerations.

Late this afternoon J. S. Richmond Smith, secretary of the Board of Selectmen filed for Representative to the General Assembly. Secretary Smith has been a member of the Board of Selectmen for the past three years and is employed as bookkeeper for the W. G. Glenney Company, North Main street. He has consistently been one of the best vote-getters in the Republican Primary. A position to make his bid proved an able member of the board.

Bahr Claims Aid Offered

...to do. I also told the FBI men there would be mail drops in the United States they might use. They asked me for addresses in Germany where mail was to be directed. I answered that I might be informed of places where letters might be sent.

At this point, Federal Judge William H. Smith asked the witness if he was a German representative and he would send him names of mail drops in this country.

"Yes sir," replied Bahr.

Bahr had testified yesterday he attended a Nazi spy school only to flee Germany and reveal important information to American officials.

The scholarly, broad-shouldered defendant, who went to Germany in 1938 as an exchange student, told the jury of six housewives and six businessmen he had stalled in revealing secret information supplied him by the Gestapo because "everywhere, no matter where, there are German agents" and he feared reprisal.

Described Plane Engine

The witness added that he had described to a lieutenant commander in the American Navy a "revolutionary-type" airplane engine he learned about in Germany. The description Bahr testified was given aboard the diplomatic exchange liner Drottningholm at Jersey City where he was arrested.

Details of the engine and other information he acquired as an engineer and Gestapo student he had intended to give to the American government, Bahr said.

The government's version is that Bahr accepted $7,000 in cash from the Gestapo to carry out its orders to "ferret out" information important to the American war effort.

Russian Bayonet Charges Block German Advance

other Nazi aircraft quickly took their places.

Five German columns of tanks and motorized infantry were reported creeping behind aerial and artillery bombardments on the thrust up the railway line northeastward toward Stalingrad.

Reverses in Caucasus

Reverses again attended the defense of the western and central Caucasus Russian said, however, that about 700 Germans were slain south of Krasnodar before a further Soviet retreat in that area and that the invaders made "some progress southeast of Pyatigorsk only at heavy cost.

The mid-day war bulletin said that a Soviet formation annihilated more than 2,500 Germans, destroyed 14 tanks, seven armored cars, 103 trucks and many guns during a three-day engagement in the western theater below Kranodar.

Defenders of the Kletskaya area to the northwest were reported to have caught the Germans off balance with an assault while the invaders were preparing an attack.

"Our men destroyed five German tanks, eight anti-tank guns, 14 machine-guns and seven motor cars and wiped out 350 Hitlerites," the communique said.

Nazi Transport Sunk

Red Navy warships, on patrol against a possible German attempt to supplement Axis reinforcements with an invasion from the Crimea were credited officially with sinking a 7,000-ton Nazi transport in the Black sea.

Russian infantrymen and tank crews fought to hold the bend of the Don as a barrier before Stalingrad and "almost completely annihilated an enemy group which crossed the river, more than 500 Germans being killed," the Soviet information Bureau said.

This qualified report—implying that at least some German survivors remained on the east bank—contrasted with a flat declaration 12 hours previously that another Nazi task force which made the crossing was "completely wiped out."

Both these actions took place southeast of Kletskaya, a town within the Don bend 80 miles northwest of Stalingrad, Russian industrial nerve-center on the lower Volga.

"In the Kletskaya area," the Information Bureau announced, "several enemy attacks were beaten back during the day (yesterday) with heavy losses to the enemy."

Nazi Repulsed at Railway Town

German tanks motorized infantry were repulsed at a railway town above Kotelnikovski, 95 miles southwest of Stalingrad, after once wedging into Soviet positions, the bureau said.

"The Hitlerites abandoned on the field hundreds of killed, officers and men," it reported. "More than 20 German tanks, many guns, machine-guns and trucks were destroyed."

Local fighting persisted on the Leningrad front. Counter-attacking Red Army troops were reported to have forced a river crossing to dislodge the Germans from a settlement. Guerrillas were said to have re-won two villages and killed 30 Germans in that area recently.

Other guerrillas, operating in Nazi-Russia behind the invaders' central front lines, killed three German generals 104 other officers, 650 Gestapo agents and 4,717 troops during July, a special government statement said.

Cut Down Parachutists

Kuban Cossacks cut down several hundred Nazi parachutists in a two hour battle west of Krasnodar at the approaches to the Black sea port of Novorossisk, Russian dispatches reported today.

The Germans used tanks and large infantry forces in an attempt to break through the northwestern Caucasus foothills to the coast.

Germans Report Progress in Caucasus

Berlin (From German Broadcasts), Aug. 21.—(AP)—Continued German progress in the Caumsus and annihilation of encircled Soviet forces on the north central front southeast of Lake Ilmen were reported today by the German high command, which said that elsewhere, on the Don river, near Rzhev on the Moscow front, and on the Volkhov front, Russian attacks were repulsed.

The German communique also reported Soviet planes carried out "harassing flights" over the government-general area of conquered Poland, causing casualties in Warsaw.

The Caucasus campaign was mentioned only with the brief statement that "German and allied troops, overcoming stubborn enemy resistance, are successfully continuing the attack."

Red Transport Set Afire

Anti-aircraft artillery was credited with setting fire to a Soviet transport in the Straits of Kerch, while German minesweepers reported to have sunk two armored Russian guard ships in the Sea of Azov. Sinking of three Soviet transports on the Volga was attributed to the German Air Force.

Farther north, the communique declared, "several Soviet attempts at crossing the River Don were repulsed."

On the Rzhev-Vyazma front west of Moscow the Russians also were on the offensive and were dispersed by cooperation of all arms, the German communique stated.

On the Volkhov-Leningrad front other Soviet attacks were in vain, it said.

Finnish planes were credited with destroying two Soviet marines Wednesday and Thursday.

Russian air raiders were over wide areas of German-occupied Poland last night, DNB reported today.

The first man Mohandas Gandhi asked to see when he was first jailed for revolt several years ago was an AP correspondent.

"The Associated Press," said Gandhi, giving it his farewell message, "has reported the political situation in India as no other news organization."

Months later, when the Indian leader was released amidst greatest secrecy after midnight and at a lonely siding station, the first person to greet him was an Associated Press man.

"I suppose," said Gandhi, "when I go to the Hereafter, the first person I'll see will be an AP man!"

Now, as Gandhi launches a new revolt, AP men are on top of the news again with fast and accurate reporting for 1400 Associated Press members.

Preston Grover, whose recent interview with Gandhi forecast the present crisis, scored with dramatic first-hand accounts of the effects of Gandhi's civil disobedience. Grover's automobile was stoned as he toured rioting Bombay.

Also on India to cover this great story are such veterans of the AP foreign service as Daniel De Luce and William McGaffin, assisted by other correspondents throughout the vast country.

Camphor Oil Test Planned

California Trees May Help to Replace Supply Formerly Imported

Santa Barbara, Calif. (AP)—California camphor trees may help to replace the United States supply of camphor and camphor oil, formerly imported from Japan and Italy.

Horticulturists are shipping an entire camphor tree — root, branches and leaves—to an eastern factory for determination of their camphor oil content. The leaves will go in an iced container to preserve their oil.

The Santa Barbara botanic garden will arrange for school children to collect camphor seeds as they ripen, and propagation of a million seedlings is planned.

Has Enjoyed Monopoly

"Japan has enjoyed a practical world monopoly on the production of natural camphor," said Monroe C. Kilder, director of drug and oil plant development under auspices of the State Department of Education and the California Polytechnic school, who has been in this area surveying extensive camphor tree plantings.

"The United States alone imported camphor to the value of $2,000,000 in a single year. It is believed that within a comparatively short time, central and southern California can develop sources that will largely replace this. Camphor is vital in the war effort."

World Series Broadcast To Go Over Short Waves

New York, Aug. 21—(Wide World)—First broadcast of a World Series in wartime is to be made as nearly as possible a service men's radio event. At least that is the plan of MBS after signing exclusively to carry baseball's climactic battle for the fourth year.

All details are not yet complete, but an extensive short wave relay is to be set up so that play by play can be carried to any point in the world where Uncle Sam's boys are stationed. In addition a Spanish description is to be sent to Latin-America.

Announcement of the contract did not indicate the fee for the broadcast rights, although in previous seasons it has been $100,000. Neither have the announcers been picked. Last year they were Red Barber, Bob Elson and Bill Corum. The sponsor is the same who has handled the games in the past on MBS, and his contract carried an option for the 1942 event.

Effie Palmer, who made her radio debut as a character actress 20 years ago and who had appeared in dozens of network programs in later years, died suddenly in her New York apartment of a heart ailment. She has one of the title roles in a recently introduced daytime serial, Aunt Dad, on CBS. . . We the People expects to make a return appearance on Sunday night program on CBS for a talk by Capt. Randolph Churchill, son of the prime minister. . . With Extra Mile, Oliver forced to drop from her summer NBC broadcast series because of illness. It has been decided to change the title to "The Remarkable Miss Crandall." Mary Boland, who took over the lead, will continue.

On the Air Tonight: NBC — 8 Lucille Manners concert; 8:30 Information Please, Leon Henderson; 9 Waltz Time; 9:30 Plantation Party; 10 People Are Funny Quiz; 10:30 Tent Show drama.

Four Arrested For Books' Theft

Stamford, Aug. 21.—(AP)—A service station operator and three teen-age boys were under arrest here today on charges of complicity in the theft of 600 gasoline ration books from rationing headquarters in Hart school on July 28.

Police Chief John B. Brennan identified those arrested as Ire Sussman, 16, of the Bronx, N. Y., operator of the gasoline station; Charles Gerbasi, 15; Edward Nieminski, 16, and Joseph S. Lapchan, 16. All were ordered held without bond.

In announcing the arrests last night, Brennan said Gerbasi and Nieminski told him they broke into the school, stole the books and later sold them to Sussman for $150. Sussman denied any knowledge of the books, he said. Lapchan was accused of having knowledge of the theft.

None of the books was recovered.

Twins' Birthplaces Differ.

New York—(AP)—The new Bartlett babies are twins, all right, but they were born in different places. A nurse from Coney Island hospital attended the delivery of a six-pound boy for Mrs. Josephine Bartlett when it arrived at home a month before it was expected. No sooner was the boy delivered than mother and son were taken to the hospital where half an hour later a 5½-pound girl joined them.

Encouraged, Albi came right out and asked an old-timer to vote for him. "He glad to," the bearded man replied. "Only I can't vote in Washington. This here's Idaho."

Spaniards Told Struggle Looms

Vigo, Spain, Aug. 20.—(Delayed)—(AP) — Generalissimo Francisco Franco declared in an address tonight that Spaniards must be prepared for an industrial, moral and military struggle, although this "does not mean that we want war."

Franco spoke before a special assembly of Galician syndicated workers, making the trip to Vigo by a destroyer.

"Life is a struggle," he said, "and peace is accidental. Therefore our people must be prepared to struggle, for the people who surrender to an easy and bourgeois life are dead people."

He said the objective was to "have Spain united, great and free."

Scorns Critics Of Indian Talk

Reynolds Shows Neither Surprise Nor Resentment at Rebukes.

Washington, Aug. 21—(AP)—Chairman Reynolds (D., N. C.) of the Senate Military Affairs Committee proclaimed his scorn for criticism today after being rebuked by administration leaders in the Senate for advocating immediate independence for India.

The strapping, ruddy-faced former North Carolina lawyer expressed neither surprise or resentment at the "dressing down" he received yesterday from Democratic Leader Barkley of Kentucky and others, but said he would not be deterred in the future in his desire to speak that mind "in the interest of my country's welfare."

Fear Creating Disunity

Barkley, Senator Connally (D., Tex.) chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, and Senator George (D., Ga.) the ranking member, all expressed fear that speeches such as Reynolds' on "delicate" international matters tended to creat disunity in the United States' war effort.

All expressed hope for ultimate Indian independence after the war and said that without victory no nation could be assured of independence.

When the Senate had passed to other matters, the Tarheel Democrat Reynolds said to George:

"Walter, if you think I didn't do anything else, it certainly brought forth three good orations upon freedom and independence. Some of the outstanding men in the Senate."

Points to Delicate Problems

Barkley, calling attention to the delicate position of the British in created by demands for Indian independence, had been asked after Reynolds's speech:

"I think that Senators who happen to be the chairmen of committees should consider that their statements carry weight with the minds of the public far beyond their personal views."

Connally said it would be "most unfortunate" if the Senate, speaking through either the Senate or House, "should give expression to sentiments or take action which might arouse chaos in the ranks of nations associated with us," while Senator George asserted "Japan and Germany will seize upon every word American statesmen utter to emphasize that there is disunity."

Would Use Lie In Propagandists

"Anything anybody says contrary to the idea of some people is construed as a suggestion of disunity," Reynolds told interviewers. "The Axis powers are telling the people of India promises of freedom after the war won't be fulfilled. My view is that freedom now would give the lie to the Axis propagandists.

"If the mention of the Indian subject is calculated to create disunity, as charged on the Senate floor yesterday, then no radio commentator should be permitted to mention the subject, and no newspaper should be permitted to publish any editorial, article or letter interesting itself in the subject."

Veterans' Home To Be Visited

Hartford, Aug. 21.—(AP)—Veterans' Home Day at the Veterans Home at Rocky Hill will be held by the Connecticut Department of the Sons of Union Veterans of the Civil War Sunday.

Members of camps throughout the state have been invited to attend the affair which will start at 1 p. m., and will be in charge of Department Commander George L. Champin of Hartford. The department auxiliary will assist.

A program of entertainment during the afternoon will include vocal selections by Miss Lucy Camillo, cornet solos, William G. Holtz; drills, Sons and Daughters of Liberty drill team; piano selections, Miss Barbara Parsons; accordian duets, Josephine and Rinaldo Edwards and several other talented performers.

Reservations may be made with Junior Vice-Commander Ernest T. Barnum, 1289 Iranistan avenue, Bridgeport.

Several delegates from the Hartford camps are expecting to attend.

Teachers Hired After Publicity

Coffeyville, Kas., Aug. 21.—(AP)—South Coffeyville's school term, scheduled to begin Aug. 31, had to be postponed when the last of the teachers quit to take better jobs elsewhere—but newspaper publicity has fixed everything. The term will begin Sept. 7.

Director Roy Felton said many applications followed widespread publicity, and three substitutes have been hired. And the other applicants are going to supply rural schools which also had been unable to open.

Problem in Clothing

Salt Lake City—(AP)—Earl Clinton Bolton of Los Angeles has his worries. Bolton, a buck private in the Army Air Force, was sworn in as a Naval ensign. Since his application for commission in the Navy had been accepted, he was no longer a soldier. Therefore he was not entitled to wear the Army uniform. But, the armed services require personnel to wear nothing but uniforms and no ensign's uniform was available. He hasn't any civilian clothes anyway.

Blames Self For Defeat

'Lame Duck' Philosophizes on Setback in Alabama Primaries.

Washington, Aug. 21.—(AP)—Take it from Rep. Luther Patrick, Alabama Democrat, "any member of Congress who gets defeated for reelection can blame only himself."

Patrick, a self-styled "lame duck" frequently referred to as the philosopher of the House, ought to know whereof he speaks.

He was defeated recently in the Alabama primaries.

Philosophizing today on his first setback in six years in Congress, the 48-year-old lawyer said he had little sympathy for defeated congressmen who blamed labor, the war, the national administration, or anything else except their own selves.

In his particular case, he explained, his successful opponent "did not hit me with anything except what I provided him with.

"I simply beat myself, that's all there is to it," he mused. "I thought I was doing all right here in Congress and I wasn't very worried about the election. But I found out the voters back home thought otherwise.

Can Happen to Others

What happened to him, he said, can happen to any other congressman.

"The people think of Congress collectively, and whatever conclusion they reach, they vote upon their own representative individually," he commented. "Many do not like Leon Henderson. They cannot vote against him, but they can vote against the congressman.

"If you go home and they see you while Congress is in session, they get sore at you because you aren't back in Washington looking after their interests," he said. "But if you stay in Washington all the time, the voters get the idea you have got high hat and forgotten them and decide it's time to make a change."

Own Joke Backfires

One of Patrick's own jokes, told during a local radio program on which he appeared regularly, backfired on him in his election campaign.

"One day I said over the radio, right here in Washington, somebody asked me what I was doing, how it is with congressmen, we pass a bill out today and then they a paper tomorrow to see what it was," he recalled, "and thought it was a pretty clever joke.

His constituents thought otherwise, he added, after his opponent, John Newsome, played a recording of it all over the district where the voters could hear it.

"I didn't sound a bit clever here," he laughed. "But I have not kick coming. It's little things like that that turn out to be pretty big in an election, and you can blame only yourself for them."

Army Training Tops Germans'

American Warplanes Also Far Superior, Former Nazi Officer Says.

New York, Aug. 21—(AP)—United States Army and Air Force training and American warplanes are far superior to Germany's, in the opinion of staff-sergt. Paul Otto Young, who four years ago was a lieutenant in the German Air Force.

Young, who took out first citizenship papers when he came to this country in 1938, was drafted in April, 1941. Despite his request for assignment in a combat unit, he is on duty with the Medical Corps at Camp Stewart, Ga.

He hopes when his final citizenship papers come through he may be able to transfer to a fighting unit, preferably one that would see action on the European front. He has a little bet on with a couple of men in the German Luftwaffe that someday they'll meet in combat in France, but he thinks it probable they already have been killed.

American Training "Far Better"

Young says emphatically that United States training in the armed forces is "by far better" than that in Germany.

"The flying capacity of American machines is far superior," he added. "German machines are worn out in no time."

Young, born in Mannheim 24 years ago, is a graduate of Heidelberg university where he began his student flight training. He entered the Luftwaffe as a reserve in 1934, receiving his commission in 1938.

"A combination of things" led to my departure from Germany, he said. He said he "saw how things were going and didn't like it." He recalled, "I was shocked he saw a motion picture of the Spanish civil war and the more Connecticut men into the service yesterday.

U.S. 'TOUGH GUY' DIVES FROM LONDON BRIDGE Wins An Independence Day Wager

The British Call Him "Tough Guy" He's Your Yank of the A. E. F.

He's Fit . . . He's Living Well . . . He's Eating Well . . . He's Working Hard . . . And He's Full of Fight

By Donn Sutton
NEA Service

With The American Army In Northern Ireland—The American doughboy on this doorstep to Europe has developed a healthy type of homesickness that bodes no good for the Schickelgruber set in Berlin.

He's in a hell of a hurry to get onto that Second Front, teach the Nasties some old-fashioned manners—and then go home to the U. S. A.

His proximity to scenes of action has filled the Yankee soldier over here with a fighting spirit that has to be seen and heard to be fully appreciated.

He's Tough; He's A Soldier

I've talked to him by the hundreds—this swell guy who will do the real fighting—as I've traveled in jeeps and peeps and staff cars along the serpentine, dust-white roads that wind through Ulster's blue-green mountains. And I can report to his folks back home: He's fit. He's living well. He's eating well. He's working hard. He's tough. He's a soldier.

About a Second Front? Well, there's stocky, curly-haired, Private Clarence (Buzz) Bradley, anti-tank gunner, from Murphysboro, Ill. He has done a lot of buzzing, has Buzz, and knows his way about a gridiron, too. If he could take our military strategists aside, as he did me, here's what he'd tell 'em:

"This war is just a Big Game without any rules. But offense is the best defense in any kind of scrap. You get to mix a lot in a fight—but don't ever drop your arms—that's bad . . . And like in football, as long as you got the ball, the other guy can't win."

They Know And Like Their Jobs

Listen, too, to Private Harold J. Hoffman of Newark, N. J., a lean and lanky rifleman today but leader of a night-club Hawaiian band only yesterday: "We came over here, and we're going on to Berlin, with a song in our hearts and this baby (he patted his Garand rifle) in our arms. We know the other fellow is a tough cookie. But tight hearts are the stout hearts. My mother told me that."

And dark-haired, firm-jawed Pfc. Lawrence Frost, one-time coal miner from Mystic, Pa., who growls out his chest until he nearly fills the door of his Nissen hut as he says: "Sure we want to go home when the time is right. But first let us at 'em first. Then we'll talk about going home."

They are soldiers who know and like their jobs. Soldiers so well trained that now you hardly can tell whether, before Pearl Harbor, they were "regular army" or National Guard or military unintitled civilians.

The Spittin' Image Of His Dad

The doughboy of 1942 is the spittin' image of his Dad who came overseas, in less-well-fitting khaki, in 1917-18—a tough guy. In fact, that phrase, Tough Guy, has been picked up by British journalists and men-in-the-street as a pet description of these sturdy lads seen swaggering through Irish towns on leave and for the tin-hatted sentries who stand soldily and unbudging athwart the gates of American army camps.

There's a healthy vulgarity in the 1942 doughboy's patter which any American Legionnaire would recognize. He's singing the World War I songs. He's talking the World War I soldier language. There is practically no new doughboy slang—except a five-letter word which, originating in the air forces, has swept like wild-fire throughout the army. Translated into polite parlorese, this word means that "the situation is, as usual, very confused." Also, a doughboy never is "fed up" with his sergeant or with his girl—he is "browned off."

The troops are getting strict discipline in large doses. But it's an American Army-type discipline that sits particularly well with American guys. It's a paternal discipline in which the officers see to it, with a diligence perhaps not equaled in any other army in the world, that their men are as well fed and well housed as possible, and that at nightfall they're all safely in their huts.

"It's because we know on officers are looking after us that we eat up the discipline we're getting," explained smiling Sergeant John Brunette of St. Paul. (He's chief of an artillery section, has one brother reported missing at Corregidor, and another brother in his own outfit here). "We're proud of ourselves as we've never been proud before. Why, we've got so we won't go into the village without our blouses on and our shoes shined. You never hear the word 'morale' around here. That's sissy talk."

Every Outfit Claims To Be Army's Best

Officers and men now have developed that fellowship which comes of being Americans together in a foreign land. Furthermore, officers talk with pride of their individual methods of training their own outfits—each one of which is "the best darned outfit in the whole darned army."

A captain from Fort Dodge, Ia., for instance, was a long-time track and football coach—and he's training his splendid-looking infantrymen much as he might a college athletic team. Another officer, who once was superintendent of a large Michigan factory, told me he views his outfit as if he were building a smooth-running industrial unit, with the individual talents and efforts of all his men carefully synchronized.

Just as the average civilian is the best-fed and most comfortably housed person in the world, so is the American soldier made as comfortable as possible in his new overseas environment. His officers sincerely believe he will be a better soldier as the result.

This isn't "pampering," they insist; certainly there is no pampering of the doughboy when he's in the field; he is given the "works" with super-realism, as anyone who witnessed the recent U. S. Army maneuvers here for the benefit of

"TOUGH GUY," the British have affectionately tagged him and his pal: of the A.E.F. in Northern Ireland. He's Pfc. Lawrence Frost, one-time coal miner from Mystic, Pa., and he says: "... just let us at 'em..."

Here's How You Can Communicate With American Prisoners of War

International Agreement Provides the Machinery And Free Postage

By Robert Ruark
NEA Service Staff

Washington. — If you have a friend or relative captured by the Axis, this is how you eventually should be able to correspond with him.

Under the terms of the Geneva Prisoners of War Convention, each warring nation agrees to set up a central bureau for information. The United States has attached its bureau to the office of the Provost Marshal General in Washington. The Japs established their Central Prisoners' Bureau in Tokyo.

Countries Exchange Names

In the time names of prisoners and civilian internees are assembled by these bureaus and then mailed to the International Red Cross Agency in Geneva, where they are listed and transmitted to interested nations. Notification is then made to next of kin.

As a cross-check, when a captive reaches the prison camp, he fills out a "card of advice" giving his name, rank, condition of health, and the postal address of the camp. These are sent to Geneva, and forwarded immediately. Cards of advice cards are not yet being received from the Far East, because of transportation difficulties.

When relatives of soldiers believed to be prisoners wish to check the matter, they can go to a local Red Cross chapter and fill out a regular foreign inquiry form. National headquarters then works through neutral nations and journals in an effort to locate the soldier. If he is reported captured, but is not reported a prisoner, no further information can be obtained at the moment. Red Cross plans eventually to make special patches for such missing men.

Mail May Be Sent

When the address of the prisoner is established, he is allowed to receive an unlimited amount of mail, and to send a limited number of letters—depending on the country and camp in which he is interned. Prisoners held in America may send two letters and one postcard a week, postage free. Japan is believed to have no limit on the number of letters prisoners may send and receive, but no special facilities yet are available for sending personal packages to the Far East.

Pictured above are Japanese prisoners-of-war lists, such as Japan sends to the International Red Cross in Geneva, which in turn forwards them to the central bureau of prisoners information in the U. S.

A person writing to a prisoner should give the complete name and former rank of the recipient, and should write under name and rank the address of the prison camp, as given by the Provost Marshal's office.

If no address has yet been given, the writer should post his letter to:

"American Prisoner of War, formerly at ....., in care of the International Red Cross Committee, Geneva."

In the upper left hand corner should be written "Postage Free, Prisoner of War."

There is no way, at present, to send mail to the Philippines, since the U. S. post office won't accept letters for a person believed to be a prisoner until his name has appeared on the official list. However, such lists are expected shortly.

Since January, almost half a million food packages have been sent to the Red Cross Committee's headquarters in Geneva, for distribution to all Allied prisoners in Europe. Each prisoner or internee is eligible to receive one package a week. The parcels contain receipt cards, which are supposed to be returned to the American Red Cross. Almost 52,000 such cards, checking receipt of the bundles, have been returned to national headquarters since we went to war.

Aside from supplies which recently left for the East aboard the diplomatic exchange ship Gripsholm, no provisions yet have been made for sending a steady stream of parcels across the Pacific. Negotiations are under way to charter a neutral ship, which will sail under safe-conduct guarantees.

In addition to food parcels, this ship will carry medical supplies, clothing, tobacco and letters. Distribution will be handled by the Red Cross delegates in Tokyo, Hong Kong, Shanghai and, as fast as Japan allows it, in all the other occupied territories.

Men Who Never Saw the Sea Help Swell America's Growing Merchant Fleet

Ships Are Built of Parts Made In Inland Factories All Over U. S.

Washington—In the 16 years before 1937 this country's shipyards built a total of two ocean-going cargo vessels. Now we are just about equaling that production record every day, and a stepped-up production schedule calls for three new merchant ships a day by 1943. It's an unprecedented program, and it is only possible because almost every state in the Union is actively a part of it.

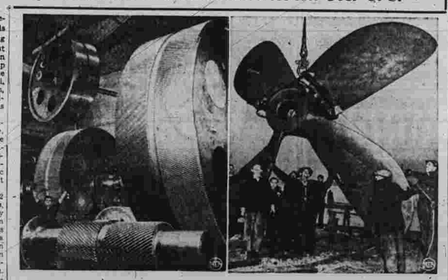
In Colorado and Kansas and Indiana, in Kentucky and Tennessee, men who perhaps never saw the seas are working on parts and fittings which will be sent to Pittsburgh assembly to our more than 60 shipyards along the Atlantic, Pacific and Gulf Coasts, and on the Great Lakes.

In all, some 500 factories in 32 states are working on contracts, with sub-contracts let to many more. The actual number of workers in the shipbuilding industry is expected to reach 700,000 (compared with a peace-time normal of less than 100,000), and there are a million more at work in factories producing material for ship construction.

President Roosevelt last February set the goal of 23,000,000 tons of shipping by the end of 1943. Since then shipping experts have been wrestling with production problems that a few years ago, or even months, ago would have been thought inadmissible.

For one thing, they are concentrating on one type of merchant vessel, the Liberty ship of 10,000 tons. For another, they are constantly increasing the production tempo. When the Liberty ship was first contemplated, a schedule of six months was set for its construction. Today the goal is down to 60 days, and some factories already are beating that figure, notably the Kaiser shipyards, which recently completed a ship in 46 days.

Right now, of course, our aim is a merchant fleet that can supply our own growing army, and those of our allies in all parts of the world, despite the toll of enemy submarines. But the Maritime Commission also has a peacetime goal in view: a fleet that will transport at least 50 per cent of foreign trade under the American flag.



From yards and plants all over the nation, parts flow to the coastal shipyards, to be assembled in America's Victory Fleet of merchant ships. At left, above, dwarfing the worker beside them, are huge turbine reduction gears—made in Massachusetts. Above, right: This Liberty ship propeller was made in New York. You Can Grease the Skids Under the Axis

GREASE REACHES RENDERING PLANT

GREASE GOES INTO COOKER

THEN THROUGH FILTER MACHINE

U. S. housewives can help win the war. The clear fluid left mixed with kitchens by saving meat drippings, deep frying fats and other grease for conversion into soap and glycerin. Cans of kitchen with a few solution at one of the nation's big soap factories, it separates into soap and glycerin. Mildred Mihalovic of Cleveland holds the results of this processing: a bar of soap and tubes of crude and refined glycerin, the base for many explosives.

SOAP, GLYCERIN AND PRETTY GIRL

"Sawed-Off 75-MM. Gun" Is Designed To Fire Depth Charges Off Cargo Ship

By NEA Service

New York.—The Axis U-boat menace could be relieved within a month, said two New York industrial designers, if our navy would be armed with depth charges. So they have invented a new weapon which they believe will do just that.

The device, designed by Jacques Martial and Robert C. Scull, is a depth bomb gun which does not fire shells but instead hurls a 75 or more pounds of TNT up to 1000 yards. The firing mechanism is simply the barrel of a 75-mm. gun which has been sawed off and from which the rifling has been removed. Attached to the depth bomb is a stud, or bushing that fits into the gun barrel for firing.

The gun is mounted on a swivel mechanism which is counterweight in the deck of a merchant ship. This makes the weapon invisible to submarines, just as were the guns of the first World War's U-boats, which played such havoc with the German submarines.

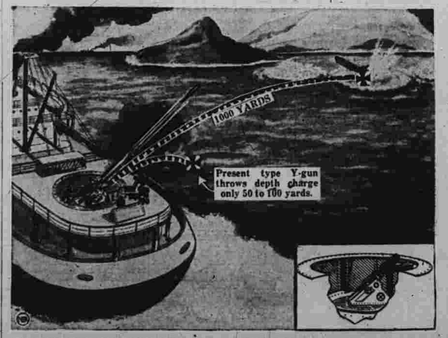
Present depth charge throwers, or Y-guns, hurl their explosives only about 50 to 100 yards. This makes them only useful against a slow-moving cargo ship, which could never get near enough to a sub to sink it, but actually a liability, since depth charges, exploding so near, could spring the merchant ship's own plates.

With their new weapon, say Martial and Scull, merchant sailors could destroy a submarine even after their cargo ship had been torpedoed and was sinking.

In addition, they claim two advantages for their weapon. At present, Nazi submarines can save their hard-to-replace torpedoes by surfacing and using deck guns to attack merchant ships that appear unarmed. Once the Germans found out that U. S. cargo ships were armed with this hidden weapon, they would have to rely on torpedoes every time.

In the second place, in order to stay out of range of the bomb thrower, submarines would have to fire torpedoes at more than 1000 yards—a distance at which accuracy is not very high.

The designers have placed their invention in the hands of a Senatorial committee.



The pictodiagram, above, picturing the new "sawed-off 75" depth charge gun in operation, shows how its range contrasts with the comparatively short range of the currently-used "Y"-gun. Cutaway diagram insert shows how gun is sunk below deck surface of cargo ship.

Tank Car Use In 20 States Fully Curbed

of all types and that the needs for the first three months of next year would be boosted to approximately 1,600,000 barrels daily.

Pipe-Line Will Help

Besides the additional tank cars, a pipe-line under construction is expected to provide a net gain of 150,000 barrels daily to narrow further the excess of eastern requirements over shipments, the spokesman said.

Davies explained that the diversion of tank cars was ordered because the railroads and oil companies had increased their efficiency in handling tank car movements to a point where they now would be able to use the additional cars in the Atlantic coast service.

He said that the number of tank cars assigned to the east coast has risen from approximately 1,000 to approximately 70,000 in the 30 months since January, 1941. Formerly, most of the oil deliveries to the east were made by seagoing tankers, but the submarine menace has virtually eliminated deliveries by sea.

Davies said the assignment of the newly released tank cars to the east coast service would bring the total so used to more than 75,000 or almost 70 per cent of all the cars in petroleum service in the United States.

Can Always Return Surplus

If the railroads and oil companies are unable to utilize that number of cars, Davies said, the surplus "can always be returned," but the railroads and oil companies "feel confident" that they can handle them.

Davies said the petroleum coordinator's office had "taken the position from the start that transportation should be withdrawn from unrationed areas for the relief of the rationed area as rapidly as it could be usefully employed, and if this withdrawal of transportation created a shortage in the areas losing it, then curtailment should be extended.

"It has seemed only fair that the burden growing out of a condition of war be distributed as widely as possible," Davies continued. "On the other hand, if the regions losing the transportation can locally solve their problems otherwise well and good. There is no point in rationing if there does not in fact exist a physical necessity for it."

Maximum The Goal

In addition to stopping gasoline movement by rail in the 20 states, the order provided that, subject to review by the petroleum coordinator's office, all suppliers and distributors affected by withdrawal of the additional tank cars shall make such joint purchases, sales, loans, or exchanges of products, together with appropriate arrangements for joint use of terminals, transportation, and distribution facilities, as may be required to attain maximum efficient use of all facilities.

The program, which has the approval of the Department of Justice and the chairman of the War Production Board, makes it possible for the oil companies to obtain greater efficiency in petroleum distribution through joint use of facilities, and will aid them in effecting transportation arrangements that will offset, at least to a degree, the loss of the tank cars to eastern service," Davies said.

Alleged Murderers Are Bound Over

Hartford, Aug. 21.—(AP)—Three alleged murderers, entering formal pleas of not guilty to the charges as made, waived examination and were bound over to Superior Court without bonds by Police Court Judge A. A. Ribicoff today.

Wilson Funderburk, 27, of 289 Windsor street, was charged with the rape and murder of Christine Paramore, 1 lyears old, in the North Meadows on April 7.

Dominick Scavoni, 44, of 213 Windsor street, and Thomas King, 38, of 12 Bellevue Sq., were charged with the murder of Angelo Serafini, 45, of 148 School street, Bristol, on July 11, in the same section of the city.

The Funderburk case was first presented, and before acting in the matter, Judge Ribicoff took occasion to again compliment the Hartford detective bureau for its efficiency. "I praised the bureau for its excellent work in the gasoline coupon investigation and I now must again compliment you for the work in this case," said the court, addressing his remarks to Deputy Chief Thomas J. Hickey, head of the Detective Bureau.

Then immediately afterwards, when Scavoni and King were presented, Judge Ribicoff remarked to the deputy, "If I continue to pass out bouquets I might just as well send flowers to the department."

Expect Light Vote At Primary Today

Waterbury, Aug. 21.—(AP)—Approximately 20,000 enrolled Democrats are eligible to vote in tomorrow's Senatorial primaries in the 15th and 16th Districts. The primary campaigns closed at 1:30 o'clock this afternoon as the first voters appeared at the voting places in each of the city's 32 districts to register their choices. Indications point to a lighter turnout of voters than in 1940 when nearly 9,000 votes were cast in similar primaries.

In the 15th District Senator Michael V. Blansfield, who is chairman of the state savings bank insurance commission, is being opposed for renomination by William J. Stanton, president of the American brass unit of the Brass Workers Union.

The Democratic voters of the 16th District are to choose between former Rep. John F. Tobin and Patrick J. Wallace also Senator Edward P. Egan is not a candidate for reelection. Senator Egan was unable to seek reelection because of pressure of business and because he is moving into the 15th District.

written by Howard in which he said "the assumption is that I. G. is going to stay out of the oil business proper and we are going to stay out of the chemical business except to the extent to which Standard already was engaged in it.

Farish denied that meant a "division of territory." He and Howard said "I. G. could have gone into the oil business in the United States if it had wanted business proper and we are going to stay out of the chemical business except to the extent to which Standard already was engaged in it.

Farish denied that meant a "division of territory." He and Howard said "I. G. could have gone into the oil business in the United States if it had wanted to," but would necessarily have been obliged to take out licenses from Standard on I. G.'s own patent which it had transferred to Standard for the United States.

Because "many unforeseen situations would arise" in the years from 1927 to 1950, the life of the contract, Farish said the heads of the town compounded later exchanged letters of "good intention, good faith and desire on both sides to settle any future questions which might arise in the spirit of our agreement."

Called Coordination Agreement

The Anti-Trust Division of the Department of Justice subsequently called this a "coordination agreement, supposed to link together the several contracts of 1928 into an imaginary world cartel for the oil and chemical industries." Farish said:

"The 1927 declaration of good faith from its origin had no possible meaning or effect except to record the good intentions of the parties under a simple oil patent contract applying to the United States only," he continued.

An "extravagant" characterization of the "simple 1927 United States oil patent agreement" as a "full marriage" between the two companies, Farish continued, was reported and erroneously applied to the 1928 agreements as further evidence of an alliance to rule the oil and chemical industries of the world."

Gibson "Entirely Wrong"

Farish said Patrick A. Gibson, special assistant to the attorney general, was "entirely wrong" in testifying that Standard would not have had control of butyl rubber, a synthetic product developed from an I. G. patent, "even though we would have had a five-eighths financial interest in it."

The war intervened, Farish said, "so that I. G. never even acquired a minority interest in butyl rubber in the United States," where he said its principal value would always be because large oil reserves are required for commercial production of butyl rubber is to start in Texas.

Process Found Worthless

Farish also denied what he called a "fanciful story" by Irving Lipkowitz, an expert of the Justice Department's Anti-Trust Division, that I. G. Farben prevented utilization of a process for making acetylene, a material used in the manufacture of acetic acid. Farish said Standard and I. G. spent $1,500,000 testing the process and found it was worthless.

At to Lipkowitz's "fanciful conclusion" that Standard started to tear down the pilot plant on orders from Germany when Germany went to war in September, 1939, Farish said Standard began dismantling the plant in 1936 and carried this further several months before Germany went to war.

A Manchester Fire Dept.

The position taken by the directors of the Eighth, School and Utilities District with regard to future responses of the district fire equipment will seem especially extreme to North End householders who live beyond the confines of that district. There are at least several hundred homes who can now feel that they have been cut off from the fire protection every modern community regards as an essential part of its security. Theoretically, by the wording of the resolution adopted by the district directors, outside householders can gain protection by calling up and offering "bona fide assurance," whatever that is, to the effect that they will pay the fire department $25 for its trouble in answering the call.

In actuality, what the resolution means is that the directors of the district do not want to have to respond to fires beyond their district lines, both because they feel that the services paid for and maintained by one group of citizens should not be expended for another group and because they feel that every time they answer a fire in an outlying district they lessen the chances of leaving their own central district unprotected.

Even with these motives in mind, however, the directors themselves seem to feel that their action is in the nature of a drastic step, and we doubt that there is one of them who regards the situation as one which has been closed by the simple adoption of a rule forbidding department equipment to pass district lines unless assured of compensation.

It is unthinkable that hundreds of Manchester homes shall long continue feeling themselves without willing and cooperative fire protection. The number of homes in sections lying beyond the district boundaries is increasing every week. When people build homes, they don't do it with the intention of sitting around and waiting for them to burn. Communities do not exist without fire protection. There will be fire protection for every home in Manchester. Naturally enough, the people who get it will pay for it in one way or another. But they will get it.

The question posed by the action of the Eighth District directors is that of how such protection shall be obtained and provided for every home in Manchester. It is just as well the question has been posed, as dramatically as it has been.

It is a question which has existed, in general terms, for years, without ever getting a precisely nearer solution. And perhaps, at that sign, it is a question which it will take an extraordinary awareness of danger to solve. That danger the Eighth District Directors have dramatically emphasized. And in that way they have probably done a service to the whole community.

There is little point in discussion of the respective merits of one fire department or another, although both ends of town are good at such discussion. There is little point in discussion of the possible expansion of the present fire districts to cover some additional territory while still leaving other territory outside, this is little point in any solution to the problem posed by the Eighth District Directors which does not go all the way to assure fire protection for all the homes in Manchester.

There is only one solution, and every resident of Manchester knows it in his heart and mind what it is. It is the creation of one fire department, financed by the taxes of all for the benefit and protection of all, so that there can no longer be any doubt, in the mind of any Manchester resident, about the fact that he has a fire department on call.

Farley Wins

The real battle in New York State was not between two colossus stoogies who had perhaps an equal claim to fitness for the office of governor, but between political Titans, President Roosevelt and Big Jim Farley.

Out of it, Farley gained not only the victory he predicted—just as accurately as he used to predict victories for Roosevelt—but credit for behaving like an honest and straightforward politician. He was in the fight, and he stated it and proved it in it, and there was no doubt about it.

President Roosevelt, on the other hand, employed a half and half technique of political operation which could gain him only criticism. There was little doubt that he was intending to exert every ounce of influence he had—except one—to defeat Farley's stooge and place his own in nomination. The one scrap of influence he refused to use was an open pronouncement that yes, he was in this political fight, and intended to nominate his own stooge.

Instead, the White House produced a kind of double talk which conveyed the President's political wishes but sought to preserve the myth that he was "too busy" with more important things to take an active part in New York state politics. The President, and his stooge, might have done better if he had been as direct and honest about the situation as was Farley. And people outside New York state might have forgiven the Presidents stand more easily if there had been less obvious dissimulation in it.

The Farley victory represents an opportunity for the Republicans, not only in New York, but in the nation. They are ill-prepared, committed as they are to the candidacy of Thomas E. Dewey, to take constructive advantage of the opportunity in New York state. Mr. Dewey is not, and never will be, the man to lead the Republican party back to national power, and if his potential victory in New York is regarded as clinching the presidential nomination for him it will be unfortunate. But if the Republican party can avoid having itself sold up lock, stock and barrel, can keep itself clear for the nomination of a progressive, constructive candidate like Wendell Willkie the Farley-Roosevelt warfare provides a good road to a Republican victory in 1944.

Mr. Nelson Obliges

Our columnists are doing a world of worrying about Donald Nelson's temperament. It seems that the War Production Chief is too likeable, too easy-going. He doesn't like his job properly, it is admitted. But, the very assiduous and solicitous criticism goes, he hasn't put enough ruthless steel into his touch. He hasn't been "tough" enough.

Premise for all this worry about Mr. Nelson is the assumption, by these columnists, that Mr. Nelson is failing at his job. His failure, apparently, lies in the fact that there is definite maladjustment in our allocations and supply of critical raw materials. We find ourselves making too many of the wrong things, and we find ourselves faced with material shortages for the manufacture of the right things. We went into the business of war production shooting for anything and everything that we thought-would be needed in the war, the time has come to do some selective sharp-shooting at some specific goals; that is going to require painful readjustments, and perhaps the closing of some plants; above all, the critics say, a quick end to a situation in which civil needs, the Army, the Navy, shipping, lend-lease, and civilian, have too much free sightseeing in their pulling and hauling for priority status.

It is charged, by some business sources more interested in winning the war than anything else, that Mr. Nelson has been too easy-going with these rival needs, and that, as well, he has allowed his system to be hampered by the business as usual loyalties of many of his aides who have come from the ranks of big business.

The remedy for all these ills, according to the columnists, rests in Mr. Nelson's personality. "It is quite possible," says Walter Lippmann, "for Mr. Nelson to master his situation. Whether or not he will is at bottom not a question of technique and of organization charts but the very human question of his mind and character."

If Mr. Nelson gets tough enough, according to the columnist theories, everything will be all right. The other things will follow.

This, it appears to us, is an easy, diverting for columnists to say. Mr. Nelson turns a switch inside his personality, and presto, everything is on the road to victory. We wonder whether it could be that simple and easy.

We wonder even more when Mr. Nelson returns to his desk in Washington from a week's rest, and goes through the motions of turning that switch in his personality.

"From now on," said Mr. Nelson Wednesday, "any one who crosses my path is going to have his head taken off."

Newspapermen asked him if he was going to "get tough," and he said he was, "tough enough to get this job done, and the job will be done, you can be sure of that. There will be no more alibis. I am sick of them."

Then, as if to run the gamut of toughness for the columnists, he "smashed" a fist into his hand. By the time it came on the air, he had pounded his desk until it cracked.

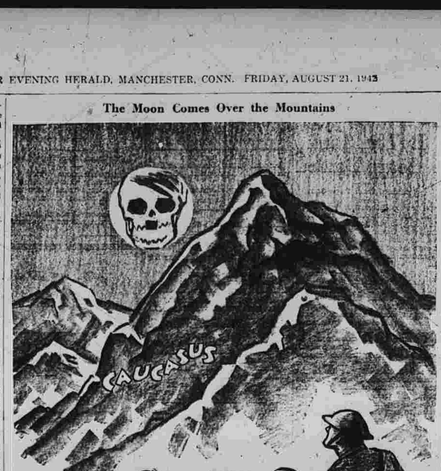
If Mr. Nelson proceeds to take a few heads off, the columnists, we suppose, will relax into a permanent purr.

We will be pardoned if we see something childlike in all this clamor for toughness, and in Mr. Nelson's obliging imitation of that quality.

We suspect that, considering the magnitude and complexity of the problems faced, the continually changing character of the war, the revisions of strategy which have been necessary, the good and bad lessons of supply and production that have had to be learned, Mr. Nelson, tough or not, has done a pretty good job—a job that will some day still be considered a miracle, even if, at the present moment, it seems distressingly short of perfection. Furthermore, we have some confidence in Mr. Nelson when he said, as he momentarily relaxed from his new "toughness," that although "in every program there must be readjustments, and we are making those adjustments now, I can see the way ahead and we are going to come out on top."

When that happens, as we believe it will happen, it will, of course, be the columnists who will deserve the credit.

The Moon Comes Over the Mountains



Manhattan

By George Tucker

New York—A development of the theatrical and supper-club season has been that Larry Adler, virtuoso of the harmonica, has emerged as an imposing nightclub personality. It is known that Larry has trouped theatrical stages and has taken concert stages in his stride for more years than he cares to remember, yet this was to my knowledge—is the first time he has moved into the Manhattan clubs and established himself with a sword rattle that would make even the Hartmans take notice.

I used to know Larry in the old unit-house days when the weeks of the week were ornamented with a bevy of Chester Hale dancing beauties and sent on the Loew's-United Artists circuit throughout the east and the mid-west. He arrived with his urchine—the bevy of fluttering rags—and wowed 'em. I never saw Larry lay an egg.

Biography: Adler was 14 when he became the "Menuhin of the mouth organ." . . . All his life he longed to do with the mouth organ what Kreisler had done with the fiddle. He wanted to lift the harmonica from the sidewalks and put it in genteel row. Instead of exclusively playing racy, Tin Pan Alley music, he studied the classics. After all, a rose by any other name is just as sweet, and the same is true of Tschaikowsky's 5th a la Adler. It is one of the interesting episodes of his life that he personally received from travel permission to score "the Bolero" for harmonica. Kreisler applauded him for "Caprice Viennois" on the mouth organ. The late George Gershwin cheered to the "Rhapsody in Blue." He has worked with Toscanini, Stokowski and Beecham. He knew Paris before the Boches came, and London and all the places that used to connote other matters than war and carnage.

So it is that those who wander into the Savoy-Plaza will find Adler, the man who, in his way, built a better mouse trap. Nobody ever played the harmonica better than Larry Adler, and that is all you can say for any man.

There's an item in the new Havana-Madrid dance team at Cassino and Cortez. . . . Cassino is Rita Hayworth's cousin, and Cortez is Ramon Navarro's sister.

The most brilliant maître in show business, for my money, is John Hoystradt, who used to be a school teacher and who once tutored the Roosevelt boys. He's at the Arrowhead for the season, in Saratoga.

It is Joe E. Lewis who tells of "The ugliest dog whose job is to sit in the lap of a beauty parlor while you wonder if her next that yips, 'Don't let this happen to you.'"

St. Vitus Dance

The medical word for this disorder is "Chorea," which comes from the Greek and means dancing. It is the name given to disordered, involuntary, spasmodic and involuntary movements. "Chorea Sancti Vitu" was the name given in the middle ages to an epidemic of dancing mania which attacked people in the vicinity of great religious excitement, and led to pilgrimages to the chapel of St. Vitus in the hope of being cured.

This disorder occurs most often in early childhood and adolescence, more than three-fourths of the cases developing between the fifth and fifteenth years. It is similar in that it occurs more often in among girls and among the offspring of the poorer classes.

The schoolchild who has been made nervous by overwork at school is a fit subject for chorea and, in fact, for many other disorders when the trouble from injudicious holiday stuffing add their burden to the child's irritated, nervous system.

The disorder and jerky movements are the first symptoms. The child may be restless, mentally disturbed, easily upset, and tend into fits of crying or temper. The jerky movements are usually noticed first on the face and arms. The face will twist into a series of contorted grimaces, the arms the eyes may shut and suddenly shoot open. The angle of the mouth may change quickly, or the whole head may flop from side to side. There may be a specific and involuntary working of the hands and arms, and, if the patient tries to grasp anything, he is inclined to grab for it and may close his hand before he reaches the object. As the disorder progresses, the child's body may twitch in various places almost continually during the day. Usually the movements either disappear or decrease during sleep.

I have never seen a case of chorea which could not be cured and usually in a very short time. The toxic condition which is always present must first be corrected. Here again the orange juice fast is of great value and should be used for several days even with very young children. They should be kept away from all studies and taught to play games which are not overly exciting. The best diet after the fast is usually a course of milk diet treatment, taken three or four quarts daily, according to the age, for as long as three or four weeks. After this the diet should be well balanced with special attention to correcting bowel elimination.

The child will always be greatly helped through osteopathic or chiropractic treatments which tend to quiet and soothe the nervous system.

The quickest results, of course, come in those cases where an early diagnosis is made and treatment started at once. Naturally the time necessary to effect a cure is materially lengthened in those cases which have been permitted to go to advanced stages before treatment is started.

Questions And Answers

(What Are Gas Pains?)

Question: Mrs. A. V. of Colorado Springs, Colo., asks: "Could you tell me what gas pains are? I have a lot of pain in my stomach and lately I have had pains in the region of the heart. I also feel bloated and have cramp-like pains through the abdomen.

Answer: Some of the symptoms described in your letter could be referred to as gas pressure, numb feeling near the heart region together with cramp-like pains in the abdomen are very frequently due to excessive gas and dyspepsia as soon as the gas tendency is corrected. At the time that you notice a great deal of discomfort, it might be helpful to you to apply warm applications over the entire abdomen for a few minutes and then to follow this with an enema as the enema will help to relieve the gas pressure.

(The Alkaline-Acid Balance)

Question: From Quantico, Va.: "A friend of little boy asks me that she should avoid all foods containing harmful acids. Could you tell us a list of foods she could use?"

Answer: The foods which would be most beneficial for your friend are those which have an alkaline reaction in the body. Some of the foods which may be mentioned later are the following: celery, spinach, canned asparagus, small beets and carrots, lima beans, green peas, pineapple cooked dried figs etc. I believe that your friend would be particularly interested in one of Dr. Frank Spaeth's articles called The Alkaline-Acid Balance. I would be pleased to send it to any reader who will write to McCoy Health Service in care of this newspaper following the instructions for questions and answers given at the heading or end of this column and enclosing a large, self-addressed envelope and six cents in stamps.

Discovery May Mean Immunity to Disease

Artificial Antibodies Are Made in Test Tubes; Big Stride Toward Great Medical Goal.

By Howard W. Blakeslee
Wide World Science Editor

New York, Aug. 21—(Wide World)—A new kind of synthetic medicine, an antibody against Type III pneumonia, has been made in test tubes at the California Institute of Technology.

This discovery may mean that science has seized the formula for immunity to disease, and certainly is a big stride toward achieving one of the grow goals of medicine.

Antibody is the common name of the list of mysterious substances which are the natural defenses of the human body against infectious disease. The secret of the antibody, so far as now known, is in the shape of its molecules.

Antibodies Altered Proteins

For example, when a person has an infectious disease, like pneumonia, some of the body's protein molecules are believed to change their configuration, and, with this change, to be able to help throw off the disease. Furthermore, they offer some immunity, on occasional lifelong. These altered proteins are the antibodies.

For each disease, and sometimes for each kind of type of the same disease there is a separate and distinct antibody. But until now, only living tissue, of a sick person or animal, could manufacture antibodies.

Thirty years ago two Russians made some horse serum stimulated antibodies for diphtheria, and the serum saved many the Russian idea, but synthetic antibodies never reached the practical stage.

Now the story of the California antibody is told in the current issue of Experimental Medicine, Rockefeller Institute publication, by Dorothea Lindquist Landing and Dan H. Campbell, of the Gates and Crellin Laboratories of Chemistry, Cal. Tech.

Dr. Pauling, 41, a native of Portland, Ore., is one of the younger American chemists, who was honored even before his thirties by American scientific societies, for unusual achievements.

Start With Simple Theory

He and Campbell started with a theory so simple that anyone can understand it. This was that protein molecules under certain chemical treatments, start uncoiling, like wrapped boxes, whose wrapping cords loose at one end.

Furthermore, said the theory, it is possible to make uncoiling start at a place

SERIAL STORY

WHEN A GIRL MARRIES

BY RENE RYERSON MART

Back To Reality
Chapter XIII

Aunt Faye had money! But Aunt Faye wasn't the type of a person who went around assuming other people's responsibilities. It made Enid sick with humiliation to think of having to ask her for a loan . . . but there was nothing else to do.

Mrs. Luxon didn't make it easy for Enid either. "Haven't you any money at all?" she asked incredulously.

Enid flushed with her guilty secret. If her aunt knew that she had squandered her entire savings in a hair-brained scheme that reality she would never help her. "I'm only gets a small check from a benefit fund now that it isn't able to work any more," she explained lamely. "and I make $20 a week. That doesn't go much far. Please, Aunt Faye. I'll pay it back. Every cent of it."

"How much will you need?"

"I—I don't know. Perhaps a couple of hundred dollars."

Grudgingly Faye Luxon wrote her a check for that amount.

"Mom — and Pop, if he lives, must never know about this. Enid thought mechanically. She felt that she had brought dishonor upon them by having to borrow money. They had always been poor. Pop had never made big wages, but they'd always been independent and proud. They'd never accepted any help from anyone.

She wished again futilely that she hadn't spent her savings so foolishly, that she had never realized the apartment in Arlington Arms. And there her thoughts halted curiously confused.

No, she decided after a moment, she didn't really regret what she had done, not even now, while her face still burned with humiliation. For if she hadn't rented the apartment she'd never have met Hank Holliday, never have known that the kind of a man she had dreamed about really existed.

It was the first time she had thought of the doctor since she had gone home and found the telegram from Letty. And even in the midst of her troubles a the thought of him magically warmed her heart. It was with lighter steps that she went back to the hospital office and made the necessary arrangements for her father's care.

When she went back upstairs, she found the family in consultation outside the private room where they had moved Pop. Letty was worrying about her sister's baby left in the casual care of neighbors at the resort. Enid told Phil to take her back to the cottage and round up their scattered family.

Aunt Faye said she was dead on her feet, and that she'd have to go home, too, and get some sleep.

Enid told them all to go. She said she'd stay at the hospital and let Pop took a turn for the worse she'd let them know.

Tom lingered after the others had gone. He waited until a passing nurse disappeared into a room and then he slipped his arms around Enid and kissed her quickly.

She pulled away from him. "Don't. Tom, please not now."

He thought she was tired and embarrassed. He had no way of knowing that the alarm in her eyes and the flush that pinked her cheeks was caused by a startling and quickly suppressed memory of another man's kiss.

"Sorry, babe. I guess I shouldn't have done that, now. Listen, I hate to leave when the old man's so bad. But I ought to be at work in the morning. I'll come back up next Sunday. That all right?"

She nodded. "Yes, Tom. And if Pop—gets better, I'll go back with you then. I'll have to be at the office next week."

He went down the corridor swinging his shoulders, and looked back before he made the turn and waved at her.

The blood rushed to her face again. It was as if everything from did was designed to torture her with a mixture of shame—and longing. In just such a manner Hank Holliday had walked down another corridor and had turned at his door and waved gaily at her.

Her throat grew achingly dry and hot. This was the last precious week of her vacation. The last week . . . and she wouldn't be seeing Hank or going places with him. A lump choked her even. She formed slowly and went into her father's room.

She sat down in a chair in a corner of the room out of the way, and watched the nurse moveneffly on their rubber-soled shoes about her father's bed. Every little while a white-coated interne would come in and check the charts and feel her father's pulse, and perhaps give some low-voiced instruction to the nurse in attendance. The room was dim and quiet, the only sound the slow labored monotony of her father's painful breathing.

Enid wished there was something she could do to help. It was terrible just to sit helplessly by and watch.

She didn't realize that she had fallen asleep, until someone shook her rather roughly back to consciousness. "Here, wake up. a man's voice was saying. You mustn't moan like that."

Enid stared at the man bending over her. He had a ridiculous little fair mustache, blue eyes that crinkled at the outer corners, and smooth, blond hair. She straightened in her chair and put out both hands to him.

"Hank—oh, Hank. I'm so glad you're here."

Then she blinked in dismay. It wasn't Hank. It was one of the interns who had been with her father. She saw then, that she was fully awake. Her face burned with her confusion.

The young doctor looked at her with concern. "You must have been dreaming."

"I guess I was."

He helped her out of the chair, and led her out of the room, steadying her with a hand on her arm. "You've worn out," he said kindly. "Go down to the kitchen at the end of the hall and tell them to fix you some hot coffee."

"My father. Enid began anxiously.

"He's resting easier now. I believe he has a chance to pull through."

She gave a little sob of relief. He patted her shoulder. ("There now, be a good girl. Run along and get your coffee."

It was cruel, Enid thought, as she turned blindly toward the room he indicated, that this strange doctor should look so much like Hank.

There was a nurse in the serving kitchen when Enid entered. She looked up inquisitively.

"One of the doctors—the young one with the mustache—sent me in here to get a cup of coffee," Enid explained.

The nurse nodded. "That's Dr. Kingsley."

She told Enid to sit down, and busied herself at a hot plate measuring water and coffee into a percolator.

Enid watched the fragrant brown liquid bubble up into the glass top of the coffee maker, and tried to concentrate on Hank. It was about time, she told herself firmly, that she forgot this foolishness about Hank Holliday. Time, indeed, when she began to imagine that every strange man with a mustache looked like him.

There had been the most casual sort of friendship. She'd probably see him once more—when she returned the key of the apartment to him — and that would be the end of it.

Forty-eight hours away from him had restored the sanity of her mind, if not her heart.

Army Seizure Action Rapped

Whether One or Two Plants Taken at Boston in Dispute.

Boston, Aug. 21 —(AP)—Whether the Army seized one or two plants when it occupied The S. A. Woods Machine Company properly was in dispute today.

The Army says one; the company management says two.

Maj. Ralph F. Gow, in charge of the soldiers who took over on presidential orders when the management refused to comply with a War Labor Board directive, said the firm had buildings on opposite sides of a street but that "it's all one plant as far as I'm concerned."

Matt R. Jone, counsel for the management, said in a statement:

"After taking possession of our shell plant . . . the government . . . revoked the punitive and oppressive character of its proceedings by also taking over our other plant."

Separate Bargaining Unit

Jones said the "other plant" was a separate bargaining unit, that it was entirely segregated and that it manufactured no implements of war.

The WLB directive had ordered the company to include maintenance of union membership and arbitration clauses in a union contract.

There had been no strike, and production proceeded normally.

Consumers' Spending Rate Still Higher Than Treasury

Washington, Aug. 21 —(AP)—War spending by the Treasury is higher than any government ever attained before, but official statistics showed today that American consumers are still spending more than the Treasury.

Government economists figured that, despite the War Production Board's efforts to curtail the manufacture of consumer goods, the public spent $39,900,000,000 for all purposes in the first half of this year compared with $24,500,000,000 for the government. Capital expenditures by private business amounted to $6,000,000,000.

Restrictions Swinging Balance

However, the WPB restrictions are gradually swinging the balance, and by the end of the year the economists figure that spending totals for the last half of 1942 will read $38,100,000,000 for consumers, $38,500,000,000 for government, and $4,000,000,000 for private capital expenditures.

If those estimates pan out, 1942 will set a record of $151,000,000,000 of combined government and private spending for all purposes. This will be at least $30,000,000,000 more than the national income for the year, reflecting the fact that the government, particularly, is spending borrowed money.

Compared with previous years, here's how the economists estimate the nation's spending: (In billions of dollars).

Year	Govt Spending	Private Capital	Consumer Spending	Total Expenditures
1939	15.1	11.0	62.0	88.1
1940	16.3	14.6	66.2	97.1
1941	24.6	19.1	78.2	119.9
1942	63.0	10.0	78.0	151.0

after the soldiers were posted on the premises.

Engagements

Tuttle-Ladd

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert O. Ladd of 20 Potter street, Willimantic, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Phyllis Ann, to Louis Everett Tuttle, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. J. Tuttle, of 71 Hudson street, Manchester.

It is estimated that every meadowlark is worth $1 a year as a destroyer of grasshoppers alone.

English, French, German and Italian are spoken by Pope Pius, who is a Roman by birth.

Industrial Users Of Sugar Warned

Although allotments for September and October have been available at the office of Local War Price and Rationing Board 11-76 in the Lincoln school since August 7, only one-third of Manchester's institutional and Industrial Users of sugar have registered. Several stories have appeared in The Herald from time to time in the past few weeks, but only twenty applicants have appeared at the Board office.

Erik W. Modean, office manager, warned today that the Institutional and Industrial Users will be given to the end of August to register, otherwise they will have to wait until the next period in October. Under new regulations, Institutional Users are eligible to receive a bonus of 25 per cent of their July and August allotments and the September and October percentage has been increased from 50 to 75 per cent of normal usage. Industrial Users may receive, a bonus of 10 per cent on July and August allotments and their September and October percentage has been increased from 70 to 90 per cent of normal requirements.

Parents in Court Over Children

Bridgeport, Aug. 21 —(AP)—Morton Downey, tenor of concert and radio fame, and his ex-wife, Barbara Bennett Downey Randall, star of stage, movies and radio, met before Judge Edward J. Quinlan in a chambers session of Superior Court today, to thresh out their difficulties over the custody of their five children.

After a brief preliminary statement before Judge Quinlan in open court, the litigants with counsel adjourned to the judge's chambers where a private hearing was started. Counsel predicted that the matter may take all day, and that an immediate decision probably will not be made because it may be necessary to submit depositions.

Miss Bennett desires to have the children with her during the school year, and has agreed to send them to a parochial school if she gains their custody.

Field Trial Commended

Chief Air Raid Warden John Dailey, Jr., has received the report of the Field Trial held on July 28. The report states that the observers were both impressed by the enthusiasm, speed and efficiency of the Report Center personnel. Traffic Control in the field was efficient and thoroughly manned with a well-trained force of wardens and auxiliary police on the job. The Report Center functioning proceeded smoothly and efficiently though the observer suggests the need for additional ventilation. A police guard was provided giving excellent protection.

It is suggested that telephones be provided for the representatives of the Emergency Services, as much as the Fire, Medical and Transportation representatives in the Center had to use three telephones on which all available incoming and outgoing messages were placed. Messenger service was provided by boys who left their job well.

Incidents Well Handled

In the field the observer remarked on the excellence of the Casualty Station organization and the general Medical setup. The incidents that were reported were handled in quick order where services were dispatched. The observers felt that the trial showed a great deal of preparation and planning on the part of the local officials resulting in a very successful preliminary trial. Further trials were suggested to give all the members of the Emergency service organization sufficient practice to operate during an actual raid.

Stafford Springs

John O. Netto

Four Stafford textile plants will grant a bonus of an extra week's pay and two other plants will close the last week in August and grant their employees a week's vacation with pay, according to an announcement made by the plants. The textile mills which will continue to operate and grant the bonus are: Cyril Johnson Woolen company, Rhode Island Worsted company, Stafford Worsted company and Swift River Woolen company. The Cyril Johnson Woolen and Warren Woolen companies will close Monday for a week and will re-open Monday, Aug. 31. All workers who have been employed by the two companies for the last three years and at least 15 weeks which will receive an extra week's pay, average over the last 12 months.

Officials at Cryril Johnson Woolen, Rhode Island Worsted and Stafford Worsted companies announced that because of pressure of completion of war contracts it will prevent vacation closing of their plants. All three are working on AA1 priorities while the Swift River mill is busily engaged in manufacturing civilian goods. The workers who must stay on the job will receive a full week's pay bonus in lieu of a vacation. The bonus will be paid to each employee of each mill who has worked for at least 12 weeks between January 1, 1942 and June 30, 1942. The bonus is based on today's 40 hours' earnings for all those on time pay and in piece rate departments, the amount will represent average 40-hour earnings, for the department for the first six months of the year, the announcement read.

In the smaller Stafford industries, vacations have already been granted or plans for them are being made. R. Schwanda & Sons manufacturers of buttons at Staffordville, have announced a 10 percent wage increase, effective September 7. Labor Day week. The button plant this year adopted a staggered two weeks' vacation plan that has kept workers being selected for the vacation according to alphabetical divisions. The textile mills here granted a wage increase for the last month.

There are about 1,500 textile workers employed in local mills.

The regular workers are comparatively few but they make up that lack by enthusiastic support. They feel proud of a record of 1,087 articles completed between July 15, 1941, and July 15 of the present year. Meetings at St. Peter's Rectory, held weekly for a year or more, have been discontinued, and the workers have joined forces with the members who meet regularly every week Wednesday evenings at the Jewish Synagogue. This is a fine central place to hold the gatherings, and excellent results are being accomplished.

The regular meeting of the Hebron War Price and Rationing Board was held at the town clerk's office Monday evening and consideration was given to applications for tire recaps and tubes which were not attended to at the previous meeting. The following certificates were issued:

There was much trouble during the meeting with the electric lights, which flashed off and on at intervals, caused by the thunder storm which came up in full intensity while the meeting was in progress. There were very sharp flashes of lightning and heavy rolls and crashes of thunder, with a downpour of rain, but unfortunately little or no damage was done in the town. Some of the telephones were put out of commission temporarily.

Miss Janice Ward, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leslie F. Ward of this place and Providence, R. I., spent the week-end here with her parents and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Albert W. Hilding. Miss Ward is visiting her aunt, Mrs. Hilding, and George Avery West in East Hampton this week. She is accompanied by Miss Barbara Porter, daughter of First Selectman and Mrs. Porter, who is also a guest.

Sergeant Julius Cohen, son of Mr. and Mrs. Max Cohen, gave this week to Camp Shelby, Miss., having had a 14-day furlough spent at his home here.

Olive, 4-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Rathbun, has been discharged from the Windham Memorial hospital where she underwent a tonsil operation.

Mrs. F. Elton Post, tax collector, wishes to remind tax payers that the town's fiscal year closes Aug. 31. Taxes remaining unpaid after that date will be published in the annual town report as delinquent. All who may have overlooked their responsibilities in the matter are urged to cooperate for their own and the town's best interests in attending to their obligations promptly. Mrs. Post says that payments have been fairly good so far but there are still a number of unpaid taxes.

A notice is posted giving the date of the Republican caucus on Wednesday, Aug. 26, 8:30 p. m., at the town hall. Business to be done will be the appointing of delegates to the Republican State, Congressional, County, and Senatorial Conventions, also to name a Republican town committee. The notice is signed by the chairman, Robert E. Foote.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Lunkoff of Pawtucket, R. I., who bought of Everett G. Lord, some months ago, a tract of land on the Hebron-Bolton road, have erected a small temporary building which they use for week-end visits. They plan to build a more ambitious place later on.

Teachers have been informed that the public schools here will open earlier than usual this fall. The date of opening is said to be September 1. Our schools do not usually open until after Labor Day. The teaching force will be practically the same as last year it is expected.

He left them at the newspaper office where he advertised their finding. Then Mrs. Cromwell broke her glasses and searched everywhere for her second pair. "Do you know what I bet you did?" she asked Cromwell. "I have," said he, reaching for his hat and heading for the newspaper office, "a pretty good idea."

Mrs. W. W. Grant

Mrs. A. C. Johnson, Republican Registrar of Voters, announces that the G. O. P. town committee will meet at the Town Hall in South Windsor this evening at 8 o'clock. The Rev. and Mrs. H. Marshall Budd are spending a part of their vacation in Poughkeepsie, N. Y., with Mr. Budd's relatives.

Warren E. Marks, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Marks of Wapping was among the group of Connecticut men who has been accepted by the Navy in Hartford, Wednesday.

A daughter was born at the Manchester Memorial hospital last Friday to Mr. and Mrs. Arthur La Chance of Manchester. Mrs. La Chance is the sister of William Kalkavock of Wapping, formerly of Manchester.

D. P. Cavanaugh, chairman of the Rockville City Council Finance has announced that the town will have a balance on hand of something in excess of $15,000 from the past fiscal year. Mr. Cavanaugh attributes the balance to certain items of the Selectmen's expenditures which were less than the appropriations; inability to make some street improvements, particularly $3,000 appropriated for a fire alarm system which it was later found could not be procured; and excess of revenue over estimates particularly in the high school. The annual town meeting laid a tax to cover the deficit of $15,000 but it was recommended by the Board of Finance and the town approved a rate two mills above what appeared requisite. The idea of the board, Mr. Cavanaugh explained, was that people were better off this year than last or than they may expect to be in the near future, and it seemed to be wise to impose a little extra tax this year in order to make up a reserve against the difficult years that lie ahead. Mr. Cavanaugh said that a problem has arisen from the surplus and that questions have been asked in relation to the unexpected money on hand. The main problem that confronts the town is not Manchester in leaving the tax rate for 1942-43 the town should use the cash on hand to reduce the rate or carry the balance as a cash reserve.

and four tank divisions against Russia's second city—previously known as St. Petersburg and Petrograd.

The Germans hauled up 6,000 big guns, 19,000 machine-guns, 4,500 mortars and 1,000 tanks and supported these ground weapons with 1,000 planes, expecting to smash into Leningrad immediately.

(There is no question that the Germans believed the fall of Leningrad was a certainty at this time last year. American correspondents in Berlin were told so, and a trip was arranged so that they could see the triumphal entry. The Germans planned to permit the Finns to enter first and the correspondents were sent to Helsinki. But on their arrival Finnish officers told them: "Wait only way you'll get into Leningrad is by parachute." A few days later the correspondents were back in Berlin, waiting high German officials who had arranged the wild goose chase).

Workmen Took 19 Guns

The Red Army dug in against the assault. Workmen dropped their tools in factories and took up guns. Women and children replaced the workmen to keep industrial wheels turning.

Bombs fell by day and by night and long-range guns hurled explosives into the city. Nevertheless the Red Army lines nor the civilian population cracked.

To the accompaniment of the ceaseless bombardment and German threats from three sides, summer faded into autumn and autumn into a terrible winter of siege.

Through everything, one thin line of supply and reinforcement was kept open to the city by train, sledge and truck. Food ran short and malnutrition cut down many, but the defenses held.

Soviet counter-offensives finally threw the Germans back and the spring and summer brought relief. Although pressure is still upon it, the city's position is eased.

Hamilton Opens Another Branch

Hartford, Aug. 21.—(AP)—To meet the demand for more and more propellers for the United Nations' warplanes, Hamilton Standard Propellers division of United Aircraft Corporation has opened a second branch at Norwalk.

Here again, as at Pawcatuck a year ago, an abandoned factory was taken over and remodeled into operation in a comparatively short time.

A silk mill formerly owned by the J. B. Martin Company, is the site of the Norwich operation. It required less than two months to remodel the building and another two months to place machinery in it and start production.

The Norwich plant will assemble complete propellers and also manufacture blades and hub parts. Adolf Hartig, who has been with Hamilton Standard for 14 years, has been named production superintendent at Norwich.

When the generator isn't charged enough, the trouble may be found in a loose fan belt.

State Quota Of Tires Cut

Next Month's Reduction Will Amount to 25 P. C., Says Bowles.

Hartford, Aug. 21.—(AP) — Consumers now in the market for rubber will be reduced by 25 percent, OPA director Chester Bowles announced today.

That means, he said, that quotas for the eight county and 169 local war price and rationing boards will undergo a similar cut.

Mr. Bowles said that the reduction "is in keeping with a federal order" in which allotments of tires must follow a downward trend for the remainder of 1942.

The OPA also is calling upon local boards for the "strictest possible interpretation" of recent regulations restricting truck eligibility to essential vehicles.

War Effort or Health

Trucks still on the eligible list include those necessary to the war effort or public health and safety.

The OPA in July ordered that tires be denied to an estimated 300,000 vehicles throughout the nation carrying alcoholic beverages, soft drinks, candies, furs and other luxury goods.

Stanley Crute, state rationing director, said that about 5,000 trucks in Connecticut are affected by this order.

Because of the reduction in the monthly tire quota from now on, Mr. Crute has asked local boards to consider each application in the light of the month's quota, instead of carrying unfilled applications from one month into the next.

Don't Desert Pets Society Advises

Hartford, Aug. 21.—The animal appeal to wishful people returning to their homes not to desert their pets was made today by J. Seth Jones, General Manager of the Connecticut Humane Society.

Each year, Mr. Jones said, agents of the Humane Society are called upon to go to beaches or mountain resorts to pick up stray animals. Perhaps the family waited until too late to look for the animal and when it could not be found had to leave without it; or perhaps they adopted the pet for the vacation period and left it behind. Such procedure causes needless suffering.

Mr. Jones pointed out that the Humane Society will dispose of any pet brought to it and he urged that anyone having a pet that he must get rid of bring it to the Humane Society rather than leave the animal to fend for itself.

Defense School Is Organized

High School Teachers Of State to Take Up Ten Days Course.

Hartford, Aug. 21—(AP)—Teachers from a number of High schools in Connecticut will attend the War Department's civilian defense school at Amherst, Mass., it was reported today by James M. Osborn, director of air raid protection training for the State Defense Council.

This course will run for ten days beginning August 23 and includes intensive work on chemical warfare, fighting of incendiary bombs and other military subjects. Because real gas is used, persons attending the course will be thoroughly drilled in the use of gas masks.

Among teachers already registered are Christopher Adams, Wethersfield High school; Miss Lucille Kuhnly, Rockville High school; Ralph Lyman, Middletown High school; Arthur Hitchcock of Bristol High school, and Joseph Swan, Bulkeley High school, Hartford.

Air Raid Protection

The teachers will attend this school in preparation for the courses in air raid protection and first-aid which will be given in the High schools throughout the state during the next term. These courses will include training in protection against poison gas, incendiary bombs, in the preparation of shelters and defense against high explosive bombs, blackout in theory and practice, and in the duties of messengers, fire watchers, canteen aides, and other civilian defense work.

Commenting on the program, Commissioner Alonzo G. Grace of the State Department of Education, said today, "This war affects young people of High school age almost as much as it does their parents. If, and when, fire comes from the air, the boys and girls know they will have to help fight it. The High schools come in as air raid protection techniques and in first aid are designed to help them do so, both as individuals and as regularly enrolled members of civilian defense organizations."

Pennsylvania State College adjusted its first student on Feb. 16, 1859, when it was known as Farmer's High School.

New York Giants Lose to Brooklyn

Boston Red Sox Trip Yankees; A's Wallop Washington; Reds Top Pirates 5 to 3.

By Austin Resinover
Ap-Sports Writer

The Brooklyn Dodgers still have a little matter to settle with the St. Louis Cardinals before they will be ready for the world series, but their ace right-hander, Whitlow Wyatt, is as fully prepared for the October classic today as he can ever hope to be.

Wyatt, who never has pitched a no-hit game in his dozen years around the major leagues, came as close as possible without actually achieving it yesterday when he let the New York Giants down with one blow as the Dodgers triumphed, 2-1, in a twilight-art light game.

His only mistake was in trying to throw a fast one past big John Mize, who demonstrated that he has recovered from a recent injury by parking the ball behind the center field score board for his 20th home run.

Lucky Break

At that, the Dodgers needed a break which helped them tally the first of their two second inning runs after Mize had opened the scoring in the top half of the same frame. Babe Young, a fielding ace from first base, had his first look at the Dodger Park from a seat in the field post and apparently became confused in the cinfamiliar surroundings.

After Johnny Rizzo had singled off Tom Sunkel, Dolph Camilli hit a long fly which Young misjudged and let fall for a three-bagger which tied the score and Mickey Owen singled for the final and winning run.

Harry Feldman replaced Sunkel and pitched two-bit ball for six frames before giving way to a pinch hitter and turning it over to Ace Adams, who permitted only one hit in the last inning, but the Giants never had a chance.

In compiling his 15th victory against only four defeats, Wyatt fanned six, walked none, and, aside from Mize, didn't allow a man to get on base except in the fourth when Mickey Witek reached first on an error and Mel Ott was hit by a pitched ball.

The Victory

The victory, opening an important four-game series between the Dodgers' national league lead to seven games over the Cardinals, who were idle.

In the only other National League game, the Cincinnati Reds snapped a six-game losing streak and crowded the Pittsburgh Pirates, 5 to 3.

Johnny Vander Meer pitched six-hit ball for the Reds and promptly missed a shutout when Vince DiMaggio blasted a three-run homer in the eighth inning.

The Boston Red Sox, refusing to concede the American League flag to New York's front-running defending champs, walloped the Yankees, 7-4, and rounded out a four-game series with three triumphs.

Jim Tabor, who hit a pair of home runs between games to give Boston victory the previous day, homered with the bases loaded twice yesterday to climax a six-run outburst in the fifth inning.

Aks Top Bombers

At the other end of the junior circuit, the Philadelphia Athletics took a doubleheader in their collar series with the Washington Senators.

A 17-bit attack on three Washington pitchers gave the Athletics the opener, 9-2, and sent Buck Newsom to his 16th defeat as Elon Christopher hurled seven-hit bal for Philadelphia.

The nightcap went 12 innings before the A's triumphed, 6-1, by routing Walt Masterson with a five-hit uprising that produced five runs with the help of a sacrifice, a walk, a wild pitch and two Washington errors.

The Chicago White Sox came from behind with six runs in the fifth inning to atop the St. Louis Browns, 8-5, in a night game. Orval Humphries hurled seven-hit ball for the Sox.

Johnson Meets Old Purdue Teammates

Great Lakes—Bob Johnson, Purdue's great football performer of last fall, is due to meet his old teammates on the gridiron this season.

Johnson, who went the full route in the Boilermakers first seven games and played all but three minutes of the Indiana game, is a seaman, second class, stationed here.

He is expected to be in the Great Lakes lineup when the Sailors invade Lafayette, Nov. 7.

Ruth at Bat Will

Johnson Pitching

Ne- York—Walter Johnson will pitch to Babe Ruth as an added attraction at the Academy Awards' Fund doubleheader between the Yankees and Senators at Yankee Stadium, Aug. 31. The Sox home run king also will try for a long hit off the Big Train.

In field day events, George Washington Case, the Washington hare-stealing star, will match speed in sprints with Charley Keller, George Selkirk and Phil Rizzuto of the New Yorks.

Among Americans, the rocket spaniel leads all other dogs in popularity.

Dolvin Drops Decision to Leo Dulmaine

Grudge Fight Hardly Up To Standard; Kildaire Draws with Duke; Red Doty Here Next Week.

If Leo Dulmaine obtained any revenge in his welterweight bout with the bout with Jimmy Dolvin, he can glance at the calendar and realize that it's still a long way from Christmas. It was a six-round bout and Dolvin, by some process of bookkeeping ...lost. This corner gave four of the rounds to the colored boy from New York, one even and the fifth to the Worcester boy. It was not an interesting bout in any sense of the word and whatever fighting there was, Dolvin usually started it.

Frankie Bennett, a cute trick from New York, handed Jackie Donahue of Boston a stellar showing in the semi-final to win going away. Donahue who was substituted when Matchmaker Ed Hurley learned at 5 o'clock last night that Johnny Red Doyle of Boston declined to fight for Uncle Sam and took his physical examination for the Navy.

Kildaire Earns Draw

The grudge fight between Johnny Duke of Hartford and Irish Johnny Kildaire, also of Hartford (these chaps change their addresses weekly) ended in a close draw. Duke seemed to have a decided edge in four rounds but the referee felt it was a fluke and wanted another chance. He let it last night. He felt could prove anything as he never forced the fight much, except in the last round he "woke up."

Lefty Lou Montero got the decision over Billy Burdock in a bout that was filled with action at times but was lacking in the art of comedy when Montero's panties split and his handlers changed his trunks in the ground floor dressing on. In fact it was the first time that local sports history that some 900 people watched any male citizen change his pants in public.

Frankie Conzena of Worcester gave Jerry Kid of Hartford a thumping and earned the nod of John Crane, the referee. This was about the best bout on the undercard. Jackie Leonard of Avon and the Natchaug of Hartford fought a brisk draw. Al Bianchi of Hartford lost to aggressive Danny Pagani of Middletown in the opener.

Adams Pleases Owen

Near Great Slave Lake, Canada, certain mosquitoes thrive in the summer, mainly to avoid mosquitoes.

Cloak Team Wins Without Playing

The Independent Cloak Softball team won their first game in the Rec Softball league last night on a forfeit from Kem's Service Station. The Service Station team failed to appear at Charter Oak street and as a result the Cloak team won their first game.

Tonight two postponed games from Monday night will be played. At the Charter Oak street the Tigers will play the Independent Cloak and at the V. M. C. A. diamond the Beer Barons will oppose Vic's Package Store.

Local Sport Chatter

There comes to light a bit of wrangling over comments on behind the scenes in local baseball circles. Word off the grapevine has it that some members of Moriarty Brothers' team that are dissatisfied with their treatment of the Twi cup series. They would like to play Pagani's team, winner take all.

Pan Playoffs

Getting a bit deeper into the situation, it was found that the conditions under which a Twilight cup championship is decided upon is passed....quite badly. Be that as it may.... it does give the third and fourth place teams a chance to keep its player's in there pitching until eliminated. Experience has shown the league officials ...when, incidentally, abide by the rules and regulations that govern the league play as set down by the managers themselves are not to blame. Right there any criticism of the system excluded every manager as well as the officials. Veteran members of the league know what happened several times when teams failed to finish they were hopelessly outclassed towards the end of the season.

Suggest Solution

The solution, as suggested, would have the league pick two or three rounds and the winners to play off. Well, the league has been through that when the Bluefields were both round robin and before they complained that there was no money in it for them to make any money. When the present setup was put into operations, in 1938, it apparently had solved the problem, except when a favored team fell in the second round.

Sunday's Game

Now comes the third and perhaps the most important part of the series between the Twi champs and the 1937 High School team. The Stars want Pagani's to have their best one in the final game of series. So confident are they of handing the champions a licking that without any argument, they allowed Jackie May to pitch for his old team ... the West Side.

No Grid Godfather

At this writing it seems apparently, there isn't going to be any godfather for the 1942 grid season. Reports reaching this corner indicate that the demands of the few players interested, are much too strong .... a complete outfit for New equipment is out, of course, and second-hand stuff is going to most of the Army camps. That looks and sounds like the death knell of football in Manchester for the duration at least.

Getting away first the milk men scored in the fourth only to have the Tigers go ahead one run in the sixth. The Dairymen came back with a run in their half of the seventh to knot the score and send the game into extra innings.

Both pitchers were in rare form, allowing but five hits each. The milk men also gave their pitcher the better support committing but one error in the field while the Tigers had two bunglays. The box score:

Grayson Says Many Things Sports Wise

Discusses Duster Ball, Rickey's Departure in 1943; Poor Sales at Saratoga.

By Harry Grayson

Harry G. Salsinger, famous sports editor of the Detroit News, sums up the bean ball controversy:

"Only Judge Landis or death will end it."

"Saratoga Racing Hit Hard by War and Weather"—headline. We can't do anything about the weather, but will turn to the little office for the latter without delay.

Not the least reason why the Saratoga mutuel sales fell off is the presence in the armed forces of these distinguished young racing men: Lieutenant Vanderbilt Whitney, John Hay Whitney, Ogden Mills, Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, Walter Chrysler, Jr. Stephen Sanford, George H. (Pete) Bostwick, Cole Cox Brady, Jack Stoddard, Townsend Martin, R. Keene Paul Mellon, Raymond Guest, Bayard Tuckerman, Earl Potter, Charles Chester and Anderson Fowler.

At the moment they aren't worried about the weather and Saratoga's transportation problem.

Understand that Branch Rickey definitely will not be with the Cardinals next season.

Too much money under the control.

And it is my guess that Branch Rickey, an old soldier, is planning to build something other than a baseball club in 1943, anyway.

Frank Leahy, the master-mind of Notre Dame, will definitely not be elected president of the Football Coaches Association this fall.

Not that the lads don't admire Leahy's intelligence as a drill-master.

He's one of the top men in the crunch business and they know it. But from every section of the country comes indications that a way local talent is trooping to Notre Dame.

In Pittsburgh, in Detroit, in the South and even in more remote areas some walls following Leahy's speaking engagements. A very persuasive chap is Leahy and his Notre Dame football roster is taking on a decidedly cosmopolitan lustre.

"Notre Dame will have a helluva team," remarked a midwestern coach to this reporter. "I'm be very proud that so many young men from our state will be represented on such a famous organization."

Frank Leahy has all the requisites of a great coach:

Get 'em.
Keep 'em.
Teach 'em.

Fighting Baseball Team Of Soldiers Warmly Received by Fans in Every Game; Woodend to Pitch for Locals —Game at 6 Sharp.

When Bradley Air Base ball club comes to Manchester this evening to play Pagani's West Sides it will probably be for the last time this season. The game will be played in the Oval and it's likely that George Woodend will be on the mound against the base boys. Wilson or Hendriks will do the flinging for the visitors.

For Hard Game

The visitors hardly need any introduction to local fans, but for those who have not been fortunate enough to be at the games played before this evening, they mean business every second of the game. They hustle and play for keeps.

Moriartys, with Ziggy Olbert on the hill, had them in the first game, 4-3, but they came back at a later date and evened the count with the former twi champions. The

— Sense and Nonsense —

It Was Tough For Them, Too

Above our desk hangs a picture of covered wagons crossing the great plains. Oxen are pulling the wagons. Men are walking beside the wagons, their guns in readiness.

As our eyes rested on the picture the thought flashed into our mind... it was tough for them, too! It was tough for the pioneers who blazed new trails through the wilderness. It was tough for Washington and his men in the snow and cold of Valley Forge. It was tough for those who built railroads through mountain and forest to make our Nation one. It was tough for the soldiers of the north and south who shed their blood to unite us. It was tough for the Pilgrim Fathers who came to a strange land to find freedom to worship God.

The inspiring thing is that things have never been too tough for us! America is an epic story of triumph over trials and tribulations. Now, we of this generation are being tested. The time has come when we must square our shoulders, hold up our heads, and face our problems unafraid. We will gain strength and courage by looking back at the great processional of American heroes who took tough going in their stride. We have the same stuff in us that they had in them. They were men. So will we. There is an old American saying that the tougher they come, the harder they fall.

Goodby

Goodby, my son! Your country calls—
No nobler trust can life assign;
No need to say the thousand things
That overflow a mother's heart;
And may no word or act of mine
Betray my heartbreak as we part.
No medals would I wish for you,
Nor plaudits of the high and great;
But may you to your trust be true,
Where or you go, whatever your fate.
And when there dawns that brighter day
When hope and faith shall reign again;
May it be said, you stood the test.
That, always, son, you were a man.
Goodby, my son! Goodspeed you on your way.

—Mrs. Carrie Mosser.

Husband (answering the phone)—I don't know; call the weather bureau.

Wife—What was that?

Man—Some fellow asked whether the coast is clear.

Woman—I had my husband arrested for washing last week.

Friend—Oh, did he flirt with another woman?

Woman—No, he mashed me on the nose.

The office boy says that Hitler is changing his socks every day now...

He's beginning to smell defeat. (But, remember, its still going to take a lot of War Savings Bonds and Stamps sales to do the job. Did you get your share this week?)

Jerry—I was held up by two men last night.

Edith—Where?

Jerry—All the way home.

Young Bride—Won't oos 'ittle umpate dumpsie kiss oos 'ittle ochie woochie?

Man (in next berth)—You can't go anywhere nowadays without running across some of those damned foreigners!

Vision...If your work is just plain work to you, if you can't see beyond that work to find pleasure in service and happiness in doing your job to the very best of your ability, look out—you are actually condemning yourself to remain just where you are.

Visitor—What's the matter, little girl?

Child—Mother's gone and drowned all the kittens.

Visitor—Dear me, that's too bad!

Child—Yes, (boo-hoo) she promised me that I could do it.

War Must Wait Game Outcome

All Depends on Results Of Colts-Aircraft Encounter at Outing.

The Washington Social Club will hold its annual outing Saturday afternoon at the Rod and Gun Club in Coventry. The committee headed by David Dickson met at the club rooms last night and settled the final details. But the committee could never settle the question of supremacy as to which war industry has the better softball team, Colt's Patent Firearms or the Pratt & Whitney Aircraft plant.

According to well informed circles this will be the feature attraction of the day, despite the fact that there will be plenty to eat and other games. Osano will serve clam chowder during the afternoon and at 6:30 a chicken and spaghetti dinner.

A chance remark some time ago about the Colt's softball team was picked up seriously. "Goose" Larsen took up the cudgels for the firearms team, Thomas Smith, employed at Pratt & Whitney is not taking any chances and was accused last night, following the committee meeting, of having his team at the Old Golf lots for the past two weeks engaged in secret practice. This accusation was denied by Smith but Larsen insists that his scouts actually witnessed the sessions.

"They need it," declares Larsen whereupon Smith comes back with the snappy answer "And you'll know it, too, before the game is over." At a late hour last night neither team nor the club could find anyone who would undertake to umpire the game. It was expected Thomas Wray would accept with a little coaxing.

19 Meetings Held By Appeals Board

The annual report of the Zoning Board of Appeals submitted last night for record shows unusual activity last year with 19 regular meetings held, 76 hearings on exceptions heard of which 51 were granted and 24 were denied and one not acted upon.

Members of the Zoning Board of Appeals are Raymond W. Cole, chairman; Edward F. Taylor, secretary; Olin Grant, Allan R. Coe and William E. Buckley. Mrs. Alice Johnston is clerk of the board.

In comparison with the local record for 1941-42, it was stated that the similar board of West Hartford held but 10 meetings last year and scheduled nine hearings on zoning matters.

Joins Coast Guard

Cy Blanchard

Big Cy Blanchard, one of the best right-hand pitchers in Manchester during the past 13 years, has enlisted in the United States Coast Guard and will leave on September 8 for Manhattan Beach, Long Island, New York. His father, Cyrus Blanchard, Sr., is taking his physical examination for the nets quota of inductees which will leave within a short time.

Blanchard was one of the best all round athletes graduated from the Manchester High School in the past decade, having starred in football, baseball and basketball. He has three no-hit, no-run games to his credit and his most outstanding feat was in pitching the High School into the state interscholastic championship by downing Bristol High at Mt. Nebo in a 16-inning game. He left his employment at the Hamilton Propeller Company of East Hartford, today.

It was understood that if his father is accepted into the military service his brother Thomas, also a fine athlete, will join the Navy making it the first family in Manchester to enter the armed services 100 per cent. His mother died a few years ago.

Notice

Dr. Robert R. Keeney's office will be closed from Saturday, Aug. 22, until Tuesday, Sept. 8.

Board Grants Two Petitions

Zoning Officials Also Deny One Request and Defer Two Others.

Two deferments were made at the meeting of the Zoning Board of Appeals last night, one application was denied and two were granted.

The board also approved the application of George L. Fish, builder, for an exception for the construction of a portion of a building on Henry street which is 15 inches over the building line at one point. The appeal was taken at a previous meeting and continued for inspection.

The application of Andrew A. Ansaldi for the construction of a 70 foot building on land on Bidwell street for storage of tools, trucks and equipment was deferred until the next meeting for the purpose of inspection by the board.

Application Denied

The application of Frank C. Jones to convert a 2-tenement building at 115 Main street to a 3-apartment building in a Residence A Zone was denied.

Marines Standing Fast in Hard Won Solomon Positions

Wipe Out 700-Men Japanese Force Trying To Pierce American Lines After Stealthy Landing at Night; Wreck Seaplane Base.

Pearl Harbor, Hawaii, Aug. 22.—(AP)—United States Marines stood fast in their hard won positions in the Solomon islands today after wiping out a 700-man Japanese force which tried a stealthy night landing to pierce the American lines. Other Marines and American bluejackets, with Maj. James Roosevelt, the president's eldest son, one of their leaders, destroyed a Japanese seaplane base in an extension of the United States outpost in the Makin island, in the Gilbert group, 1,500 miles northeast of the American-held Solomons.

Enemy Surprised and Destroyed

Communiques issued by Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, commander of the U. S. Pacific fleet, told of the flavor of fighting in which the enemy was surprised and destroyed.

In first detailed accounts of the Solomon island fighting, where the Marines with a Navy covering force captured Japanese positions and sent the enemy fleeing into hills and jungles, Admiral Nimitz related the destruction of the Japanese force.

Mopping up operations, with daily skirmishes between Marine patrols and enemy detachments, have been in progress since the initial Marine landings the night of Aug. 7, the communique said.

But last Wednesday night 700 well-equipped Japanese landed from high speed boats outside the Marines lines, on an unnamed island, and attempted a breakthrough.

"During the darkness only hand-to-hand fighting was possible," the communique said, "but with the breaking of day the Marines were able to maneuver. While on battalion held the front line another battalion moved to a flank and drove the then withdrawing Japanese to the beach.

670 Of 700 Japs Dead

"The action continued until late afternoon, of the 700 Japanese, 670 are dead, the rest prisoners. Marine losses were 26 killed and 72 wounded."

Marines in the Solomons, commanded by Maj. Gen. Alexander A. Vandegrift, U. S. M. C., thus added another page to their history of outstanding achievement," the communique said.

The communique also told of a Marine patrol and a Japanese detachment in the Solomons last Wednesday, in which the Americans lost six killed and 13 wounded while wiping out the enemy unit of 92 officers and men, who continued resistance "until the last man was killed."

Major Roosevelt, who on November, 1940, left film producing in Hollywood for active service in the Marine Corps, assumed command of the devil-dog detachment which raided Makin island Aug. 17. The commander was Lieut.

Factor Facing Fraud Charge

Alleged to Be Involved In Swindle in Whiskey Warehouse Papers

Chicago, Aug. 22—(AP)—John (Jake the Barber) Factor, who made millions by his wits, including a few bucks at cards from the Duke of Windsor, faced a federal indictment today charging him and 11 others with a $1,000,000 mail fraud.

Bench warrants issued here disclosed that a 24-count indictment was returned Thursday in Cedar Rapids, Ia., alleging the 12 defendants swindled some 300 persons, mostly midwesterners, of $1,000,000 since 1939 in whiskey warehouse receipt transactions.

Thomas S. Hart, regional director for the Securities and Exchange Commission, said the government alleged that Factor and the others persuaded holders of receipts to surrender them on the promise that whiskey would be bottled and sold at big profits by three now defunct Chicago companies, United Bottling and Distributing Company, A. A. Slater and Company and The Old Oak Bottling and Distributing Company.

Warrants for Arrest Issued

U. S. Commissioner Edwin K. Walker issued warrants here for the arrest of Factor, Henry and Lee Ansteatter, Albert A. Slater, Sidney Epstein and Sam Sienfeld, all of Chicago. Hart said the others included were Edward Mallon,

Neale, credited with downing 13 Jap planes and destroying three others on the ground, came home on his bride yesterday with the intimate that a Flying Tiger's life was the kind that no man could lead for very long.

Civilians Face Probable Cut In Electricity

War Production Board Suspends or Halts Work on 85 Public And Private Projects.

Washington, Aug. 22 — (AP) — Civilians were confronted today with probable "widespread curtailment" of electricity consumption as the War Production Board suspended or halted work on 85 public and private power projects.

Readjusting its entire wartime expansion program to reduce the amount of power available for war work as well as essential civilian needs, the board announced last night that its action had "substantially enhanced the probability of widespread curtailment" in luxury uses of electricity.

"Small Margin" For Additions

The revised program, WPB said, gave the green light only to sufficient power prospects to assure electricity for war and indirect war production with "a small margin" allowed for possible additions to the present munitions schedule.

"Demands of the war program, the board explained, made it impossible "to preserve the standards of reliability of service observed in peace times.

"Civilian inconvenience and sacrifice," it added, "must be expected particularly during period of drought or other adverse weather conditions or in the event of serious accidents affecting utility systems."

Accordingly, WPB stepped up priority ratings on power projects regarded as urgently necessary and acted to bar others from obtaining critical materials needed for war purposes.

Government Projects Affected

In addition, 28 government projects authorized by Congress were reduced to low priority ratings or listed at their present low rated or unrated status. Work on these projects will be continued only

Texas Primary And New York Decision Eyed

Political Observers Interested in Senatorial Run-Off and Labor Party Action.

Washington, Aug. 22—(AP)—With candidates for 15 of the 34 Senate and 282 of the 435 House seats to be filled in the November elections, political observers eyed with interest today the Texas Democratic senatorial primary run-off and the New York American Labor party convention.

After next week's Republican state convention in New York and primaries in California, Mississippi, and South Carolina, the first half of September will close the pre-election campaigns with which few exceptions reached an all-time low in attracting voter interest.

12 Miss Renomination

To date, 12 House members—8 Democrats and 4 Republicans—have missed renomination. Three other House Democrats lost out in races for senatorial nominations. Only one incumbent, Rep. William J. Bulow, a South Dakota Democrat—has been defeated in nomination races thus far.

Today's Texas run-off decides the 19th senatorial contest with Senator W. Lee O'Daniel, who failed to get a majority in the July 25 primary, vying with the Runner-Up, James V. Allred.

Allred called O'Daniel an isolationist in the campaign. The latter retorted that no man who had a son in the Army—as he has—was an isolationist. He also contended the war was not an issue.

Expected to Name McGoldrick

The American Labor party in New York was expected to name Joseph D. McGoldrick, New York City comptroller as a third contestant in the New York gubernatorial race because of its leaders' announced opposition to State Attorney General John J. Bennett, selected as the Democratic nominee.

On Monday, Empire State Republicans open a two-day convention to pick a candidate whom most everyone believes will be Thomas E. Dewey.

California selects candidates Tuesday, for 23 House seats—more than at present because of census reapportionment.

Robert L. Olson is running for renomination on the Democratic ticket. Taking advantage of a state law permitting cross-filing, Attorney General Earl Warren, a Republican, filed both as a Democratic and Republican candidate for governor. Will Rogers, son of the late comedian, is a candidate for the Democratic nomination for the House.

Decide Primary Contest

South Carolina Democrats decide a primary contest Tuesday between Senator Burnet R. Maybank, who is filling out the term of James F. Byrnes, now on the U. S. Supreme court, and Eugene Blease, former state Supreme court justice.

Nominees for six House seats also will be chosen. Senator Olin Johnston, former governor, faces Wyndham Manning in the Democratic gubernatorial contest for the office now held by R. M. Jeffries. State law prohibits a governor from serving two successive terms.

Mississippi's primaries on Tuesday decide nominees for Senatorships for seven House seats and decide a contest between Senator Will Doxey, successor to the late

Rail Official Dies Today

Shepard's Name Linked With Progress for Nearly Half Century.

New York, Aug. 22—(AP)—Finley Johnson Shepard, 74, whose name for half a century was linked with the progress of Louisville & Nashville railroad, died early today at Roosevelt hospital after an illness of six months.

A native of Saybrook, Conn., he began his railroad career with the Northern Pacific railway at St. Paul, Minn., and after serving several other roads was transferred to Texas in 1907 by his father and married Helen Miller Gould, daughter of railroad pioneer Jay Gould.

Railroad Connections

Railroads with which he had been associated as a director or in other executive capacity included the Missouri Pacific, the Texas and Pacific, the New Orleans, Texas and Mexico, the Denver and Rio Grande Western and the Western Pacific.

Besides his railroad affiliations, he was a director of the Merchants Fire Assurance Corporation and the Ampere Bank and Trust Company.

He resided in the old Gould Mansion on Fifth avenue. Surviving are his two adopted daughters, Mrs. John Dean Bunn and Mrs. A. Harris Gaines, who were at his bedside when he died, and an adopted son, Finley Jay Shepard, now in military service.

Mrs. Shepard died in 1938.

20 Years in Prison Faced by Molzahn

Lutheran Pastor Is Convicted of Charge of Conspiracy to Violate Espionage Statute.

Hartford, Aug. 22—(AP)—The Stocky, Rev. Kurt E. B. Molzahn today faced a prison sentence, possibly 20 years, after being convicted of a charge of conspiracy to violate the espionage act by attempting to deliver military secrets of the United States, his adopted home, to Axis powers. The 47-year-old pastor of an adjacent Lutheran church in Philadelphia's Franklin Square showed no signs of emotion late yesterday as a Federal jury of eight men and four women, after two hours deliberation, found him guilty.

Sentences Co-Conspirators

Although Judge J. Joseph Smith, presiding a federal court, continued the pastor's case until Tuesday, he immediately sentenced three of the alleged co-conspirators including Gerhard Wilhelm Kunze, former "fuehrer" of the German-American Bund.

Kunze, a self-described German citizen, although born in Camden, N. J., was sentenced to 15 years. The others, Dr. Wolfgang Ebell, 43, El Paso, Tex. physician, was given seven years, and Dr. Otto Willumeit, 37, Chicago ex-Bund leader, was ordered to serve five years.

The fifth conspirator, Anastase A. Vonsiatsky of Thompson, Russian Fascist leader, drew a five year term before the four-weeks-long Molzahn trial began.

Only the pastor stood trial. The others pleaded guilty.

Bahr Insists He Intended To Aid U. S.

Sticks Steadfasty to Story About Turning Over Information Obtained from Gestapo.

Newark, N. J., Aug. 22—(AP)—For seven hours today cross-examination Herbert Karl Friedrich Bahr steadfastly stuck to his story that he came to this country with the intention of turning over to the United States information he obtained in his relations with the Gestapo.

He insisted yesterday he never intended to go through with the plan he and the German Gestapo agreed upon in Germany and had mental reservations when he told Gestapo officials he would act for them. The 29-year-old former Buffalo, N. Y., engineering student asserted he was innocent of the espionage charge, only accepting the Gestapo instructions so as to be able to return to this country.

Asks About Final Remark

Then, Assistant U. S. Attorney Thorn Lord asked the defendant whether after making a long statement to the FBI, outlining his negotiations with the Gestapo, he had made a final remark to an FBI agent.

Bahr was silent for some time and then replied:

"I asked him what do you think about this whole business? How much do you think I could be punished?"

Lord abruptly ended his examination and Bahr left the stand, walked to his seat where for a few moments he was on the verge of collapse.

The government contends Bahr came here as a spy, had no intention of aiding this country and his question as to possible punishment indicated consciousness of guilt.

(Bahr was arrested July 6 aboard

Sailors Duchess' Guests; Paradise Ashore Is Found

Tarrytown, N. Y., Aug. 22—(AP)—Homeless sailors spending their shore leave in some crowded city, today may not come to a peaceful estate on the Hudson river and get all the food you can eat, French Railroad Station Guards and free rides and pretty girls to dance with.

This was revealed last week in the morning a soft-footed maid gently lowers the shades so you can sleep till noon.

A dream? No, matey, it's a dream-come-true. Ask the 10 blue jackets who've just finished spending such a week as guests of the Duchess of Talleyrand.

All these and more comforts of life were provided last week for the lucky members of a Navy gun crew of a merchant ship who were chosen by the Third Naval district to be the first group of such weekly guests whom the duchess has entertained to entertain.

Guest House Throws Open

Known during World War I for her work in France in behalf of soldiers, the duchess, daughter of Helen Gould and wife of Count Jay Gould, has thrown open a guest house on the Gould estate where she now lives.

The duchess provides everything, except the dancing partners, but the Navy YMCA sees to this item.

Do the tars like it?

One day during a softball game a cautious bluejacket warned another that the grass was slippery and he might "fall down and break a leg."

"Well, that wouldn't be such a bad idea," was the prompt reply. "Maybe they'd let a guy spend a couple more months here if he did."

Trying to End Tank Arsenal Labor Upset

War Production Board Agency Is Attempting To Get Quick and Peaceful Conclusion.

By The Associated Press

A War Production Board agency undertook today to bring to a quick and peaceful conclusion a strike at the Chrysler tank arsenal in Detroit.

The case was in the hands of the WPB Board of Review which has set up under a stabilization agreement with the Building Trades Council of the American Federation of Labor.

H. L. Wheeler, vice president of the corporation, reported that 475 AFL construction workers had stopped work at the arsenal on orders of Ed Thal, secretary of the Detroit Building Trades Council, in protest against the hiring of some members of the Congress of Industrial Organizations.

E. J. Hunt, operating manager, said that the strike "does not interfere with tank production" at the arsenal.

A work stoppage at a plant of The Aluminum Company of America also drew the board's attention. At the Vernon plant of Alcoa in Los Angeles, 200 aluminum workers walked out. CIO officials said the walkout was authorized. George W. Taylor, vice chairman of the War Labor Board appealed to the men to go back to work now "as loyal and patriotic citizens." The workers quickly voted to return to work immediately.

George W. Taylor, vice chairman of the CIO United Automobile Workers of America said the work stoppage resulted from a company lockout of some AFL workers. The board official intimated in a telegram to the workers that it approves rejection of a wage increase demand was the cause.

Message Sent to Board

The union leader messaged the board:

"Stoppage of work at the Alcoa plant at Vernon today was not in protest to War Labor Board decision but was precipitated by the local Alcoa management who yesterday arbitrarily discharged members of our union. We have effected their reinstatement today through negotiations.

A spokesman for an AFL local union said in the capital that a jurisdictional dispute between two AFL unions may "remove thousands of highly skilled journeyman welders and burners "from their jobs in four Henry J. Kaiser shipyards in Richmond, Calif. But the threat of an immediate tieup was averted when Local 681 voted to ask government aid in settling the dispute.

Four Rangers Tell of Parts During Foray

Ready to Tackle Almost Anything After Experiences; Germans Sprayed with Bullets.

London, Aug. 22—(AP)—Four American rangers who believe they may have been the first United States soldiers to fight on French soil in this war when they stormed ashore at Dieppe, with British Commandos agreed today they're ready to tackle almost anything after their experiences in that raid.

The quartet—Corp. William R. Brady of Grand Forks, N. D.; Staff Sergt. Kenneth Lutterbach of Russell, Minn.; Corp. Franklin M. Koons of Iowa City, Ia., and Sergt. Alex J. Szima of Dayton—sprayed the Germans they encountered with new Garand rifle slings and as one said, "we were picking 'em off like ducks all day long."

"We found we were having fun," said Koons.

"Their first task was to scale a fifty-foot cliff at Dieppe and knock out two German pillboxes.

First Pillbox Empty

"It looked like a suicide mission, but damned if we didn't make it," said Corporal Brady. "The first pillbox was empty when they arrived.

"What the Hell! We thought we'd go get the other one." Brady related.

They were heading for the second pillbox when they saw a German snipers when two British Spitfires flew low and put it out of action with machine-gun bullets.

With their British Commando unit, the Americans moved on to a crossroads and found a ten-man German patrol. In the shooting that followed five Germans were put out of action, they said. The others, Brady declared, "got the Hell out of there."

Fire Destroys Derby Laundry

Derby, Aug. 22.—(AP)—Fire completely destroyed the Excelsior laundry plant at 146 Hawkins street, Derby, today, gutting the temporary wooden building, which was erected after the disastrous fire there in 1923, and threatening other buildings in the neighborhood, while more than 1,000 people gathered to watch the three local companies and their hard pressed battle the blaze for six hours to finally extinguish it. The firemen were badly handicapped in their efforts by a defective alarm call, the result of several alarms ringing at once on the old type boxes. The fire was so hot that the houses across the street were blistering and their owners were relieved when the firemen companies wet down the shingles.

Would Fight Beside Allies

New York, Aug. 22.—(AP)—Gen. Nuri Pasha Es-Said, premier of Iraq, asserted his country would "declare war and fight on the side of the Allies" if the Germans break through the Caucasus, a British broadcast of a Reuters news agency dispatch reported today. Fitchburg, Mass., Aug. 22.—(AP)—Henry R. The driver of the truck, Kenneth P. Pollard, 20, of Shelburne, Vt., told police that he had picked up Edgerton, a hitch-hiker, in Vermont, and let him off about 800 feet before the truck left the road and plunged down a 100-foot embankment. Income Taxes May Be Higher

Senator George Calls for 'Frank and Candid' Consideration of Levy.

Washington, Aug. 22.—(AP)—With the double objective of averting inflation and finding more war funds, Chairman George (D., Ga.) of the Senate Finance Committee outlined today "frank and candid" consideration of the individual income tax provisions of the new revenue bill.

That will be the first matter to come before the committee Monday when it begins two weeks' executive consideration of the measure. As it passed the House, the bill called for $6,271,000,000 more taxes over a full year's operation, including about $2,900,000,000 more from individual income taxpayers.

Harvest Time for Treasury

George implied to newspapermen that individuals might be asked for even larger contributions. He declared that "from the standpoint of the Treasury, this is the harvest time, and I go on with declining incomes it will be too late.

"If we are serious about paying for this war, and checking the rising living costs due to inflation, now is the time for us to set to work."

George said there was a possibility the committee might approve some modification of the "pay as you go" income tax plan advanced by Beardsley Ruml,
