Our Story.

MY FAIR ROAD COMPANION.

To all in any degree familiar with the history of Mexico, it is well known that a regular system of highway robbery exists in every section of that miserably governed country; and that, through a want of interference of the authorities, this has grown up into such a regular and formidable shape, that every traveler must be prepared to put his life at hazard at every stage, or be provided with a suitable contribution for los caballeros del camino (knights of the road), who, in the event of finding you prepared and willing, will make their levy with a politeness only equaled by the smiling landlord when he receives your over-charged fare for your last night's entertainment.

Why such systematic boldness of robbery is allowed—if not with connivance, at least with very rarely any interference of the government or state authorities—is one of those mystical matters, which among many others, so puzzles and perplexes the intelligent foreigners; but that such is the disagreeable truth, every traveler through that wretched country can bear ample testimony.

Some years ago, having business which first called me to the Capital of Mexico, and thence through the interior of the country to the northward, I met with several thrilling adventures, which I have never for the benefit of whomsoever may take an interest therein, omitting only the dates, they being non-essential to the interest of the narrations themselves.

The first of the series occurred on the route between Vera Cruz and the city of Mexico. In the regular diligencia, running between the places just mentioned, I had taken passage, and had passed through the beautiful city of Jalapa, and entered the gloomy town of Perote, without “Every traveler, señor,” she replied, “should, before setting out, consider the cost of his journey; and, of course it is natural he should value his life highly, it seems to me natural that he should pay a certain price for positive safety, rather than put his life in jeopardy. For instance, in traveling from Vera Cruz to Jalapa, if he will first reckon that much is the fare by the diligencia, and that so much will be required for entertainment on the way, he will look at the whole as the total of his journey, he will not be so much troubled by any party more than another.”

“That,” I replied, “may be, I believe is the Mexican mode of doing business, but does not tally with preconceived ideas of foreigners.”

“But every one,” replied the speaker, “should conform to the customs of the country he visits.”

“And do you then go prepared this highway robbery? and have no fear in this journeying by self?”

“Well, señor, what can I do? As you perceive, an unprotected traveler, for certain reasons, am required to make the journey between Perote and the Capital some two or three times a year, and you certainly do not expect me to go prepared to resist an armed band! As to that; but, so far, I have never met with any such treatment, and I trust to the saint's fortune will ever be as protected as I.”

“And have you really been on your journey back and forth, inquired.”

“I think I have paid my share of the ladrones for my travels in their country,” she said.

“And you expect to have a repetition of the same?”

“I have observed them frequently, but here they seem to be much more numerous,” I replied, looking forth from the vehicle.

“Each stands on the spot where some one has met a violent death,” she rejoined; “and as we go along, I will call your attention to those which mark the places where the foreigners met theirs.”

“Do you know,” said I, “that I am resolved to emulate their example, let the consequences be what they may?”

“Holy saints defend us!” she exclaimed; “you are not in earnest, señor?”

“Seriously so, I assure you.”

“You would only bring certain death upon us both.”

“I am not in earnest, señor?”

“Say, rather, I should lighten the expenses of the journey—for your knights of the road understand retreat as well as advance—and you yourself have acknowledged that firm resistance put them to flight for once.”

“But there were numbers opposed to them, señor, and you are only one.”

“But fortunately I have a couple of revolvers, which, in two good hands, amount to some ten or a dozen shots, and my friends have repeatedly told me I am not a bad marksman.”

“Ah, Santa-Maria! you will think better of this, señor—the very idea of resistance terrifies me!”

“But not the idea of robbery?”

“Because I have never met with violence.”

We continued to converse in a similar strain for some time longer

—my fair companion gradually changing the subject, and seeming much interested in myself. I learned that her family name was Valerde, that she was unmarried, that her father and brother were officers in the army, and so forth, and so on; and in return I gave her my own name, stated something of my history, business and prospects, and altogether became more communicative than I would advise any friend to be with any stranger of either sex in a strange country.

As we continued our journey, the conversation gradually changing from one thing to another, Senorita Paula suddenly brought it back to the point where it first opened.

“We are coming upon a dangerous part of the road,” she said; “are you resolved to defend yourself if assailed?”

“With your permission, señorita?” I do not think it advisable,” she replied; “but still, if such is your intention, I think it no more than right that you should give me a chance to take a part in my defense, since my risk of danger will be as great as yours.”

“And have you really the nerve, señor, to defend yourself?” I inquired.

“If I had the means, señor,” I replied, “I have two pistols,” said I; “if I will accept of one of them, it is your service!”

“You are very kind, señor—but I fire it?”

“With ease, señorita,” and producing one of my revolvers, I explained in the manner in which it was to be used.

“And this, you say, will shoot some dozen times?”

“I am safe to calculate that charges out of the six will explode.”

“Very formidable weapon indeed,” she replied; “and with such mounted, and the other holding on their feet, holding their mustangs by the bridle. Looking upon my case as a desperate one, so far as being plundered was concerned, I still retained my presence of mind, and did not wholly despair. True, I had been outwitted and disarmed, and disarmed, and now stood singly between them and the idea of yielding tamely to this outrage was repugnant to my very nature, and I resolved to put any favorable opportunity for defense and retaliation to the strongest test.

“Will you accept this purse?” said I, producing one that held several gold coins, and handing it to the chief of the ladrones.

“Thank you, señor! you are very kind,” he said, as he took it in his hand, with a polite bow, and chinked the money.

“This diamond pin may prove acceptable to your friend?” I added, as I quietly removed it from the bosom of my shirt, and handed it to the gentleman on his left, who received it in the same polite manner. “This diamond ring I trust you will retain as a keepsake,” I continued, drawing the jewel from my finger and presenting it to a third. “I beg your pardon, señores!” I pursued, glancing at the Senorita Paula, who, with my pistols, still in her possession, was quietly standing within the diligencia, regarding the whole proceedings with one of her sweetest smiles. “I must not forget this beautiful lady! I have here,” I went on, at the same time producing the article, “a very beautiful gold snuff-box—set, as you perceive, with diamonds—will your ladyship honor me by accepting this as a slight token of my regard for the pleasure afforded me by your company and conversation?”

“You are a very gallant gentleman, señor!” she laughed, taking the two revolvers in one fair hand and presenting the other.

I reached the box toward her—but my hand trembled a little—and, just as the present was about to touch her fingers, it slipped and fell between us.

“A thousand pardons, señorita, for my awkwardness!” I said, as I bent down to pick it up.

Now was the all-important moment—the moment of life and death! All were in a measure off their guard; and one quick, furtive glance, showed me that the girl still held my weapons carelessly in one hand, with the other remaining extended for the prize. I lifted the box carefully; but, as I raised myself, I gave a wild startling yell; and as the Senorita started back, I, with the quickness of lightning, seized both weapons, and wrenched them from her.

To wheel and commence firing upon the party, was now only the work of a moment. The first shot, fortunately, stretched out the chief; the second took effect on the one nearest to him; and by the time the third had been sent on its mission, there arose one simultaneous yell of dismay, and the astounded robbers began to scatter in every direction. I had no disposition to follow them, however; another minute they might rally and turn upon me; and, springing forward, I grasped the reins of a freed mustang, and vaulted into the saddle. One more glance around me, showed me the Senorita Paula upon the body of the chief, her laughter changed to grief, and some of the scattered robbers bringing their weapons to bear upon me.

“Adios, señorita and señores!” said I, bitterly, “the laughs best who laughs last!”

The next moment I was dashing away down the road, the half-rallied robbers pouring after me a volley, but fortunately not touching their mark. They would doubtless have followed me in hot pursuit, but for the wholesome dread they had of my still undischarged weapon.

As it was I escaped, and entered the town of Puebla in triumph; where, it is almost needless to add, a narration of my exploit made me a hero and a lion for the time.

Here I sold my captured mustang and trappings for enough to indemnify me for what I had disposed of in the way of presents; and the next day saw me an inside passenger of the same diligencia, en route for Mexico, where I arrived in safety, without any further event worthy of note.

What became of the robbers and their beautiful accomplice, I never learned; but the lesson taught me on that journey I have never forgotten: and during the remainder of my stay in that country, no pretty woman ever had the honor of being my business confidante, or of getting possession of my trusty and unfailing revolvers.—Oriental Casket.

Humorous.

TAMING AN ALLIGATOR.

“You see that item in one of the papers about taming young alligators, I reckon,” said a Gravesend man, capturing the city editor by the buttonhole, and drawing him into a doorway. “You know the paper said it was the fashionable thing to do.”

“I don't remember. Perhaps I did. What of it?” asked the city editor.

“I tried it,” said the Gravesend man. “A friend of mine brought me one from New Orleans, and I'm tamin' that alligator for the children to play with.”

“How does the experiment come along?” asked the city editor.

“I don't know about the experiment; the alligator is thrivin'.” He was six weeks old when I got him, two months ago, and he's seven years old now. People in our parts say he's all the alligator I'll ever need.”

“What does he do?”

“Well, it's here. When he came he was a sportive little cuss, and just waddled around friendly. He was chiefly mouth, and we used to feed him for the fun of seein' him eat. Now, we skin around when we see him comin' for the fun of seein' him go hungry.”

“Is he dangerous?” asked the city editor.

“I haven't been close enough to see. He eat up my dog, and when I left this mornin', he was in the sty arguin' the question of pork as a diet with the pig. My wife thinks if the pig has any luck he'll find the cow we lost.”

with the baby's grave, so we sorter try and keep the alligator along. My wife insists on keepin' him, 'cause she thinks she saw a couple o' peddlers go in one day, packs and all, and she's got an idea the packs may come to the front again if we hold on. Besides, she seen that item about tame alligators bein' fashionable, and she's a good deal on style.”

“But, do you call that alligator tame?”

“Cert'nly. He comes right into the house sime as any of us and keeps himself. He's got that heel,” and the Gravesend man pointed to a mutilated foot. “There's my son's wife, too. She's part alligator now. He eat her up a week ago, and the boy hasn't got over her arm yet. The alligator got the arm, too.”

“Great Scott!” ejaculated the city editor.

“Oh, yes. It's lively down there. When he puts himself up he's business. He's the lightning alligator for a tame one ever you saw. When we first got him we used him for a tack-hammer, drew nails with him; but now he's the head of the family, except payin' the rent. When there is any mysterious disappearance around Gravesend, the coroner comes and views the alligator. That ends it. When the baby was snatched, they held the inquest in a tree. The jury was all on one limb, and the alligator undermeath, looking up. Bimes by the limb broke and the jury disappeared in a row, just as they sat. We didn't wait for any verdict. The coroner gave me a permit, and, after the funeral we ached an empty coffin at the alligator. Then the minister said, ‘Dust to dust, and we all dusted. Do you remember whether that item said what a real tame alligator ought to feed on?’

“Don't recollect seeing it at all. Aren't you afraid he'll eat up some of your family?”

“Think he's liable to?” asked the Gravesend man with a curious expression of visage.

“Oh, I don't know. I reckon the city editor. Suppose he should swallow your wife?”

“Ah!” said the Gravesend man. “He might get her, mightn't he? You think I'd better keep him then?” and the Gravesend man leaned against the door and gave himself up to reflection. “So he might; so he might; so he might,” the city editor heard him say, as he drew away and left there. “That beautiful young tame alligator may get her yet,” and the gloom of nightfall enveloped the frame dilating with a new hope.

CRIBBAGE.

According to Dr. Delaunay, “sleepers frequently compose verse or rhythmical language while they are lying on the right side. This verse, though at times correct enough, is absolutely without sense.” This explains the genesis of a great deal of poetry which finds its way into the Connecticut Valley Advertiser.

There was in the State of Ohio a maiden named Helen Marlar, who ever could sail
Down a banister rail
When she thought there was no one nigh'er.

Now her brother, whose name was Jostah, fixed the rail with a piece of barbed wire; but it wouldn't be best
To tell you the rest,
For we're blushing already like far.

He happened to press the foot of a young lady who was sitting next to the door, in getting out of a street car. The damsel, compressing her brows in an awe-inspiring frown, ejaculated: “You clumsy wretch!” Most men would have looked foolish and apologized, but our hero was equal to the occasion. “My dear young lady,” he exclaimed, “you should have feet large enough to be seen, and then they wouldn't be trodden upon.” Her brow relaxed, her eyes sparkled, her lips smiled and the injury was forgotten.—Philadelphia Herald.

A gentleman, accompanied by a favorite dog, visited the studio of a rising artist. There was a picture on the easel, and the dog began to bark furiously at it. “Nature may be relied upon, after all,” said the gentleman. “The best evidence of the faithfulness with which you have painted that dog in the background is the earnestness with which my dog barks at him.” “But that isn't a dog,” said the artist, flushing: “it's a cow.” The gentleman was non-plussed for a moment, but he quickly replied: “Well, the dog's eyes are better than mine; he never did like cows.”

The section men on this division of the N. Y. & N. E. railroad struck last week for an increase of wages from $1.35 a day to $1.50 a day. The railroad company refused their demand. One man returned to work at the old rate and the places of the other strikers were filled by laborers from Boston.

"That Conical Brown," a veteran comedian, who is well known throughout this state, will give an entertainment next Monday evening in Bissell's hall. He will be assisted by Miss Alice De Vere, a young lady of musical and histrionic ability. Tickets are for sale at Bissell's.

The Connecticut Telephone Company has issued a new state directory, containing a list of all the subscribers to their instruments up to the date of publication. The book is evidence of the wonderful growth of this company's system. Their wires reach every town and city for thirty miles on either side of the Connecticut river. Their patrons are numbered by the thousands. The directory will be an indispensable accompaniment to the transmitter.

The Northwest Cemetery of the town of Manchester, at Buckland, caught fire last Tuesday from a spark from a locomotive and was greatly damaged. The beautiful hedge with substantial fence making the western boundary were wholly destroyed, and the highway hedge and some of the cemetery lots were badly damaged. Only for the timely and stringent efforts of neighbors in the vicinity of the ground, the damage would have been much greater. Special effort has been made for this interest in this yard to make it the model burying-ground of the town, but the destruction by this fire has greatly dampened their efforts. The railroad corporation has been duly notified; the damage is placed from $300 to $500.

It will be well for dog owners to peruse the copies of the dog law that are posted in conspicuous places throughout the town. This law provides that on or before the first day of May, every dog shall be registered and the owner's name and the register number plainly inscribed on a collar about the animal's neck. Those who neglect to observe this law are subject to a prosecution and a fine of not more than seven dollars. The selectmen who are entrusted with this enforcement of this law, are determined to have either the license fee, the fine or the life of the dog. It may save dog-owners several dollars, if they will call at the office of the town clerk and deposit the required dollar.

THE FIRE RECORD.—A fine large barn with a new tobacco shed adjoining, located in Wapping and owned by Wilbur Hills, was set on fire Monday evening by children playing with matches and was entirely consumed. Three tons of hay, a mare about to foal and a lot of agricultural tools were burned with the barn. Two horses were saved. Mr. Hills and his wife went to Hartford Monday, leaving the children, the eldest of whom was nine years old at home. They took some matches and went to the barn to play on the hay mow. As a natural consequence the hay was set on fire and the children, bewildered by the terrible result of their wrong doing, were too frightened to fly. The father and mother were returning from the city about six o'clock and, from a distance, discovered that their barn was on fire. They lashed the horse into a run, and arrived at the fire just in time to help the neighbors rescue their children, then in a most dangerous position. Mr. Hills's loss is not far from $2000 and his insurance $900.

A surprise party numbering about twenty persons, from Glastonbury and North Manchester, suddenly surrounded the house of Mr. and Mrs. Robert N. Strong, in Oakland, last Thursday evening, about 8 o'clock, and took immediate possession. The family being too thoroughly surprised and unprepared to resist the attack, surrendered unconditionally, and the party took immediate possession and made things lively for several hours.

THE STRIKE AT ROCKVILLE.

A reporter from this paper, having desired to ascertain the facts in regard to the recent strike at theingham mill, called at the mill a day or two since, and found Mr. Rice, book-keeper, who responded to the questions asked, freely and without reserve. Did you have any intimation of the strike before it was made? Answer, "None, until a note was handed to me from the weavers, asking for an advance in wages of 10 per cent." What reply did you make? Answer, "I told them to wait until Mr. White got home (he was out of town when the note was received), and I would give it to him." "What day was that?" Answer, "On Tuesday last week." "When Mr. White returned did you give him the note?" Answer, "I did." "Did he make any reply after he had read it?" Answer, "Yes, he said he wanted to see them." "And did a committee of the strikers call on Mr. White?" Answer, "Yes, they came to the mill and presented their case, saying they wanted an advance of 10 per cent over the price they were getting." "What reply was then made by Mr. White?" He told them "he was sorry he could afford to do, and furthermore, they could get work anywhere else if the price they demanded, they were at liberty to do so, and he would not stand in the way, but he would not pay any more. The goods were accumulating with no market." The committee asked the question "how it happened that Mr. White was enlarging, and putting in new machinery when the market was so dull?" He said he needed the machinery. "The mill always requires new and improved machinery to compete with others, and because we are putting in additional looms it is no evidence of increased prosperity. The fact is, the market is broken for this season at least, but we should have kept running at this strike had not occurred, in hope of an improvement as it is now. It is for our interest to keep the mill shut down." The question was asked, "If the ingham mill could not afford to pay as much as the woolen mills?" Mr. White replied, "No, the market was very active for woolen goods, but very dull for manufactured cotton goods." Mr. White was next called on at the stone mill and he stated that at all the above, saying that many of those who had struck were in need of their day's wages, while with others, they had money in the bank, and there were others who had no one dependent on them for support, who started this strike for a little recreation. They liked the fun of the thing, for the most part, they were dependent on their day's wages, he felt sorry for them, they should have struck earlier in the season, at least. There is no trouble with Mr. White, in hiring all the help he can get, and we shall do it, when we start up the mill, but shall employ only those who have been employed by us before. It seems to be a very fortunate time for a strike of this kind, especially at this mill, as it is well that great excess of the demand this year, and the market is very much overstocked with goods, and it is not probable that they will get up above what just this stock.

The First Regiment's Field Day.

A Novel Program, including a sham battle.
The first regiment commandant has arranged for a very novel observance of the customary spring field-day. The regiment has won glory enough by its machine-like drilling, and its soldierly appearance has been noted by every one, from rattle-pated young girls up to Archibald Forbes. But for effective soldiering there are other requisites. Col. Barbour's program is for a day's field experience, minus the bullets. On the morning of the 16th, Co. G of Manchester will take a special train for the seat of battle, being dropped at the little station of Elmwood, which is five or six miles out of Hartford. Co's D and E of New Britain will march toward Hartford, halting at a cross-road about a mile southeast of Elmwood. After the requisite telegraphing between the signal corps, the three companies will unite under command of Maj. Goodrich and become the defending party in the combat. A Gatling battery drawn by horses will lend picturesqueness to the New Britain-Manchester forces. The five Hartford companies will leave the city in time to keep their appointment with the enemy, meeting them in a large field a little to the west of Cedar mountain. The "dispute" will be on ground in which Capt. Westphal of the Germania guard invested a few years ago in expecting a rise which never came. Skirmishers will be sent out before the battle, to make it realistic, and then the firing will begin, each man having 40 rounds of blank ammunition. To prevent the possibility of scorching by powder, and to avoid personal contact, it is ordered that the opposing lines shall not approach each other nearer than 100 feet during the skirmishing. A brook close by is to be bridged, not but what the soldiers could cross it easier by wading or jumping, but to give the wagon train men a little experience in providing for the moving of troops through regions where road-makers and bridge-builders have not struck in to any great extent. A stone-wall will be the fighting line for the defenders of the ground, but the program is that the attacking party shall win the engagement, and when the boys have shot each other full of powder long enough, the battle shall be considered over. Should some of the veterans forget that it is only a sham battle, arrangements will be made to send in to Hartford for the Governor's Foot Guard to go out and bring the whole party home, probably. Even the Putnam phalanx will expect to have a hand in the row before it is over. A signal corps will be stationed in the capitol dome to display flags and signals, so that the battlers will know which side is ahead. After the New Britain troops have been captured, all antagonism will be laid aside and the re-united regiment will halt near a refreshing brook for dinner. The afternoon program has not been outlined. Some of the officers think the New Britain prisoners should be marched into their own city, where a special train of cars will be in readiness to carry the captives back to Hartford. Others want to have another battle in the afternoon with telegraph wire cutting, bridge burning and railroad track demolishing embellishments. It will be an eventful day in the history of the 1st regiment, and will be a novel change from the time-worn fancy evolution proceedings that most commands think they must go through. It is safe to predict that other regiments will soon follow the example set by the wide-awake 1st Connecticut.—Hartford Cor. Republican.

A Kellogg has disposed of his pair of horses and bought a new one.
There has been a great sale of peach trees in town this spring, probably the greatest known, these different nurseries have been represented.
A lot of farmers who had been listening to a railroad land agent's praise of Arkansas Valley soil, at last asked him sarcastically if there was anything that would not grow there. "Yes," said the agent quickly, "pumpkins won't." "Why not?" "The soil is so rich, and the vines grow so fast that they wear out the pumpkins, dragging them over the ground."

GLASTONBURY.

Three bids were handed in for conveying the mail twice a day from Hartford to this place. The lowest bid was six hundred and seventy, the highest was seventeen hundred and eighty; the middle one made by Mr. Strong (Old Reliable) of this place, was eleven hundred and fifty dollars. The lawful toll over the bridge is three hundred and twenty-five dollars, leaving three hundred and forty-five dollars only to the lowest bidder, not enough to feed his team half the time. "Old Reliable" is going to run his stage just the same and will get a large share of the passengers. The two mails a day will begin the first of July. Uncle Sam's advertisement says that after that date the route will be from Hartford, by Hookanum, Nanbuc, Glastonbury and Buckingham, to East Glastonbury, 12 3/4 miles and return; twelve times a week to Glastonbury, 6 3/4 miles, and six times a week the remaining distance. The mails will arrive at Glastonbury at 8.45 a. m., and 4.15 p. m. Leave Glastonbury daily, except Sunday, at 9.00 a. m., and 4.30 p. m. Arrive at Hartford by 10.30 a. m., and 6 p. m. Leave Glastonbury daily, except Sundays at 4.30 p. m. Arrive at East Glastonbury at 6 p. m. Leave E. Glastonbury daily, except Sunday at 7.30 a. m. Bond required with $1,200. The bidder who has the contract is W. C. Stoddard, a speculator of Oneida, N. Y.

The owners of the steamboat Rock are making extensive repairs on their property which will make it safe for the boats to land in all weather. There is more tonnage landed here than at any dock between Hartford and Saybrook except Middletown.
A marriage between an elderly gentleman of eighty summers and a young lady of sixty, created quite a sensation on the street. It seems from accounts that the old folks ran from the younger members of the family and in the fleetness of their movements got the knot tied, a shade, and were celebrating before the young folks got together. The widow seemed to push her husband along; she said it was her time, so she got the minister for a dollar, and the man to make his will, and then the gin to celebrate with them young critters who were to get up before

Tracy from Youngs is visiting friends in this city.
W. Goslee is having splendid success in the sale of his agricultural implements. There are few men in the town who have been able to meet the demand for his goods better than Mr. Goslee. His improvement, combining six different instruments of husbandry in one frame has won golden opinions from all who have used them, and the demand is still for more.
Three more foxes came in for bounties this week.
The prospect now is that there will be set out this season by far the largest acreage of tobacco ever known in this place. There will also be a larger planting of corn, and potatoes than usual.
Prof. F. H. Brewer, late of Glastonbury Academy has accepted a position as teacher in the public high school at Litchfield, Conn.
Three schooners landed at the Glastonbury Dock this week, bringing fertilizers, which the farmers in this vicinity are utilizing very rapidly, to improve tobacco land.
Captain William Sanson, an old resident of this place, died Wednesday morning at the age of 78 years, having been confined to his bed only about ten days; his disease was "Brights Disease of the kidneys".
The Conn. Telephone Co. are putting up a line of communication from Hartford to South Glastonbury with branches to Eagleville, East Glastonbury and the Nanbuc Mills. J. K. Butler of Stamford is superintending the building of the line.

The Congregational Church, Buckingham, Rev. A. Gardner pastor, last Sabbath received on confession of faith, ten new members, all young people, and nine of the ten between the ages of fifteen and twenty years. On the same occasion, the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Gardner of Burnside, and grandson of the pastor was baptized.

VERNON.
At the annual church meeting, April 6th, the old board of officers were elected. G. G. Tillinghast, Superintendent, Wm. C. Driggs, Assistant Superintendent and Secretary.
A Kellogg has disposed of his pair of horses and bought a new one.
There has been a great sale of peach trees in town this spring, probably the greatest known, these different nurseries have been represented.

SATURDAY, MAY 13, 1882.

SOUTH MANCHESTER.

There will be a recital at Cheney's hall to-morrow afternoon at four o'clock.

Young wives, young husbands, stern fathers, indigent mothers, have all a lesson, a beautiful lesson, to learn in "Hazel Kirke."

The Young People's Social Club will meet in the Methodist church vestry next Thursday evening. A literary entertainment will be given.

Clarence E. Tallar has become connected with the editorial department of the Herald, and will begin his labors of love among our Glastonbury friends this week.

J. M. Russell is doing a rushing express business daily, between South Manchester and Hartford. His headquarters in the city are at Dr. Burton's stable, and orders may be telephoned there from Manchester.

Every act in the play of "Hazel Kirke" is embellished by scenery which the company transports from their home theatre—an evidence of their determination to give a fine performance.

The annual fair of St. James' parish will open in the church basement, Monday night, and will continue two weeks. The principal attractions are detailed in their advertisement, which appears in another column.

The west boarding house will close its doors to-morrow, after many years of hard service. The sixty or more boarders who have been its inmates, have generally secured board in private families, though some will begin housekeeping, and others will seek other boarding houses.

Travelers on the Bolton hills the other day report a peculiar whirlwind which caught up all the refuse and leaves in a small circumference and whirled some leaves and sticks a hundred feet high. The surrounding atmosphere was perfectly calm.

There was a large attendance at St. Mary's Guild at W. H. Cheney's, Thursday night and the evening was most enjoyed. The entertainment was furnished by a very pretty little drama which was nicely presented by Misses McCaw, Sault, Long, Harrison, West, Hutchison and Russell and Walter, Willie and Sam Cheney.

A grand fancy-dress and calico ball will be given in Cheney's hall, next Wednesday evening, May 24th, under the auspices of the Knights of the Maccabees. Tickets are $1.00. Music by Miller's orchestra; J. P. Miller prompter. Tickets admitting gentleman and lady 75 cents; gallery 25 cents. The grand march will take place at 8 o'clock sharp.

George M. Ladd, of Springfield, and Miss Abbie M. Agard, daughter of Mason Agard, were married at the home of the bride's father, Tuesday afternoon. The ceremony was performed at two o'clock by Rev. Mr. Gowan, in the presence of a large number of relatives and friends. The happy couple left for Springfield on the afternoon of the wedding and will begin housekeeping at once.

PERSONAL.—Mr. H. E. Rogers arrived from Cuba last Monday, in greatly improved health. He made the voyage to New Haven on a sailing vessel, in the remarkably quick time of sixteen days.—Mr. Urbane House has returned from a six month's residence in Florida, with his health greatly restored.—Miss Gertrude Rogers received as a birthday gift this week, a Steinway parlor grand piano. The instrument was selected by Mr. and Mrs. Allen, and is of exceptional quality.

The Knights of Honor entertainments are not so much for the purpose of making money as of providing enjoyable occasions, in this rather quiet village. Their last venture is the securing of the Madison Square Theater company to play Hazel Kirke in Cheney's hall June 3d. It is with large expense that this engagement has been made, but it is believed that there are people enough in town who appreciate a performance of a high order to insure the success of the venture.

Bindloss, Golden Press, New London, President; T. J. Spencer, Sphinx, South Manchester, 1st Vice President; Henry R. Palmer, Palm-er Vindicator, Stonington, 2nd Vice Pres.; Chas. W. Lincoln, Osgrey, New London, Secretary; Theodore Bodenwein, Thames Budget, New London, Treasurer; Geo. R. Morris and C. F. Cooley, Official Editors; Albert C. Thayer, Sergeant at Arms. A New Post Office.—As was intimated in this paper a fortnight ago, the postal business at this village has increased to such proportions as to be entirely beyond the capacity of the present accommodations. The post office has for upwards of thirty years been located at the same place. To enlarge it will now necessitate its removal, as every available inch of room in Cheney & Co's store is needed for the constantly enlarging stock and business of the firm. For the double purpose of improving both the post-office and business facilities, it has been decided to move the post office, money order department and telegraph office, to the rooms in the Spencer building south of the store, and recently occupied by Oliver Magnell. A large number of new boxes will be put in and at least half of them will be lock boxes. The new rooms will be large and being unhampered by any other business will be convenient for both postmaster and the public. O. W. Merrill, the present post clerk and telegraph operator will have charge of the new office. The space in the store now occupied by the post office will be taken up by the cigar and confectionery counters. The change is to be made immediately. A number of applications have already been filed for the additional boxes in the new office.

It would be hard to find a country village where there are better sidewalks than in South Manchester. And it would be harder to find a village where such care is taken to beautify lawns and parks. It therefore seems strange that those who bear none of the expense nor labor of the improvements, but who daily enjoy their advantages, are unwilling to show their appreciation by a little care on their part. There is a growing habit of walking on the turf beside a six-foot sidewalk, and of cutting off a corner which has been carefully sown to grass, just to save three steps. There is no need for such carelessness. It results in no advantage to the trespasser, and is a provoking annoyance to those who volunteer to beautify the village with well-kept lawns and green bordered walks. A word calling attention to this negligence ought to be sufficient.

STATE NEWS.

Mary Hall's petition for admittance to the state bar has been argued before the supreme court at Hartford. The court adjourned till the 23d.

The common council of Hartford vote to permit the re-opening of Allyn hall, leaving it to Mr. Allyn to remedy anything that may seem to be dangerous in case of a fire.

A fire started at Windsor at 1 o'clock Sunday morning, destroying two barns, Murphy's store and a two-story building. The firemen were delayed by the water being unaccountably turned off, but they finally did good work, saving part of one building. The total loss was about $8000; Murphy's goods were valued at $4500, insured for $9000. The rest of the property belonged mostly to H. S. Leighton, an insurance agent, and is probably well insured.

The Jumbo of rattlesnakes was killed the other day by a plucky young woman of Naugatuck. A party of arbutus hunters waked up the reptile, and Miss Sarah Roswell promptly handed her revolver to the young man of the party with commission to fire, but the male nerves were unstrung by the noisy rattles and three forked tongue, and Miss Rowell snatched back the weapon and emptied four shells into his snakeship's neck. She then finished him with a club, and now has a necklace of nine rattles for trophy.

LARGE WOOD FIRE IN STAFFORD.—The most exciting time known at Stafford Springs since the Staffordville dam disaster in March, 1877, occurred Monday, when the manufacturers closed the mills and the citizens generally turned out to stop the fire raging in the woods just back of Julius Converse's fine place overlooking Main street. The fire was probably a continuation of Sunday's fire on the Tolland road, nearly

2 1/2 miles south of the Springs, which was set by a careless fellow burning brush. This started up anew in the morning and gained great headway in a few hours. But it was not till near noon that any alarm was given to the Springs people. By the middle of the afternoon the flames had swept over about 200 acres of valuable woodland belonging to Mr. Converse and the Mineral Springs manufacturing company, whose loss is estimated at $3000 or more. Besides, the company had 400 cords of fire-wood cut and piled up, which was destroyed, and Mr. Converse lost a large lot of fence rails. The fire-bells called out the people and the fire department, and the steam fire engine played for a long time on the buildings within 100 yards of the post-office. There were several narrow escapes, and many persons were burned more or less. There was no insurance on the wood, and the Mineral Springs company are much inconvenienced by the fire, as the mills got their supply from this big lot. The burned district is nearly three miles long and rather narrow till it nearly reaches the Springs, where it widens, extending from Rawster Bros' lower factory to Woodlawn terrace.

THE MALLEY TRIAL.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE THIRD WEEK. The state brought forward witnesses Tuesday, to show that Jennie Cramer spent with the prisoners the day and evening preceding the day when her body was found dead on the beach. Mrs. Klippstein was cross-examined and stuck by her statement that she had seen Jennie and Blanche together Thursday afternoon, August 5, at about 1 o'clock. She testified also to seeing Walter James and Blanche come from the Elliott house Friday evening, enter a buggy and drive away. James H. Peck testified that James Malley had admitted to him the authorship of the letters to Jennie signed "J. M.," and Dr. H. W. Painter, one of the West Haven jury gave testimony to the same purpose. The defense admitted voluntarily that the letters signed "Blanche" were written by Walter Malley. Samuel J. Mattson testified that he was clerk last summer in the drug store on the Elliott house and that Blanche and Jennie entered the store Thursday evening, August 5, and drank soda water. He admitted that he had not seen Jennie Cramer before for six years, but claimed that his recognition of her in the store was instant and certain. Patrick Enright, bell-boy at the Elliott House, John H. Hubbell and others, testified to seeing Jennie and Blanche together on the two days preceding the fatal Friday. Rawlings, manager of Redcliffe's restaurant, testified to knowing all the persons concerned and identified the order for a steak and mushrooms Thursday morning. He saw Miss Douglas and another woman come into the restaurant at 10 o'clock Thursday evening with Walter Malley, and man resembling the one that was with Miss Douglas in the morning. Walter visited the restaurant as a guest August 11, and said that witness was mistaken about the two women; and that it was his cousin James that was with him. Subsequently James visited the restaurant to corroborate Walter, but Rawlings said he believed the party consisted of two women and Walter.

WEDNESDAY.

On Wednesday, the case for the state was helped materially by the testimony of new and important witnesses. Restaurant keeper Rawling was cross-examined, and insisted that Walter, followed by two women, entered his restaurant Thursday evening, August 4, although he was not certain that both these women sat at the same table with Walter. John Henry, colored waiter, was called and testified to serving Walter, Blanche and Jennie, Thursday in the forenoon and again in the evening. The witness wasn't sure whether it was Walter or James who came, but he was positive that Blanche and Jennie were the women. The party left the restaurant about 11.15 o'clock in the evening. Witness said that James came a few days afterward and tried to convince him that the party had consisted of two men and a woman, meaning that James himself, and not Jennie Cramer, was the third person. The witness said that he didn't know whether the man was James or Walter.

Edward A. Platt, a new witness, was called and said that he last saw Jennie Cramer Friday, August 5. He saw her passing his restaurant on Elm street at 11 a. m. in company with a woman. When asked who this companion was, he pointed at Blanche, saying, "There she is there." Cross-examined, he said that he did not testify at the preliminary hearing because he had wished to keep out of the matter. A state detective, however, had ferreted him out and drawn his story from him. Edwin J. Ruck, from whose shop Platt saw Jennie and Blanche, was called and corroborated Platt's evidence in full, being unshaken by cross-examinations. A still stronger witness was John A. Lovejoy, who testified that he saw James and Jennie together twice on Friday, August 5, once on the Green about noon and again between 8 and 9 o'clock p. m., at Savin Rock in the grove back of the Sea View house. All of this testimony is unusually important to the state, as it flatly contradicts the repeated assertions of the Malley and Blanche, and apparently establishes the fact that they were with Jennie only a few hours before her body was discovered by the old clam-digger.

The court-room this week has been the scene of considerable amusement, Judge Cramer being about the only one to remember that he is presiding over something more like a funeral than a circus. The colored waiter's haphazard remarks brought down the house repeatedly, the Malley boys laughing till they cried, the jurors pecking each other in the ribs and the spectators almost guffawing at each of the darkey's pert answers. Jo. Howard, the veteran New York newspaper man, is also responsible for a bit of fun. He is bald-headed and feeling pneumonia blowing on his cranium Tuesday from an open door, he placed a skull cap on his head. Sheriff Byrbee remonstrated, and the journalist appealed to the judge, who decided, at skull consideration, that the wearing of a skull cap in a Connecticut court-room was without precedent and could not be allowed. Yesterday Howard found on his table a big, black wig and a note from a county official, stating that New Haven county was equal to any emergency and expressing the hope that it would save the hairless journalist from further inconvenience and that the sheriff would permit its use.

THURSDAY.

John A. Lovejoy was cross-examined Wednesday, and explained a mistake which he had made in his testimony before the West Haven jury by saying that he had misapprehended a question. The statement was that he returned to Long Island, Saturday, August 6, which statement he corrected under cross-examination, saying that he had supposed the question to refer to his going to another place. George T. Audley, hickman, was the next witness, and testified to seeing James Malley Friday afternoon, August 5, in company with a girl who wore four rings, two on each hand. He did not know Jennie Cramer, but as she wore four rings, the defense labored long to discredit the evidence. Audley explained that he noticed the rings because the girl as she passed him lifted her hands to arrange something about her neck. Cross-examination brought out the name of one Perach, who was forever talking to the witness and others about getting hush money from the Malleys. Ralph Hull and Charles S. Barrett, formerly conductor and driver on the Fair Haven and Westville horse-car, both testified to seeing James Malley on the afternoon of August 5, drive in a buggy to his father's house. A young woman came out of the house and testified to seeing after which the witness saw James take around and drive back toward the city alone. This testimony would seem to disprove the alibi claimed in the case of James Malley on that particular date. Alvin P. Sanford also testified that he saw James Malley between 7.30 and 8, the same Friday evening, on Temple street, opposite Edward Malley's store, standing on the sidewalk near a horse and buggy. Mr. Jones conducted the cross-examination, but nothing new was obtained.

Runaway Engines.

On Thursday afternoon, Engineer Webb started about 6 o'clock from East Hartford for Hartford, with a switching engine he had been operating. The East Hartford meadows and the bridge were passed in safety, and the signal was set for a clear track into town. On nearing the extra freight, it was seen the track was not clear. The engineer of the freight car, who was in the lead, at the moment he realized his danger, knew that a collision was unavoidable and the fireman sprang to the ground. The two engines came together with a crash. The engine of the extra and the freight car were derailed. The engine kept the track, and the shock of the collision threw the freight car up to the gold mines of Black Central City, and return in a few minutes to the station. The engine rushed to his instruments, and the scenery along with the hills of the Rockies, is grand description. Perhaps the most interesting thing we may give some description of the country through the next few weeks.

BOLTON.

At the reorganization of the Sabbath school on last Sabbath, the Rev. L. H. Barber was chosen Superintendent, Mr. George Howe, Assistant Superintendent, Wm. E. Alford, Librarian and Miss Lizzie Williams, Treasurer. The penny contribution for the past year have amounted to more than twenty dollars. Miss Minnie Ruggles, adopted daughter of the late Mr. Samuel Ruggles, died in Providence, R. I., at the residence of Mrs. E. M. Gladding, on May 6th, after a long and wearisome illness. The burial took place in Bolton, May 8th. Miss Ruggles was a refined and educated young lady and was much beloved. Her age was twenty-six years. The house, on what is called the "Cone place," owned by Thomas Daly, was burned on Sunday night last. It is said to have been fully insured.

E. R. Chappell has improved the looks of his door yard by a new fence. Rev. L. S. Brown is expected to preach on the evening of May 15 at the house of Mr. Marsh in Tolland. Mr. Tom Pomeroy has leased the old hotel west of the Notch, and has caused the same to be completely renovated for the accommodation of summer boarders. We just alluded last week to the death of Mrs. Sophia Daniels of Bolton, and now at the request of friends we desire to add a short obituary. Mrs. Sophia Daniels (nee Sweetland), and widow of the late Walt Daniels, was born April 3d, 1796. In what was then known as the town of East Hartford, but now called Manchester. In the spring of 1814, at the age of 18, she experienced religion and espoused the cause of Christ and consequently was baptized into church relationship by Rev. Elder Blakeley of Wetherfield, Conn., and united with the Baptist Church in Manchester. A powerful revival was in progress, and the pastor from Wetherfield was up assisting the Baptist pastor in Manchester in their meetings. In Dec., 1823 she was married to Mr. Walt Daniels who was a hard working farmer and past several years ago. As a result from this union six children were born to them four of whom survive their mother to rise up and in deed and truth call her blessed. Of Aunt Sophia (as all who knew her called her) it may be said her life was an exemplary one "hid with Christ in God," ever ready to perform a kind act and to speak a pleasant word of cheer. Her children will miss her, all of them, but more especially the son and daughter with whom she spent the last four years of life since the death of her husband.

THE RELIGIOUS WORLD.

NOTES ON CURRENT RELIGIOUS TOPICS.
To begin with, a bit like this from one of the great novelists is a mental and moral tonic.

When Gail Hamilton leaves politics to the other sex and directs her brilliant genius to the dissection of moral and religious topics, she shows a sound appreciation of her own ability and generally says something worth saying and to the point.

But when the weary soul had fled, and this fine and far-reaching science could fall to work like a butcher in the shambles—the bullet was not there! It never had been there.

If actors are ever admitted to heaven, and not thrust into some little place around the corner, what action will be taken by the Woman's Auxiliary of the Young Men's Christian Association referred to below?

The Rev. D. F. Harris in the Chicago Advance thus boldly comes to the front in that orthodox organ of Congregationalism:—
'No! As a body of Christians, we are not Calvinists.'

The German Sunday does not strike the devout American as a desirable institution to import to this country, but the devout German has his side to the question, and cannot understand our American habits.

The name of Ralph Waldo Emerson was several years ago given to a little urchin in Philadelphia, and when Mr. Emerson was informed of this fact he forwarded to the infant a set of his works and a sealed letter to be opened upon his namesake's twenty-first birthday.

A good many stories of the highest courage and devotion to duty come from railroad trains. In Minnesota the other day a passenger train came upon a broken rail, and Stein, the engineer, and Markley, the freeman, instead of trying to save themselves by jumping, stayed on the engine, reversed it and put on the brakes.

Lord Frederick Charles Cavendish, Chief-Secretary and Thomas Haviland Burke, Under-Secretary, for Ireland, were assassinated shortly after 7 Saturday evening in Phoenix Park, Dublin. They were stabbed several times in the throat. The assassins escaped. That the object of the assassination was not robbery is shown by the fact that money and valuables were in the pockets of the murdered men when their bodies were discovered.

St. Louis was astonished the other day by the appearance of a ragged, unkempt man hauling a rude cart filled with children while the mother pushed behind, the whole being a family who had lost everything by the flood in Arkansas, bound for Clay county, Mo. The president of the merchants' exchange happened to see the strange spectacle, and finally the family, cart and all, were taken upon the board of trade, and there, with no end of meriment, a subscription of $200 was raised to hold the poor people along.

Among the early settlers of the town was Col. Stephen Keyes, a gentleman of the old school, who wore a cocked hat and kept a hotel on Water street. He proposed to pay his respects to Prince Edward, and with several young men of the village made a call in the evening.

SCIENTIFIC AND INDUSTRIAL.

Spare Moments.

A boy, poorly dressed, came to the door of the Principal of a high school one morning, and asked to see him. The servant eyed his mean clothes and thinking he looked more like a beggar than anything else, told him to go around to the kitchen.

Gut belting is made chiefly from the entrails of sheep. They are, on an average, over fifty feet long, and after being cleaned are put into bales, where they undergo considerable shrinkage. In making them into rope-forms, they are treated in the same manner that wine is, and they are connected in strands and woven on a loom in flat belts in the same way that ribbon is made. A 2 inch round belt will stand a strain of over seven tons, and a three-eighth inch, consisting of 150 strands, almost half as much. Their lasting qualities, as compared with the best hemp, are very great—over three times as durable as rope made from the latter.

Queen Victoria's Father in America.

Prince Edward, afterward Duke of Kent, and the father of Queen Victoria, passed through Burlington in February, 1793. He came from Quebec, where he had command of a regiment. His trip through the country was accomplished in carryalls and sleighs; a courier had been sent on to Burlington to prepare for his accommodation. There were then only seven framed houses in the whole village, and but one, that of Phineas Loomis, large enough to receive so numerous a party.

A little incident occurred on the passing of the Prince and the lady from the house to the sleigh which illustrates somewhat the character and personnel of the Prince. An awkward but stout young man was standing in the path, not making room readily for the party to advance. Prince Edward advanced, and taking him up bodily, set him on one side in the snow. At this place (Burlington) he dismissed the teamsters who had brought him from Canada and engaged five farmers to take him on to Boston. It was said by these men that he was a jolly companion, enjoying the pork and beans, nut cakes, and cheese.

Plant food is concentrated in bones, and most gardeners who make a business of raising fruits and vegetables appreciate their value. In tree planting they are almost indispensable. They can be had of village boys generally for about twenty-five to fifty cents a barrel. They pick them up about the streets, gardens and slaughter houses, the remnants of butcher's meat sold to families. This kind of bone is fine enough to be put into borders for grape vines and fruit trees, and to bury under old trees without preparation. A bushel of these bones to a newly planted tree is none too much, and one may safely plant five bushels under a bearing apple or pear tree, or grape vine. So large quantities will not follow immediately these coarse pieces as from the mally and abruptly retired article, or from superphosphates. But there will be in the soil a quantity of food for many years, and the roots will appropriate what they have need. The fine roots of the bones as eagerly suck water in a, tile drain.

Fertilizing Pastures.

Pastures are continually being taken from, and unless something is returned the time will soon come when they will become exhausted. Many pastures have been grazed for years, the elements which make milk and flesh being continually removed, and no fertilizer applied to make good the loss. As a result, the soil has become impoverished, and the land produces not more than half the staple food that it did years ago.

Plant food is concentrated in bones, and most gardeners who make a business of raising fruits and vegetables appreciate their value. In tree planting they are almost indispensable. They can be had of village boys generally for about twenty-five to fifty cents a barrel. They pick them up about the streets, gardens and slaughter houses, the remnants of butcher's meat sold to families. This kind of bone is fine enough to be put into borders for grape vines and fruit trees, and to bury under old trees without preparation. A bushel of these bones to a newly planted tree is none too much, and one may safely plant five bushels under a bearing apple or pear tree, or grape vine. So large quantities will not follow immediately these coarse pieces as from the mally and abruptly retired article, or from superphosphates. But there will be in the soil a quantity of food for many years, and the roots will appropriate what they have need. The fine roots of the bones as eagerly suck water in a, tile drain.

The French laborer prefers to work for his wages than to be frequently taken up by the police. He is content with a whole mass of bone, one solid, shining, his bouillon is prepared with fine roots. We see in any investment in fertilizers thrown in without any charge.

The estimated cost of the proposed tunnel across the English Channel is $50,000,000. If used for passenger traffic solely, one million persons must travel it yearly, and pay $2.50 each, to make the gross earnings five per cent, on the investment.

A bad beginning: Uncle Nace and Aunt Sinkey, his wife, were out on Austin avenue buying some things a few days ago. The old woman bought a handkerchief, the color of which did not suit Uncle Nace, and he said, angrily: "You has made a poor choice. 'I know I has had taste, but de fust poor selection I made was when I tuck you."—Texas Siftings.

There was a crowd of carriages in front of a Woodward-avenue church the other day when a man came along, discovered that something was going on, and, leaning against a hitching post, he asked of a pedestrian, "Was it very sudden?" "I don't know," "Presume it was. Well, we've all got to go that way. Do you know, sir, that—that—" Here his voice broke down and he reached for his handkerchief. "What's the matter?" inquired the other. "Young woman's funeral in there." "That's no funeral; that's a marriage." "Marriage? Ah, yes, marriage—I see. Well, it's all the same to me. Give me the young man's name and I'll weep over him."—Detroit Free Press.

A boy, poorly dressed, came to the door of the Principal of a high school one morning, and asked to see him. The servant eyed his mean clothes and thinking he looked more like a beggar than anything else, told him to go around to the kitchen.

Gut belting is made chiefly from the entrails of sheep. They are, on an average, over fifty feet long, and after being cleaned are put into bales, where they undergo considerable shrinkage. In making them into rope-forms, they are treated in the same manner that wine is, and they are connected in strands and woven on a loom in flat belts in the same way that ribbon is made. A 2 inch round belt will stand a strain of over seven tons, and a three-eighth inch, consisting of 150 strands, almost half as much. Their lasting qualities, as compared with the best hemp, are very great—over three times as durable as rope made from the latter.
