A basket of the largest and most delicious strawberries we ever saw was placed on our desk this week by Farmer H. A. Slater. Some of the berries were as large as a good sized hen's egg and nearly as heavy. Their flavor was not sacrificed to their beauty but on the contrary they were as sweet and juicy as wild strawberries. The way to an editor's heart, it is said, is through his stomach; at any rate Mr. Slater will always have our profounded regard and admiration.

GROWING OLD. At six-I well remember when-I fanced all folks old at ten. But, when I turned my first decade, Fifteen appeared more truly staid. But when the fifteenth year I'd run, I thought none old till twenty-one. Then, oddly, when I'd reached that age. I held that thirty made folks sage. But when my thirtieth year was told, I said . "At two score men grow old!"

Yet two score came and found me thrifty. And so I drew the line at fifty. But when I reached that age, I swore None could be old until three score! And here I am at sixty now, "Tis true, these rogues about my knee

She with the bait of her comely looks, And the seine of her golden tresses. So we sat down on the sunny dike, Where the white pond lilles teeter, And I went to fishing like quaint old Ike, And she like Simon Poter.

All the noon I laid in the light of her eyes, And dreamlly watched and waited, But the fish were cunning and would not rise, And the batter alone was batted.

And when the time for departure came, The bag was flat as a flounder, But Bessle had nearly hooked her game, A hundred and eighty pounder.
