For a family soap, the Puritan 25 bars for $1.00 excels them all. The White Elephant for a white soap (no rust) takes the lead, at the store for the people.

A. H. SKINNER'S.

Rev. Mr. Robbins will not regularly supply the pulpit of the Center Congregational church after tomorrow, although the formal dismission of his pastorate will probably be deferred a month or two. After tomorrow the Center congregation will have the novel experience of listening to candidates.

The society's committee have engaged a young man from the Hartford Theological seminary, for next Sunday.

Next Wednesday and Thursday evening the attraction at Apol's opera house will be the musical comedy "Irish Luck."

The comedy is all that its name suggests, being freely interposed with funny and absurd situations. Mr. Clem C. Magee is a very funny personage as "Owen McMillan," and the audience was untractable while he was on the stage.

Miss Nellie Parker, in the double part of Charley, an office boy, and "Daisy" a charming damsel did admirably.

In another column will be found the first of three articles descriptive of the music to be given at the next concert of the South Manchester Choral society, April 16; the others will be published in the next two issues.

Good music can be much better enjoyed if the person who hears it has some understanding of it, those descriptions ought to be a help to people who are not students of music. Any one interested in the music could cut them out and have them for reference at the concert. The Herald is glad to publish them, in the belief that they make a move in the direction of cultivated taste and appreciation.

Musical instruction. All those who are contemplating taking instrumental music lessons will do well to consult Mrs. J. A. Alford, Manchester Green. Mrs. Alford's musical abilities are well known in Manchester she having taught here for some time.

Trimmed hats for Easter, Mrs. A. B. Pierce.

Full line of corsets, Mrs. A. B. Pierce.

Have in my hands an Adams detector and other nice number of real and cheaply for sale. Notice among them: The Ellen B. Faine residence on Main street.

David Wilson residence on Hill street, West Buckland farm the part or whole on Tolland street.

Desirable building lots on Woodland street.

Jacob's property on Gardner street. Quail residence, Manchester Green. Will sell these properties at their fair value and upon reasonable terms. Enquire of CLINTON P. WOODLES, Manchester, Conn.

DEATH OF DR. JACQUES.

Forty-seven Years a Practitioner in Manchester.

Dr. C. W. Jacques died at his home in Buckland last Saturday evening. His critical illness was noted in last week's Herald. He had long been a sufferer from diabetes.

Although able to attend to his daily professional duties most of the time he knew that he was afflicted with an incurable disease. When he was prostrated, just a week before his death, he was positive that he would never recover and prepared his friends for the end.

His brother physicians in town did all they could for him and were able to lighten the sufferings of his last days, though they were powerless to cope with the wasting disease.

The engraving shown herewith is made from the latest photograph of Dr. Jacques in existence. It was taken by Delamater, of Hartford, about ten years ago and represents the doctor in his prime.

Dr. C. W. Jacques was one of the most widely known men in town and was also among the most popular. His death will be sad news to hundreds, not only of those who have been his patients, but also of those who knew him only as a fellow citizen.

Dr. Jacques was born in French industry in Tolland, March 28, 1844, and would therefore have been 60 years old last Wednesday. He was the son of Amos Jacques and the sole survivor of three brothers all of whom were physicians, the others being Dr. Judson Jacques, who died in Bridgeport, at the age of 45, and Dr. John Jacques who died in Waterbury at the age of 55. His sister, Mrs. Narcisse, Mrs. Narcisse E. Sperry, is the widow of still another physician,--the late Dr. Sperry, of Hartford.

Dr. Jacques began practice in Manchester in 1871. He came here from Dr. Johnson's office in Hartford. He resided at Buckland four corners. Later and which he has for many years been his home. In 1875 he married Anna (Gris) and Dr. Jacques first professional call was to the family of Leonard Grant in South Windsor. Gradually the circle of his patients expanded and in the later years his daily work took in all the adjacent towns. He was unexcelled in his treatment of fevers and was also generally successful with small for peritonitis.

He was a member of the Manchester health board from the date of its organization and for many years prior to his death was health officer. He has in this capacity served three terms in averting threatened epidemics.

Dr. Jacques was the oldest physician in town. When he began his practice, drug stores and prescriptions were almost unknown. Like all other doctors of that time he carried his medicines in a chest under his carriage seat. Although in later years he occasionally used prescriptions he continued to carry the medicine chest with him and generally furnished his own medicine. He always took a kindly interest in the young physicians who from time to time settled in town and in forming their acquaintance was ready to meet them even more than half way. The late Dr. Scott and he, though at one time rivals in practice, were for many years fast friends. He was a man of quick perception; he diagnosed a case almost by intuition and his diagnosis usually proved correct.

Dr. Jacques was a lifelong democrat. He represented Manchester in the legislature of 1876. He always took a keen interest in the affairs of the town and, until his health failed, could be depended on to be present and take an active part in every important town meeting. He was a pleasant speaker and often he has checked an unceremonious debate by getting up and telling a funny story in his own inimitable style. His influence was always on the side of good roads and he took a prominent place in the movement to abolish grade crossings. The nature of his disease has for the last few years led him to avoid excitement and therefore he has not allowed himself to attend town meetings.

For many years Dr. Jacques was superintendent of the north-west cemetery. The grounds and their surroundings were materially beautified under his direction. He had erected on his own lot a massive monument on which his own name was carved, with a blank left for the date of his death.

Dr. Jacques' most prominent personal characteristic was his sociability. He was fond of animals. He kept a good dog and drove good horses. He would not allow an animal to be abused in his presence. He has more than once taken a team from an abusive driver and housed it in his barn. In religion he was a liberal. While not committed to any creed he believed in the brotherhood of man and the fatherhood of God. Although he could not understand the mysteries of the infinite, he relied on the Bible and believed that the motives of every man would in due season be revealed and credited.

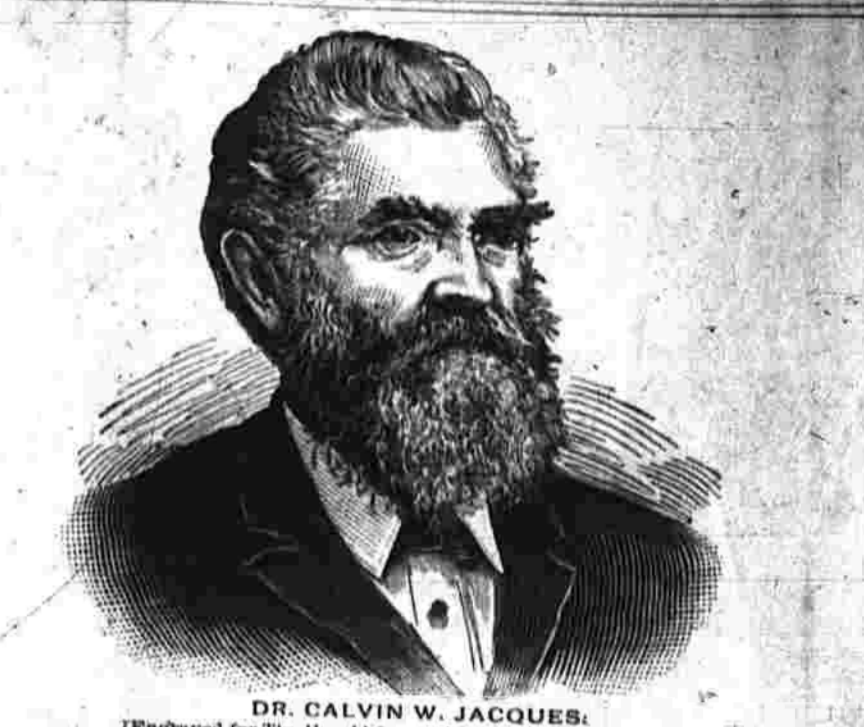

The funeral of Dr. Jacques was held at his residence Tuesday afternoon, in accordance with the doctor's wish the Masonic lodge of which he was a member attended in a body and conducted the burial service. Seventy-five masons assembled and besides these, a company of friends that overflowed the house.

The services at the house were short and simple. Brief addresses were made by Rev. C. H. Barber, Rev. S. W. Robbins and Rev. John McVay. Mr. Barber spoke of the nobility of the physician's calling and the immense good accomplished by a life of contribution to the sufferings of others. Rev. Mr. Robbins spoke of the doctor's relation to public and educational affairs. He noted the fact that Dr. Jacques would be the third physician of long service to be laid away in the Buckland cemetery--the others Dr. Conley and Dr. Scott. Rev. Mr. McVay, who was an almost constant attendant on the doctor during his last illness told in an effective way his religious nature as revealed during those last hours of suffering.

At the Buckland cemetery the Masonic ritual was impressively recited, Master J. H. Henderson conducting the ceremony. The bearers were, Thomas Gray, Harry Carter, J. W. Cheney, C. H. Arnold, J. A. Fitch and William Bushnell.

Funeral for Illegal Liquor Selling. Walter Donnelly, who lives in Tolland turnpike, was fined $10 and costs amounting to $29.92, by Justice Stoughton, of East Hartford, last Monday afternoon. This case first came up about a year ago when some liquor was seized at Donnelly's home. When the criminal case against him came up he had left town and nothing could be done. But a short time ago another search of the house was made on suspicion that Mrs. Donnelly was continuing the business, and Mr. Donnelly being found at home, he was held for trial at the old indictment. However, Mr. W. Conley undertook to settle the case for him; there was no trial and the matter was compromised with the penalty named and on the understanding that Donnelly would not sell any liquor in the future.

Just as we expected. That the citizens of this town would appreciate a good thing just as soon as they found it out. Do you want photographs, large prints and frames to match at prices that our competitors cannot afford to offer. Our show case tells the story. P. L. H. Manchester, Conn.

A MAD DOG THIS TIME.

But No Damage Done.
One of two dogs belonging to Mr. Charles R. Keeney died of hydrophobia, last Tuesday evening. When Mr. Keeney heard the report that Mr. Oviatt's dog was mad and running about he tried to keep his own dogs shut up. But the one in question had one opportunity to run about two weeks ago yesterday, and it was probably at that time that Mr. H. B. Brandt saw him bitten by Mr. Oviatt's dog, as he afterwards informed Mr. Keeney. Although the dog was bitten on the neck the only mark that Mr. Keeney could discover was a small scab on the top of the head; this he removed and it reappeared a day or two later.

Last Saturday the dog was at the office of Keeney Brothers, and seemed to be sick but showed no alarming symptoms. It was thought that he had a cold, and Mr. Keeney gave him some medicine and at night shut him up in a box stall. Sunday morning Mr. Keeney found the dog out in the yard, his man having opened the barn. Mr. Keeney took the dog back and chained him. Sunday evening the dog began to bark, and when his master went out at 11 o'clock he was barking and jumping violently, trying to free himself. Monday morning it was found that he had broken his chain and was loose in the stall; his lower jaw hung down and froth was dripping from it. Mr. Keeney went to a deer that is divided into an upper and lower half and attempted to look in through the upper part, but he found the dog there and closed the door. Then the dog went back to the middle of the stall, and Mr. Keeney opened the upper door again. As he did so the animal sprang at him and before he could close the door had his head and fore legs over the edge of the lower part. Mr. Keeney had a severe struggle to keep the dog in, but his shouts brought his man, who pushed the dog back with a board. They then nailed all the doors. The next thing done was to get into the hay mow and cut a hole down through the hay and floor, then some water was lowered. The dog drank it eagerly and then trotted round and round the stall, stopping occasionally to drink. He seemed unable to eat meat that was lowered to him. He continued to run almost incessantly, and later ran against the sides of the stall, as though he could not see. Finally, on Tuesday evening the dog's sufferings were ended by death, greatly to the relief of his master, who hopes that this, his first experience of the kind, will not be repeated.

Mr. Powers in "The Rivals."

Mr. Leland T. Powers was heard for the third time at Cheney hall, last Monday night. He has heretofore given "David Garrick" and "David Copperfield" here; this time the play he impersonated was the comedy, "The Rivals." This play is constructed better than either of the others, and its telling situations were well brought out by Mr. Powers. His best character was that of Sir Anthony Absolute, his weakest that of Mrs. Malaprop. He was evidently suffering from a cold, which roughened his falsetto tones and made his female characters at times quite masculine. His facial expression and gesture are those of a finished actor. His power of producing an illusion is greater than one would suppose possible. It is in part explained however by the fact that in viewing a play the spectator can look at but one character at a time. Mr. Powers, in his own person, presents all the characters in rapid succession and, though he is unaided by costume or scenery, he pleases the stage with different and varying characters.

Mrs. Louise Baldwin Powers added not a little to the enjoyment of the entertainment, by her songs between the acts of the play. Mrs. Powers has a highly cultivated soprano voice, very pure and very flexible. She was repeatedly encored. Miss Crane accompanied her skillfully, though the piano was in poor condition. The Young Men's League netted a satisfactory sum from the performance.

THE TROTTING SEASON.

Manchester First in the Circuit.
At the meeting of the representatives from the societies forming the Eastern Connecticut trotting circuit, at Williamantic, March 21, the following arrangements for holding the fall fairs was decided upon: Manchester, the first week in September; Rockville, the second week; Brooklyn, the third week; Norwich, the fourth, followed by Williamantic and Stafford the next two weeks. This is the most convenient arrangement that could be made, as it makes no long distances between points and the several fairs do not conflict with any others near by on the same dates. Another meeting will be held soon to arrange classes and purses.

Arrangements are already being made for a grand field day, at Woodland Park, July 4th, with entertainment for everybody, and inducements to keep people in town, instead of obliging them to visit other places to celebrate.

W. W. Cowles has the work mapped out necessary to put the track in prime condition, and will execute his plans as soon as the ground becomes a little more settled.

New line of ladies' summer underwear, Mrs. A. B. Pierce.

Boy wishing to learn the drug business, apply to Cheney's Store at once. New fancy goods, Mrs. A. B. Pierce.

The Young Men's club of St. Mary's parish will elect their officers next Saturday evening.

Notice of a special meeting of the eighth school district next Friday evening will be found in another column.

The members of the Young People's Christian Band will have a social gathering at the home of Miss Blanche E. Taylor, next Tuesday evening.

E. R. Rich, B. T. Lyons and W. W. Cheney went to Danbury to attend the institution of a new lodge of Odd Fellows Thursday night.

Mrs. Lucinda T. Bunce, widow of Edwin Bunce, died at the residence of Charles E. Bunce, Friday, the 20th. She was 71 years old.

Bishop Williams will visit St. Mary's Church to administer the rite of confirmation next Thursday, April 2nd. The Wednesday service will consequently be omitted.

The annual meeting of St. Mary's parish will be held in the church next Monday evening, for the election of officers and the transaction of miscellaneous business.

Frank Ingraham has been elected a member of Company G. Private McNeary, of Co. H, 2d Regt., of Middletown, has applied for a transfer to Co. G, having removed to Manchester.

Messrs. E. T. and W. S. Ferris A. H. Allen accompanied a party of Connecticut wheelmen on a tour of inspection to the bicycle factory of the Overman Wheel company at Chicopee Falls, Mass. yesterday. The writer regrets that the duties of publication day prevented his accepting an invitation to accompany them.

The election of officers of South Manchester Division S. of T., resulted as follows: W. P., Fred L. Southwick; W. A., Flora Colton; R. S., John M. Aitken; A. R. S., Belle Craig; F. S., Howard Taylor; Treas., James Trotter; Chap., Jennie Davis; Con., George Nichols; A. C., Thomas Trotter; I. S., George Leib; O. S., George Smith; Organist, Nellie House.

One half of the large barn on Mr. Hudson White's place has been torn down this week. The barn was built by his father, Miner White, when the land all about Depot square was a part of his farm and hay crops were heavy.

Cheney Brothers took advantage of the holiday yesterday to put in the new shaft which is to run the mills north of Forest street. A gang of machinists began work as soon as the mill stopped Thursday night. About 600 feet of 3 1/2 and 4 1/2 inch shafting has to be laid.

The temporary officers of the Building and Loan association have decided upon Wednesday evening, April 14 as the time and Cheney hall the place for the first payment on the stock. The constitution will also be adopted at that meeting and permanent officers chosen.

The Perkins Lamp company shut down Thursday night for inventory and repairs. The factory will start again April 6th. The annual meeting of the company occurs April 13. Notwithstanding considerable of the stock has changed hands during the last year, it is not likely that any changes will be made in the board of directors or in the executive management. The company has, naturally, done a very profitable business the last year and it seems a wise policy for the stock-holders to let well enough alone. The force of operatives at the factory has been temporarily reduced. At this period of the year the demand for lighting apparatus falls off. Thousands of factories and business places cease to use artificial light when the days lengthen and the demand for electric lamps is thus greatly curtailed.

Messrs. E. S. Kendall & Co., the Hub clothiers are showing at their large store on Asylum street the finest assortment of light overcoats and men's and boys' suits ever displayed in Hartford. The stock is all fresh from the manufacturers and the prices are the lowest consistent with reliable goods.
