HOMELAND DAY WAS HAPPY DAY.

Perfect Weather Brought Many Thousands to Town. Visitors Delighted With Pageant Unique Programs of Afternoon and Evening Enjoyed by Vast Throngs—Perfect Arrangements and No Disorder.

Manchester's long anticipated Homeland day is over. The bunting with which the town was swathed has been taken down, the flags have been furled, the debris of the great crowd has been cleared away and everybody is happy, for it was a glorious success. The parade started on time and finished on time, and the afternoon and evening programs were carried out with equal punctuality. The great crowds were handled with absolutely no friction and when the festivities closed at eleven o'clock Saturday night the hard worked committees were exultant in the consciousness that they had planned well and their efforts were fully appreciated. A remarkable fact was that, although there were 10,000 visitors in town and the 16,000 residents all had a holiday, there was no disorder and not a single arrest. The score or more policemen who were imported to help the local force said they never saw anything like it. All they had to do was to keep the crowds back and keep the traffic moving, and everybody obeyed them cheerfully and promptly.

Had the general committee been able to pick their day they could not, in the entire summer, have selected more favorable weather. Showers were threatened the preceding evening, but they passed around Manchester, cooling and clearing the air, however, so that Saturday morning ushered in a perfect June day. Thousands were up with the birds and rejoiced with the little songsters over the providential gift of fine weather. Another cause for thanksgiving was that not only the day of the celebration itself was pleasant, but the days preceding and immediately following it were also fair, giving favorable conditions for placing and removing decorations and other temporary fixtures.

The town was astir early. Those who were to take part in the feeding of the multitude were getting together their supplies and arranging their booths. Various societies were putting finishing touches on their floats, the parade was being reviewed, the police were laying out their day's work, and those on the line of march were putting out flags and approaching reviewing stands. Soon the trolley cars began to fill up and the groups of three and all were packed. Every highway leading to town was filled with teams and automobiles. Sidewalks were crowded with good natured, gaily dressed pedestrians readiness for the first big event of the day. The crowd, which had been assembling for over an hour, lined East Center street and on every porch, veranda and steps hundreds more stood to watch the advance of the mammoth parade. On the north side of the street from the government plot to the east as far as the eye could see, automobiles carrying capacity loads shouldered each other.

The Parade.
First came the platoon of police under command of Captain Madden, then Marshal Clifford D. Cheney with his mounted aids from Troop B. The first historical figure of the procession, Daniel Boone, the Kentucky pioneer, who when civilization crowded shoulders with him always pushed ahead into the wilderness in search of breathing space, came into view. Raymond Pinney made a capable Daniel and the coonskin cap and suit of buckskin completed the transformation. Bearing the banner of the general committee and attended on either hand by modern boy scouts he passed in review as the leader of the American section.

Troop B, riding four abreast, in service uniform and full field equipment, followed by two business-like army wagons hauled by mules, furnished a spectacle to remind one that Uncle Sam is not unprepared to face the Mexican situation should peace negotiations fall through. The Salvation Army band and Company G, both of which have furnished no mean part in Manchester parades before, came next, preceding the division of Naval Reserves from Hartford and a platoon of the Governor's Foot Guards in scarlet uniforms.

America First.
The appearance of the float representing America was heralded by that famous historical trio, grandfather, father and son, exemplifying the "Spirit of '76," the fifer and two drummers, in advance of whom came a Colofid carrying the colors. Cheer upon cheer swept the long lines of spectators as they hoys into view.

Drawn by four powerful grays the American float followed, the wheels of the vehicle entirely screened in white cloth trimmed with bunting which formed the base. In the center on a dais as the "Goddess of Liberty" posed Mrs. Howell Cheney. The position was difficult to maintain with composure, but she represented the part to perfection. Below her at each corner of the float sat four young women, typifying each section of the country, North, South, East and West. The products of each section were shown about them. Marching on either hand were characters representing the first settlers, Puritan, Dutch, Cavalier, French and Spanish. A band of Indians followed by a delegation carrying flags and representing the various nationalities who now form the citizenry of this country, concluded the American pageant.

The Italians.
The advent of the Italian contingent was heralded by a banner supported by three handsome Italian maidens in old country costume and wearing their hair down the back. Following them came the Columbia Cornet band and then a replica of that famous old Spanish caravel, the Santa Maria, which bore Columbus to the shores of America in 1492. The ship was in full sail and on her decks seemingly rode a company of helmeted Spanish soldiers.

The float was on wheels cleverly concealed from view and the ship's company propelled it as they walked. Its appearance was a signal for cheers along the line. The second Italian float represented Italy's supremacy in music and art and was designed with an eye to detail. In the center was a marble column surmounted by a bust of Verdi, the Italian composer. In front, dressed in the national colors, representing Italy, stood a young woman in the act of explaining a page of music to two smaller girls beside her. This trio represented Italy instructing the world in music on either hand two other young women were playing violins. Below on the lower tier were four men representing music and art.

France to the Front.
Bearing a standard showing the word France in large letters on a background of evergreen, the French in trim duck suits and hats marched in front of their float. The French and the French-Canadians joined in this effort. Their float represented the republic, which was established in 1870. It was decorated in the tricolor and with flowers and foliage. Four women representing the Republic Liberty, Equality and Fraternity rode on it. Behind the float came 12 women dressed in peasant costumes.

Italian Float—Music and the Arts

The Swiss.
Following the French came their allies in many wars, the Swiss. The representatives of that gallant little country, which has maintained its independence for so long against the greater nations of Europe, named their float Helvetia thus being the title that Caesar gave the country. It was liberally decked in the national colors, red and white, and the flag, a square white cross on a red field, was shown on either side. The chief characters were seven girls and three men, the girls representing the seven states of Helvetia. It was preceded by a drummer and two boys carrying flowers who were followed by 12 men in white and wearing half sleeve shirts. The second Swiss float carried the women and children who took part in the later events of the day.

Sobieski's Return.
The Polish people chose one of their chief historical events to represent their nation in the parade. This was the return to Warsaw of King Sobieski with his queen, Maria Kazimiera, after defeating the Turks at the battle of Vienna, thus saving Europe from Moslem conquest. The Polish-American band of Hartford preceded the float. On the float the king and queen were surrounded by their courtiers and ladies in waiting. Polish soldiers as a guard of honor to the royalty and also as a convey-

The Campbells Are Coming.
Every one knew the Scotchmen were coming long before they appeared. A bagpipe band in full Highland attire playing "The Campbells Are Coming," led the Scotch section. Their float was surmounted by a canopy top, festooned with huge Scotch thistles, the national flower of Scotland. Five characters were represented on the float. Mary Queen of Scots, representing history, sat at the right hand corner and on the opposite corner, representing romance, "Bonnie Prince Charlie" and Flora McDonald in Highland costume.

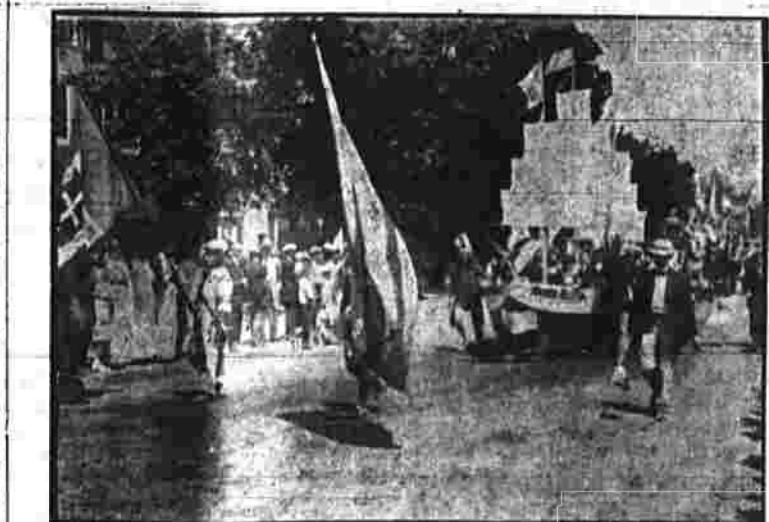

to Turkish prisoners brought up the rear. Several mounted soldiers accompanied them.

England's Part.
A British battleship in the gray paint of war and big guns booming through turrets was chosen by the English to represent England as mistress of the seven seas. On the forward deck, which was elevated, surrounded by sailors, stood John Bull and close to his burly figure Neptune with his three pronged fork, and a helmeted figure representing Britannia, ruler of the waves. On a lower deck amidship stood the admiral surrounded by sailor boys in natty duck and blue sailor caps.

The mediaeval period of England was represented in the second float and showed Robin Hood and his merry Saxon outlaws in their suits of Lincoln green. The famous priest, Friar Tuck, Maid Marian, Queen of Sherwood, her maid and Will Scarlet and Little John, Robin Hood's henchmen, surrounded him. The merry men who in their day were famous archers carried long bows and also huntmen's horns. The float was decorated to represent a scene in Sherwood forest and made a striking appearance in the parade.

The third English float carried the children who took part in the May pole dance. Each child held a colored streamer which was attached to a miniature May pole in the center of the float.

A FEW BOUQUETS. As we have remarked before, Manchester is modest. Whenever an occasion to appear in the public eye it steps into the limelight and does its best to make good.

It is the first place a big banquet should go to the entertainment committee. Rarely has an event of this importance been so carefully and fully mapped out.

From the abundance of the day's entertaining features the morning pageant was easily the most remarkable. It surprised its own people and amazed our visitors.

MANY NEW TEACHERS FOR NINTH DISTRICT.

Twenty-six Changes and Additions to Instruction Force in South Manchester Take Effect in September.

No less than 26 new teachers have been engaged by Superintendent F. A. Yerrinton to fill vacancies and new places in the teaching force of the Ninth district schools for the school year which opens in September. Several changes are noted in the High school faculty. Plans for promoting the 1200 children in the district have been completed, and it is announced just as far as possible arrangements have been made to send the children to schools nearest their homes. After the fire last October, it was necessary to keep the children together in the groups that had previously existed in order that they would not lose the benefit of the instruction thus far given, and this arrangement made it necessary for many of the children to walk long distances. The new arrangement will obviate this trouble, provided the Lincoln school addition is completed. Otherwise a full double session system will have to be inaugurated.

In the High school Miss Ethel Salmon has been engaged in place of Miss Florence Stevens, who resigns. Miss Salmon is a graduate of Allegheny college and is now teaching in Newton, this state.

Earle W. Eattie has been elected to succeed Louis Pelletier as science teacher in the High school. He is now teaching in Orange, Mass., and is a graduate of Clark college.

Miss Olive E. Ulrich of Hartford has been engaged to teach English in the High school. She is a graduate of Vassar and also holds a degree from Columbia university. Miss Ulrich is now teaching in the Mt. Kisco, N. Y., High school.

In place of Miss Florence Ordway, commercial teacher in the High school, Miss Margaret Gathie has been engaged. Miss Ordway goes to Waterbury. Miss Gathie is a graduate of Bryan & Stratton Business college, Boston, and has also taken the special course in Simmons college in Boston. She is now teaching in Litchfield.

In place of Miss Millicent Sears, teacher in the school of household arts, Miss Myra E. Hunt, a graduate of Teachers college, has been elected. Miss Sears' classes from the Bridgegate Normal school. Miss Sears has been chosen assistant instructor in Teachers college, Columbia university.

Grade Teachers.

New grade teachers in the Ninth district schools are as follows: Miss Margaret Cutler, graduate of the New Britain Normal school, now teaching in Wethersfield, will do Fifth grade work. Miss Elizabeth Clark, graduate of New Britain Normal, now teaching in Rocky Hill, will do Fourth grade work. Miss Mildred Bernhardt, who graduates this month from New Britain Normal, has been engaged for Second grade work. Miss Ethel V. Chartier, New Britain Normal graduate and now teaching in Stonington, has been engaged for Fourth grade work. Miss Alice R. Morrison, graduate of New Britain Normal, now teaching in Andover, has been assigned to the Seventh grade.

Miss Mary E. Shields, graduate of Willimantic Normal, is a new Fourth grade teacher. Miss Lillian L. Cheney, who graduates from the Willimantic Normal this month, has been engaged for Third grade work. Catherine McCarthy, another Willimantic Normal school girl, has been engaged as substitute teacher. Miss Annie B. Palmer, a Willimantic Normal graduate, now teaching at Maple Hill, Newington, has been engaged to teach. Miss Carolyn M. Seymour, 1914 graduate of New Britain Normal, has been engaged for Third grade work.

Miss Madeline C. Brown, a member of the New Britain Normal graduating class, has been engaged for Second grade work.

Miss Sarah E. Matthews will take the place of Miss Pauline McIntyre as kindergarten teacher. Miss Matthews graduates this month from New Britain Normal. Miss Helen Peaslee, a New Britain Normal graduate, now teaching in the Silver Lake school, has been engaged for Sixth grade work. Miss Martha M. Clarke, who graduates from New Britain Normal, has been engaged for Fourth grade work. Miss Anna C. Orlington, New Britain Normal 1914, will do Third grade work. Miss Emma W. Borowski, graduate of the local High school and also New Britain Normal, has been engaged for Third grade work.

Miss May E. Curran, a New Britain Normal graduate, now teaching in Mystic, has been engaged for Second grade work. Miss Marion J. Pratt, New Britain 1914, will do First grade work. Miss Ruth Chapman, South Manchester High school and New Britain Normal, will also do First grade work. Miss Helen E. Ransome, New Britain graduate, now teaching in Kensington, is also among the new teachers in the Ninth district.

Teachers Who Leave.

Miss Rhoda Birdsey, art teacher in the Lincoln school, leaves to teach in Meriden; her home city. Miss Dolah M. Cook, Seventh grade teacher, resigns. Miss Ursula H. Marsh, supervisor in Third and Fourth grades, goes to Montclair, N. J. Miss Agnes E. Osting, supervisor in First grade, goes to New Britain Normal. Miss Laura Perkins, Second grade teacher, resigns. Miss Florence M. Quinn, Fourth grade teacher, will teach in Hartford.

Death of Child.

Anthony, the seven months old son of Frank Zilinski of 60 Spruce street, died at St. Francis hospital yesterday. The body was turned over to Undertaker E. W. Post and the funeral was held this afternoon, with burial in St. James cemetery.

Off to Missouri.

Selectman Hohenthal left last night for Clinton, Mo., where he will attend a week's Chautauque and gathering of prohibition forces. There will be a meeting of the prohibition national committee, of which Mr. Hohenthal is a member.
