DROP KNOX RESOLUTION AND TURN TO ROOT PLAN TO DEFEAT THE LEAGUE

Measure Will Probably Never be Brought to Test Vote.

APPROPRIATION BILLS WILL GET ATTENTION

That, Says Lodge, is Reason for Forsaking Knox Measure—Endorses Root Proposal.

Washington, June 23.—Senate leaders opposing the league of nations abandoned today their plan to try for a test vote in the immediate future on the Knox resolution and turned their attention to crystallizing sentiment behind Eilhu Root's proposal that the league covenant be ratified with reservations. The decision was taken as a forecast that the league fight would remain in a quiescent state during the coming week and probably until the treaty is submitted for ratification about two weeks hence. There may be some debate on the subject and possibly an attempt to get action on a substitute for the Knox measure but in the main the opposition efforts seem certain from now on to center on the final ratification fight itself.

Lodge Explains Why. Republican Leader Lodge, in a statement tonight announcing that the Knox resolution would not be called up tomorrow, said the decision had been prompted by a desire to give undivided Senate attention to pressing appropriation bills. Other league opponents are known to feel also that action now would be inappropriate since the resolution, introduced two weeks ago by Senator Knox, republican, of Pennsylvania, was designed principally to require a provision in the peace treaty by which the Senate could ratify the document and still reserve judgment on the league. "I am very strongly in favor of the Knox resolution," said Senator Lodge in his statement. "I think the league and the peace with Germany ought not to be interwoven. We ought to be able to ratify the peace with Germany at once and then give the proper discussion to the covenant of the league of nations which involves the entire future of the country."

"I would like to bring the Knox resolution to a vote at once, but after consultation with Senator Knox this afternoon I have come to the conclusion that in the present situation of the appropriation bills, and especially the army bill now before the Senate, we ought not to press the Knox resolution at this moment because it will lead to debate, and nothing should be allowed to interfere with the passage of the appropriation bills before July 1. We propose to pass them before that date and shall sit night and day if necessary to do it. "I am more willing to accept this postponement because the resolution is growing stronger daily, and the absolute necessity of amending the league if it is to be made safe for the United States and for the cause of peace, has just been freshly demonstrated in Senator Root's letter with extraordinary force. Despite Mr. Lodge's inference that the resolution might be taken up later the general feeling was that with today's decision, the measure passed into history. Besides the separation proposal it contained several declarations known to be objectionable to some league opponents and the question of what should be done with it has been a source of many animated conferences. The prediction most commonly heard tonight was that if it ever were revived its friends would modify it in general respects. League supporters have maintained all along that they had sufficient votes to defeat the resolution, and Senator Hitchcock, senior democrat of the foreign relations committee, said tonight he never had expected that the measure would be brought to a roll-call. "I am not at all surprised," said Mr. Hitchcock, "at the disastrous failure of the Knox resolution. It has disappointed its friends and divided the republican party."

There still is considerable sentiment among league opponents for a resolution to declare the war at an end in order to remove from the Senate the onus of continuing war conditions while ratification of the treaty is delayed. It is understood, however, that the leaders will oppose any such a step for the present.

FACTORY NURSES MAY HOLD CONVENTION HERE

Town is Being Considered as Good Meeting Place by Organizations.

Manchester is being considered as the place for a convention of 150 factory nurses, to be held some time during November. During the past few years, conventions of several different organizations have been held in town and the delegates have gone back to their homes, telling of the hospitality of the people here. The fact that there is a nurses' home in connection with Cheney Brothers' silk mill makes this town an ideal place for a convention of factory nurses. The final plans have not been made yet, but it is expected that definite arrangements will be announced before long.

Acmes Win at Warehouse Point.

The Acme A. C. journeyed to Warehouse Point yesterday and defeated the fast Athletics of that place by the score of 12 to 2. "Judy" Long did the twirling for the Acmes, getting eight strike outs, and allowing but six hits. The team played airtight ball behind Long, only having one error chalked up against them. "Willie" St. John played a good game out in the center garden nabbing three line drives and was also there with the willow, getting 2 hits out of four trips to the plate. "Vic" Clemson leaned on a few yesterday getting three hits out of five times at the bat. Keller came across with a nice three bagger bringing in the first run.

delegation who is now at Versailles to sign the treaty. In conference circles it was declared quite unlikely that the Allies would permit any such procedure. In the notes received from the German government last night, and to which the Allies immediately dispatched negative replies, the German government engages to fulfill the conditions of peace but adds: Declines Responsibility.

"It, (the German republic) declines, however, in this solemn moment to express itself with unreserved clearness in order to meet in advance any accusation of untruthfulness that may now or later be made against Germany. The conditions imposed exceed the measure of that which Germany can in fact perform. The government of the German republic, therefore feels itself bound to announce that it makes all reservations and declines all responsibility which may be threatened against Germany, when, as is bound to happen, the impossibility of carrying out the conditions come to light, even though German capacity to fulfill it is stretched to the utmost."

The German government then follows with a statement refusing to recognize Germany's sole responsibility for the war and declining to impose burdens upon her on the score of responsibility. It further declares it impossible for a German to "reconcile it with his dignity and honor to accept and execute articles 227 to 239 which Germany is required to give up to the allied and associated power for trial individuals among the German people who are accused by the allied and associated powers for the breach of international law and of committing acts contrary to the customs of war."

Another Protest. The German government also protests against the taking away of her colonial possessions "and against the reasons given, therefore," which permanently deny to Germany fitness for colonial activity.

The German government, the note adds, believes itself to be entitled to address the following modest request to the allied and associated governments in the expectation that the allied and associated governments will consider the following declaration as an integral part of the treaty:

Hopes for Another Trial. "Within two years, counting from the day when the treaty is signed, the allied and associated governments will submit the present treaty to the high council of the powers as constituted by the league of nations, according to article four for the purpose of subsequent examination. Before this high council the German plenipotentiaries are to enjoy the same rights and privileges as the representatives of the other contracting powers of the present treaty. This council shall decide in regard to those conditions of the present treaty which impair the rights of self-determination of the German people and also in regard to the stipulation whereby the free economic development of Germany on a footing of equal rights is impeded.

SAYS FORD WAS MILITANT AMERICAN ONCE HE GOT STARTED ON WAR PATH

Testimony in Big Libel Suit Shows that Auto Maker Refused All Profits on War Contracts—Is Called "Rotten American" by Tribune Witness.

Mr. Clemens, Mich., June 23.—The last session of the Ford-Tribune libel suit was devoted principally to hearing the testimony of Henry A. Wise Wood, inventor and preparedness propagandist of New York, and Willis J. Abbott, literary man of New York, both of whom were called by the Tribune.

The testimony of Mr. Wood was designed to show Henry Ford in the light of an "unreasonable, uninformed and uncompromising foe of any effort to put the nation in a position to resist itself against aggression; while the testimony of Mr. Abbott was designed to portray Mr. Ford as one of the most useful and militant of Americans in fighting the country's war against Germany.

The apparent intention of Tribune counsel in thus offering witnesses to conditions so diametrically opposed, was to show that at the time the Tribune was criticizing Mr. Ford he was exercising an influence inimical to the country's welfare, but that afterward, and presumably as a result, partly at least, of the Tribune's criticism, Mr. Ford was driven to do his duty.

It may be recalled that Attorney Kirkland, for the Tribune, stated earlier in the case that "Henry Ford is not the only man who has changed his course as a result of newspaper criticism."

The testimony given by Henry A. Wise Wood was colored by much animus against Henry Ford, much contempt for his opinions and a very pronounced disposition to cast aspersions on Mr. Ford's efforts to improve the conditions of his employees. So apparent was this temper on the part of the witness, that Judge Tucker cautioned him as follows:

The Court: "This is entirely out of order, witness, and you should not repeat it. You are not a boy, but a man grown."

The bulk of Mr. Wood's testimony was of a character made familiar by the more aggressive militant propagandists in 1915 and 1916. Mr. Wood knew of 134 places on the Atlantic coast where the Germans could land troops for an invasion of this country; he believed that "our navy was inferior in size and in personnel"; "that we had no army that could be called an army"; that the United States was an "unpleasant terms with a greater part of the world; and that we were in danger of being attacked and made to pay the whole cost of the European war."

By speech, publication, letter and interview. Mr. Wood took much

A. "I mentioned Mexico, and Mr. Ford said that the trouble in Mexico was being made by the bankers; that he himself had been approached by a syndicate to become part of it to make trouble in Mexico."

Q. "Did you inquire what that syndicate was?" A. "I asked him who it was, and he refused to tell me."

The cross-examination of Mr. Wood was not completed because, as Ford counsel explained, they had no knowledge that this interview was to be brought up, and Mr. Lucking asked for time to consult with Henry Ford about it.

Mr. Stevenson (for the Tribune)—"I submit that the proper place for a client is here, to do his consulting with."

The Court—"He is not here, anyway, and it is not necessary that he should be here, that I know of."

Mr. Murphy—"Mr. Ford has some other things to do."

The Court—"I understand."

Mr. Lucking—"Nearly all the evidence so far has been on matters that did not require any special consultation with us, we are just as well informed on."

The Court—"I understand."

One of the points brought out on cross-examination was that Mr. Wood, in spite of his zealous desire to help the country, resigned his appointment on the Naval Consulting Board after four months service.

He intimated that the Secretary of the Navy had not told the truth, but he denied that such an intimation was in the nature of an altercation; therefore he insisted throughout his testimony that he did not resign as the result of an altercation.

Willis J. Abbott, who described himself as "a literary man in general" said he interviewed Mr. Ford in the summer of 1917 saw the Ford plants turning out great quantities of war material, helmets, airplanes, motors, caissons, ambulances, and other munitions.

He testified the Eagle plant where Henry Ford had built a special sub-building yard without cost to the government and was turning out submarine chasers at cost.

He quoted from his conversation with Mr. Ford to the effect that he had reached the conclusion that the best way to end all war was to smash the most militant of the nations, which was Germany, and thereafter make such peace terms as would render war forever impossible.

Mr. Ford was not making a cent of profit out of his various war works, said Mr. Abbott. On contracts where Mr. Ford's partners were involved and where the partners had not waived their profit, Mr. Ford's share of the profits were returned to the government. On contracts which Mr. Ford took for factories controlled exclusively by himself and his son, all government contracts were written for the exclusion of all profits.

Mr. Abbott said that Mr. Ford was one of the most militant Americans he had ever met, and worked constantly on new ideas for the more effective prosecution of the war. He said that Henry Ford frequently stayed until 2 o'clock in the morning with the night shifts in his factories, and gave more personal
