TWENTY-TWO SAILORS DEAD, SEVEN DESTROYERS WRECKED

U. S. Squadron Goes on Rocks off Pacific Coast in Fog—Greatest Peace Disaster in History.

San Francisco, Cal., Sept. 10.—Twenty-two dead, scores injured and seven destroyers wrecked, today marks the greatest loss in a single disaster to the United States navy in peace times. In an almost impenetrable blanket of fog, the destroyers Delphy, Young, Spies, Nicholas, Fuller, Chauncey and Woodbury, in single file formation, plied up on the treacherous rocks off Pedernales Point, two miles from the Point Arguello lighthouse in Santa Barbara county. All seven destroyers, one of the finest of the fleet, were on the rocks.

Busy Police Court Session This Morning—Mostly Cases of Intoxication—Blue Line Jitney Man Discharged.

Six cases were scheduled to come before Judge Johnson in Police Court this morning, and of the six, five were tried and one was continued. Robert McGinness was charged with driving an automobile while under the influence of liquor. In company with Thomas Kelly he was driving on North Main street yesterday afternoon and ran into the stone bridge just below the Cheney power house. It was almost a miracle that the machine did not topple into the Hockanum river. McGinness was arrested by Officer Barton and in court this morning pleaded guilty. A fine of $125 and costs was imposed, which was paid.

German Passive Resistance Is Entering Its Last Phase

Dusseldorf, Germany, Sept. 10.—"German passive resistance in the Ruhr has entered its last phase," General De Grouette, the French commander, told International News today in an exclusive interview. "There is no longer any real heart and swing in it. The Germans have been cooking their own goose—cutting their own throats. The cost of this resistance has been running German finances. The longer passive resistance lasts, the more difficult it will be for Germany to resume. When we came into the Ruhr I did not think the Germans would keep up resistance this long. I thought the German industrialists were too intelligent to pursue this suicidal policy. To Prove Boomerang. "This resistance will prove a terrible boomerang to them. It is a warning to the workers just as quickly as it did against us. "Nothing is so dangerous as to get the workers accustomed to away their time while idling away their time. The German policy of paying the Ruhr workmen preposterous wages for doing nothing will take awful vengeance when industry resumes operation." The correspondent asked General De Goutte if he believed indirect negotiations already were under way between Germany, France and Belgium. "I do not know, but I think it is most unlikely because the French government has repeatedly made known that it will listen only to concrete proposals," replied the French commander. "Such proposals have not been made up to date so far as I know." Asked what he thought of the conciliatory speeches Chancellor Stresemann has been making, General De Goutte answered: "Chancellor Stresemann's tone is better than that used by former Chancellor Cuno, but speeches have not a diplomatic value. They cannot be regarded as direct proposals. One does not make peace treaties with speeches." General De Goutte was asked next if he was satisfied with the results of Franco-Belgian occupation. He answered: "As I told the American public through International News early this year, I never doubted the success of occupation. Tranquility prevails throughout the Ruhr. The mood of the population is sullen, not ugly nor provisory as it was the first few months. We are carrying out our program without haste. Just now we are taking measures to safeguard coal production even if passive resistance by the Germans should continue. We have already taken the production of coke into our own hands."

THRILLING STORIES TOLD BY THE CREWS

Sailors Calm When Seven U. S. Destroyers Crash on Rock on the Pacific Coast. Los Angeles, Cal., Sept. 10.—Thrilling eye-witness stories that rival the most weird fiction, were unfolded here today as the 517 salvaged souls, refugees of the crash of seven United States warships on the rocks near Point Arguello passed through Los Angeles on a special train en route to San Diego, where the squadron was headed when the wreck occurred Saturday night. The men and officers, half clothed and crammed into nine passenger coaches, many of them strewn in the aisles of the coaches, craved but two things—something to eat and some sleep. Every man showed signs of hardship and many of them wore bandages. One of the most tragic stories told by the sailor survivors was that of "Squad" Pierson, fireman first class of the U. S. S. Delphy, who lost the sight in both eyes when cut by his glasses which were broken as he was washed overboard. Pierson was rescued, but upon being brought on deck, lost his mind and was again lost when the ship was broken in two. All members of the crew gave unstinted praise to Commander W. L. Calhoun, in command of the U. S. S. Young which was tipped over within a minute and a half after she had crashed on the rocks. Commander Calhoun, the men said, ordered every man to remain calm and stay aboard, which they obeyed without the slightest hesitation as an illustration of the spirit of the men while facing apparent death in a fog that was as dense as was ever experienced on the Southern California coast. Members of the crew of the Destroyer Young started whistling and singing their favorite songs. Many of the men were modest and refused to discuss their actions but were anxious to relate the heroism of others. One of these thrilling stories was told of Chief Boatwain's Mate Peterson, who swam to the Young from the Destroyer Chauncey. Peterson, his face still begrimed with grease and his clothes wet, modestly denied he "did a thing" but was anxious to praise Commander Calhoun, whom he and the other men declared was the outstanding hero of the disaster because of the masterful manner in which he handled his crew. Narrow Escape. Another thrilling account was that of I. T. Scotty, fireman first class, who remained aboard the

TO EXHUME BODY OF STRANG BOY

Windham, N. Y., Sept. 10.—Solution of the murder of seven-year-old Howard Rothenberg of New-ark, N. Y., was today believed to be near. The authorities announced that evidence in their possession warranted the arrest of one person. Action was to be delayed until after the boy's body is exhumed at Newark tomorrow and an autopsy performed. Detectives say two persons participated in the strangling of the child. Reconstructing the crime, the detectives say that the child was killed in a barn at the rear of Cedar Lawn cottage, where he lived with his mother, his aunt, Mrs. Esther Litt, and Anna Sobin, a sixteen-year-old nurse girl. The body was carried from the barn, the detectives believe, placed in a buggy and taken to the spot where it was found later. Police announced they knew the names of the persons involved. Evidence in the case will be made public after the autopsy the authorities stated. Mrs. Litt remained at the cottage today, while two deputy sheriffs and a constable stood guard. "If they think I am guilty why don't they arrest me?" she demanded.

ROBERT N. VEITCH FOR REGISTRAR

Popular Young Man Out for Nomination on Republican Ticket.

Robert N. Veitch, republican candidate for registrar of voters, assisted by several of his friends, is putting in some active work to land the nomination for that office at the primaries next Tuesday.

Mr. Veitch has never sought political honors for himself before, but has aided other of our citizens to become office holders. Twenty years ago he worked for Judge H. O. Bowers in the latter's candidacy for judge of the local town court and since that time has been active for other office seekers. He has made a study of the town's voting list each year and is well acquainted with the voting list. His friends believe him well qualified to fill the position of registrar and are working hard to land him the nomination.

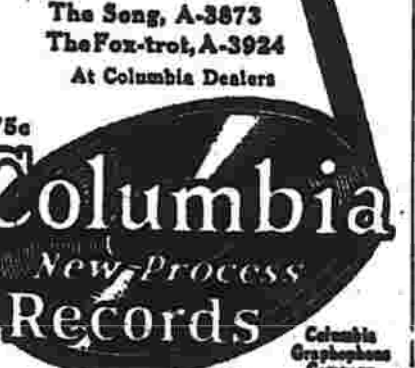

Mr. Veitch is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James Veitch of Church street, was born in South Manchester and has always lived here. He was educated in the local schools and when young went to work for Cheney Brothers. Later he entered the Morse Business College, after winning a scholarship, taking a commercial course. For four and one-half years he was employed in the bookkeeping department of the Plimpton Manufacturing Company in Hartford. He then entered the auditing department of the Aetna Fire Insurance Company, where he is still employed. Mr. Veitch is popular with old and young alike and no doubt will prove a good vote getter. Many of the older politicians are working for his success at the primaries next Tuesday.—Adv.

JAPANESE DISASTER RECEIVED BY RADIO

Radio communication once again has demonstrated in the eyes of the world how indispensable an institution it has become in serving mankind during great emergencies.

It was radio that flashed across the Pacific the first news of the horrible disaster visited upon the people of Japan when earthquakes and fire laid ruin to two of the principal cities of the island, Tokio and Yokohama.

When the first shock was felt and fires set the cities ablaze the powerful transmitting station at Haranomachi established communication with the high power station of the Radio Corporation of America at San Francisco and messenger details of the catastrophe as they were received at the corporation's station were delivered at once to the Associated, International and United Press.

The first message received by the radio station at San Francisco reads as follows: "Confirgation subsequent to severe earthquake at Yokohama at noon today whole city practically ablaze with numerous casualties all traffic stopped."

The violence of the earthquake soon after crippled the telegraph lines which link Tokio and Yokohama. Thus, the only channels of direct communication with San Francisco, the radio system, were isolated from the scene of the disaster until a swift courier system could be established.

Brief bits of news continued to reach the radio station in Japan from press correspondents in Tokio and Yokohama by whatever routes that were spared. Some of the messages were written in Japanese which necessitated translation into English by the radio station staff before transmission. At the same time messages began to pour in from the San Francisco radio station for immediate delivery to Tokio and Yokohama, many of them for other parts of the island. Since the earthquake centered around Tokio and Yokohama and it is quite doubtful whether the actual telegraph wires were damaged along their entire length. Short sections of the line could be repaired in a short time but the telegraph building, in which most of the wires radiating to all parts of the island terminated, was completely demolished leaving the telegraph system in a hopeless condition.

During these most severe disturbances in Tokio and Yokohama, however, the radio link between the two mighty stations separated by the vast expanse of the Pacific maintained constant communication with each other. Respecting neither the tremendous quaking of the earth, the swelling of the seas which swallowed many of the vessels in Japanese waters or the raging fires that consumed thousands of dwellings, radio waves were dispatched with the utmost speed, all messages that reached the station from the interior. Yonemura not only supervised the operators at his station, but was unexpectedly called into service as a translator of the messages which were sent over the radio circuit from Japan.

It was perhaps by some strange freak that the Japanese radio station did not suffer damage. Fear was expressed that the giant concrete mast rising to 800 feet and which supports the antenna at the station might be rocked by the earthquake and shattered into bits. Fortunately, however, it weathered the test, perhaps due to its exceptional construction which combines both steel and concrete.

Although the telegraphic facilities from the Japanese radio station at Tokio and Yokohama have been completely wiped out, services at other points inland is still intact. There is no question but that Japanese engineers are sparing no effort to restore the more important telegraph lines feeding inland from the radio plant. Since the military branch of the Japanese government is actively promoting internal radio telegraph service, it is quite possible that an emergency radio relay system will be set up in the devastated regions for communication with the big station near the coast.

The largest radio station in Japan which communicates with the United States consists of a receiving unit at Tomioka and a transmitting set at Haranomachi. The distance between Tokio, Tomioka and Haranomachi is 155 and 178 miles respectively. The equipment used at the Japanese receiving station is essentially the same as that used at Riverhead, Long Island by the Radio Corporation of America and was supplied by that company to the Japanese government last year. The well-known "Wave" antenna which is nine miles in length is employed for reception on 16,300 meters. The transmitting station utilizes a 500-kilowatt arc set for communication on 14,800 meters. It was erected in 1921 and surpasses in power all the radio stations on the island. This transmitter is controlled from the receiving station at Tomioka by a system of land wires which were not severed by the earthquake. The Japanese radio authorities consider both the transmitting and receiving set as a unit which is known as the Iwaki plant.

The radio station of the Radio-

Corporation of America at San Francisco which forms the Pacific States terminal of the trans-Pacific circuit is made up of a Radio-Clayton Alexander Althaus and its associated control apparatus situated at Bolinas, California, 23 miles northwest of San Francisco. The receiving unit is located 25 miles from San Francisco in the same direction. Both receiving and transmitting stations are controlled from the central office in the business section of the city.

FIRE IN FREIGHT YARD

A fire in the Manchester freight yard last evening about nine o'clock called out the North End Firemen. A still alarm was sent in and No. 1's chemical truck was run to the freight station. The fire was in a small shed near the road oil station. It was of unknown origin and for a short time made a hot blaze. The tires on one of the trucks at the station were destroyed. The men of No. 1 used the chemical, as well as turning on the water, and had the blaze under control. Comparatively few people knew about the fire until it was all over.

The Rev. Raymond A. Beardslee, pastor of the Second Congregational church, of which Mr. Card was a deacon, officiated and paid a high tribute to his life and example.

Among the many beautiful offerings were set pieces from the neighbors, the Red Men of Bristol, the local Odd Fellows and his Sunday school class of about twenty young men. Very fittingly the bearers were chosen from this class and were: Corwin Grant, Calvin Davison, Joseph Pohiman, Donald McPherson, Stuart Segar and Alvin Taylor.

The interment was in the family plot in the West Cemetery, Bristol.

In addition to the wide variety of fancy and useful articles there will be a tempting display of cakes, pies and other home made foods prepared by the good cooks of the Grange.

Tuesday night will be Grange night and there will be old-fashioned and modern dancing with music by Koptaine's six piece orchestra and prompting by Professor Beebe. Beardslee instead of adhering to the subject "Majorities and Principles," spoke in eulogy of the life and example left by Mr. Card, and the text he was wont to occupy, was filled with members of the class of young men who had the privilege of having him as teacher. The music also was appropriate to the service.
