

WORLD COURT FLAMES ANEW IN THE SENATE

Invitation of League to Discuss Reservations Revives Fight in All Its Original Bitterness.

Washington, March 19.—The spectacular fight over the World Court, once thought ended when the Senate voted American adherence, was revived today with all its old bitterness and virulence—and some new.

The invitation from the Council of the League of Nations for an American commission to come to Geneva in September and discuss with the League the reservations which surround America's entrance has fanned the coals of opposition into roaring flame again. There is a division of opinion among constitutional authorities as to whether the state department can send such a negotiating commission without the express authorization of the Senate.

The pro-couriers are inclined to consider the dispatch of such a commission as merely a means of accomplishing something the Senate already has agreed to, but the irreconcilables hold no such view. They pointed today to the rider tacked on the treaty of peace with Germany which prohibits the executive branch of the government from sending delegates to any foreign conference without the Senate's consent. And they served notice they intend to fight any contrary proceedings, tooth and nail.

Colonel Coolidge Dead at 10.41 Last Night While Son Was on Way—Latter Gets News at Bridgeport; Stands Dry Eyed at Coffin This Morning—Funeral to Be Held Tomorrow.

Plymouth, Vt., March 19.—While the President's special train was rushing toward this northern country and while it was still within the borders of New York state and approaching the Connecticut line, Col. John C. Coolidge, the President's father, breathed his last, at 10.41 o'clock last night. More than an hour later, as the special made its first stop since leaving New York's Grand Central station, at Bridgeport, a newspaper man on the platform handed in a dispatch from this place to Washington and relayed to the President at the earliest opportunity.

Shortly after 10 o'clock this morning, the President, arriving here from Woodstock, stood, silent and dry eyed, by the coffin.

President Coolidge arrived at Woodstock at 6.40 this morning. Woodstock is 16 miles from the Coolidge homestead. There the presidential party had breakfast at the Woodstock Hotel.

In Com for Wars.
While the President was racing to the bedside, Col. Coolidge sank into a coma from which he never emerged and died at 10.41 p. m. With him was Dr. Albert M. Cram, who had remained at his side all day after reaching the house in answer to an emergency call at 6.30 a. m.

During the day he continued to fall and at about five o'clock it was certain he could not last long. His aged housekeeper, Miss Aurora Pierce, who had been with him for 20 years, had retired for the night when she was awakened and told that death was near.

It was deemed best that she be kept out of the death chamber and when the end came only the doctor, Mrs. Mary Johnson, the nurse, and Angus Macaulay, deputy sheriff bodyguard, were present.

About an hour and a half before the end, Miss Florence Cilley, proprietor of the general store which the colonel used to her, and her ward, Miss Viola Hickory, entered the house to take a last look at the dying man. They were the last persons outside the household to see him. They stayed but a few moments.

After the end came, Dr. Cram made several telephone calls, notifying the White House and sending for the undertaker, Willard D. Cabot, of Woodstock. The latter arrived about 12.30 and spent the remainder of the night preparing the body for burial.

The body reposes in the room where the father administered the oath of office to President Coolidge on the death of President Harding.

Paid Funeral Bill.
In the white cottage that was dearer to him than the White House in Washington, where he could have had a home, the old dominating figure of this town is still and cold, but the will that carried him all over obstacles is still felt.

The burial arrangements are being carried out as he ordered and paid for, before the mists fell about him. Willard D. Cabot, funeral director, his bill settled in full in advance, prepared the body for the visit of the President.

It lies in that part of the house where Calvin Coolidge, in the small hours of a chilly morning, by the light of an old-fashioned kerosene lamp, subscribed to the oath of President as administered to him from the lips of his own father.

Everything in the room today will remind President Coolidge of that night. The furniture, the pictures and the old family bible, even the kerosene lamp are there. The justice of peace who swore him in is there. He is no longer erect, but a prone figure, marble brown, on a bed of satin in a plain casket.

Engaged Grave Digger.
The grave on that hillside where all the other Coolidges lie will be opened tomorrow to receive the colonel. In this his will again works. He it was who called Arvo Johnson, town selectman, to his bedside a few days before he lost consciousness, and paid him to prepare the ground to receive his remains.

Johnson will tomorrow morning swing a heavy sledge on the hard surface after the snow is cleared off, to break the heavy frost crust. The only flag in town today is at half staff on the little school house that looks down on the colonel's

Who Was to Blame?

Just who was to blame for the accident which occurred yesterday morning when his auto was struck by a trolley car at North Main street and Stockhouse Road in the North End.

DECLARES PROSECUTION HAS NOTE WRITTEN BY EDITH MAE BURTON, SHOWING INTENT.

New York, March 19.—In accordance with a suicide pact agreed to over a bottle of Scotch a week before Christmas, Edith Mae Burton, for whose slaying Harry W. Cowan is being tried in Brooklyn County court, killed herself on the night of Dec. 23, 1925—so Cowan testified a jury to believe.

THE OTHER SIDE.

The other side of the argument is how Cullin, who crossed the tracks thousands of times, was not more careful before he drove on the tracks. It was also suggested that since the side curtains on his auto were in place that Cullin might not have heard the warning whistle.

A MYSTERY.

The mystery of the whole affair and something which may never be explained unless the victim recovers and he is in no condition to talk at present, is how he came to be under his auto when the trolley car was stopped. He could not have attempted to jump out as he did not have time. The trolley hit the right hand side of the auto and Cullin was in the driver's seat on the left hand side of the auto. The only plausible explanation is that the shock threw him out but that again does not seem possible for the curtains were in place even after the car was stopped. The door was open but it seems impossible for a big man like Cullin to slip through the small opening.

PRESIDENT HOURS TOO LATE TO SEE FATHER

Home from an eminence a little way to the west... President Reaches Home... Behind a pair of bay horses in a double-seated sleigh, Calvin Coolidge, President of the United States, came home today to attend the funeral of his father, Colonel John C. Coolidge.

As he stepped from the sleigh a long streamer of purple ribbon surmounted by a green wreath at the door bespoke the tragedy. The president motored from Woodstock to Bridgewater, where, because of the poor condition of the roads, the party transferred to horse drawn sleighs.

Dry-Eyed The President arrived at 10:10 this morning. He went straight into the little parlor where he gazed in dry-eyed sorrow at what remained of his old father.

Mrs. Coolidge stood on the other side, tears welling into her eyes. They only stayed in the room a few moments then, going into the sitting room so filled with memories, where they talked with Dr. Albert Crum about the Colonel's last hours.

Funeral Tomorrow Col. Coolidge will be buried at two o'clock tomorrow as announced after the President's arrival. The announcement was made by Captain Adolphus Andrews, naval aide to the president.

Burial will be at the little cemetery, the Rev. Dr. John White, Episcopal minister, the Colonel's pastor, will conduct the services. The ceremonies will be as simple as possible and only close relatives will attend.

The party of mourners from the White House is small. Accompanying the President only were Mrs. Coolidge, Attorney General Sargent and Major General J. F. Campbell. White House physician and John Coolidge, son of the President.

The fateful message containing news of his father's death was delivered to President Coolidge at 11:50 P. M. when the special paused at Bridgeport. The secret service operative, James Haley, who accepted the telegram, knocked at the door of the President's compartment, expecting to awaken him. Instead he found him fully clothed and apparently awaiting just such a word.

Soldiers Guard Road When the news of the approach of the President's party reached here, eighteen members of Company B of the 172d Infantry who pulled into Plymouth after midnight, marched down the Bridge-water road to shut off all travel. The eighteen were joined on the Woodstock end of the road by a company of National Guardsmen from that town.

Hazardous Travel The dash from Washington was accompanied by hazards probably not experienced by any President of modern times. At 6:30 o'clock this morning the special train reached Woodstock. The thermometers registered zero. Snow was banked to a height of five and six feet on either side of the specially-ordered roadway.

Following breakfast and a brief rest, the presidential party undertook the negotiation of the remaining sixteen miles of the journey over the mountains. The first stage was comparatively easy, for huge snowplows had cut a way through as far as Bridgewater Corners. From there on, however, the trip had to be made by hob-sleigh, itself, however, and he rallied, refusing even to admit he was ill. The strain, though, was too much and he never completely recovered.

A "block heart" and poor blood circulation which created a condition of partial paralysis, added to the original trouble, brought about relapse after relapse until he finally died.

GRANDSON FLAGS TRAIN

Has Special Stopped at Northampton and Joins Party. Northampton, Mass., March 19.—John Coolidge, son of the President and Amherst college student, by telephone early today succeeded in flagging the Presidential special enroute to Vermont.

Arriving here by trolley car after being informed of his grandfather's death by a Springfield newspaper, young Coolidge discovered that the Washington special was not scheduled to stop here. John got the train dispatcher at Springfield on the telephone and arranged to have the train halt here. From midnight to three a. m. John waited on the station platform until the special arrived and took him aboard.

Called from bed in his rooming house at Amherst by his landlady, Mrs. Emma F. Lindsey, young Coolidge went to the telephone and was told by a Springfield newspaper man of the passing of his grandfather.

"That's too bad, but thank you very much," said John. Arriving here by trolley car he discovered that the presidential special would not stop. By telephone, John learned that the train would stop at Springfield and he made all arrangements with the Boston and Maine railroad train dispatcher there. At Springfield the locomotive developed a "hot box" and was delayed half an hour.

For three hours, in the cold of the early morning, young Coolidge paced the Northampton station railroad platform, entering the station now and then to get warm.

cial privilege that he personally was permitted to administer the oath of office to the boy he had brought to maturity. Co. Son. Costless and colorless, he had assembled his little family group in the simple living room of the ancestral home, and, under the flickering light of a single oil lamp swung in his son as President of the United States.

Col. Coolidge was born at Plymouth March 31, 1846. As a boy he aided his father in farming—at that time New England agriculture had not yet the effects of western competition. Later, the family confined themselves largely to the making of maple sugar and the production of milk for the making of butter and cheese.

An elementary education was received in the township public school, followed by four years at Black River Academy in Ludlow, twelve miles distant.

In 1868, he married Victoria Josephine Moore and set up the general store at the Plymouth crossroads, which still stands and prospers. Four years later, the President was born, and in 1875, a daughter, named Abbie Grace.

Entirely Politically. In 1872, Col. Coolidge made his first bid for political recognition and was elected to the State House of Representatives, where he served continuously for 23 years.

While the mercantile business lost its appeal to the President's father, and the same year he retired from the Legislature he sold out to his partner, F. C. Moore and turned his attention to small business and a more active participation in township affairs.

Mrs. Coolidge, never a strong woman, died in 1885, and in 1890, their daughter, Abbie, also died. One year after Abbie's death, Col. Coolidge re-married, taking as bride another Plymouth girl, Carrie A. Brown, who died in 1920, the same year her step-son received the Vice-Presidential nomination.

Gets Title of "Colonel." It was during the gubernatorial term of William W. Stickney that the President's father received the title of "Colonel." The two were old friends, and the Governor appointed him to his staff.

In 1919, the Colonel returned to public life, serving one term in the State Senate, his last state office. Thereafter, up to the time of his death, he remained close to his home, writing life insurance and serving as Vice-President of the Ludlow Savings Bank and Trust Company.

Endowed with almost superhuman physique that is characteristic of the Green Mountains, Col. Coolidge, despite his advanced years, performed all of his own work clear up to the summer of 1925.

With the elevation of Calvin Coolidge to the Presidency, however, Plymouth and the Coolidge home there became a show place and stopping point on all tourist routes.

Plymouth Is Mecca. Added to his usual tasks, the Colonel found himself besieged daily by hundreds of visitors desirous of shaking his hand and engaging him in conversation.

The daily strain, coupled with his age, finally told on the President's father, and early in July of 1925, he succumbed to a kidney ailment that necessitated an immediate operation. His life was despaired of, and the President, summing at Swampscott, Mass., rushed by special train and automobile to the bedside.

Once more, the unyielding determination of the Coolidge asserted itself, however, and he rallied, refusing even to admit he was ill. The strain, though, was too much and he never completely recovered.

A "block heart" and poor blood circulation which created a condition of partial paralysis, added to the original trouble, brought about relapse after relapse until he finally died.

ELKS SEE FINE SHOW AT STATE

Vaudeville. Bill Last Three Days One of the Best Since Re-Opening. Close to 500 members of the Rockville lodge of Elks with their wives or sweethearts saw the vaudeville and picture program at the State theater last night.

A large number of local Elks, members of the Rockville lodge were in attendance. The theater was crowded for the show.

The week-end bill at the State is one of the best that has been presented since the re-opening under the Hoffman Brothers management. Every act is good and the motion picture "Gilded Butterflies" is in keeping with the quality of the rest of the bill.

The show opens with a Lloyd Hamilton comedy. Hamilton has arisen to the top ranks in making comedy pictures and the one on this bill is one of the best he has made.

Following the comedy a news reel is shown. This feature picture presents Alma Rubens and Bert Lytell, two stars with hosts of admirers, in a clever story of a girl who almost has to pay dearly for taking a high-flying life.

There is a good plot to the story and Miss Rubens does some excellent acting. The first vaudeville act is one of the best comedy acrobat stunts ever seen here.

The Three Saltos, two men and a girl, do some new stunts and the comedian of the act does a twisting somersault that is hard to see through. Followers of the Powerful Katrinka, Fontaine Fox's clever character, will appreciate the work the lady in the act puts over.

Lyle and Virginia play about everything there is in the musical line. Virginia proves to be a good dancer and their line of songs and patter is put across the lights in a good way.

As has been the most unusual act that has been presented here is the CIRCLE. 2 Days ONLY START To-morrow

While the defense has not disclosed its plan of campaign, early witnesses were such as to indicate that the bulk of the evidence will be for the purpose of establishing the alibis of the four co-defendants of Dumini, namely, Albino Volpi, Giuseppe Viola, Amedeo Poveromo and Augustus Malacra.

Hotel servants were placed upon the stand to testify as to the whereabouts of these defendants at the time of the Matteotti kidnaping.

REPORTERS AGAIN STRIKE CASUALTIES

Passaic Police Smash Cameras, Slub One Writer in Melee With "Picketers." Washington, March 19.—An appeal to striking textile workers of Passaic, N. J., to "get together" and adjust their differences was made today by Senator Edge, Republican of New Jersey.

Edge ignored a telegram from Albert Welshoff, whom he called an "outside agitator seeking publicity." Any communication from New Jersey citizens will "receive immediate attention," however, he said.

Another clash between the police and the striking textile workers in Passaic, the most serious since the outbreak three weeks ago, when many persons, including newspaper men, were beaten, occurred yesterday afternoon as 1500 strikers attempted to picket the Gera Textile Mills.

Fifty policemen and detectives were stationed in front of the mills to greet the two armies of strikers. As the groups of strikers converged in front of the mills, waving clubs defiantly, the police swooped upon them, charging the crowd of strikers on horseback and on foot.

While police swung clubs right and left, strikers retaliated by throwing bricks and stones and clubs, according to the police. Horses on Sidewalks. The police rode their mounts upon the sidewalks in their endeavor to drive back the marchers and the strikers ran into the streets hoping to get past the police.

Police ordered workers just let out from the mills to proceed away from the scene. But the strikers, evidently determined to get near

WORKERS RUSHED PAST POLICE, DODGING SWINGING CLUBS

Once again newspaper men were the victims of the clash. While they were endeavoring to take pictures police descended upon them with their clubs, beat one newspaper man and destroyed four cameras and one motion picture camera owned by Fox News.

Attack Armored Car. One "armored" car, in which a reporter and two photographers of the New York Journal were, was attacked by the police; the windows were broken open, a camera was smashed and George Ward, Journal reporter, was beaten. A camera was smashed by police from the hands of Martin J. McEvilly of the Daily News and smashed. Martin Gold was operating a Fox News motion picture camera when police smashed it with clubs. Two other News cameras were smashed.

Strikers Driven Back. The police finally, after half an hour of battling with the strikers, drove them back to the Dundee station of the Erie railroad, five blocks from the Gera Mills, where the strikers disbanded.

Police reported they were forced to charge the strikers because the latter threw bricks, stones and clubs at them. Women, police said, were chiefly the offenders. It was said five policemen had to be treated for lacerations and abrasions.

Eleven persons, four of them women, were arrested during the clash. STAGE HOLDUP WITHIN SIGHT OF WHITE HOUSE. Washington, March 19.—A daring holdup of two clerks in a cigar store across the street from the United States Treasury, made Washington gas today. Perry August Smith, 28, former clerk in the store, was arrested early today charged with the robbery.

The robbery, in the heart of the downtown theatre district and within sight of the White House, was staged while hundreds were passing. The bandit stole $308.

Made to Harmonize

The easy comfort which distinguishes the Cantilever Shoe is due to a flexible arch and to lasts that closely follow the natural lines of the foot. No forcing of the foot to adjust itself to an artificial design. No restriction of the foot when you walk. The Cantilever arch contains no metal, like ordinary shoes. It flexes with the foot!

Gives Flexible Support
The shank or arch of the Cantilever is all leather—not stiffened with a concealed strip of hard metal. It allows the muscles to flex freely in walking, permitting the natural exercise which produces good health. Upon the condition of these muscles, the strength of your foot arches depend! (your arches are formed of small, movable bones held in position by muscles and ligaments).

The support so welcomed by tired or weakened muscles is afforded by the sprung-up leather arch of the Cantilever. Especially by the oxfords, where lacing the shoe draws this flexible arch snugly up under the main arch of the foot, just where flexible support is needed.

NASH-AJAX ENJOY BIG SALES AT AUTO SHOW

With the automobile show season in large metropolitan centers drawing to a close a survey of Nash-Ajax retail sales at the principal shows this year presents an illuminating picture of the gathering momentum that forced February production to 14,148 cars. Everywhere last year's record show business has been eclipsed by the bona fide retail sales of 1925. Shows in 14 of the principal cities record an average gain of 116.3 per cent.

"The automobile show, generally speaking, is an excellent barometer of public attitude toward a given make of car," said E. H. McCarty, general sales manager of The Nash Motors and Ajax Motors Companies. "And the public favor with which Nash and Ajax are regarded was never more apparent than at the present time. Not only were the Nash-Ajax exhibits at all shows, centers of attraction but public endorsement was made emphatic by a record-breaking number of bona fide retail orders.

Because of the country-wide demand, February, the shortest month of the year, with but 24 working days, was the greatest month in the history of the Nash Motors Company.

Increased production, even over the record-breaking February figure, is under way at all Nash-Ajax plants.

A puncture-proof inner tube for automobile tires has been invented. It is made of pure sponge rubber.

NORTH METHODISTS IN ANNUAL MEETING

Church in Excellent Financial Standing, According to Reports.

A goodly number of the North Methodist church family gathered around the supper tables in the vestry of the church last night and listened to reports of the various organizations. It was the annual meeting, held somewhat later in the year than usual.

The tables were attractively decorated in green and in the center of each was a vase of pussy willows. The meal included boiled ham, delicious salads in great variety, baked beans, relishes, rolls, coffee and home-made cake in abundance.

At the close of the meal, Rev. John E. Duxbury suggested that the grand march to the kitchen be formed, everybody removing their own dishes. The tables were thus quickly cleared before the members resumed their seats for the business meeting.

Chorus Singing.
There was chorus singing of favorite hymns, with Miss Evelyn Clarke at the piano. The Misses Elizabeth and Beulah Filbig, pupils in the Sunday school, favored with a number of mandolin duets which were heartily applauded.

Rev. John E. Duxbury presided and gave a report of the church which shows a gain in membership above removals both by death and letters to other churches. He stressed the importance of church and Sunday school work as the most important in the world. Mr. Duxbury is also superintendent of the Sunday school. He called attention to a blackboard chart giving the attendance of classes and teachers since the first of the year. The showing was a most creditable one considering the number of stormy Sundays.

E. A. Lydall, assistant superintendent, spoke in a reminiscent vein, calling attention to the childhood game of "Follow Your Leader." He bespoke loyalty of teachers and scholars for their leader, Mr. Duxbury.

Former Pastor Speaks.
Rev. E. P. Frazier, pastor of the church about thirty years ago said the North Methodist had a great Sunday school in his time, and the boys and girls of those days were the responsible men and women who were carrying on the work of the church today.

Reports showing the excellent shape of the church's finances were given by the financial secretary, Miss Beatrice Lydall, and the treasurer, Leon Holmes. Mr. Duxbury called attention to the meeting to the Every Member canvass which will take place next Sunday.

Interesting reports of the work and earnings of the Home Missionary society were given by Mrs. Daniel Barnes, and of the Foreign society by Mrs. Le Verne Holmes, the vice president.

Mrs. Thomas Smith reported for the Ladies' Aid society, gave a brief account of its activities during every month of the past year, summed up for the benefit of the church and the splendid balance in the treasury.

Mr. Duxbury reported for the Epworth League, in the absence of its president, Robert Shaw.

Mrs. Balch Reports.
Mrs. C. I. Balch, superintendent of the primary department, spoke of her happy family of about fifty little ones all about the same age, and the enthusiastic teachers associated with her, two of whom have been taking the course at the Teacher Training Institute.

Mrs. Fayette B. Clarke, Cradle Roll superintendent, reported a total of 35 enrolled, a smaller number than usual.

Mr. Duxbury spoke for the Home Department of the Sunday school in the absence of Miss Emma Colver who is in Florida. He also took the opportunity to thank the people of the church for the loyal help and support they had accorded to him.

"The Gilded Butterfly" is a story of a lovely society girl, raised to expect all the best things in life. She suddenly finds she has been reared under false pretenses and that her father, far from being a wealthy man, is heavily in debt to everyone he knows or is related to.

She knows no other way of living, and, after her father's death, goes on trying to keep up the pretense of wealth as he has done. Her attitude toward life changes when she falls in love with a young army officer. From then on the story moves to a thrilling and unexpected climax.

Bert Lytell and Huntly Gordon play opposite Miss Rubens in the principal roles. Others in the cast are Frank Keenan, Herbert Rawlinson, Vera Lewis, Arthur Hoyt and Margaret Campbell.

This is the second production to be directed for Fox Films by John Griffith Wray.

"GILDED BUTTERFLY" PICTURE AT STATE

Alma Rubens and Bert Lytell are co-starred in the latest Fox Films production, "The Gilded Butterfly," which opened a three days' engagement at the State theater. It is an excellent picture in which both Miss Rubens and Mr. Lytell are given rare opportunities to display their talents.

The State theater was filled to capacity when "The Gilded Butterfly" and five acts of selected vaudeville started its premier here, and judging from comments after the performance, the picture and vaudeville is sure to be the big attraction in this town during its stay here.

THEATER UPLIFT IS AIM

Paris—The church and state in France may be separated beyond hope of reconciliation, but the church and stage seem to be growing closer together. Recent weeks have been the formation of two Catholic associations for the uplift of the theater, and important members of France's leading theater, the Comedie Francaise, are active in each.

Funeral services for Mrs. Jessie (Ferguson) Waldo, widow of the late Loren A. Waldo, were held at the Congregational church in the center, Sunday at 2:30 p. m. The Rev. W. W. Malcomb assisted Elder C. P. Lillie of the Seventh Day Advent church. Mr. Lillie preached a sermon from the text, "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints." Mrs. Waldo was for many years a nurse. She was a native of Scotland and a member of the Advent church. She was 71 years of age. Interment was in St. Peter's cemetery. Among relatives present from out of town were David Waldo and his wife, and Harold Waldo, step-children of Mrs. Waldo. She was a woman of exemplary character and had many friends.

At a church meeting held at the close of the morning service at the Congregational church it was voted to give Mrs. Lulu Lord and her daughter Miss Esther, letters transferring their membership from the Center church here to that in South Manchester, their present home.

Mr. and Mrs. Alpheus Nye and their two sons of Fitchville were guests on Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. Sherwood Miner.

Eather and Morgan Lord visited their former home here on Saturday.

Randall Tennant was the leader at the weekly Christian Endeavor society Sunday evening. Among out of town visitors were Mrs. Addison Frink and daughter, Miss Esther.

Miss Julia Sztaba has returned to her home in Westchester after spending two weeks as the guest of Miss Daisy White.

Mrs. Helen White reports seeing a bluebird on Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Robinson were dinner guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. Walton Porter in Columbia on Sunday.

A church meeting will be held at the Center Congregational church next Saturday evening to fill the vacancy on the church committee left by the death of Roger F. Porter. Action will also be taken with regard to securing a resident clergyman in union with Gilead.

Supervisor Charles M. Larcomb has made an interesting compilation of the comparative costs of public schools of the state in towns of under 2,500 population, for the years 1923 and 1924, figures for these years being the latest available. In elementary school costs per pupil in average daily attendance Hebron comes 29th in 93 towns listed, spending $86.18 per pupil. High school costs to the town per pupil are $184.85, Hebron being 20th on the list. The town spends 10.12 mills of its taxation on its schools, which is 38.82 per cent of its entire tax expenditure. In wealth behind each pupil Hebron comes 67th on the list, with the average sum of $5,902 back of each pupil. A complete schedule of giving statistics for the 93 towns listed was presented to each member of the local school board by Mr. Larcomb. On the whole Hebron stands well in this list.

The birth last week of a son to Mr. and Mrs. Ira Turshen of Amston is reported.

Mrs. Della Porter is spending the week at her former home here as the guest of Mrs. W. O. Seyms. Her sons, Roger and Herbert Porter of Springfield spent the week end with her. Mrs. Porter and her sons visited the Porter cottages at Giant's Neck on Sunday.

Miss Alice Whitney was the week-end guest of her sister, Miss Grace Whitney in Franklin.

Among those attending the Lenten services at the Capitol theater in Williamstown on Sunday afternoon were Mr. and Mrs. W. O. Seyms and daughter Eunice, Mrs. George Mitchell, Mrs. Jared Tennant, Mrs. F. H. Raymond, Miss V. C. Hilding, Mrs. Gertrude Hough and Frank Bissell of East Hampton, who was the week-end guest of relatives.

The Misses Estelle and Gladys Broome of Hartford spent the week end at the home of their father, Paul Broome.

Mr. and Mrs. David Waldo of Shrewsbury, Mass., spent the week-end with Mr. Waldo's sister, Mrs. Paul Coates.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Higgins were visitors on Sunday at the home of Mrs. N. C. Johnson. Mrs. Johnson's mother, Mrs. Charles W. Stewart, returned with them to Hockanum.

The enumeration grant from the state, amounting to $475.88 has been received by the town treasurer.

Mr. and Mrs. Francis Raymond while driving in Hopkinton Tuesday met with an accident and narrowly escaped serious injury. The axle of their carriage broke while going down a steep hill. They were obliged to lead the horse and walk home.

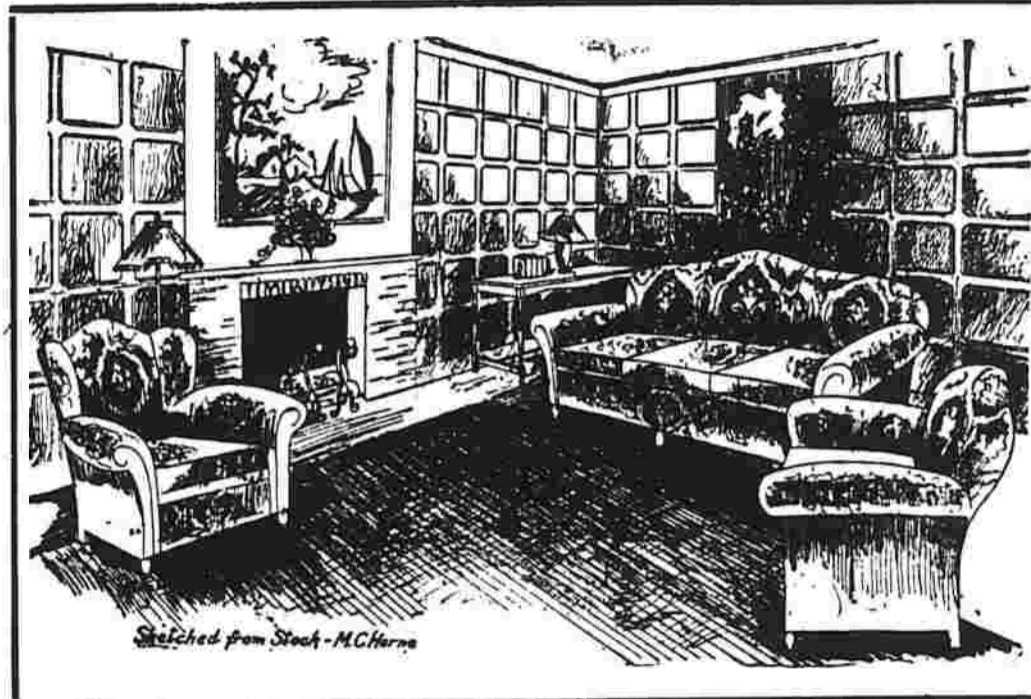

Supervisor Charles M. Larcomb is writing a series of articles for The American School Board Journal on educational topics. An article on the use of the radio for educational purposes written by him recently appeared in The Journal of Education.

GONE BUT LIVING. For the second time within the period of his service as President of the United States Calvin Coolidge is called on to bear bereavement in the death of one of his immediate family.

It was there, among these hills and snows, that old John Coolidge was at home. There every ledge and every rock, every tree and every clearing, every turn in the road, every house and barn, every human being, within miles, was part and parcel of existence to this man who had lived among them a long life time.

A simple, plain life this simple, plain American led. But now that he has gone it will be more and more realized that that life did not begin when he was born, but had its origin far back in pioneer generations; and that neither is it yet ended—for the influence and personality of the man who lived in the hills, taciturn father live on in the son. A gift to the nation.

NOTE!

The enterprise of knocking the Manchester bond issue into a cocked hat at tomorrow's election is silly enough, in all conscience, but the mere fact that it is silly will not alone guarantee its failure.

It does not in the least matter that the scheme of holding up the bonds could only result in still greater mental anguish to the crowd interested in delivering a K. O. to the bonds, by compelling them to pay a seven mill tax on top of the current 13 mill levy.

There is just one way in which such a nonsensical performance can be spiked. And that is by making tomorrow's election not the business of a handful but of the whole community.

Just see, Mr. Voter and Madam Voter, that you don't forget this matter. If you do, there's no telling what may happen.

TEETH FOR THE LAW.

What the state of New York does in the matter of revamping and strengthening its criminal code is bound to be of the keenest interest and of the greatest real importance to the rest of the country.

For one thing, double penalties are pretty sure to be imposed in cases where criminals use weapons in the commission of their crimes.

We have never had much sympathy with laws which make it difficult for decent people to bear arms in self defense, but any measure which effectually penalizes the carrying of guns, knives or blackjacks by crooks is good law.

The committee has recommended that sentences in robbery cases be increased—a crying need not only in New York; that separate trials for persons jointly indicted be denied—which is plain common sense; that the period of appeal be reduced; that a central criminal identification bureau be established; that bail be denied to persons accused of felonies if previous conviction can be shown; that specific steps, relating only to New York state, be taken for the acceleration of court operation.

Of greatest interest among all these reforms, perhaps, is the double sentence for armed felonies. Let these blithe young gunmen who so gaily go about the business of sticking up stores, banks, filling stations and the like, once realize that to be caught in just one of these operations will infallibly result in their being put away for twenty or thirty years, and the adventure may take on a somewhat more serious aspect.

GESTURE ON ARMS.

The decision of the Council of the League of Nations to go ahead with the preliminary conference in preparation for a disarmament parity, setting the date for the earlier meeting as May 17, comes as a surprise, for it was anticipated that the disaster at Geneva would have left the Council too discouraged to make even a gesture toward arms limitation at this time.

What attitude toward the conference will now be adopted by the United States is problematical. President Coolidge is known to be utterly opposed to participation in any discussion of disarmament which has not at least a fair chance of resulting in a worth-while agreement; and under the new circumstances there would seem to be little prospect of anything like a satisfactory outcome of a meeting so soon after the Geneva failure.

A May conference would seem foredoomed to bear no fruit whatever. The nations can get nowhere in such a delicate matter as disarmament until they are in a very different position toward each other politically from that which they occupy today.

It requires a good deal of effrontery for the Fascist government of Italy to conduct the kind of a trial that it is conducting over the Matteotti murder, in view of oft repeated predictions by anti-Fascist Italians that the trial would be just the kind of a farce that it now is. But then, if there is anything with which the Mussolini government is plentifully supplied it is that same quality of effrontery.

It Duce has not liked the smell of the Matteotti killing—not, that is, as the affair has offended the noses of the rest of the world—and has deemed it necessary to get that crime onto the record of his reign in such form that its odor would be less far reaching and persistent. Hence this so-called trial.

When it is all over Mussolini will slap himself on the chest, proclaim that the slanders of his enemies over Matteotti have been utterly disproved, and push the whole affair behind him as gloriously settled.

Nobody on earth, however, save the Fascist premier and his abject followers, is going to be deceived for a moment by any such clap-trap settlement of that sinister affair.

STEWART'S WASHINGTON LETTER

By CHARLES P. STEWART.

Washington, March 19.—Now comes the news that Louis P. Hanna of Fargo is a candidate for the North Dakota United States senatorship now held by Gerald P. Nye of Cooperstown.

Dispatches mention Hanna as an ex-member of the national house of representatives, an ex-governor of North Dakota, an ex-Red Cross official, a bank president, an "L.L.D.," a Congregationalist, a Mason, the proud possessor of the Norwegian grand cross (first rank) of St. Olaf and manager of the North Dakota Coolidge campaign in 1924.

Hanna was one of the very, very few national individuals who, by pure accident, went to Europe in 1915 with the Ford peace expedition.

Now the rational folks along with that expedition were the funniest part of it. The peace nuts were plain nutty and you expected them to act that way. But the rational ones, as soon as they realized what they were mixed up in, were wild to get out of it, so's to stop being made to look so ridiculous.

It's easy to see how Hanna was hooked. He was governor at the time. He got an invitation and it looked natural to him that he should get it, on the strength of his position. He was away out in North Dakota, where he didn't realize what a collection of freaks was being assembled for the peace drive.

Sam Clark of Jim Jam Jems to accompany him, as his private secretary (not that he had any secretarial work to do, but he meant it as a treat for Sam) and, at the last minute, the pair arrived at Hoboken and came aboard the Oscar II.

Sam's informant, to him, when he realized the truth, except that he sympathized with the governor in his affliction, the affair was enjoyable.

But Hanna shed real tears as he begged the newspaper men to tell him how he ever was going to explain satisfactorily to the North Dakota voters how he happened to set himself involved in such a thing. For Hanna's a big, impressive gent, and it's a calamity to him to be made a joke of.

Fellowship of Prayer

Daily Lenten Bible reading and meditation prepared for Commission on Evangelism of Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America.

FRIDAY Fruitfulness and Joy

Read Jn. 15:7-11. Text: 15:8. Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit.

Prayer.—O Master of the way of life, Free us from the passion for pleasure as the way to joy. Help us to seek out and serve others who lack the abundant life which Thou dost give. Give us this day a deeper experience of Thy delivering love that we may bear it to some other seeking and impoverished soul. Amen.

As soon as the peace party hit its port, Christiania (now Oslo), Norway, Hanna and Sam broke away and struck it for Copenhagen.

Well, in due season, as Hanna was convalescing, the peace party, too, landed in Copenhagen, and proceeded, in a body, to the Falster Hotel, the swiftest in town, led by the Rev. Dr. Jenkin Lloyd Jones, a very prominent "peacemaker," with a full set of old-fashioned, long, white whiskers.

At the hotel desk stood Sam. "Ah, Mr. Clark," boomed the "doc," in his deep pulpit voice, "How's Gov. Hanna?"

A THOUGHT

If punishment reaches not the mind and makes not the will supple, it hardens the offender.

IN NEW YORK

New York, March 19.—It takes but some trifling incident to prove how completely New York is dependent upon the outside world at which it sticks up its nose.

True it is that one may find almost anything one searches for in New York. New York is inclined to take all the glory for this and to forget that all these obtainable things came from elsewhere, and were that elsewhere to be cut off Manhattan could no longer make its proud boasts.

Now, take the humble tamale! From time to time, an appetite created in my wanderings from Los Angeles to El Paso demands a tamale, an enchilada, a tortilla—or what have you.

"Very sorry, sir," said the waiter. "But there is a shortage of corn husks and corn meal filling—you know what I mean. . . . the corn meal that a tamale is wrapped in!"

"Of course I know. But great heavens, do you mean to tell me that the great city of New York is dependent upon the outside world for such trifles as corn meal wrappings?"

"Yes, sir, they all come from Texas. We import them and there hasn't been a shipment. Train delayed, or something. Yes, there's a tamale shortage."

It seems they get little or no salary. On slow nights the tips run as low as $1.50 and on heavy nights they seldom run more than $10.

But the "little parties" who do get the easy change are the cigarette girls. Some years ago a Greenwich Village cafe and dance emporium specialized in beautiful cigarette girls. It was reported that a job as cigarette salesman at this place was almost a guarantee of marriage to some rich and eligible man within the month.

A big oleomargarine man I encountered the other night wept on my neck and confided that he had spent $200 on a certain cigarette beauty and had not so much as received a good night kiss.

SCENES IN LIFE AND PASSING OF PRESIDENT'S FATHER

Townfolk of Plymouth, Vt., turned out to clear the road from the railroad to town for the entry of President Coolidge who rushed today from Washington to the bedside of his dying father. The President made his way over the roads today.

"He is dead" is the word Deputy Sheriff Angus McQuaney (left) announced at the home of Col. John Coolidge in Plymouth, Vt., to neighbors.

History reserves a separate niche for John Calvin Coolidge, for to him came the thrill, experienced as yet by no other man, of inaugurating his own son President of the United States.

By the light of a little oil lamp he stood, this quiet, gaunt man of Vermont, and administered the oath that made his boy Calvin the nation's 30th chief executive. That was on August 3, 1923, and the time was 2:30 in the morning.

Immediately he flashed into national prominence. Word went out of Plymouth that Colonel Coolidge, a justice of the peace, had administered the presidential oath on the Coolidge family Bible by the dim rays of a kerosene lamp—and his was the greatest glory a father ever had.

Perhaps within him he did feel a great surge of pride that his son should achieve such honor and that he should be the simple instrument of legalizing it, but the world knew no evidence of it. What great feeling passed between those two men as they stood together in the small hours of that New England morning will never be known, for father and son alike placed a great value on silence.

It was characteristic of John Coolidge—and revealing of his plain and unassuming ways—that if the ceremony gripped the imagination of the public it did not grip his own. For the world often looked in upon him in his simple Vermont farm house and found him—the father of the President of the United States!—engaged in such homely tasks as sawing wood and hanging out the family wash.

WATKINS' OPENING MOST SUCCESSFUL

"The Cottage" Proves Mecca for Visitors — Victrola Concert.

Watkins Brothers Spring Opening was one of the most successful openings ever held by that store, and those who did visit Watkins last night did so for the one reason of finding out what is new in the way of furniture for spring, for no souvenirs or entertainment were offered as attractions. Yet, as one of their representatives said this morning, it seemed as though everyone who was out visited the store, for its four big floors were packed with interested visitors all evening.

"The Cottage" Watkins Brothers suite of model rooms was the Mecca of the visitors. From the time the doors opened until after nine o'clock it was continually crowded with those who wanted to see the latest ideas in home decoration. In fact the crowds became so large that it was almost impossible to do the model rooms full justice, but the general idea of the charming layout will, without a doubt, bring me back to the store later on to inspect the decorations at more leisure. From now on the model rooms will be opened daily and every night the store is open. Many who visited the "Cottage" came to see just how practical the new vogue for Maple furniture fitted into the small home, and all were pleased with the effects created. Many said that never before had the suite of rooms been furnished in such a home like manner.

Hundreds of those who visited the Cottage also took the time to inspect the second floor at Watkins where the latest design in dining room and bedroom furniture, and rugs and carpets are shown, and the third floor with its displays of pianos, beds, bedding and nursery furniture.

The Orthophonic Victrola was the center of interest on the main floor where hundreds of people who had never heard this wonderful new instrument before gathered to hear the varied concerts offered. A factory representative of the Gier Co., makers of the famous Royal cleaner, demonstrated the wonderful cleaning qualities of this well known appliance in the basement.

All in all, the Spring opening was one of the most successful ever held.

BACKING PAUL BERLENBACH TO FIGHT AGAINST DEMPSEY

Experts Say If He Knocks S. M. H. S. MEETS UNDEFEATED FOE

Out Risko Tonight He Will Be the Logical Contender for Heavyweight Crown.

BY DAVIS J. WALSH
New York, March 19.—Quietly—and, therefore, not without an element of inbred sincerity—the word went out today that Paul Berlenbach either will be the leading heavyweight contender within four months, or like some of the guests at Sing Sing just a man without an immediate future. They say he will gamble everything on the idea that he is to be the modern man of destiny.

Harry Willis? He may have Dempsey bluffed but Berlenbach thinks the colored man will be found with an ace "kicker" in a show down of cold hands. Gene Tunney? Paul will attempt Gene the day after tomorrow, and intimates that he might find the delay a bit irksome, at that.

Manager's Opinion
These sentiments are not the writer's. They are unchallenged property of Ben Stern, said to be the real manager of Berlenbach, the man who makes his matches. He would make two of them this summer with Tunney and Willis according to plans airily in private to Jimmy De Forrest.

This fact is significant. When a boxing man neglects to raise his voice in making a statement, his remarks usually are worthy of belief. He doesn't speak loudly because he is awed in the presence of truth.

Dress Rehearsal
The manager will get a dress rehearsal at the Garden tonight when Berlenbach steps out with Johnny Risko, the man with the non-breakable windshield. They have been playing billiards off his cow-catcher for some time and, if he ever finds out about it, John will be real sore. John is awfully hard on the hands.

This, in fact, is the basis of tonight's plot, the real reason the match was made. Berlenbach plans to stop Risko and take the play away from Tunney and Jack Delaney, both of whom spent ten rounds on the problem without visible solution.

Paul will have to do 175 pounds by the commission's mandate, to anything Risko may care to bring into the ring. Berlenbach, but this fact is of no consequence. Berlenbach weighs less than 180, anyhow.

They say he will waste no time on Risko's jaw as did Tunney and Delaney, but will begin sending left hooks to John's ante-room with the opening bell. The boys allege they noted a fleeting expression of annoyance across the honest countenance when Delaney deposited a few in the side pocket; the impression has gained credence that this is the young man's "groove."

If that proves to be the case, Paul is likely to discontinue the fight with great firmness in which case the Tunney fight will not be so far away. Funny thing: the boys noticed how all the five boys are trying to avoid Tunney? Neither have I.

STATE HIGH SCHOOL TEAMS, GALE'S GUESTS

New Haven, March 19.—Eight Connecticut high school basketball teams are guests here for two days of Yale University Athletic Association while the teams are contending for the sixth annual Yale interscholastic state championship. Each school has sent a group of ten players, a coach and an athletic director, all of them entertained at the expense of the athletic association.

Dining in Dwight Hall grill, the visitors are being lodged elsewhere in the city and are to be given trips to Yale Bowl, Lapham field house and the George Ade boat house on the harbor. Following the sightseeing trips the visitors will be conducted through Harkness memorial quadrangle.

Following the basketball games tomorrow evening the entire party of visitors will be entertained at the Y-club where George Taylor, chief basketball coach of Yale University will be toastmaster.

PRIZES DISTRIBUTED

Toledo, Ohio, March 19.—Some $81,953 will be distributed in prizes to winners of various events in the A. B. C. tournament here this year according to the list adopted by the delegates at the annual Congress meet in the Chamber of Commerce today.

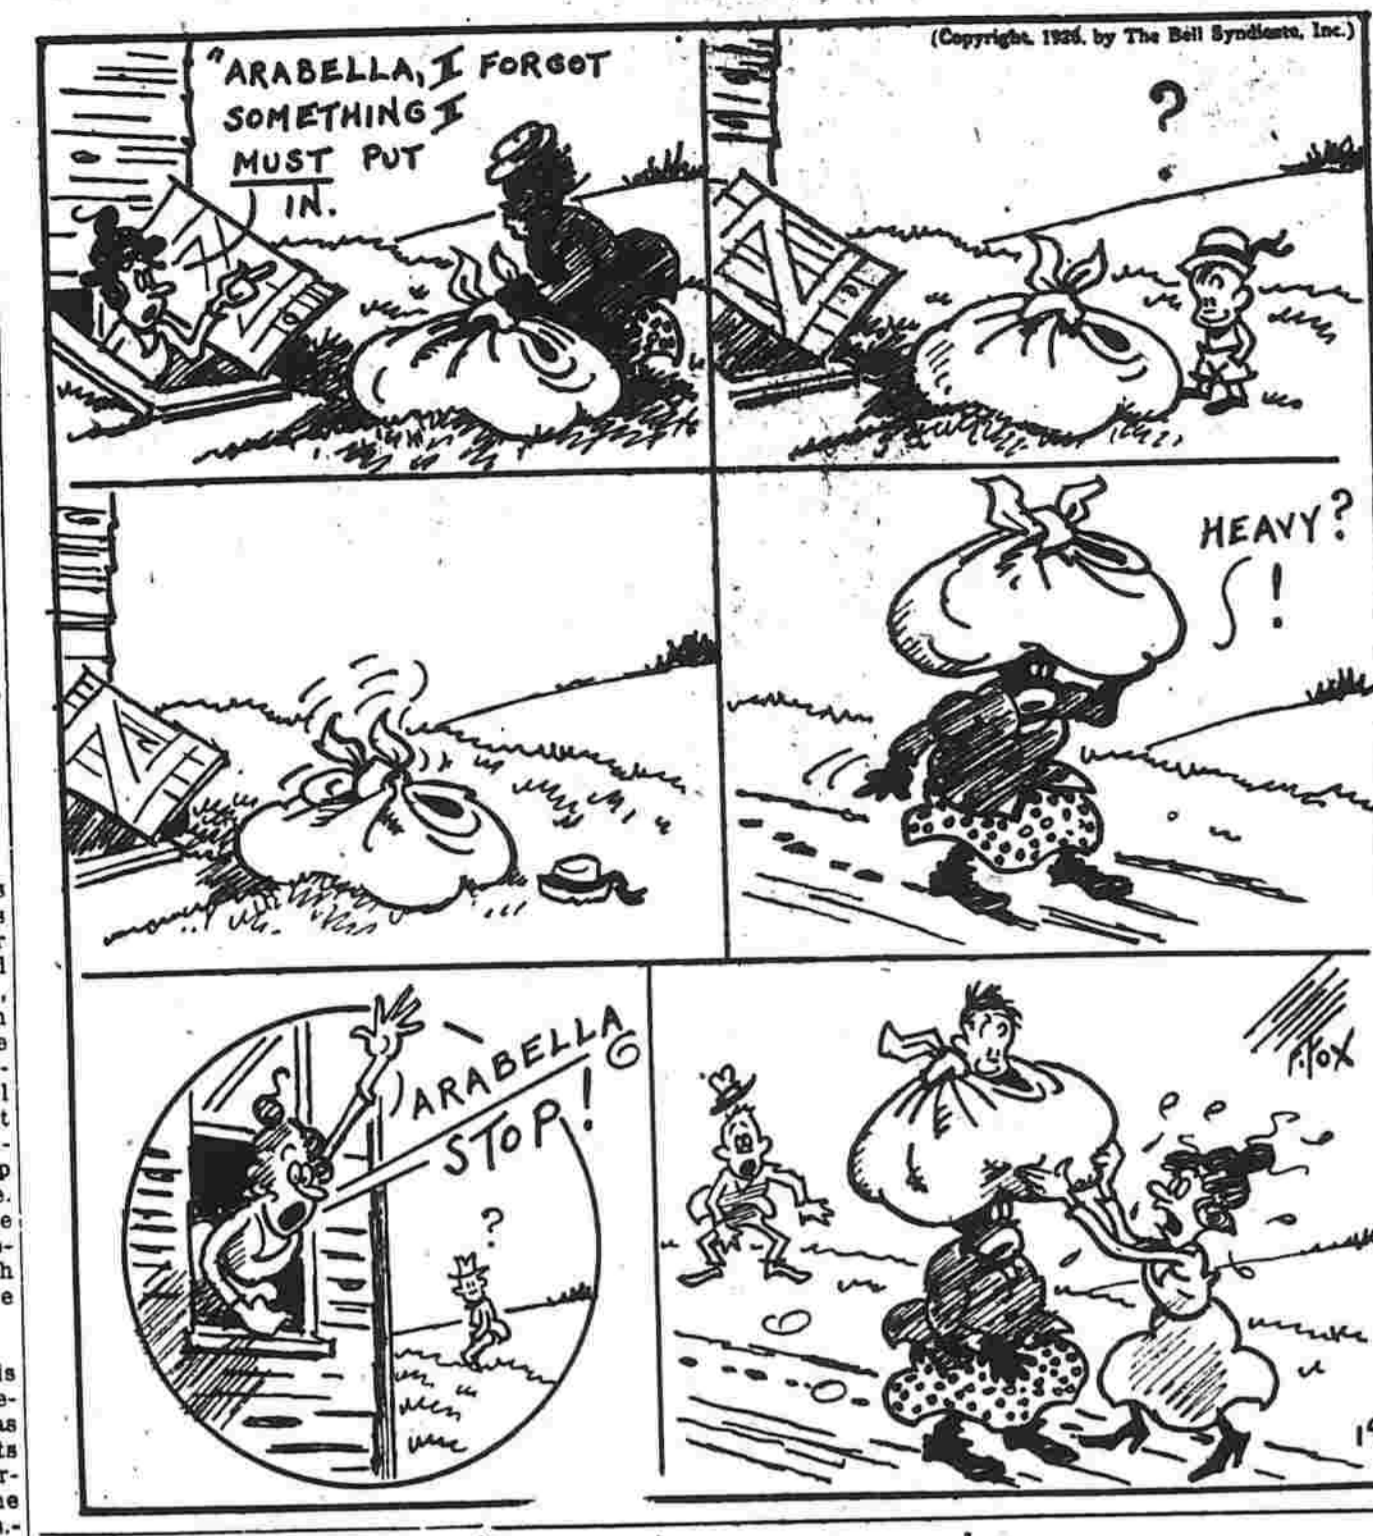

There are 375 regular five-men prizes, 224 for boys' teams and five special prizes for high single team games. In the two men event there are 758 regular prizes and five specials. The singles event will offer 1,525 prizes and the specials while the all-events offer 125.

After the heavy sticking of yesterday afternoon the teams in the evening rolling of the five-man event were rather tame. The best total being 2,829 by the Hardy Bakers of Flint.

MAYOR SEES GAME

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 19.—The finale of the Yankee-Braves series today will be witnessed by Mayor James J. Walker of New York city who is in Florida on a vacation.

LOCAL PRACTICAL JOKER MAY GET INTO TROUBLE

Someone with a weird sense of humor tells a friend that a girl named Julia or Rose or Esther wants him to call her up on the telephone. Then he gives the friend the telephone number 443. This is the police station and when the officer in charge answers a voice asks: "Is Rose there?" "Is Julia there?" is the reply and then we imagine the practical joker laughs in high glee. He will not if he is discovered.

LEADERS Their Records of 1925 BATTING JIM BOTTOMLEY

Made major league debut with St. Louis Cards in 1922. Came from Syracuse in International League. One of outstanding batters in old circuit. Had best season in 1923, hitting .371. Last year hung up mark of .367, finishing next to his boss, Rogers Hornsby, among the regulars. Led league in hits with 227. Third in total bases with 358. For time ran nip and tuck with Hornsby for leadership batting. Played 153 games in 1925 and went to bat 619 times, more than any other player in the league. Plays first base. Bats left. Throws left.

IS YOUR FAVORITE HERE?

Let's see, here are Babe Ruth, and Tris Speaker, and Eddie Collins, and Walter Johnson, and George Sisler, and Ty Cobb. Maybe your favorite ball player is among 'em. And maybe he isn't. After all, they're baseball heroes. But they may serve just as reminders. You know, Walter Johnson makes you think of Bucky Harris, or Eddie Collins may remind you of his great catcher, Schalk. And don't forget the fellows in the National League. Pick your favorite and write 200 words about him to The Herald. Any boy 16 years old or under can enter the contest. Simply pick your favorite ball player—one only—and write 200 words on why you selected him as your favorite. The contest ends at midnight, March 31. Billy Evans, famous American League umpire, will be the judge. The boy winning in the nation-wide contest will see his favorite player in the season's opening game and will give him a silver cup. The boy winning in Manchester will see any one big league game in either New York or Boston as a guest of The Herald.

Training Camp FLETCHER ADMITS "PHILS" ARE GOOD

Manager of National League Team Says This Year's Players Are Best He Ever Gathered Together.

Bradenton, Fla., March 19.—Arthur Fletcher, famous Giants' shortstop of pre-war annals, faces his fourth year as manager of the Philadelphia Nationals with the best team ever assembled under his management. At this writing, George Harper, .354 hitter last year and Jack Rabbit, centerfielder, has not signed his contract, nor has Butch Henline, last year's captain. However, must be gathered into the fold to make this year's Phillies loom more powerfully than last year's aggression, which finished in a tie with Brooklyn for sixth place. The sensational improvement of the pitching staff promises the Phils a first division berth this year, provided Harper is in the line-up and the run-making machine is up to 1925 standards.

Results of Trading.
The trade of Jimmie Ring to the Giants secured for the Phils Jack Bentley and Wayland Dean, pitchers. Bentley, however, is classed an first-baseman and clean-up clouter with the Phils. He will not pitch unless the staff is in dire straits. At present, Fletcher can count on no pitching from no less than eight men. The veterans are Harold Carlson and Clarence Mitchell, the only southpaw available in the big leagues. With last year's sixth place team, Carlson was the best pitcher in the Phils. Mitchell's figures were ten and seventeen.

Waterbury Boy.
Hardly second to Carlson is Frank Ulrich, sensational youngster who was bought from Waterbury last spring. In his first appearances against other big league teams this year he allowed three hits and no runs, in four innings against the Giants and three against the Athletics.

The other youngsters are Claude Willoughby, Art Decatur and Jack Knight. Ernie Maun and Wayland Dean, formerly with the Giants, look most impressive. The Catchers.
Bubber Jonnard, drafted from the minors, is an experienced, smart and bustling catcher to work with Jimmie Wilson, Lew Wendell and perhaps Henline. Wilson last year became the best catcher in the league. Barney Friberg, purchased from the Cubs, will play second, and Sand is booked for short. Will Huber, a first-year man last year, has been the fielding and hitting sensation of the training camp.

The outfield Fletcher expects to use includes the veterans Harper, Williams, Mogan and Nixon, together with Fred Leach, who batted .312 in 65 games last season. Team for team the Phils this year are the best this Quaker city has seen since the war, particularly in the pitching staff. Their aim is the first division. They were not far away last year. Ernie Vick, former All-America center from Michigan, is known as the "All-America Eater" among the Cardinals. His specialty is big steaks. CHICAGO UNKNOWN QUANTITY IN N. L.

Last Year's Worst Team Seems to Have Plenty of Latent Power—McCarthy New Manager.

Avaton, Catalina Island, March 19.—One new manager and a barrel of dough have injected new life into Bill "Wrigley's" gum-chewing Chicago Cubs—the worst team in the National League last year. Joe McCarthy, who led Louisville to the championship of the American Association in 1925, is the new boss. The money was spent for new players. Among them are "Lefty" O'Doul, Joe Kelly, Charley Root, Clyde Beck and "Red" Shannon.

Three managers couldn't drag the Cubs out of the cellar last season. Bill Killefer, "Rabbit" Maranville and Johnny Evers tried and each in turn failed. But "Silent Joe" McCarthy, dubbed this because of his refusal to comment on his team, is expected to have better success.

Hard daily workouts and exhibition games with Pacific Coast League clubs have been the routine for the Bruins during the spring training season at their million-dollar camp. "Our pitching staff looks exceptionally strong this year," declares McCarthy, "though Horvath's injury will hurt for the first weeks of the chase. He's still the best moundsman in the league, however, and I look for him to turn in over 20 wins, providing he returns to top-notch shape."

Then there's Tony Kaufmann, who is always a dependable man in the box. Charley Root, sensational right-hander with the Los Angeles club last year should come through for us, too. If I could pick up a couple of good southpaws my pitching worries would be over."

And with that speech—an extremely long one for him—"Silent Joe" withdrew into his shell. Bill Pierce, Fred Blake, Jack Welsh and Clayton Touchstone are the others who have a chance to remain on Wrigley's payroll as hurlers.

"Gabby" Hartnett, who has more pep than any other three men on the club combined, will do most of the work behind the plate. Hartnett is starting his fifth season with the Windy City outfit and he still has the enthusiasm of an 18-year-old rookie. There isn't another backstop in the league who can throw like he can. Mike Connelley and Earl Gilpin will relieve Hartnett.

The infield will be pretty well handled by Charley Grimm at first, Earl "Sparky" Adams on second, "Red" Shannon at short and third, and Freigau holding down third. Cardinals Adams and Freigau are all Cub veterans. McCarthy brought Shannon with him from Louisville. He is a vet of the majors, having played under Connie Mack at Philadelphia and with the Boston Red Sox.

Almost an entire set of new faces will appear in the outfield. Joe Kelly, Floyd Scott, Hack Wilson, Cliff Heathcote, Art Jahn and Howard Fitzgerald will bear the brunt of the work. Heathcote and Wilson will be the only familiar faces to Cub fans. One of the main differences that will be seen in the Bruins this year will be their change of spirit. If spirit was the only qualification necessary they would be right on top of the heap. But unfortunately it isn't, so McCarthy will be lucky if he gets the gang into the first division at all.

HIGH SCHOOL WILL LOSE SEVEN PLAYERS IN JUNE

HORNSBY IS BOTH JEKYLL AND HYDE

Player and Manager Two Different Persons in St. Louis Star—Is Now Changed Man.

San Antonio, Tex., March 19.—Rogers Hornsby, famous manager of the St. Louis Cardinals, has turned out to be the Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde of baseball. As just a player, second baseman of the Cardinals, Hornsby seemed to have little interest in the game other than getting his baseballs and executing the plays in the field in his usual faultless manner. There seemed to be little or no initiative about Hornsby. He took anything to say to anybody and never took issue with the umpires.

As a matter of fact, Hornsby's comment on anything that related to the play of the Cardinals was confined to two slang words that probably wouldn't pass the censor if I wrote them. On one occasion, it is reported Hornsby became disturbed and cuffed Manager Rickcy about the dressing room because of some dispute that arose between the two. That was perhaps the only time he showed initiative and aggressiveness, prior to being made manager of the ball club.

Rogers Hornsby, manager, is an entirely different person from Rogers Hornsby, player. Many of the experts fared Hornsby would fall as a manager because he would be too good a fellow, basing their belief on his actions as a player. That belief was soon dispipated. Rogers Hornsby, the placid, easy-going player, is a driving manager not unlike the McGraw type.

Always fair and considerate with his players, Hornsby has no use for the laggard. He wants every fellow to give his best and he recently let them know it in his manner. "This is a first division ball club, it has no room for second division players. The player who doesn't want to hustle won't get a chance to be idle. He will be passed on to some other club. The player who fails to keep in condition may fool me for a time but not always. He really is only kidding himself and must sooner or later pay the penalty. This club is out to win the pennant, it's going to do the next best thing, it's as high as possible."

And that's the spirit of the Cardinals all over. Hornsby, by practice what he preaches has instilled it into them. The Cardinals as a team are mighty good eaters. Manager Hornsby approves of good food and the money amount. He says you must have power to hit the old pill. He opines there is power in steaks.

The Cardinals feel in Tommy Thewenow they have the best fielding shortstop in the National League and Manager Hornsby seconds that opinion. Thewenow is both fast and equally good to his right or left. Tris Speaker in particular. Spoke drove in five runs and cut off three more by fine catches. One of his drives broke a finger on Hugh McQuillan's pitching hand. Neft McQuillan has a broken finger.

Graduation and Age Limit Will Affect Basketball Combination to Great Extent—Three Men Expected to Return.

With the passing of the current basketball season the High school team will be left with only two regular men who will be available next year. All the boys but Gorman and Holland will either be graduated or become ineligible and Coach Clarke will have to draw from his second team squad. The team that is left next year will play its last games in this tournament and will disband after that.

Mantelli, the key man of the team for the past two years, may continue in High school and his age limit 21 set by the Headmasters' Association will bar him from competition after this year. He came back to school after an absence of some years and was able to play only two years with the squad.

LaCoss, Dahlquist, Bray, Quish and Guberger will be graduated in the class of 1926. Gorman still has a few years to go and others, who are most of the second team players are first or second year men and will be available for a couple of years to come.

There is some good material on the scrubs just now and plenty of it can be used to good advantage in building up a team to take the place of this year's combination. Farr is said to be one of the coming stars of the school and several others, who have had considerable experience on the chalked court, Burke returned from Florida yesterday and immediately went to Medford to watch the team in the tournament. Good material is continually coming up from the grades to the High school through the grammar school leagues which were started by Coach Clarke when he came here. It seems as though basketball in the High school will always be the most successful sport for it is really the only one which gets the interest of the general public as well as the student body.

McQUILLAN HURTS HAND
SARASOTA, Fla., March 19.—McQuillan's travelers again were back at their southern headquarters today, slightly worse for the wear. He was beaten by the Cleveland Indians in general and Tris Speaker in particular. Spoke drove in five runs and cut off three more by fine catches. One of his drives broke a finger on Hugh McQuillan's pitching hand. Neft McQuillan has a broken finger.

STATE'S THEORY OF GOVERNMENT BEST—BINGHAM

Connecticut's People Better Fit to Govern Than Others Because of System, Senator Tells Hibernians.

United States Senator Hiram Bingham addressed the St. Patrick's Day gathering of Hibernians and their auxiliaries last night at the Hotel Bond, and gave the banqueters an excellent talk on state government. He stressed the importance of Connecticut's system as compared with that of other states. He believed that this state's citizens were better fit to govern because they were trained in government by taking an active part in it.

His address in part follows: "There is no question that there exists a battle royal between the Connecticut idea of government and the trend toward centralization."

Town Meeting Belief
The Connecticut idea embraces a firm belief in the town meeting. This belief is not theoretical—it is practical. Anyone who has ever attended a town meeting in Connecticut where vital issues were being debated knows that the town meeting is a live institution. He also had a vision of local self-government in action. Furthermore he has had a practical lesson in the fundamentals of government "of the people, by the people and for the people."

James Bryce, that great authority on the principles of democratic government, said "whoever learns to be public spirited, active and upright in the affairs of the village has learned the first lesson of the duty incumbent upon a citizen of a great country." The Connecticut idea is that strong, healthy local institutions train men to be effective citizens. They develop that highly valued, hard, common sense so essential in public government. They develop civic judgment, community spirit and the knowledge that the two sides to a question are not necessarily the right side and the wrong side. They inculcate the knowledge that there may be an honest difference of opinion as to the right side. Local institutions teach the need for "concession and compromise," two words which are anathema to reformers and well-meaning, earnest bigots, who wish that this country was a benevolent despotism. In the Connecticut town a citizen has the opportunity of showing what is in him and commending himself to his fellow citizens who are the best judges of his character, integrity and courage. The citizen not only learns to recognize the worth of knowledge, experience and tact in solving the problems of government, but also has the opportunity of witnessing the actual performance, after election, of those who seek public office. There is no question that as Bryce says "the best school of democracy and the best guarantee for its success is the practice of local self-government."

Settle Own Problems
The Connecticut idea acknowledges the right of the communities to settle their own problems for themselves in so far as they do not seriously interfere with the rights of neighboring communities. It recognizes the right of the individual to "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness"; it recognizes his right to make mistakes, his right to follow his own standards of religion, of education and of ethics, provided only that in his exercise of these rights he shall not interfere with the exercise of similar rights on the part of his neighbors. It is the very antithesis of a benevolent despotism.

"A second and most important feature of the Connecticut idea is our belief in a free representative government. Nearly three hundred years ago Thomas Hooker of Hartford laid down the principles of a representative system of government. He claimed that the choice of the magistrates belonged to the people, and that those who had the power to appoint the magistrates had the right to set the bounds and limitations of the power and place to which they elected them. These principles were laid down in that famous written Constitution of the Colony of Connecticut, which was the first written constitution to establish a complete form of representative government. President Coolidge has said that the adoption of that Constitution sowed "the seed of the American Republic." The fundamental basis on which a representative system rests is the ability of the average human being to determine the character of the persons with whom he is acquainted. He may not be able to tell how much science his neighbor knows, or how much of truth there is in his religion, or how accurate is his knowledge of geography, chemistry and mathematics. On the other hand, he can tell whether his neighbor is truthful, honorable, unselfish, courageous, and possessed of common sense. If it were not for the fact that the average citizen can thus judge his neighbors there would be no possibility of popular government being successful. Wiseest Often Puzzled

The exponents of pure democracy go much farther than this. They believe that the average citizen is perfectly competent to pass upon all proposed legislation. They fail to recognize that even the experienced legislator is often hard put to it in an effort to determine the wisdom of much proposed legislation. They forget that even the wisest judges on the bench are often puzzled by the meaning of the laws. Those who believe in pure democracy rest their faith on the ability of the average citizen to do far more than side up his neighbors and acquaintances and pick out the ones whom he can trust. They want the average citizen to make a study of legislation, administration and adjudication.

The modern tendency appears to be based on two conceptions which are widely at variance with the Connecticut idea. One is a belief in pure democracy, in the wisdom of the average citizen to pass on measures as well as on men. The other conception is a belief in the super-wisdom and integrity of a central government as opposed to a town government. The theory seems to be that as long as the people have confidence in the central government they can trust it to direct their fortunes and to make wise and benevolent decisions. This belief is founded on the Utopian conception of the wisdom and experience of the average citizen and on an idealistic conception of the delights of living under an efficient and benevolent despotism. To my mind its advocates have failed to read aright the lesson of history. No one questions their sincerity or their desire "to cultivate humanity and promote the happiness of all and the good of every man." Personally, however, I believe that wisdom and experience are on the side of the Connecticut idea and that the happiness and good of our citizens and their rights to life, liberty, estate, honor, etc. are more likely to be preserved and strengthened by the Connecticut system rather than by the growth of centralization and paternalism.

Crushes Freedom
Centralization has its attractive side. It frequently spells efficiency and benevolence, but it crushes liberty and leads straight away from the possibility of government "by the people." The real remedy for most of our troubles is to follow the Golden Rule and to instill the teachings of religion in the hearts and minds of the boys and girls who are ours to train. The future of the Republic depends on the development of a body of citizenry trained in the practice of government, rather than in a mass of government, rather than in a mass of subjects delighting in the blessings of despotism and blind to the loss of their power as citizens.

This hall has what is known as a spring floor, and as far as is known there is only one other like it in Connecticut. The workman who laid the new floor said that it was a wonderful piece of construction. Bert Green of Willimantic has engaged the hall for Saturday nights, and will run a series of dances, the first of which was held last Saturday night. This featured the old-fashioned square and round dances and a large crowd from this and surrounding towns was present.

There is more sickness in town now than at any time during the winter, in fact there has been very little sickness until now. Hard colds are prevalent, although it is not known that there are any cases of the grip as yet.

The YELLOW STUB by Ernest Lynn

COPYRIGHT 1926 BY NEA SERVICE, INC.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

HENRY RAND, 55, a business man, is found murdered in a cheap hotel in Grafton. Police find a woman's handkerchief and the yellow stub of a theater ticket.

JIMMY RAND, his son, goes to Cleveland, where the theater is. The stub is traced to THOMAS FOGARTY, who says he gave it to OLGA MAYNARD, a cabaret singer.

Jimmy meets and falls in love with MARY LOWELL. Later he encounters Olga. She faints when she learns police want her for murder. Mary, out with SAMUEL CHURCH, a wealthy lawyer, sees Jimmy lift Olga into a taxi and misunderstands.

Olga tells police the stub and handkerchief might have come into possession of a man who "picked her up" two nights before the murder. Jimmy receives several mysterious warnings to leave Cleveland but ignores them. Later he is attacked at night by two men. He escapes, after seeing a blackjack from one of them.

With Jimmy and Mary estranged, Church presses his advantage and gets Mary's promise to marry him. Mary tells Jimmy this when they accidentally meet in the park.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXII

JIMMY had seized her by the hand. He was leaning toward her. His voice was agonized.

"Mary, you mean you—love love him?"

But she did not answer. She had turned her head away and was crying.

"Mary, look at me. Look at me and tell me that you're married in this man because you love him."

"Don't!" Her voice was muffled. Her handkerchief pressed tightly to her lips.

And then again hot anger overwhelmed him. He was seized once more with that uncontrollable desire to hurt her.

"I might have known," he said bitterly, "that I had no right to hope. There was a fellow in your office. They called him Mac. He said money would buy anything. He was right; it will. This man—"

"Jim, don't. Please don't say any more."

But he went heedlessly on, the words rushing insanely from his lips.

"This man Church has money—lots of it. He can get anything he wants with it. He got you with it. You're marrying him for his money; that's what you're doing."

"How dare you!" She turned on him, her lips trembling.

"You don't deny it?" He laughed scornfully. "You don't dare tell me you love him. You can't. You don't dare look at me and tell me you don't love me."

She drew herself up. "You presume a great deal."

"I presume nothing. I'm stating facts."

She had regained her composure now. She said, trying to wound him. "To be so sure of yourself certainly indicates you are not lacking in conceit."

The barb went home. His face reddened. "Perhaps," he said, "I did take too much for granted. I'm sorry."

At the contrition in his tone she reached involuntarily toward him with her hand, but he did not see it and she hastily drew it back.

And so he went plunging ahead still trying his best to hurt this girl whom he loved better than anything in the world.

"I had thought Mac was wrong. I thought there were some things

He called up Olga Maynard and asked her to meet him downtown. He wanted to forget.

In this world that money could not buy. But I was wrong—I was a fool. You even met me out of the way down at the office. I offended you, and so you had me fired."

She looked at him, startled. "You thought that?" she repeated slowly. "You thought I had you fired?"

"Instantly he saw he was wrong in accusing her."

"What else was I to think? I found you cold. You wouldn't even speak to me, and that evening the man you work for discharged me."

"I don't think," she said in a whisper, "that Sam Church would think such a thing of me."

"Oh, damn Sam Church!" he flared at her. "I suppose I'm to think he's some kind of a saint. If you want to know my opinion of Sam Church, I think he's a dirty sneak."

"It is hardly the chivalrous thing to do to speak like that of him when he's dead."

"He lied about me!" Jimmy cried. "He poisoned you against me—the sneak."

"I suppose," she retorted, "you think your taste in choosing friends is better than mine. The lady you were seen with is not exactly unknown, you know."

"Yes," he answered hotly, "and I see her nearly every night. What do you think of that? I'm with her every night."

He rose from the bench and clamped his hat down viciously on his head, his back to her. She stretched her hand out in a little gesture of appeal, but he was not looking.

"Goodby," he said. "You seem to have made your choice. I only hope you'll be as unhappy as I am." He walked away, without another backward glance, talking long, swift strides.

She sat perfectly still for several minutes, doing nothing but gaze after his departing figure as it strode through the park. Then she bowed her head on her arm and cried as if her heart would break.

"Jim," she sobbed, "you don't

"Yes. I used to call them."

"All right, I can use you. I can't seem to get hold of a man that's any good. I suppose you'll be quitting just about the time that you know your route."

"I won't be quitting for quite a while," Jimmy said.

"All right. Report for work tomorrow morning at seven-thirty. Your job will be collecting and delivering laundry."

"Thanks. I'll be here." He walked out of the door.

"There's a funny one for you, Miss Caton," called Mr. Porter to the girl who had met Jimmy when he came in. "College man driving a laundry truck."

She looked toward the door that had closed behind Jimmy Rand's back. "I'll say," she answered, and resumed chewing her gum.

"It's just a headache, mother. I'll go in my room and lie down for a while. It will be better."

"And she went in her room, to fling herself face down on the bed and weep her pillow with tears. . . . On her dressing table was a portrait of Samuel Church, placed there recently by her mother.

Jimmy, after leaving the laundry office, walked, without being conscious of direction, back to the park. He was half way through it before he realized where he was. Then, drawn by some irresistible impulse, he walked swiftly over to the bench where he had left Mary.

She had gone, and he sat down wearily. A small handkerchief was lying on the bench, and he recognized it by the perfume as Mary's. He picked it up and pressed it to his lips and cursed himself for talking to her as he had.

"I was a fool," he said. "I had no right to hurt her like that, even though she did hurt me. It's that damned temper of mine. Whatever chance I had I suppose I've lost now."

He took out his wallet and placed the handkerchief in it and then put it back in his pocket. His left hand, fumbling idly in his overcoat pocket, came in contact with the blackjack that he had taken away from the man who had followed him home that night. It had been in his pocket ever since O'Day had left him. He had put it there, intending to give it to the Lieutenant the next time he saw him.

He took it out of his pocket and idly studied it. Emery was leaking out of it where O'Day had ripped the stitches. He took his penknife from his watch chain and ripped out the remaining stitches, letting the rest of the heavy emery dust run out.

"It will never hurt anyone else," he said abstractedly. He was suddenly overcome with a feeling of tenderness.

He shoved the now harmless weapon back in his pocket and stood up. It was quite dark.

"Hell," he said, and shook himself together. "Something to get my mind off myself before I go crazy."

"All right, I'll drive a laundry truck—anything."

Again the man surveyed him. "Say, what's the matter with you? You're not cut out for driving a truck. You're a college man, I'll bet a dollar. Aren't you?"

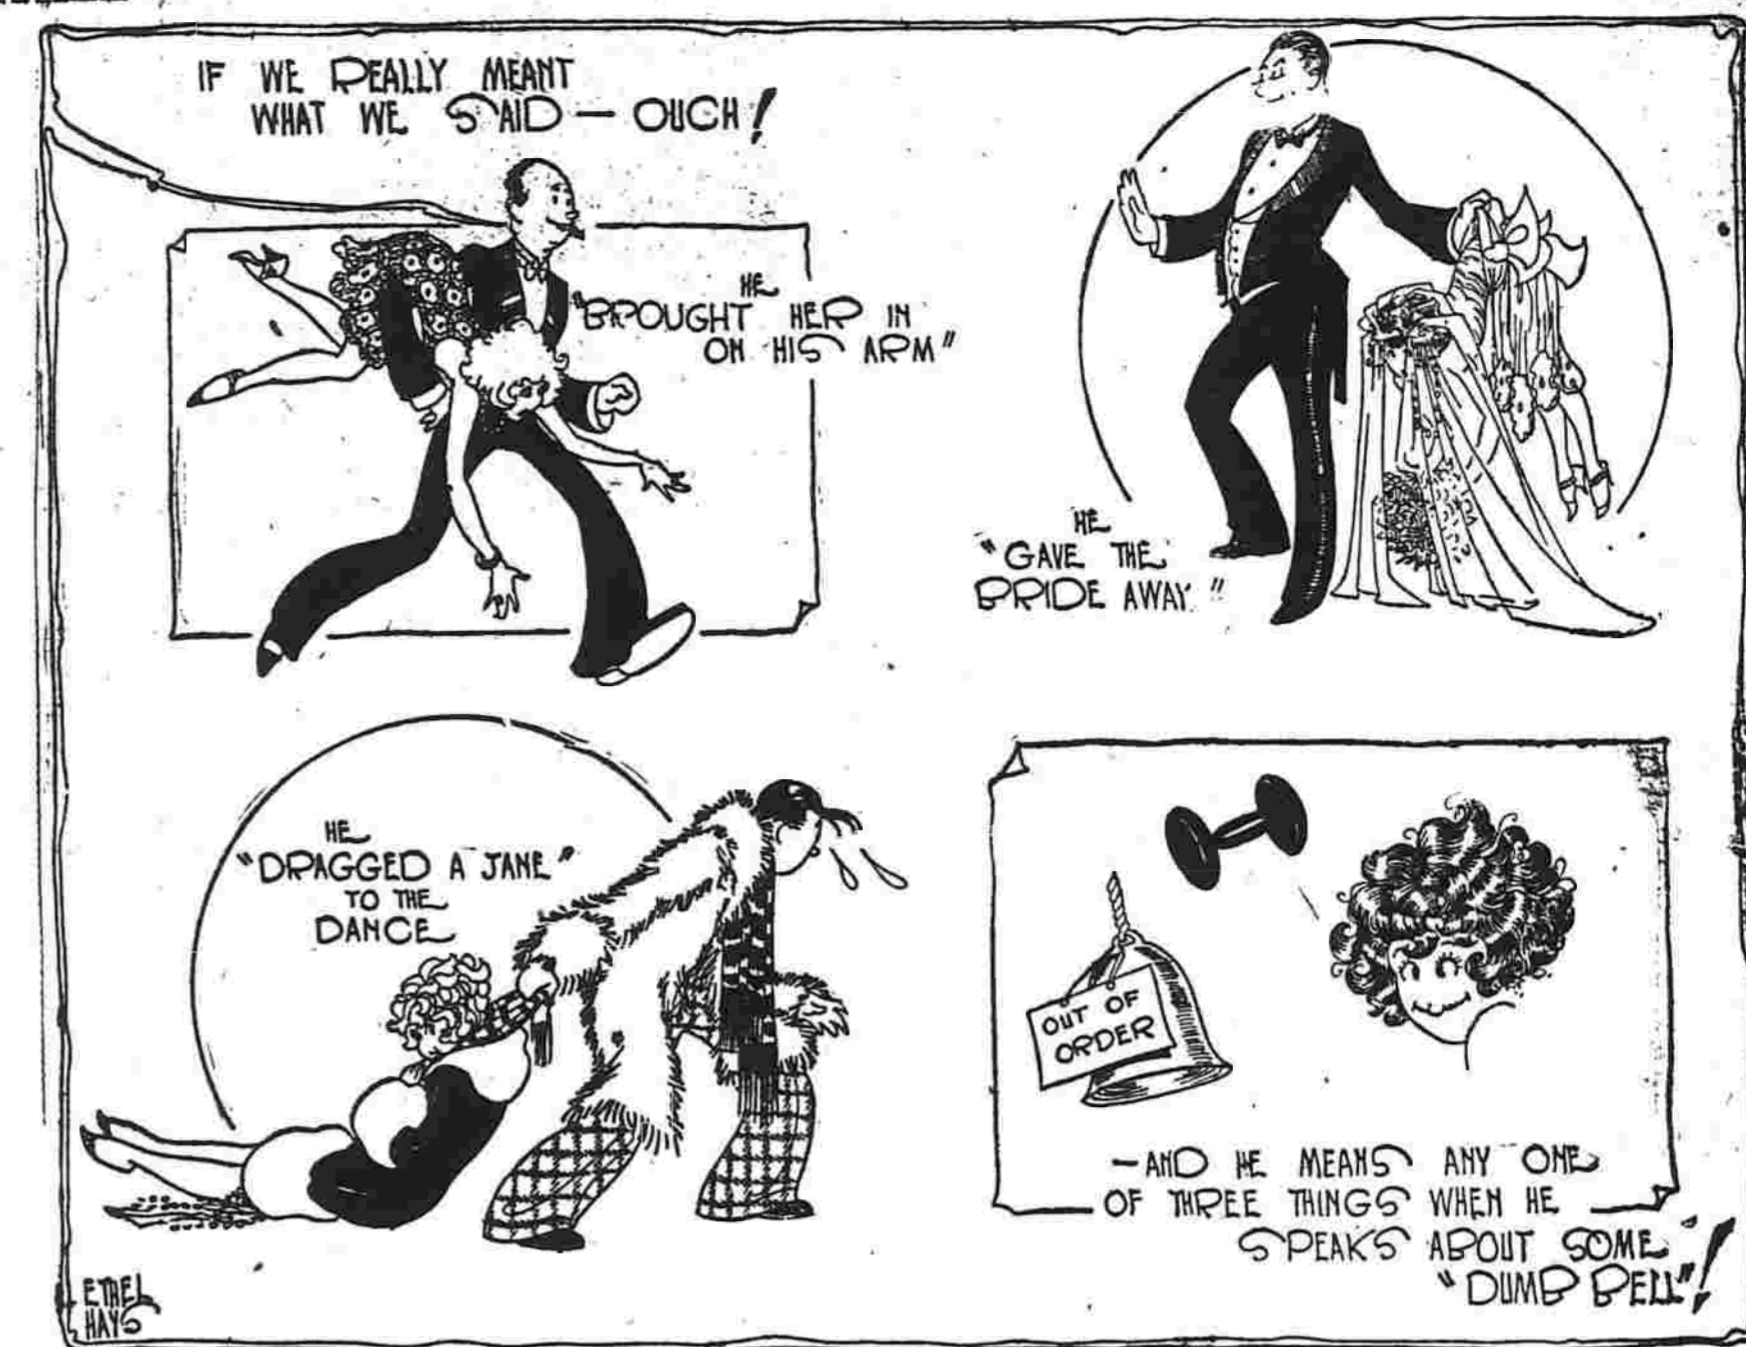

"Yes, what's the matter with me any in driving a laundry truck?"

Mr. Porter laughed. "No, I can't say that it does. What's the matter? Down on your luck?"

"No, I just need a job."

"Drive a car?"

The WOMAN'S DAY by Allene Summer

The Papers Say

Dancing girls in Turkey now demand—and get—pay for tripping the light fantastic. A certain stag club in a town near Constantinople, composed of sons of old pashas who ruled harems, must hire their dancing, entertainment these days and pay good shekels for the entertainment which their fathers had for merely providing shelter, food, and raiment.

At last! Some enterprising soul announces the discovery of a way to make silk stockings so they will not run! And just watch "us girls" ever own such! Ambitious stocking makers who turn them out while the woman pays and pays for new ones every day or so, thanks to those measly "runs," will see to it that no anti-run invention ever hurts their business!

Pin Money

If you want pin money, Mrs. Home Woman, why not raise snails? The French custom of masticating helpless snails with zeal and gusto is spreading to this country, too, we are told. Here's how to raise snails in the way that they should go! Strew a cellar with mulberry leaves during the summer months. Put trillions of baby snails in the cellar. Sprinkle the snails with water from time to time, then turn on an electric light. The snail's habit of coming out to food after a shower will work now. The snails will stick their heads out of their shells, when they are sprayed with milk and flour and become milk-bottle snails, are bottled, and the lady gets richer than from raising mushrooms or dahlias.

Style Note

Spite of all the hue and cry about silk stockings, the girls wore ice cream soda to a little boy. In about one-third of a minute his nose started to wiggle.

"WHY CHILDREN LEAVE HOME"—ONE REASON IS THE "SUPER-MATERNAL"

By CYNTHIA GREY.

"My mother is so blamed maternal!" Marie exploded to me the other day. "It may sound mean but I think she's right in her element when one of us is sick or out of work, or when there's a new baby in the family—anything revolving about the life of RER OWEN! The only thing she wants to talk about is her family. It's just all she has!"

Marie, I happen to know, carries 'neath the parental roof no more than decency demands. She loves her mother. But her mind revolts here.

And since girls of Marie's type live by their minds and save emotions for an occasional "fing," she left home for parts afar some years ago.

"Every time I go home I'm so darn glad I had sense enough to leave," Marie says. "Mother has smothered the rest of them. They have been coddled and pampered and kept within the cotton batting of her devotion until they are all 'nincompoops!'"

We have all known these super-maternal women who have no desire or thought in life apart from their offspring; women who watch adult sons and daughters with children of their own, and whose super-maternalism carries on with the grandchildren.

Once upon a time I thought that super-maternalism was the product of necessity and habit. I believed that it was a trait of women with large families and little wherewithal whose lives had necessarily been bound up with their children so long that they could get no new viewpoint.

But I have rather come to believe that super-maternals are born and not made. I do think, however, that if super-maternals could realize that it is not altogether wisest to nourish this bent of theirs, too much, they could check it before it is too late.

Marie went on:

"When I am away from my mother I am convinced that I love her. I must see her. I dash home and come away hurt by her total lack of any interest in me as a person other than her child, and her total lack of interest in my work or any appreciation of what it means. I just feel that she's sitting around waiting for me to cut my finger so she can pounce upon it and 'kiss it well.'"

Children are ungrateful wretches, you see. When they are children this super-maternalism is just what they want. They want someone to coddle them and live for them only. But when they are grown up, they want something more. They want understanding.

Mothers who have done nothing all their lives but make hot lemonade for colds and who never wanted to do anything else can't fit this new demand, and the grown-up children are apt to leave home.

Then the super-maternal, left alone, mourns:

"And after all I've done for my children! Here I am left like this!"

"Good Lord, Judy, we've been walking miles. I've been so interested in what you've been saying that you must think I don't even know the deuce of life. I know you must be very hungry with all the trouble I've been making for you. Here. Let's go in here."

"Here," was a brilliantly lighted restaurant which I had learned was one of the most exclusive in the city. I knew that my black coat and little hat would pass unnoticed, but when I turned and looked at Jimmie, I burst out laughing.

He was a mess. Some of the other man's blood had also hit his shirt front and he was showing a most beautiful black eye.

ADVENTURES of the TWINS by OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

"Come on out, G stubby," he called

"Who's next in your big book?" asked Nick. Rubadub.

The March Hare looked at his book through his big spectacles and said, "Grubby Groundhog—he's next. He really should be almost the first person to go to the Land-Where-Spring-is-Coming. And here he is, still fast asleep in his house between the fence and the potato-patch!"

"I know a story about him," said Nick. "If he comes out of his hole and sees his shadow on the second of February, he goes back in again and stays for six weeks longer."

"Stuff and nonsense and air-ance!" said the March Hare. "He's munty if he went the way he is. The Fairy Queen would discharge me at once—Rubadub too, if she saw him."

Off went the Twins and the March Hare to Grubby Groundhog's house between the fence and the potato patch. That is his doorway—his front doorway was there.

Before he left, the March Hare had put a big shiny red apple into his pocket.

"Come on out, Grubby," he called. "Oh, Grubby! Grubby Groundhog, come on out. Come out and see who's here. I've got a surprise for you."

But all the answer he got was a long loud snore and a grunt.

"Dear me! I just have my trouble for my pains," said the March Hare. "Come, children, we'll have to break in like burglars and get this fellow. You have your magic shoes, so come right along. Help me to roll this big stone away from the door, Nick."

Nick helped the March Hare to roll the stone away and they all tiptoed inside, down a long crooked path to another hall, then along that to a tiny room.

And there in a bed of moss and even strips of dried corn husks, lay Mister Groundhog—or as some of his special friends called him, Mister Woodchuck.

"Give me your knife, Nick," whispered the March Hare.

So Nick reached in his pocket and gave the hare his nice little sharp knife with two blades.

But the hare only needed one blade, for what he wanted was to cut the nice big red apple in two. When he had done this he carefully laid the two pieces of apple under Grubby's nose.

And when the groundhog took his next deep breath to get ready for his next loud snore he smelt—

IN THE morning when vitality should be at its peak, she was listless, tired, aching in head and heart. She was young, yet she was defeated. The cold, vile hand of constipation was dragging her down, destroying her health, thieving her beauty and charm. Women! be rid of constipation. Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is the sure, safe, pleasant way.

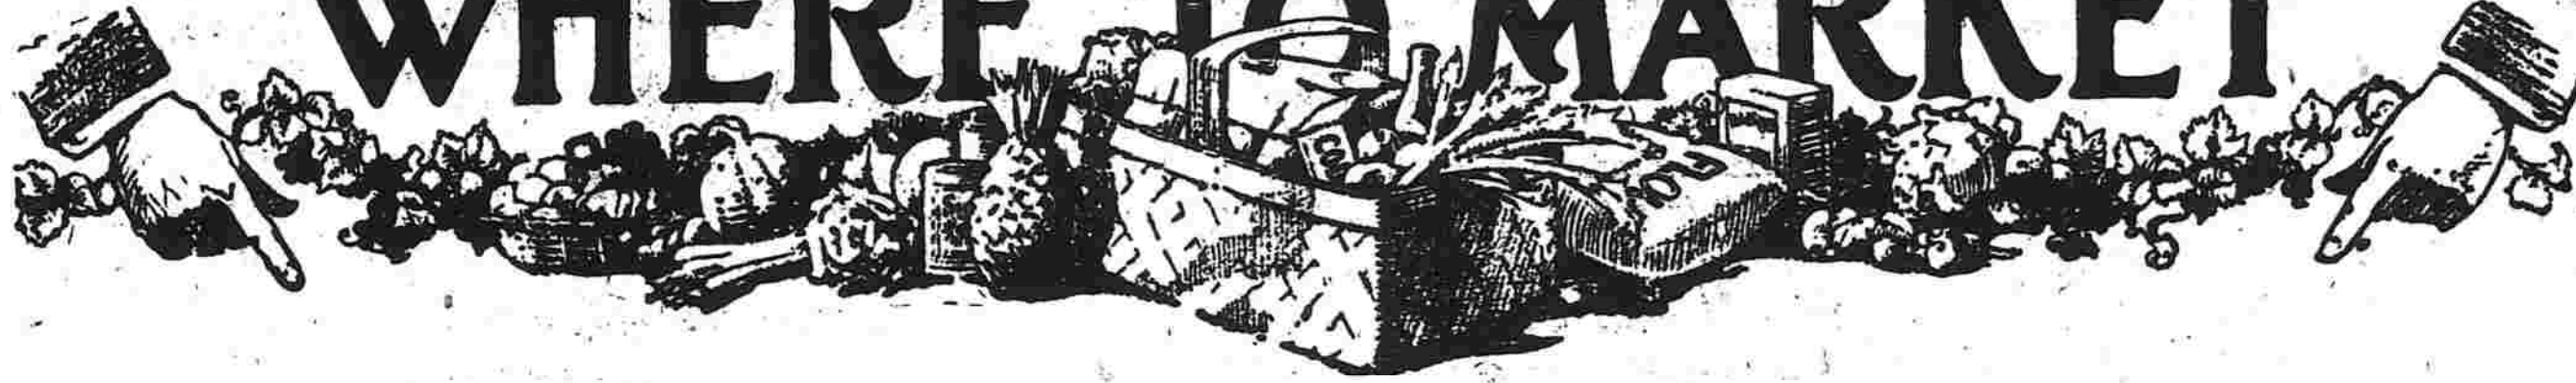

When Kellogg's ALL-BRAN travels through the system, its fiber remains unchanged. It can absorb and carry moisture through the intestinal tract and stimulate it to natural, healthy action. ALL-BRAN is what doctors call a bulk food. Its delightful nutty flavor makes it good as a cereal. Serve with milk or cream or with fresh or preserved fruit; sprinkle over other cereals or cook with hot cereals; use in soups, or make into the many recipes given on every package. If eaten regularly, it is guaranteed to bring permanent relief or the grocer returns the purchase price. Eat two tablespoonfuls daily—in chronic cases, with every meal. It is a 100% bran product.

Kellogg's is the original and only ALL-BRAN. All grocers sell it. Leading hotels and restaurants serve it. Buy a package of Kellogg's ALL-BRAN today.

Quaker Oats
"stands by" you through the morning

Important for Children and Grown-Ups Alike

HOW you feel all morning depends largely on what you eat for breakfast. Thousands have energetic forenoon because of wrong breakfast eating.

To feel right, you must have a well-balanced, complete breakfast ration. At most other meals—lunch and dinner—you get it. But breakfast is a hurried meal, often badly chosen.

Thus Quaker Oats, containing 16% protein, food's great tissue builder, 58% carbohydrate, its great energy element, plus all-important vitamins and the "bulk" that makes laxatives seldom needed, is the dietetic urge of the world today.

It is food that "stands by" you through the morning. Food that should start every breakfast in your home.

Quick Quaker cooks in 3 to 5 minutes. That's faster than plain toast. Don't deny yourself the natural stimulation this rich food offers you.

SENSE AND NONSENSE

Never mistake a woman's answer for her decision.

While there are many spending winter, thinking heaven couldn't be finer than Florida, there are many who think hell couldn't be made any hotter than the real (and unreal) estate agents have made it for them.

Value of a Vacation: The anticipation of going and the joy of coming back.

It seems that many of the settlers of Florida are using buoys to mark off their property.

Truth is never afraid of being cross-examined.

Our prize bozo says: "Could the crook of your elbow be sent to jail?"

"Does the calf of your leg eat the corn of your toe?"

"Could you sit in the shade of the palm of your hand?"

It always reads: "He worked his way up." Note the "worked."

Tuesday—Am having a fine time. Met the Captain of the ship.

A Tulane professor has brought into the country a Mexican Indian who, until recently had never seen a railroad train, and says the news item, "to whom a taxicab was a marvel." Wait until he sees the taximeter; it's a marvel to everybody.

MALARIA

BY DR. HUGH S. CUMMING
Surgeon General, U. S. Public Health Service

Mosquitoes breed in any standing or slowly running water. Malaria bearing mosquitoes like shallow pools, protected by shade, grass or other vegetation, such as may be found in poorly drained ditches, marshy places in the woods, hoof prints of cattle and horses, along the edge of a creek, hog wallows and sometimes troughs and barrels.

Mosquitoes lay their eggs on such bodies of water. These eggs hatch into larvae or "wiggle tails" then into pupae, and finally change into mosquitoes. Nine to fifteen days is required for this development.

To get rid of such standing water, subsoil drains, the filling up of low places and the employing of water containers at least once each week are necessary.

Kerosene oil poured on the water, one to two ounces for every 15 square feet of surface may be employed to kill the "wiggle tails."

In a former article you were told something about quinine. Many farmers already know that quinine when properly used is a specific in curing the disease, and also in preventing it.

The active symptoms of malaria are easily controlled by the proper administration of quinine, but unfortunately the individual who suffers from malaria does not usually keep it up long enough to free his system entirely of malarial germs. As a result persons frequently carry the germs in their blood without having active symptoms of the disease, and on being bitten by mosquitoes spread the infection.

IRVIN COBB WRITES
AUTO COURTESY CODE

Afoot we are a civil people, thoughtful and considerate of the rights of others. But let us stop in to our automobiles and on that instant a complete change takes place. We become autocrats, conscious only of our own desires, arbitrarily disregarding the claims for our consideration of pedestrian and brother motorist alike, demanding the right of way and accelerating it with the picture painted of the American motorist by no less a person than Irvin S. Cobb, famous humorist and essayist. In "Much Obligated" a novel and interesting little book published by the B. F. Goodrich Rubber Company, manufacturer of the well-known Silvertown tires.

Mr. Cobb, who has motored the highways of America and Europe for over fifteen years, speaks out of a ripe and varied experience. "Much Obligated" he describes as "a little essay on the crying need for a code of good manners among motorists." The code which is termed the Silvertown Courtesy Code. For American Motorists consists of fourteen points. In introducing it, Mr. Cobb writes, "The B. F. Goodrich Company, which is circulating this little book, has worked out what I think is an admirable set of rules, calling it, quite appropriately, The Silvertown Courtesy Code. I heartily endorse this code."

The essay itself is rich in Cobbsisms, though it is written in a serious vein. "I speak as one having acquaintance in the matter under discussion," writes the famous author. "My own case, I imagine, is a fairly characteristic one. I've had my share of motoring accidents, three in one day over in France in 1917 and all of them nice, messy ones. I have been an eye-witness to smash-ups past counting; I have seen the lamentable wreckage of innumerable other smash-ups. And taking stock of my own career as an automobilist, I say this for wrong 'twing for being right."

That I have passed through nearly every automobiling experience except the experience of giving and taking automobile courtesy.

"Why," he asks, "do we admire politeness on the part of persons afoot and suffer, unchecked and unrebuked, rudeness in automobilists, ourselves included?" "Maybe," he says, "there is a certain something in the mere act of having dominion over the harnessed powers of a great docile mechanism, in the bare thought of being the master of time and distance, which makes the typical automobilist an autocrat disputing with other autocrats the right of the road."

And in conclusion—"Unless we are to become a breed of hooded and goggled barbarians, we shall need not quite so much of that Oh-you-go-to-thunder stuff and a good deal of this Muchobligedness, which falls so graciously—and alas, so rarely—on the ear these times."

Here are five of the fourteen points of the Silvertown Courtesy Code: (1) Let us drive our cars as we would have others drive theirs; (2) Let us not pretend, like Monte Cristo, that the world and all its highways are ours and ours alone; (3) Let us dim bright lights for approaching cars and keep to the right of the road on curves and straight-aways; (4) Let us not frighten pedestrians with either horn or speed lest we be walking ourselves sometime; (5) Let us practice common dinner table politeness back of the steering wheel and help save thousands of lives.

A copy of "Much Obligated" may be obtained for the asking from any Goodrich Tire Dealer, the Goodrich Rubber Company having distributed thousands to its retail organizations throughout the country.

stive which police department placed the tag on his car. As a result he drove to Hartford and found that it did not belong there so he came back to Manchester and arrived shortly after court opened. Judge Johnson thought he had been put to trouble enough in the matter and suspended judgment.

ABOUT TOWN

A target in the shape of a man's body now at the police station shows the skill of the local patrolmen with the revolver. No one yards. The "body" is fairly riddled with the shots but few went outside of the target.

The police station housed another lodger last evening. "Michael O'Connell, yer Honor, a Swede," said the man as hat in hand he gave his name to Captain Schendel. He said he was looking for work and was out of funds.

The regular meeting of Manchester Loyal Orange Lodge, No. 99, will be held this evening in Orange hall at 8 o'clock.

Johnson's Manchester-Hartford Express auto truck now owned by James Warfield, formerly of Unionville and a touring car bearing Massachusetts markers, collided at the Center this morning. No one was injured and the only damage was that done the touring car which suffered a bent mudguard and front bumper. No arrests were made after a police investigation.

Now that a carload of marble has arrived for the interior of our new City Hall, the work is being rushed again. The outside of the building is about completed. It is expected that the building will be ready for occupancy by July 1.

There were many strange cars in town last evening as Elks from all of the surrounding towns attended the performance at the State theater.

Edwin Murphy of South Main street and Leo Kwash of Bisell street, seniors at the local High school left today for Medford, Mass. to attend the games at Tufts college.

Mrs. James Shearer and Miss Grace Robertson of Oakland street are expected home from Atlantic City where they have been for the past two weeks.

The local W. C. T. U. will have a food sale at Hale's tomorrow at two o'clock. Donations of food from interested friends will be gratefully received.

John A. Sandholm of 55 Birch street has returned from St. Petersburg, Florida where he has been for the past two months. He was employed by Contractor Thomas Bradley on the erection of a house for the latter. Mr. Bradley has also returned to town.

Mrs. Henry Haas of High street has returned from the Memorial hospital where she underwent a serious operation for throat trouble.

The Board of Directors of the Manchester Chamber of Commerce will hold a special meeting tonight at eight o'clock at the chamber headquarters.

IRWIN-SCHRIEDER.
Herbert J. Irwin, son of Harry Irwin of Pine street and Miss Anna Schrieder, daughter of Gustave Schrieder of Rockville, were married yesterday afternoon at two o'clock at the parsonage of the Methodist Episcopal church. The ceremony was performed by the pastor, the Rev. Joseph Cooper. Their attendants were Miss Violet Schrieder, sister of the bride, as bridesmaid, and Fred Irwin, brother of the groom as best man.

The bride wore a dress of white flat crepe, with ribbon bertha and bandeau of orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of bridal roses and lilies of the valley.

The bridesmaid wore green flat crepe trimmed with gold braid, with bandeau of gold leaves. She carried an arm bouquet of Madame Butterfly roses.

The bride's gift to her bridesmaid was a string of pearls and the groom's gift to his best man a gold piece.

On their return from a wedding trip to New Haven and Boston Mr. and Mrs. Irwin will live in their newly furnished home on Wadsworth street.

AUTOS COLLIDE.
A Ford touring car driven and owned by Daniel Gioviello, of Coventry going north on Main street yesterday afternoon, struck a Buick sedan driven by Miss Elizabeth Reardon of 142 Spruce street. Miss Reardon was turning into Main at Birch when the Ford hit her car and drove it to the opposite side of the street. The Ford stopped in the middle of the trolley tracks and delayed traffic for fifteen minutes.

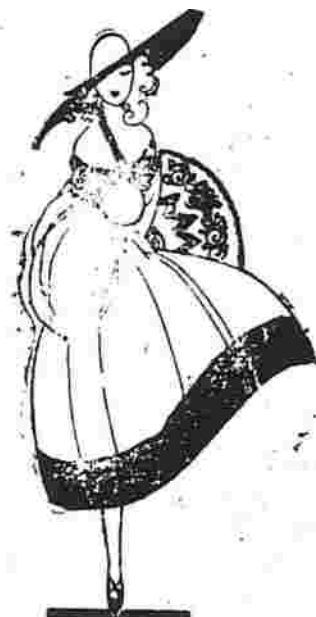

No one was injured but both cars were damaged. The Ford had the radiator cracked. The Buick had the left hand running board smashed and its mudguard bent.

CARD OF THANKS.
We wish to express our deep and sincere thanks to friends and neighbors for the sympathy and many kindnesses in our recent sorrow. We are grateful to the Manchester Lodge of Masons for the feeling of brotherhood displayed.

general manager for Hoffman & Hoffman, proprietors of the State, was in town later in the day and added his compliments to those of the other state employees when he stated that the orchestra's work would be much easier with the possession of the two fine new Haines pianos. The stage manager was particularly pleased with the size of the new pianos, stating they were excellent for quick changes. Just about two weeks ago the Circle theatre purchased a Drachman Baby Grand from Watkins Brothers, replacing the upright which was formerly used on the stage. "It is remarkable what a difference a grand piano makes in a stage setting, adding to its grace and beauty of appearance," Dan Finn, the Circle manager remarked when the new Drachman was used for the first time.
