

more to thaw the frozen ground that it would respond to pick and shovel.

There was Dr. A. M. Cram, typical jovial country doctor, who had attended the President's father through all of his ten months illness.

There was Sheriff Angus Macaulay, personal bodyguard to the old man throughout that trying period. And others, all equally close to the dead man.

Spread on either side of the gaping pit were mats of artificial grass brought by the undertaker—incongruous in contrast with the high-piled snow and the driving storm, yet withal holding out something of the promise of eternal springs.

White House flowers, shipped northward from the hot houses of Washington, bloomed bravely. A huge wreath, purchased by contribution from the community, a few smaller offerings from neighboring towns—these only broke the monotony of the endless white blanket.

"Unto Almighty God we commend the soul of our brother departed and we commit his body to the ground, earth to earth, ashes to ashes, dust to dust—"

The casket was lowered slowly into the ground. A handful of dirt was sprinkled into the grave. Eighty years of glorious life had come to an end.

At the Coolidge homestead the service likewise had been brief and simple. The coffin, black and lined with gray satin, had been placed at one end of the tiny parlor, banked high with flowers.

Before the coffin in half a dozen chairs sat the immediate mourners, the President, Mrs. Coolidge, John, the attorney general, Aurora Pierce and the Wilders. In the small living room adjoining together to the point of suffocation.

Present from the outside this little township only were former Gov. Stickney of Vermont on whose staff John Coolidge had served as colonel; Henry Lonk, state tax commissioner of Massachusetts, and Secretary to the President at the time he was governor of the state; Major J. F. Coupal, presidential physician who had treated the old man during past illnesses; and Capt. Adolphus Andrews, naval aide to the President.

The Rev. Dr. White read the brief, revised version of the Episcopal church. He offered a short prayer for the dead. Six militiamen, members of the Vermont National Guard, lifted the casket from its base and carried it slowly from the house. There waited the glass windowed hearse, mounted on runners. Behind were the two-horse sleighs which had carried the presidential party over the mountains from Woodstock.

The quarter mile journey over the snow-filled road from the house to the cemetery had started, the last journey of Col. John C. Coolidge, 80-year old father of the President.

The W. B. A. Guard club will hold its rehearsal at the home of Mrs. Ethel Carlson of 58 Ridge street Monday night as the club was unable to get a hall for its rehearsal.

WESLEYAN "JIBERS" COMING WITH GLEES

Word was received this morning from Wesleyan University that the college male quartet, known on campus as "The Jibers," would be with the Wesleyan Universal musical clubs when they give their concert next week, Saturday evening, in the high school assembly hall.

This group of four singers consists of H. A. C. King, 27; W. W. Phillips, 26; K. E. Steele, 27; and H. C. Kuhl, 27.

In addition to The Jibers a trio of cello, violin and piano and H. Calvin Kuhl, soloist, will be heard in the varied program. The Wesleyan "Serenaders" led by "Speed" Kennedy, 27, will give a series of instrumental numbers, also.

Mr. Kuhl the musical clubs have a most unusually talented college man. He is leader of the clubs and the New York papers were generous in the praise which they gave him as soloist and as a successful conductor.

At the college a great share of the credit for the national championship honors which the clubs recently won, has been given to Mr. Kuhl. The coach of the club, Mr. Laubin, of Hartford, said after the New York competition that as much credit for the win belonged to Mr. Kuhl as to himself.

The local high school seniors lost no time in obtaining this high grade attraction for a benefit concert as soon as word came to town by radio that Wesleyan had won the intercollegiate title.

Local musical people know that Wesleyan has for years held the unofficial title of "The Singing College of New England" and the club this year seems to warrant making the claim a national one.

The senior class was out in force today placing tickets for the concert and dance next week. Miss Erna Kanehl, leader of the group, asserts that the affair is receiving excellent support.

TOWN PLAYERS TO PICK CHAIRMAN ON MONDAY

At an important meeting of the Town Players at the Recreation Center on Monday night, committee chairman for the coming production of "Mr. Pim Passes By" will be chosen.

The players have set the date of April 22 for the play and the scene will probably be Cheney hall.

Chairmen to be elected will include a business manager, stage manager and property committee.

The Town Players have at present fifty active members which includes most of the talent of Manchester. The organization, however, is anxious to enroll a number of associate members who, although they do not wish to act, are interested in the development of the drama and the Little Theater movement in Manchester.

New members may come in at any meeting of the club. Miss Helen Nute, secretary, has sent out to all members letters advising them of the meeting and a large attendance of members is looked for.

Rehearsals for the new production were started last night. The cast is admirably fitted for the play, which is considered an unusually hard one to produce in

The Songsters Brigade under Band Secretary Maxwell will be featured. The evening address will be given by Commissioner Estill.

Commandant and Mrs. Abbot, local officers, are expecting that these special meetings, will be long remembered in Manchester. The commissioner was here about four years ago, and those who heard him will no doubt be anxious to hear him again.

THREE DAYS OF JAZZ AT STATE THEATER

The State will present three days of jazz beginning tomorrow night, every thing will be played in jazz by an augmented jazz orchestra under the direction of Samuel Kaplan.

Jazz news, Jazz comedy, Jazz features, nothing but Jazz. There will be two features on the bill, "Dancing Mothers" with Conway Tearle and Alice Joyce, "The Johnstown Flood" with George O'Brien.

If you're just a little tired of comedy; if "Westerns" bore you the least bit; if spectacles no longer make you leave your comfortable seat by the fireside; if you are one of that large army who have one, or many of the above symptoms—then you're going to enjoy the new Herbert Brenon Paramount picture, "Dancing Mothers," which is at the State Theater Sunday, Monday and Tuesday.

For the benefit of those who did not see the Selwyn-Goulding stage play, it might be wise to explain that "Dancing Mothers" is described as a "society drama." But it is much more than that description would seem to imply.

"Dancing Mothers" is the tale of a pretty woman who was almost cheated out of life by a heartless husband and a thoughtless daughter. As the mother who started out in order to save her child from throwing herself at a notorious bachelor, and ended by falling in love with him herself, Alice Joyce gives the finest performance of her career.

And Conway Tearle in his role as the bachelor, rises to new heights. Clara Bow, known as the screen's perfect flapper, does her stuff as the child, and does it well. Taking the picture as a whole, "Dancing Mothers" has been characterized by those who have seen it as "perfect entertainment."

"The Johnstown Flood" at the State Theater Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, produced by Fox Films from an original story woven around the great calamity of the Conemaugh-Valley in 1889 when the city of Johnstown, Pa., was literally washed from the face of the earth by the terrific onslaught of uncontrolled waters, is regarded as one of the outstanding achievements of motion-picture history.

George Schneidermann, photographer of "The Iron Horse" and "3 Bad Men," has set a new record for cameramen of the motion picture studio. From the most simple interior set used in the production, to the stupendous food scenes the genius of the cinematographer is evidenced.

Probably in no instance has a cameraman ever been confronted with the colossal task of finding successfully, forcefully and unobtrusively the scenes conceived for the reproduction of the Johnstown flood.

George O'Brien, Janet Gaynor and Florence Gilbert portray the leading feature roles with Max Davidson, Anders Randolph, Paul Nicholson, Paul Panzer and Walter Perry in the pivotal supporting roles. Today the State presents the last showing of Alma Rubens and Bert Lyell in "The Gilded Butterfly" with five acts of select vaudeville.

TICKETS ON SALE FOR "HAPPY HAWAII"

Tickets are now on sale for the engagement at the Circle Theatre of Mildred Leo Clemens, cousin of Mark Twain, who will be assisted in her production by a group of the world's greatest Hawaiian guitar players in a lecture on "Happy Hawaii" illustrated with movies, songs and dances, are now going fast.

This attraction is one that interested in as it affords them a change from the regular course of entertainment. The management has reserved the entire theatre and its making the prices the popular 50 cents for a special attraction of this kind is meeting with a favorable response from Manchesterites.

As a rule, Miss Clemens engagements in larger cities call for a top price scale of $1.50. Tickets may now be procured by phone, mail or at the Circle Theatre box office. The performance will be given next Friday night at eight o'clock.

PATTON ON AIR Tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock radio fans will have an opportunity to hear Lewis James, Fred Patton, Alma Kitchell and Grace Kerns, singing as a quartet from Station WJZ, New York.

With the exception of Miss Kitchell, Manchester music lovers have seen and heard the other members of the quartet. Patton has sung here often and James was heard at the police benefit at the State theater. Miss Kerns sang at a recital here last year.

SATURDAY, MARCH 20, 1926.

SPRING!

Tomorrow we shall greet what elusive, tricky and fickle but altogether desirable and desired nymph, Spring. There is no depending on her. She may come to us in her natural character, or tricked out in Winter's old clothes and carrying ice in her mouth to give her kiss the similitude of his blissing breath, or perhaps with a burst of torridity stolen from the baggage of Summer. You never can tell.

Yet because it will be the twenty-first of March the day will mark the passing of official Winter and the coming of the astronomical vernal season, and we shall breathe long and ardent sighs of relief, knowing that whether we can see her or not, whether we experience one of her kindly moods or one of her cruel, denying ones, Spring will once more be in our midst even if we are not yet in the midst of Spring.

We have had a tough old winter of it, here in Connecticut—dreary enough and cold enough, goodness knows, and with more than snow enough, during these last seven or eight weeks at least, to make even the chilliest blue nosed Spring that ever was a welcome exchange.

Whoso shall forecast the weather beyond ten minutes shall make a mockery of himself and a hissing of his name, be it so that he liveth in the land of New England. Yet the most timorous of us and the most pessimistic of us will have courage enough and hopefulness enough to assure ourselves, after tomorrow, that Winter himself is gone and that such frosts and snow and icy winds as shall come afterward are only shots from the Quaker guns he has left behind to cover his retreat.

Peekaboo, Spring! You may hide your face and wear the old boy's fur coat if you will—but you can't fool us. You're out there at the gate and you're coming through it tomorrow. You can't help yourself.

KEEPING COOL.

The New York Herald Tribune foresees a long and bitter controversy ahead over the question of prohibition, and in reply to the suggestion of a dry reader that the arguments of the wets have been receiving the greater attention in its columns, the Herald Tribune remarks:

We are requested to be eminently fair to both sides in the furious debate which is bound to come. That is a perfectly reasonable request, one which we hope to grant in the truest sense of the word. In return we venture to ask the debaters to be equally fair to one another, to credit one another with possessing all the qualities of decent, law-abiding, sensible citizens. In the debate, which promises to be bitter and prolonged, who will act as umpire? Is a prohibitionist to decide whether his side is receiving fair treatment? Will a wet be entitled to protest that the dries are receiving a shade the better in the controversy?

Fairness! Is it not a question of viewpoint, a matter of give and take? In a perfect world the debate on this momentous question might be conducted in an atmosphere of calm reason, logic and tolerance. In the world as it is there is need for all the tolerance and humor and generosity that every individual can muster.

To this idea we most heartily subscribe. It is not our idea that the dries seek the destruction of mankind, the ruin of religion, the debacle of law and order. It is our idea that they want to make the country better and safer to live in. Now if they will attribute the same kind of motives to the people who are advocating a change in the prohibitory laws we shall probably be able to thresh this thing out with far better results than if we permit ourselves, wets and dries alike, to lose our tempers.

We might even take a cue from the prize ring, where everybody concerned knows perfectly well that the boxer who lets his temper get the better of him and becomes ziggy always loses the fight.

FENCES. All things considered, most of the things that are printed in the newspapers are reasonably true. It's a rapidfire business, newspaper making, and sometimes blunders occur, of course, for the simple reason that there is no time for complete verification. Nine times out of ten, however, a newspaper error of fact cannot and does not live beyond the first day. A tenth time seems to be the matter of that fence which the New York park board insisted on putting up around the reservoir in Central park "to keep suicides from flinging themselves in."

Here was a story that, if it had been given a moment's thought, wouldn't have held water at all. People could not have been making a practice of throwing themselves into the Central Park reservoir without everybody, in New York and out of it, knowing about it. Yet there have been no stories of suicides in that lake for so long that the oldest inhabitant can't remember the latest instance of such a demise.

Nevertheless out pops the story and everybody falls for it. All the newspapers, pretty much, print pictures of the lake and the fence. The Herald did, along with the rest—and it freely admits that it ought to have known better.

Now comes along the inside story. It's not to keep suicides, but banana skins and other rubbish, out of the lake that the fence was planned. The suicides keep themselves out.

But this story is better yet. Here is a park board, consisting of supposedly level headed individuals, who expect to keep the kind of people who would throw rubbish in a park lake from doing so by building a seven foot fence around it—a seven footer, mind?

That is exactly the kind of thing prohibition is. And if this scheme works the same way, as it unquestionably will, we shall hear next that Central Park reservoir is so packed with banana skins and waste paper that you could walk across it. And that story won't be a fake.

MORE OF BORAH.

It is not surprising that the people of Great Britain are more or less aghast over the proposition of Senator Borah that the United States proceed to the prosecution of claims against Britain in behalf of citizens who suffered financial loss through the activities of the British navy in enforcing the blockade of Germany prior to our entrance into the war.

It required the mischievous if not malicious imagination of a Borah to resurrect this source of ill feeling, long ago regarded as condoned by our participation in the war. And it is doubtful if the Idaho man can get any support for his proposal outside of the very few windjammers in the Senate who cater to anti-British constituencies. But it might be worth while, as much in the interest of common sense as of international good feeling, if somebody high in administration councils would step on the suggestion good and hard and right now.

Already the English newspapers are having spasms over it and if the rest of Europe gets the notion that we are going to "Shylock" even our fellow-Saxon war ally, our repute abroad will gain nothing.

What Great Britain did in the German blockade was, in principle, what we did during the Civil war. And in spite of the fact that her naval officers and her prize courts and everybody connected with the business were just as stupidly offensive and high handed in their manner of doing as they possibly could have been. What they actually did was in the main entirely justifiable and right.

Nobody of any account in America wants any fuss made over that blockade business and the sooner England is given so to understand the better all around.

CRIME BLOC. The recodification of the criminal laws of New York has been regarded as practically assured because both political parties in the legislature have stood ready to act together in this matter. It appears now, however, that there is to be serious opposition to the proposed changes, arising from the vast army of lawyers with criminal practices with which the state and particularly the metropolis swarm.

It is rather difficult to know just how to express in printable language the things that might be said about this stamp of lawyer—the kind who will deliberately obstruct measures for the betterment of the public safety from no loftier purpose than the fattening of their own fees from crooks. But perhaps it isn't necessary to say very much. Everybody, including themselves, must be already fully aware that they are no whit better citizens than the criminals whom they protect and with whom, in many instances, they consort. There are several of them in the

New York assembly and senate and they intend to bedevil this utterly necessary reform if they can. Here is opportunity for the New York legislators to sit down, hard and finally, on the forces of evil, and in other words to combine, regardless of party or other considerations, and suppress the crime bloc within its own membership.

STEWART'S WASHINGTON LETTER

BY CHARLES P. STEWART Washington, March 20—In the belief that Governor Albert C. Ritchie of Maryland is due to figure increasingly in the news for some time to come, I chanced over to Baltimore the other day to find out for myself how he looks, talks and behaves, generally. He does all three admirably. Governor Ritchie, in short, has a charming personality. He's a big man physically, he obviously has brains and he's a gentleman all over, somewhat of the southern type.

It was a tradition, prior to Ritchie's regime, that governors of Maryland had only one term apiece. Ritchie's had two and now he speaks a third. It's his for the asking, on Maryland's part. This speaks well, and correctly, for his gubernatorial record.

It also means something else. For some reason, politicians consider a governorship a better taking-off place for the presidency than they do a senatorship. Ritchie could have had the latter, had he chosen, but he preferred to keep the governorship. The inference is plain enough.

Governor Ritchie is best known as a wet. Well, he is in favor of modifying the Volstead law, but not, he says, because he's wet. He's in favor of it because he thinks the cause of temperance was gaining ground to the time prohibition was enacted, and, in his opinion, absolute prohibition gave it a setback, and since then things have been getting worse.

He wants modification, not as a wet measure, but as a temperance one. However, his advocacy of prohibition modification is only incidental to his main issue which is—State rights.

"The war," he says, "started, or at any rate, greatly accelerated the tendency, which has since prevailed toward centralization of our government. In wartime centralization is necessary, but when the war was over, instead of getting back to what we started with, we proceeded to centralize more and more."

"Is this process of centralization continuing," went on the governor, "before long we shall find ourselves under a form of government entirely different from the one we started with, and, in my judgment it will be a change for the worse."

"I think, however, that we already have reached the peak. "The Democratic party, by tradition, is the party of state rights, but it seems to me the Republicans too, are sensing a change in public sentiment. At all events, I notice that men like Coolidge and Hoover are beginning to preach decentralization."

Governor Ritchie is frank to say that decentralization is going to be mighty hard work. First, of course, the country will have to vote for it. Then will begin the job of unscrambling the state rights which the federal government has taken unto itself. It will be difficult.

But he can't see that that's any reason for not making a start.

Fellowship of Prayer

Daily Lenten Bible reading and meditation prepared for Commission on Evangelism of Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America.

Read Jn. 15:12-15. See also Pet. 2:17. Text: 15-14. Ye are my friends. Meditation—Jesus commanded me to follow, to learn of him to be his servants, but last and best of all He called them friends. He has called us not to a blind obedience, but to share with us the very counsels of God that we might be more than servants even of the King of Love. What company of disciples ever chose a more beautiful name than "The Society of Friends."

"Nor lack I friends long tried and near and dear, Whose love is round me like this atmosphere, Warm, soft, and golden. For such gifts to me What shall I render, O my God, to Thee."

Prayer—Forgive O Lord that we sought Thy gracious gifts for ourselves alone. That we have thought to receive and absorb Thy bounty. Deliver Thy Church from the corruption of unfeelingness. Quicken in us a new appraisal of the least of those Thou dost love; and in all humility before God may we find the abundant life in the enriching friendship both of the humble and of the exalted. Amen.

IN NEW YORK

New York, March 20.—There is a general impression that mercenary New York would sell its own grandmother. No matter what the degree of sentiment or romance, if a sufficiently good price be offered—blush with sentiment and romance and hurra for the coin!

In a measure this is the case, but burg and there one can find in Manhattan the perfume of "lavender and old lace"; instances where sentiment, tradition and history defy the inroads of the commercialists.

Probably an outstanding case is that of a little square of property on Fifth avenue. It is in the very heart of Fifth avenue's most valuable property district—but a stone's throw from the public library. A modest board fence encloses it. The fence bumps rudely into one of the smart shops of the Avenue. The fence encloses a lot, the value of which is at least a million dollars. This lot is the backyard of one of the fine old-fashioned "red fronts." In the red front lives a nice old-fashioned lady, one Miss Wendell. This million-dollar backyard, so the story goes, is the playground of a pet dog and Persian cat. And no amount of money, it is said, could buy it.

Recently it was reported that someone observed, through drawn curtains, a nice old-time seamstress in a nice old-fashioned apron, sewing on something-or-other. And this, my friends, in the very heart of Manhattan's gold belt—in a zone where, all about, the taxis and private limousines of the modern day spenders rush about like frightened ants.

And there is another place in Greenwich Village. It is a little triangular plot of ground, just off Sixth avenue on 11th street. Through an iron fence may be seen a half dozen gravestones, and on a little bronze tablet, the announcement that this is the burial ground of some of the early day Portuguese and Spanish Jewish settlers.

For many years efforts have been made to purchase this plot. Fabulous sums, it is said, have been offered. But those interested in the little triad neither need nor care for the money. Perhaps New York's real aristocracy is made up of ancestors of the Jewish settlers from Portugal and Spain. Early New York history is filled with their exploits and theirs is one of the longest pages in Manhattan's lore—not excluding the Dutch settlers.

—GILBERT SWAN.

It started out when mother bought some goods down at the store, an' little sister soon found out just what the goods was for. She watched the patient cutting of the cloth to pattern size an' even tried to help a bit—like every youngster tries.

The trimming and the pinning were the parts mom did by hand, an' quite a bit too difficult for sis to understand. But every move was gazed at by this interested child, who knew what mom was makin', and whose hopes were runnin' wild.

The hemming and the stitchin' and the basting by machine still found wee smiling daughter, very much upon the scene. The several yards of pretty cloth, which face was due to drape, were very slow but surely, drifting into proper shape.

At last, the final touches, and a youngster's shout of glee at seeing mother's hand at sewing as pretty as could be. Now why was little sister thrilled? I'll bet you'd never guess. But, never mind, I'll tell you: Sister has a brand new dress.

APPRENTICES WIN IN FIRST PERIOD

Vanquish A. S. D. Varsity in Second of Series at West Hartford—Pospisil and Zamiechi Shine. A first quarter spurt in which nearly the total score was run up by the Trade school in its game with the American School for the Deaf in West Hartford last night. The local boys came out on top by the score of 28 to 26. Things started off well for Manchester and the passing and shooting of the Apprentices in the first period was nearly perfect. After that, however, the fight in the locals died down and they kept slipping until the end of the game. The home team fought hard in the remaining three quarters but were able only to approach within two points of the Trade school. Pospisil played well both on the floor and his score sheet showed five baskets. The most consistent of the bunch, however, was Zamiechi who had plenty of fight in him from the first whistle to the end of the game. The others were content to rest on the laurels they had won in the first quarter. For the Mutes Galluzzo and Kosinski, both three year players on the team, stood head and shoulders above the rest of their men. Galluzzo dropped in four from the floor while Kosinski was responsible for five baskets. This was the second game which has been won by the Trade school against the Mutes this year. Both were played in West Hartford but last night's affair was the most closely contested of all. The summary: Trade School. FG. F. T. PROVES THAT CHEVROLETS ARE LONG LIVED CARS.

A thirteen-year-old Chevrolet has been driven more than 280,000 miles by A. R. M. Stone, stationery broker of 6135 Wagner Avenue, St. Louis, Mo., who believes his machine is the oldest Chevrolet still in active service. The mileage represents more than 10 trips around the world.

Mr. Stone, a former locomotive engineer, purchased the car in 1921, the first year of Chevrolet production. The loss of a leg had incapacitated him for railroad work.

In order to operate both the clutch and brake pedals with his one foot he connected them with a cross bar. This enabled him to throw out the clutch and apply the brakes in one operation. He drives from 60 to 70 miles daily, within a radius of 40 miles of St. Louis.

Mr. Stone says he has replaced the car top and in addition has spent only $4 for replacement of parts. The Chevrolet has averaged 25 miles per gallon, he says. The car thus far has burned about 10,400 gallons of gasoline or approximately the capacity of two railroad tank cars.

Buick is More Expensively Built But it Costs Less to Buy one

Buick is built more expensively than any other car in or near the Buick price class.

"Expensively built" means that the different parts and units of the Buick motor car are the best that engineers can design. But, thanks to the large volume which public demand has given to Buick, and thanks also to production methods that are models of efficiency in an efficient industry, the Buick motor car can be sold to you at a very moderate price.

Many Buick features are duplicated only in America's highest priced motor cars.

Buick, for instance, uses the Torque Tube Drive to transmit the drive of the rear wheels to the chassis, instead of hardening the rear springs with this added duty. The highest priced car in America uses the torque tube. And so does Buick!

The American public wants finer transportation and Buick provides it at lower cost. Consequently Buick is a very popular car. Come in and examine the Better Buick.

the Better Buick

*One year after another for the last eight years, Buick has held top place in dollars and cents volume of business among all members of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce.

Buick Motor Cars are now sold on the basis of Federal Taxes effective midnight March 28th.

BASING TIRE COST ON ACTUAL MILEAGE.

Motorists are rapidly accepting the policy of the largest users of tires in computing tire costs, according to Morris Housen of Depot Square Service Station, Manchester

Firestone dealers.

"The biggest taxicab and bus companies in the United States," Mr. Housen said, "do not base their tire costs on the original price of their equipment but on the final cost or the cost per mile.

"With the large highway transportation companies of the country investing thousands of dollars annually in tires, they must know the exact cost of their equipment. The difference in tire costs may mean the difference between profit and loss in operation for these big taxicab and bus companies.

"The speedometer reading becomes an important item in their bookkeeping. They figure the actual mileage obtained from their tires and thus compute from the first cost the actual cost per mile, including the cost of repairs, if any."

There is evidence that aphids, which infest so many crops, may carry plant disease from one family of plants to another distinct family.

THE YELLOW STUB

BEGIN HERE TODAY

HENRY RAND, 35, a business man, is found murdered in a cheap hotel in Grafton. Police find a woman's handkerchief and the yellow stub of a theater ticket.

JIMMY RAND, his son, goes to Cleveland, where the theater is. The stub is traced to THOMAS FOGARTY, who says he gave it to OLGA MAYNARD, a cabaret singer.

Jimmy meets and falls in love with MARY LOWELL. Later he encounters Olga. She faints when she learns police want her for murder. Mary, out with SAMUEL CHURCH, a wealthy lawyer, sees Jimmy lift Olga into a taxi and misunderstands.

Olga tells police the stub and handkerchief came from possession of a man who "picked her up" two nights before. Jimmy receives several mysterious warnings to leave Cleveland but ignores them. Later he is attacked at night by two men. He escapes, after seizing a blackjack from one of them.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXXIII

JIMMY, sitting in the hotel mezzanine, saw Olga Maynard approaching and rose to meet her. "I'll have to apologize for my appearance," she said, taking his hand. "You didn't give me much time, and I'm still dressed for the street."

"You look fit to go anywhere," he said. "But we're only going to some place where we can eat and hear a little music."

"And dance," she asked eagerly. "You know I've never danced with you and you're a wonderful dancer. I've seen you."

"Why, that night you first spoke to me. I saw you dancing with the girl you were with before you came to see me. Who was she?" She was smiling.

"She was wearing a fur-trimmed coat over a blue worsted street dress, and a small tight-fitting black hat, beneath which her light curly hair showed."

"You look fit to go anywhere," he said. "But we're only going to some place where we can eat and hear a little music."

"And dance," she asked eagerly. "You know I've never danced with you and you're a wonderful dancer. I've seen you."

"You look fit to go anywhere," he said. "But we're only going to some place where we can eat and hear a little music."

"You look fit to go anywhere," he said. "But we're only going to some place where we can eat and hear a little music."

He had been answering in monosyllables to her conversational commonplace, his mind far away. "We'll start right now," he answered, throwing down his napkin and pushing back his chair. And then they were on the floor and he abandoned himself completely to the music.

They danced on and on. They were still standing on the floor, clapping their hands, long after the saxophone's plaintive "that's all," and they laughed when they saw that the orchestra leader was bowing directly to them and that they were alone on the floor.

"I must say," she laughed when they had sat down again, "that when you get your mind on a thing it doesn't get off quickly."

"Meaning just what?" he asked. "Well, when you make up your mind to dance, you dance, don't you? Wasn't it funny, the two of us standing out here all alone, clapping like two kids?"

"It was your dancing. That's the answer." He changed the subject. "Music is a great tonic, isn't it? Dancing is music like this makes you want to live, doesn't it?"

She nodded thoughtfully. "And it helps you to forget."

"Yes," he said slowly, "it helps you to forget."

She turned her face away, made a pretense of studying her glass. He lit a cigarette and offered the package to her.

"I've almost forgot," he said. "You smoke, don't you?"

"No, I don't smoke."

"No, I don't smoke."

"No, I don't smoke."

"No, I don't smoke."

"No, I don't smoke."

"No, I don't smoke."

"No, I don't smoke."

"No, I don't smoke."

"No, I don't smoke."

"Jim, I want to help you. It's awfully hard to help you. You are trying now—you are helping me, Olga. I can't ask more."

She was silent for a moment. Then she said, "What else are you trying to forget, Jim?"

He shrugged his shoulders. "Why, nothing, Olga. Nothing else. What else could there be?"

"It's a girl, isn't it?" she persisted. "Was it the girl I saw you with here that night?"

He laughed and lifted his glass of water to his lips. "There's no other girl."

She looked at him intently. "You'd never make a successful liar. It's true, isn't it?"

He said in a low voice, "No, it's not true. There's no girl."

She ignored his denial. "Whether it is, Jim, she has no right to do what she's doing. She isn't good enough for you."

He said in a low voice, "No, it's not true. There's no girl."

"Why not? I've got plenty of money."

"Didn't you know that there were some things that it's hard for money to cover up just as there are some things that money can't buy? Just at present you've got a gorgeous green and red and blue eye on one side of your face."

"Hello, Jim. I've been looking for you. Didn't you tell me you'd meet me tonight at the Beaux Arts Restaurant?"

"Yes, and I tried to make it, Jerry, but they just wouldn't let me. They gave me this, so Judy and I got out and we're just going somewhere else to eat, Julia, let me present Jerry Hathaway, pal of mine. Jerry this is Miss Deem."

CHICAGO TEAM'S PROSPECTS FOR THE SEASON OF 1926

White Sox Much Better Than They Were This Time Last Year.

Shreveport, La., March 20.—Prospects for the 1926 Chicago White Sox are much better than they were at a corresponding period last year, to state the case conservatively. Between seasons, the club has added some infielders, who really seem to be worth while. The Sox can stand this innovation.

Lack of reserve infield strength in 1925 caused them to fall out of the first division after Manager Eddie Collins pulled up lame. The team won eleven and lost twenty-four games during his absence and this was a thorough tip-off on the situation.

Things Look Better.

However, things look decidedly better now. Bill Hunnefeld, purchased from Portland of the Coast League and Ray Morehart, a Sox farm-hand for two years, are two very promising infield rookies. Hunnefeld is a shortstop and Morehart a second baseman.

But most of the shortstopping will be done by Everett Scott, at least until further notice. The veteran, who became a free agent after the last world series, appears to have achieved a renewal of youth. He reported in good condition and if his legs hold up, he will get the job.

Sheely, of course, will continue at first base. He will have a capable understudy in Harry McCurdy, who hit .352 in the Texas league last year.

Eddie's Legs Bad.

Eddie Collins' bad leg is entirely mended and he expects to do all of the second basing, which will be plenty. Willie Kamm has had competition for third base and the regular outfield will be Bib Falk, Johnny Mossell and Bill Barrett, as of yore.

Spencer Harris is likely to be retained and so is Tom Guley, who was with Cleveland a couple of seasons back.

Then there is Lee Najo Allines, who goes by the name of Najo. He is a fast Mexican Indian but will have a hard job trying to crowd the others out.

The Sox seem to have plenty of live ones in the pitching line. Their staff was "short" last season. The two Teds, Lyons and Blankenship, will be the mainstays with the veteran "spitballer" "Red" Faber, working about every fifth day. Lyons was one of four American League pitchers to win twenty or more games last season, while Blankenship, after an indifferent start, won fifteen games after the fourth of July.

Alphonse Thomas was acquired from Baltimore. His international league record showed thirty victories last season.

RISKO WINS BOUT WITH BERLENBACH

Light Heavyweight Champion Knocked Down Twice in Opening Rounds.

New York, March 20.—New York's light heavyweight still was in a daze this morning, following the stunning defeat of Paul Berlenbach, light heavyweight champion, by Johnny Risko, Cleveland heavyweight, in ten sizzling rounds last night at Madison Square Garden. Quoted as low as one to two in the betting, Risko, famous as a fistic "catcher," won eight of the ten rounds, scored two knockdowns and had the champion on the verge of a knockout on many occasions. Berlenbach's title was not at stake but his reputation was. He lost caste as a possible challenger for the heavyweight title and his plans to meet either Tunney or Wills this summer received a setback from which they are not likely to recover at an early date. Tunney and Jack Delaney beat Risko in ten round bouts but it must be admitted that they did not lambaste the Risko who was on exhibition last night.

The fight was a thriller from the first bell. In the first round Risko dropped Paul for a count of four with a left hook. He almost had the champion out but his follow-up was wild.

Berlenbach fell to his knees from a terrific right to the jaw as the bell ended the second round and reeled about, perilously near a knockout in each of the third, fourth, fifth and sixth rounds. He won the tenth, earning his only round of the fight.

GRANGE MAY TOUR

Birmingham, Ala., March 20.—Ten to twenty persons were reported killed in an explosion at the Woodward furnace, an industrial blast furnace located ten miles from here early today.

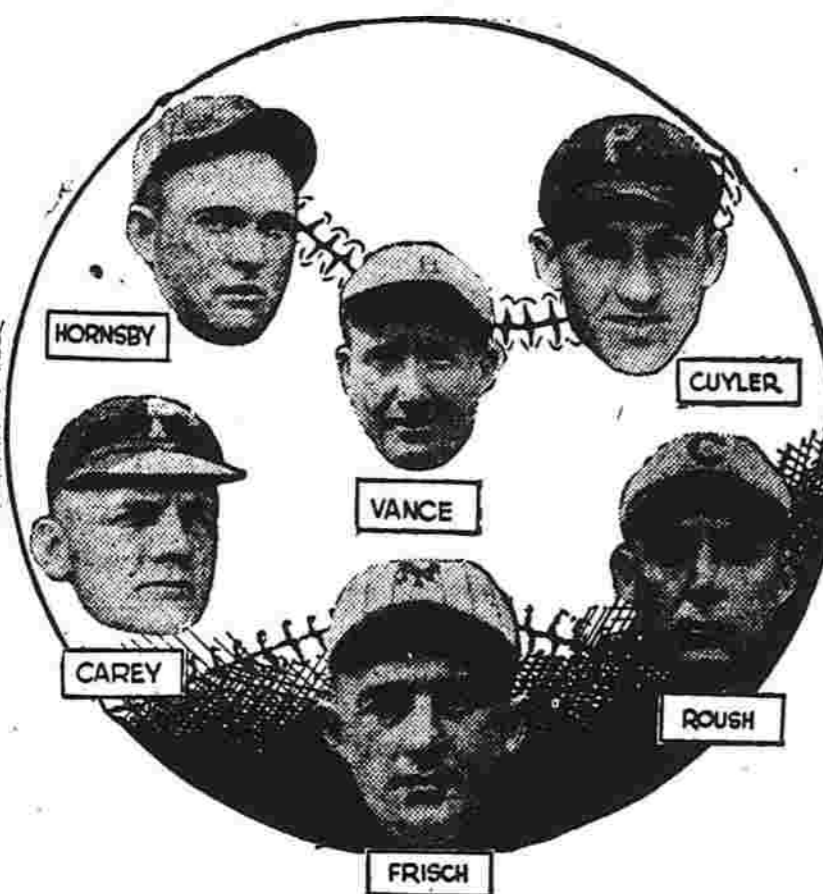

ROOKIES LEAVE CAMP

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 20.—Four rookies were on their way out of the Yankee camp today. They were Walter Gilbert, infielder, and Arthur Jacobs, Ruel Love and Arthur Reinholz, pitchers. Ruth came out of his slump in yesterday's tie with the Braves, getting two doubles.

NEXT BOWLING TOURNAMENT.

Toledo, March 20.—Peoria, Ill., will be the scene of the 1927 tournament of the American Bowling Congress. The Illinois city was selected by unanimous vote of delegates at the annual business session here last night. Secretary A. L. Langtry was re-elected for a term of ten years at salary increased to $10,000. A. J. Baxter of Huntington, West Va., first vice president, was elected to the presidential chair, succeeding C. C. Ryan of Kenosha.

WHO'S YOUR HERO?

Is he good old Max Carey of the Pirates? Or maybe you prefer Kiki Cuyler of the same team. And there's Dazzy Vance, the Dodger pitcher. Rogers Hornsby, there's a sweet ball player for you! Yes, and how about Frankie Frisch, the Fordham Flash, and Eddie Roush, the Red's speedy fly chaser? You can think of many more. There wasn't room for all of them in this picture. And remember, your particular hero may be in the American League, anyway. Just pick out your favorite, fellers, and write 200 words to The Herald about him. The contest closes March 31 at midnight. If a Manchester boy doesn't win the nation-wide contest The Herald will send the local winner to a big league game.

Meriden High School Defeated by Agawam High, of Agawam, Mass., in Thrilling Battle—Rogers High Wins; Other Results.

(By Staff Correspondent)

Goddard Gym, Medford, Mass., March 19.—One of the three Connecticut entries in the Tufts tournament was eliminated here at one o'clock this afternoon when Meriden High School was forced to accept a one point defeat at the hands of the strong Agawam High school quintet of Agawam, Mass. The score was 25 to 24.

It was the first close game of the tournament. The Bay State team started strong and was leading 12 to 6 at halftime. Coach Coughlin of Meriden started his regular team but "yanked" two of his aces when they did not show their true blue form. Humpage and Altobello being the victims. Al Smith, a substitute player who relieved Altobello was the star of the game. He sunk three field goals and seven out of ten foul attempts. Agawam enjoyed a fairly comfortable lead until the last five minutes when the Nutmeg State team staged a big rally that all but overcame the lead.

Medford Wins Opener

Medford, Mass., runnerup in the tournament last year, won the opening game of the tourney by defeating Bangor, Maine High school 17-12. The Bay State quintet outclassed the Maine team even more than the score indicates and led 6 to 0 at halftime. De Pina, four field goals, led the winners.

Northampton Wins Easily

The second game of the tournament resulted in a 40 to 14 victory for Northampton, Mass. High over Nashua High of New Hampshire. The winners, led by Miller, their six foot, five inch center who tallied six field goals, outclassed the Granite Staters from the start. They led 16 to 3 at halftime.

Rogers High Wins

Rogers High of Newport, R. I., winners of the New England title last year, trotted onto the floor next and disposed of the crack Montpelier, Vermont five by a 31 to 17 score. The winners displayed a brilliant passing game that swept the Green Mountain team off its feet. Rogers led at halftime 13 to 4. The scoring was well divided.

CHANGE IN RULES

New York, March 20.—Changes of only a minor character were contemplated today when the football rules committee went into annual session at the Hotel Roosevelt. E. K. Hall, Dartmouth, who was re-elected chairman of the body at its opening session last night, recently stated that there was little need for tampering with the rules at this time.

TELEPHONE IS BUSY AFTER TUFTS GAME

Over 300 Calls Answered at South Office of The Herald Yesterday Afternoon.

(By Staff Correspondent)

At 4:30 yesterday afternoon The Herald's staff correspondent at Medford, Mass., telephoned in the result of the South Manchester-Manchester, N. H. basketball game and from that hour until after 8 o'clock the telephone bell in the South office of The Herald rang continuously. There were over 300 calls recorded.

It was hard to believe that so much local interest centered about the game but the calls proved that the whole town was watching events at the Tufts tournament.

It was found that about one half of the calls that came in were made by girls and women. When a man was given the score he merely said "Thank you" and hung up. But when the girls heard that the local team had been defeated they generally concluded their call with such remarks as "Isn't it too bad?" "I'm so sorry" or "We must have had bad luck."

FRESHMEN DEFEAT TALCOTT SCHOOL

The High school freshmen took the measure of the Talcott Junior High school team at the School street Rec yesterday afternoon by the score of 38 to 26. The game was fast and well played by both teams but the locals were better on their shots than the visitors. Renn and Sturgeon starred for the Freshmen while Boisseau and Hansen were the shining lights of the visiting aggregation.

S. M. H. S. ELIMINATED, 31-14 BY NEW HAMPSHIRE QUINTET

Locals Meet Superior Foe in Granite Staters—Mantelli Injured—Plays Only Half of Game—All Connecticut Teams Out of Tourney—Finals Tonight.

(By Staff Correspondent)

Goddard Gym, Medford, Mass., March 20.—Six Massachusetts, one New Hampshire, and one Rhode Island high school basketball team survived the first round of the sixth annual New England interscholastic tournament here last night. All three entries from Connecticut including South Manchester were eliminated while teams from Maine and Vermont met with similar fate. From the looks of the teams during the opening games it is apparent that the winner of the tourney will be one of the following three: Rogers High, of Newport, R. I.; Fitchburg, Mass. High, or Manchester, New Hampshire. The tourney will be completed with the finals slated for 7:30 this evening.

Conn. Falls Quickly

One of the biggest surprises of the first day's results was the complete elimination of the Nutmeg State teams. They had been counted on to send a team into at least the second round. The upset started at noon when Agawam, Conn. High 25 to 24. This was followed by another upset when New Haven Commercial, holders of one leg on the handsome Tufts-Fletcher trophy, were completely smothered by Fitchburg, Mass. High, 32 to 9. The Nutmeg state team never had a chance.

Mantelli Is Injured

To complete the punishment, Manchester, New Hampshire High toppled South Manchester, Conn. High in an easy manner 31 to 14. The Silk City team was outclassed from the start by the superior passwork of the Granite State combination. The Connecticut team received a severe blow, however, when it lost the services of its captain and best player Elmo Mantelli. This stocky flash was forced to retire from the game just before the first half ended as the result of being knocked to the floor in a scrimmage under the basket. His right knee was severely wrenched and he had to be carried from the floor. Mantelli was unable to respond to treatment given him between the halves and consequently the Nutmeg State team was forced to play minus the services of its leader during the remainder of the game. Following the game Mantelli was taken to a doctor's office and an X-Ray was taken of his injured knee.

It was not the loss of Mantelli, that decided the game, however. But it is true that the team might have played a better game with him. Yet as a matter of fact, it held its opponents to a much closer score while he was out of the lineup. This can be explained by the fact that the New Hampshire team eased up a bit in the final half.

Quish's Man Scores

The game started off in a much similar manner to the Manchester-New Haven Commercial game here last year. It was the work of the opposing center that started the "pot a boiling." Like Davin eluded people here last year, so did "Red" Timin elude Jimmy Quish yesterday. Timin scored twice and to start the fireworks and when he added another basket a few minutes later, Coach Clarke sent in Gotberg to replace him. Bray, who was pitted against Bozek, New Hampshire's brilliant right forward, was also called to the bench by Clarke and La Coss sent in to check him. Neither substitution proved sufficient to check the uncanny eyes of the Granite State pair.

Pile Up Early Lead

Brilliant passwork coupled with splendid shooting on the part of Bozek and Timin netted the New Hampshire team a 16 to 2 lead at the end of the first quarter, Connecticut's only score being a sucker shot by Mantelli. The second period found the same story and Connecticut was trailing 22 to 9 at intermission.

S. M. H. S. Fights Hard

Minus Mantelli, the S. M. H. S. boys waked a hard fight during the last half but were unable to overcome the lead. At the end of the third quarter the ultimate winners led 29 to 11. It was simply a case of the best team winning. The team from the northern part of New England possessed the better teamwork and took advantage of every opportunity. Their passes were of a mixed sort, some long and some short but they were invariably of the bullet-like type. Mantelli was the whole cheese for the Nutmegers while he was in the first half. Bozek was high scorer for the winners and incidentally it might be added that he stands a mighty fine chance of being on the All New England All-Star team at the conclusion of the tournament tonight.

The S. M. H. S. players will remain to see the finish of the tournament returning home tomorrow morning on the first train leaving the South Station in Boston. They will arrive in Manchester, about noon.

USING SCHOOLS FOR DANCES NOW

Larger Halls Have Become Unpopular—Small Places More Informal.

Schoolhouses as dance halls in this town have become probably more popular than any other halls in this section, it seems, and more and more dances are being conducted in the assembly halls of the schools in the outlying districts of Manchester than ever before.

At present dances are being held in the Buckland, Manchester Green, Keeney street and South schools while the assembly hall of the Harding school is used more or less as a dance hall by different organizations in the North End.

Want Smaller Halls
 There was a time when the bigger dance halls attracted their crowds but this day seems to be fast fading. The crowds rather fancy the small school halls with their alternate old fashioned and round dances and the larger halls are left severely alone.

Little Kitchen Dances
 These affairs might be likened to the old time kitchen dances which were very popular in this section 25 and 50 years ago. The school halls did not become popular, however, until the old fashioned dances were struck the town. When the younger folks saw the enjoyment their fathers and mothers were getting out of the old square sets they fell into line and now the old fashioned dances are as popular with the children as with the older people.

SUPPER BY MEN'S CLUB OF CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH
 The Men's club of the North Congregational church held an unusual get-together last night at the Manchester Community club in the form of a supper and informal business meeting combined. The supper, as usual, was served by the club and supervised by Director G. H. Washburn. The menu consisted of roast beef, mashed potatoes, stewed tomatoes and ride pudding. The tables were tastefully decorated in Easter colors of lavender and yellow and the color scheme was followed in general throughout in the decorations of the hall.

After the supper C. P. Quimby kept the men's constant roars laughing in the evening. His supper 7:30 p. m. address by Professor Mr. E. P. Walton's illustration on "Forestry in the Woods" was equally instructive covered a large field in a clear and interesting way. Mr. G. Grazadio led the men in some of the old time favorites. After the gathering the men took advantage of the club in the parlors and the checker boards and other forms of diversion that suited their particular fancy.

SURPRISE PARTY.
 A surprise party was given in honor of Louis Genovese of North Main street last night by twenty-five friends. One of the features of the evening was the duet by Mr. James Foley and Aldo Pagani. During the evening Peter Genovese and Mrs. Marcella Genovese of Rockeleston. Games and dancing were enjoyed.

Shot-Gun Bill Aims to Miss--But Misses Aim

Bill Streeter, down in Buckland, got orney this last week and bought a shotgun. He figures on being a good shot by the time next hunting season rolls around. He decided to take a little target practice one day this past week and picked out the Buckland station platform as the place to get it.

The assistant passenger agent at Buckland—no kidding, there is such a position down there—set up the tin cans and bottles on a pole across the tracks for Bill to shoot at. And, to say the least, "to shoot at" is the right expression. The shot went in the general direction of the targets but none of them ever reached their destination—the destination Bill mapped out for them.

It wasn't long before the a. p. a. (assistant passenger agent) ran out of targets—the wind from Bill's bullets carried them all over into the muddy tobacco land. He looked around and the first thing he "pied" was Julius Strong's chapeau (Bucklandish for hat). Julius is the passenger agent, night clerk, telegraph operator, and train dispatcher at Buckland. He wasn't on duty at the time.
