

NOTED PRELATE IS HONORED BY HUB CATHOLICS

Cardinal O'Connell Observes His Silver Jubilee—Every Church in Archdiocese Aids in Celebration.

Boston, Mass., May 19.—William Cardinal O'Connell, Archbishop of the See of Boston, Metropolitan of New England, member of the Sacred College of Cardinals and Dean of the American Hierarchy, today observed his silver jubilee in the episcopacy. It was a memorable day in the history of the Catholic church in America.

In every parish church in the archdiocese, church members, all of whom have been celebrating a "spiritual bouquet" of priests and attendants, participated in the Cardinal's honor. At the cathedral of Holy Cross here the Cardinal started the day by celebrating a mass of thanksgiving.

Second Event
The second event on the program was a reception tendered to his honor by faculty and students at Boston college and high school. It was in this very building as a young man that Cardinal O'Connell attended school.

From the reception, the noted prelate went to the diocesan executive office where diocesan consultants greeted him. Here the "spiritual bouquet" of priests and laymen of the archdiocese, comprising more than a million people, was presented to the cardinal. For months countless masses have been offered for the cardinal's jubilee and lately have offered up for his intentions holy communions, rosaries, stations of the cross, and pious aspirations. These were tabulated by the various pastors and sent to the committee in charge, who today offered the "spiritual bouquet" to his eminence.

Spiritual Bouquet
The presentation of the "spiritual bouquet" was followed by a formal presentation of a new seminary building, the gift of the clergy of the archdiocese.

Gentlemen of the diocese who have been honored by Pope since Cardinal O'Connell came to Boston as archbishop, were the next to greet the cardinal. The knights of the Holy Sepulchre and Knights of St. Gregory and others were on hand. Receptions to the cardinal by the faculty and student body of St. John's seminary in Brighton and by the faculty and students of Boston college, were the two next events of the celebration.

A visit to St. Elizabeth's hospital and to the Veterans' hospital in West Roxbury concluded the busy program. Members of the American Legion Auxiliary had a set of two metal book ends to present to Cardinal O'Connell. They were made by disabled veterans of the hospital in West Roxbury.

U. S. WINS POINT AT ARMS PARLEY

Geneva, May 19.—The United States won a point when the League of Nations disarmament commission today, according to the request of Hugh Gibson, American delegate, decided that the work of the sub-committee dealing with the economic aspects of disarmament should be entirely divorced from that of this sub-committee. It was decided that this sub-committee shall be composed of one expert from each of the twenty delegations here. Upon the suggestion of Senator Perez, Argentine delegate, and despite the protests of Paul Boncour, French delegate, the commission appointed today a drafting committee composed of the chief delegates of the United States, Britain, Germany, France, Italy, Belgium, Argentina, Polish and Japanese delegations, for the purpose of determining which questions shall be considered by the military sub-committee and which by the economic sub-committee.

CHANCELLOR EXPLAINS NEW CABINET'S PLANS

Berlin, May 19.—The policy of the new German Cabinet was briefly outlined before the Reichstag today by Chancellor Marx.
Marx explained the government's intention of continuing the foreign policy, as marked by the Locarno treaties, the League of Nations, and the Dawes Plan.
The chancellor voiced his determination to settle the flag controversy and to oppose dispossession of the Hohenzollerns and other rulers of German states from their private estates.
Whether Marx will ask for a vote of confidence was not known, but it was regarded as certain to be granted if he made the demand.

New York, May 19.—One girl was killed and four other persons were injured in a collision between two automobiles here early today.
Stella Kassner, pretty waitress, was crushed to death. Three of the injured were questioned by police. They were Lillian Mack, 25, a Coney Island dancer, who said she was "picked up" by the party; Isidore Puroff and Alexander Sumst. The Mack girl said the chauffeur of the car she was riding in fled after the accident.
The fourth person injured was Harry White, president of the White Packing Co., who was alone in his sedan when the other auto crashed into it.

ESCAPED MURDERER CAUGHT IN BUFFALO

Buffalo, N. Y., May 19.—Richard Hammock, 25-year-old murderer and much-sought in Trenton, N. J., was being held here today for a New Jersey authorities. Hammock was arrested last night.
Hammock is alleged to have been a member of a gang of six handits that held up and shot the driver of a truck load of silk near Trenton in 1918. After killing the driver the men escaped with the truck load of silk valued at $38,000.
Later, Hammock was captured, convicted of murder and sentenced to life imprisonment.
He was sent to the state prison at Trenton from where he escaped but was recaptured. A few months ago he escaped again and in spite of the dragnet spread for him eluded police until his capture here last night.

AIR MAIL PILOT KILLED IN STORM

Suburbs of Chicago Swept by Baby Cyclone—Much Damage to Property.

Chicago, May 19.—Ross Kirkpatrick, an air mail pilot, is dead, and several hundred families are homeless today as the result of a small tornado which swept over the southwestern suburbs of Chicago.

The storm was accompanied by heavy rain and hail, more than an inch of water falling within a half-hour. Chicago proper escaped the strong winds, but hundreds of cellars were reported flooded. One man was knocked unconscious by the large hail stones.

Towns Suffer.
The towns of Harvey and Argo suffered most. In Harvey more than 200 houses were unroofed and other damage was done.

Kirkpatrick, a former army aviator, was enroute from Detroit to Chicago with a cargo of mail when his plane was caught in the vortex of the storm. He was within 15 miles of the landing field at Maywood, when he crashed into a swamp, two miles west of Argo.

Plane Wrecked.
The wrecked plane was not discovered until 8 o'clock last night, but the clock on the control board had stopped at 6:45, indicating the accident had occurred at that time. The flyer is believed to have died instantly.
Kirkpatrick had won fame in the army by his daring attempts to break the non-stop flight record. His outstanding achievement was a flight from Mitchell Field, Long Island, to Nome, Alaska.

WORLD WAR MEMORIAL IN MANCHESTER SURE

The adjutant of the Dilworth-Cornell Post, No. 102, American Legion, has just been advised by Governor John H. Trumbull that the application for a war memorial has been approved and that a 105 M-M Howitzer weighing over 2700 pounds will be shipped to the Dilworth-Cornell Post No. 102, as a World War memorial for Manchester.
The favorite outdoor exercise these days is picking dandelions, not for "greens" for it is getting a little late for that, nor to eradicate the plants and prevent their spoiling velvety lawns. The quest now is for the bright yellow flowers, and the questionable purpose-making dandelion wine.

ROGERS POKES FUN AT LEAGUE

Cowboy Philosopher Says Japs
Are Too Busy Arming to Talk Disarmament.

Geneva, May 19.—Will Rogers, cowboy philosopher and kisser extraordinary of personages in high places, finds the parleys on disarmament here very diverting.
"I've heard so much about disarmament," said Rogers today to the International News Service, "that when I get back home I'm going to tell the boys on the range to treat their guns for slingshots."
"Everyone talked disarmament today except Japan and she's so busy arming she hasn't even got time to talk about disarmament."
The only time the Japanese delegates ever said anything was at the economic conference when they wanted to put something over on the United States by making the League of Nations recommend removal of restrictions upon Japanese immigration.
"It's a funny thing you know, France wants to reduce England's navy. England wants to reduce France's army. But both of them want to reduce the United States' army and navy."

WETS IN THE SENATE DEMAND REFERENDUM

Washington, May 19.—A test vote upon the wet proposal for a national referendum on prohibition will be forced in the Senate if the administration seeks immediate enactment of the Goff bill, putting "new teeth" in the Volstead Act, wet leaders said today.
The wet block decided to demand a test vote on the question of giving the people a chance to ballot directly on prohibition in order to place the Senate on record and add to its campaign ammunition. This action will be a strategic manoeuvre in the wet war on prohibition because the wets believe the Goff bill will be unable to permit consideration of the bill only if an agreement can be reached to ward off protracted debate. Otherwise, they fear a "wet and dry" war on the floor of the Senate might develop to defeat the remainder of the administration's program.

800 FOOT DIRIGIBLE STARTED IN AKRON, O.

Akron, Ohio, May 19.—Dr. Karl Arntson, of the Goodyear Zeppelin Corporation, today announced the completion of plans for the company's proposed 800-foot air Levitan. Work on designing the craft has been going forward at the Goodyear plant for several weeks.
The huge dirigible will be 135 feet in diameter and will have a capacity of 6,000,000 cubic feet compared with the 3,500,000 of the Los Angeles.

VARE WINS BY OVER 100,000 IN PENNSYLVANIA PRIMARIES

INDEPENDENTS IN POLAND TO HELP HALLER

Senate Worried Over Rumor That There Will Be a Split in the Reorganized Diet.

Warsaw, May 19.—M. Trompczynski, speaker of the Polish Senate, left today for Posen in an effort to prevent the convocation of an independent assembly by a group of members of the Polish Diet, understood to be supporting General Haller, chief antagonist of Marshal Pilsudski.

Pilsudski, who overthrew the Witos government last week by a bloody coup d'etat, is reported in ill health. His failure to establish a dictatorship is understood also to have alienated his Socialist and Democratic supporters, some of whom have gone to Posen to aid the movement for an independent assembly.

To Elect President.
Regardless of what takes place in Posen, the National Assembly will be convoked in Warsaw for the purpose of electing a president. Pilsudski has indicated his willingness to accept the presidency.
General Pilsudski has liberated all of his antagonists, arrested during the siege of Warsaw, with the exception of Generals Ziszeski and Rozwadowski, who commanded the troops defending the defeated government. These two generals are accused by Pilsudski with violating the ethics of war and with severity towards the civil population.
No court martials have been requested.

HIGHLAND PARK DAY IN OUR COURT

Several Residents Present to Hear "Practical Joke" Row Settled.

The quiet hamlet in the southeastern part of the town known as Highland Park has had its day in court. Paul Mothes of Rockville, who is employed in the paper mill there, was before Judge Johnson today on the charge of assault on one of his fellow workmen, Ronald C. Hillman. About a dozen of the workmen, including some of the foremen from the mill, were present to hear the trial.
Mothes pleaded guilty. The assault was the outcome of a joke being played on employees of the mill. Those who drive autos to work and park them in their usual places have been annoyed to find them somewhere else. Oftentimes a flat tire is found just about quitting time, somebody purposely letting the air out of the tire. This has been going on for sometime.
Come to Blows.
Mothes accused Hillman of moving his car. One thing led to another and last night about 8:30 Mothes struck Hillman two or three blows and as a result Hillman's right eye was badly discolored. He complained to the police and Sergeant John Crockett was detailed to go up to the Highlands.
Mothes had nothing to say to the court. Judge Johnson imposed a fine of $25 and costs. The young man did not have enough money with him to pay his fine and costs and one of the other workmen stepped forward and advanced the money.

FAMOUS EVANGELIST BELIEVED DROWNED

Los Angeles, Calif., May 19.—The beach at Santa Monica was being thoroughly searched by life saving crews today, following reports that Almee Semple McPherson, famous evangelist, had disappeared after a dip in the surf late yesterday.
A woman friend of Mrs. McPherson informed friend officers that she had seen the noted evangelist in apparent difficulty in the breakers.
The friend's attention was distracted for a moment, life guard officers were told, but when she looked again at the spot where Mrs. McPherson had last been seen she had disappeared.
Investigation proved that Mrs. McPherson had not returned to her dressing tent.
Santa Monica police and life guard crews immediately began searching the beach. Lifeboats and an airplane were also pressed into service.
An all night search failed to find Mrs. McPherson.

Greatest Blow Against Prohibition in Five Years—His Victory Probably Will Make Him the "Boss" in Keystone State—Loses Mellon's Own District by Only 20,000—Carries Every Ward in Philadelphia.

The New "Boss"

Philadelphia, Pa., May 19.—Congressman William S. Vare's victory in Pennsylvania's record-breaking primary became more impressive today as slowly incoming returns from remote precincts in the state added to the enormous total which Pennsylvania has rolled up against prohibition.
Before noon it was apparent that the plurality of the Philadelphia boss over his dry opponents, Governor Gifford Pinchot and Senator George Wharton Pepper, would reach very close to the 100,000 mark, if it did not pass it.

The proportions of Vare's victory and the conditions under which it was won, places him very close to the undisputed leadership of Pennsylvania Republicanism. He very nearly took the Mellons' own half-wick from them, losing Pittsburgh by less than 20,000 votes on the face of incomplete returns. Vare can now take his place alongside such political leaders as Governor A. Smith, in New York; Senators Edge and Edwards, in New Jersey; Governor Ritchie, of Maryland; George E. Brennan, in Illinois—opponents of prohibition all.

Makes Impression
That the magnitude of the wet victory made an impression upon Gov. Gifford Pinchot was evidenced shortly before noon when the governor issued a statement conceding the nomination of his wet opponent, and significantly declined to say whether or not he would be an independent candidate for the Senate in November on a dry platform.

Prior to the balloting, the governor's friends had confidently asserted that if he lost he would run independently, but the governor indicated this morning his mind was not yet made up.

Philadelphia, Pa., May 19.—Pennsylvania broadcast through the nation today in stenographic tones that she wanted modification of the Volstead Act.
Representative William S. Vare, rotund boss of Philadelphia, running on a "wet" platform, apparently has won by convincing figures the Republican nomination for the United States Senate in the most sensational primary contest in the history of Keystone politics—a contest in which the wet and dry issue was paramount and the Republican leadership of Pennsylvania was at stake.

Incomplete Returns.
On the basis of incomplete returns this morning from all parts of the state, Vare has thoroughly whipped Senator George Wharton Pepper, who soft-pedaled the wet and dry issue, and administered a crushing defeat to Gov. Gifford Pinchot, who picked up the Philadelphia boss's wet challenge and ran on a bone dry platform.

The size of Vare's victory alone remained in doubt this morning. In a total vote of nearly 1,500,000, it is expected to be not less than 50,000 and it may run in excess of 100,000, a substantial enough victory in a three horse race in which there were other extraneous issues. He apparently carried to victory with his candidate for governor, Edward E. Biddleman, although by somewhat smaller figures.

Two Thirds Counted.
With approximately two-thirds of the state having reported at seven o'clock this morning, Vare had a lead of 108,000 over Pepper, and a lead of 25,000 over Pinchot. The figures for 5748 election districts of a total of 8,281 in the state were:

Vare, 508,470; Pepper, 400,058; Pinchot, 249,168.
For the governorship, with the same number of precincts, the figures were:

Biddleman, 504,140; Fisher, 444,725; Phillips, 45,901; Tener, 30,242.
Later returns from precincts out in the state where the wet sentiment is not as strong as in the populous centers of Philadelphia and Pittsburgh are expected to cut Vare's lead somewhat but not to the danger point.

City Helps Him.
It was Vare's own city of Philadelphia that fulfilled the expectations of the "boss" and gave him his victory. He carried every ward in the city, save one, which went to Pepper, and when he left the city limits he was riding on the crest of a 218,000 plurality. Against such a tidal wave the Mellon organization of Allegheny county (Pittsburgh), supporting Pepper, and the rural strength of 6677 Pinchot were unavailing.

Neither Senator Pepper nor Gov. Pinchot had conceded Vare's victory early this morning. Pepper went to bed shortly before daybreak, saying:

"I am not licked yet and I concede nothing."
No Statement.
From Gov. Pinchot there came no statement. When the governor does break his silence, however, many expect it to be in the form of an announcement that he will be a candidate for the Senate on an independent ticket with bone-dryness again his chief plank.
If Pinchot does run independently in November and there are few political leaders who do not believe he will, it will afford another and even more complete referendum on the wet-and-dry issue in Pennsylvania.
Pepper in this campaign deprecated the Volstead issue and stood simply on a platform of law enforcement on the basis of present laws.
Drew Wet Votes.
Undoubtedly he drew many wet votes from anti-Vare wets, and undoubtedly he drew many dry votes from anti-Pinchot dries. In another contest such as is anticipated in November, there will be no third factor to complicate the state referendum on the issue.
Vare's victory is a signal defeat for the powerful Mellon organization in Pennsylvania politics. The Mellons backed Pepper with every resource at their command. Even the secretary of the treasury himself was drawn from his Helmsing of political seclusion and in the closing days of the campaign made the first political speech of his seventy-one years, an appeal for the nomination of the treasury secretary Fisher, the Mellon candidate for governor. From the same platform, Senator David A. Reed, the Mellon spokesman in the Senate, assured the voters that President Coolidge desired to have Senator Pepper returned to Washington—a statement which the White House did not deny.
If Senator Reed and other Pepper orators who stressed the confidence President Coolidge has placed in the White House is also a factor in the administration, although both Representative Vare and Governor Pinchot campaigned on a platform of support for Coolidge national politics.
Pepper's Downfall
The defeat of Senator Pepper marks the downfall of another senator who was marked out by the anti-World Court forces in the Senate for political chastisement. Pepper, originally anti-court, switched his position at the behest of the White House in the closing days of the World Court fight, and even voted against the amendment which he himself had introduced and sponsored.
Vare's victory leaves him in a position to claim the leadership of Pennsylvania, since since the death of Bolser Penrose six years ago, Vare has long been the "boss" of Philadelphia. Now he has extended his power beyond the Schuylkill.
The Mellon organization retains its power in western Pennsylvania but its hold has been severely shaken by the inroads made in the organization in Allegheny county. Early this morning the Vare-Biddleman ticket was running only slightly behind the Pepper-Fisher ticket in the Mellon's own half-wick of Pittsburgh.
Representative Vare declared this morning his victory was wholly attributed to the platform on which he ran—modification of the Volstead Act.

AROUND THE WORLD SEEKING A LAUGH

hardships and experience gouged furrows.

But Skipper Thomas Drake amid all the sea's perils never forgot how to laugh.

There was the time he took his little craft, the St. Francis, on a round-the-world cruise. He hit a gale off lower California, and the Pacific, in hungry mood, swallowed his schooner in a single gulp. Drake was captured by bandits when he made his way to shore. They beat him and left him for dead.

He wandered half-crazed for days and finally came to a settlement. He was jailed as a maniac. But that came out all right in the end. And he sat back and laughed at it.

He built a second round-the-world schooner, the Francis 2nd. This he sailed up and split on the rocks off the Cuban coast. He swam ashore and somehow escaped the sharks. That amused him. He laughed about it—afterward!

Then he quit the sea. He said good-bye to all the good old crafts of pleasant memory—the old Cutty Sark, Vanlala, City of Lucknow, the square rigger in which he went around the horn.

He bought a sawmill on Puget Sound. He found himself in conflict with the economic forces of life. And this was a new course for him. Things didn't steer right, somehow.

He got sick of people, all rotten and money crazy," he relates. "I got bitter. I couldn't laugh any more. Nothin' matters so long as you can laugh at things. So I thought I would dabble around the world again and I built myself another boat. I stop where I please and I make it or not. It don't make any difference."

He might even share the fate of Capt. Joshua Slocum, who disappeared on just such a world jaunt.

He has been under way about a year, from Seattle. From here he will go up the coast and then south again to start "across" from Nassau. He "rides alone" and says he has no family or pets, though there is some story among shipmasters of a wife—in some port or other.

It is not recorded in the log book of the Pilgrim, but on a certain date, at certain degrees of latitude and longitude, Skipper Thomas Drake broke into a hearty laugh.

A longshoreman on the boat, who thought he heard it but his own, and those deafened to it a bit by the lapping of water against the sides.

But a laugh, nevertheless! And hence proof that he already has found his lost island.

FLOODS IN RUSSIA DAMAGE TEN CITIES

Moscow, May 19.—Volga floods having worked the worst havoc in history in the Nizhnygorod and Kazan areas, are now sweeping the lower reaches and have submerged parts of the city of Samara. Railway communications are threatened. The Volga, which is normally 3 miles wide, is now 35 miles wide in some places.

Ten cities have thus far been heavily damaged by the floods. Waves as high as 20 feet have swept over portions of Samara and are now approaching Stalingrad, sweeping down villages and washing away cattle.

THE FRENCH DEBT

Washington, May 19.—The House will take up the French debt settlement on May 27 and dispose of it by June 2. Rep. Tilson, Connecticut Republican floor leader, informed President Coolidge today.

The Senate, Tilson said, will then be ready to consider ratification of the pact, provided the French Chamber of Deputies and Senate have acted upon it. Tilson agreed with the President that final action by this government should be predicated upon French ratification of the pact, provided the French Chamber of Deputies and Senate have acted upon it. Tilson agreed with the President that final action by this government should be predicated upon French ratification.

TO PROBE PRIMARY

Washington, May 19.—Spurred to action by charges that over $2,500,000 of $5,000,000 were spent in Pennsylvania on behalf of Senator George Wharton Pepper, Republican of Pennsylvania, the Senate this afternoon ordered a sweeping investigation of campaign expenditures in all Senatorial primary campaigns and particularly the Pennsylvania election.

CHARLESTON CHAMP AND HE WANTS TO PROVE IT

Bolton Shuffler Says His Honor Was Well Earned, But That Doesn't Bring Him Much.

"Sure, I'm the champion Charleston dancer of the state, but nobody seems to fight for my title."

Thus moans Milton Laschway, Bolton dry goods store clerk. Milton lives in Bolton, but works in Hartford, and present Charleston champion of Manchester, Bolton, Willimantic, Burnside and way stations. Laschway won his title and a big silver cup at the State theatre.

Milton Laschway

Fearing that someone might doubt his word that he was the champion Bolton hurled out a challenge that he would meet all comers. But, since winning his honors no one has ventured to compete with him. He shakes his feet so well the judges can't see anyone else.

But Milton is out again challenging. His picture is herewith presented so that any would-be champs can recognize Laschway on the street and accept the challenge. Milton is a native Boltoner and he thinks he will give his cup as a prize to the one who beats him.

NOT HARD ON ATHLETE

New York, May 19.—Alexander Riley Hodges, Jr., University of Kansas athlete, who has been tried here on charges of robbery, was today recommended for a plea of guilty on a charge of second degree larceny by the district attorney's office. The defense accepted the recommendation and entered a plea of guilty for Hodges.

Sentence was postponed for one month pending investigation of Hodges' record. The district attorney stated that Hodges' record appeared to be an excellent one prior to his arrest in New York.

The defense which Hodges was originally charged with carried a penalty of from 5 to 20 years imprisonment, while the present charge carries a penalty of only one to five years.

CANDY KID ON TRIAL

Baltimore, Md., May 19.—Richard Reese Whittemore today began his second fight to escape the death penalty for murder.

The dapper "Candy Kid" bandit went on trial in Criminal Court for killing Robert H. Holtman, 60, a Maryland penitentiary guard, during a break from the prison in February, 1925.

In Buffalo recently, a jury trying Whittemore for murder of a bank messenger during a $93,000 payroll holdup, could not agree, and the bandit escaped the electric chair.

STABBED IN FIGHT

Stamford, May 19.—Police here this afternoon were called to a local coal yard to quell a free-for-all fight among employees and found John McMahon, 7, East Meadow street, seriously cut about the head and face. McMahon was sent to the hospital where his condition is serious and police are attempting to learn who did the stabbing and why.

TO CANCEL RACES

Vienna, May 19.—In consequence of the high tax levied by the municipality, the Austrian Jockey Club intends to cancel its races for the season. Despite the depression this would bring to business connected with the style shops, the municipality has declined to reduce the "luxury" tax.

HURT BY FALL

Stamford, Conn., May 18.—Mrs. George Lovell, of 11 Cottage street, was critically injured in her home here this afternoon when a platform from which she was hanging clothes in the upper part of her house collapsed and hurled her fifteen feet to the floor. Mrs. Lovell sustained a fractured skull and probable internal injuries, according to officials of Stamford hospital, where she was taken for treatment.

HOLD UP PAYMASTER

Westboro, Mass., May 19.—Two armed bandits today held up the paymaster of the Westboro Weaving Co., knocked him unconscious with the butt of a gun and escaped with the $1,500 payroll of the factory.

The paymaster was on his way from a Westboro bank to the weaving company.

The bandits escaped in an automobile.

Country club members will have their first clubhouse day tomorrow. It is proposed to make this a weekly event every Thursday and it is hoped both men and women players will co-operate to make them a success. Hostesses will take turns and see that coffee and sandwiches are served free to the golf players between 12 and 2 and 5 and 8 o'clock.

PRINCIPAL QUIMBY ON 'BOYS AND GIRLS'

Talks to Kiwanians This Noon—Praises Type of Youth in Manchester.

Clarence P. Quimby, principal of the high school was the speaker at the Kiwanian luncheon today. His talk was along the line of education and he preceded his remarks by telling the Kiwanians about the Avon college for boys which is now under construction in that town. He said it was beautiful and he doubted if it could be duplicated in the United States or anywhere in the world. It would be an enduring monument to Mrs. Theodore Pope Riddle, who designed the buildings and is spending millions in carrying out her own plans. It is expected the college will be ready for students in about a year and a half. It is well worth a visit to Avon to see it, and Mr. Quimby urged the members to go there at the first opportunity.

From the standpoint of an educator Mr. Quimby's talk was decidedly encouraging to Kiwanians and to the people of Manchester. He spoke of the wonderful co-operation that was shown by the public, the parents and the churches with the school management. It had produced results. He was positive that the boys and girls that go from our high schools are as well prepared for life's work as any to be found in New England.

For seven years, he said, he had been taking high school parties to Washington. It has become quite a thing there among high schools to do this. On his recent trip there were dozens of other high school parties in Washington. He said he felt proud of the boys and girls he accompanied for more reasons than one. They were well behaved and not too boisterous. They took the trip seriously with the idea of getting as much out of it as possible in the way of learning and he believed they thoroughly enjoyed themselves.

As far as he knew, Principal Quimby remarked, not one single girl in his delegation smoked a cigarette. He could not say as much for girls from other schools. He thought their deportment was away above the average.

He believed this high standing could be accredited to the co-operation that the schools had from the public and the churches in Manchester. He referred to the lending of a building for the purpose of the annual convention, and expressed his approval of it.

C. Elmore Watkins was the winner of the attendance prize furnished by Henry Nettleton.

GERMANY TO SUPPORT ANY ARMS CUT PLAN

Geneva, May 19.—Germany will support any project promising an advance toward the solution of the problem of disarmament, no matter what nation proposes it.

This in substance was the view set forth by Count Bernstorff, in an interview with the International News Service today. Count Bernstorff is representing Germany at the preliminary disarmament conference, now in progress here.

"The more I hear of France and Belgium insisting upon the possibility and potentiality of war, the better satisfied I am," Bernstorff said. "Germany's war potentiality has been reduced to the barest minimum. We have only an army of a hundred thousand. France's occupation of the Ruhr showed how speedily she could strangle all German industrial activity."

"We will breathe a sigh of relief if the commission adopts a war potentiality thesis with the necessary slight modifications. Germany has no thesis for presentation. This is practically our international debut and we want to do it as simply and unostentatiously as possible."

"We want to be friendly with France but arrange to say she seems afraid to be friendly with us."

Bernstorff confessed that he was anxious to return to the United States "although he said he intended to wait until invited."

ODD FELLOWS HERE ATTEND CONVENTION

Nearly all the past grand officers of King David Lodge, I. O. O. F., are attending the annual session of the Connecticut Grand lodge of that order in Hartford today. In connection with the sessions, the Hartford Odd Fellows put on the first degree in Foot Guard hall last night as a sort of entertainment for those who stayed in the city overnight. The juniors of King David Lodge, I. O. O. F., were also present.

Yesterday afternoon the board of managers of the Odd Fellows' home in Groton, of which Charles R. Hathaway of this town is a member, met in Hartford.

MINERS' REPORT READY

London, May 19.—Executives of the British Miners' Federation today had practically completed the report that they will make at a meeting of the miners' delegates tomorrow on the proposals of Premier Baldwin for settling the coal strike.

It was considered likely that the question of terminating the strike would be left to the miners through a nation-wide ballot.

Following today's conference, A. J. Cook, secretary of the Miners' Federation, declared that a deadlock still exists.

"We agree to any alteration of hours or wages," said Cook.

SEARCH FOR ASSAILANT

Santa Cruz, Calif., May 19.—Police today were searching for Earl Watson, 28, of New York City in connection with the brutal attack perpetrated on Mrs. Peggy Beals, 28, in her home here late yesterday.

Beals was found bound, gagged and unconscious by her husband, Frank Beals, employe of a local lumber company, when he returned home from work.

According to police the young woman revived only long enough to name the man who had attacked her and to say he was a former suitor who had trailed her 4,000 miles since her marriage in New York a year ago.

BATTLE WITH RUNNERS

New York, May 19.—A machine gun battle between a rum runner and a coast guard boat in which more than 200 shots were exchanged was fought in New York Bay near Ambrose light, early today.

The liquor craft escaped.

A short while later Charles Higgins, 27, staggered into a Brooklyn hospital, with three bullets in his chest and his lower lip shot away. Police were detailed at his bedside to question him concerning his injuries when he recovers consciousness.

DR. ROGERS DEAD

New London, May 19.—Dr. Thomas W. Rogers, for 35 years a practicing physician here, died at his home, 43 Huntington street this afternoon from the effects of a stroke sustained on Saturday. Dr. Rogers is survived by his wife. He was 75 years old.

ABOUT TOWN

A daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs. George Hurley, of 34 West Center street last evening.

New swings for the playgrounds have been placed in the yard back of the Manchester Green school.

John, three year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick E. Welch of Charter Oak street is in the Hartford hospital where he will undergo another operation.

REV. ACHESON LEADS ON THIRD BALLOT

M. George Thompson of Greenwich any qualified person could be voted for, but the nominated candidates were:

Rev. Harry Knox Sherrill, of Trinity Church, Boston, nominated by Rev. E. S. Sanford, of Redding; Rev. Wallace J. Gardner, of St. Paul's, Flatbush, Long Island, nominated by Rev. George Alexander Barrow, of Ansonia; Rev. George Henry Toot, of the Holy Apostles Church, Philadelphia; Suftragan Bishop E. Campbell Acheson, of Middletown, named by Rev. Francis J. Bennett, of Hartford. The balloting for bishop was by the clergy assembled in the cathedral but earlier the convention of clergy and laity with Bishop C. B. Brewster presiding, adopted four recommendations by the committee on constitution and canons.

Action Delayed.

Because the time for the order of the day, election of the bishop came of the impasse of the fifth proposition, the convention deferred action to the 1927 convention. The fifth resolution was the report of the committee that it has considered the three 1925 resolutions concerning the proposed constitution, on standing committees; and amending the constitution so that standing committees should consist of four clergymen instead of five as at present, and four laymen, one of whom should be representative of the laity.

The convention voted to refer to the convention was that it were better to let the present rule remain because it is a distinctive feature of the diocese from its organization and especially because practically all the standing committees is wholly ecclesiastical.

ITEMS ADOPTED

The four items adopted from committee were:

Resolution of resolution adopted in 1925 that the rule regarding election of delegates to the synod stand as it is; rejection of a 1925 resolution for a constitutional amendment to remove conflicts and ambiguities and their relation to the council; changing canon 14 and 15 to provide for the making of appropriations by the executive council instead of by the department of missions; substituting article 9 of the constitution this year.

"The election of a bishop shall be in the following manner: After nominations made in open convention, the two orders, each voting separately, shall then ballot for some fit and qualified person for the office of bishop. A concurrent majority of both orders shall be necessary to a choice. In a case of a tie, to count each order may continue balloting until both orders by a majority of each concur in the election of the same person who shall thereupon be declared by the president of the convention to have been duly elected."

Majority Rule.

"The election of a bishop shall be determined by a majority in each order, provided, that if less than two-thirds of all entitled to vote in each order, the president of the vote in each order shall be necessary to determine the election."

When the convention moved from the parish house to the cathedral at 11:15 A. M., Bishop Brewster prayed before the altar for the choice of a wise and able bishop and the convention sang "Veni Creator."

Asks For Discussion.

Rev. Henry E. Kelly, of Bridgeport, wanted full discussion of all candidates and moved to permit asking and answering of questions. Bishop Brewster ruled the motion was not necessary and added that anybody might vote for any one he pleased. Rev. M. George Thompson of Greenwich, was unanimously chosen chairman for the voting, and Dr. Frank German, of Middletown, was unanimously chosen secretary after Rev. H. W. Kelly, of Bridgeport, had withdrawn his name.

Rev. Walter D. Humphrey, of Roxbury, moved that the same rules of procedure as last year should govern but no additional rules, that no abstention be preserved and that the doors be barred to ingress and egress while the ballots were being cast and counted.

On the motion of Rev. Frank S. Monahan a substitute motion was adopted whereby last year's rules without alterations were adopted. Chairman Selected.

Burton Mansfield, of New Haven, was made chairman and Alton Farrell, of Ansonia, secretary of the laymen's convention which after debate finally adopted a motion to proceed to a general discussion and analysis of the six candidates dealt with in the cathedral.

Many of the lay delegates walked out and gathered in groups on the street, declaring such action was "absurd" because the laymen could do nothing until the House of Clergy had agreed.

W. E. D. STOKES DIES; WAS MUCH IN COURTS

New York, May 19.—W. E. D. Stokes, the millionaire whose marital affairs achieved national publicity in the courts, died today in his private suite in the Hotel Ansonia. He was 73 years old.

Stokes was widely known as a financier and hotel owner. He built and operated the Hotel Ansonia where he passed away today.

His marital entanglements were a source of national interest. Stokes was twice married, divorced once and had spent five years unsuccessfully endeavoring to secure a divorce from his second wife, Helen Edwold Stokes.

The aged financier and hotel owner had been ill only a week. But in the last twelve months or so, after his turbulent years of fighting both his marital affairs in the courts and civil litigation, with a cold developed into pneumonia of both lungs and Stokes sank rapidly. The disease spread despite all his physicians could do.

According to physicians, the cold developed into pneumonia of both lungs and Stokes sank rapidly. The disease spread despite all his physicians could do.

Books

"Jazz came to America 300 years ago in chains." And there you have it—you who insist on prying into beginnings! You have it from no less authority than Paul Whiteman, the big saxophone and banjo man from Colorado.

He has done a biographical book entitled "Jazz" (Sears and Roebuck Co.) with the assistance of Mary Margaret McBride, well known magazine contributor.

Those sections of the book dealing with the evolution of jazz seemed to us most interesting. There is a great deal of already familiar opinion on jazz as the real

Virginia Moore, author of "Not Poppy."

Two lines we will not soon forget: "Still in cold beauty from a torn cocoon Uncolled moist wings of an early moon."

But it's the idea that will strike you, and the execution. Also you may feel that the shadow of John Massfield is not far away in several of the poems.

And there is one who is fast gaining fame—Virginia Moore, a southern girl who came to New York and for some time interested herself in teaching the girls' camps.

Not since Edna St. Vincent Millay came tripping gorgeously down the greenward has there been such a combination of beauty, sophistication and intelligence as may be found in her work, the latest of which is, "Not Poppy" (Harcourt, Brace). Something might be said, also, of the comparative physical beauties of Miss Millay and Miss Moore.

Chicagoans might find particularly interesting at this time Dr. Harry Elmer Barnes' book, "The Repression of Crime" (Doran). His theme is handled in terms of new criminal science.

Which reminds us that there is a fat list of books on hand for those who enjoy the adventures of rogues great and small. "The Book of Rogues" (Bon-Liveright) is an anthology of writings about everybody from the amazing Jonathan

Wild to the poetic Francois Villon, as described by Stevenson. "The Underworld" (Doran) by H. Ashton Wolfe, international detective who began sleuthing in Monte Carlo, deals with mysterious crimes in that picturesque gambling resort. It's far better than most detective fiction.

"The Rogue's Bookshelf" (Greenberg), edited by Ernest Brennecke, is another anthological work collecting tales of picturesque scoundrels of fact and fiction.

NEW SUMMER HOTEL PLANNED IN ANDOVER

(Special to The Herald.) Andover, May 19.—Parties from Hartford have purchased the home of the late Frederick Case, which was at one time used as a sanitarium and are going to start a hotel there.

Furniture for twenty-one rooms is to be moved in within two or three days. This large building is on the main road to Hartford, and is about a five minutes' walk north of the Andover railroad station. It is situated on a knoll overlooking a beautiful stretch of water known as Case's Pond, and very near the summer home, "River Knoll," of A. H. Newton of Hartford.

Ford to Renew Setting Of "Mary" and Lamb

Plans to Reconstruct the Ancient School House That the Storied Little Sheep Demoralized.

Sterling, Mass., May 19.—The little country school house attended by Mary Sawyer, immortalized in "Mary Had a Little Lamb," is to be reassembled by Henry Ford and set up near his historic wayside inn.

Mr. Ford, it was learned today, last week purchased the stepping stone which stood at the doorway of the school where little Mary learned her three r's and to which she was followed by her lamb with "Beece as white as snow." The door stone was discovered on the old Jenks farm, now occupied by Carl Swenson. It had been in the field where the schoolhouse stood since 1856, when the school building was torn down. The boards of the schoolhouse were sold to local carpenters for $85.60 and were put into the barn of the Baptist parsonage.

The motor car magnate, according to information received by Francis H. Sawyer, a descendant of Mary, when he obtains possession of the barn, will have the lumber taken to Sudbury where a replica of the school will be constructed.

Descendants of Sarah Hale, who lived in Newport, N. H., claim that she wrote "Mary Had a Little Lamb" and that the "Mary" of the nursery rhyme was a New Hampshire girl. A majority, however, declare that the writer was a Newport, R. I., woman, who moved here and was inspired to verse by Mary Sawyer trudging down the country road in the sunshine, the lamb at her heels.

Somerville, too, has frequently claimed to be the scene of the episode of Mary and her lamb. Miss Mary Haley, oldest school teacher in Somerville, at one time was supposed to have had in her possession a pair of stockings made from the wool of Mary's lamb. The Somerville schoolhouse stood on the hill opposite the new big tidewater assembly plant being erected by the Ford Motor Co., from which flyers and tractors will be shipped down the historic Mystic river and up and down the coast and overseas.

PROBING PRESSER CASE. Albany, N. Y., May 19.—The investigation ordered by Gov. Smith into the parole of Izzy Presser, gunman and bootlegger, will be continued tomorrow in Sing Sing prison when George W. Alger, Moreland Act Commissioner, will give Presser an opportunity to testify.

Just as the governor's inquiry was getting under way at the capitol yesterday, Presser was indicted by the Warren county grand jury for escaping from Great Meadow prison in July, 1921.

This is the second time Presser has been indicted by the Warren county grand jury on this charge. It was brought out by Commissioner Alger that the first indictment was dismissed at the request of James L. Long, state superintendent of prisons.

Idaho has extensive undeveloped deposits of antimony and quicksilver.

WEDNESDAY, MAY 19, 1926.

TO PARENTS.

Yesterday the Herald printed an editorial addressed to the boys and girls of Manchester. Today it is prompted to confer for a few minutes with their mothers and their daddies.

You don't think, do you, that we misused when we told the boys and girls of this town that there were a good many other towns whose girls and boys wouldn't quite measure up to Manchester's in realization that there is something to life besides a joy ride?

Some of you, of course, feel that there is a lot of room for improvement in the manners and the point of view of the modern girl and boy, even here—particularly in the manners and points of view of your neighbors' youngsters—and perhaps may consider that we were handing the young folks a lot of apple sauce which won't do them any good. Well, now, we don't think so. And maybe it won't do any harm if we sort of thrash it out with you.

This is a pretty queer time that we are going through. A middle of things has happened to upset the established conditions to which we older folks were accustomed. The automobile is one thing, the war was another, prohibition enters into the situation, the movies are merely a minor complication but an added one. Although it is quite a different world from the one in which we older folks were brought up. And it isn't quite fair to the kids to forget that they never did know that old world that was ours.

Really, you might as well expect a girl or boy born and brought up in Japan to be completely at home in Manchester, without any preparation for residence here, as to expect a boy or girl born in 1910, who was only four years old when the Germans shelled Liege, and who has smelled gasoline since the cradle, to be at home with the ideas of 1880 or 1890. And if we can't make our boys and girls feel at home with our ideas it would seem like a bit of a puzzle to make them feel at home with, and understand, us.

There wouldn't be the slightest use in bawling at the little Jap boy or girl at the top of your voice, because he or she didn't understand your language; there wouldn't be any sense in getting out of patience with him and scolding at him and making hard and fast rules for him which he never could comprehend. Well, it's a little like that with these "new world" boys and girls. We may have to learn their language, so to speak—by which is meant that we must learn to understand the meanings of things as reflected in their minds. It isn't their fault that, being born in the twentieth century and the twentieth being foreign to the nineteenth in about every conceivable way, they are something of little strangers to us, and don't always pick up our ways like we used to pick up the ways of our parents.

This being the case, is the Herald all wrong when it suggests that it's a part of the job of parenthood, in these new times, to do a bit of the adjusting itself and not expect the young folks to do it all?

Our idea is that there's a lot of room for compromise, a good deal of give-and-take, to be dealt in between the parents of today's children and the children themselves. That there is a common ground on which these generations can meet, and ought to meet, is certain; because there always is, where interests or ideas conflict, a common ground somewhere.

How about not being disappointed or sore because the kids don't come all the way to our old-fashioned ideas; how about going half way and meeting them, fair and square, at the line of compromise? If we give in altogether we shall spoil them. If we are stubborn and yield nothing we shall alienate and like enough ruin them.

They are a new kind of creature and we are the old kind. But they are human and there is love in their hearts, and all the good qualities in their young souls. If their elders fail to bring out those qualities, including filial respect and industry and a sense of responsibility, under the circumstances it looks as if the fault might mostly lie on old shoulders. We must move toward them if we expect them to move toward us.

GIRLS FROM THE MILLS.

In any cotton mill town you see them, girls, mostly young, some of them pretty, some wan-faced, many indifferent. For most of them, it seems there isn't much to look forward to, except perhaps marriage to get out of the mills. The alternative for the great majority is to work on and on, until they become colorless cogs in the great cotton machine.

Now and then one of these girls gets out of the mills and scores a success in the world. The story of her triumph over gray environment is always refreshing.

Jeanette Brown came from Russia when she was ten years old. She worked in the mills at Lawrence, Mass., until she was fourteen. But she went to night school after her day of labor at the mill and gave her mind a chance. Her parents took her to Boston. Here she worked in a candy factory. At sixteen she was married. At twenty-two Mrs. Jeanette Gair was left a penniless widow with three children.

She worked, saved, studied, learned. Eighteen years ago, by dint of super-human effort she had enough to open a small hat shop back in Lawrence. She scrimped and studied.

Twelve years ago she heard of Palm Beach. She moved her hat shop to Florida. She paid $250 for a lot and sold it a year later for $1,600. During the last year and a half in Palm Beach her real estate sales ran above $5,000,000.

For a cog in a cotton machine that's doing pretty well.

THE MASKS WE WEAR.

The mask behind which each of us mortals lives is the theme of that season's play which has caused more interest than any other.

It is in the great American playwright, Eugene O'Neill, that this theme of men and women being other than they seem, finds deft handling. The resultant play is called "The Great God Brown."

Brown is to the world a success. A Great God. But behind the mask which he wears to the world his real self knows the compromises he has made with honesty, ambition and the best within him.

Brown loves a woman whom he really sees behind the mask. But when Margaret puts the mask upon her face he turns away. And when she looks at Brown, she sees not him but the mask he wears. And another man loves Margaret for the mask she wears but does not know her when she holds it in her hand.

A strange play, this. Perplexing, thought-provoking. Are we what we are for what we think we are? Does the world know us and love us for the masks or any of it for the life behind the mask?

THINKING IN CROWDS.

"Like sheep, thinking in flocks," was the way a noted eastern critic recently characterized the luncheon clubs, lodges and other organizations of men's clubs.

The club on which the critic based his criticism certainly was not typical. We know of no other place where such a flood of different ideas bubbles to the surface than the luncheon club.

Men from all trades gather, bringing their different views to a common ground, exchanging suggestions, learning from one another. The community luncheon club here serves a community purpose, and so long as we live in communities why not try to make them as good as possible?

Sometimes the brand of after-dinner speaking at the clubs is not all that Demosthenes might have wished, but the critics inside the club can take care of that. There are usually plenty of them.

The clubs do not hinder a man's individual thinking, but rather enlarge it, bringing broad contacts with his fellows whereby he learns that there are two sides to the shield. And if a man have anything to say, just try to put him down!

YELLOW TAIL-LIGHTS.

Many automobile associations are conducting a campaign to have automobile tail-light changed from red to yellow. Red, as color used for indicating danger and interpreted as "stop," is misused today. Red is used by the railroads and on traffic control semaphores to indicate "stop." Red lanterns on a street undergoing repairs means danger. Some cities used red "No Parking" signs because motorists overlook green ones. Red with the word "stop" is repeated on every highway hot dog stand.

A red automobile tail-light is confusing. The automobile associations backing the change say, "Look at a motor route at night and see a line of red tail-lights. After you drive into a ditch marked with red lanterns you realize that it was not a procession of autos you saw."

A yellow tail-light for cars would indicate "caution" and not "danger." However, the change would affect so many millions of vehicles and would be tied up by state laws that it is almost impractical at the present time.

Stewart's WASHINGTON LETTERS

By CHARLES P. STEWART.

Washington, May 19.—Representative Victor L. Berger is leader of the smallest party group in Congress.

Senator Shipstead constitute the entire Farmer-Labor group in the upper house, but in the lower one there are two Farmer-Laborites—three all told. In both houses put together the Socialists are only half that strong. Yes, that's correct. They number one and a half.

Representative Berger explained this the other day.

He is a 100 per cent Socialist. Representative LaGuardia sat in the 65th, 66th and 67th Congresses as a Republican. Then he got liberal for his district's Republican organization and it refused him a renomination. Whereupon the Socialists elected him to this, the 69th Congress, on their ticket.

Berger likes and approves of him, "but," he says, "he's only half a Socialist."

Berger considers his party a mighty important and useful institution in Congress, even if it does count only one and a half, for he points out that it is the only consistent "opposition" the Republican-Democratic party has.

That is to say, as he views it—and so do a lot of other folks—you no longer can tell Republicans and Democrats apart.

In his opinion—and a lot of other people's too—the dominant party ought always to have an "opposition," to criticize it and keep it more or less worried, which tends to make it behave.

That Berger says, is the function of his Socialistic one and a half.

"Besides which," he adds, "there are three or four others who vote with us now and then, like Carrs and Wefald, the Farmer-Laborites, and Huddleston, who really is a democrat with a little 'd'—one of the very few of that kind of Democrats left."

But the Progressives? Aren't they an "opposition?" Let us see.

Representative Berger made a speech in Congress last January, in which he began like this: "Mr. Speaker and gentlemen of the House, Aesop tells a fable of the bat, who, in the war between the quadrupeds and the birds, posed as a quadruped or as a bird, according to which side was victorious. But the bat was found out and shunned by both sides ever after."

The Progressives, he said, reminded him of that bat.

One may hazard the guess that Berger has been none too popular among the Progressives since the day he made that speech. It won't be much of a hazard, either. In fact, it's the correct guess.

One may surmise also that the bat speech tickled the members on both sides half to death. It did, indeed. Whenever Victor Berger wants to make a speech in the House of Representatives the regular organization sees that he gets the chance and as much time as he needs.

He doesn't take undue advantage of it. "Out of the 435 members of the House," he told me, "I wish we had 35, instead of only one and a half. Then we could scatter our speeches around without being tiresome. But I can't do it all myself. If I tried I'd be as big a nuisance as—"

However, let's mention no names. Every member of the House of Representatives will know who Berger meant.

DAILY POEM

KID PRANKS.

Yes, every day, and all day long, the thing that rubs all mothers wrong, is tendin' to the young folks pranks—a task to which there is no thanks.

"Mamma this" and "mamma that" and "mamma, where's my coat and hat?" "I wanna cracker—wanna drink." Say, how can mothers stop it to think?

The doorbell rings the live long day. My gosh, the kids think that's play. With windows washed, the work's in vain, for paddies quickly smear the pane.

"Aw, mumsy, rock me on yer lap. See, I don't wanna take a nap. The housework piles up in a heap, while mother rocks a child to sleep.

The daily cry of "mother's pet," is, "Hook—I got my feet all wet." Every day, and all day long, kids' pranks are what rub mothers wrong.

A record of unusual progress and growth has been established by the Beethoven Glee Club, an organization of young men mostly from the Swedish Lutheran church. Organized a year ago this month and conducted without outside support, this club has won for itself a high rank in musical circles of Manchester.

Helge E. Pearson, known in Manchester as a musician of merit, and now musical director of the Swedish Lutheran church, was secured by the young singers as their leader. Most of the singers were inexperienced in chorus work and many of the voices untrained but Mr. Pearson, taking over the directorship of the club, has organized the singers into a chorus which has won for itself a name in other places besides Manchester, including Worcester, Norwich, East Hampton and Willimantic.

The striking feature of the chorus is the fact that it is composed entirely of young men, the average age being 21 years. On May 20, 1925, at a meeting in the Swedish Lutheran church, ten young men took the first step in organizing. A few weeks later when the chorus numbered about 20 voices, the work of organization was perfected when Clarence Anderson was elected president, Fred Soderberg vice-president, Raymond Erickson was named secretary and Helmer Werdelin, treasurer. Since that time other officers, including Ernest Kjellson business manager, Sherwood Anderson and Albert Robinson as assistant business managers, Ewald Matson as financial secretary and Paul Erickson and Elmer Swanson as librarians, have been elected.

Applications for membership kept coming in until February it was decided to limit the chorus to 50 voices until further notice. Since this time the club has devoted most of its time in rehearsing the program for its First Annual Concert to be given Thursday, May 27, at the High school.

Elaborate preparations have been made to make this one of the finest musical events of the season. Besides the Glee Club on the program will be the Gloria Trumpeters of New York, who are nationally famous.

Another feature will be the singing of Theodore Larson, tenor, of Providence, who has appeared in Manchester and has been well liked by those who have heard him. The club has prepared a souvenir program which will be a novelty and a surprise to those who attend.

Choosing the name of Beethoven the club aims to adhere to the ideals of this famous composer and in all concert numbers by Beethoven are given. The interest which the young men have shown in the better class of music speaks well for the future of the club.

The many duties of Mr. Pearson in the other organizations of the church have not prevented his rehearsing the club two or three times a week.

Tickets for the concert are going fast, over three hundred already being disposed of. Tickets are on sale at C. E. House & Sons.

ANDOVER

A competitive program was given by the Grange members Monday evening. The ladies and gentlemen each presented a half hour's program and the two programs were judged by Professor Wheeler and his wife and Professor Brassey and wife of the Connecticut Agricultural college. The ladies gave a short minstrel show the leading spirit of which was Mrs. Charles Wright. The gentlemen gave a mixed program, consisting of selections by a quartet, a shadow picture, given by Guy Bartlett, dressed as a young flapper and Burton Lewis and Edward Gatchell, two devotees of the young flapper. Three selections were rendered by a trio composed of a violin and two harmonicas and a short movie sketch was given.

The gentlemen were voted the winners of the competition. After the programs cookies and ice cream were served.

Mrs. Lulu Lord and family of South Manchester were visitors of Mrs. Lewis Phelps on Monday. Mrs. Thomas Lewis and family were recent visitors of Mrs. Fred Colborn of South Willington.

One application dissolves every particle of dandruff; invigorates the scalp, stops itching and falling hair. Furthermore Danderine is to the hair what fresh showers of rain and sunshine are to vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates and strengthens them. Its exhilarating, stimulating and life-producing properties cause the hair to grow strong and beautiful. Bobbed hair has made the girls aware of the dangerous effects of unsightly dandruff which is now more apparent than ever since the hair is short.

Danderine is a sure way to get rid of dandruff and immediately doubles the beauty of your hair. The effect is amazing—your hair will be light, fluffy and wavy, and have an appearance of abundance; an incomparable lustre, softness and luxuriance. Get a small bottle of Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter for a few cents and keep that dandruff out of your hair and out of your shoulders.—Adv.

OWNER OF BUBBLING OVER WON OVER MILLION ON RACE

E. R. Bradley Bet About Half Million and Some Odds Were 12 to 1.

New York, May 19.—E. R. Bradley, the man who first warned all interested in the horse race to do and then went ahead and did it, won between one and two million dollars when "Bubbling Over" made a cross country finish out of the Kentucky Derby, according to conservative estimates filed with the writer today. This may sound like a lot of Missouri, provided you don't know E. R. Bradley, which may be your loss, at that.

He is the turf's greatest plunger, the "McVean-Million" Gates of his day, with this exception: he doesn't play hunches and kindred decisions. No blind stab. No shot in the dark. He knows. Ask Dad.

Outsmarts All.

Testimony from any one at a race track would lead you to suspect that turf addicts are a body of men, completely surrounded by intellect. If they are only half as smart as they claim to be, then Bradley is a mental Goliath. He most certainly has outsmarted every racing man who has cared to take issue with him during recent years.

His racing judgment and experience told him that he had the Derby winner and he conducted himself accordingly, cashing in on advance knowledge possessed by no other man. Every future book that opened got a big bet from Bradley and it was said that he got down more than a quarter of a million at odds that ranged as high as 12 to 1 and as low as 2 1/2 to 1.

Net $500,000.

In all, he is said to have bet $500,000 on the result of the race, many of the wagers being horse-for-horse deals.

Of course, every horse-for-horse bet was won on Saturday, for the reason that all of them this year were made on Bubbling Over. In other years, when his faith in his own entries was not so high, he played the horse-for-horse racket to the limit, betting his rival's name their choice and then betting that his selection would finish ahead of it. He is away ahead of this game.

DIAMOND DUST

Tony Lazert realized the ambition of every ball player as the Yanks beat the White Sox again, 5 to 3. The coast singer clouted a home run with the bases full, enabling the Yankees to sweep the series and win their seventh straight game.

Detroit finally beat the Athletics 5 to 2, taking advantage of Philadelphia's four errors.

Sherry Smith of the Indians hosted Walter Johnson, in a four to two pitching duel. McNeely's two errors were costly to the Senators.

The Red Sox turned in a six to three victory in their daily batting practice with the Browns, who were paralyzed by Elmer's pitching except in the eighth inning. Jacobson and Carlyle got homers.

In the only game played in the National League, Brooklyn and Pittsburgh battled for luminescence to four to four delectable rain stopping the pastime. McWeeny continued to pitch brilliantly while Meadows was knocked out of the box.

GADO IN LIMELIGHT

Mrs. Hawley's room defeated Miss Shea's room in a baseball game at the Mill Lots last night 12 to 8. Gado, pitcher for the winners, slammed out a pair of triples and two singles in four innings to the plate in addition to fanning eight of the other batters.

S. M. H. S. AT BRISTOL

The baseball and tennis teams representing the local High school were scheduled to play in Bristol this afternoon against the high school of that place. Manchester is undefeated in the baseball league and the tennis team also has a clean slate. A double victory would be highly cherished among the students.

They'll Swim With Her

Lillian Cannon with Chesapeake Bay dogs, and Mary Montauk, another Chesapeake dog. These dogs will accompany her on her Channel swim.

LILLIAN CANNON SWAM 22 MILES, WHY NOT THE ENGLISH CHANNEL?

Maryland Girl Who Will Try Channel This Summer Will Be Accompanied by Two Dogs.

Lillian Cannon of Baltimore, under the auspices of NEA Service, the world's largest newspaper feature organization and The Manchester Evening Herald, is in training for an attempt to swim the English Channel this summer. This article tells of her famous swim across Chesapeake Bay during a storm.

Baltimore, Md., May 19.—Lillian Cannon, who galloped for France Saturday to indulge in an eight-weeks training period preparatory to swimming the English Channel, is perfectly aware that she has a tremendous task before her.

Some of the most celebrated women swimmers in history, including the famous Gertrude Ederle, have tried it and failed.

Can Lillian Cannon do it? Lillian believes she can. Some day a woman is going to do it—and that woman might just as well be named Lillian Cannon as anything else.

And Lillian is nothing if not novel, for she will be accompanied on her swim by two dogs—two Chesapeake Bay dogs, and swimming foats.

22 Miles in 11 Hours.

Last summer—on August 20—Lillian swam 22 miles across Chesapeake Bay. She was in the water for 11 hours and finished in excellent physical condition.

Her idea was that she would swim the bay with nothing more than the usual sea and tides to combat. Instead she ran afoul of some of the roughest conditions a swimmer has ever been asked to face.

To begin with Miss Cannon and George Lake started across the bay to Tolchester by boat after Bay Shore had closed for the night. They were both life guards at Bay Shore and couldn't leave sooner. They borrowed a launch for a trip, intending to swim back to Bay Shore from Tolchester.

A mile or so from Tolchester they ran into a sand bar and there they stuck. They couldn't tell where they were in the dark and they couldn't attract anybody's attention.

Shortly after daybreak, the people of Tolchester who had been expecting them, saw the stranded launch and went after them. It was too late to sleep then and Lillian decided to have breakfast and go ahead with her swim. After breakfast she rested an hour and at eight o'clock started out.

Before she had gone more than a mile or two a fresh breeze blew up and it began to rain.

In the afternoon the breeze developed into a regular Chesapeake Bay squall, with a heavy sea. The rain continued and visibility was so poor that Miss Cannon followed the sail of a bay schooner for nearly an hour, thinking it was the lighthouse which was her landmark on the western shore.

When the gale was high, Lake, the other swimmer, quit and was dragged aboard a launch.

A High Spirit.

Darkness found her still swimming bravely on with Bay Shore in sight. Two hundred yards from shore she called to the newspaper men in the following launch:

"Here's where I really begin to swim."

With that she started a racing stroke and fairly foamed up to the pier.

While she was lying on the pier waiting for an automobile to take her away, a photographer from one of the Baltimore newspapers came up.

"Shucks," he said, "I was hoping to get flashlight of you coming up to the pier."

"All right," said Miss Cannon. "You can."

She shook off the blankets and sweaters which had been piled on her, ran to the edge of the pier and dived overboard.

When she was about 50 yards out she turned and called to the photographer:

"All right now."

With that she swam up to the pier, faced the flashlight and climbed out of the water.

That's the sort of swimmer Lillian Cannon is.

THREE NEW PLAYERS WITH SONS THURSDAY

Sipples, Barton, Lamprecht and Possibly Alexander to Play Here.

Three new faces will appear in the Sox's of Italy lineup when the home team takes the field against the East Glastonbury team in a twilight game at the West Side grounds, according to an announcement made today.

Tommy Sipples will play either at shortstop or second base; "Punk" Lamprecht will appear in the role of a first baseman and Jack Barton of the Elmwood team will carry about the midway. It is also possible that Jimmy Alexander, former Eastern leaguer and now pasturing with the Elmwood nine, will play with the Sox.

It was also stated today that "Ted" Warnock will probably get the call to start on the mound against the invaders. Coach Kotch will also have "Big Jack" Burkhardt and Billy Hewitt on the bench ready for mound service should the occasion require a change.

WALKER WILL MEET PETE LATZO TONIGHT

Seranton, Pa., May 19.—Mickey Walker, arriving here today with all the pomp and ceremony that befits his position as one of the rulers of the boxing world, will be confronted by a pleasant-faced, mild-mannered Czech-Slovak youth, Peter Latzo, from his hometown, here, in a fight on Saturday night.

Pe's Latzo, the breaker boy from the mines, will step into the ring tomorrow night with smiling Mickey ruling a one to three shot, but he is trained to the minute and determined to prove that he is a worthy contender.

Three years ago, Walker, then a swashbuckling young champion, cut and slashed Latzo to ribbons in Newark, N. J. Since then, the miner has fought his way through the other contenders, improving with each start, while Walker has done some philandering along the way.

Latzo will be fighting before a crowd of 8,000 to 10,000 home towners, who have seen him polish off other invaders with reputations and who cannot visualize going down to defeat before the champion. Fans of high and low degree will be at the ringside, a great majority of them miners who have tolled hard underground to meet the price of admission, which is pretty steep for Seranton.

VISITORS' 2 ERRORS PAVE WAY FOR ALL THREE LOCAL SCORES

Kearns' Latest Protege To Make Eastern Debut

Jack Dorval, the fastieffier no less a personage than Jack Kearns, ousted manager of Champion Jack Dempsey, says will some day wear the heavyweight crown, will make his eastern debut at Madison Square Garden May 21, when he tackles one Dan Lieber.

Dorval and Lieber are to appear on the same card with Georges Carpentier and Eddie Huffman. Kearns picked Dorval up on the Pacific coast some time ago and, as mentioned, seems to think he has a future champion in the big fellow, who has been dubbed "Napoleon" for some reason or other.

Dorval has spent plenty of time lately boxing with Mickey Walker, who is the writer's friend, and, according to Kearns, is quite apt to get quite a distance in the realm of fistiana. In fact, Kearns has been singing the praises of Dorval so vehemently one wonders how Dempsey ever held the championship.

FAULKNER SOCKS PAIR OF CIRCUIT CLOUTS; LAURELS WIN OPENER

The word "auspicious" could probably not be more fittingly applied to anything than to the manner in which the local Laurel baseball team opened its baseball season last night. Starting off with an eleven run batting rally in the very first inning, the Laurels succeeded in routing the Tigers by a score of 15 to 2 at the Mill lots.

Tommy Faulkner who used to star in the role of a basketball player for the Laurels was again in the limelight, but this time in the role of a pitcher and heavy hitter. Faulkner held the Tigers to five hits and also managed to find opportunity to crash out a single, triple and pair of homers. One of the circuit clouts came with the bases loaded and the other with one runner on the paths. Tierney also potted out a triple.

The Laurels have issued a challenge to any other team in Manchester in their rubber and games may be secured by communicating with Manager Runde by telephone any evening between 6 and 6:30. His phone number is 162. The summary of last night's game follows:

What are the rights of baserunners to advance on an infield fly?

As far as it concerns the advancement of baserunners, the infield fly is no different than any other fly ball that is caught or dropped.

In other words, the baserunner can advance at his peril. If the infield fly is caught he must return to his base or make himself liable to be put out.

If it is dropped and he seeks to advance, it is up to him; he does so at his own peril.

Thus the infield fly that is caught or dropped is no different than any other fly ball so handled, as far as the runners are concerned.

Windsor Locks, With Rabbit on Mound, Trimmed in Game Crammed With Excitement.

Three runs, all of which were unearned, gave the St. Mary's a one-run victory over "Lefty" Rabbit and his fast Windsor Locks club last night in the first twilight game of the season at the West Side playground. The Saints were out-hit ten to four and it was only the airtight support which was given "Art" Seclert together with two timely errors on the part of the visitors that gave the 3 to 2 decision to Manchester.

Defense Saves Game.

Seclert, although he braced up in the pinches, was touched up rather freely as the put-out column will show, the three Saints outfielders having eleven flies to their credit not to mention the hits they shacked. Each one of the trio contributed sensational catches that cut down sure Windsor Locks tallies. The Saints' infield handled its nineteen chances without a miscue. In fact the whole St. Mary's team flashed such a fine defensive game that not a single bobbie was chalked up against them.

Feeley Swats Homer.

The visitors hoped into the lead almost before the game had started. Oates swatted the first ball pitched to deep center where St. John settled under it. Then Feeley, a right-hand batter, connected with Seclert's second offering and smote it far over Bobby Boyce's head in right field for a home run.

Saints Tie Score.

The Saints tied the score in their half of the opening stanza. Ferguson waited Rabbit out for a free-ticket and rambled to first. Thornton sacrificed him to second with a neat bunt. Partons then rapped a vicious grounder down to the dippy sack which Feeley fielded but heavily wild to first, allowing Ferguson to cross the plate.

Windsor Locks took the lead in the third frame. Oates led off with a single and was sacrificed to second by Feeley. Tenzo lined out to St. John and Oates went to third when St. John deked too long in returning the ball to the infield. Galipeau scored Oates with a neat single to right field.

The Fatal Error.

Manchester tied the score and won the ball game in the next inning—only a muffed fly ball. Billy Stevenson fielded to center but Macdonald slammed out a single. Seclert was out on a fly to the second baseman and Manchester's score singled and doubled around Seclert. Both scored when Kennedy missed an easy fly in center field from the bat of Sammy Thornton.

Visitors Protest Decisions.

Windsor Locks almost scored on two other occasions, both of which were somewhat questionable decisions. With Dowd, who had just walked, on first in the fourth inning, Palmer, Windsor Locks first baseman, hit a long center over St. John's head in center field. On a relay to St. John, St. John to Ferguson to Carlson, Dowd was called out at home. The visitors protested but it availed them nothing.

In the sixth inning the visitors again found fault over a call by Windsor Locks, which was a call by one out and Galipeau, who had just tripled, on third. Dowd hit a high fly to left field. Stevenson fumbled the ball momentarily and then caught it with his other hand, over the fence. Seclert, however, managed to touch the ground. Simultaneously with the first sound of the ball touching Stevenson's glove Galipeau raced for home. The ball was relayed to third base. Stevenson was relayed to Thornton and the son to Partons to Thornton and the runner was before the ball was actually caught.

Hectic Ninth Inning.

Things looked gloomy for the Saints again in the ninth inning but they managed to weather the threatening storm. Kennedy opened with a single and went to second while Macdonald was taking care of Dowd's carpet roller. Palmer smote out a single but Kennedy was held at third. The next batter, Michael, rounded to Ferguson and Kennedy was thrown out at the plate. Palmer went to third on the play and then Michael stole second. With two out and two runners on bases the situation was still tense. Seclert, however, managed to force his contemporary, Rabbit, to hoist a long fly which Bobby Boyce camped under ending the game and tucking another victory safe away in the Saints' records. The summary follows:

DEAN HERE TODAY
In yesterday's chapter, AUDREY MORTON has seen her guardian, HARRY MORTON, with whom she is deeply in love, in a cabaret with a wild party. Overhearing him make an appointment for the place, she had asked JOHN PARRISH, Morton's secretary, to take her there.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
(The names and situations in this story are fictitious.)

CHAPTER XVIII
A HURRIED inspection of Audrey's rooms showed that she was gone—that she had been gone since the night before.

Her dainty ribboned nightgown still lay upon the bed, where her maid had left it in the evening. The bed was unrumpled. The satin slippers stood neatly side by side at the foot of the bed, undisturbed. Morton ran into the study which lay behind the bedroom. It was the apartment in which Audrey wrote her letters. He glanced hastily over the bed. There was no note for him.

The doors of the closets in her dressing-room all were ajar. He hurriedly ran his hand over the racks of dresses, which hung neatly on their hangers from brass rods. He saw that her traveling coat had been removed. A sober little frock which she wore around the house also was missing, and so was the dress in which she had come from Rochester two days before.

"She took only what she could carry in her hand bag," Morton said, but that a gray traveling coat had been removed. A sober little frock which she wore around the house also was missing, and so was the dress in which she had come from Rochester two days before.

CHILDREN CRY FOR FLETCHER'S CASTORIA

Farrish was starting away, when Morton called him back. "You are late for that railroad, while you are there, and the other railroads coming in here, and see what connections she could make for some other train—say a train leaving within an hour or so after her arrival."

Without particular hope, but to satisfy himself, Morton continued his search around the city, going into some of the shabby places where the only signs of a hotel were the words "ROOMS TO LET" above a door way. He met with no success, and returned to the hotel where he had registered.

"A woman at the station there looks after girls who have no escort," he said. "She told me where she sends them, and she came in," he said. "The ticket seller doesn't remember to what town she was going—over one hundred people got on the train that morning, going to all these little jerkwater places."

They agreed to meet an hour later at their hotel, while Farrish returned to the station, through which they had first entered Washington, while Morton drove to make inquiry at the other depots.

When they met an hour later, Farrish announced that he had been successful. "She got on a local train, going back the way she came in," he said. "The ticket seller doesn't remember to what town she was going—over one hundred people got on the train that morning, going to all these little jerkwater places."

"It would take us two weeks to canvass all those villages," he said at length. "We need help, and need it soon. You know that detective of mine in Rochester?"

"He has connections in a lot of those towns," Morton continued. "Get him on the telephone, and tell him to have a man search for Miss Morton at every one of these places, no matter how small. Tell him to get as many men on it as he can. I want a full report within twenty-four hours."

Farrish put in the long distance call, and while they waited for an answer, he wrote at Morton's dictation a sheet of telegrams, giving full instructions to the offices in Rochester and New York, and to the members of Morton's households.

"We can get a train back to New York in about an hour," Farrish said after he had finished his telephone conversation with the detective.

Morton was paying their bill at the desk, when a message arrived for him. Tearing it open, he read: "Miss Morton. Her name is NONA. Please telephone that she has important news for you. She says she cannot give this news to anybody but you. She says it is about Miss Morton. Will you send instructions, please. Respectfully."

"Her experience is limited," Morton told Farrish, as they gave up the search at the station. "The chances are she would go directly to the largest hotel."

They climbed into a taxi, and set gloomy and silent, until they reached the hotel the driver had recommended.

Inquiry at the desk showed he had not registered. Morton engaged rooms for himself and Farrish, and directed the latter to telephone to his New York office and apartment and to his office in Rochester, his bank, and to the detective, telling his whereabouts.

"It would be one that was recommended to her at the railway station," said Morton. "You go back there and find out where they send unescorted girls."

"It May Be Life—"
"Jack loves me well enough, I know. But does he ever bite his lip. And does he chew his cheek to show that Passion's got him in a grip? An' does his gun go pop-pop-pop when fellers gets familiar? No. He just says, 'Op it!' and they 'op'—It may be life, but ain't it slow?" —A. P. Herbert.

His List!
Suppose that somebody handed you paper and pencil with a sign-on-the-dotted-line expression, and told you to list the things you liked best. That's what a reporter did to Arthur Tuckerman, novelist. He wrote—English hedges in May, coming into strange harbors at dawn, palm trees in moonlight, blondes in black crepe de chine, trout fishing, the sound of airplane motors, Conrad's novels, etchings, men's tennis doubles, and rats to swim out to."

Anywoman's List
Would probably include her first matinee, her first kiss, her first lover, her first pie or cake, her first baby's first smile, her first complete lingerie set, peach chiffon with real lace insets—rubbish! Not one of it true—that's just the list men would suppose it to be! What really? Not telling!

Any mere male who had once partook of French mushroom soup would lead his list with that. He might throw in the recipe for the joy of posterity. Simmer 3 pounds of knuckle of veal for 2 hours with an onion and small bunch of parsley. Strain and reheat. Cut fine half a pound fresh mushrooms and simmer 15 minutes. Beat together 2 eggs, 2 tablespoons flour, 1 cup of milk, take soup from fire, add thickener and 1 tablespoon butter. Reheat, bring to boil and serve with cubes of fresh-buttered toast.

For Money or Love!
Almost thrice as many Princeton students affirm that they will marry for love as for money. They favor blue-eyed feminines.

Maid Made Bride!
A wealthy broker of Boston will trip to the honeymoon altar with his bride, the maid and housekeeper of his domain for the past 20 years. He grew to love her, says he, because she kept him so comfortable at home. She managed his home so expertly all those years, says she, because she loved him.

Girl Leaders Smoke!
Any number of mature European women delegates to the International Girl Scouts Convention admit to reporting that they smoke much to the shocked alarm of the American delegates. We trust that this convention will do much to make Americans feel the provincialness of their viewpoint and to make them see that opinions are often prejudices born of geography.

Parents Fined!
Professor and Mrs. Thomas Thivierge of New York were fined $10 and costs because they did not send their children to public school, but taught them at home. The father, an educational man himself, explained that he had regular school hours at home, and that he was giving his children an individual education suited to their own needs rather than the general public school one. His wife "chipped in" that when the children went to school they caught bronchitis, pediculosis, and bad language. But the fine was imposed "in the name of the common good."

Warding Off Anemia

This is the last of a series of two articles on anemia.

BY DR. HUGH S. CUMMING
Surgeon General, United States Public Health Service
The classification of anemia is very simple. If by careful study we cannot determine the cause, we call it a primary anemia. If we know the cause, we speak of anemia as being secondary.

Examples of secondary anemias are those following hemorrhages of various kinds, those which occur in malnutrition or starvation or in chronic infections such as are called blood poisonings and in pyrexia, malaria, rheumatism, diphtheria and other infectious diseases, and also in poisoning by certain drugs.

Amor—the secondary anemias are listed also those caused by animal parasites, such as hookworm and tapeworm.

Loss of Blood
The loss of a pint of blood by an adult will produce some temporary anemia; the rapid loss of two pints of blood will produce a severe anemia and the loss of two quarts of blood may produce death directly or from anemia following.

Chlorosis is a fairly common disease among young girls. It is very important that this condition should be recognized early and properly treated. The disease develops generally at about the age of fourteen to sixteen—rarely as late as twenty.

It is common in young girls—seldom seen in boys. If untreated, chlorosis may last many years and may interfere seriously with school work. It is usually fairly easy to cure but it may return.

It is readily recognized by a competent physician early in its course but it may be unrecognized by parents who do not understand its significance.

Symptoms
The patient, if has been said, is generally a young girl. Her complexion will be pale with possibly in some cases, a yellowish tinge, hence the name.

She may be even heavier than normal in weight—she tires easily, suffers from shortness of breath—often dizziness and faintness; she may have palpitation of the heart and sometimes swelling of the feet. The appetite is variable and she may be nervous and emotional and may suffer "on dyspepsia."

An examination of the blood will usually show a decrease in the number of red blood cells to about four million instead of five million per cubic millimeter.

An estimation of hemoglobin or coloring matter of the blood will also show a marked reduction both in relation to the volume of blood and of the amount of coloring matter in the individual red corpuscles. The total volume is markedly increased.

The cause of chlorosis is unknown but it has been attributed to tight lacing, and is much less common than formerly. The treatment should at all times be directed by a competent physician and will include proper diet, proper clothing, rest and exercise if necessary, correction of any defects or disconditions of the teeth and the administration of some standard preparation of iron.

Iron treatment is usually very satisfactory and recovery is prompt. Neglect of treatment may cause much suffering, retarded development, serious interference with school work and a certain amount of permanent injury to the individual.

WHO'S AFRAID?

Russian flinches have no terrors for Mary Denise, Broadway dancer. Hunting curios in Greenwich Village, she found this set of odd-shaped topazes set in hand-wrought silver, and wears them despite warnings that they had belonged to the unfortunate Princess Malizine of Russia, and had brought disaster to every former owner. And maybe she broke the jinx, for Broadway continues to applaud.

CYNTHIA SAYS

Prophets of Gloom Should Give Brides a Chance to Be Happy.

By CYNTHIA GREY.
"Why don't you tell them the truth, Cynthia?" writes a young woman. "Why don't you tell these June-brides-to-be that there's nothing in this romance stuff in the end? Don't let them get tripping to the altar with a thousand dreams that will smash a few weeks later."

She signs her letter "Ex-bride." And that tells the story. Having seen her own romance fail, she must try to take happiness from other women.

There is a sorry sisterhood whose chief business is "disillusioning" younger women. It consists of disappointed wives—who belittle that which they cannot have themselves.

It is very human—this sour grapes instinct. But it causes much unhappiness. The bride whose views of men and marriage have been poisoned beforehand will go into marriage with a chip on her shoulder.

The first time hubby leaves his shaving brush for her to wash, or forgets to praise her cup cakes, she will remember the doleful prophecies and say, "Well, they were right. Men ARE no good." And lapse into tears.

Whereas, if left to herself, her good sense might carry her past small emergencies.

What June brides do need to be told, on the other hand, is that men are just as good as you make them. Almost any husband, taken in time, can be molded to one's satisfaction, without his suspecting it. It is quite true that brides who expect too much of matrimony will be disappointed. But if they follow

Ex-bride's gloomy theories, they are doomed from the start.

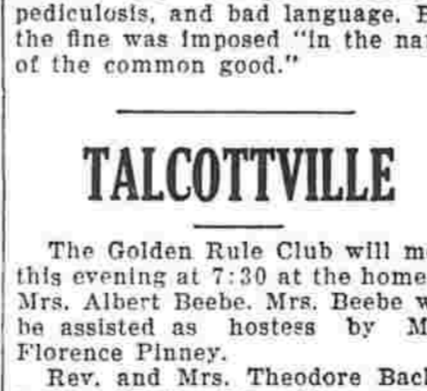

A romance is like a flower. It flourishes exactly as it is tended. And there is nothing that strengthens it more than the sunshine of faith.

Household Suggestions

FOR LEAFY VEGETABLES.
When washing spinach or greens of any sort, put a handful of salt in the second water, this will coax out the sand and any superfluous animal life that may be clinging to the leaves.

ECONOMICAL.
The tops from celery should be saved, dried, and put into glass jars to flavor soup or dressings.

BAKING TIP.
Hot bread should never be wrapped in a cloth as this absorbs the moisture and imparts an unpleasant taste.

A LAST RESORT.
When cream is obstinate about whipping, add the white of an egg. Let both egg and cream become thoroughly chilled before you continue the process.

UNIQUE FLAVOR.
A few whole cloves added to the fat in which doughnuts are fried gives them a very pleasing flavor.

TEST FOR FRESHNESS.
When the shell of a boiled egg dries immediately on coming out of the water you may be reasonably sure that you have a strictly fresh product.

VERY PRACTICAL.
The kasha coat in natural color lined with blue polka dot foulard and a dress of the same silk, is as practical and smart an outfit as

ADVENTURES of the TWINS

by OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

"Oh dear!" said the little Whiffet. "I wish I could find my shadow!"

"Why don't you advertise?" said a voice behind them.

"Advertisement!" cried the Whiffet turning around. "And who are you?"

"Pen Scratcher," said the funny person staring at them, his arms akimbo and a big grin behind his ear. "I'm a newspaper man. I run the 'Hollow Log Gazette.' Also the 'Log Hollow Bugle.' In the morning it's one—in the evening it's the other. All I do is to change the name and the weather and the politics and folks don't know the difference. There are tricks to all trades."

"Do you think I should find my shadow if I'd advertise?" said the Whiffet.

"I certainly think so!" said Pen Scratcher. "But whether you would or not is a different matter. It costs six buttons for six lines, or three pins a word."

"Then I'll take six inches, please," said the Whiffet, reaching into his pocket for six of the precious buttons that made up his fortune.

"Just come into my office," said Pen Scratcher, "and tell me exactly what I'm to say in my Lost and Found Column."

So the Twins and the little Whiffet followed Pen Scratcher into his wildgrapevine office, where there was a big printing press turning out papers at the rate of one every five minutes.

A black crow was attending to the printing and a barred owl was looking them over for mistakes.

"Here's a mistake," he hooted. "It's a recipe for apple-jelly, and it says to take six large prunes and—"

"What's that? What's that?" croaked the crow. "I wrote that recipe myself. I watched the farmer's wife making it, and I wrote down everything she did her back yard and I could see through the window. What are you making fun of it for?"

"You don't put prunes in apple-jelly," hooted the barred owl. "You put apples in."

"Of course," croaked the crow. "You're crossing your bridges before you come to them. The farmer's wife took six prunes out of a saucepan and put them back into the prune bag. Then she put a lot of apples in where the prunes had been and pared them for the jelly. You didn't read far enough."

The owl buried himself behind his paper and no more was heard of him.

"Now then," said Pen Scratcher. "If you gentlemen have stopped quarrelling, we'll get down to business. I'll write an advertisement for your lost shadow. Mister Whiffet, and you can read it and see if it's all O. K."

The Twins and the Whiffet sat down and Pen Scratcher wrote and wrote with his long pen.

"How's this?" he said in a couple of minutes. "Lost between the attic and the stable on Monday, one perfectly good shadow. Answers to the name of Whiffet. Has a large necktie and two pockets and—"

Suddenly Pen Scratcher stopped. "That's six lines," he said. "Your six buttons worth is used up. But if you like I'll throw in the extra 'and' for nothing."

"Thank you. It may help some," said the Whiffet.

"We can deliver some of the papers," said Nick.

A PUZZLE A DAY

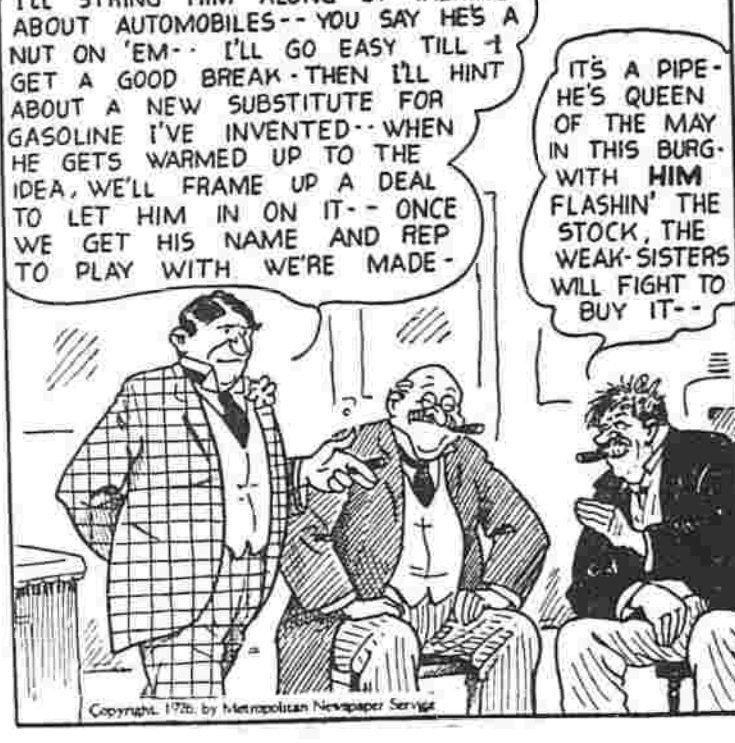

The city planning commissioner is responsible for our fine tourist's camp. He enlarged and remodeled the old site this spring. Instead of one large park, it is divided into eight small sections. Each section consists of 16 permanent camp plots surrounding an open recreation ground. The tent plots in section "A" were numbered on the commissioner's thirtieth birthday, so the man in charge numbered the plots with this quantity in mind. Although he used every one of the digits from 0 to 15 once only, every row of 4 numbers and even the 4 corner numbers of each square totaled 30. In this way he secured the sum of 30 in 10 different ways. On the incomplete diagram above only the numbers of the four corner plots are shown. Can you complete the numbering?

Last Puzzle Answer

The quart brick of ice cream cost Mary and Susie $7.50. Of this money Susie put up $3.00 and Mary $4.50. They sold 1-3 of the brick for $7.50, the cost of the whole. Since Susie paid 6-15 of the money, she owned 6-15 of the profit or $3.00. While Mary, who put up 9-15, owned 9-15 of the profit or $4.50. There was 2-3 of a brick left. Susie owned 6-15 of this, which is actually only 4-15 of the whole, and Mary owned 9-15 of 2-3 or 6-15 of the whole. Susie ate 6-15 (1-3), so she ate 1-15 of Mary's share. This 1-15 cost 1-15 of 75 cents, or 5 cents. Therefore Susie paid Mary 5 cents for this piece and had 25 cents left. Mary added 5 cents to her share and put 50 cents in her pocket.

CITY CLUB BANQUET
THURSDAY, MAY 27
Decide to Vary from Usual Program, and Have Annual Affair Informal.

The Manchester City club annual banquet will be held at the club rooms on Oak street on Thursday evening May 27. Jarle Johnson, popular local bass soloist, is in charge of the general arrangements for the affair.

This year's banquet will differ from those usually held at the club in that it will be strictly informal. In years gone by the annual dinner has been the scene of a big gathering of politicians, local and state. At one dinner Attorney General Frank Healey spoke and the same evening the club members heard the annual banquet next week.

During his confinement, the popular local young man has been operated on twice and this has resulted in his condition improving slowly but steadily. Mr. Howe's illness developed from a slight cut on one of his fingers in which infection started.

His Time Means
Nothing--So He
Saves His Hands

There's no use in talking. Efficiency in all of our industries is a great educator. Here in Manchester it has reached its perfection.

Take, for instance, the case of one Pete Server of Wells street who was hired to throw in a cord of wood for Mrs. Litter of Maple street this morning. Did he throw in the wood? He did not.

Men may have thrown in wood through cellar doors for ages but this is the day of efficiency. Pete shoveled in the wood!

Supplying himself with a big coal scoop, our hero, carefully piled just eight sticks of wood on the shovel. Then he carried the load carefully to the window and gave it a mighty heave. What if half of the sticks fell on the outside of the window and had to be picked up again? Efficiency, b'gosh, or nothing.

After working at a job that would ordinarily take an hour and which consumed about three of Pete's valuable times, the efficiency man got himself a rake and raked the big pieces together. It was like sweeping the streets with a toothbrush but again it was efficiency. And at the end, the woman who had promised him 25 cents for the job gave him 75 cents, so after all efficiency does pay.

The State Highway department is patching up Main street from the Center to Depot Square but is not touching the eight inches on either side of the trolley tracks. This section of the street is in a bad condition.
