

SOCIAL REGISTER EMPIRE TOTTERS

Serpents of Mortgage and Debt Expel Elect from Florida Paradise.

BY HORTENSE SAUNDERS

New York, June 2.—British nobility and American wealth, that were scheduled to join forces at Floranada, Fla., to form the social empire of the world, have dined.

James H. R. Cromwell, 30-year-old empire builder, and Mrs. E. T. Stotesbury of Philadelphia and Mrs. Hugh Dillman, Detroit, Ladies of the Exchequer, are out of jobs.

Instead of paradise of palms and patios, shooting lodges and race courses, polo grounds, golf courses, Venetian waterways, and enough titles to give every helmsman a fair shake, there is only a yawning deficit of $6,000,000. Another real estate bubble has burst.

Mother's Were Backers
Mrs. Stotesbury, the mother of young Cromwell, who appointed her son empire builder, is the social queen of Palm Beach. Her enchanting estate there, her entertainments and her dinners have earned her this leadership.

Mrs. Dillman, formerly Mrs. Horace Dodge and tremendously wealthy, who recently purchased the Joshua Cosden estate at Palm Beach, is the mother of Delphine Dodge, Cromwell's wife. She also is prominent in Palm Beach society.

But Palm Beach with its exten-

000 a year were fitted up in Miami. Three-hundred salesmen were given social registers as their lists of prospects.

Lots Didn't Sell
Two freighters were chartered at a cost of $25,000 to ply along the Atlantic coast so that had railroad service would not annoy. Everything started out as an empire should—until it became apparent that lots weren't selling. Then it was decided to form the American-British Florida Club of 2000 members—by invitation only—and assess each member $2000. That would bring in $4,000,000 for development purposes and be even more ultra, socially.

Mrs. E. T. Stotesbury

Lord Camoys tried to interest the British nobility. Mrs. Stotesbury and Mrs. Dillman each guaranteed notes for some $250,000. Still the money pressure was felt. Obviously there was more moral support and social affluence than money. The result was a bankruptcy petition for $6,000,000. And "Jimmy's City" consists of a completed administration building valued at $75,000, an Inn valued at $150,000 in the process of construction and 3600 acres of land on the Dixie Highway four miles from Fort Lauderdale, valued at $10,000,000 but heavily mortgaged.

The Social Empire of the World is in the hands of receivers.

DRAMATIC SCENES IN STATE FEATURE

"The Volga Boatman" Coming Here Tomorrow Packed With Interesting Situations.

Given but five minutes to live, alone with the man who has been commissioned to kill her, a beautifully gowned Russian aristocrat looks wildly around a gorgeous room, desecrated by plundering revolutionists.

This is one of the great central situations of Cecil De Mille's productions, "The Volga Boatman," as adapted by Lenore J. Coffey from Konrad Beyerovics' great story of Russia in travail, which will be the feature at the State theater tomorrow and Friday and Saturday.

Do not miss "The Volga Boatman." An added attraction for Friday night at 8.30 is the final old fashioned dancing contest for the championship of the State of Connecticut between Manchester and Willimantic. They have each won one. The first was won by Willimantic in Willimantic. The second was one by Manchester in Manchester at the State theater. Friday night will be the final.

FEDERAL NURSE HERE TO STUDY CONDITIONS

Detailed to Cheney Brothers to Get Information About Colds and Influenza.

The United States Public Health Service of the Federal Government at Washington, is trying to find out all that it can about the cause of colds, bronchitis, sore throat, and influenza.

It is believed that accurate knowledge of how often people get colds, when they get them, and under what weather and other living conditions these colds come most often, will lead to some way of cutting down the sickness due to these troublesome causes which result in so much discomfort and inconvenience, and in loss of time and money.

Cheney Brothers, among several manufacturing establishments, are anxious to assist in bringing about a reduction of illness from these causes, and have asked the cooperation of the U. S. Public Health Service in this work. During the last few months a trial set of records was kept among about 2,000 employees as an experiment in finding out the best way to get the necessary information. The U. S. Public Health Service is now ready to keep one of its own nurses here for about a year to obtain information from these employees about the colds they have contracted.

Accordingly, Mrs. Alcesta S. Public Health Service to get these records. She has been authorized to obtain information regularly from these employees, whether these colds kept them from work or not.

This information is not demanded nor required. It will be a voluntary contribution to a good cause. But the success of this very important study rests entirely upon the willingness with which the employees will assist Mrs. Owen in giving her the information.

The information collected will be carefully studied by experts, and the results of the investigations will be given to Cheney Brothers and their employees. Of course, the record of any individual will be kept confidential; only the statistical results will be made known.

Mrs. Owen will gladly answer questions as to this study, or refer any questions about it to the U. S. Public Health Service at Washington.

PONZI, IN FLORIDA, ASKS FOR MORE TIME

Finance Juggler, Who Had Not Left State as Reported, Sends Wire to Boston Court.

Boston, June 2.—Suffolk county authorities today were ready to send a police inspector to Florida to bring back Charles Ponzi, ex-wizard of finance, to serve a sentence of from seven to nine years in state prison for larceny in connection with his international coupon scheme. It developed late yesterday that, despite apparently authentic information that Ponzi was in New Hampshire and headed for Canada, he had not left Florida. A wire to Judge Fosdick of the Superior Criminal Court from Jacksonville, by Ponzi asked for a ten days' delay for appearance. Ponzi pointed out that he was under bond in Florida, having been found guilty in connection with a land scheme in that state, and asserted that he had had no formal notice that his appearance in court here was expected.

DEMANDS 12 YEAR SENTENCE FOR VILLA.

Durango, Mex., June 2.—The federal attorney has demanded a twelve-year sentence for Hippolito Villa, brother of the famous Pancho Villa, on charges of train robbery at Chorro, Durango. The prosecution declares that it has clearly proven that Hippolito was the leader of a band of 200 men who wrecked and looted a train before government aeroplanes dispersed them.

The next Court of Honor of the Manchester Scouts will be held on Tuesday, June 15 at 7.30 p. m. at the School Street Recreation Center. All Scouts qualifying should have their application in the hands of commissioner Irvine not later than Friday June 4th. This will be the last Court of Honor until September, however each Scout is urged to continue his Merit Badge work during July and August. It may be possible for each Scout to qualify for a maximum of nine Merit Badges at the September Court. Scouts who are going to Camp Pioneer especially, should observe this point.

Camp Pioneer

The first two weeks of camp, namely from June 30th to July 14th will be known as Manchester Weeks. Each Scout Master is requested to line up his Scouts who are planning to go to camp and have applications and money sent into headquarters as soon as possible. The fee is the same as last year, about $7.50 per week.

Camp Pioneer will be brimful of activity with something to do, something to think about, something to enjoy from reveille to taps every day.

All verdure has been stripped from a seven-acre wood in England by an invasion of starlings. Millions of the birds killed all the small trees.

sive booming and building, threatens to lose its valuable asset, its exclusiveness.

Boca Raton, some 20 miles below Palm Beach, was laid out to supply that need for exclusiveness in an even more glamorous background. Then came the announcement of Floranada—more pretentious than Boca Raton had dared to be. Here were no lots for any who could afford them. Here was to be a social empire that would draw as inhabitants only the bluest blood and the most secure fortunes of the whole world. The nouveau riche were to be banned as rigidly as the hot polio.

Ex-King on List
The backers sounded substantial. Sandwiched between American names that stand for wealth were nobility, even royalty. The brother of the ex-king of Greece stated that his deposed highness would build a castle there. Lord Camoys was to interest other British nobles. The Countess of Laud erdale and her son, Lord Thirstane, lent their august names.

On the day when the cornerstone of the Floranada Inn was laid, her ladyship and his lordship wielded the trowel. Mrs. Stotesbury is said to have announced: "It will be Jimmy's city. He is making it, and it is his." Jimmy started off like a million dollars. He was elected president of the British-American Corporation. The Administration Building was begun by Cass Gilbert, who planned the Woolworth building. Howard Major, another famous architect, was called in and the two told to plan such a city as never before had sprung from marble and crystal. Nice little offices costing $100,

PORTUGUESE FORM A PROVISIONAL GOVERNMENT

Lisbon, June 2.—Leaders of the recent bloodless revolution have established a provisional government, it became known today. There had been reports that Premier Cabecadas was about to proclaim himself dictator of Portugal but these have now been set at rest. President Machado, who resigned yesterday, has left the presidential palace and has taken up his residence in one of the suburbs of Lisbon.

The practical unanimity with which the superior persons have shied away from the Stotesbury-Dillman-Cromwell scheme to corral them and boss them for the Stotesbury-Dillman-Cromwell glorification is a practical demonstration that there are really some elements of superiority among them—that they are not all snobbish and brainless and utterly ridiculous. Not, at least, in the 9th degree.

FREE CHINA. China, after a century of repression, has voiced her defiance of the Occident. In the halls of the League of Nations—than where better could such a stupendous pronouncement more fittingly be uttered?—Chu Chao Hin, former Chinese Envoy to London and present minister to Rome, challenged Great Britain to a war of diplomatic wits or of arms, as Britain might please, and openly and deliberately declared that China proposed to end the epoch of foreign control under which her people have writhed until they have come to the end of that phase of their existence.

It was in the course of the League's opium conference that Mr. Chu, stung by charges of a British representative that Chinese officials had corruptly authorized the importation of the drug into China, flung his defiance into the face of Great Britain. He called up the dark history of the Opium war, in which the arms of Britain forced China to become a market for India's opium, accused that country of continuing the sale of morphia in China, and said: "You can reply to me by an appeal to diplomacy or you can reply by an appeal to arms. China will welcome your attack. You have attacked my country and I am not afraid to attack you. For 4,000 years China has taken care of herself and she is again able to do so. If you can find a single man in China in whose breast there does not beat anti-British feeling, he is not a Chinese. I can officially inform the committee that the time when China will tolerate foreign interference in her eternal affairs is nearing its end."

China has a million and a half of trained soldiers, as good as any and better than most. She is reputed, and probably with truth, to have munitions-making facilities commensurate to the conduct of a great war. If there is no significance to the western nations in this unexpected service of notice, then it is because the western nations are not keeping pace with the Chinese in their thinking. It is a source of much satisfaction that the trend of feeling in America is altogether favorable to the complete independence of the Chinese from every sort of foreign domination in their own country—and that our own President has expressed this opinion in no uncertain tones.

It has been the sublimity of arrogance and ignorance for the West to assume that because the Chinese civilization differed from ours it was an inferior one, and that the transitory military power of the Occident gave it the right to dictate the politics and economics and even the religion of that ancient and stupendous nation. The zero hour for complete abandonment of this attitude is at hand. That it will be accomplished without warfare is substantially certain. But one way or the other it will be accomplished, and very very soon.

A FOOT, PERHAPS? Dr. W. M. McGovern, British explorer, says that, while he can't account for it, he has walked over flaming coals without burning his feet. It was in connection with a Shinto sect celebration in which not only did the priests perform this seeming miracle, but spectators as well, himself included. Inasmuch as the integritous doctor does not tell us how far it was across this bed of coals, perhaps the explanation of the phenomenon may lie in the fact that the walk was a short one.

WIFE BEATING. The case of the boy Stephen Newark of Darien, charged with shooting his father, is one in which many orderly citizens will be interested as partisans of the youth. At worst, it is to be hoped, that the interests of the defendant in this case will be thoroughly safeguarded, for if present accounts stand investigated the provocation to intended fratricide was great. The drunken male brute who habitually comes home intoxicated and proceeds to beat up his wife is a very questionable object for the protection of the law. And the strapping son, physically incapable of protecting the mother from such abuses otherwise than by resort to arms, cannot well be shown to be in any wise of criminal purpose. In such a case, he blazes away at the inhuman and altogether unnecessary parent. It would not be a serious detriment to our civilization, perhaps, if the law and the courts eventually established the status of the wife beater to be precisely that of the burglar found in the home of a citizen at night—that he has taken his life in his hands and is outside the pale of the law.

IN NEW YORK

New York, June 2.—Every town has its particular brand of "nut," but New York boasts a species created, no doubt, by the human craving for someone to talk things over with. They ache for a good argument, but know one in the great city to argue with. So each noon they appear in one of the busy lunch-rooms and deliberately pick an argument with any stranger who happens to sit across from them, or beside them. They will listen to the conversation of two nearby lunchers and bursting in upon the talk, heatedly rebuke one of the strangers for some statement, the while spouting his own case.

Naturally there are many complaints and each of the "nuts" so-called are spotted and watched the minute they enter. One of the biggest chain restaurant systems keeps an officer quite busy during the noon hour standing guard over the unfortunate pests. The other day one of the species was pointed out to me just as he was in the process of insulting a good-natured opponent. The "nut"—a man starting into his fifties—is a messenger boy for one of the suit and cloak concerns that line Seventh Avenue, in the Thirties. Classed among his associates as "a failure," he can raise his voice for no purpose when around his working place and he knows few people with whom he can talk after work. He reads the papers avidly and, after the fashion of the countryfolk gathered around the corner store, he bursts to express his opinions on everything—but can find no listeners. The city is too busy to stop and hear what a "poor nut" has to say about anything.

And so he becomes more and more irascible as the years go on. He talks to himself, mumbling his lips as he goes along the street. Perhaps no place in the world will you find so many people talking to themselves as in Manhattan. It is a disease bred of loneliness, particularly among the old folk. I asked the "nut" what he had been in the years between adolescence and age? He had gone into business himself, and failed. He had clerked for one or two years and done this and that, but he had not done anything. He had turned anti-social. But always there was the craving for talk with his fellows, and always there was defeat. No one, it seemed, wanted to talk. They were all too busy with their own affairs. Now—well, he didn't care. He was almost belligerent about it. He had to have his daily talk or go crazy. "Go crazy," laughed the officer. "He is—but harmless, yep, a harmless nut." Somehow I couldn't laugh.

Stewart's WASHINGTON LETTERS. By CHARLES P. STEWART. Washington, June 2.—Some time ago I had occasion to remark that Ralph Beaver Strassburger of Norristown, Pa., looked to me like a coming man in politics. The Republican senatorial primary in Pennsylvania clinched the matter. Strassburger may not be very well known outside his own state now but he will be. Strassburger unquestionably meant to be a candidate for the nomination of Bill Vare for the Senate. His program is the attainment of temperance by the light wine and beer route. If Strassburger had run, Vare probably would have stayed out. But Strassburger was detained in France, where he'd been visiting, by his only son's serious illness, and didn't arrive home until too late to attend to the necessary preliminaries to launching his candidacy. Lacking Strassburger, the wet Republicans needed a champion, and Bill Vare offered himself. It was a case of the chance, no doubt. Strassburger did get home in time to support Bill, personally and through his newspaper, the Norristown Times-Herald. I'm prepared to believe he was a lot of help.

So Vare will come to the Senate—a Republican nomination being equivalent to an election in Pennsylvania—under deep obligations to Strassburger. They speak of Vare's victory as having given him the leadership of Keystone State Republicanism, but

QUEER QUIRKS OF NATURE

This Water Bug Has Two Sets of Eyes

BY ARTHUR N. PACK President, The American Nature Association

Anyone who has walked by the banks of a brook in spring or summer has seen those shiny black beetles darting swiftly about on the surface of the water, chasing or cutting circles about one another.

Whirligig Beetle

Sometimes they crawl out and bask in the sun on sticks or stones, exactly as turtles do. If we disturb them too much they dive beneath the surface, carrying with them bubbles of air held under the tips of their wing-covers for the purpose of breathing while submerged. Though they are seldom seen to open their wings, they fly well when they desire, first climbing out of the water to get a flying start and traveling swiftly from one pool to another. The two hinder pairs of legs are developed as short paddles, while the long powerful front pair apparently assist them in their evolutions. The food of the whirligig consists chiefly of small insects which fall into the water. In the pursuit of these, and probably also in all its activities, it is aided by the peculiar structure of its eyes. The eyes are divided at the water surface into two parts, the lower apparently constructed for use in water, and the upper for air vision a development which parallels the condition found in the eyes of certain surface-swimming fishes. The eggs of this beetle are deposited on the stems of water plants, and the young larvae are long and slender with a many-segmented body, each segment with a pair of legs. It transforms in a paper-like cocoon which it spins on some object outside of the water, and after resting in this about a month, emerges as an adult. They winter deep in the water, as they seem to begrudge this wasted time, only a little mild weather will entice them out for a few dances. Send a stamped addressed envelope, and questions of fact having to do with Nature will be answered by the consulting staff of Nature Magazine of Washington through arrangements made by this paper.

ADVENTURES of the TWINS

by OLIVE ROBERTS BAZZON

MISTER APPLDUSTER.

Pretty soon they met a man who said his name was Mister Appleduster.

Mister Appleduster said it was a nice day and if things kept up the alligators would soon be in bloom, and spoke of how terribly expensive sea-saws were getting and went on to remark that if fire-engines didn't have a carb wheel-barrows would get all the business.

The Twins looked at each other as much as to say, "Here's another crazy one," and the little Whiffet looked as though he was going to cry again. But nobody let on. That's really the best way to be polite, you know.

"I suppose," said Mister Appleduster, "that you think my remarks are curious. But they are as sensible as overshoes if you know how to take them. It's like reading French, or Latin. It says one thing but it means another. Now, for instance when I speak of alligators being in bloom, I don't mean that at all."

"What do you mean then?" said Nancy politely, for she felt that Mr. Appleduster must be expecting somebody to say something by this time.

"Why," laughed Mister Appleduster, sitting down and scratching his ear with his toe, "I mean that huckleberry steak is delicious served up with noodles. Ha, ha! You never would have guessed that, now would you?"

"I shouldn't," said Nick. "And I shouldn't," said Nancy. "And I shouldn't," said the little Whiffet. "Sniffle! Sniffle! I only know one thing. I've lost my shadow."

"Why, do you know?" cried Mister Appleduster springing up like a rubber ball and tugging his coat-tails around his neck as he did so, "that is curious very. That's exactly what Dr. Pepp did with her sheep. She LOST them; but she just let them alone and they came home and brought their tails behind them."

"Oh!" cried the little Whiffet. "Do you think that if I let my shadow alone it will come home and bring home its nice necktie and ears and pockets and everything along with it?"

"I haven't any more doubt of it than I have that my rubberplant is going to turn into an automobile," said Mister Appleduster. "And that reminds me, have you heard the latest news?"

"No," said Nancy and Nick and the Whiffet all together. They could not understand a word of the queer man's conversation, but it sounded jolly and he seemed to mean well. After all it doesn't matter so much what people say, as the way they say it.

"Well," said Mister Appleduster, shaking his fountain pen off with his shoes and polishing them off with his pocket handkerchief, "the wooden Indian in front of the cigar store took the measles, and then he took a chill, and he shook so hard he shook every meadow off. And when he found his measles were all off, with all his might and main he promptly caught another chill and shook them on again."

The Twins had to laugh at this and so did the poor little Whiffet. It was all so very, very silly.

Mister Appleduster began to grin. "Well, I hope you all feel a bit jollier than you did when I met you. Your faces were a mile long," he said.

"Oh, yes, indeed!" said Nancy. "You've made anybody laugh." "Then I've served my purpose," said Mister Appleduster. "I really didn't mean a word of all I said. Good-day, folks. A pleasant journey."

A PUZZLE A DAY

Traveling alone on her dog team Mrs. Brady brought a store of medicine to the influenza sufferers at Point Hope, Alaska. The supplies were put up in small packages. On the first day she issued one-half her supply of packages. But before nightfall ten of these were returned unopened. On the second day she issued one-third of what she had remaining. Only two of these packages were returned. The third day half of her then remaining stock of packages were issued. After one of these were returned Mrs. Brady had 24 packages left over.

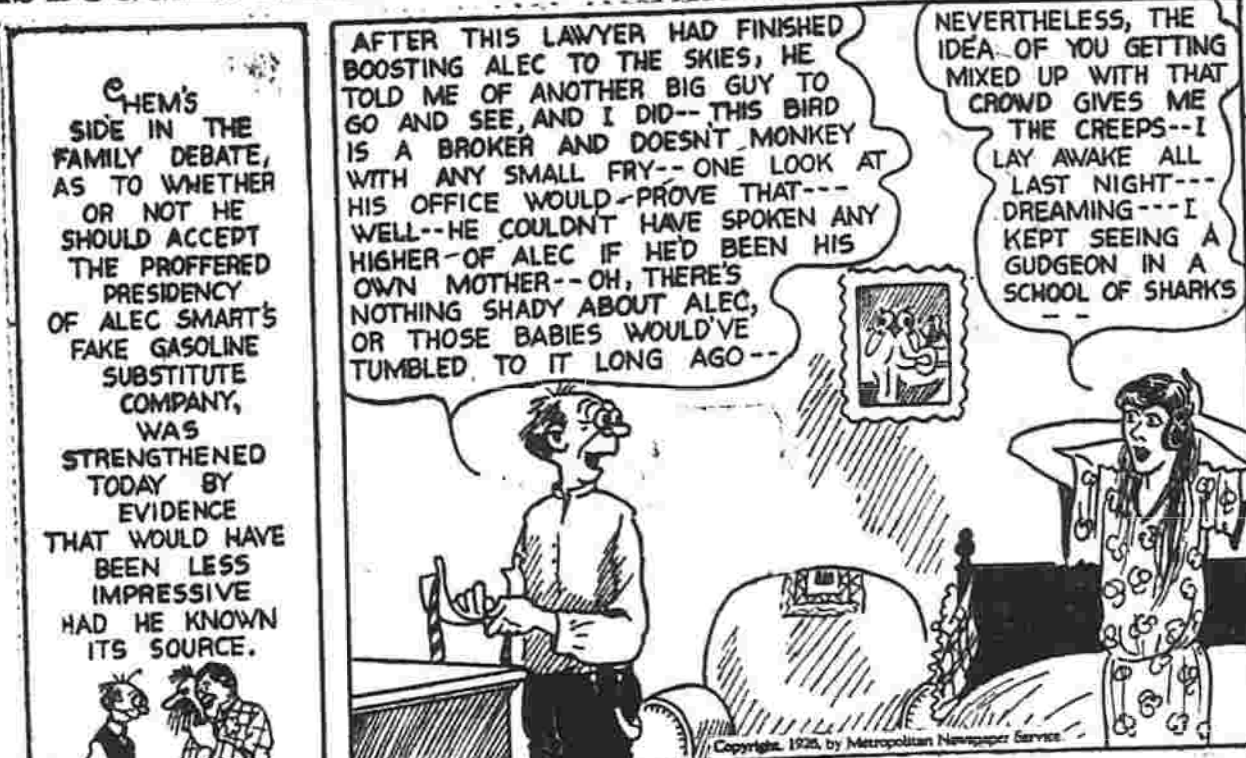

How many packages did she start with?
