U. S. FINDS WAY TO GIVE ALARM OF POISON GAS

Washington.—Gas alarms—a vivid reminder of the mud and crotches of the Western Front—will be revived to protect heavy automobile traffic through tunnels.

Owing to the generation of carbon monoxide by automobile motors the United States Bureau of Mines has found it essential as a protection measure, to devise an alarm and recorder for this fatal gas.

Experiments were conducted at the Bureau of Mines station in Pittsburgh, resulting in the invention of an automatic warning to traffic of the existence of a dangerous concentration of carbon monoxide.

Carbon monoxide, an odorless, tasteless and invisible gas, was a source of danger in tightly closed dugouts during the war.

Experimental work conducted by the Bureau of Mines showed that the percentage of carbon monoxide, the poisonous constituent of automobile exhaust gases, varies from .5 to 14 per cent of the gases," the Bureau statement said.

It was found that harmful effects to persons traversing tunnels may result from exposure to concentrations of carbon monoxide exceeding four parts in 10,000 parts of air.

The data obtained for the Hudson River tunnel were applied also to the Liberty vehicular tunnels at Pittsburgh, which consist of twin tunnels, 5,888 feet long.

To aid in the maintenance of safe conditions in the Liberty tunnels, an apparatus that would automatically determine and record even extremely low concentrations of carbon monoxide was desired and the development of a suitable recorder was undertaken by the Pittsburgh experiment station of the Bureau of Mines.

Detecting the Gas The principle employed in the design of the carbon monoxide recorder is measurement by means of thermocouples of the increased temperature of the gases when the carbon monoxide and oxygen react chemically in the presence of a catalyst, the thermoelectric effects

Poor Winsted, Please Look to Your Laurels!

The Herald today goes on record as boasting of a story that surpasses the noted Fred Stone of Winsted—and better still, the story is absolutely based on facts.

It is almost unnecessary to mention that the natives of this merry little hamlet have been complaining over the unusually cold weather which has been existing for the past few days.

"Snow? Yes! and several feet deep, was seen in Manchester last night!"

"We know you would say it was 'a lot of bunk' but ask any worker in Cheney Brothers who passed up Main street last night. He'll verify the story, and he will add: 'Why, I never got such a surprise in my life. I was coming along the street on my way home from work when suddenly my attention was arrested by the sight of a pile of fluffy white substance lying in the gutter a little way up the street beyond Oak street.'"

"At first I was too dumfounded. Others stopped and stood in amazement. Then I heard someone suddenly exclaim: 'Holy Moses, look! It's a little way up the street beyond Oak street.'"

"I suppose if I stop at the scene tonight on my way home I will find Amundsen and Ellsworth or some other North Pole explorers sitting in Morris chairs frying eggs on the ice."

Someone informed The Herald last night of the strange sight which was threatening to demoralize traffic and a reporter was hurriedly dispatched to "cover" the story. When he got there, he, too, was stricken speechless. Realizing, however, that he must observe his motto, "Duty Above All," the reporter crawled stealthily towards the snow to get a sample. And this is what he almost fell head into:

A pile of soap-suds!

FACING A JOB.

The Republican party faces a job. That job is a readjustment, not at all of its principles, but of its ideas. It has been proceeding for a considerable time on the theory that its economic policies had produced not only prosperity but contentment, not only the well-being of one section of the country but the well-being of all sections, and that it could afford to stand pat on the record.

The result of the Iowa primary ought to bring startling conviction that this is not the case. The Brookhart victory does not stand alone. It follows close on the defeat of McKinley in Illinois and Stanford in Oregon, both administration senators, not by forces outside the Republican party but inside.

What is wrong is the refusal of the East and of Eastern Republicans to undertake any real inquiry into the Western agricultural situation. We have been dismissing the wallings and protests of the West with too pompous gestures, with too little real inquiry into their causes and possible cures.

Those old timers who can remember the free silver campaign of 1896 will recall very vividly how utterly ill informed the entire East was on that suddenly flaming issue when it was sprung.

We want no repetition of that experience. Neither the country nor the Republican party can afford to withstand an economic attack in the interest of the so-called "farm relief," with all the interest in the subject and all the information about it monopolized by the Western assailants.

The time has quite passed for the dismissal of the agrarian question with solemn admonitions to the farmer to stand on his own feet and hoe his own row, work hard and trust in God and the Republican party. The Iowa episode settles that.

Agriculture demands an even break with the manufacturing industries, and it comes to the right shop with its demand—the Republican shop. It is the obvious business duty of the party to find out what it is that the customer wants—exactly what—and whether the demand can be supplied without injury to the country, without deprivation to the other customers, and how.

It is up to the Republican party to shake itself and find out what the row is all about—for neither Republican, Democrat nor anybody else in all this Eastern country really knows. And it is time Republicans did. Time they knew not only what is the row, but what to do about it besides shrugging shoulders and changing the subject.

INDEPENDENT DRYS. The performance of the New York dries in nominating an independent candidate to run against Senator James W. Wadsworth and whatever he candidate the Democrats may name, is one which ought to bring dry Republicans generally to a realization of what they are doing.

If it were possible for the New York dries to poll, on election day next fall, so much as 15 or 20 per cent of the Republican vote for their candidate, there could be only one possible result—the election of a Democratic senator, for the very ordinary ability, in place of one of the ablest of the younger Republican members of the United States Senate. Because substantially all the dry vote would be cast by Republicans; there are no dry Democrats in that state.

And in a state so closely divided as New York, to deprive the Republican senatorial candidate of fifteen or twenty per cent of his normal vote would be almost equal to certain defeat—and to sending another Democrat to Washington to be devil the administration.

The only cheering factor in the situation is that in all human probability the dries will not take away either twenty or fifteen per cent of the normal Republican vote. We will hazard the prediction, right here and now, that the Crisman vote for senator in November will not be three per cent of the total.

It is one thing to vote dry in primaries. It is another to deliberately cut your party's throat by bolting it on election day. Many half-hearted persons will do the former. Only the ugliest of fanatics will do the latter—in the privacy of the voting booth. It will be found that New York Republicans, on election day, will be unwilling to throw overboard the political and economic advantages of Republican national rule for the sake of electing a Democrat—and a wet Democrat at that—in place of their own man.

Let Republican dries beware of this danger, in every Northern state. Independent dry candidacies will play into the hands of the Democrats in absolutely every case. There are no dry Democrats in the North. All the support given to the independents will come from Republicans, cutting the ground from under their own party candidates—with a wet winning in every instance.

It is only in the South and some—four them—hopeless Western states that there are any Democratic dries. And in the real South there are no Democratic wets, strange as it may seem. So that the independent dry movement cannot hurt the Democrats there, no matter how it may spread. There can be no off-setting gains for the Republicans in that direction.

There should be no misunderstanding as to why the South is almost solidly dry. It is dry because no attempt whatever is made to enforce the dry laws there. The South has always had its untaxed moonshine, it always did drink hard liquor straight from illegal stills and the Volstead act and the eighteenth amendment have changed its habits scarcely at all. It voted dry to keep rum from the negro, and it can and does keep the Anti-Saloon League from interfering with its mountain stills by threatening to withdraw its dry congressional votes—without which prohibition couldn't last another year.

Playing into the hands of this crowd, then, and into the hands of the democrats in Northern states, can be the only result of such action as that of the New York dries. In no case can it possibly gain a single seat in Congress or Senate for the dry side. In scores of cases it may conceivably lose a seat to the Republican party. It is "rule or ruin" without a chance in the world of ruling.

TAFT

There is, in all probability, not a single American who will not very sincerely hope that William Howard Taft, after a summer outdoors and restful recreation at his Canadian camp, will return newly strengthened to his splendid service as Chief Justice of the United States. Least of all will there be any lack of such sincere hope on the part of those members of his party who strayed away from support of him in the unfortunate misunderstandings of 1912. Most of them have never ceased to regret their course at that time.

Most of us are hardly more than just beginning to realize that in "Bill" Taft the United States had something more than a president—that there is in him something of that strange warm fellowship with the whole people of the country that distinguished Lincoln; that besides being the chief executive of the nation he was a sort of big brother to every American in private life—and is yet.

Very wise and wonderfully kind and generous is Taft—And well beloved. To learn that he is ill brings sadness; to learn that there is every prospect that he will be quite well again, brings real joy.

AWAITING INFORMATION.

Manchester people were probably greatly cheered yesterday by the message of Rep. E. Hart Fenn of the First Connecticut Congressional district, to the Herald, in response to an inquiry, that he is "awaiting information from the post office department re the Manchester situation."

So are we all of us; but being at a considerable distance from Washington, and from the supervising architect's office as well as from the Treasury Department—which is the real seat of authority in the matter—we don't get much. Meantime it is noteworthy that a good many congressmen who have to concern themselves about the votes back home are putting in big ticks, trying to get a whack at the post office building appropriation, in many cases no doubt for towns where there is about a tenth of the need of new buildings that there is in Manchester.

There is a measure of satisfaction in knowing that our congressman is at least doing as much for us as the average reader of the Herald—waiting for information.

IN NEW YORK

New York, June 8.—See-sawing up and down Broadway I heard this latest bit of slang, which I address you to jot down and spring on the old folks at home. "Papa-shoppers".... It has reference to the fappers who "ankle" up and down Main street looking the boys over....

"Anking," by the way, is the gentle art of strolling about with that particular type of dress that challenges the male eye.... If you see a young lady with one of the six-foot-two college football type you are expected to ask her, "Who's the big parade?".... And a middle-aged lady trying to look young is a "face lifter".... The prim maid who spurns cigarettes is "smokeless powder" and a heart-breaker is a "subdecker"....

Saw James Cobb, who holds the world's record as a stage hand, marching with the G. A. R. boys in the Memorial Day parade.... Cobb has been active "back stage" for 50 years and his age is somewhere in the eighties.... He still is it and says the midnight life has kept him young....

The "spumoni man" is once more in our midst.... "Spumoni" is an Italian ice cream very popular in Manhattan.... But the "spumoni man" has changed.... No longer is he a picturesque peddler going about with his wares.... Now he is about on a three-wheeled motorcycle with a little attachment for his goodies.... Truly, I expect any day to see an organ grinder going about in a flivver.... And then, my friends, there will be nothing left to live for....

Note that the large pictures of unclothed ladies are staring out from many Broadway lobbies and look for a heat wave.... Amusing though it may seem the burlesque houses, which were quite the naughtiest thing possible in father's day, headed the march for "cleaner" shows.... For the entire winter season no suggestive pictures appeared in burlesque show lobbies.... But competition from the "better" shows became so heated that they have had to go back to naughty photographs.... Jazz bands a dozen deep lining up at Pennsylvania Station for departure to summer resorts.... Most of the players appear to be young Jewish boys from the East Side.... A single tenement supplies all the players of one band.... The boys grew up together and learned "team work".... The parents run pushcarts.... Thus operates the melting pot.... Russian cossacks, in picturesque attire, walking Broadway arm in arm with former members of the royalty who now operate cafes or act as doorkeepers.... The other day I met a pianist in a royal orchestra playing "on location" at one of the film studios....

QUEER QUIRKS OF NATURE

BY ARTHUR N. PACK, President, The American Nature Association.

When in the early summer we are tempted to open our windows, perhaps yet unaccustomed, that we may enjoy the refreshing coolness of the fresh night air, we are likely to admit a June bug or two.

These fly blunderingly about the room, and as they touch the ceiling are thrown to the floor by the impact of their wings against the surface. Sometimes we may encounter one outdoors in the twilight, flying swiftly toward some unknown goal.

People who study such things tell us that there are nearly a hundred species, but there are only a few which are recognized by most of us.

June Bug and Grub.

In the south a bright-colored species is sometimes used as a plaything by children who attach a fine thread to it, and let it fly as far as it can.

Another very common species, especially in the northern states, is the goldsmith beetle, which is a bright golden yellow.

Many people do not know that the white grubs so commonly found in the rich earth of the garden, or about the roots of grass on the lawn, are the young of the June beetle.

The mother beetle lays her eggs in a ball of earth at the roots of grass. When these hatch the larvae feed on the roots of grass and other plants, and frequently do much damage. In this state they are so deep in the soil that most insect-eating birds and mammals do not find them.

They spend this part of their life bent in a half-circle, and if uncared for are unable to straighten out and crawl like most larval insects. When, after a year or two of this sort of life, the grubs make earthen cases in which to transform to the adult form, the skunks destroy great numbers of them, sinking little holes a couple of inches deep directly to the well-hidden morsel, which, by some keen sense unknown to us, they are able to detect.

Send a stamped addressed envelope, and questions of fact having to do with Nature will be answered by the consulting staff of Nature Magazine of Washington through arrangements made by this paper.

Stewart's WASHINGTON LETTERS

By CHARLES P. STEWART, Washington, June 9.—Sequoiah or Sequoia?

The House of Representatives debated this question to the tune of nine columns in the Congressional Record a few days ago.

For the benefit of anybody who doesn't happen to know it already, Sequoiah was an Indian chief. He invented the Cherokee alphabet.

It seems the botanist who named the big trees out in California was a great admirer of this old chief, so he undertook to christen that particular species of tree after him.

Unfortunately the botanist was a bad speller. Or maybe somebody else made the mistake later on. At all events, it's not as the Sequoia gigantea, the way the botanist meant, but as the sequoia gigantea, that the tree is known to fame today.

Well, the proposition recently came up in Congress to revise the boundary of the Sequoia National Park, in California, and change the name to the Roosevelt Sequoia Park.

Congressman Hastings of Oklahoma immediately objected. Sequoiah lived in his district, he said, and he didn't propose to see him go into the discard.

The bill's proponents, nonplussed, explained that they didn't know Sequoiah was the name of an Indian. They had supposed sequoia was just the name of a tree. They offered to put a hyphen between Roosevelt and Sequoia, so as to honor both names.

Hastings agreed to the hyphen and spoke approvingly of the linking up of the chief's name with Colonel Roosevelt's, but insisted on a change in the spelling, sequoia to Sequoiah, so there couldn't be any doubt that Sequoiah was the individual referred to.

Congressman Barbour, in charge of the bill, argued that changing from sequoia to Sequoiah would cause an unpleasant confusion. He wouldn't consent to it.

Congressman Burnett also put in a demurrer, in behalf of North Dakota, which plans a Roosevelt Badlands Park, and having thought up the idea of a Roosevelt Park first, doesn't consider it fair play for California to nose in and pre-empt the name ahead of her.

The result was that the bill was tied up tight. The house didn't even get to a vote on it, after all the talking.

It may have been passed or rejected by the time these lines see print, but at the present moment of writing it's deadlocked because Congressman Barbour and Hastings can't come to terms on Sequoiah or sequoia.

Sequoiah has a county in Oklahoma named after him anyway, and they spell it Sequoial.

SHOE SHINE, $1.00. Wailuku, Maui.—A couple of Hawaiian cowboys recently spent $1,000 in getting their boots shined. Finding a large lump of greasy substance on the beach sands, they gave their boots and saddles a good oiling with it. A passerby then told them that the lump was ambergris, valued by perfumers at $70 to $80 an ounce.

DAILY POEM

GRATS.

Although the house is near a wreck, I must admit they're cute as heck. Just tiny things, a runnin' round, but tearing all things upside down.

The rocker legs are badly scratched. The front room rug must soon be patched. The curtains in the door are torn. Ah, woe, the day when they were born. The pity-pat of tiny paws is heard throughout the day because ya just can't keep the wee things still. They're nothing else but time to kill.

And cat? Why, say, you'd show surprise, if you could only realize the appetite that comes from play. They drink four quarts of milk a day.

Yes, I'll admit they're mighty cute. Most kittens are, I guess, but shoot, their frets and cares much worry brings—does anybody want the things?

WAPPING

The fifth, sixth, seventh and eighth grades of the Wapping Center school again won the Banner given by the town of South Windsor for the best sewing done by the girls in those grades, during the past year. Miss White, one of the sewing teachers from the City of Hartford, was the judge of their work.

Judson and Harry Files returned from Lebanon Academy, Maine, for the summer vacation.

Thirty ladies were present at the meeting of the Federated Workers at the home of Mrs. Robert Valentine on Pleasant Valley on Friday afternoon. Plans were made for the annual outing of the society which will be held at Crystal Lake, Tuesday, June 22.

The eighth grade of the Wapping Center school with their teacher, Mrs. Harry Prior, and the eighth grade of the Elm street school with their teacher, Miss Agnes Miller, visited places of interest in Hartford last Tuesday. An interesting feature of their visit was the speaking contest at the Capitol.

Mrs. Erwin F. Stoughton has been appointed sewing teacher in the schools of South Windsor for the coming year.

The Federated Workers have discontinued their regular meetings for the summer.

The Federated Workers will serve a supper to about thirty members of the West Hartford M. E. church this evening at Wapping school hall. Mrs. C. Vinton Benjamin, Mrs. Edgar Stoughton, Mrs. G. A. Collins and Mrs. Alexander Engler have charge of the supper. Everything is in readiness for the lawn fete given by the Parent-Teacher Association this evening on the lawn of the M. E. church.

Mrs. Levi T. Dewey, Mrs. Frank Congdon and Mrs. Ernest Maynard are the general committee in charge of the affair.

The body of Jesse Miner, eighteen-year-old son of the late John Miner, was brought to Wapping, Tuesday afternoon for burial in the Wapping cemetery.

THE ROMANCE OF AMERICA—Nathan Hale (

Captain Hale and his men sprang on board the supply ship, secured the sentinel, confined the crew in the hatches and took the ship to shore. The provisions were distributed among Hale's hungry soldiers, while the sloop went to the general supply depot. Hale was commended by Washington. By late in August the British forces had gained many very advantageous points around New York.

Washington recognized a very serious situation. The British army was well clothed and fed, while the American forces were in a demoralized condition. Their clothing was in rags and food was short.

About this time the British government instructed General Howe to offer bounties to those who would desert the rebel cause. This further demoralized the spirit in the American forces.

Washington then noted mysterious actions by the British naval forces. He called for some officer who would penetrate the British camp and lift the veil of secrecy. Many officers objected to an officer lowering himself to the rank of spy. Nathan Hale, however, volunteered, saying, "I will undertake it. The soldier should never consult his fears when duty calls." What Will the Cow Think?

Just because you're a farmerette is no reason why you can't wear fancy garters and carry a hand mirror, thinks Miss Ethel Carraway, who is the most charming "farm hand" in all Jefferson county, Ala. She's shown getting ready to go wheedle the cow out of a little Grade-A.

And 'Brother Bill' Says 'Hum!'

Philadelphia, June 24.—"The Honorable William Scott Vares," Pennsylvania's 59-year-old wet Republican nominee for the U. S. Senate is called with tongue-rolling pride by his speechmakers, in his campaign literature, and on occasions of state.

But out in South Philadelphia where was founded the political dynasty which brought about his nomination, he is plain "Brother Bill."

They call him that because of his two fraternal predecessors, George A. and Edwin H. Vares, in the domination of Philadelphia political affairs.

George was the first of the triumvirate to emerge from the obscurity of their father's truck-growing business. This was 30 years ago.

George and Edwin in turn went to the state senate. They made friends out in South Philadelphia, came to control ward politics, and bit by bit spread their wings over a multitude of votes.

Lucrative contracts for street cleaning, garbage collection, ash collection were part of their stock in trade.

They distributed judiciously all manner of municipal jobs and vanity-touching committee honors.

The Vares cause rolled up avoid, dupes and momentum, and the Vares waxed rich.

"Brother Bill" sought to be mayor in 1911. Previously he had filled in as a member of the select council, as a tax appraiser, and as recorder of deeds.

War between the Vares and the aristocratic Boies Penrose flared in the mayoralty race. "Brother Bill" lost the nomination, but the Vares switched to Rudolph Blankenburg, an independent, in the general election and won.

The next year the South Philadelphia district sent "Brother Bill" to Congress. It kept on sending him as frequently as a biennium rolled by.

Effective opposition to the Vares fell apart after the death of Penrose. In a few years Ed Vares died, and "Brother Bill" alone was left to carry on.

A multiplicity of responsibilities rests lightly on Vares's broad shoulders. Commuting between Washington and Philadelphia, he spends much of his time with his wife and two grown daughters at their comfortable Broad street home.

For relaxation, he puts on overalls and works in his garden or on his farm.

In 1922, "Brother Bill" was elected to the state senate and re-elected to Congress on the same day. And he succeeded in carrying both assignments.

Strung together in a network of alert, harmonious outposts, his lieutenants know the whereabouts and complexion of almost every Philadelphia vote.

To these lieutenants the senatorial nominee always is accessible, attentive, generous. He is the orthodox type of city "boss."

He is florid and chubby of person, with set lips and an immobile, "poker" face. When asked leading questions, he can coolly twirl his eyes and cross his legs and say "Hum." In Congress he had little to say, and in campaigns he mostly read his brief speeches.

Red hot charges are showered upon him in every campaign he makes, but he is blandly, smilingly indifferent to them.

General Smedley D. Butler is numbered among those who vainly have challenged Vares's influence. "Brother Bill," among most of the city's voters, anyone who denies that this sense of security is politically well founded does it with a twinkle in his eye.

RUSSIAN COSSACKS WITH "101 RANCH"

Unparalleled in modern circus history is the feat of Miller Brothers in contracting the entire Imperial Russian Cossack circus, which showed the London Olympia last winter as a sensational and unprecedented feat of circus management.

This mighty attraction, assembled in the Balkan and other border countries from scattered Imperial hosts of the late Czar, of all the London Daily Graphic as "the finest show of its kind that London has ever had." The London Daily Express said: "One of the most thrilling spectacles ever seen in London opened at the Olympia last night. The riding feats of the cowboys at Wembley were outdone by 260 lean, tough Cossacks." The London Daily Mail remarked: "The Cossacks piled thrill upon thrill. They take away your breath; they are almost too much for your eyes. They must be seen to be believed." The London Morning Post stated: "The whole immense production is something entirely new. Nothing like it has ever been seen in London before. The performance is simply prodigious. The feats of horsemanship must be seen to be believed."

That was London's opinion of the Cossack circus as a show in itself—a huge circus in a mighty city. Now, Miller Brothers are adding this same Imperial Russian Cossack circus—horsemanship, band, choir, acrobats, tumblers, dancers, cavalry units and all—to the huge 101 Ranch Real Wild West and Great Far East.

This is the greatest circus importation in all history.

So, Miller Brothers are adding this Wild West and Far East comes to Hartford, Tuesday, June 15, with a tremendous big show program, with 1,400 people, cowboys and cowgirls, picturesque and exotic; with 600 horses, elephants, camels, buffaloes (from the ranch herds), burros, oxen and longhorns; with every famous Indian chief and warrior in America among its contingent of 300 redskins; with the largest spread of canvas in circus history—some fifteen acres in all—and a magnificent opera chair grandstand which, with its supplementary tiers, seats 14,000 people. And ignoring the retrenchment policy of the circuses, they bring to town the largest and most picturesque street parade ever seen in the land.

"That will be fine," said Parrish earnestly. Audrey was not in agreement. "I don't think so," she said. "Do you know what I think I'll do?"

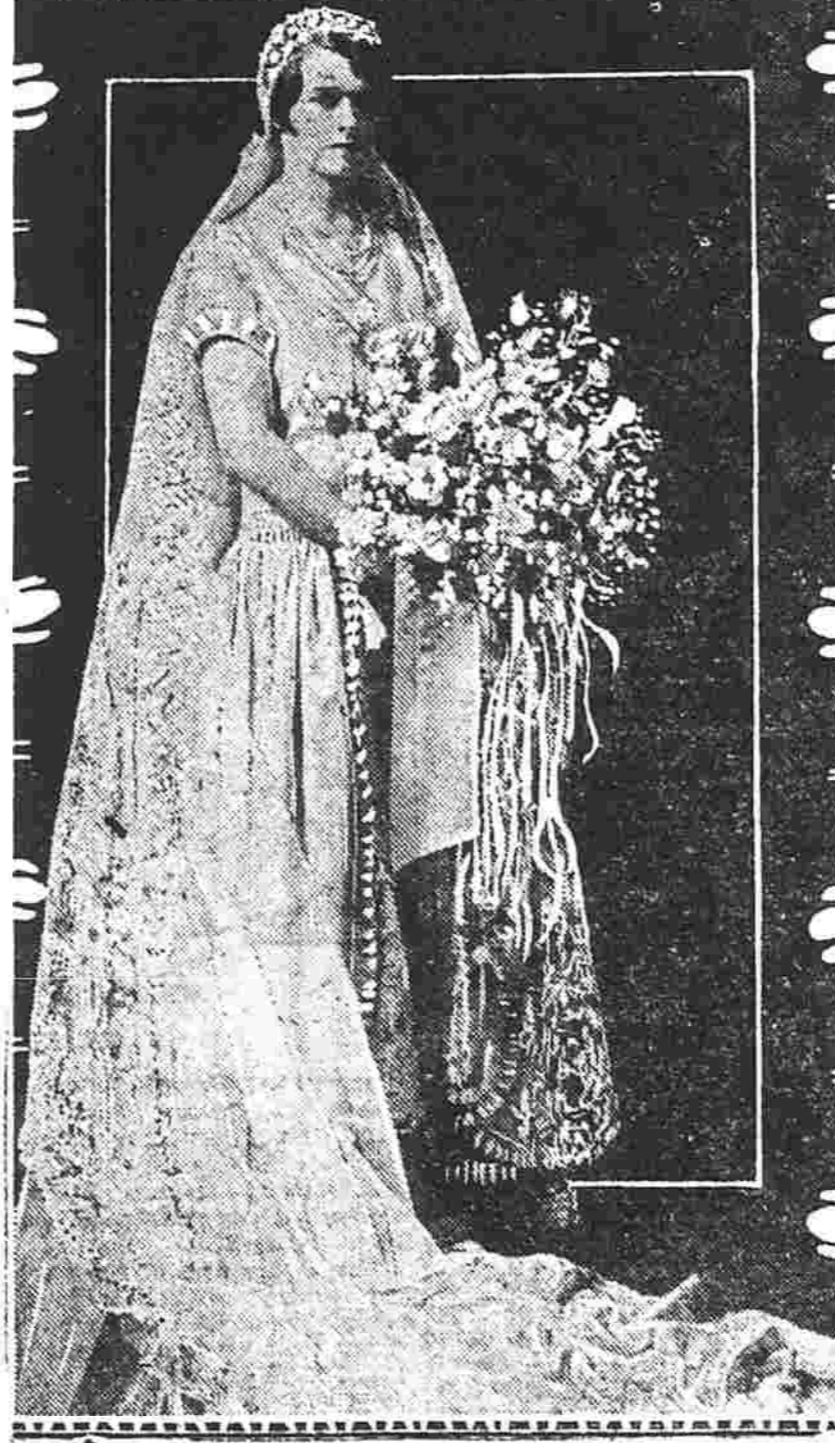

"I've seen that proposal coming," he said, "but I certainly didn't think he'd do it that way."

"I wish you'd marry me, Miss Morton," he said, loudly and unexpectedly.

AN INVITATION

Again the girl hesitated, but I kept still. I knew if I acted too curious she would say no more.

"No doubt he was delighted, too," I said to myself, for I had a hunch that Harry was a gigolo. But again I kept still.

"You know I like you," said the girl. "I am sure you are what Harry would call a regular fellow. I wish you would come out and have dinner with me tonight."

"But you have all the girls in your own circle to choose from." "Piffle," she said. "That is why I picked on you. Those girls are just stuffed dolls. I am tired of their very names. Please come and eat with me. I will be so lonely in that great dining room with servants to wait on poor little me."

"No, don't send it there, Joan. It will make a lot of talk. You see we don't often see fine cars at the employees' entrance, and if we do the girls who get into them will probably be cut by the other girls in the store the next day."

17-Year Old Youth Pitches Shoor Bros. to 4-2 Win Over Saints

Cheney Brothers and J. J. Regan Co. To Open Up a Series of Three Games

BAFFLES MANCHESTER WITH OLD-FASHIONED CURVE; MISPLAYS HELP

Young Joe Daly, a slim-faced chap of seventeen summers, pitched the Shoor Brothers Furniture Company baseball nine of Hartford to a 4 to 2 victory over the local St. Mary's last evening in a poorly played game at the West Side playgrounds. Daly, although a trifle wild at times, was always a menace to the local batters in the pitches. He repeatedly pulled himself out of bad holes that threatened to mark his finish.

Had Out Curve

Young Daly beat the Saints with the old-fashioned game of a wide-breaking outcurve. This had the Saint batters breaking their heads. He also had a fast ball that he used advantageously. Although Daly pitched a rather kiddish game, grabbing at decisions throughout the game, he nevertheless worked so energetically that he repeatedly drew the applause of the vast gathering of fans who watched the contest. He fanned Macdonald with two runners on the paths in the last inning for the "victory out". Stevenson and Ferguson were also forced to breeze the ozone with two runners on base in the fourth when a hit might have meant victory for Manchester. Daly allowed five hits, walked six batters and struck out five.

Visitors Arrive Late

The game was five innings by mutual agreement. The visitors failed to arrive here until a late 5 p. m. The thunder apparently caused the Hartford players to believe there would be no game. When they did finally realize that the local management had not called off the game, it was too late when they arrived here to play more than five innings.

Misplays Prove Costly

Eddie Boyce was slated to pitch for Manchester but developed a sore arm while warming up and decided not to take any chances. As a consequence, Art Seelert was summoned. He allowed the Hartforders but three scattered hits. Seelert did not strike out a single batter but issued four passes. These free tickets coupled with a couple of misplays accounted for the four Hartford tallies. This shows that the visitor's runs were unearned.

Saints Score First

The Saints scored a run in the second inning but this also was a gift. Carlson walked and took second on a fielder's choice and advanced another sack on Mac-

Donald's double to right. Stevenson and Ferguson walked in succession forcing Carlson across the plate.

Three Run Present

Hartford scored three runs in the next inning. With one out, Daly attempted to throw himself with a single. Suzick walked and the bases were loaded when Seelert hurled Raymond's sacrifice wildly to Macdonald at first. Foley walked forcing in Daly. Suzick was thrown out at the plate Ferguson to Carlson on Sorsenson's grounder but Raymond scored a moment later when Carlson's peg to third base hit the runner in the foot and glanced past Partons. Foley went to third on the play and scored a moment later when Carlson, Daly was stealing, out at second. Ferguson took the throw but made no attempt to cut off the runner at the plate.

"Killed" at Home

Manchester had a grand opportunity to win the game in its half but failed. Stratton started off with a single and took second on a wild pitch. Partons walked. St. John holsted a fly to the second baseman. Pat Carlson then came through with a single to right field but Stratton was thrown out when he tried to score on the hit. Seelert followed with another single and Partons counted. Then Daly tightened up and put the quietus on Macdonald via the strike out route. "Iron Man" Bill Pike was supposed to pitch for the visitors but failed to appear. Daly's performance, however, left nothing to be wished for as far as the winners were concerned.

CAN THE TORTOISE CATCH THE HARE?

That's About the Situation in Berlenbach-Stribling Go Tomorrow.

(By DAVIS J. WALSH.)

New York, June 9.—Paul Berlenbach, ex-wrestler who thought better of it, and W. L. (Young) Stribling, ex-acrobat who lived it down, will meet tomorrow night at the Yankee stadium for the world's light heavyweight championship and the proposition seems to have the local intelligentsia wincing, as they say in the bird cage. No matter how the fight turns out, the fact serves to confirm the impression that popular esteem is a child of whimsy, born of caprice with illusion as a sire.

Things Different Today.

One month ago, Berlenbach was a widely acclaimed champion with only Jack Delaney to say him nay. One month ago, Stribling was regarded locally as a good fighter who was somewhat short of championship ability. Today, many of the boys seem to think that he cannot do wrong with Berlenbach. The almost revolutionary change in sentiment was effected by the respective showing of the pair against Johnny Risko. The champion was paired on the potato in the first minute of play and never was quite the same thereafter. However, he was forced to make 175 pounds against a tough heavy-weight and the latter was just a few weeks ago it happened to be Stribling, fast and tricky, won in a saunter from Risko and made what many think was the best fight of his career. He probably was the peak then and it happened only a few weeks ago. If he hasn't started down the other side in the meantime—and his workouts here have indicated that he is very close to the line—Stribling is worth an odd dollar of anyone's money.

Stribling Has Speed.

He can and will out-speed Berlenbach without giving the project the good, gold college try and an expert in throwing the man off balance with one hand and hitting with the other—or both. He is strong, wiry, elusive and never ultra-polite in the ring, which is as it should be. But he can't hit in a strict meaning of the term and if any one is stopped it shouldn't be Berlenbach. Sifted down to pay dirt, the question before the house seems to be this: will the tortoise catch the hare? One man's opinion is as good as another's.

Diamond Disputes Decided.

In determining the height of a batter's shoulder in order to properly judge a pitcher's delivery, does the umpire pay attention to the batsman who crouches in reaching his decision?

If a batter purposely crouches, particularly in a pinch, in an effort to throw the umpire and pitcher off, the official calling balls and strikes rules ball or strike according to where he judges his shoulder would have been had he taken his normal position.

On the other hand, batters who have a natural crouch in facing the pitcher and always hit from such a position, are given the same consideration as the batter who assumes a straight-up posture.

Joe Harris, hard-hitting utility man of the Washington club, has a crouch style at the plate, so did Harry Hooper, former White Sox star, was in calling balls and strikes on such batters the umpire takes their shoulder line from the crouch stance. But the batter who does it to confuse is given no consideration.

Br-r-r! Lillian's First Dip In English Channel

William Burgess and Lillian Cannon

(Copyright, 1926, NEA Service Inc.)
Gris Nez, France, June 9.—Installed in my training quarters, and under the direction of William Burgess, veteran trainer, I am now making the acquaintance of the English channel. This is the first of the stories I will furnish exclusively to client newspapers of NEA Service, telling of my training, and eventually of what I hope will be a successful attempt to swim the channel. After a quiet, uneventful voyage from New York, our party, including Nelson Robins, NEA Staff Correspondent, and my American trainer, visited Paris before coming here to the French Coast. We were given a warm reception in Paris, the newspapers there displaying

"FASTEST HUMAN" CITES BENEFICIAL EXERCISES

By CHARLEY PADDOCK.
Of all the running exercises I know there is none quite so helpful as "bounding."
It is akin to the natural stride of an animal leaping easily along. It possesses a cut-like spring that develops the leg muscles and strengthens the ankles and feet with astonishing rapidity.
It is accomplished simply through springing lightly along from the toes of the feet, and, when properly done, resembles a bouncing rubber ball. Catching the weight on the toes on each stride is the trick of the exercise. Stride is easily increased by bounding and I believe more successful sprinters have been benefited by this simple exercise through any other single thing.
The big problem of the sprinter is to develop legs strong enough to carry him through at full stride in both the 100 and 220-yard distances. So that leg exercises are the most helpful means of progress. And, incidentally, the constant use of the legs will keep you in excellent physical condition.
Too often we see pictures and diagrams of arm and torso bending exercises and not often enough leg movements. All-round development can come through proper use of the limbs, but sometimes gymnastic schedules do not have a single leg exercise.
Here are a couple of leg exercises which will build you up not only for running, but for anything else, because running is the fundamental exercise. A runner can become a better bicyclist, rider or swimmer or gymnast through his cinderpath exercises, but stars in other sports cannot become better runners because of their experience in those activities, which is proof enough of the value of leg movements.
In the evening before retiring lie flat on your back, with your hands to your side and then try lifting one leg at a time, without bending, to right angles with the other leg; then both legs.
On the next day you are not sore, you already are in excellent condition and do not need the training. If that exercise does not wind you, try this one:
Throw the weight of your body, while lying flat on the floor, to the back of your neck, and then with your legs in the air try "bicycle peddling," using the arms in unison.

SECRETS OF STARS ON INSIDE BASEBALL

By RAY SCHALK.
Most catchers make the mistake of calling for too many waste balls.
Often I feel that I am guilty of such a blunder, which, if overdone, has a tendency to upset the pitcher, particularly one not strong on control.
The strength of a catcher's arm must be considered in the calling for waste balls. The receiver with a strong arm should not call for nearly as many pitchouts as the backstop with just a fair whip.
The waste ball often helps the catcher with just a fair arm by breaking up the hit-and-run play, also giving the catcher the edge on the runner because he receives the ball in such a position that little or no time is wasted in getting it away.
It is my observation that a lot of players never run bases unless sent down by the manager. Few try to steal on their own initiative. Base-runners like Ty Cobb and Max Carey are the exception. They run on their own judgment and put it

Edgar or Georgetti to Pitch for Locals — Stratton to Catch in Absence of Lamprecht Who Has Injured Hand.

The second of the three twilight games scheduled for the present week will take place this evening at the West Side playgrounds when Cheney Brothers and the J. J. Regan Manufacturing Company of Rockville, clash in the first of a series of three games. Play will start at 8:15. Jack Dwyer and Ralph Russell will umpire. The second game of the series will be played in Rockville at a later date.
A game between Manchester and Rockville in any sport has always drawn a large crowd of fans and tonight should be no exception. Local fans simply crave for the blood of a Rockville team and vice versa is the situation when a Rockville fan is doing the cravine. Recently Cheney Brothers and the J. J. Regan Company engaged in a sport carnival at the School street Rec and after the smoke of the various battles had cleared away it was found that the meet had ended in a tie. Therefore both teams will be anxious to cop the verdict tonight.

The Rockville nine is coming here with a remarkably fine record. They have played seven games and won all of them with one exception. Six straight victories were registered in the Industrial League in Rockville while the defeat, a 9-6 affair, came at the hands of the Crompton-Knowles Loom Company of Worcester in that city.
Either Edgar or Georgetti will pitch tonight and Jack Stratton will be on the receiving end. Eddie Lamprecht has been temporarily rendered hors de combat as the result of an injured hand. Stratton was formerly a catcher "by trade" in this capacity this season. His bullet-eye pegs to second base which used to be a thorn in the side of all would-be base stealers is expected to predominate again this evening.
The lineup of the Rockville nine reveals the names of some real slugers. This was sufficiently shown when the Polish-American of Rockville came here and almost defeated the Sons of Italy with several of the same players. The first four men in the visitor's team were nicknamed the "Murderous Row" at that time.

Dave Ruth's second home run of the afternoon, his 21st of the season, put the Yankees on the road and of an eleven to nine slugging match with the Tigers. The Yanks made four homers in all, accounting for nine of their eleven runs, but their errors prolonged the contest to eleven innings.
Red Faber bested Lefty Grove in a one to nothing pitching duel, the White Sox beating the Athletics in the ninth on Schalk's bunt.

The Indians nosed out the Senators in the ninth, five to four, on an error by Severed and took fourth place away from the champions.
The Red Sox staggered into St. Louis and the Browns immediately started winning, taking the first game of the series, six to five. The Browns tried to present the game to the Sox by making three errors, but the beat-eaters politely responded with four miscues.
Pittsburgh came from behind the Dodgers, four to three, and is now within less than a game of first place. A pass by Boehler forced in the winning run.
The Reds, apparently stricken with sleeping sickness, dropped their fourth straight game to the Braves, eight to seven, in eleven innings. Roush's four hits, including a homer, failed to stem the tide.
The batting spree of the Giants was suddenly checked by Charley Root of the Cubs, who had the edge on Jack Scott in a two to one mound duel. Young and Grimm got homers.

DETROIT DEALT BLOW BY BASSLER INJURY

Detroit was dealt a serious blow when Johnny Bassler was injured in a game against Cleveland the other day. The star Tyger catcher broke his left leg in sliding into first and will be out for several weeks. Besides doing the bulk of the receiving, Bassler had been hitting hard.

DIAMOND DUST

Babe Ruth's second home run of the afternoon, his 21st of the season, put the Yankees on the road and of an eleven to nine slugging match with the Tigers. The Yanks made four homers in all, accounting for nine of their eleven runs, but their errors prolonged the contest to eleven innings.

ADVENTURES of the TWINS
by OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

The door into the bedroom where the Twins slept in little white beds, was held open by a wonderful stop.

The door-stop was an elephant, a beautiful elephant made of china as white and smooth as satin. There is nothing unusual about an elephant, or even about a china elephant, but when I tell you that this elephant had bunches of roses all over him, even down his trunk, painted on tight, you may say what other people before you have said—that you never heard of such a thing before in your life.

But there he was, keeping guard at his post of duty day in and day out, night in and night out, as resolutely as a June morning. It never occurred to him to be ashamed of his decorations. To add to his oddness his name was Inco.

"Inco" was short for "Inconsistent" for the Twins' father had said he was inconsistent all over. First because a door-stop should be made of iron instead of china and second because it would have looked more natural to have peanuts painted on him instead of roses. There were several other reasons for the name, but that is not in the story.

Inco stood patiently beside his door, guarding it with all his twelve inches of might and main. He stood there, and stood there, and stood there, eyes gazing at the floor, his trunk half raised, to show it off to advantage, his tail—but, oh my dears! I almost forgot—he had no tail at all. Simply, absolutely, positively none.

He never mixed with the other animals in the Twins' bedroom. The rabbits and hens and squirrels and ducks on the wallpaper stood in the greatest awe of him. The butterflies and dicky-birds on the furniture did their best to attract his attention by fluttering their wings in a dozen different ways, but in vain.

He kept his eyes steadfastly down. Inco did it in quite a responsible, being a watchman.

Well, sir, time went on and went on and after a while the Twins got so that they never noticed poor Inco at all. Try it yourself if you don't believe me. You know a picture is on a wall at a certain place, but you don't look at it every time you go into that room, do you? That's the way it was with the china elephant. Where at first the Twins would pat him when they passed, or even get down on the floor and play with him, and put things on his back to ride, now they never seemed to have a minute for a word. They never wondered any more even why he had big roses pointed on.

Perhaps that was one reason why the poor thing never raised his eyes. And perhaps that is the reason he did what he did, for something unusual certainly happened.

I forgot to tell you that Inco had one friend. That was Flops, the clown. You just knew they loved each other without being told why. Flops always turned to sleep with his face toward the door and at night Inco's eyes lifted themselves a bit, just enough to observe what went on on the toy-stuff.

One night the Twins had gone to bed and to sleep. Suddenly something awakened Nick and he reached out to turn on the little night lamp. But there was no need. The moon was out and there on his window-sill stood Inco. On his back was Flops the clown. Before Nick could waken Nancy, Inco had given a jump out into the night and was gone!

Of course it set her thinking. The only answer she could find, was, "Surely, he's been drinking."

A person who spends most of his times thinking about himself ought to get over the habit of worrying about trifles.

Anyone who has never kissed a little child good night, has no business talking about the good things in life.

ONE LADY: Mrs. Whoosis tells me she's going to get a colfure.
ANOTHER: How foolish. She hasn't even got an automobile.

Once there was a bashful fella who reminded his girl of Venus. She didn't have any arms, either.
