MURDERER THAW CRITICIZES SOCIETY

Writes a Book, "The Traitor" in Which He Assails Match Makers, Flappers.

Atlantic City, June 23.—Harry K. Thaw has written a book, "The Traitor," which is a bitter arraignment of certain New York circles. It was learned today that Thaw is generally branded and three New York women in particular are criticized, according to supposedly authentic reports on Thaw's literary effort.

IT SOUNDED RELIGIOUS TO THESE TWO WOMEN.

Oh dear, Oh dear, won't they ever learn? If you only look long enough and listen carefully you're liable to hear most anything in Manchester.

Well, last night two elderly women were watching the boys flock to the Armory to the recruiting rally. "An' what may that be what they are holding in there?" asked one. "A mass meeting," answered the other. "Glorious, and it's a fine thing to find so many young boys going to church these days."

MILL WORKERS ENJOY AN OUTING AT LAKE

Dyeing and Finishing and Yarn Dye Department Spend Afternoon in East Hampton.

The annual outing of the Dyeing and Finishing and Yarn Dye departments was held at Lake Pocotopaug in East Hampton Saturday afternoon. The trip was made by automobiles of which there were thirty-eight. Several of these cars were decorated with streamers, of delicate tints and shades done in tied and dyed effect by the own master of this art, Henry Morgan.

On arriving at the lake an excellent chicken dinner was served to 130 at the Edgemore hotel. The "Melody Boys" orchestra played during dinner and also for the dancing.

After dinner a game of baseball was played by "Cap" Stave's "Color Mixers" and John Roland's "Pets." After seven hotly contested innings the score was tied at one all when things started to happen.

Tommy Gleason, pitcher for the "Color Mixers" temporarily weakened and the "Pets" put over four runs before the bombardment ceased. John Hartnett pitched a steady game for the "Pets" and helped win his own game by hitting a home run, the ball going into the lake. It was said by old timers that it was the longest hit ever made on that diamond. Captain Roland scored on the hit after reaching first based on an error by Charlie Ryan, who made a desperate attempt to recover the ball but stumbled over an ant hill. "Bill" Custer was arbiter and settled arguments satisfactorily to both sides. The game ended five to two in favor of Roland's "Pets."

The horseshoe pitching contest was won by George Mallon and Fred Duran. This team's remarkable execution eliminated the teams of Stave and Hemingway, F. D. Cheney and F. Wippert, Crawshaw and Hill.

Volley ball was next on the slate and after a fast game, Elio (Husky) Johnson's team won by one point over Bobby Boyce's "Speed Boys."

Dillon and Anderson, the sports committee, then got things busy for the races. The fifty-yard dash for heavyweights was a spirited contest. A. S. Helm and George Mallon led the field for forty-eight yards when the former made a final dash and won by several inches. The fifty-yard dash for men was won by George Kennedy. For ladies, Miss Margaret Dillon. The potato race for ladies was won by Miss Dorothy Norris and F. D. Cheney won the men's contest. "Cap" Stave made claim, as usual, that he was the winner but on a check up it was found that he hadn't picked up all of his potatoes. The three-legged race for men was won by Kennedy and Stevenson, for ladies, Miss Dorothy Norris and Miss Mary Wippert.

Next came the tug-of-war, which proved a thriller. George Mallon's "Featherweights" held Roy Norris and his five horsemen for several minutes, when the "Horsemen" put every ounce of energy into the struggle and won by one and a quarter inches, according to "Mike" Dillon, coach and referee.

Dancing was next on the program. In the "Charleston" contest for girls, Miss Florence Griffith was first and Miss Tillie Russell second. It was a fine exhibition and closely contested. George Jolly won the men's contest with "Connie" Dietz second. The prize waltz was won by Mr. and Mrs. Bliss. Prizes were given for every event.

The party was a success in every way and many thanks are due the committee, consisting of A. S. Helm, chairman; Charles Stave, J. F. Howard, Fred Wippert, Harry Benson, William Dillon, Andy Anderson, and John Learned.

There will be no service at the Congregational church next Sunday as the Rev. W. W. Malcomb is to spend his two weeks of vacation in Canada, where he goes with his family making the trip by automobile. He will return in time for the service on Sunday, July 4th.

Mrs. Anne C. Gilbert, Miss Helen Gilbert and the Misses Pendleton spent Sunday afternoon at Lake Pocotopaug, in East Hampton, as the guest of relatives, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Wells.

Misses Gladys and Mildred Hough spent the week end at their Hebron home.

Mrs. Lulu Lord, her daughter Miss Esther, and her son Morgan were visitors here on Sunday.

Edward A. Smith was the leader of the Christian Endeavor society in its meeting held Sunday evening at the chapel of the Congregational church. The subject was interestingly presented and a good attendance present.

Harry Vibert of Meriden, a lay reader, officiated at the morning service at St. Peter's church, in the absence of the rector who was out of town for the week end.

Captain Joseph Underwood, U. S. A., Mrs. Underwood and son, guests of Rev. and Mrs. T. D. Martin at the rectory. They are on their way from Philadelphia to Pittsburg, and have recently returned from Honolulu. Mrs. Underwood is Mrs. Martin's niece.

Mr. and Mrs. Everett G. Lord have received word from their daughter, Mrs. H. C. Champe, that she has arrived at the home of her husband's parents in Indiana. Mrs. Champe and her two children are expected east in a few days and will spend the summer here. The Rev. Mr. Champe will join her here for the return trip in the fall to Mexico where he is working in the mission field.

Louis Hannequin visited the town on Sunday, calling on old acquaintances here. He was one of a company of French wood choppers who came here from France in 1881 with Monsieur Verchot, working in the vicinity of the Marlborough road. He afterwards lived in Oregon and has just returned to this country from a year's visit in France.

Most of the schools here closed with a picnic. The center rooms held a picnic at Holbrook's Pond. Percent of attendance at the Jagger school for June was 95.4.

Marion Porter and Clara Porter were the only pupils who had a perfect attendance for the month.

COVENTRY

Miss Dorothy Wood has returned to her home in Tatville after spending the week with Mrs. A. J. Vinton.

The Children's Day program was given Sunday by the children and it was a very interesting program. Miss Louis Gowdy of Hartford spent the week end with her parents.

Miss Ruth Taylor of Hartford spent Sunday with her mother Mrs. A. B. Porter.

Henry Mushman and son of Hartford are visiting Mr. Mushman's sister, Mrs. A. B. Porter.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Christenson and Mrs. Loren Osborn and daughter Marion spent Sunday with their cousin John E. Kingsbury.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Smith and children were Sunday guest at Mrs. Smith's parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. Noble Loomis.

Miss Dorothy Osborn of Windsor is visiting her cousin Laura K. Kingsbury this week.

Miss Eunice Might is visiting her aunt in Windsor.

Lawrence Hill was home over the week-end.

The Ladies Fragment society met Wednesday of this week at the home of Mrs. Henry I. Barnes.

The Christian Endeavor Business meeting and social will meet Friday evening at the chapel.

Saturday the Coventry Forestry and Woodcraft club will meet at the camp grounds.

Friday evening Laura K. Kingsbury and Elmer Clark will graduate from the So. Manchester High school.

DONOVAN WARNS BIG TRADE MERGERS

Believed to Speak for Administration When He Speaks of Possible Seizure
 Quebec, June 23.—Addressing the convention of New York State bankers here yesterday, William J. Donovan, assistant to the Attorney General in charge of trust prosecutions, delivered what was regarded in some quarters as an Administration warning against the tendency to form big business combinations in restraint of trade.
 He admonished business to proceed carefully along these lines and asserted that the present anti-trust laws did not adequately safeguard the public's interest and that legislators were discussing new laws to meet the new and varying forms of combinations.

Warns of Regulation
 Warning American business that if illegal combinations are formed the time will come when the Government will interfere and regulate business, Colonel Donovan said.
 "It is not difficult to conceive that as a result of huge combinations being illegally formed and arbitrarily administered the Government should be forced to interfere and take over and regulate these corporations even though in so doing there might be developed a bureaucracy in the country with attendant evils greater than those sought to be corrected."
 "If that day should come it will be due not so much to the desire of the people of this country to accept socialist doctrine as to the folly of those who, in their domination of industry, have failed to conform to that principle of

NEIGHBORS' WIVES ERNEST LYNN, author of THE YELLOW STUB

BEGIN HERE TODAY THE story opens with JOHN MILBURN, a young advertising man, sitting in a hospital room and worrying about his wife, FAY, whom he has brought there to have a child. He frets at being separated from her, but when he is admitted to see her, the sight of her lying there and suffering is too much for him, and he leaves to go out and get a cup of black coffee and smoke to quiet his nerves. When he returns the doctor has arrived and he is barred from the room. Finally a nurse arrives to tell him a baby girl has been born. He decides to call her ADOLPH and some time later John departs to send telegrams to his parents. Going into his apartment he encounters MRS. HENRY, a gossiping neighbor, and before she can ask a question he maliciously over-whelms her with a rapid-fire recital of information concerning the baby and depicts, grinning, in his bedroom he picks up Fay's picture and studies it. "Fay," he says, still looking at it, "listen."

"Yeah," grunted Adolph. "You wait till you get as many as me. I got a kindergarten—six of them."

JOHN was silent for a moment. Then, still looking at the picture, he said, "Fay, maybe I haven't been a complete success as a husband, but from now on I'm going to try like thunder." He put the picture back in its place on the dresser. He stretched his lanky arms to their full length, then struck himself vigorously on the chest, producing resounding thumping noises. He studied his own face in the glass, and the stubble of beard grated harshly beneath his rubbing finger tips. He had to wander back to the bathroom to get the cuff buttons out of his soiled shirt. Back in the bedroom again, he paused before his wife's dressing table. A little black prayer book lay there beside his own picture. He picked it up. "Forgot to bring it along," he murmured, and sat down on the bed, skimming its pages. His expression softened and then set in serious lines. "Another little slip setting out to sea," he said reverently. "Fay, I guess life's just beginning for us, too." He strode over to the east window, picking up his clean shirt and letting it dangle from his hand as he stared at the horizon. He was thinking of his impetuous declaration to Fay about Raphael and Michelangelo and Da Vinci. It had suddenly occurred to him that it was the first time in many long months that he had made love to his own wife. Near the Strauss Building downtown he parked his car and soon after was stepping through the tiny little window complete within itself. Inside this structure man could transact his business, have his shoes shined, his clothes pressed, his hair cut, his hunger appeased—could even buy a fair portion of his wardrobe. John entered the basement barber shop and smiled in anticipation at the comforting array of chairs and mirrors, of var-colored bottles and white-uniformed barbers. The head barber himself smiled obscenely. "Morning, Mr. Milburn." "Morning, Adolph. Shave and massage, and go strong on the hot towel?" "Ah, hot towels! You have a bad night?" "Well, I haven't slept a wink."

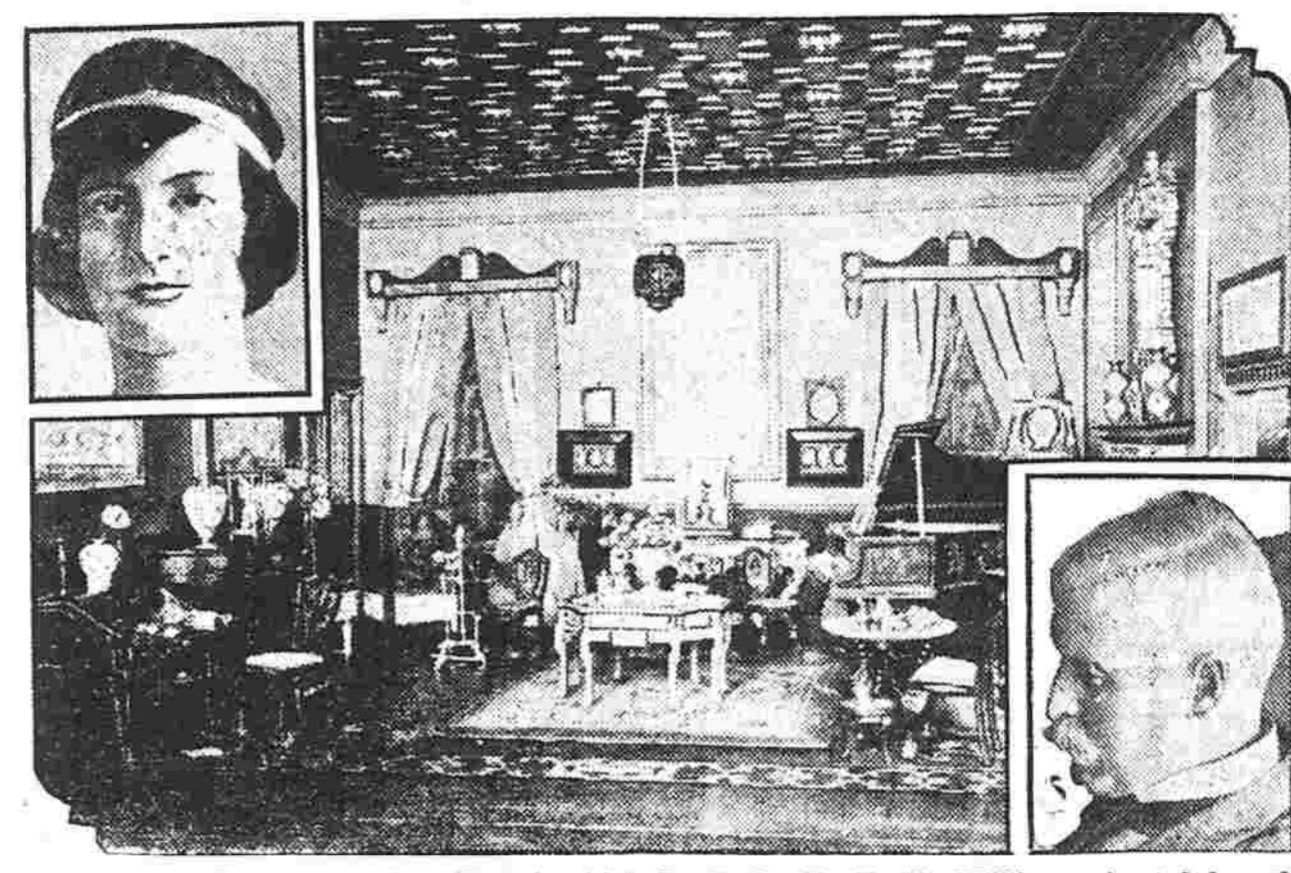

quite suddenly Fay was in his arms, surrendering to his impassioned entreaties, and his lips had found hers in their first kiss. He could never afterward explain it, but somehow he knew that in that silent embrace he had asked her to marry him. And Fay evidently had taken it for granted. Other girls there had been—dozens of them—some of them serious "affairs." But easy conquest was not interesting, and he had tired and seen them marry other men. He had settled down after marriage to his work in the big advertising agency in Washington, writing copy that won him one raise after another, as well as the praise of his chiefs and the admiration of those about him. Then one day Nathaniel Graham, the biggest young "poster" in the city, had been his face close to John's and invited him to lunch. John could still see the cold glitter in Graham's eyes as he proposed that they go in business for themselves. "Start your own agency in Chicago, Milburn. It's a good place for hustlers. I've written to the Chamber of Commerce and got lots of encouragement. Let's quit making money for these people and let's get it for ourselves. I've been here long enough to know that I'm a good salesman, and I know advertising media and I know costs. I'll get the accounts and you'll give them the copy that will sell their goods and keep 'em." John, under the spell of the other's enthusiasm, could say nothing else but yes, although there had been a swift pang of regret when his employer had made such an unbelievable offer to keep him. "Well, each have to put up $5000 to start," Graham had said. John had only $3500, but Fay, enthusiastic as a child, had supplied the remaining $1500. "If you won't let me work any more now that I'm married," she had told him, "you'll at least permit me to make this investment. Some day you might need a first-class secretary, and when you learn how rare they are and how expensive, you may be glad to take advantage of my experience." Thus the firm of Graham & Milburn, Advertising, was born. Less than two years old, it was still pretty small, but Nat Graham COULD get accounts and John DID write wonderful, romantic things about such prosaic articles of commerce as paving bricks, olive and spark plugs. They employed one artist, a man named Briggs. They also employed a stenographer, secretary, book-keeper and general factotum, and the red-haired Miss Knisely was all that. So here he was—not only a husband and business man, but now a father. John yawned sleepily and turned from the window where he had had his music. He opened the Barker and Williams folder, tore from a pad a clean sheet of paper and began to scribble with a pencil. The door opened, and a young fellow in a dark check suit came in. He was smoking a cigar, and under his arm he carried an over-size oleleth portfolio. John's eyes lighted as he saw the newcomer. "Hello, Briggs. Been working at home again?" "Hello, Daddy. Yeah. Been drawing pictures of lolly cars." He grinned. "What's this Adolph tells me about you being the proud father?" "That's right, Briggs." John stopped suddenly, his eyes on the floor in the artist's buttonhole. "Great Caesar!" he cried. "Where did you get that thing?" Briggs tenderly fingered the atrocious looking bloom—it covered the entire lapel—and sniffed it daintily. "This, 'proud parent' he said with emphasis, "is the highest example of the 'fordist' art. It hasn't been named yet. There may never be another like it, it—"

New Furniture-- Why Not Like It! by Olive Roberts Barton.

How often we furnish our houses with the spirit of the girl who viewed Saint Mark's, as the gondola glided by, and remarked with a sigh of relief, "Thank heaven, that's over!" We go to housekeeping, or we move, or we rebuild, or something happens that makes it necessary to turn our minds to new furniture, or more furniture, ever so often. As a usual thing we take anywhere from two days to two weeks to attend to the matter, and the things we buy are made anywhere from a day to forever to be sorry that we didn't give more time to the business. The queer part of it is that it costs the price of crown jewels to furnish even the most modest house now; wood is wood, and it doesn't have to be mahogany at that! Yet we go rushing headlong and buy whole sets—they must be sets, you know—at anywhere from two hundred to a thousand dollars a room without giving the matter any intelligent thought until we walk inside of a furniture store. But what a joy furniture buying can be! No, I'm not going to say "early American," and I am not going to say "period." How do I know what kind of a house you have? Even period furniture in its varying designs and divergent character must depend upon the size of your rooms, the height of your ceilings, the type of your house. Study your house first, then plan. Buy a furniture book or two!

LONESOMEST DOLL'S HOUSE IN THE WORLD

Palace of Fairy Queen Titania Is Built Twenty Years Too Late

Dollhouse of the fairy queen's palace, 14 inches high, built by Sir Neville Wilkinson, inset below, for his daughter, Lady Guendolen, inset above. Notice the 6-inch piano that can be played, and the exquisite furnishings.

By VIRGINIA SWAIN. Philadelphia, June 23.—This is the story of the lonesomest doll's house in the world. A work of exquisite art, complete in details to delight the most sophisticated child, it stands solitary in its class case at the Philadelphia Sesqui-Centennial Exposition—minus an owner. For it was built 20 years too late for the little girl who should have been its mistress. That little girl was the 2-year-old Lady Guendolen Wilkinson, daughter of Major Sir Neville Wilkinson, K.C.V.O., officer of the Coldstream Guards, artist, collector and connoisseur.

Twenty years ago Lady Guendolen demanded that he show her the palace of the fairy queen. Sir Neville set to work. Today the building stands, a world's wonder of beauty and taste. But Lady Guendolen is now a tall and stately young woman, given over to more serious concerns than fairies and their palaces. Sir Neville has brought it to America to begin his world tour to collect funds for children's hospitals. He takes no profits from the earnings of the exhibit. The palace is more than a feat of imagination and skill. It is a museum of art treasures dating to the Middle Ages, and valued to the tune of hundreds of thousands of pounds.

The rooms of the palace are arranged about a court. The outside wall of each chamber is of glass, so that no detail of the interior is invisible. The rooms are about 2x12 inches and the ceilings are 14 inches high. The Famous Gold Cannon. In the Hall of the Guilds stands a perfect gold cannon model, three inches long, made in 1580 by a famous Nuremberg gunsmith. The 12x15-inch altar screen in Queen Titania's chapel occupied Sir Neville for four years and brought him a Royal Academy medal as miniature artist. The royal peacock on the throne chair is of diamonds and rubies and pearls, and the chair arms hold two inch-high silver figurines by Benvenuto Cellini himself. A genuine Louis Quinze desk measuring two inches across was bought in Paris for 3,000 francs—when francs were francs. Queen Mary presented the exquisite Sevres tea service that stands in Titania's bedchamber, and a piece of Princess Mary's wedding cake lies in an ivory casket in Oberon's study.

The queen has always shown a deep interest in Titania's palace, because it was the model after which her famous doll's house shown at Wembley was designed. Sir Neville's doll's house is infinitely superior in artistic value and workmanship to the royal one. In the living room stands the world's smallest chess set, and there is a six-inch, seven octave piano, whose music has been heard by radio at a distance of several hundred miles. Only the finest needlepoint and tapestries and lacquer work are good enough for Titania's palace. Sir Neville himself painted the murals and the panels of the ceiling and the four hundred butterflies in the fresco of the hall. The lacquer cabinet, six of whose mitered drawers will lie on a postage stamp, is the work of his brush and the clever hands of his little Irish carpenter, Tommy Lennon. Thirty Years More. It has taken 20 years to build a palace fit for Titania's occupation. But the palace is far from finished. "I'll have to live another 30 years and work hard, to complete it," says Sir Neville, smiling his slow, blue-eyed smile. "It must be perfect when I die, for it is to stand in the British Museum. Guendolen outgrew it. Now it belongs to all children everywhere."

HER OWN WAY A GIRL OF TODAY

NEW ENTANGLEMENTS "You have everybody in the world, Joan Meredith," I asserted as I gently put her back into the chair. "Why are you the girl who has everything. Your stepfather loves you. He gives you everything that your heart may wish for. You have friends, position, your brother." As I mentioned her brother Joan's sobb broke out afresh. As soon as she could calm herself enough to speak she said: "You will not tell Buddy, Buddy must not know." "Know what?" I asked. "You haven't told me anything. I don't know yet what I mustn't tell Buddy." "You mustn't tell him that I have fallen in love with a man that is married." "What do you mean married?" I asked stupidly, all the while thinking to myself that I seemed to have fallen in with a regular crowd of girls who had gone crazy over some other woman's husband. Here I had just been told by Mamie that everything had been settled between her and Buddy Tremaine. She had consented to borrow $25,000 and Buddy was going back to his wife still vowing undying love for Mamie, and then I come upon another case of a similar kind, although I suspected in this case it was the girl who had the money.

Wounds of July 4th

introduced into the human body by some sort of injury. Frequently this injury is only slight. Tetanus may be regarded almost solely as a wound complication. All wounds are not equally liable to this complication. Punctured wounds, lacerated, torn and bruised wounds, are much more susceptible to tetanus infection than are open or clean-cut wounds. After all, the size of the wound is of very little importance. Fatal cases of tetanus have developed in the past from very slight wounds such as insect bites, splinters, pin scratches and wounds caused by the explosion of fire crackers, blank cartridges and toy pistols. This is the first of a series of four articles on July Fourth. Tomorrow: Tetanus. BY DR. HUGH S. CUMMING Surgeon General, United States Public Health Service. In years gone by a large number of cases of lockjaw, or tetanus, as it is properly named, were reported every year in the United States after the celebration of the Fourth. July 19 to July 16, as observed in past years, might with propriety go down in health history as Tetanus Week, since between those dates cases of tetanus from wounds received in Fourth of July celebrations usually developed. These cases of lockjaw developed from wounds inflicted by explosives used in such celebrations. It was partly due to the prevalence of tetanus following the Fourth of July that a movement was inaugurated to make the observance of this holiday safe and sane. There are two reasons which may be given for this remarkable decline in the cases of tetanus following the Fourth. First of all, more careful treatment of wounds and the use of anti-toxin as a prophylactic has helped; and second, the observance of the safe and sane Fourth. Tetanus is a dangerous disease, due to a particular kind of germ in-

ADVENTURES of the TWINS
by OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

"I'm going to be a track," said the pink ticket in Nancy's pocket, sticking out its head and looking around with its pink eyes. "I'll say on my back that I'm to take you to the next station, and I'm going to do what it says."
"What is the next station?" asked Nick.
"It's called Nip-and-Tuck Town," said the ticket.
"It is in Drowsy Land?" asked Nick, who was still feeling around in his pockets to make sure that none of the vanished money had remained. He and Nancy had found bushels of it, you know, and suddenly—puff—it disappeared in a second.
"Yes, Nip-and-Tuck Town is in Drowsy Land," said the ticket. "You will have some queer adventures there."
The ticket began to slide out of Nancy's pocket, and then it laid itself on the ground like a track—a long, long track that stretched as far as they could see. Like a railroad, the black lines on the sides became rails and the lines of printing became ties.
The little black patch with the date on it turned into a car, and the Twins got in.
Then the little car rolled along and rolled along and rolled along on the pink ticket-track and finally it stopped at the station of Nip-and-Tuck Town.
The ticket then picked itself up and jumped back into Nancy's pocket again, and then the Twins realized that the little car had dumped them out and disappeared also.
"I wonder why they call this place Nip-and-Tuck Town," said Nick.
"Because it's nip to get in and tuck to get out," said the station agent, which happened to be a large mailbox marked "Parcels and Letters."
The Twins looked very much surprised to see so strange a person, but everything was so different in Drowsy Land that they were becoming accustomed to it.
"We're looking for Inco, our china elephant that ran off, and Flops, my toy clown who ran off with him," said Nick. Did you see them?"
"Did they come by rail or by mail?" said the mailbox.
Nancy and Nick looked at each other. They knew the runaway had come on a moonbeam, but it did sound too silly to say so. "We're not quite sure," said Nancy.
"Well, said the mailbox kindly, "I shall look in all my letters and newspapers—perhaps there is news of him there."
The mailbox took a key out of his pockets and unlocked his front door. Out spilled a hundred letters and 177 parcels and six parcels.
"Oh, dear!" said Nancy. "they're all in envelopes."
"What doesn't matter, does it?" asked the mailbox in surprise.
"Of course it does. You can't open a letter that doesn't belong to you. Can you, Nick?"
"I should say not," said Nick.
"But if you have your name on it's different," said the mailbox. "Here is one addressed to the Twins, Nip-and-Tuck Town, Drowsy-Land-on-the-Moon."
"Well, I declare!" said Nancy. "Whoever knew we were here?"
"Oh, lots of people," said the mailbox.

SENSE AND NONSENSE

"Where did the automobile hit you?" inquired the claim agent.
"Well," explained the lady victim, "if I had been wearing a license tag it would have been terrible bent."
Once upon a time a man traveled for twenty years without having any trouble raising train windows. You are right, he traveled by auto.
Mary had a little lamb. It drank some gasoline. One day it wandered near the fire, and since has not benzine.
She: He's the most original boy!
Lou: Yes?
Sue: He drives a plain black Ford.
There's no poetry of motion in riding in a blower over rough roads; it's more like free verse.
Ford—Your engine is coughing badly again.
Henry—Shouldn't wonder. I had its muffler of last night.
The two most prolific causes of punctures are nails and white caps.
Futile Words.
"I didn't see the sign."
"I didn't know my lights were out."
"My speedometer wasn't working right."
Note of a Pedestrian.
Street—A city thoroughfare paved with intentions to cross it.
Horn—A mechanical appliance that has superseded the brake and that automatically scares you out of a motorist's way, into another motorist's way.
Parking Space—A place where taxicabs back into you.
Summon—What a policeman hands you for having got safely across the street at the wrong place.
Jay-Walker—A pedestrian who gets in the way of the motor car that you were about to foll.
Semaphore—Signaling apparatus that tells you in which direction you may safely stand still.
Traffic Jam—Too many pedestrians for each driver.
Getting an automobile is lots easier than getting rid of one. He can't prove this by the rum runner who has been overtaken by the sheriff's car.
Well, why shouldn't the farmer's products come to town in a tin can? The farmer does.
We found this in a newspaper and it is pretty good advice. "Never count your chickens until they return from an autortide."
Only a few can render great service to humanity, but anybody can dim his headlights.
The 14 year old child is 1 when buying a railroad ticket and 16 when driving a car.
"Your speedometer shows you have gone 25,000 miles. Been taking some long tours?"
"No, the 5000 is the distance I have covered getting back and forth to the office, and the other 20,000 the distance I have covered looking for parking places."
Some folks never get the last installment paid on the automobile until it's worn out, and then they have to begin all over again.
The only good that ever has come from a man worrying over something that has gone wrong, is that it makes him do something to make the wrong right.
The kid that gets into some mighty good jam is likely to get into a mighty bad one as a result.
The only time some people turn over a new leaf is when they're reading a book.
Son bought himself a bathing suit. The finest he had had. And yet he never wore the thing because it just fit dad.
Folks buy a budget in an attempt to cut the living cost, and then find they can't budget it.
After all, the best way to raise chickens is with a fork—from the platter to the mouth.
One way to get peace and quiet is for none of us to say anything until we really have something to say.
A bride may think so—but she never marries the best man.
Dad took the baby in his lap. So quiet she would keep. But, shucks, she kept on howling, till she cried her pop to sleep.
This is the time of year when most of us are eating radishes from the grocery store, because of the luck we had with our garden.
If pop buys a bushel of peaches for canning purposes, about all mother can do is put up with it.

BRAINAGRAMS
Time required, six minutes
1. What is H 2 O?
2. What nationally known name do the letters in following words spell. "Can give cold oil?"
3. Where were postage stamps first introduced into the United States?
4. "Saw lads cheer." Can you re-arrange these letters to form the name of a famous man?
5. Who is Pavlov?
6. What is Scotland Yard?
Last puzzle answer:
124 FT.
171 FT.
60 FT.

The new dimensions of the Chinese Mission are 60 by 174 feet or 20 by 68 yards. The old dimensions were 57 feet by 171 feet or 19 by 57 yards.
The original plot was three times as long as it was wide (19x3 equals 57). The area of the larger plot equals 1160 square yards and the area of the smaller plot is 1083 square yards. The difference in size is 77 square yards, as given in the puzzle.

MUCH INTEREST SHOWN IN VISIT TO BON AMI

Dinner in the Evening and Tour of Plant Will Be Attractive.

It really seems that all roads lead to the Orford Soap Company Friday, the 25th of June. The responses which have been received from Chamber of Commerce members to the invitation of the Orford Soap Company to be their guests at a plant inspection, informal reception, dinner and entertainment, indicates clearly that everyone is interested in Manchester industries.

No one even suspects that the reason for the generous response is occasioned by the free dinner in prospect. Whether it is interest in the plant or interest in the dinner, those who attend will certainly not be disappointed. For such an apparently simple operation the methods and the machinery used in the production of Bon Ami, both cake and powder, are most fascinatingly interesting.

The inspection of the plant will begin at 2 o'clock and the groups will be started through the plant with guides as fast as sufficient numbers arrive at the Hilliard street entrance. Inspection will take from an hour to an hour and a half although much longer time could profitably be spent.

9TH DIST. PLAYGROUNDS TO OPEN NEXT MONDAY

The following letter announcing the opening of the summer playgrounds has been sent to all pupils of the grade schools of the Ninth School district. Any girl or boy who did not receive a copy is asked to read carefully the letter which is printed here:

Dear Girls and Boys:—The summer playgrounds open next Monday afternoon at one o'clock. There will be games, contests, folk dancing and hand-work for all ages. See your playground teacher on Monday and you will hear all about the program.

Both the East Side and the West Side playgrounds will be open from 9:30 to 11:30 A. M. and from 1:00 to 5:00 P. M. for children and in the evenings for grown-ups. The Barnard school playground will be open on Tuesday and Friday evenings from 6:00 until 8:00.

Swimming classes for girls in the Recreation Center pool will start after the fourth of July. There will be fun for you on the playgrounds this year. Come and see!

BUNNELL-AITKIN.

Mrs. Margaret Aitkin of 30 Russell street announces the marriage of her twin daughter, Lolita M., and William S. Bunnell, son of Mrs. W. P. Bunnell of New Britain and the late Dr. Bunnell. The ceremony was performed in Boston on Friday, June 18. The bride and groom are now at Lord's Point, Stonington, and will return to Manchester for a visit before leaving for Reading, Pa., where they will make their home.

The bride is a graduate of the local High school and studied for a year at the School of Business Administration, Boston University. She has been engaged for some time in secretarial work by the Orford Soap company.

The groom was graduated on June 3 from Massachusetts Institute of Technology and will begin his duties as assistant engineer with the United Gas Improvement company of Reading, July 1.

Our Own Jerry Fay Makes Good As Restaurateur

Although the restaurant business may seem somewhat unusual work for a college graduate to select, it is reported that Leo "Jerry" Fay, local man who graduated from Grove City University a week ago today, is more than making good in this line of work.

"Jerry" has purchased half ownership in the Wolverine restaurant on Broad street directly opposite the college campus in Grove City, Pa. Owing to his popularity at college, he has caused his establishment to be the Mecca for hundreds of the college students. He bought his interest in the restaurant two weeks ago yesterday.

While at college, "Jerry" gained the distinction of being elected captain of the basketball team, earning his letters in three sports, in addition to being declared the best all-around athlete among the Tri-State colleges.

POLICE COURT

Because of an accident on Twin Hills last night when a Ford coupe driven by John Stannehl of this town ran into a Ford coupe driven by Walter Kendall of New York City, Stannehl was brought before the Town court this morning on the charge of reckless driving. Both cars were coming toward Manchester and the one driven by Kendall stopped in back of a big truck. Stannehl's car plunged into the car ahead, apparently through carelessness on the part of the driver. He was found guilty of reckless driving and a fine of $25 and costs was imposed by Judge Johnson. Both cars were damaged. Sergeant Crockett who investigated the accident placed Stannehl under arrest. While returning to the station from Twin Hills, Sergeant Crockett placed Stannehl under arrest for speeding. The young man was going at a forty-mile-an-hour pace when stopped by the officer. In court this morning Taft pleaded guilty and paid a fine of ten dollars and costs.
