

BREWING BEER, SHE WON'T LET FIREMEN ENTER

North Street Woman Refuses to Open Door as Fire Threatens 5-Family House—No Damage.

The north end firemen were called out just before noon today to a fire in a five-tenement house on North street. The fire was started in a wood-box in the kitchen of one of the tenements by children playing with matches. The women in the house lost no time in making an effort to extinguish the flames, but at the same time tenement but found no chances so turned in an alarm.

The firemen responded quickly. Both trucks were run to the scene of the fire. However, the women had the flames extinguished when the firemen arrived.

Seek Entrance
The house was filled with smoke. Fearing that the fire had reached the partitions, Chief Edward Coleman tried to get into another tenement but found the door locked against him. He knocked at the door and a woman's voice within said she did not need the firemen and would not open the door.

The chief demanded that the door be opened and the woman finally consented. The reason for her unwillingness to admit the firemen was very apparent. In the middle of the room were about fifty bottles of home-made beer which she had just completed bottling. She said the beer was being prepared for the Fourth of July celebration.

The firemen investigated conditions regarding the fire. They did not touch the beer.

QUESTION LEGALITY OF PONZI'S ARREST

No Charge Against Wizard in Texas, Officials in That State Say.

Houston, Tex., June 30.—With $500 in his pocket, which he obtained by selling an exclusive interview to a Boston newspaper, Charles Ponzi, in jail here, plans to fight extradition to Boston.

When arrested he had $15 but soon the money began to roll in by the sale of interviews and pictures. Attorneys today are questioning the legality of Ponzi's arrest in New Orleans by a Texas deputy sheriff and are seeking to learn why he was returned to Houston when he was wanted in Boston.

Texas has no charge against the "financial wizard" officers said.

Leave For Texas.

BUDLONG'S INCOME UNEQUAL TO PACE

Wife's Social Ambition and Extravagance Cause of Shipwreck, Says Oil Man.

Newport, June 30.—Intimate details of his stormy married life were based on the witness stand today in a crowded court room by Milton J. Budlong, oil operator, seeking legal separation from his wife, Mrs. Jessie Margaret Wilson Budlong.

She spent money lavishly in a fruitless attempt to break into the inner circle of the four hundred—spent far beyond her means—Budlong testified.

An independent income of $100,000 was her goal, said the witness, and when he could not give it to her their matrimonial bark was wrecked on the stormy sea of argument.

The story of her "scrap" with the T. Sufferan Tailors when, she claimed, Mr. and Mrs. Tailor failed to make good on a promise of helping Mrs. Budlong climb to Newport social heights in exchange for the sale of Budlong land for a Tallier private ocean-front golf course, was related in detail by the witness.

HOME OF PUBLISHER IN W. VA. BOMBED

Wheeling, W. Va., June 30.—The home of H. C. Ogden, publisher of the Wheeling Morning News and the Wheeling Evening Intelligencer, was bombed by a dynamite charge early today and the back porch was wrecked. Nobody was injured. Mrs. Ogden and three children were in the house at the time of the blast.

LOSES LITTLE DAUGHTER OUT OF HIS AUTOMOBILE.

Worcester, June 30.—Half an hour after he had started away with his four-year-old daughter on an automobile ride, the father of Clement Josselin, missed the little girl. Retracing the course he had taken, the father discovered the child in the road, unconscious. She was on the danger list at a hospital.

COMMUNITY CAMP TO OPEN MONDAY

Kiwanians Expect That About 80 Children Will Enjoy Themselves.

Eighty or more children of Manchester will spend two weeks in the country as the guests of the local Kiwanis club at the Hebron Game club this year instead of the Community camp at Coventry lake. It was announced today. Inspection of the two sites by Kiwanians and the directors of the camp convinced all that the Hebron site was the better of the two because of the greater safety to the children.

Plans for the camp have gone through so well that it is planned to open it for the first group of 20 children on Monday. The children will sleep in a dormitory which will accommodate 20 beds.

This building is nearly complete and is expected to be finished when the remaining work is done on it tonight. Men employed by Heiser Back went to Hebron last night to work on the dormitory and it needs only the finishing touches. These men and Mr. Bach are giving their services without pay. Tomorrow night a gang of Manchester Construction company employees will go to Hebron to erect the bath houses at the camp. The well which is being drilled by Edward Jilison of the Lunt Jilison company, has gone down about 100 feet and while water has been struck, it is planned to sink the shaft quite a distance more so that an abundance of water will be assured during the eight weeks that the camp will be open.

HIS SISTER ARRESTED, HE TAKES ODD REVENGE

John Yeomans Turns Off Water Supply of Man Who Complained About Miss Alice's Driving.

(Special to The Herald)
Andover, June 30.—Miss Alice Yeomans, 17 year old daughter of Judge Edward M. Yeomans, will appear before Justice of the Peace Mrs. Ruth Benton July 12 for driving an automobile without a license. Miss Yeomans was arrested late Monday by Deputy Sheriff Allison L. Frink.

The arrest in itself means little, but its aftermath is interesting. John Yeomans, a Harvard student, brother of Miss Alice, resented the fact that Justice of the Peace Charles A. Faulkner, had aided in arresting his sister. He went down stairs, turned a faucet and thereby shut off the Faulkner water supply which flows through the Yeomans house. He later restored the service to the Faulkners.

Miss Yeomans is a student at Dana hall, Wellesley, Mass., and has a Massachusetts driving license. Her father, Judge Edward M. Yeomans, is now ill at the Hartford hospital. Miss Yeomans had not been in an accident when asked for a driving license, but those who knew she did not have a Connecticut permit complained to the authorities. Connecticut does not grant licenses for driving to those under 18 years of age.

HARTFORD MAN HEADS DRUGGISTS' ASSOCIATION

Bridgeport, June 30.—James W. Jaffe, Hartford, was today elected president of the Connecticut Pharmaceutical Association to succeed Herbert C. Hodge, of East Hampton. F. J. Garvan, of New Haven, was elected secretary and treasurer of the association for the sixteenth consecutive time.

TREASURY BALANCE.

Washington, June 30.—Treasury balance as of June 28: $238,715,347.57.

COOLIDGE LOSES FESS BILL FIGHT IN THE SENATE

Farm Relief Fizzes Out as Little Measure for Marketing Bureau Is Finally Adopted.

Washington, June 30.—A combination of Democrats and Republicans literally murdered the Administration's farm relief bill in the Senate yesterday afternoon. The vote on the Fess amendment and definitely endorsed by President Coolidge, was overwhelmingly defeated by 26 to 54.

After ten hours of bitter debate, the Senate, without a rollcall, passed the cooperative marketing bill shorn of all amendments over which it has wrangled for three weeks. This bill, authorizing a $225,000 appropriation for the creation in the Agricultural Department, has passed the House and is innocuous. Practically all it does is to create a division of cooperative marketing in the Department of Agriculture. So ends farm relief legislation for this session of Congress.

Insult on Injury
A last minute attempt to add insult to injury was made when the Senate accepted an amendment, framed by Senator Reid of Missouri making it a felony, punishable by fine and imprisonment, for anyone to influence the Tariff Commission.

Although no names were mentioned this was a plain dig at President Coolidge following testimony taken by the Senate committee investigating the commission. This amendment, however, was finally withdrawn with that of Senator Robinson ordering the committee to conduct an investigation into all articles and commodities used by the farmer, preliminary to a general Democratic onslaught for wholesale tariff reduction in 1928.

Had Big Cargo

The J. Duffy, bearing 2,802 cases of Scotch whiskey and 148 cases of "intoxicating liquor," cleared Havana for St. Pierre Miquelon on December 2, 1924. The vessel was found in the Sound at 1:24 a. m., December 20, 1924, by the Coast Guard destroyer Downes, in command of F. W. Brown. The Duffy reported having put into the Sound for fresh water because her own water had become salted.

A Coast Guard detail, boarding the vessel, found cases on deck and were told the cases contained whiskey, according to Judge Thomas' summary of the suit. Then the Duffy was ordered to put into New London where she has been held along with the cargo since.

NEW BRITAIN LEADS FOR AN ALL DRY TICKET

New Britain, June 30.—Preliminary steps were taken here today toward placing a prohibition ticket in the field for next November's election. Lists of forty local voters were filed with the city clerk for certification.

According to plans here, a full list of candidates for state office for the United States Senate and for Congress from the First district will be prepared in this country, and will be followed in other counties.

BOY KILLS WOMAN FOR $4.60 WEDDING RING

Lowell Murder of Store Keeper Admitted by Youth of 19, Planning Marriage.

Lowell, Mass., June 30.—Instead of going to the altar today to be wed to Miss Catherine McGrath, a nurse, Donald M. Ferguson, 19, was taken to court to answer to a charge of murder.

The blood-stained money with which he hoped to give his honeymoon a send-off, according to police, fell short. Ferguson, according to police, confessed to the brutal killing of Mrs. Esther A. Frost, clerkly variety store keeper, who was slain with a milk bottle and robbed of $4.60.

Ferguson told police, they said, that he took the money to get married.

MASS. SCARLET FEVER EPIDEMIC SPREADS

Springfield Concern Catered for School Spreads That Started Epidemic.

Boston, June 30.—Alarmed at the epidemic of scarlet fever in Weymouth and Salem, which developed among those who attended high school spread in those two communities, organizations in surrounding cities and towns today hastily cancelled celebrations and dinners.

Meanwhile, state and city officials combined in efforts to stamp out the scarlet fever reign and determine its source.

Besides Salem and Weymouth, scarlet fever cases have been reported from Manchester, Mass., Springfield and Lynn.

The latter city is the home of the catering firm that supplied the spreads for the Weymouth and Salem banquets. Officials of the catering firm think that outside help hired in Boston during the rush was the germ carrier. Two employees of the company were stricken.

Italian Automobiles Probably Run on Wine Under New Order

Rome, June 30.—Italy will probably run its automobiles on wine in the future.

There is a surplus of nationally produced wine in Italy, and all gasoline has to be imported.

In order to reduce gasoline imports, Premier Mussolini has ordered gasoline cut with nationally produced alcohol. The surplus wines will probably be used for this purpose.

RUM SHIP WITH BIG CARGO FREED

Judge Thomas Denies Application for Libel of Schooner Long Captive.

New Haven, June 30.—The British schooner J. Duffy and a large cargo of liquor seized with the vessel in Long Island sound in December, 1924, will not be forfeited to the government, Judge Edwin S. Thomas of United States District Court, today handed down a decision here dismissing the government's application for a libel against the vessel and its cargo.

In his decision, Judge Thomas points out that "power to adjudicate a libel under the Volstead act follows only after conviction of a master or any other person in charge of a vessel." Then he declares that he has received from the district attorney "no allegations that anyone in control of the Duffy was ever indicted and convicted" for bringing its cargo of liquor into the Sound.

FATHER HELD IN GAINES MURDER

Parent Accused in Mystery Killing of Smith College Girl at Seattle.

Seattle, Wash., June 30.—Wallace Cloves Gaines was arrested yesterday accused of beating and choking his daughter, Sylvia Howard Gaines to death about an hour after she left her home here the night of June 16 for a solitary walk. He will be held without bail with him.

Louis Stern, a friend of Gaines, was arrested as a material witness. Parents Separated
Miss Gaines, 22 years old, and a graduate last year of Smith College, Northampton, Mass., was the daughter of Wallace and Mrs. H. E. Maynard, Lynnfield, Mass. Gaines and Sylvia's mother separated 16 years ago and five years ago he married another woman. Last September, Sylvia having found her father through a search started by a clue in a newspaper, came here to live with him.

Miss Gaines' body was found badly mutilated 12 hours after she had left her home. She had been criminally assaulted.

Gaines on the stand in a coroner's inquest, which adjourned yesterday when Colvin announced he was ready to arrest the father, admitted that he and Sylvia had a triff over a proposed automobile trip just before she left the house.

Wife Tells of Drinking
Previously, he had stated that he and his wife quarreled about Sylvia, but when Mrs. Gaines arrived from California she said the quarrels were over her husband's drinking.

The father admitted at the inquest he had been drinking the night before the murder.

Interest hinged today in a secret report of Luke May, criminologist. When all other efforts failed, May was called into the case. He started a secret probe in which ashes were dug up back of the Gaines' home and taken from it. A home was examined and it was understood that it was upon his report the arrest was ordered.

After a number of suspects had been arrested and released, the investigation suddenly turned to the father. A preliminary examination by members of the prosecuting attorney's office exonerated him of the crime.

Because of the prominence of the principals and the nature of the case.

Muscle Shoals Realty Boosters Work Public

Hundreds of Subdivisions Dot Country Within 15 Miles of Famous Power Site—People Far Away Buy Dream City Plots on Installment Plan.

Sheffield, Ala., June 30.—If the United States Congress will only continue to take its time about deciding what to do with the great government power plant at Muscle Shoals, it will win the undying gratitude of a number of very accomplished high-pressure real estate gentlemen.

All the real estate men ask is that Congress occasionally renew its discussion of the Shoals question, and then postpone action.

Between 20,000 and 30,000 lots in "subdivisions" within a 15-mile radius of the big power and nitrate plants have been sold since the Shoals controversy first reached Congress.

When Congress adjourns, demand for the lots subsides. Then, when Senate and House begin to buzz anew with debate over the problem, there is a most gratifying public response to the alluring sales talks of the "subdivision" impresarios.

It is the small, unsophisticated investor, for the most part, who is buying these lots. At present he is found chiefly in distant cities. He can't look the land over personally, but it seems reasonable to him to assume that Muscle Shoals is going to blossom into a great industrial metropolis; so he signs on the dotted line.

He pays 25 percent of the purchase price when he signs. The rest is paid in installments and if he misses the installments the money he has already paid is forfeited.

Rush to Follow Ford.
Until recently, the name of Henry Ford was a magnet for investors. And thereby hangs a tale—a tale that has ramifications extending into Alabama's present Senatorial campaign.

A few years ago, when Ford first went after the Muscle Shoals property, there was a rush to get on the bandwagon. Ford was quoted as saying that if he got the property he would put a million people to work on it; and this part of the state became almost hysterical in its rush to buy land.

Farmers, small business men and workers in and about the three cities of Sheffield, Florence and Tusculum pledged their financial futures for a stake in the land near Muscle Shoals. Hardly a clerk in a drug store but backed his dreams with all the money he could find.

Back Ford Bid.
And now Ford has been turned down and has withdrawn. The district has an almost fanatical faith in him. And the two candidates for U. S. Senate—John H. Bankhead, former governor—were campaigning on demands for acceptance of Ford's offer and opposition to the bid of the Alabama Power Company and its associates. Each candidate favors Ford. In their de-

ELLIOTT CONFIDENT OF BEING ACQUITTED

Florida Developer Swears He Loved Dead Wife Better Than All World.

St. Petersburg, Fla., June 30.—"I am confident the charges against me will come to nothing when the trial in the Circuit court," Eugene M. Elliott, millionaire developer and former college athlete, charged with manslaughter in connection with the death of his wife, a prominent St. Petersburg society matron, declared today.

Elliott, who was charged with first degree murder on recommendation of the coroner's jury, was released under bond of $20,000 last night when the charge was reduced to manslaughter at a preliminary hearing.

The promoter, who is well-known here in Pensacola and in Jacksonville, made a dramatic appeal in his own defense, declaring he loved his wife more than anything else in the world, and again affirmed his statement that she fell down the back stairs of their home, crushing her skull.

BELIEVING ENGINEER WAS DEAD AT THE THROTTLE
Washington, June 30.—The disastrous Pennsylvania railroad wreck near Gray, Pa., on June 16, which caused the deaths of 16 persons and injuries to 82 others, was due to "the failure of Engineer Gordon to control his train," the interstate commerce commission found today.

The failure is believed due to his sudden death or incapacitation, the report stated.

CANADA PARLIAMENT TO BE PROROGUED SOON
Ottawa, June 30.—The present Parliament will probably be prorogued within the next 24 hours, it was learned today. Preliminary report, after meeting a preliminary defeat, has scored two victories over the Liberals and it is now believed that he will immediately order the supply votes carried and the decks cleared of all necessary business and then prorogue the Parliament from his permanent abode.

HAS NEW PLAN MAKING TRAINS "WRECK PROOF"

New York Central Creates System of Signals from Watchers if Equipment Is Out of Order.

New York, June 30.—A new "wreck-proof" system for both passenger and freight trains has been adopted by the New York Central railroad entailing the use of wig-wag signals between train crews and trackside watchers on duty every hour of the day and night. It was learned today.

With the eyes of hundreds of men watching each train in its flight from terminal to terminal, it is expected to avoid catastrophes such as the recent Pennsylvania railroad crash near Pittsburgh and the New York, New Haven and Hartford wreck at Kingston, R. I. last week.

Everybody Responsible
Orders issued from the office of C. F. Smith, general superintendent of passenger transportation, hold responsible every employee for prompt and careful observation of every train coming within range of his vision and for promptness in reporting any defects detected in train or track.

Part of the new system works as follows:
A trainman on the Twentieth Century Limited bound for Chicago swings from the rear platform and radios a mysterious message with his hands. The man in the signal tower leans out from his window and relays back a cryptic response with a motion of his arms.

Translated into language, this pantomime represents a question from the trainman if all is well with the passing train and the downward flash of the signalman's arm gives the assurance that "everything is O. K."

Signal for Each
A broken or dragging brake beam seen would be indicated in the wig-wag system by certain positions of the hands. Every possible disorder that may happen to a train has its special signal which is given to the "lookout" on the train as well as to others passing the signal tower and which might become involved in the event of an accident.

The failure to speed tends to loosen the mechanism of the trucks and wheels and even steel rails wear out, a railroad official pointed out. Trackwalkers discover the unsafe rail and replace it immediately but the only way that has been devised for elimination of peril from broken or loose mechanical parts beneath the cars is close observation as the train passes, it was said.

JUNK AT BOSTON TO CROSS OCEAN SOON.

Boston, June 30.—Ablaze with red and carrying grotesque figures and eyes, the Chinese junk, the Amoy, on its round-the-world-cruise tied up at T Wharf.

Flat of bottom and square of ends, measuring 68 feet in length and 19 foot beam, the Amoy presented a strange sight.

Captain Alfred Nilson and his wife, the former a lecturer and writer of stories, and the latter an artist of marked ability will sail soon across the Atlantic.

TAKE BLACKMAIL SUSPECTS, COUPLE

New York Police Nip Plot to Extort $5,000 from Married Millionaire.

New York, June 30.—Gertrude Fosnaugh, a former chorus girl, her husband, and a millionaire were the central figures in an alleged blackmail plot which detectives were convinced they had broken up today.

The girl, who is 24, with flashing dark eyes and black hair, and her husband, Bernard Fosnaugh, 28, were arrested early this morning in Grand Central station and accused of attempting to blackmail Frederick R. Hazard, millionaire head of a tax accountant firm, who has a wife and three children.

"Exposure" Threats
Six letters to Hazard, it is charged, threatened "exposure" unless certain demands were met. These demands included the payment of $5,000 in cash.

The couple were arrested at the station by detectives after Hazard's confidential agent approached them holding an envelope containing $2,000. Hazard had refused to hand over the money and the detectives arrested the couple.

Mrs. Fosnaugh vehemently protested her innocence. Fosnaugh collapsed at police headquarters.

May Be Others
Detectives intimated further arrests may be made, and that there is a possibility that a widespread "nest" of Broadway extortionists preying on wealthy men and women would be uncovered.

Mrs. Gertrude Fosnaugh was married only a month ago in Hollywood, Calif.

She admitted, police said, that she had obtained $20,000 within a year from Hazard.

"I got $20,000 so far from Mr. Hazard," she said, "but it was my husband's suggestion. I was employed by Mr. Hazard in 1925 as a typist. Later we looked up his rating and found he had inherited several million dollars."

ALIENIST HID HIS DAUGHTER'S INSANITY

Witness in First Thaw Trial Dies, Revealing Secret of Ten Years.

Pittsburgh, June 30.—When Dr. C. C. Wiley, who was widely known as an alienist for the defense in the first trial of Harry K. Thaw in 1907, died last Wednesday the no-fault in his newspaper said he was survived by one daughter, Mary Wiley.

The newspapers said nothing, however, of the fact that Miss Wiley, on the day following her father's death, was removed to the Pittsburgh City Home and Hospital for the insane at Mayview. Nor did they say that for nearly ten years it had been the tragedy of Dr. Wiley's life—which he had jealously kept a complete secret all that time—that his only child was hopelessly insane.

It was a curious incident, too, that Miss Wiley was born at Dixmont, the seat of the Western Pennsylvania Hospital for the Insane, during her father's service there as an assistant physician thirty-five years ago. It was not until twenty-five years later when Dr. Wiley had attained a reputation as an alienist, that the malady in which he had specialized struck into his own home.

DUCE ORDERS VAST CHANGES IN ITALY'S LIFE

Longer Work Hours, No Big Houses, War Bread and Motor Alcohol Commanded by Mussolini.

Rome, June 30.—Premier Mussolini attempts a new experiment in social and economic organization tomorrow.

With Italian exchange falling and a growing adverse balance of trade, Mussolini has ordered regulations made effective tomorrow which place the Italian nation on a strict basis of necessities.

"Facing Disruption"
The Giornale D'Italia, commenting on the premier's new orders, declares that "Italy and Europe are facing disruption and degeneration and the world will watch with keen interest the progress of the new social order representing the genius of Fascism, which has transformed Italy from a nation on the brink of anarchy into a country where the workers and the government are capitalizing every ounce of man power."

The new orders, issued by Augustino Turati, secretary of Fascism, becomes effective tomorrow.

Extra Hour a Day
The most drastic of the new regulations is the addition of one hour to the working day in every industry in Italy. This move is made in an effort to increase production.

In order to save the consumption of paper, newspapers are forbidden to publish papers more than six pages.

The building of non-essential homes, such as villas and palaces, is forbidden, and all building operations will be concentrated on the construction of workmen's homes.

No More Bars, Candy Shops.
The opening of new bars and cafes is prohibited. Candy stores and dance halls also come under this ban.

Merchants are authorized to mix flour with other ingredients and the nation will return to what is virtually war bread.

Gasoline is ordered to be mixed with nationally produced alcohol. Committees will be formed to govern the use of raw material and to distribute supplies.

The regulations are the most drastic ever made in Italy to restore industrial normalcy.

SIMSBURY PAIR FINED BECAUSE OF ACCIDENT

Two Local Youths Figure in Court Hearing—Were Principal Witnesses.

Stanley Vershowsky and John Adonites, both of Simsbury, were found guilty in the Bloomfield town court last evening in connection with the responsibility of a automobile accident involving a local trio Monday night in Bloomfield.

The former was fined $50 and costs amounting to $78 when found guilty of reckless driving. The charge of driving while under the influence of liquor was not pressed. Adonites was fined $15 and costs amounting to $37 on a charge of drunkenness. Vershowsky went to jail because of lack of funds.

Harry Anderson and Earl Rogers, two of the local prisoners who were in the accident, were witnesses at the trial. The details of the accident were told in yesterday's Herald.

STEEL AND MOTORS IN SPECTACULAR ASCENT

Stocks Reach New Highs as Bears Are Forced to Cover on Rising Market.

New York, June 30.—Buying orders for United States Steel and General Motors swamped the New York Stock Exchange shortly after the opening today. Frenzied bears who had sold the stocks short on their recent advances competed with the bulls for the shares offered at steadily rising prices.

Steel advanced to a new high price of $42 a share at the first half hour of trading, while General Motors eclipsed all its previous records for the year when it rose to above 148 1-2. Official reports of high earnings in the first half of the year, computed at about $17 a share, and the prospect of additional dividends have stimulated enormous speculative interest in General Motors stock.

HISTORIC BAND
HERE ON JULY 4
Colt's Band Founded 62
Years Ago— Played at General Grant's Funeral.

When the two hours' band concert by Colt's full band of Hartford, opens at Manchester's big Fourth of July celebration next Monday evening, the thousands assembled on the Oakland street playgrounds will have the privilege of hearing one of the most historic bands in the country. The Oldest Band in the United States—Founded in 1864—is the inscription on the letterhead of Colt's band, and historical records bear out the accuracy of that inscription.

Colt's band has participated in many of the most important events in national and state history, including the unveiling of the Statue of Liberty in New York harbor, the funeral of General Grant, the famous Buckingham Day at Hartford, the Philadelphia Centennial, and the Chicago World's Fair.

For sixty-two years this famous band has catered to the public, not only in this state but throughout the greater part of the United States. It was organized in 1864 by Colonel Colt of the world-renowned Colt Patent Firearms Co. of Hartford, with G. A. Patz as leader, who was succeeded by T. G. Adkins. For eighteen years Mr. Adkins was leader of Colt's band. In 1882 he organized a band for the 14th U. S. Infantry, and served his country in the war of the Rebellion until 1867, when he once again took the leadership of Colt's band.

At Grant's Funeral. It is claimed that no other musical organization in the country has participated in more notable engagements of historical character than Colt's band. This band had a prominent position in the funeral of President Ulysses S. Grant. Colt's band headed the line of march at the famous parade on "Buckingham Day," the notable celebration for Connecticut's Civil War governor, Governor Buckingham. The band also filled engagements at the Philadelphia Centennial in 1876. Colt's band participated in the musical attractions at the Pan-American Exposition at Buffalo, playing in the famous Temple of Music, the structure in which President McKinley was shot by Colokosh while in the act of shaking hands.

Notable Engagements. Other important engagements of Colt's band include the Peace Jubilee at Boston in 1862, Bunker Hill Centennial 1875, dedicated the Soldiers and Sailors' Monument at Boston 1876, escorted Clinton Commandery of K. T. New York, to the Centennial in Philadelphia in 1876, played at the Yorktown Centennial in 1880, escorted Washington Commandery at that, conclude in Chicago in 1881, played at the dedication of the Statue of Liberty, in New York harbor, played at the Atlantic Exposition, played at the Evacuation Day celebration in New York, played at the dedication of Grant's Memorial, New York, the Masonic Conclave, in Philadelphia, Dewey Day in New York, the St. Louis World's Fair, and served twenty years as official band for the First Regiment, Connecticut Volunteer Militia.

Praised in Chicago. In 1893 when playing at the Chicago Exposition, "The Chicago Inter-Ocean" said: "One of the best bands ever heard in Chicago is Colt's Band of Hartford Conn. Again in 1914, "The Bridgeport Post" said: "When the old Colt's Band of Hartford strode by playing the old familiar Second Regiment March they made the best impression of the whole celebration from a musical standpoint."

At the dedication of the Statue of Liberty, in New York, "The New York Herald" said: "It remained for Colt's Band, of Hartford, Conn., to play the most appropriate march in passing the reviewing stand on which were the President of the United States and his cabinet, and the victor and finish with which "Old Hundred" was rendered set the vast concourse cheering lustily."

Popular as Ever. Today, with a membership of thirty, including soloists of note and a select library of classical and popular music, the band is as popular as ever and maintains its high standing as a musical organization worthy of its ancient and honorable history.

QUEEN MARY SURS
SUZANNE LENGLEN.
Wimbledon, June 30.—Two weeks ago Queen Mary was most gracious to Miss Lenglen, when she presented to her an anniversary medal at the Wimbledon tournament.

Today the Queen could not see Suzanne, even though she sat only a few seats away. The gossip immediately conjectured that the Queen was not pleased with the show of temperament last week, which kept the Queen waiting for two hours to see Suzanne play, only to be eventually disappointed.

VERY FEW VEGETABLES IN THE LOCAL MARKET

Backward Season and Lack of Rain Holding Up Crops This Year.

Reports from New York that fresh vegetables are almost a drug on the market and that practically all sorts are cheap, was received with surprise by market men here. It is just the contrary in this section. Vegetables are not cheap and there is anything but a surplus.

Thomas McCann, manager of Hale's Self Serve, in an interview this morning, said: "I cannot understand why there is a surplus in the New York markets. The truck farmers in Long Island must be up against the same weather conditions as the farmers here because the soil is identical. Just today I was talking to a truck farmer. He said that the price of seed has gone sky high this year and that he paid $5 a pound for lettuce seed that he paid $1 for last year and that not one of the seeds germinated because of the backward season and the lack of rain."

"From talks with farmers I find that this is the case on everything grown out of doors as I understand fresh vegetables means what we call 'native' here."

"Not only is there no surplus but there is not the variety we have had in other years. As to buying cheaper in New York than in Hartford, that may be possible but at the same time I notice that buyers are coming to Hartford from Springfield because they can get better prices there."

Shown a price list of the New York market, Mr. McCann said that with the exception of string beans and tomatoes, the prices here are on a par with New York prices. Butter and eggs are a few cents cheaper here. Lemons that sell for 14 to 15 cents a dozen in New York bring 20 cents here.

There is plenty of native spinach and strawberries here but that is about all. Tomatoes, parsnips, other garden truck which at this time last year would come in faster than could be sold, are conspicuous by their absence this year.

LOCAL ATHLETE'S ARM IS AMPUTATED

"Whitey" Mullin's Brother Has Arm Torn in Factory in Waterbury and Loses It.

Anthony "Tony" Mullens, formerly of the North End and a member of the champion Cloverleaves football team, recently had one of his arms amputated in the Waterbury hospital, according to advices received here today. The amputation was the result of an accident in a Waterbury factory.

Mullens' arm was caught in a pulley and torn from its socket. He was rushed to the hospital where it was found that amputation was the only hope. Even with this, the popular North End athlete had a narrow escape from losing his life. He is now recovering in the hospital.

Mullens is a brother of "Whitey" Mullens. Both were members of the Cloverleaves, 1925 champions of Manchester. The injured lad was a substitute guard. "Whitey" is a regular guard. Both are well known at the North End and have a host of friends. Recently the Mullens family moved to Waterbury.

SAINTS' SECOND SACKER

Poohlar Johnny Dixon in Hartford Hospital With Fractured Jaw and Shoulder.

Johnny Dixon, popular second baseman of the local St. Mary's baseball nine, is in the Hartford hospital with severe injuries as the result of an automobile accident early Monday morning it was reported today.

Dixon, whose home is at 56 Willington street, Hartford, is well known in Manchester as a result of his playing with the Manchester team. Details of the accident are meagre. At the hospital in Hartford today The Herald learned Dixon's condition is not regarded as critical. He has a fractured jaw and possible fractured shoulder, plus lacerations. The ball player, when asked by his nurse as to how he was injured, said he could not recall. All he remembers is it was in an automobile crash of some kind.

As the result of the accident, the St. Mary's will be minus Dixon's services for several weeks, probably for the remainder of the season. In his place, Manager Bulla stated today he had secured Sampy Massey.

Bulla also said the Saints would play at the West Side tomorrow evening with opponents to be selected. The Hartford Cardinals may be their opponents, he added.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 30, 1926.

STREET DANCING. Street dancing, such as is planned as a feature of the Fourth of July celebration at the North End, is a pretty conceit and one of the most picturesque possible contributions to any affair in the nature of a carnival.

It has been found in some instances that a disconcerting self-consciousness has operated to prevent the young people of a community from participating in street dances.

Let's not have that happen at the North End on the Fourth of July. To dance in the streets on the occasion of the Fourth of July celebration will be not only to enjoy the dancing itself, but to assist in the creation of a spectacle which many hundreds besides the dancers can appreciate.

tempted to jam through in the name of the administration as a salvo to the insurgent corn belt.

The bill was not only defeated, it was routed, with the Republican membership split nearly in equal parts and the Democrats, of course, voting almost solidly against it.

But the queerest part of the business lies in the personnel of support and opposition. We find Capper, Harrell, Stanfield, with Curtis who voted for the Haugen bill, voting with Butler, Gillett and Moses for the Fess measure, and we find LaFollette, McNary, Norbeck, Norris voting against the bill along with such outright conservatives as Pepper, Fernald, Reed of Pennsylvania.

We find Bingham of Connecticut leading the list of senators who defied the Butler leadership and voted against the "administration" compromise and we find McLean paired in favor of it.

The fact that the Democrats voted practically in a block against the Fess bill has no particular significance except that it illustrated the natural readiness of their organization to help administer a defeat to anything bearing the administration stamp.

But the strange grouping together, on each side of the question, of conservative and insurgent and near-insurgent Republicans ought to bring the conviction, in authoritative quarters, that what passes for administration leadership in the Senate has outlived its usefulness.

The passage of the House cooperative marketing bill, afterward, is a negligible joke, of no importance at all.

MUSSOLINI'S COUP. Note these words of a dispatch from Rome carried by today's cables:

"With Italian exchange falling and a growing adverse trade balance, Mussolini has ordered regulations, made effective tomorrow, which place the Italian nation on a strict basis of necessities. Luxury and easy living will be virtually wiped out by the new orders."

Here is a political and economic coup which, if it works—will put the Italian dictator on a pedestal as the greatest governmental genius of modern times. Here is application of an economic remedy for an economic disease which could be risked by only two kinds of ruler, an autocrat of supreme wisdom and an utter fool.

If the order is really meant, if it has teeth in it, it will affect only a small part of the Italian people, for the vast majority of them, under the benign Mussolini regime, have known nothing at all about either luxury or easy living. Those who will be affected by it, however, are the very people, almost to a man, who have put Mussolini where he is and who have been the sticks of the fascis.

Reduction of the scale of living of this class in Italy to the spartan scale indicated, if it can be brought about by mere edict, will provide the rest of the world with a specimen of Roman fortitude and strength of character which the people of the earth will unite in applauding—and it will do the trick of restoring Italian national prosperity. It is probably the biggest "if" that has entered into European history since it was a question whether the Germans would reach Paris.

Meantime, what becomes of the poppy dream of restoring the Augustinian glory of the city of Rome through unparalleled expenditures of money?

ANGLE COOLIDGE. The President intends to go fishing this summer. Just to show the several hundred thousand anglers in the United States that he has been taken too seriously in his casual remark that fishing was a good enough sport for boys but— he plans to wet a line now and then in his Adirondack lake.

We are frankly glad of this extremely wise determination on the part of Brother Coolidge—See there! With all our respect and admiration for the President this is the first time it ever occurred to us to call him Brother!—for he ought to make a corking good fisherman, once he gets his interest in the sport really stirred; and that will be the very first time he hooks a two and a half pound little mouth black bass.

He will not howl and swear when he loses one. He will sit and fish and fish if he has reason to believe the fish is there. And finally he will catch him.

President Coolidge is not only a statesman, he is a politician. And the qualities of a politician and a successful angler are cut out of the same piece.

Also there is something to luck in fishing. Which ought to insure the President the heaviest creels in the camp.

DOPE. It might be well to accept with a grain of salt the intimation that any undue proportion of the customers of a dope depot just discovered ered in a New York shoe store are actors and actresses.

That there are drug addicts among the people of the stage is not only possible; it is true. That the practice of using narcotics is more common among them than in other walks of life there is no proof at all.

The stage suffers in reputation, in more ways than one, from the fact that a great many people of slight morality and no social ties who hang about the fringes of the theatrical districts of the great cities of the world, make claims to a stage connection which is entirely imaginary. How many times women police court prisoners give their vocation as "actress" every big city reporter knows—and knows, too, that not one of twenty of these ever looked at an auditorium from behind the footlights, even as a supernumerary.

Among these people the drug habit is common. And so the stage is given the discredit of being riddled with it.

One is far less liable to encounter dope addiction in an actress or an actor than in some lonely, morose victim of indigestion in a hall bedroom. The stage life provides its own fill.

Stewart's WASHINGTON LETTERS

By Charles P. Stewart. Washington, June 30.—Republican goes into the coming congressional election campaign to say the least anxious; Democracy in an optimistic frame of mind.

Events of the last few months have played into the latter's hands. The administration's world court policy has not proved as popular as had been hoped. The western farmers evidently are in an ugly humor. Prohibition has turned out to be much more of an issue than had been expected and it promises to be embarrassing in spots. The Pennsylvania Republican senatorial primary scandal has done the party no good.

The Republican majority in the house of representatives is large enough to permit considerable losses and still remain a majority, but in the Senate it can be very easily wiped out.

The present session of Congress opened with 56 Republican senators, 39 Democrats and one Farmer-Laborite, but the unseating of Senator Brookhart in favor of Dan F. Stryk changed the score to 55 Republicans and 40 Democrats.

Of the 33 senators who come up for re-election this year 26 are Republicans and seven Democrats.

The Democrats, however, are respectively from Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Louisiana and North and South Carolina, all safely Democratic states, so that they are sure to succeed themselves or be succeeded by other Democrats.

The Republicans who go out of office, however, include senators from Arizona, Kentucky, Maryland, Missouri and Oklahoma, which are normally Democratic.

Also included in the Republican column are Nevada and Utah, which are so far doubtful that each one has one Democratic senator now.

Finally there are, still in the Republican list, the more or less doubtful states of Colorado, Illinois, Indiana, New York, Oklahoma and, because of the farm situation, Iowa. Even Massachusetts, presumably with the vigorous campaigner, ex-Senator David I. Walsh, running against the administration candidate, Senator William M. Butler, probably ought to go into the doubtful class.

Under such circumstances it will be extraordinary if the Democrats fail to make considerable gains in the upper house.

Neither can Smith W. Brookhart, if elected from Iowa, be counted as a Republican for administration purposes. If he loses it will still be a Republican loss, for the victor will be Claude Porter, Democrat.

Senator Nye, likewise included at present among the Republican 55, is another utterly uncontrollable insurgent, and if he comes back from North Dakota, he will not be even nominally Republican, since he is making his present run as an independent.

Though the administration Republican majority has been narrowed in this Congress, it has had mostly its own way, through the help of a group of conservative Democrats, but in the 7th Congress it is unlikely this alliance can be held together, for the Democrats will be "making medicine" for 1928.

Is it any wonder, all things considered, that the "regular" Republican leaders are pretty openly worried and that the Democrats are filled with hope?

IN NEW YORK

New York, June 30.—Random notes from an afternoon's stroll about Manhattan: Summer gardens opening in the back of Greenwich Village restaurants. Roof gardens opening atop the big hotels. The newest is "Bagdad," with rare tapestries, brass beacon lamps from Damascus and oriental flavor, boasted by the McAlpin. Midnight in the favorite New York roof garden hour. Sometimes it gets cool enough for dancing at that hour during summer months. Few New Yorkers have ever visited more than one or two of the "roofs." These are largely for tourists. New Yorkers are too busy getting out of town in hot weather.

Half a million people try to escape over every holiday. And many thousands try to get to "the city" over every holiday. Each spends the holiday enjoying the other. And if a showdown came neither would actually trade in all probability. At my per trouh hole at the foot of the Catskills I met in the course of an hour recently a Broadway theatrical man, a second-hand clothing dealer, a darkey Pullman porter, a night club waiter and a real estate salesman. One of them mentioned getting back to New York and was dousing in the stream for mention-

Happened to meet Max Dick, "The Ideal landlord" of the baby house" heretofore mentioned in this column. It's the place, you may recall where the parents are given $25 for each baby girl and $50 for each boy and, as the result, the tenement fairly bulges with youngsters. He tells me he never collects rentals and one family hasn't paid in two years. I asked him how he got that way. It seems he landed in New York 42 years ago, a boy of 12. He was all alone and he could not speak the language. He came from Austria. His parents had told him to look up a family then living on the East Side. His first plunge into America was a leap into the heart of dire poverty and misery.

He took a job in a tailoring shop, brushing coats and cleaning up the place. His next appearance was in a sweatshop and he managed to send money home to his mother and find time to go to school at night.

As he grew older he went to live in a shanty but a few doors from the site of his baby tenement. Then he began to buy the shack on the $1 down basis. Now he rides around in a limousine but tries to do his bit for the struggling ones for, as he puts it, "it isn't any fun to be poor."

And there's another little touch to this story. For the immigrant boy brought over his mother. The children of the ghetto called her "Bobby" for some reason or other. And when she died there were 500 automobiles at the funeral.

The whole East Side mourned. And the "baby house" is something of a monument to the memory of a kindly old lady. —BY GILBERT SWAN.

IN NEW YORK New York, June 30.—Random notes from an afternoon's stroll about Manhattan: Summer gardens opening in the back of Greenwich Village restaurants. Roof gardens opening atop the big hotels. The newest is "Bagdad," with rare tapestries, brass beacon lamps from Damascus and oriental flavor, boasted by the McAlpin. Midnight in the favorite New York roof garden hour. Sometimes it gets cool enough for dancing at that hour during summer months. Few New Yorkers have ever visited more than one or two of the "roofs." These are largely for tourists. New Yorkers are too busy getting out of town in hot weather. Happened to meet Max Dick, "The Ideal landlord" of the baby house" heretofore mentioned in this column. It's the place, you may recall where the parents are given $25 for each baby girl and $50 for each boy and, as the result, the tenement fairly bulges with youngsters. He tells me he never collects rentals and one family hasn't paid in two years. I asked him how he got that way. It seems he landed in New York 42 years ago, a boy of 12. He was all alone and he could not speak the language. He came from Austria. His parents had told him to look up a family then living on the East Side. His first plunge into America was a leap into the heart of dire poverty and misery. He took a job in a tailoring shop, brushing coats and cleaning up the place. His next appearance was in a sweatshop and he managed to send money home to his mother and find time to go to school at night. As he grew older he went to live in a shanty but a few doors from the site of his baby tenement. Then he began to buy the shack on the $1 down basis. Now he rides around in a limousine but tries to do his bit for the struggling ones for, as he puts it, "it isn't any fun to be poor." And there's another little touch to this story. For the immigrant boy brought over his mother. The children of the ghetto called her "Bobby" for some reason or other. And when she died there were 500 automobiles at the funeral. The whole East Side mourned. And the "baby house" is something of a monument to the memory of a kindly old lady. —BY GILBERT SWAN. DAILY POEM YOUR STANDING Sure, out among men you're a regular guy. They're tickled to have you around. They'll stop for a handshake and never pass you by. They feel that a real friend they've found. You're happy-go-lucky and hearty, well-met. You've built yourself up on the hunch that you can hang on to the friends that you get by being just one of the bunch. Then, after a while, you may grow to feel proud, to thinking your standing is high. You know you're a knock—when out with the crowd, and it's fun being that sort of guy. But, say, after all, is it that end that counts? Though back-slapped wherever you roam, the real worthy standing a fellow needs mounts on the standing you have in your home. Don't throw out your chest on the strength of your friends. But pick the best angle in life. Your real rock foundation, old fellow, depends on your home, and your kids and your wife.

YOUNG CIRCUS RIDER WAS BORN IN ARENA

Miss Bessie Hollis, 22 years old and pretty, declared to be one of the most remarkable circus riders of this or any other generation, like practically all other performers of the "white tops" was literally born in the arena. Miss Hollis represents the fourth generation of a circus family, all of whom are riders. The laws of the circus are peculiar. Indeed it would be considered an unpardonable offense for a performer to marry outside his or her calling, consequently the children have no opportunity to choose any other calling. The Walter L. Main Circus will exhibit in Manchester on Monday, July 12. The boys and girls of the Walter L. Main Circus number almost a score. The training of these children begins almost at birth. In the vast majority of cases there is the powerful effect of heredity, which exercises an influence upon the child and helps it to overcome obstacles to other well-nigh impossible. The chief effort is to create courage and daring. The muscles must be developed and the lungs expanded, but at the same time the brain must not be neglected. Many a gymnast has mental abilities often lacking in the ordinary man. He has to understand some geometry and mathematics, else how can he calculate the exact distance of a jump, a fall, or a somersault. The Walter L. Main Circus is among the foremost circus institutions in the world. Six hundred employes travel with the show, and more than five acres of land are required for the "tent city." A special train of double length cars are required to transport the show from city to city. There are 40 animals in the show and this does not include two great herds of elephants. There are five bands to furnish music for the circus-roers and twice daily, at 1 and 7 p. m. Prof. John Griffin and his Military Band of 25 soloists will give a free concert. The "big top" will seat 5,000 people and is one of the biggest ever to be seen here. Besides this there are 40 clowns, 30 aerialists, 40 equestrians and 50 acrobats. A picturesque parade will be given on the downtown streets at 11 a. m. Doors to the menagerie open at 1 and 7 p. m. The big show performances start at 2 and 8 p. m.

LAST SHOWING TODAY OF "FOOL" AT STATE

"The Fool," the Fox film version of the Channing Pollock stage play of the same name, will finish its run at the State theatre today, with presentations this afternoon and evening. No photodrama in many months has aroused such local interest and comment or has been so well received as "The Fool." Theatre-goers and critics here have almost been unanimous in pronouncing it greater than the play and it is sure to rank as one of the finest screen attractions presented this year. For tomorrow the State theatre presents a three feature attraction. The first feature is Lillian Rich in "The Love Gamble." Based on the popular novel, "Peggy, From Beacon Hill," by Maysie Greig, a young Australian newspaper woman, "The Love Gamble" is a picture of Bohemian life at Beacon Hill, the literary and artistic rendezvous of Boston. Lillian Fraser, Pauline Garon, James Marcus and Arthur Rankin in support. The second feature is Bob Custer in "The Dead Line." Originality and clever characterization feature Bob Custer's latest release, "The Dead Line." The theme is unusual and striking for a Western picture dealing with the death of an old prospector and the subsequent efforts, against heavy odds, of the hero to locate the mine and turn it over to the prospector's daughter. Good comedy relief and a number of thrilling fights and gripping situations keep the film far above the ordinary. Jack Nelson, who has been directing Custer's recent productions, again scores in his handling of the picture. Custer's work as "Sonora Slim" is splendidly done, and reveals this promising star as coming rapidly to the front, while Nita Cavalieri is excellent as the heroine. The supporting cast, which includes Bob McKim as the heavy, Billy Franey as the old desert rat, Tom Bay Mar ianna Moya and Gino Corrado, all

SILVERTOWN ON THE AIR. Well here we are again. When the business card of a stranger is sent into a man's office he generally inquires, "Who is he?" or "What does he want?" That is a human quality. Regardless of the merchandise a man sells we want to know something about him. His policies. His methods. Now we're going to broadcast a little about ourselves. We learned long ago that the soundest way to build a business was to sell dependable merchandise. People want to buy happiness. They want to buy something that will serve them pleausurably. Certainly not trouble and irritations. Our business axiom is: Sell motoring happiness. And everything in our store, from Goodrich Silvertowns to spark plugs, is so dependable in quality that satisfaction is inevitable. You are bound to be pleased by the service and the prices. THE ROMANCE OF AMERICA

Thomas Jefferson (3)

—By Redner

After several years' study of law, Jefferson began his public career by being elected to the Virginia House of Burgesses in 1768. John Wayles, in whose office Jefferson studied law, often invited him to weekends at the Forest, near Williamsburg. Jefferson here, on New Year's Day, 1772, married Wayles' daughter, the beautiful widow, Martha Skelton.

Jefferson took his bride to Monticello. They had to ride part of the way on horseback through a driving snowstorm.

The mansion at Monticello was still incomplete so Jefferson and his bride lived in "Honey-moon Lodge," a small building on the estate.

In 1774 Jefferson voiced many of the principles of the Declaration of Independence in a paper read before the Virginia Burgesses. This document was not accepted, because the leaders at that time thought the resolutions radical, but it formed the basis for the Declaration of Independence. (Continued.)

Progress In Public Health Work

This is the first of a series of four articles on the benefits of public health work. BY DR. HUGH S. CUMMING Surgeon General, United States Public Health Service. Nothing like a complete story of the benefits of public health work can be told in a short series of brief articles. The most that is hoped is to awaken such an interest, to impart such a conviction as will lead to the pursuit of this subject in some of the many excellent books on health topics that are now available, including publications issued by the government. These articles are written for the layman and if one may judge from the number of persons in hospitals, insane asylums, and other institutions, who are there as a result of disease which could have been prevented, one may be pardoned for observing that in spite of our rapid progress in the healing and prevention of disease, the broad fundamental principles underlying this work are not yet clearly perceived by the masses and by many of those who make our laws. The human mind is readily and forcibly impressed by positive ex-

BLAME 'N. H.' ROAD FOR BOILER BLAST

Trammen Charge That Too Much Haste by Cleaners Was Due to Co.'s Policy.

New Bedford, June 30.—Methods inaugurated by the New Bedford, New Haven and Hartford railroad and not the carelessness of the trainmen, now dead, were responsible for the explosion of a boiler of a locomotive drawing a New Bedford to New London freight train, which wrecked the crack "Cape Codder" New York to Hyannis express at Kingston, R. I., with the loss of three lives, according to statements placed before Attorney-General Charles P. Sisson of Rhode Island today.

Trammen's Charges. The statements were made by New Haven trainmen to reporters of the New Bedford Evening Times and were forwarded to the attorney general by P. I. Prentice, managing editor of the newspaper.

The attorney-general and State Boiler Inspector Ephor W. Farmer had found that a dry boiler was the cause of the explosion.

The trainmen, according to the times, aver that "in making efforts to bring effectiveness to its fullest power workmen engaged in cleaning the boilers have been forced to slight their work, with the result that the fires have not been rid of their accumulation of rust, mineral deposits and other foreign matter."

Interior Clogged Accordingly, so trainmen stated to the reporters, the boiler of the doomed locomotive was only partially cleaned, leaving the interior passages clogged and rusty, bringing on the same result as though there were not enough water. "It is not at all likely," said one engineer to a Times reporter "that an engineer who has been on the road as long as W. J. Moulton (killed in wreck) would leave the engine yard with no water in its tank. More than that, there is not a fireman firing an engine who is not aware at all times of just how much water he is carrying." Other trainmen "scorned the attempt to blame the dead."

A.A.U. Fails To Sanction C.B.A.A.'S. Boxing Shows

Want Complete History of C.B.A.A.; Local Directors Decide This Would Probably Interfere With Other Sports

Quite Probable That Cheney Brothers Will Discard Plan to Run Shows; Unnecessary Red Tape Would Be Included in Affiliation With A.A.U.

The amateur outdoor boxing cards which were to be staged by Cheney Brothers at the Stadium throughout the summer months have been indefinitely postponed.

Following is the official report of the attitude taken by the Athletic Association directors at last night's meeting:

In view of the fact that the Connecticut Amateur Union has held up the privilege of holding amateur bouts under the auspices of Cheney Brothers Athletic Association, the Directors of the A.A. voted last evening to indefinitely postpone the program which had been planned for July 8th.

A communication was received yesterday from Joseph M. Wirtz, chairman of the Registration Board of the Connecticut Amateur Athletic Union, asking for a copy of the constitution of the local association and a complete history of its organization.

This turn of affairs was not anticipated by the A.A., as Commissioner Al Hubard of Hartford had assured the local organization that there would be no hitch in the sanctioning of the bouts. Mr. Hubard, however, explains that amateur boxing is undergoing a complete housecleaning, and extreme caution is being used in granting new organizations the privilege of holding bouts.

The Letter. Following is the copy of the letter sent to Mr. Hubard and also to Mr. Jenney by Joseph M. Wirtz, chairman of the registration board of the Connecticut Association of the A.A.U.:

Dear Al: I am in receipt of a letter from Mr. Tracy enclosing a request of the Cheney Brothers Athletic Association for registration as a club in the A.A.U., also their check for $10.00 covering same and a request for a sanction for boxing on July 8th. I would suggest that you get in touch with the Cheney Brothers Association and inform them that it will be necessary for them to comply with our by-laws for admission in the A.A.U., and to send with their official application, a copy of their by-laws. This application will then be taken up at our next meeting and until that time all sanctions for boxing bouts and other athletic events will have to be applied for as a club outside of the association.

I am sending a copy of this letter to Mr. Jenney of the Cheney Brothers Athletic Association and urge that you get in touch with him as soon as possible.

Very truly,
JOSEPH M. WIRTZ,
Chairman Registration Board.

BEING LATE SEEMS TO BE HAGEN HABIT

Our Walter Suffers from Lack of Detail Complex, So It Appears.

By Davis J. Walsh

New York, June 30.—Very much disturbed over the fact that the jolly old British had been irritated, New York papers, devoted columns to the now famous Walter Hagen incident, were almost a unit today in declaring that the American professional had been quite reprehensible, both for his criticism of English golf and his failure to appear in time for the Mitchell match.

It might appear that Hagen went too far only a month or more ago when someone arranged a "farewell" luncheon for him aboard the Aquitania the day before he sailed for England.

Guests appeared by the dozens at the appointed hour, the food was ready and so were the orators. But the guest of honor was missing and he stayed in his room. After an hour and a half, some bright soul suggested that eating was a lifelong habit in his family and the idea was well and favorably received. They ate and then went on about their business.

Hagen finally appeared about 3:30, when all but one of the guests had gone, admitted he was a trifle late and let it go at that.

Whether Hagen's blated arrival for the Mitchell match was intentional or merely the result of his refusal to be annoyed by details, the writer is not prepared to say.

On his statement that the British were "too rough-darned" in a place good golf, there is no question that Hagen was guilty of questionable taste. When your host asks how you liked the breakfast, you reply automatically that you did. You say this even if the toast was two shades blacker than Bobby Jones's shirt and it is well that you do. This would be a tough old world, indeed, if one went about telling everyone what he thought of them, hosts in particular.

Revering that his position was that of a temporary Ambassador to a foreign land, he murmured a few sweet nothings on the subject of "luck," when asked about his victory. By contrast, Hagen's adverse comment became a gratuitous gibe at his defeated opponents.

No Floating For Lillian On Channel Swim

Stopping to Rest Means Failure, Warns Channel Expert

By Lillian Cannon.

Gris Nez, France, June 30.—The way to swim the channel, my trainer tells me, is to swim every stroke of the way without floating a moment.

This may sound astounding. For 20 continuous hours my arms are to keep up their steady motion and my legs must continue kicking. My trainer vetoes all rest because, he says, if you stop to float and relax your muscles get chilled and stiff and you are in trouble at once. It will be a grind, of course. But training and the habit of long hours in the water make it attainable.

I am encouraged, just now, by kind words from my trainer. He does not say yet that I will succeed. He is reserving that word for a while. But he says he is pleased with me. This approval he bases upon three things:

First: I know the swimming strokes. Second: I can swim and breathe properly on either side. Third: I have shown a willingness to take orders and be guided by a man who knows more about the channel than myself.

Don't think that last is merely vanity on his part. A lot of people who try to swim the channel won't listen to advice. They think they know more about swimming than the trainer.

Now I figure I just have to have unlimited confidence in my "chief." When the big push comes, he will be my guide and adviser. When he tells me to slow up I must do it. When he tells me to quicken my pace, I must call upon all my energies. I must listen to him. If I don't, I might as well not have a trainer. That second point is important too. During a channel swim my trainer tells me you often have to reverse your direction to take advantage of winds, tides and currents. As I can breathe easily on either side, I have a distinct advantage. My trainer and I have concluded that I will rely upon two strokes, the side stroke and the breast stroke. As to feeding me when in the water, I have already vetoed any suggestion of wine, whiskey or brandy. I never take the stuff. It would probably hurt me now far more than it would help. I am relying upon chocolate and hot beef extract.

ONLY ONE GAME PLAYED IN LEAGUE

Only one game was played in the Hartford City "Y" League Saturday afternoon, according to the reports reaching the office yesterday. In the game played, East Glastonbury, the league leaders, won an easy victory over Highland Park 9 to 1.

East Glastonbury—10 4 1 3 x . . . . 9 11 0 Highland Park—0 0 0 0 0 1 . . . . 1 3 2

The game scheduled at Kensington with the Plainville nine as the visitors was postponed on account of rain.

The game set for Manchester between the Orford Soap and East Berlin, was postponed.

There will be no games this week in view of the holiday.

The Reds pushed the Pirates further down the ladder with another well-directed kick, trouncing them six to three for the fifth time in succession.

There is much truth in the label of "psychology pitcher" that the Detroit players have tacked on Wells.

While there is nothing of the egotist about Wells, he has supreme confidence in his ability. He works on the theory that every batter who hits him safely is being favored with the break.

As is usually the case when some pitcher has unusual success, the cry invariably goes up that he is a nothing pitcher and no one understands how he is getting away with it.

There is a hop on the fast one as dished up by Wells that has a tendency to make the batter's head under it. That is one reason why the batters cuss as they pop up.

Brooklyn nosed out the Phillies in the eleventh, four to three, and advanced to within one game of the third-place Pirates. Marriot's two homers featured.

Dugan's four hits and homers by Ruth and Gehrig enabled the Yanks to subdue the Athletics seven to five. It was number 26 for the Babe and put him three games, or two homers, behind his 1921 record.

Joe Shaute beat the White Sox, four to two, as Cleveland jumped to third place.

Cooney and Goldsmith qualified as Giant-killers as the Braves ran amuck and took two games from New York, five to nothing and seven to three. The Giants made seven bobbles in the field and suffered an equal number of mental lapses.

Lillian Cannon—"Across the Channel Lies England."

"Psychology Pitcher" Wells Has Remarkable Record—Evans

Ed Wells, the husky southpaw of the Detroit Tigers, recently pitched 32 consecutive innings without being scored on.

While that stands out as the best pitching performance of his life, it is quite far removed from the record.

The Philadelphia Athletics, who have a penchant for breaking record feats, turned Wells back by scoring four runs in the second inning of a recent "clash" between the two clubs.

It was the Athletics, by the way, who stopped New York after the Yankees had won 10 straight ball games. "Lefty" Grove did the pitching, striking out 10 of the opposition.

Walter Johnson, who, like Ty Cobb, owns most of the records in his particular line, pitched 56 consecutive innings in 1913 without being scored on. That's the record.

The best National League performance along those lines is credited to Ed Reulbach, who went 44 innings before an opponent was able to tally against his pitching.

Ed Wells is one of those pitchers who has been successful because he has the will to win in his makeup.

The Detroit players have a lot of fun kidding Wells by referring to him as the "psychology pitcher." They insist Ed looks and talks the opposition out of making base hits.

Aside from the feat of working 32 scoreless innings, Wells also has the distinction of being the slowest pitcher in captivity.

Before pitching the ball, Wells carefully gives the batter a glance over. While doing so, he may make some remark about what a tough time the batter is going to have making any hits off his delivery.

After going through a lot of preliminary motions, Wells uses a very jerky delivery, in which he all but comes to a stop several times.

Sipples Pulls Game Out of Fire by Retiring Side With Two On—Sons Play Return Game There on Sunday.

A garrison finish which netted them two runs won a hard earned victory for the Sons of Italy over the fast Yellow Cab team of Providence at the West Side grounds last night.

The game was pulled out of the fire by Sipples who took the mound with two outs in the ninth inning after the visitors had scored two runs and knotted the count.

Sipples started to pitch when every ball meant something, and Lamprecht let one go by him, allowing one of the Providence runners to score. This gave the visitors the lead. Sipples walked the third man and struck out the third for the next out. Then the Sons came through.

LeBel, center fielder for the locals, walked, and advanced to second on a past ball. He went to third when Sipples was out at first and came in when St. John hit. St. John went to second on a steal and came home on a past ball.

The squeeze play was called for with Edgar at the bat but the Providence catcher became excited and let the ball get away from him.

The game from start to finish was an exciting affair, replete with scintillating plays, but few extra base hits. Only two went further than the initial sack, Allen of Providence hitting for two bases and Sipples of Manchester socking the apple for a triple.

Providence took the initiative, scoring two runs on two hits in the first inning. They held the Sons for the first two frames with only one hit and no runs but the locals hit three in the third frame and brought in two runs, tying the score.

They registered another in the fifth on two hits and still another in the seventh when they touched McElroy for two more bingles. Then Providence woke up in the ninth and brought three across the pan with four hits, all off Parker. Sipples saved the day with his speed when Parker was sent to the showers.

Sipples had a big night with four hits, one of them a triple. St. John was responsible for two hits but he was not given more than one chance in the field. This one had even the umpires befuddled.

St. John ran up the bank in right field, past the automobiles and caught the ball on the lawn of a house on the other side of Cooper street. The Providence team argued for several minutes before the catch was allowed.

For the Providence team McElroy, the pitcher, and Griffith, second baseman, were the hitters, each making two. McElroy struck out nine men while the best the Manchester pitchers could do was to retire two batters by this route.

NEIGHBORS' WIVES

ERNEST LYNN, author of THE YELLOW STUB

BEGIN HERE TODAY

JOHN MILBURN, partner in the advertising agency of GRHAM AND MILBURN, has the birth of a baby girl as the turning point in his and his wife, FAY'S, marriage.

John is of a romantic nature, which finds an outlet in the advertising copy he writes. He is impractical. Fay runs the family budget, and the financial details of the business are attended to by NATHANIEL GUYA HALE.

While Fay is in the hospital, John is invited to a swimming party at the country place of several friends of the Forbes, including NELL ORME, who, Pat hints, is having trouble with her husband. John finds himself strangely attracted by Nell, and she challenges him to a swimming race, which she wins.

Pat leads John to think that he is dissatisfied with his own marriage and is growing tired of family life with his wife and three children.

Fay comes back from the hospital and the Milburns, determined to buy a home, now that they have a baby, go house hunting. Only one appeals to them, and that is priced at $13,000, which is $2000 more than Fay cares to go. John is called out of town on a business deal, by Nat Graham, his partner.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY (The names and situations in this story are fictitious.)

CHAPTER VIII

"WHAT is the Milburn Tool Company?"

"Why, they're one of the biggest tool works in the country," John explained, walking back and forth in his excitement.

"Nat Graham got that their advertising contract with the Fasteys-Lang people run out pretty soon, and he shipped down to Milburn to see whether there was any chance for another agency or whether they were going to renew with Fasteys-Lang."

"And he tells me that the advertising manager for the Milburn people has been watching our stuff and is ready to look at our proposition. He's still pretty well sold on what we can do for him. Nat's down there now, looking around, and he wants me to come down and inspect the factories and their products—to get the right atmosphere, you know—and then we'll work out a campaign for them. Throw some clothes in a grip for me. I'll be leaving in the morning."

Mrs. Pettibone, the housekeeper, looked up placidly from her knitting in a far corner of the living room and then went on with her work.

John was running his fingers violently through his back hair. "Gosh!" he exclaimed, "if we get that biggest contract we've landed yet, I'm going to rap on wood!" He leaped over to the gate-ledge table and knocked with his knuckles, like a little school boy.

"Silly," Fay smiled. "If you get the contract it won't be because of knocking on wood. It will be because, and then we'll work out a campaign for them. Throw some clothes in a grip for me. I'll be leaving in the morning."

"It will take preparation, my dear. If we can't lick the Fasteys-Lang outfit we'll be some pumpkins. They're one of the best known of the big eastern agencies."

His smile disappeared, and his face lengthened. "But it's too good to think about. Too good to be true."

"Why is it too good to be true?" Fay asked, looking up sharply. "It's just a question of your brains and ability against someone else, isn't it? Remember, the Fasteys-Lang people are human too. There's no reason in the world why you shouldn't get the contract, provided

"If you're going to interview anybody you'd better change that necktie. It's a fright!"

your work is as good as theirs."

"That's just where the rub comes," he grumbled. "They're a big outfit, with all kinds of scientific bimboes and fancy copy writers and high-priced artists, and we're a one-horse outfit."

"They all had to start out as one-horse outfits," murmured Fay. "And I think Mr. Briggs is a mighty fine artist, even if he does work with a one-horse concern, as you say."

"Briggs? I told Nat, if we were on what we pay him. He does some outside work—freelance stuff—and picks up a pretty stiff piece of change that way. Nat didn't want Briggs to be using our office for his other work, but I went to bat for him. Briggs does our work first; he's too square to put anything over on us. Besides, he'll leave, and we'll have a fine time trying to replace him."

John flung himself in a chair and picked up a book, found his place and started to read. Fay went on silently sewing, but occasionally she shot an amused glance at her unseeing husband, who was settled back comfortably in the deep-cushioned easy chair, his legs sprawled out before him.

The housekeeper got up, her hand suppressing a yawn, and gathered together her knitting. "I think I'll go to bed, Mrs. Milburn," she murmured softly. "Good night."

"Good night, Mrs. Pettibone," called John from his book as the housekeeper left the room for the spare bed chamber.

"John," Fay reproved him when she heard the bedroom door shut behind Mrs. Pettibone. "You shouldn't belittle your business like that before strangers. She'll go away with left impression that you really are engaged in some little one-horse, fly-by-night business, instead of a young advertising agency with a real future. You talk too carelessly."

"Well, I'm rather guilty of that than bragging. People can't say I go around tooting my horn all the time. If I went around bragging about the business, and then something went wrong, people would say, 'Well, he's been dropped out on Old Howard, I see!'"

"Yes, but if you keep creating the impression that your outfit is such a small one, people won't take you seriously. I'll bet Nat Graham doesn't talk that way."

"You bet he doesn't. Nat makes 'em sit up and take notice when he talks of Graham and Milburn. I'll hang it on the old boy for that. Well, think I'll shave, if I'm going to get up early and catch a train."

John moved into the bathroom, turned on the hot water in the tub and began to whittle as he lathered his face and began to shave. He stopped whistling to grumble at a blade and replace it with a new one. Then, his shave over, he felt the water in the tub with his fingers, and he didn't even open the package.

"Oh, John!" cried Fay, redden- ing and made haste to undo the bundle. "Why, I think they're lovely!" she exclaimed, holding them up to her nose. "They're the sheerest things I ever saw. You're an old dear." She kissed him.

"Oh, well, I guess I'll have to be satisfied." But he looked pleased, nevertheless.

There followed a perfect frenzy of work for John. There were day-time conferences with Nat Graham, who poured forth as figures as a spigot of water, and long night sessions in the little room with Briggs.

"We'll map out a whole campaign for them," said Graham, "and you and Briggs can shape up the first few complete. You can get pen- notes of your ideas on the ones to follow."

Nat kept Miss Kelsely busy all day long with dictation, and John sweated over his penmanship, smoking innumerable cigarettes and pipes to the accompaniment of Briggs' cigars.

Fay, meanwhile, was entertaining numerous daytime visitors, who were anxious to see John and Richard. Menefee came with Margaret Wayne, and Marian Forbes had to drive her to town one morning so she could call. There were others unnumbered.

John had no time for further house h- ting, and Fay looked alone until she got discouraged and even started talking about waiting until fall; but John said, "Never mind. I'll run on something yet. Some- time we'll have to pinch for money and have to sell."

But Fay shook her head disconso- lately. "And I did want to be in a house before mother came to visit us," she complained.

The strain of long hours and in- tensive work was beginning to tell on John. Their other work could not stop just because they were planning the Milburn job, and he looked tired and a little drawn when he came home at night.

Another ten days of it passed, and then one night he and Briggs sat sprawling out on chairs and watched Nat Graham as he packed his books, papers and "dum-dum-mies" and tissue-paper-covered cardboard into his giant sized brief case.

"Well, there she is," said John, as Nat finished. "Were shooting the works, hey?" he asked Briggs. "What do you say we go down to the station with him and see him off?"

"Why not?" answered Briggs readily, and the three piled down to the station in a taxi. Nat said, as he climbed aboard the train, "I'm coming back with the contract, John; see if I don't." His jaw set grimly. "You'd better," and John doubled his fist and muttered a fervent prayer as the train pulled out. He turned suddenly to the little artist.

with the advertising manager, study- ing advertisements, and thus learned the other's preferences in copy. Finally, he went back to Chicago, following Nat Graham by two days, and stood in front of Fay, bristling with excitement and vast sheaves of untidy notes.

"Well," he cried enthusiastically, "I've had more fun in the last three days than I've had in years!"

He kissed her until she pushed him away from her, laughing and blushing.

"Here," he said, fishing in his pocket and pulling forth a small package. "Here's the nicest pair of silk stockings I've seen in years. Thought you'd like 'em. Got something for Judith, too," and he proudly exhibited a little rubber dog, which squeaked energetically when squeezed.

Together they adjourned to the bedroom where Judith lay in her crib. But she was not even mildly interested in the rubber dog. She looked at it for a second and then turned her eyes away.

"Ungrateful creature!" accused John. "Like all the rest of the women, I buy a handsome rubber dog that squeaks and you turn up your nose at it! I buy you a pair of a spiffy pair of silk stockings and she doesn't even open the package."

"Oh, John!" cried Fay, reddening, and made haste to undo the bundle. "Why, I think they're lovely!" she exclaimed, holding them up to her nose. "They're the sheerest things I ever saw. You're an old dear." She kissed him.

"Oh, well, I guess I'll have to be satisfied." But he looked pleased, nevertheless.

There followed a perfect frenzy of work for John. There were day-time conferences with Nat Graham, who poured forth as figures as a spigot of water, and long night sessions in the little room with Briggs.

"We'll map out a whole campaign for them," said Graham, "and you and Briggs can shape up the first few complete. You can get pen- notes of your ideas on the ones to follow."

How to Keep a Husband

Playing The Game

by Olive Roberts Barton.

"Jack fell down and broke his crown," thereupon he got up and rubbed his pate and slammed down the pail and shouted, "I'll not get any cold water for anybody today!"

Jack played hi-tsy and was first to be caught. "Oh, I'm not playing," said Jack. "I don't like your old game."

Jack went to college and did not make a certain 'frat.'" "That's all right," said Jack. "I'm not coming back here next year."

He went into politics, was not elected, and booted his party.

He was moderately successful in business but had times come, and brought a grand smash. Jack had no alternative this time and no one to take it out on, so he died.

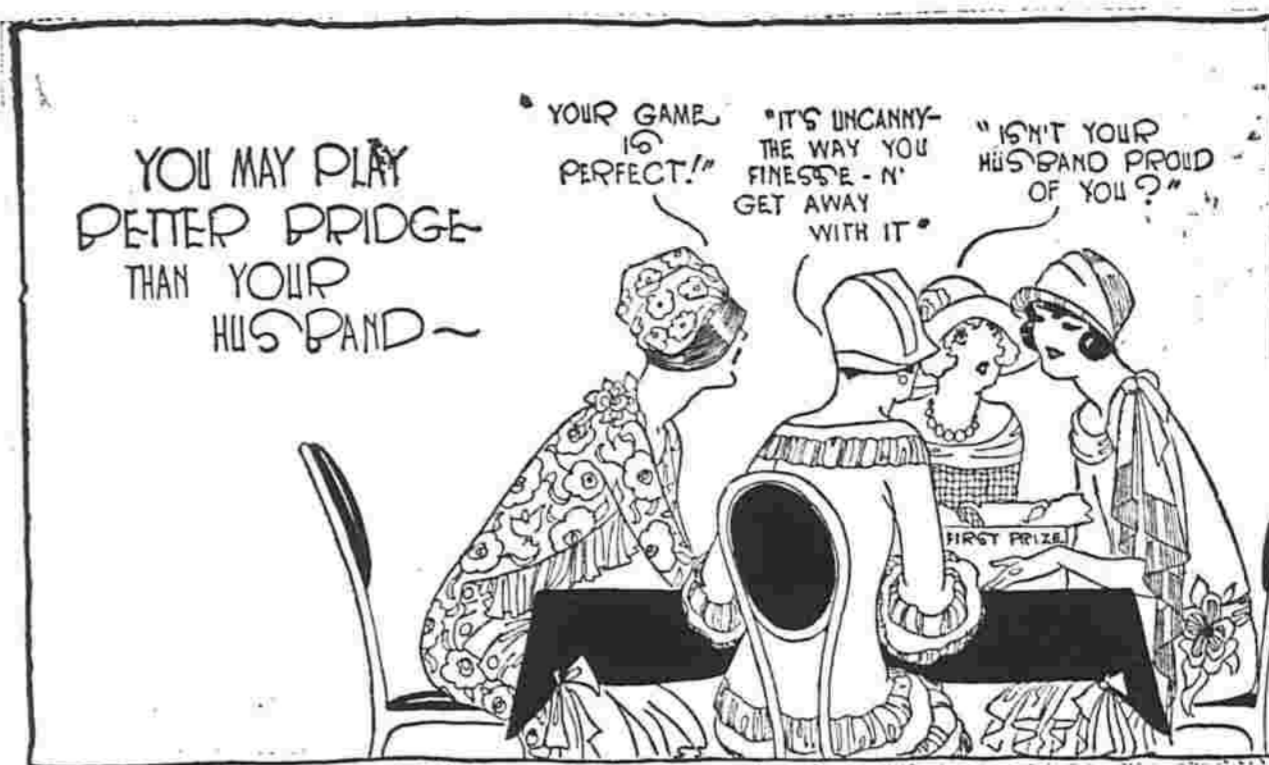

All things considered, he picked up the bucket forty years before and said, "Come on, Jill. We'll get that water or bust."

As far as moral courage went Jack never grew up. It is the most childish of all adult failings, this refusal to play the game if things do not come our way—the vindictive retaliation on someone or something in no way responsible for our misfortune.

Two women were learning to drive cars. Both had accidents. One ran into a telegraph pole, the other skidded over a hill. The first woman got out of the smashed car, walked home, and has never touched it or any other car since.

The second woman lay awake for nights, sleepless. The car had beaten her up at 5 o'clock one morning, went to the garage, backed the car out of a difficult place and drove for hours. She made it do everything but turn some- where, she got out of it herself a million dollars worth of good.

No, really nervous people should not drive cars. But there are more hazards than cars in a day's experience.

QUEER QUIRKS OF NATURE

By the muddy margin of pond or brook, or in the rich soil of the shadowed woodland, grows the jewel weed, with its smooth notched leaves of the most delicate of greens, and its yellow or orange blossoms.

John had no time for further house h- ting, and Fay looked alone until she got discouraged and even started talking about waiting until fall; but John said, "Never mind. I'll run on something yet. Some- time we'll have to pinch for money and have to sell."

Jewel Weed

paratively few have seen the bright jewels themselves.

The peculiar structure of the flowers invites the attention of long-tongued nectar seekers. When in late summer the humming birds start southward on their long journey to their winter home in the tropics, the jewel weed is a favorite food plant, attracting these jewels of the bird world in such numbers that they seem to be traveling in flocks.

Reproduction Both humming birds and bees aid in fertilizing the showy flowers, but the plant is not dependent on these for its reproduction, for it produces also quantities of inconspicuous blossoms which themselves produce seeds in abundance.

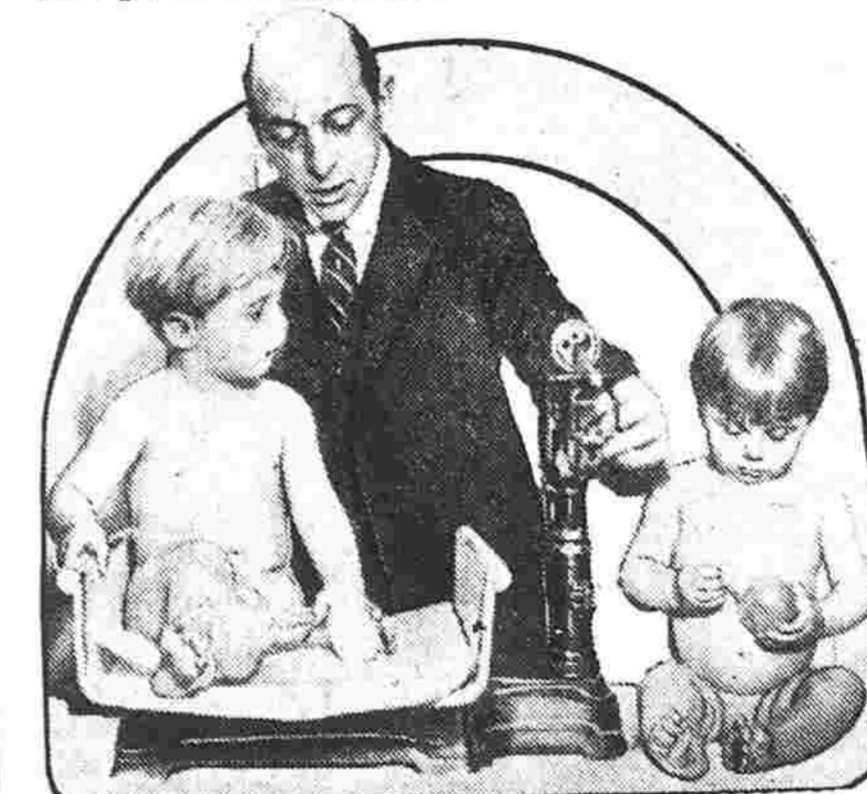

Safety first seems to be the motto of many members of the plant world, even some of those whose showy flowers seem to have been produced mainly as an attraction to insect visitors.

LUCKY INFANT! HE EATS FIVE TIMES A DAY!

Sleeps 18 Hours Out of 24 and "Just Grows"

Like others of her sex, Justine Collins is interested in her weight, which Dr. J. L. Blumenthal of the Children's Bureau, New York Department of Health, is determining. Dominick Mauzo, right, prefers his apple, however, or maybe he is putting on a last few extra ounces.

BY DR. S. J. CRUMBINE General Executive, American Child Health Association

A little baby's day is spent mostly in sleeping. Indeed, he usually prefers to spend all but four to six hours of the 24 in slumber. His longest period of being awake is when he has his bath. He should go to sleep as soon as he has finished nursing. If he does not wake up for his next feeding time he should be awakened.

Usually, it is most convenient to give the baby his bath before the mid-morning feeding. The bath should never be given immediately after feeding.

Five Meals a Day Most infants of average weight thrive on five nursings a day after the first few weeks. This means a four-hour interval during the day and no nursing at night. This gives the infant's stomach a chance to rest during the night and ample time to digest each feeding.

During the first month, the baby should be dressed according to the weather and taken out of doors each day. If it is cold or stormy, he may be placed on a porch protected from the wind, but exposed to the sun, or in a room with all the windows open. These airings should last from 15 to 20 minutes at first, the time being gradually lengthened to several hours. Airings in winter are best taken at midday. In hot weather, early morning or late afternoon will be best.

Crying and kicking are the baby's first exercises. No special exercises are needed for the normal development of the infant. He should not, however, be pinched down or deprived of the free use of his arms and legs. His position in his crib should be changed after each nursing.

Let Him Creep Voluntary exercises such as rolling, kicking and creeping

HER OWN WAY

A GIRL OF TODAY A NIGHT AT THE ROAD HOUSE.

That was the beginning, Judy, ever since," said Joan. Myself, continuing her story. "I went back day after day. First we only danced then we dined together two or three times a week when I knew my step-father would be out, and I dined with Barry until The Circle closed."

"Of course, it cost me all kinds of money, for I literally had to bid with almost all the old women in the place for Barry's company."

"Finally, he made a straight bargain with the manager that I was to pay five dollars a night, and when I was there Barry was to dance with me exclusively."

"As soon as this bargain was struck there were times that we did not meet at The Circle at all, except for Barry to find in my fifty dollars of which I know now he got half."

"I found eventually that I was hopelessly in love and I thought he was as well."

"I cannot marry you, my darling. Your step-father would not allow it," said my lover.

"But doesn't I answered, 'I'll be of age very soon and then—'"

"Well, the bottom dropped out on Old Howard, I see!"

"Yes, but if you keep creating the impression that your outfit is such a small one, people won't take you seriously. I'll bet Nat Graham doesn't talk that way."

"You bet he doesn't. Nat makes 'em sit up and take notice when he talks of Graham and Milburn. I'll hang it on the old boy for that. Well, think I'll shave, if I'm going to get up early and catch a train."

John moved into the bathroom, turned on the hot water in the tub and began to whittle as he lathered his face and began to shave. He stopped whistling to grumble at a blade and replace it with a new one. Then, his shave over, he felt the water in the tub with his fingers, and he didn't even open the package.

"Oh, John!" cried Fay, reddening, and made haste to undo the bundle. "Why, I think they're lovely!" she exclaimed, holding them up to her nose. "They're the sheerest things I ever saw. You're an old dear." She kissed him.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

by OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

"Come with me," said the Dream-Maker Man to the Twins. "We shall try to find your lost friends, the china elephant and his little clown driver. They must be on the moon somewhere."

Just then Snore came back in his airplane with seventeen dimples of the dimple tree.

"Put the dimples in the ice-box to keep them fresh until I need them for my dreams," said the Dream-Maker Man, "and then come and take us on a journey."

"Yes, sir!" said Snore obediently. And away he went.

But pretty soon he came back and Nancy and Nick and the Dream-Maker Man all climbed into his airplane.

Away they went—bzzzz!—like a green bee, for moon airplanes make even more noise than earth ones.

While they were riding, the Twins told the Dream-Maker Man about their adventures and what they had been doing since they had climbed the golden ladder to the moon.

"Well, I declare!" said the Dream-Maker Man. "I declare! One would almost, but not quite, say that you both had been dreaming. But of course, I know better. But we must watch and see where we are going. I want to ask my friend, the Man-in-the-Moon, something."

And the Dream-Maker Man looked over the edge of Snore's airplane and looked down.

"My goodness!" he cried. "There's nothing there! The moon's gone!"

"I can't," shouted Snore. "I can't stop unless I have some place to stop on. If the moon's gone, I'll have to keep on going."

Nancy couldn't help wondering what had become of all the poor moon people, the Fairy Winks and the queer policeman with the neck that stretched around corners, and the rubber alligators and the giant duck and everybody. And where could Inco and Flops be?

Suddenly Snore called out. "I have no more gasoline! We're going to fall!"

"And without anything to fall on!" thought Nancy and Nick. "Well, that's one comfort. At least we won't go bumping."

The airplane turned with its nose straight down, and the fall began. But it wasn't a fall that made you dizzy and took your breath away. It was a lovely, cool, delicious, soft fall that made you feel wonderful.

"I could keep this up for quite a while," said Nancy.

"It shouldn't mind myself," said the Dream-Maker Man. "If there was anything to fall on, but— Suddenly bang—bump! They had landed on something dark and hard.

And Snore's airplane flew to pieces.

She plays golf with Bobby,
She lunches with Ray,
Then Reginald takes her

"You know how it was when you strike an oil lion, you like Amarrillo. Everybody is spending money and you just naturally follow suit," the traveling salesman told the man across the aisle.

"Why, one day I went out with something less than $100 and spent exactly half of all the money I had with me, in an hour. Funny thing about it was that I had just as many pennies left as I previously had dollars, and only twice as many dollars as I previously had pennies."

The stranger across the aisle would like to know how much money the salesman actually spent, but he is too polite to ask. Can you tell him?

The secret in duplicating the figure shown with only one continuous pencil stroke, lies in folding the corner of your paper over and drawing two or more lines a second time, on the back of the paper. Never Gets out of Order"

A Cake of Natural Ice

Never gets out of order. Does not dry, discolor, or absorb the flavor of your foods. Does not make any noise while refrigerating. Does not require lubricating, nor mechanics to keep it in working order.
Think what it means to be sure that the temperature of your refrigerator will be maintained at a level that will insure the preservation of the contents—not subject to stoppage from power line interruption, disorders and breakdowns. The ice man performs the whole service for you when he calls and places in your refrigerator chamber the cake of ice that is pure, noiseless and efficient.

The Truth About Cost

The actual annual cost of owning and operating even the cheapest so-called "electric refrigerator," including depreciation, interest on your investment, repairs and upkeep, and the cost of electric current, will run—according to authoritative figures—from three to four times as much as ice. The cost of electric current alone will amount to more than the average ice bill. Why, then, should the householder virtually pay his ice bill ten years in advance and continue to pay double his ice bill each month for electric current?
