Considerable objection was raised when the committee asked for an appropriation of $20,000 to carry on the work of the Recreation Centers. In the end, Mr. Rogers' argument shimmered down to a personal affair which had involved his sons some years ago.

SCHOOLS.

With the conclusion of the presentation of the picture of Manchester public school expenditures and achievements by the Ninth District committee, it is timely for the Herald, on behalf of the community, to thank the committee for its comprehensive statement of finances and for its lucid setting forth of its position toward the town's educational responsibilities.

Withholding, for the present at least, any detailed comment on the minutiae of the report, pending the reaction of Manchester's public to the invitation of criticism, we will go so far as to say that the committee has made out an exceedingly good case for its general policy and for the administration thereof, save in a single particular.

It does not seem to the Herald that at any point the ability or inability of the tax payers to maintain the standards of education and of student housing adopted by the committee has been admitted to sufficient consideration.

The committee seems to us to be more or less in the position of a Rolls-Royce salesman, arguing the superiority of his wares to a group of people who can just about manage to keep Fords.

There is not the slightest doubt in the world that the Rolls-Royce is a better automobile than the Ford, that it will go farther and faster and smoother and contribute more to the comfort of the driver and the passenger than the flivver, and last longer. But how in the world is the salesman going to sell it to the man who, in his whole life time, can never by any possibility save up the amount of its first cost, to say nothing of its upkeep.

The point we have always made. In this business of school costs, is not whether we are getting our money's worth, but whether we are buying what is beyond our means.

Comparisons of school costs here with those of other towns and cities may or may not be of value. The town in Connecticut nearest to our own size, for instance, is Greenwich. But Greenwich is a town of rich people, with a tremendous taxing power; very far in excess of that of Manchester. The children of Manchester ought, of course, to have every bit as good schooling as the Greenwich children, for they are as good American young people. But the fact nevertheless remains that Greenwich can afford, without injury to its tax payers, many things that Manchester cannot afford. It is a Rolls-Royce town. Manchester is not.

We very much dislike to seem to carp and find fault with the Manchester school authorities, for they are animated by fine and high ideals, and we only wish that it were possible for the people to give them carte blanche in the matter of money and let them go as far as they liked, for they would surely do a splendid service with the cash. But the thing we insist on is that in the planning of school expenditures, whether in the matter of teaching drawing and music appreciation or of limiting the number of pupils for each teacher to 33, or whatever proposition be up, the garment must be cut according to the cloth—not the cloth provided for a whole wardrobe of most desirable but in some cases possibly dispensable garments.

It is our idea that the objective to be aimed at in the future, in Manchester school expenditures, is the best possible employment, not of the last obtainable dollar, but of the least sum on which the schools can be creditably maintained.

We have not yet been able to see that this is precisely the point of view of the school authorities, who are enthusiastic for what they believe to be best in schools—so enthusiastic that their idea would seem to be that the money just must be found to provide the best whether it can be or not.

Perhaps they are right. But we are not convinced.

FOOL TRICK.

Up to a day or two ago the sympathies of the New York public were, unquestionably, almost entirely on the side of the Interurban company in its efforts to maintain transport service despite a partial strike of its employees.

If there should now develop a reversal of the situation, with the public lining up on the side of the strikers, the company might very well thank itself for the complication, for it has done the most unpopular thing that a public service corporation can possibly do; it has resorted to the ancient, long discredited device of the blanket injunction in restraint of striking.

No other single legal proceeding has ever succeeded in arousing quite so much resentment on the part of well disposed, orderly people as the strike injunction. It is the crystallization of court-made law carried to the nth degree. It violates every principle of individual freedom; it is a slap in the face at constitutional guarantees. It has almost always bred violence and lasting hatred. It is an unfair way of fighting the battles of the employing corporation—and a foolish one, for it never fails to create a situation worse than the one it is intended to correct.

The Interurban company had the people with it. In a moment of weakness and folly it took the fool's course of running to the courts for the sake of more speedily clinching the victory already in its hands. Now we shall see what we shall see.

One thing we shall see, whether the company wins or not—a public service corporation, which could not by any means afford to make enemies, having succeeded in making several millions of them.

BUS TAXES.

It involves no criticism of the technical merits of an attorney-general's opinion to express the lay belief that it might have been better business for the State of Connecticut not to try to collect motor bus taxes by ex-post facto processes.

The motorbus companies propose to try in the courts the state's claim that they must pay, under the law of July 1, 1925, taxes billed for the entire twelve months of that year. It is their claim that the tax can be collected only for the latter half of the period.

It is perfectly obvious that, when Attorney-General Healey argues that no hardship is inflicted on bus companies by making them pay a reasonable share in the maintenance of the highways which they help to wear out, he speaks nothing but A B C truth. But it seems to us that quite another question is involved—whether the State of Connecticut ought to countenance retroactive application of laws at all, or at least in any avoidable case.

It was not the fault but the good luck of the bus companies that the state did not come awake until 1925.

As a matter of simple fairness it would seem as if taxation under this law should begin exactly with the effective date of the law. And we will not be much surprised if the courts take this view, notwithstanding the advice of the attorney-general to the Equalization Board.

40 BANKS.

Forty-nine Georgia banks, operating under state charter and comprising a chain under Atlanta leadership, have closed because a large part of their resources had become "frozen" through the collapse of the Florida boom.

This is one more—and to the Georgian depositors a tragic—evidence that the "northern propaganda" that has been blamed down there for the puncturing of the Florida bubble was belated and not half strenuous enough.

Also it is an admirable argument against the chain banking system, where persons at a distance are allowed to control and on occasion gamble with the money of communities in which they have no immediate interest and no personal sense of responsibility.

The end is not yet in the crashes of little banks and littler bankers in the Southland, who, carried away by the prospect of quickly making a financial mountain out of a molehill of other people's money, have tangled the resources of struggling communities in the something-for-nothing game.

It is an exortely good thing that the frenzy was squelched when it was. Florida's development is a mighty business. But it is not an undoubted vote for Pepper because they balked at Vare, personally, wet as he is, and Pepper is not very dry, anyway. Pinchot, for labor reasons, got almost the solid miners' vote, which indisputably is wet.

Now the dregs have indorsed Wilson. If Pennsylvania really is wet then Wilson obviously is handicapped by his dry indorsement, as well as by a normal Republican majority against him. Still, hopeful Democrats say, he has a look-in.

MUDDY MINDS.

Two thousand names are signed to a petition for clemency to be submitted to the governor of Maryland in the interest of Richard R. Whittemore, murderer, who is to be hanged next month.

This criminal, besides killing a prison keeper in the course of an escape, is well enough known to have murdered two or three innocent citizens, to have participated as leader in the theft of a number of hundred of thousand dollars, and is almost convincingly suspected of the cold blooded slaughter of at least three and probably five of his own associates.

He lacks every decent human attribute and is absolutely without the excuse of mental insufficiency, for he is bright enough. He is just plain bad, bloodthirsty—as abominable a creature as can be imagined.

Yet two thousand persons sign a petition for mercy, in the state of Maryland.

There must be a tremendous lot of minds in this country that need laundering, and hanging out on a line in the sunshine.

RUM'S "LAST LEGS."

Pussyfoot Johnson says that "liquor is on its last legs." That is probably true, but only if we think of the Demon Rum as a centepede, with its front pair of legs, representing decent potables, out of action and its other nineteen still working at full speed.

With 15,000 speakeasies operating in New York, according to Volstead enforcement authorities, it looks as if the "last legs" constituted a fairly serviceable outfit.

It does seem as if professional rappers like Pussyfoot would earn their money more honestly if they talked a little less rubbish and occasionally told something even remotely resembling the truth.

Stewart's WASHINGTON LETTERS

BY CHARLES P. STEWART Washington, July 15.—Pennsylvania and Illinois are normally so strongly Republican that a Democratic nomination to the United States Senate in either one of them is a mere gesture.

Due, however, to the activities of Senator Jim Reed's slush fund investigating committee, the sentiment among Democrats in Congress is that George Brennan stands a reasonably good chance of election in Illinois this year and that William B. Wilson is at least a possibility in Pennsylvania. Of course, so far as Illinois is concerned, this is conditioned on the testimony the Reed committee succeeds in digging up. That there was widespread corruption in connection with the Republican senatorial primary in Pennsylvania has been shown already. That the Illinois Republican senatorial primary was just as bad, or worse, has only been charged, not established.

Assuming that the committee does establish the substantial truth of the Illinois charges by Senator Caraway, there are various reasons why politicians think more of a lift will be given to Brennan in that state, than they believe has been given to Wilson in Pennsylvania.

For one thing, Illinois is not so rock-ribbed a Republican state as Pennsylvania. While Pennsylvania most of the time, the Sucker State always is a little doubtful; the Keystone State almost never the least bit so.

Then, too, prohibition, from all indications, will be the main issue in both states, and, according to the political sharks' calculations, it will be a good issue for Brennan and a bad one for Wilson.

This is on the theory that both states are wet. Election may prove one or both of them to be otherwise. Nevertheless, such is the "dope," here in Washington.

The Illinois "hinterland" may be drier than it is wet, but Chicago, which is a very big city and counts tremendously in an Illinois election, unquestionably is overwhelmed with water that it is dry—more than enough so to overcome the rural districts' dry preference, if any. Thus the "dopesters" opine.

Brennan's platform is a wet platform and nothing else. If a serious crimp is put into his opposition candidacy, by proof of Senator Caraway's charge that Senator McKinley spent a million trying to get a Republican renomination and that Frank L. Smith spent twice that much and "debouched" positions of public trust," besides, in beating McKinley, then another "odious" boost is given to the Brennan cause. Such, again, is the Washington forecasters' argument.

The dry organization—officially, whatever it may really think about it—disputes Pennsylvania's wetness, pointing out that Senator Pepper and Gov. Pinchot, both dregs, polled more votes between them than Representative Vare, who won the Republican senatorial nomination against them.

The "dope artists" put little faith in this. Vare, they say, got nothing but wet votes, and by no means all of those. Many wets undoubtedly voted for Pepper because they balked at Vare, personally, wet as he is, and Pepper is not very dry, anyway. Pinchot, for labor reasons, got almost the solid miners' vote, which indisputably is wet.

Now the dregs have indorsed Wilson. If Pennsylvania really is wet then Wilson obviously is handicapped by his dry indorsement, as well as by a normal Republican majority against him. Still, hopeful Democrats say, he has a look-in.

In one respect Wilson has an advantage over Brennan. Whereas the latter has a reputation as a typical hard boiled politician—all right, no doubt, but, to say the least, practical—Wilson is an exceptionally high type of citizen, with a fine record behind him of three terms as an exceedingly useful congressman and two as a brilliantly successful secretary of labor under President Wilson.

As one of the country's ablest labor leaders, he will have a strong appeal, too, to the workmen, which probably will serve to a considerable extent, to cloud the troublesome prohibition issue.

QUEER QUIRKS OF NATURE

By AUSTIN H. CLARK. Creator, U. S. National Museum.

Eggs we usually associate with hens and other birds, with turtles, lizards, snakes and similar creatures; but according to Arthur J. Poole of the U. S. National Museum, a branch of the Smithsonian Institution, the curious little mammal shown in this picture is also an egg layer.

It is called the Australian spiny ant-eater, and is found only in Australia and Tasmania, with closely related kinds in Papua or New Guinea.

It is about a foot in length and is covered with short, thick quills, some of which are more than a quarter of an inch in diameter, but only from about half an inch to three inches in length.

No teeth. It has no teeth. It lives almost entirely on ants and white-ants, or termites, which are small enough to be swallowed without being chewed.

To get its food it tears down or digs into ant mounds with its long and very strong claws, and then gathers up its victims with its long and sticky tongue.

It sometimes buries itself in the ground leaving just a portion of its quills above the surface. It can burrow into the ground with remarkable speed.

Also there are many different creatures, wholly unrelated, with spines or quills on the back, like porcupines, hedge-hogs, spiny rats, etc.

LLOYD GEORGE

CAUSE OF SPLIT; LIBERALS FIGHT

War Premier's Place in British Politics Breaks His Old Party.

London.—The political future of David Lloyd George, stormy petrel of British politics, is still in doubt. Publicly disowned by the official party leaders on account of his policy during the general strike, officially excommunicated by the party caucus, he still retains the confidence of the majority of the Liberal members of the House of Commons and of the Party outside the House. The Speaker still regards him as the Liberal Leader in the Commons.

He has publicly denied that he has made any overtures towards membership of the Labor Party. Philip Snowden, on behalf of the Laborites, agrees that no overtures have been made, publicly or privately. So Lloyd George still remains classed as a Liberal.

His Enemies.
But all the official leaders of the Liberal Party are his avowed enemies. Lord Oxford and Asquith, Lord Grey, Lord Gladstone and Sir John Simon, the leading four figures have declared that they will never again admit him to the councils of the party. So the question arises—What is to become of the Liberal Party, and what is to become of Lloyd George?

It is such troublous times as these that the little Welsh statesman is seen at his best. His spirits never flag and his courage has never been questioned. Fighting a lone battle brings joy to his heart. But in this particular controversy he has a particularly powerful weapon to bring into play.

The Asquith side of the party is bankrupt from the viewpoint of party funds. It was said that Lord Cowdray, and several other multimillionaires, had offered $10,000,000 to Lord Oxford for party purposes if Lloyd George were expelled from the organization. But apparently this offer never actually materialized.

Has Great Fund.
On the other hand, Lloyd George controls a large fund, amounting to, it is said, to nearly $15,000,000 that is a legacy of his Coalition government days. Over this he has full command and can put it at the disposal of the party leaders, or not, just as he liked. At the last election, apparently, he did not like. That may have accounted for the terrible Liberal debacle. But he still retains control of this important weapon to use it in the future as he likes.

The dauntless Welshman still believes that his resources and the turn of the wheel of fate will land him back again at 10 Downing Street with the reins of power—which he loves so much—again in his hands.

MAIN CAUSES OF AUTO ACCIDENTS

Chicago, July 10.—The National Safety Council has made a study showing what pedestrians were doing when struck by automobiles and what motorists were doing when they became involved in crashes.

This study is based on detailed reports from more than 100 American cities.

What pedestrians were doing:
Walking, running or playing in the street.

Crossing street intersections where there were no signals.

Crossing intersections against traffic signals.

Riding or hitching on vehicles.

Waiting for, getting on or off street cars even while in safety zones.

Crossing streets with umbrellas that were held too low, obstructing the view of approaching traffic.

What motorists were doing:
Contesting for the right-of-way.

Exceeding the speed limit.

Driving on the wrong side of the road.

Failing to give the driver behind the proper signals.

Cutting left corners, cutting in and backing.

Driving through safety zones.

Driving while intoxicated.

Three Years of Sales without a "sale"
Twenty Years of PROGRESS in Three Years

Celebrating Our THIRD-ANNIVERSARY

—not with a "sale" because Garber Brothers NEVER have "sales"...but with a hearty and appreciative THANK YOU to all those people from Hartford and every part of Connecticut and many people from other States who came to Garber Brothers to test our claims and found that here indeed is a furniture establishment founded on sound principles and ideals and that backs up every claim it makes.

They found that it paid them well in quality, and service and savings to buy furniture here and have thus contributed to Garber Brothers' rapid progress.

Three years ago Garber Brothers were unknown to the general public—except to dealers to whom we sold at wholesale.

In July, 1923 we began selling direct to the public from our factory display rooms.

We claimed that by manufacturing our own living room suites—and by selling all our furniture from the same factory building...we could save the buying public a good many dollars.

We did this and the proof of this achievement is our rapid growth.

People came, compared prices and quality, they bought...they came again and again...then their friends came...

until to-day there are hundreds of people who are part of the vast family of satisfied Garber Brothers customers and friends.

A leading business man said to us the other day, "Do you realize that the Garber establishment has done in three years what has taken many other concerns twenty years to do?"

And we proudly answered "Yes, three years of sales without a 'sale,'" which proves that the public realizes that Garber Brothers EVERYDAY low prices mean more than so-called 20, 30, 40 and 50 Per Cent. discounts.

We NEVER have "sales" .....
We ALWAYS sell for less.

THE STORY OF EDGAR ALLAN POE (3)

Poe's precocity in literature was shown when he was ten or twelve years old. He showed Mr. Allan a manuscript volume of poems which his teachers had praised highly, but his foster-parent did not seem to appreciate them. At about this time Poe became a very good elocutionist, an art practiced generally then.

Poe's first "love," whom he called Helen, now enters the picture. She was the mother of one of his schoolmates.

Helen became Poe's confidante, and there sprang up between them a mystic influence that Poe carried throughout his life.

Helen died in 1824 and Poe was rent by sorrow. For several months he went to her grave every night after his work at the academy was over. Many critics believe that here Poe learned the "ways of the dead" which his later stories and poems express. It was the first great tragedy he suffered. (Continued.)

FIRST LADY NOT ANGLER BUT HAS BUBBLE BOATS

The prosecutor then proceeded to trace the details of the story and to introduce witnesses in an attempt to prove Zaleski guilty as accused. It was claimed that Private Zaleski, who is a rookie in the Howitzer outfit, stole a breach lever of one of the guns he was taking care of and that this was a serious crime as the Howitzer Company would be unable to fire the gun at Giant's Neck on Governor's Day had it not been found. It was brought out that Private Zaleski had recently been promoted to "Wagon Sergeant," a promotion granted by Captain Dexter and given the O. K. by Colonel Hunter. (There is, of course, no such rank in the army but Zaleski is even yet unaware of the fact. He has been told that it is an extremely high honor and that he is supposed to eat dinner with the Colonel Sunday at which time he was told he will receive his chevrons.)

Corporal Finn Testifies.
Prosecutor Tedford introduced Corporal Finn who testified he had seen Zaleski in his tent acting suspiciously shortly after the alleged theft was supposed to have taken place.

Private Clark, the defense counsel, questioned the witness at length and then concluded with "That's all."

Private Edward Copeland, cook for the Howitzer company, was the next witness for the state, and he proved to be the star witness. He testified that at the time of the theft, he passed by the gun and saw Zaleski take the breach out of the gun and place it in his pocket and then return to his tent. Repeated efforts by the defense counsel to prove Copeland's story was not true failed despite a lengthy cross-examination. Copeland stuck to his story and this was what later proved the guilt of the accused.

His Only Faults.
After summing up his side of the case, the prosecutor sat down and the defense called three witnesses, Mess Sergeant Reggetts, Cook Stevenson and Corporal Skoneski. All three testified that Zaleski was a "good skater" and that they "didn't believe he was guilty of any such crime" although they said he did have such bad habits as "eating with his knife in his left hand" and "sleeping with his feet out of the end of his bunk."

Defense Counsel Clever.
Then the defense concluded and both sides started summing up the evidence they had introduced. The oratory of the defense counsel, in his gesture while addressing the jury caused much laughter among the spectators. But it was laughter mixed with praise for Clark really did a good job. He says he got his experience by being prosecutor on the degree course of the Knights of Pythias in Manchester.

Jury Retires.
Judge Quish then charged the "hard-boiled" jury and instructed them to bring in a just verdict. They were discharged and returned after four seconds of deliberation. When they filed back into the courtroom, Foreman Frazier announced: "We have found the defendant guilty on eleven counts. He did not say what the other ten were but it was afterwards stated that one of them was because Zaleski had failed to prove he was the Charleston dancing champion of the company in an exhibition given during the trial by order of the judge."

With a solemn face and stern voice, Judge Quish then gave his sentence:

Prisoner's Sentence.
"You are hereby sentenced to roll an egg ten years on this street with your nose and it must not be a hard boiled egg." The sentence was carried out but more than one egg was brought into play during the execution of the sentence judging from the looks of Zaleski's shirt this morning.

This concluded the trial which at times had the seriousness of the Chapman trial and which at other times offered a burlesque which brought laughter far more easily than the comedies of Ben Turpin and Harold Lloyd.

Briefs from Camp.
Private "Pop" Edgar feels sorry that he will not be able to participate in the baseball league which will begin shortly. He is laid up with a broken leg but his spirit is not dampened much just yet from his action yesterday. The reporter found him sitting in a chair in

CYCLES OVER ALPS.
London.—At an average of 60 miles a day, John R. Harper of Cheshire, cycled to Southampton, took a boat to Havre, a French port, then continued on his cycle across France into Switzerland, and over the Alps into Italy and Venice. He stayed there three days and started back, reaching Paris 24 days after he started his journey.
What is believed to be the largest book in the world was exhibited recently in New York. Its pages were 10 feet long and 7 feet wide.

A community taxicab crawling through traffic to deliver a load of snuffing gum chewers to their typewriters on time.

New York, July 9.—The metropolis has a new sport since the subway strike—the game of what the rubberneck wagons call "Seeing New York."

It is as if a western traveler always had been going through the Royal Gorge by night, and then on an observation car in daytime had discovered there was scenery to behold. New York has been here all the time, and most of the natives never knew it. They thought it was simply a chain of little office and shop areas attached to the tops of subway stairways.

New Yorkers now are going to work in the open air. They are going to work by the elevated railroad, by street car, by bus, taxicab, private automobile, boat, airplane, kiddie car, scooter, bicycle, roller skate and even by that antediluvian method, the human leg.

"What is that building?" a native will ask of the Woolworth spire.

City dwellers who have been impressing their country cousins with references to the Metropolitan Museum or Grant's Tomb or Old St. Paul's—but never seeing them—now are finding out what those landmarks look like. Every day now they go BY them—not UNDER.

The streets show the difference, of course. City folk like to point to towering walls and call the streets canyons. But whereas normal street traffic was a flowing river, the surface passengers now constitute a flood tide, swirling and eddying dammed up here, leaping in waves and blown spray, a torrent of humanity.

Something like half the usual subway passengers are traveling another way now. Some of them go by the elevated, which is operated by the strike-crippled Interborough. But the estimated loss in revenue to the company the first day was $32,028, which means $41,960 nickels which don't click in the turnstiles. That is quite an army of eight-eenths.

Just so the subway may receive all possible blame, a sizable part of the surface congestion is due to new bus construction on Eighth Avenue. This long thoroughfare ordinarily might carry a great share of the extra vehicle traffic but it is practically impassable. Mammoth steam shovels and the holes they make are effectual barriers along most of its blocks. More subways a-making, for more stalling in the future!

COUNTRY STORE NIGHT AT THE STATE THEATER

Tonight the State theatre presents its famous country store with a double feature bill. Norman Kerry in "The Love Thief." Here's what Norman Kerry did. He flirted so much he had to put identification tags on the girls, so he wouldn't repeat. It's an idea boys. But don't let the tagged ones get together. Just one of the hilarious touches that lifts this out of the class of all other love pictures, replete with court and military scenes, stirring with drama.

For the second feature Evelyn Brent in "Flame of the Argentine," a surging drama of regeneration. Of a girl bred in the smoke-laden air of a cabaret, impersonating the heiress to a vast estate of the rolling, limitless pampas of South America, appalling in their unending sweep, rejuvenating in their vital breeze, of a rich emerald mine—a rascally manager—a mysterious stranger. A picture of epic swing and power.

For the third feature the famous State theatre Country Store. All three of these features will be presented on the silver screen tonight. For tomorrow and Saturday another double feature bill headed by Zane Grey's "Desert Gold" featuring Neil Hamilton, Shirley Mason, William Powell and Robert Frazer. Typical Zane Grey western melodrama of thrills, excitement, appealing love theme, wild riding, shooting, swamping sandstorm and mountain avalanche, all done in the Paramount-Zane manner. The companion feature for tomorrow and Saturday, Raymond Griffith in "Wet Paint." Ray, disappointed in love, sets out to marry the first girl he meets. Tall ones, thin ones, fat ones, lean ones. He meets 'em all in "Wet Paint." Some laugh, don't miss it.

The added attraction for these two days, The Ko-Ko Sing-em again song rec'd "Donnie."

In the Amazon and its tributaries lives the piral, a comparatively small fish which goes in shoals and attacks bathers. Its teeth are razor-like.

And how does she like being just a "handy girl" around screenland for a consideration of about $1,500 a week?
"It is far more fun to play diversified roles than always to portray the same characters as most persons in this business must do," Louise declared.

Ravages of Diphtheria

BY DR. HUGH S. CUMMING
Surgeon General, United States Public Health Service
Diphtheria is another disease, the ravages of which have been greatly reduced during the last quarter of a century, as a glance at the accompanying chart will show.

These results are undoubtedly due, in very great measure, to more careful and more accurate diagnostic methods; to early treatment with anti-toxin; better isolation of cases, and, lately, to immunization by the use of a mixture of toxin-antitoxin.

Diphtheria is a disease more especially of temperate climates. It may occur at any season of the year but is most common in the winter months. However, an epidemic once started may run its course uninfluenced by season and measures to combat the disease should be prosecuted as vigorously in July as in December.

Among the most important facts to be remembered about diphtheria are the following:
1—It is highly contagious.
2—Early diagnosis and early treatment with anti-toxin are of the utmost importance in saving life once the disease is contracted.
3—The Schick test, performed by your doctor or by your health department will show whether your child is susceptible to the disease.
4—The administration of toxin-antitoxin to the susceptible child will render him immune, usually for the rest of his life.
It takes from six weeks to three months after the administration of anti-toxin before the child becomes immune. Do not wait until diphtheria appears in your community or your school before having this done.

Chart shows diphtheria deaths per 100,000 population.

The death rate from diphtheria is still much too high. A case of diphtheria should be a rare occurrence if the co-operation of all parents could be secured in having their children immunized.

NEW DEPARTURES TRIM SONS IN TIGHT GAME AT BRISTOL

Errors at Wrong Time Give Bristol Its Runs—Locals Knock Thorpe Out of Box in Seventh.

The New Departures of Bristol again bested the Sons of Italy in that town last night but were able to win by only two runs. Clyde Waters, Bristol catcher, was forced to leave the game after being struck by a pitched ball on the chin. Four stitches were required to close the wound.

Bristol scored three runs in the first inning on two hits and a sacrifice. Farrell came through with a three bagger with a man on base and Hayes let Reilly's hit go through his legs to allow Farrell to score.

They scored three more in the second on two hits, a base on balls and an error by Alexander. The next inning brought them four tallies on free passes, wild pitches and four hits.

Manchester was even up with the home team in the first inning, three runs being chalked up but the locals did not score again until the seventh when they brought in four. In the eighth they made another but Bristol was still two runs up.

Buckland who started for the Sons, was taken out in the third inning and replaced by Fisher who held the New Departures from that time on. The damage had been done, however, and the locals could not seem to overcome the lead made by Bristol.

Torpe, the same boy who held the Sons down in their game here some weeks ago, did not fare so well last night as he left the game for the showers in the seventh frame and was replaced by Smiling Eddie Goodridge. The four runs scored by the Sons in this inning was responsible for the departure of Torpe.

Tom Sipples was in rare form last night for he cracked out three triples, hits which would have been home runs against anybody the New Departures. The Bristol men knew just where to play for Sipples and his bids for circuit clouts were turned into triples.

WALTER HAGEN ONE OF THE GREATEST

Williams Thinks He Is Greatest Putter in Golf Today; Can Lose and Grin.

BY JOE WILLIAMS

It is all very well to go into purple-tinted hysterics over the fighting heart of Walter Hagen, who has just staged another uphill climb to win a notable golf match from Abe Mitchell, one of Great Britain's finest gunners—

But it does seem that a few casual remarks ought to be made somewhere along the line of eulogies concerning the American's actual ability as a golfer.

From the boisterous manner in which his triumphs are habitually received, one would seem to get the impression that Hagen's sole claim to prominence is due to the fact that he can be four down in a match and still smile.

The truth is this Rochester German is one of the finest all-around players the sport has ever known and is indubitably and without reservation the greatest putter in the game.

Hagen is Greatest

There has been a lot of expert yipping about this player and that putter possessing the perfect touch. There is still a legend in American golf that nobody puts as well or as beautifully as Francis Ouimet of Boston.

Undoubtedly there are a number of good putters in the game. There are a few great ones. But Hagen, we insist, is the greatest. Most matches are won on the greens. Practically all of Hagen's are won there.

It is Hagen's putter that overwhelmed Bobby Jones in the south last winter. It was his putter that enabled him to overcome a four-hole handicap and beat Mitchell in the recent match overseas.

Putting was the first phase of golf Hagen mastered. You may be interested in knowing that he caddied in the Rochester district, and, like most caddies, a putter is the first club he owned. It naturally followed that putting was the first stroke he perfected.

You may be interested further in knowing that as a teacher Hagen advised his pupils to learn with a degree to the distance-getting clubs. His theory is that control of the ball is the first essential.

Hagen has a pair of remarkable eyes. I once heard him describe them as "yard-stick eyes." This is a tribute to his uncanny accuracy in judging distance, especially on the greens. When the stakes are large Hagen won't miss the cup more than an inch or so from any distance.

Usually Off Behind

So often is Hagen behind in matches and tournaments, which in the final stages find him out in front leading the attack, that a popular suspicion exists that he actually prefers to let the other fellow get away in front. This certainly doesn't seem to bother him.

Yet I recall that he was genuinely happy when he finished eight or nine holes ahead of Jones in the first half of their match in Florida last winter.

Someone suggested that his position was unusual. "You'd probably feel more natural if you were three or four holes down, wouldn't you, Walter?" he was asked.

"Don't make me laugh," answered Hagen. "Anytime I can get the lead I'm going to take it. I wish I was 15 up on Bobby."

The Giants resumed their big offensive by smashing the Pirates twice, 12 to 8 and five to two. McGraw's sluggers knocked Songer and Bush galley-west in the opener while Fitzsimmons outpitched Meadows in the second game.

The Reds increased their lead to three and one-half games by taking their third straight from the Phillies, five to one. Carl Mays sunk the Phils with his submarine delivery and Christensen and Critz got three hits apiece.

Brooklyn regained fourth place by beating the Cardinals, five to two, snapping Jess Haines' string of seven straight victories.

The Braves climbed out of the National League cellar by virtue of Larry Beatty's twirling, knocking Root out of the box in the first inning and winning six to four.

The White Sox drove Coveleskie to the showers and buried the Senators under a 10 to 2 score, regaining third place. Washington dropped into the second division.

Billy Evans Says

The victory of Bobby Jones in winning the British open was a decidedly popular one at home and abroad.

If there is a dissenting vote, it would come from the professional golf players.

In all sports, the professional is regarded as the superior of the amateur. This usually holds good, but golf very often offers a decided exception.

Bobby Jones in such an individual. While Jones is very popular with the professional players a victory by one of their rank probably would have been more pleasing, simply because it would keep the pro to the fore, and that is quite desirable if he is to continue to get the big money.

Six Great Rounds

Jones, in winning the British open, turned in four rounds of remarkable golf. He was consistent throughout. He had a 72 for his first two rounds, then a 73, followed by a 74, for a total of 291.

Coupled with his record-breaking qualifying rounds of 68-68-154 at Sunningdale, Jones turned in six remarkable exhibitions of golf, which should stand for some time.

It's been 29 years since an amateur won the British open. Harold Hilton captured it in 1897. He also won it in 1932. Only three amateurs have ever been successful in its conquest. John Ball, Harold Hilton and Bobby Jones.

The British open was inaugurated in 1860. When you figure that over a period of 66 years only three amateurs have won the event, you get some idea of the feat performed by Jones and the golf he was forced to play.

Equals Best Mark

The winning of the British open by Jones with a score of 291, being the best mark ever recorded in the historic event, tops off five years of remarkable golf by the Atlanta star.

Back in 1922 he finished in a tie for second in the U. S. open at Skokie. The following year he tied with Bobby Cruickshank for the title at Inwood and won the playoff. In 1924, he was runner-up to Cyril Walker at Oakland Hills. At Worcester last year he tied with Willie MacFarlane only to be beaten in the playoff.

In addition to creating all this confusion among the professionals, he also managed to win the American amateur championship the last two years.

And as stated the score of 291 made by Jones in capturing the 1926 British open tied the best mark ever made in the event. Jim Braid won at Walton Heath in 1908 with the same score.

Great U. S. Year

The winning of the British amateur crown by Jess Sweetser, the victory by the American amateurs in the Walker cup opens in the triumph of Bobby Jones in the British open.

will make the year of 1926 one long to be remembered.

England looked to some of its promising young professionals to let the other fellow make the going, but they failed miserably.

A glance at the final figures reveals some interesting facts. It shows many of the veteran British golfers with the lower scores.

Among the best cards were 504 by J. H. Taylor, who is in his 34th year. Alex Hurd, who is 58, had a total of 308, while Jim Braid, who admits he is 56, had a score of 311.

British golf received a severe setback in the victories of Sweetser, and Jones.

James J. Jeffries—Delaney by a knockout.

James J. Corbett—Berlenbach. Tom Sharkey—Delaney. John J. McGraw—I'll string with Delaney.

George Carpentier—Delaney. Babe Ruth—I like Berlenbach's hitting.

Jimmy De Forest—Delaney should win in a hurry.

LAST NIGHT'S FIGHTS.

At Cleveland—Danny Kramer, Philadelphia, defeated Jimmy Mendoc, Cleveland, ten rounds. Floyd Myler, Cleveland, knocked out Harold Weigert, Milwaukee, second round. Willie Davis, Charleroi, Pa., knocked out Carl Felder, eighth round.

A register of British deer, kept by the Deer Head & Stock Society, shows there are still 8,000 of these graceful creatures in England.

MATTAPAN VICTIM IDENTITY LEARNED

Dismembered Body That of Edith Greene, State Ward; Lover Held, Seek Doctor.

Boston, July 15.—The mystery of the identity of the girl whose dismembered body was found in two cardboard boxes and a burlap sack near a cemetery in Mattapan, Tuesday morning, was solved last night when Betty Landry, a nurse, identified the victim as Edith Louise Greene, 18, her chum and co-worker in the Psychopathic hospital at Roxbury.

Vincent Ford, 21, of South Boston, who was connected with the girl's death by police last night, is said to have made a confession implicating Dr. Thomas E. Walsh of the South End.

Physician Not Found.

Police early today visited Dr. Walsh's office and home but failed to find anyone there. They took away with them several articles, including a record book which Superintendent Crowley said contained information "that may prove of value."

Ford's confession was said to have conclusively confirmed the latest police theory that the girl was a victim of illegal surgery.

In a delicate condition, Miss Greene was taken by Ford to the office of Dr. Walsh last Friday morning, according to his statement, and the physician was given $150 to perform an operation.

Ford and the girl had planned to be married on July 3, a week before her dismembered body was found in the street, but the wedding was called off.

Was State Ward.

Psychopathic hospital officials said that the girl worked there as a cleaner and previously had worked as a cashier. In her references she gave no names of relatives.

It was learned that Miss Greene had been a state ward since childhood and was one of three children. The police were told that she had left the hospital because of her condition.

Doctor's Wife Accused.

A warrant charging Dr. Walsh and his wife with murder was issued today.

The warrant named Mrs. Walsh because Ford's confession said she had full knowledge of the case, according to the police.

When Ford was summoned by Dr. Walsh last Sunday and informed the girl was dead, his statement was that he went into the kitchen of the Walsh home and spoke with the doctor's wife.

"Isn't this terrible?" Ford quoted Mrs. Walsh as saying, according to the police. "The doctor never had anything like this happen before. He must have had heart failure."

Ford waived preliminary examination today on a charge of being an accessory both to Lefore and after the fact of an illegal operation and was released on bonds of $2,000 to await the action of the next county grand jury, meeting in August.

The NUT CRACKER

by JOE WILLIAMS

Those Washington oarsmen have just lapped the rest of the rowing world for a flock of fashionable furlongs. . . . again.

Mr. O'Goofy has the idea that the alma mater song out there must be "Paddling Madeline Home," or, maybe, over to the Boiled Owl where ginger ale is cheaper.

The impressions of one who has never been to University of Washington and who is addicted to impressions in habit forming numbers is that the place is made up mainly of—

- (1) Young men with broad shoulders.
- (2) Young men with long, lean legs.
- (3) Young men who always carry oars in their hands.
- (4) Young men who always go around in their BVD's.
- (5) Young men who spend most of their time in thin, need-like craft called shells.
- (6) Young men who think Rusty Callor is Christopher Columbus, Abraham Lincoln, Hiram Johnson, Jim Corbett and Jackie Coogan all omeletted into one.
- (7) Young men who laugh boisterously when anyone mentions the "eastern school of rowing."

Rowing is a form of outdoor recreation originated by a bloke who grunted becomingly and who had a pronounced aversion to walking.

It is one of the few sedentary forms of life not calculated to produce ripping chins or abdominal ruffles.

It is the only racket known to modern existence where a 95-pound shrimp with a thin, cracked voice can call eight 200-pounders anything he cares to say a slanderous tongue to and get away with it.

This unusual character is called the coxswain, which, freely translated, means such unpopularity must be deserved, or sour notes to that effect.

This seems to present a pretty convincing argument against ambition, energy, guarded speech and all the other qualities that the "how-to-be-a-success-in-this-great-big-world-of-ours - formula" precribes.

WORLD GIDLERS MAKE BIG RECORD

Circle World in 28 Days, 14 Hours and 36 Minutes; Smash 1913 Figures.

New York, July 15.—The globe-girdling dash of Edward S. Evans and Linton Wells ended yesterday afternoon at the entrance of the Pulitzer Building where it began at 1:30 A. M., June 16, when they jumped into an automobile and were whisked to the Battery, there to board a Coast Guard boat which overtook the Aquitania and saved them half an hour at the very start of their journey.

The official starter clocked the finish as 8 minutes and 5 seconds after 4 o'clock. Thus the total elapsed time of the trip is 28 days, 14 hours, 36 minutes and 5 seconds, or 7 days, 6 hours, 58 minutes and 55 and 4-5 seconds less than the record set in 1913 by John Henry Mearns.

More Than 20,000 Miles

In making their scheduled 18,700-mile trip Evans and Wells actually traveled more than 20,000 miles and spent sixteen days on the ocean; eight days they sat behind drumming airplane motors, and five days across Asiatic Russia and Japan were spent on trains. Yet the total by boat was less than 8,000 miles, the train distance less than 4,000, while in the air they traveled nearly as far as by boat. For every hour they were gone they averaged nearly thirty miles on their way.

They traveled in twelve airplanes; not one was late, not one met with accident, not one missed fire.

BALANCE HOOK AGAINST SLICE

Jack Hutchison Slicing has caused a lot of timid beginners to give up the game in disgust. It is most aggravating to play a round of golf and slice nine out of ten shots to the tall and uncut grass. Slicing is caused by the face of the club cutting across the ball and starting it to spin from left to right. There are two ways that this can be done. One is the intentional slice made by the expert player who slices for a purpose and the other is the slice of the duffer who sends the hands in ahead of the club.

This is caused by poor pivoting. The player attempts to hit with his body and his hands before the club-head is permitted to connect properly.

A great many duffers think they are helping matters by allowing for a slice. They will aim the shot far to the left, which permits the ball, unless sliced very badly, to swing into the middle of the course or at least hold some place on the fairway.

If one will put out his left foot more and aim to the right of the course and then hit the ball hard, a hook will result and the ball will swing in the other way. A half hour's practice every day, or two for a while will set one right on this matter.

ABE MITCHELL—WETHERED'S LONG BALL

Mr. Wethered hits the ball very cleanly, and not often does he hit it into the sky, a point which is due to his clubhead traveling well after the ball before the head begins to come up. Put another way, here is a long, flat bit in the swing which is seen immediately before the clubhead reaches the ball, and also just after the ball has gone. This is just as it should be, and the onlooker, who is out to see those things, will notice that the left arm comes well forward on the line of flight.

We cannot drive well if we pull the arms in as the clubhead meets the ball, and here Mr. Wethered is an example to us all, for at the finish his hands are well out and away from the body.

He is, to my idea, one of the modern school who hit the ball first and let the follow-through take care of itself, and his length off the tee, and with his iron clubs, is truly remarkable, for he does not appear to be physically strong, but he has all the art of good timing, without which even the strongest cannot drive the ball far.

BRIDGEPORT BATTLER IS FAVORED TO WIN IN OR BEFORE 6th ROUND

Odds Set at 6 to 5 on Delaney — Expect 50,000 at Fight in Ebbetts Field; Challenger Gives Three Pounds.

BY DAVIS J. WALSH

New York, July 15.—The rapier and the bludgeon will fight tonight for the light heavyweight championship of the world and, according to me, the point of the former will score before the butt of the latter.

Jack Delaney, with a right hand like a duelling sword, will meet Paul Berlenbach, with a left like a blunderbuss, will meet for fifteen scheduled rounds tonight at Ebbetts Field, Brooklyn, in the greatest fight of a twelve-month and, for once, one man's guess is as good as another's. Mine is that Delaney will win.

Has the Skill
He has the skill, he has the speed, the punch and general smartness. He will be shooting for the second greatest honor within the gift of the great sport of boxing and, for once, he appears to be set. Six months ago, he attempted to take the title away from Berlenbach suffering from a hangover of appendicitis and septic poisoning. He naturally didn't click.

In Better Condition
Tonight, he is supposed to have everything. In fact, the only fear in the Delaney camp is that he may have overdone the thing. Ten days ago, he was absolutely right and, unfortunately, a man doesn't stay that way for more than a passing hour or so. Anyhow, Delaney was trained within an inch of his life today as he waited for the weighing in ceremony at two o'clock this afternoon.

Fight at 175 Pounds
Both will be required to make 175 pounds, in accordance with the light heavyweight limit. Neither has a care in the world on that score. Berlenbach, not more than half a pound overweight last night, figured to lose it with plenty to spare in the drying out process. Delaney won't weight more than 172 pounds with all his money in his hand.

Speaking of finances, the match is figured to draw a 60,000 crowd and a half-million dollar gate, the biggest in any American ring since the Leonard-Tendler and Dempsey-Firpo bouts of happy memory. The proposition simply had the boys running around in widening circles today and the loss of life at the turnstiles was expected to be something frightful.

Much Betting
It was to be a big money fight in other ways, differences of opinion being such that the bet pools were being set by the insurance money against the rent. Not less than half a million dollars, according to conservative estimates, will change ready hands on the result, most of it in small bets, the sure-thing boys have had no line on this one and, being gamblers, naturally are taking no chances.

The overnight odds were slightly in favor of Delaney but Berlenbach money was expected to wipe them out before noon, with the prospect that the champion would step into the ring a favorite. Such shifts are not uncommon among men who do not know their own minds, to say nothing of those of others.

ONE-EYE CONNELLY IS DONE CRASHING THE GATE, HE SAYS

Man Who Never Bought a Ticket Working in Publishing House—Saw All Championship Fights Since 1897.

New York, July 14.—"One-Eye" Connelly, the rough and ready little Emperor of Crash-In, whose lily white hands the feel of a purchased ticket have never known, has quit his throne.

"The best since 1897," the man who has crashed gate after gate at every great sporting affair in the world since Fitzsimmons beat down Jim Corbett on the hot sands of Carson City, Nevada, has got a job.

The age of commerce has swa-

"One-Eye" Connelly

lowed him up. He has forsaken art for pelf. The only window he's crashing these days is the staid pay-window of a publishing company. He has hung up his fiddle for another to shoot at.

Just a Waiter's Job.
"I got tired of waiting around," was one of the reasons the famous simon-pure gave for his abdication. "Crashing gates these days is a waiter's job. The boxing game has become too much like the stock exchange."

"Anyone wants my job can have it. It's 29 years since I first fooled the bulls. I've kept the old slate clean. My crown's on the gate, if anybody else wants to grab it off."

"They used to fight for a ton of coal, a sack of flour, a ham sandwich or for nothing at all. Now they want the Wolworth building deeded over to them before they start training, and half of Wall street before they step into the ring. Instead of uppercuts and right crosses, it's bids and offers."

"One-Eye's name has become an allusion. That one eye of his has seen great things. When long Bob Fitzsimmons hammered John L. Sullivan's conqueror into submission in 1897 at Carson City, that one eye was there at the ringside, never missing a move."

Two years later the one eye saw a young giant from the west, Jim Jeffries, trail Fitz's banners in the dust at Coney Island.

"The cops said then they would keep me out," said "One-Eye." "They never did keep me out. They've been saying it ever since. But not in this century did they ever beat me. I'm winner."

Saw Jim and Tom.
The cops couldn't keep him out when Jeff mauled Tom Sharkey, or in 1902 when Fitz made his last gallant effort to regain the title and went down into unconsciousness before Jeff's sturdy attack.

That one eye saw the black man swing his stevedore's mitts into Tommy Burns' face at Sydney, Australia, until Tommy could take no more.

Then Johnson and the noble young Stanley Ketchell, and then the pitiful tragedy at Reno, Nevada, 16 years ago this Fourth of July, when the black man taught Jim Jeffries that youth is invincible.

These gates were all tough ones for "One-Eye" to crash. But somehow, mysteriously, there he would always turn up at the ringside, unpaid. That uncouth cap over his left ear, there he would be, a defiance of all that was staid and regular in the world, the man who always beat his way, the nimble-witted, the dodger, the woe of gatemen and of guards.

"Dempsey's such a good boy, too," said "One-Eye" of the present champion. "It's a shame they had to spoil him with that plect in his nose. If he only would fight!"

He Faked a Wire.
"One-Eye" was asked if he would see Dempsey in his next fight.

"Well—" he said and scratched his hand reflectively. That means he can't say no.

"What was your hardest gate?" he was asked.

"The world series at Pittsburgh last year," he answered with no hesitation. "They threw me out 13 times. But I finally made it."

"But I had to put on a Western Union cap and fake a telegram to Barney Dreyfuss before I made the grade. The cops down there had made up their minds they would keep me out, and they sure did try."

Of his present endeavors, all "One-Eye" would say was:

"I'm promotion man for turf magazines now. It's a nice steady job. For a guy with one eye I've seen enough."

But when Dempsey rubs his feet into the rosin against his next foe, what will happen? Will "One-Eye" actually walk up to the window and buy a ticket? Will he now?

Local Sport Chatter

The big event in the sport world tonight is the battle which will take place between Oom Paul Berlenbach of New York and Jack Delaney of Bridgeport for the light heavyweight championship of the world. Of course, Connecticut is all for the Bridgeport man, and those who know quite a bit about boxing are of the opinion that the Astoria fighter will hit the resin about the sixth round if not sooner. Berlenbach is not what one would call a finished boxer although he none the less is a fighter for all of that. He is pitifully weak on the defense and that is where his going to have most of his trouble with Delaney.

Jack is a sharpshooter, a fighter who will wait ten rounds if necessary to get over his winning punch. He has probably as good control and aim over his punches as any boxer in the game today and his ring generalship and common sense when in the squared circle are without equal. That the fight fans are figuring on a little title changing tonight is evidenced by the odds which were quoted at 6 to 5 on Delaney yesterday and may have gone even higher than that on him. Leading writers predict a knockout with Berlenbach as the knoekee.

It isn't very often that Manchester men break out into the ranks of the state champions but it happened the other day when John P. Cheney of this town, former president of the Connecticut Golf Association, turned in a low card of 138 for the state championship title match. It is his third time as the champion. The local man turned in a gross of 162 with a handicap of 12 strokes.

Reports from the French side of the English channel indicate that the several men and women who are planning the attempt at crossing this year will start about the latter end of this month or early in August when the water reaches its warmest point. Our old favorite, Gertrude Ederle of Olympic fame, is making her second try this year.

Usually when a much praised athlete from a school breaks away into fast company he drops down several notches and is either made or broken in his first few games. Such was not the case with Pospisil, who led the Trade School to its record of 12 straight games during this season. In two appearances with the Sons of Italy, the Trade School star has acquitted himself with considerable credit and has won one out of the two.

The first game was lost through the poor support accorded him but he vindicated himself in the second and won it.

The Instlees of Meriden came here on Tuesday night with a nice new record of 12 games won and none lost but they went back to their home city with the record spoiled, trampled on and subjected to general indignity after they had run afoul of the Sons of Italy. It was all Ginger Cleary's fault and his pitching proved the undoing of the visitors. The Sons will start a series with the Naugatuck team here Saturday and will go to that

Philadelphia, July 15.—Edwin J. Pollock, Philadelphia track critic, has good reasons for doubting the erroneous report spread at the men's national A. A. U. track two world and four championship records were broken in the Nationals on July 3, 5 and 6.

NEIGHBORS' WIVES

BY ERNEST LYNN, author of THE YELLOW STUB

BEGIN HERE TODAY
JOHN and FAY MILBURN, to whom a baby girl has just been born, buy a home of their own when the advertising agency in which John is a partner and copy writer, lands an important new contract.

Previous chapters told of the impression made on John by NELL ORME, whom he met at a swimming party while Fay was in the hospital, and who, according to PAT FORBES, was having trouble with her husband.

Months later the Milburns, dining at the Forbes, meet Ormes through Fay tells John how charming she thinks Nell Orme is.

DR. DICK MENEFEE, John's best friend, marries MARGARET WAYNE, and Margaret's younger sister, CLARA, runs away and marries CLIFTON LANE, whom John cordially dislikes.

A party is given by the NOEL BOYDS, and VERA BOYD, who is rather keen about John, fastens on him and, promising to regale him with some scandal, asks him outside, where they sit in a closed automobile and drink gin.

He warns her that they are taking a big risk, and she laughingly points to the front door, where her husband, Noel, is standing with his arms around a girl.

But the quartet went grimly on, impervious to insult.

CHAPTER XX

JOHN'S eyes grew wide with amazement, and he looked at Vera curiously to see what effect her husband's indiscretions had upon her.

But she merely smiled. "You see, Noel can't very well say anything to me. Besides, John, you're not kissing me. Look there—isn't that delicious?" She pointed with her finger, and John saw Noel kiss the girl again and again, the two of them went back in the house.

"Too cold," Vera laughed. "Too cold out there on the doorstep, even for my amorous Noel." She reached for the gin bottle, took a man-sized drink and said, "Noel does like his little flirtation."

John was silent, and Vera leaned over to him, ostensibly to hand him the bottle, but she let her arm remain where it was—pressing against his.

"Noel's had a couple of drinks too many, I suppose," said Vera, "or he wouldn't be making such a fuss over that little Perkins girl."

"Perkins?" exclaimed John, surprised. "I thought her name was Ceell."

"Ceell is her first name."

There was an awkward interval of silence and John finally reminded her: "You said you were going to tell me about Pat Forbes and Eleanor Mason."

"Oh, did I?" She seemed drowsy and was leaning on his shoulder.

"Come, now," he said, rather sharply. "Tell me the scandal."

"Oh, it's nothing much. Pat had a rather bad case on her, and she got on him. They've been carrying on furiously for the last month or two, but they've broken up now."

"Did Marian Forbes know about it?"

"Yes, she found out somehow. Marian rather bores me—she's so old-fashioned."

"I always found her pleasant enough," he retorted, "and she looked at him curiously. 'Don't misunderstand me. I like Marian well enough. She simply doesn't understand her husband.'"

"Oh, I see—not broadminded, eh?"

"You know all about this affair between Pat and Eleanor?"

"Of course. They met here a good deal at my house. I am the confidante, you know, of troubled hearts, and my house is the refuge of misunderstood souls." She gazed at him

Vision Or Visions?
 by Olive Roberts Barton.

On a large flat-sided rock on one of the highways, an altruist has written in commanding letters, "Some People Have Vision. Others Have Visions."

One reads it without registering any particular emotion except curiosity, for at first glance it conveys no message. Who wrote it? Why did he write it? And what did it mean? There it is, in a lonely community, placed in a position of prominence so that he who rides may read.

The wonderful scenery faded away, my mind intrigued by this mysterious placed truism. It certainly had no smack of religion and as far as I could see no amount of manipulation could make it into a warning, such as that which greeted us for years as we set out on a certain road for a merry holiday, which announced persistently and cheerfully, "Prepare to Meet Thy End."

It might have been placarded there by some facetious person who wished to remind the riding public to look well to its steering, otherwise it was likely to "see stars." But I had a notion that the joker goes in for more obvious fun. Some one really was trying to put across a sermon.

And it was a good sermon—the best practical sermon I know of to live by! It should be worked in Berlin stitch and framed over the doorways of our homes. The person who has vision succeeds. It

JUDY IS INSOLENT.

My tone had the desired effect upon Doctor Flint. I could see that it drove him mad with rage. He lost all control of himself.

"Where's that bottle?" he fairly shouted at me.

"What bottle?" I asked as innocently as I could.

"You know very well what bottle the young woman. Pass it over or it will be the worse for you. I began to get angry, and I did not make a sound. The idea of that old man telling me that poor Miss Cleaver's suicide was going to make it disagreeable for the Morton Department Store, when he knew how disagreeable the manager of the store had made it for Miss Cleaver before she reached that stage of desperation where she would take her own life, made me want to strike him. I just looked at him. He need not think he was going to frighten me. He need not think that I was going to do anything that I don't want to do. I think I made him understand this and that he realized he had made a mistake by trying to bully me, for he immediately started on another track.

"Forgive my outburst, Miss Dean," he said. "Of course you know that I am very much worried about the loss of that bottle containing the liquid that poor Miss Cleaver drank here while she was temporarily insane. It will be very terrible if someone who does not understand all the circumstances should find that bottle."

"No one could have dreamed that a woman who was as successful in her chosen work as Miss Cleaver could possibly take her own life. I will tell you, Miss Dean, that I was so sure in my own mind that this could not be, that I did not, as I usually do, glance about for incriminating evidence of suicide when I come upon a man or woman in her condition."

"Of course, the moment I really examined Miss Cleaver I found out what was the matter with her, but I was then too busy trying to save her life to think of anything else."

"Did you really examine her, Doctor Flint? I thought you were too busy telephoning to do that. I know you left your patient while you held a long conversation with someone over the wire."

"I was trying to get an ambulance to get the poor woman to the hospital," the doctor explained.

"Someone else could have made that request just as well as you, doctor."

Doctor Flint tried to ignore my last speech.

Child Needs Play

Play has seemed to be something which the child seeks so naturally for himself that many parents who carefully guard the sleep, diet and health habits of their children pay little attention to their play.

The child needs to play out of doors several hours each day. He is as sensitive as a plant to fresh air and sunshine. He needs space for freedom of motion, where he may romp, sing or yell free from restraint. He needs trees and ladders to climb, swings and seesaws for the development and training of muscles.

Our cities are making provisions for their children through parks, playgrounds and recreation centers. These provisions are too often overlooked by the parent who sees in play merely something to keep the child quiet and his mind occupied. Since the movies are usually more accessible than play spaces, children are allowed to spend many hours in the movies that should be spent in some outdoor recreation. Frequently the movies are poorly ventilated and overcrowded. They furnish inaction instead of physical exercise. Their most serious effect is on the nervous system.

While the motion pictures have much to offer to the child who goes occasionally to carefully selected ones, the child who has the movie habit is frequently overstimulated and has learned to depend on the excitement which they offer instead of his own initiative amusement.

Through play with other children a child receives his best lessons in social adjustments. Learning to share a cherished plaything and to watch the other child enjoy it may be a very difficult problem for the children the selfish child learns to respect the rights of others while the timid child is encouraged to take his place in the game.

Babies Not Playthings

While children should not be so constantly supervised that they have little opportunity to develop their own initiative, becoming slaves to the adults' directions, they do need intelligent suggestions and guidance as soon as they are ready for new achievements. Toys should have no sharp edges

PLAYTIME IS "REAL TIME" TO THE CHILD

IT'S THEN HE GROWS, LEARNS AND FINDS HIMSELF

Why call it play! This business of living is joyous adventure, whether the interest at hand be feeding the ducks or climbing into a boat—but it's real, not make-believe, for little Jean Ackerman.

It is natural for animals to live out of doors, seeking shelter during extreme heat, cold or storms, or for protection from their enemies. Unless the weather is very warm, they usually seek the sunshine. It is just as natural for the child to seek the out of doors.

Our crowded cities with their apartments and hotels have made a great encroachment upon the play space of the child. There are no trees, ladders and stairways to climb and no attics or barn lofts to explore.

Viola Shore in an article in a recent issue of "Liberty" gives some of the rules every hostess should know when giving a party in order to have it a success. She recommends the choice of a large number of friends and no relatives. She says nobody has a high opinion of turkey the week after Thanksgiving and a party should not be given just after the same gathering of people have had a get-together. If they have been going to too many parties they get the feeling that they are doing you a favor by coming to yours, so that time is an item to be considered when you decide to entertain. She says it isn't wise to have a party of people who know each other very well. "There ought to be enough new meat to make the men buckle on their armor and the girls polish up their laughs."

There's nothing that goes to the spot on a hot day like a cool drink with a fruit flavor—just by way of refreshment. If nourishment is also desired a long cool drink of milk does often solve the problem of the summer luncheon when eggs are included in the drink. A chocolate egg shake served with a whole wheat sandwich is ideal and easily digested. Keep a heavy chocolate syrup on hand, made in the proportion of one cup cocoa or three squares bitter chocolate, 1 cup sugar, half a cup boiling water and a little vanilla. When wanted use about two tablespoons of the syrup for each glass of chilled milk. If the egg is added beat yolk and white separately with a little salt.

Mrs. Robinson is so busy at the Lily Beauty Shop, I advise, if you wish the comfort and convenience of a permanent wave, or any other beauty work in which she excels, to call 1671 without delay. Many women nowadays make it a point to have a permanent before they leave for short or lake.

Meat salads are especially popular during the summer months because they are without a doubt one of the most attractive ways of making use of left-over meats and vegetables. Bits of roast, chops, steaks or boiled meats that are left may be combined into dishes that appeal to the eye and palate. Cabbage, celery, cucumber, with the meat, may be molded together with gelatine. Foods such as macaroni, spaghetti and rice form the foundation of substantial salads.

A good recipe for luncheon or supper is the following:

Tomato-Meat Salad

6 uniform-sized ripe tomatoes, 1 pint meat stock, 1 tablespoon granulated gelatine, 1 cup left-over meats, chopped fine, 1 tablespoon capers, 2 yolks of hard-cooked eggs, Mayonnaise, parsley, lettuce.

Scop out the centers of the tomatoes, after removing the skins, and chill very thoroughly. Dissolve the gelatine in the boiling stock, and place in refrigerator to become thick and cold, but not set. Press the egg yolk through a sieve, add the chopped meat, capers and half a cup of mayonnaise. Then add the gelatine mixture. When nearly set fill the cavities of the tomatoes with this mixture and brush some on the outside of the tomatoes; allow to set and repeat. Then chill thoroughly before serving. Serve on bed of lettuce. Garnish with radish buds and mayonnaise dressing.
