Bath Tub Girl, Native of Chicago, Didn't Even Know Mayor's Name; Had Taken Veronal.

Chicago, July 26.—Joyce Hawley, famed bather in a wine-filled bathtub, today faces three alienists here who will determine whether or not she is sane.

This latest ordeal of Earl Carroll's protegee is the aftermath of an overdose of veronal which she swallowed yesterday in her rooms at the Hotel Sherman.

Instead of sleep, hysteria overcame the girl and for two hours in a rambling monologue she warned girls against seeking the "bright lights," told of her difficulties, asserted that she was broke and several other entertaining things.

Couldn't Name Mayor
Removed to the hospital, Dr. Carl A. Meyer sought, to question her. He asked her a number of questions in order to determine her general knowledge. Joyce didn't know who was the mayor of Chicago and added that she didn't care.

"I live in New York," Joyce flung at her questioner, "Jimmy Walker is the mayor there and New York is the only town I care about."
Dr. Meyer ordered her removed to the psychopathic hospital.

GRAND JURY PROBE IS READY FOR GREEN

Others in Coast Dry District May Be Involved in Federal Investigation.

San Francisco, July 26.—Investigation into the charges against Col. Ned M. Green, suspended San Francisco prohibition administrator, was scheduled to get under way here today. Green was suspended Saturday.

Federal investigators, it was said, have their evidence against Col. Green, who is charged with misconduct in office, and are prepared to submit it to the federal grand jury which will be impaneled today.

That the federal grand jury may not stop at the investigation of Col. Green's activities was indicated today when Alf Ottedahl, chief of the intelligence unit of the internal revenue department intimating that other men in Col. Green's department might also be called to face the grand jury.

Government officials stated that the deposed prohibition director would be called to answer on two counts—criminal negligence in office and embezzlement of government seized liquor.

SEEK GIRL AS PLOTTER OF A JAIL DELIVERY

Had $6,000 Car Ready to Carry Part of 14 Detroit Prisoners to Safety.

Detroit, July 26.—A twenty-year-old girl, driver of a $5,000 sport car, is sought today as the instigator and leader of a thwarted plot to liberate fourteen county jail prisoners early today.

According to Sheriff George Walters, this girl, the wife of one of the fourteen prisoners, was seen cruising around the jail early this morning followed by another machine operated by a boy.

The plot was uncovered when a turnkey discovered that two bars had been sawed from the cell block and that two bars in a window had also been removed.

George Brady, held on a federal automobile theft charge, admitted that several saws had been smuggled to him in loaves of bread, according to Sheriff Walters. The prisoners were to have gained the street by lowering themselves down by blankets, he said. There they were to have been met by the two automobiles and transferred in speedboats across the river to Canada.

EMBEZZLES; JAILED; NOW FACES BIGAMY CHARGE.

Bridgeport, July 26.—Troubles have been piling up for George O. Smith, insurance agent, since last Thursday when he was convicted in city court of embezzling $110 from the company that employed him. He appeared in court again today, waived examination when a charge of bigamy was read to him, and was bound over for trial in the Superior Court under bond of $1,000.

TWENTY-NINE DIE OF WOOD ALCOHOL

Buffalo and Near-by American and Canadian Towns Flooded With Poison.

Buffalo, July 26.—Twenty-nine persons were killed over the weekend in Buffalo and surrounding towns in the United States and across the border in Canada, by drinking poison liquor-gin made from redistilled wood alcohol from which all the poison had not been removed.

Arrests of alleged alcohol bootleggers already have been made, and police are seeking James Voelker, said to be the "wood alcohol king" who supplied speakeasies with the deadly drinks.

Ask Murder Charges.
Authorities here announced that they will seek at least thirty indictments, of which a number will be for murder.

General Williams, commissioner of the provincial police, announced in Toronto that he will make a personal investigation, and issued sweeping orders for a clean-up.

Numerous speakeasies, camouflaged as soda fountains, have been closed throughout the area affected. These are blamed for dispensing the deadly alcohol.

Many persons are ill and blind from drinking the poisonous concoctions, and further deaths may result.

EIGHT KILLED WHEN CROWDED BRIDGE FALLS

West Virginia River Carnival Brings Death and Injury to Many.

Whitesville, W. Va., July 26.—Eight persons are dead today, five near death, and thirty-one others are in hospitals at Charleston, W. Va., as the result of the collapse of a bridge over Coal river here during a river carnival Saturday night.

One hundred persons were plunged into the shallow, rocky river when a swinging bridge, crowded with spectators watching a "human torch" diving into the water, suddenly fell 25 feet when cables snapped.

Wild scenes followed the snapping of the cables as the crowd was thrown into the river bed. Many of the victims landed on their heads and their skulls were fractured. Others had broken necks. Of the injured, many had fractured limbs.

All nurses and doctors in this city were rushed to the scene of the accident and others were called from Charleston.

Gov. Gore launched an immediate investigation into the collapse of the bridge and directed in person relief operations.

'MA' FERGUSON BADLY BEATEN BY DAN MOODY

Many Texans Demand Governor Resign as per Challenge—Moody Likely to Have Clear Majority.

Forth Worth, Texas, July 26.—An official count of the votes in the Texas Democratic primary is impending to determine whether a "run-off" primary will have to be held to name the party's candidate for the governorship, following Saturday's primary.

Dan Moody, youthful attorney general, holds a long lead over Mrs. Miriam A. Ferguson for the gubernatorial nomination.

According to the present totals compiled by the Texas election bureau, Moody now has a majority over all candidates. The Texas statute says that unless one candidate receives a majority in the July primary a run-off between two leading candidates must be held in August. If Moody has a majority when the final returns are in, a recount in all likelihood will be demanded.

Far in Lead
The latest count showed: Moody 338,957; Gov. Ferguson, 230,095. Voting was light in the Republican primary, the first of its kind in Texas. H. H. Haines apparently had been nominated for governor over E. O. Scott. The vote stood Haines 6,702; Scott, 2,587. Harry M. Warbach, only Republican congressman from Texas has apparently won overwhelmingly over the "regular" candidate, Fred Knecht, backed by R. S. Creager, national committeeman.

Most of the Ferguson-supported state candidates also met defeat in the landslide for Moody.

Urge "Ma" to Resign.
Newspaper editors and civic leaders throughout Texas today called upon Governor Ferguson to resign immediately, as she agreed in a challenge to Moody at the beginning of the campaign.

Mrs. Ferguson early in her campaign for re-election challenged Moody that if she were beaten by Moody, she would "step down and out" provided Moody would agree to resign if she led him by 25,000 votes. Moody accepted.

"Ma" and "Pa" Ferguson reiterated their challenge only a week ago. Returns from 238 out of 253 counties, including 56 complete, gave Moody a majority of 1,145 votes, shortly before noon.

All railroads of the country were made a party to the investigation.

WOOD ALCOHOL EVIL EXTENDS TO ONTARIO

Gladys Guerin and Nora Connolly, both sixteen, were found blind after drinking home brew to which alcohol had been added in a Sackville street house.

Roy Woldrin, Oshawa, was held on a charge of supplying the alcohol.

Prohibition agents and local police are making every effort to discover the source of the poisoned liquor supply.

The storm killed three people and did thousands of dollars damage to property.

FT. WORTH MAYOR DENIES HE PLOTTED

Norris Not Even Discussed, He Says, When Executive and Chippis Conferred.

Fort Worth, Tex., July 26.—Rev. J. Frank Norris, Ft. Worth pastor, waited today for the outcome of a grand jury investigation which within 48 hours may find him indicted for murder.

District Attorney R. K. Hanger of Tarrant county, marshalled his witnesses, anticipating that the grand jurors, resuming their interrupted session Tuesday, would decide promptly whether to hold the clergyman for the killing of D. E. Chipps, Rich Fort Worth lumberman, July 17.

Chipps was shot and almost instantly killed in the church office building, adjoining the $1,000,000 first Baptist Church of which Norris is pastor.

Hearings are to be held in various sections of the country, beginning tomorrow in Chicago and continuing later in Boston, New York and other cities. They will be under the direction of Commissioner Esch, co-author of the Esch-Cummins transportation act.

Ends 14 Months Lone Cruise To Look Over Ancient Whaler

New Bedford, July 26.—Fourteen months on the high seas, between Seattle and this port, Captain Thomas Drake sailed his little schooner Pilgrim, singing this paraphrase:
"For I am the cook and the mate of the Pilgrim ship; the bosun tight and the midship mite and the crew of the little clip."
Perhaps the spectre of Sir Francis Drake, ancestor of the Seattle seaman, held the tiller while "Cap'n Tom" slept or while he was in the rigging.

But "Cap'n Tom" was safe in port today to look over the Charles W. Morgan, America's oldest whaling ship, which, according to marine tradition, once chased "Moby Dick," the whale-terror, immortalized in fiction.

The Charles W. Morgan is now a permanent memorial at the Round Hills estate of Colonel E. H. R. Green, son of the late Hester Green.

It was to look over the famous old whaling craft that Captain Drake weathered many a gale in the run here from Seattle.

PLAN TO HOLD PSYCHIC QUIZ IN OLD CHEOPS

Spiritists Arrange Double Party to Seek Answer to World Future in Pyramid Seances.

London, July 26.—Spiritualists seances in the sepulchral recesses of the great pyramid of Cheops at Gizeh, Egypt, are soon to be held. Under the leadership of the Rev. J. W. Potter, a London cleric, an effort will be made to determine whether the pyramid is "prophetic"—that is, built on a plan by which the architectural proportions give a key to the great crises of the world's history.

We hope to learn the psychic purpose of the great pyramid and to discover by spirit messages its relationship to the prophecies of the bible," Rev. Potter said in outlining his plans.

"Parallel to Bible."
"We believe that the pyramid, with its 'chronological line' structure, is a parallel of the Bible and, correctly interpreted, furnishes an accurate forecast of future world history."

A preliminary expedition of fifteen will leave at the end of October, to be followed by a larger party of one hundred or more in December.

"The party will include three mediums," Rev. Potter explained. "A spirit named Daniel has told us at a sitting that the great pyramid is an age far more under psychic influence than is the present."

Innermost Recess.
"We shall hold our seances in the 'king's chamber,' the innermost recess of the pyramid. Complete darkness will be maintained, and we are confident of receiving messages. We may obtain information of infinite importance to the future of the world. Our sittings in the pyramid will probably last two hours each. We intend to hold two, but we shall await spirit guidance."

The expedition also intends to visit Rome, Florence, Venice, Turin and Milan, where it also will conduct seances.

During the last year of the Civil War, Robert Lincoln was a captain under General Grant and he brought to his father the first news of the Petersburg affair.

Robert was with his father when he was shot and was at his bedside during his last hours.

ILLINOIS PRIMARY INVESTIGATION ON

Brennan Declares Insull, Public Utility Magnate, Aided Democrat, Too.

Chicago, July 26.—The first investigation in the U. S. Senate investigation of the Illinois senatorial primary came before the inquiry started today when George E. Brennan, victor in the Democratic utility magnate, had spent at least $140,000 in the senatorial campaign.

Brennan said he would testify that Insull gave him $15,000 and that he got $15,000 from the campaign fund of Frank L. Smith, who won the Republican primary.

Brennan said he would not hesitate to tell about Insull's contribution to his own fund.

"I got $15,000 from Mr. Insull early in the campaign," Brennan said. "I know he also gave $125,000 to Mr. Smith."

Insull thus contributed to the funds of both Republicans and Democrats, according to Brennan.

The hearing was late getting started as members of the committee did not reach Chicago until the middle of the forenoon.

Reports that extra guards were placed around the courtroom were laughed at by Senator Reed (D., Ill.), chairman.

Two gray-haired, round court faces were the only "guards" and their chief concern was to prevent smoking in the courtroom.

Smith, who took the stand as the first witness, testified that Insull had contributed "around $100,000" to his campaign.

Smith said he was a farmer and his home was in Dwight, Illinois. He said he was in the employ of Monticello, Ill., was his campaign manager. Reed immediately ordered a subpoena issued for Moore.

"Who were members of your committee?"

"I don't know. I paid no attention to the organization of my committee except to name Mr. Moore chairman."

Smith said his own part in the campaign was simply to make speeches.

"Did you talk to Mr. Moore about contributions?"

"We discussed in a general way the probable cost of the campaign and I indicated what I could give."

"What did you decide the cost of the campaign would be?"

"One hundred and fifty thousand dollars."

Churches Packed.
Religious fervor runs high here today, following a Sunday devoted by faithful Catholics to prayer and devotions for the success of the Catholic church in its contest with the Mexican government over the dissolution of religious orders and the prohibition of the teaching of religious doctrines in the schools.

Thousands swarmed the Catholic churches yesterday for final services. The Vatican having ordered all services to be suspended after this week until the government decree is lifted. The churches will remain open for prayer and hundreds today continued to file through the various churches, kneeling for prayers for the revocation of the government decree.

Most dramatic of yesterday's pilgrims was the endless line of pilgrims to the Basilica of Guadalupe, shrine of the patron saint of Mexico.

CALLES MEETS CHURCH STRIKE WITH WARNING

Mex Episcopate Orders All Services Stopped, President Threatens New Repressive Measures.

Mexico City, July 26.—"Every new manifestation of opposition to the laws of Mexico will be met by further repressive measures." President Calles of Mexico issued this statement today in reply to a manifesto of the Catholic Episcopate of Mexico ordering services in all Catholic churches in Mexico suspended on July 31. The manifesto was signed by the Archbishop of Mexico, the Most Rev. Mora y Del Rio, the seven other archbishops and twenty-nine bishops.

Penalties for Law Makers.
The suspension ordered in protest against the new religious regulations promulgated by the Mexican government. The manifesto, which took the form of a pastoral letter, lists the penalties which may be imposed on those of the Catholic faith responsible for the new laws, including ex-communication. Although formal services will cease in all churches, they will remain open for prayer and meditation.

Calles in this statement charged that the present disturbances throughout Mexico were the result of efforts of "reactionary elements to overthrow the revolutionary government under the guise of religious zeal."

Calles belittled the possible effects of the boycott of the churches by the clergy. His statement continues as follows:

"Even were the proposed economic paralysis of the country actually produced by the Catholics, while it might mean disorders and tumult, the government could not itself be injured, and the net result would be to bring down upon the leaders of the movement the hatred of those who had suffered from the boycott."

"Cloak for Scoundrels."
"I will understand that, for the people of the United States, it is difficult to grasp the fact that the agitation in Mexico is simply the work of scoundrels who are seeking to conceal their political motives under the mantle of religion."

"The only thing that the manifesto will produce will be the attention of some members of the wealthy parishes from attendance at functions of a pompous, social character where their absence may produce surprise upon the ingenuous."

"But even these will not fail to attend the cabarets and the places of amusement where their presence will be less conspicuous. Fortunately, the economic life of Mexico does not depend upon a few dozens of agitators, who, taking the Catholic religion as a pretext, unbosom their old rancor toward the men conducting the government of the 'Ridiculous Movement.'"

"Neither industry nor commerce, nor any fairly productive activity has ever depended upon a group of Catholic agitators such as is now attempting this ridiculous movement. The lives of those of the country always have progressed and developed without permitting themselves to be guided by those who take religion for what they can get out of it. BY CHARLES P. STEWART

Washington, July 26.—Prohibition referendums, or what, virtually will amount to referendums, are promised on a state-wide scale in 18 states at next November's election.

They already are definitely assured in New York, Wisconsin, Colorado, Montana and Nevada.

In New York and Wisconsin they were provided for by legislative enactment. In Colorado, Montana and Nevada the petition method was used.

In Missouri a referendum petition is being circulated now. In California there is a prospect that the legislature will follow the example of New York's and Wisconsin's.

In Ohio Atlee Pomerene, wet Democrat, is fighting Florence Allen, dry Democrat and Frank B. Willis, dry Republican, for the United States Senate, principally on the prohibition issue. The vote will be the equivalent of a referendum, though not explicitly under that name.

The same thing is true of Illinois, where George Brennan, wet Democrat, will make his senatorial fight against Frank Smith, Republican, solely on the issue of modification of the Volstead act.

In Pennsylvania Representative William S. Vare is a candidate for the Senate on a platform which is wet and nothing else, though the scandal connected with his nomination may lose him a good many wet votes to William B. Wilson, dry Democrat, so that the issue in the Keystone State is not quite clean cut.

In Massachusetts, if as expected, David I. Walsh opposes Senator William M. Butler, the Republican candidate for another term, he will do so, among other things, as a wet Democrat.

In New Hampshire, if Senator George H. Moses is returned, it will be as a wet as well as a conservative Republican.

New Jersey, Delaware, Connecticut and Rhode Island, in their Congressional representation, always are wet, but the prohibition issue will figure, as usual, in the coming campaign, with all of them, and the test will, at any rate determine the present extent of their wetness.

Maryland, also always wet, will be revealed as having grown still wetter if it nominates the very wet Representative John Philip Hill for the Senate, on the Republican ticket, in preference to Senator O. E. Weller, whose wet-and-dry views are somewhat difficult to ascertain exactly.

Finally, there is an independent wet candidate for governor in Oregon.

Besides state-wide prohibition referendums, or contests which will give substantially the same information as would be given by referendums, the wet-and-dry issue will figure in numerous and widely scattered Congressional district fights.

Representative William D. Upshaw, for example, will have a wet candidate opposing him in his Georgia district.

There will be wet and dry candidates in the Fort Worth (Tex.) and the Fort Wayne (Ind.) districts. Wet and dries will vote it out in the New Orleans district in Louisiana. Reports of a prospective wet Congressional candidate or two come, of all places, from Kansas.

The district contests will not signify much. Nevertheless their results will count in determining the wetness or dryness of the next House of Representatives.

WINDSHIELD STOLEN

Bill McKee, automobile dealer of 32 Laurel street, reports the theft of a windshield from one of his cars on either Saturday or Sunday night.

McKee spent the week end at Saybrook and did not know of the theft until his return last night. He has reported the matter to the police. This is not the first theft that has occurred in that place. Some time ago, McKee missed a radiator. He traced it to Hartford and recovered it in the yard of a junk dealer who had stolen it from his place at 32 Laurel street.

TOWN IS DESERTED OVER THE WEEK-END

Stream of Cars To and From Mountains and Beaches All During Sunday.

Manchester streets were practically deserted yesterday. An exceptionally large number of local people went to the shore or to lakes in search of relief from the heat. Although yesterday was not as hot as the three-day heat wave which hit the east during the latter part of the week, it was hot enough to cause many to lock up their homes and seek cooler places.

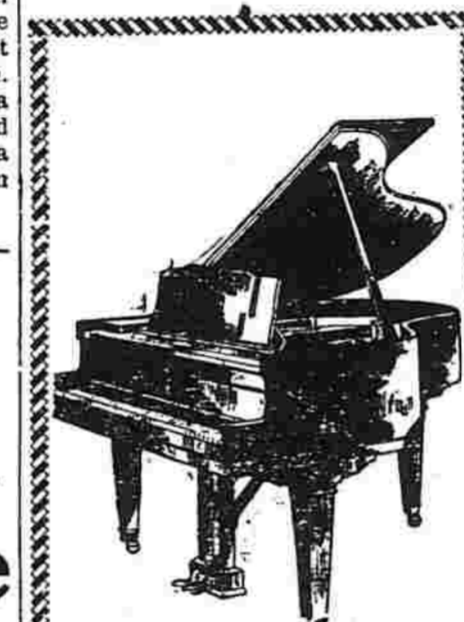

The recent heat wave had left such a lasting impression that people took the week-end opportunity to rush to the shore. It was the first opportunity for many as they did not have a chance to go when the heat wave occurred. Many left early Saturday afternoon. Dismissed after work had been completed. Others went by automobiles early Sunday morning.

A Herald representative returning from Niantic, found the road which leads from South Main street through Glastonbury to the New London Turnpike, heavily laden with south-bound traffic.

Those who did not go out of town went to Globe Hollow to bathe. It is estimated that fully 700 persons were at the pond during the afternoon and early hours of the evening. No emergency cases were reported.

ACT OF A ROAD HOG KILLS FIVE IN OHIO.

Cleveland, July 26.—City and county authorities today were searching for the driver who, they believe, caused an accident early Sunday when an automobile carrying six persons plunged over an embankment onto the B. and O. railroad tracks, killing five of its occupants and probably fatally injuring the sixth. Police think a "road hog" sideswiped the Preichel car and forced it over the embankment.

POLICE COURT

James Clifford of Center street pleaded guilty before Judge Johnson in the police court this morning to the charge of driving an automobile while under the influence of liquor. He was arrested Saturday afternoon on Main street by Officer John McGilgan who testified that Clifford was driving with two of his children in the car at the time. When brought to the station he was examined by Dr. D. C. Y. Moore who told the judge he was unfit to drive a car. A fine of $125 and costs was imposed, which was paid. Clifford will lose his driver's license for a period of one year.

Harry McCormick of Charter Oak street who was brought before the court on a non-support charge, was found not guilty. He was in court on complaint of his wife but the evidence was not sufficient to convict.

Ralph Sivigny of Franklin avenue, Hartford, paid a fine of $10 and costs for speeding. He was arrested by Policeman R. H. Wirtalla on Center street yesterday afternoon.

SLEEPS ON RAPTERS TO AVOID HAZERS

During the excitement at Camp Trumbull on the last night, Private Edward Copeland is believed to have been the only man to sleep in peace. The rest were pestered and not allowed to sleep.

The Howitzer Company cook, however, put one over on his comrades. Realizing that the men in his company were determined to give him a ducking in the Niantic river, Copeland took the blankets from his bed, climbed up on to the network of beams overhead in the mess shack and went to sleep.

There he slumbered through the night undisturbed despite the fact that several times during the night a group of his colleagues came to the mess shack in search of him.

HARTFORD PHYSICIAN TO SPEAK AT KIWANIS

The speaker at this week's meeting of the Kiwanis Club will be Dr. Joseph E. Root of Hartford. His topic will be "The Great Outdoor."

Dr. Root's says that Dr. Root is one of the best qualified men to speak on this topic that he knows of.

Dr. Root has done much hiking, camping and exploring of virgin country. At one time he covered 500 miles by canoe through the various streams that form the headwaters of the Mississippi river.

Dr. Moore feels that the talk of Dr. Root will be of special interest to Kiwanians in view of the camp that is being maintained this year for underprivileged children.

BANKRUPTCIES.

One of the most flagrant abuses with which decent business has had to contend in this country has been the operation of the national bankruptcy act, which, supposedly intended to rectify the old, haphazard system of state insolvency laws, has in many ways been worse than the evil it was planned to correct.

No intimate familiarity with the technique of bankruptcy proceedings is necessary for the citizen to find ground for suspicion that it is a weird and grotesque statute under which we have been pretending to protect debtor and creditor alike. The few brief lines issued daily from the courts where such proceedings are instituted, giving the names, reported liabilities and assets of voluntary petitioners, alone provide evidence enough.

It is declared that the amendments to the bankruptcy act which were passed at the recent session of Congress and which go into effect late next month will remedy much of the outrageous wrong of the past. But the fact remains that even under the old law there were several grounds under which criminal prosecutions could be brought against fraudulent bankrupts—and that they were almost never invoked.

So long as attorneys are willing to show their clients how to cheat their creditors, and so long as courts permit bankrupt estates to be eaten up in fees, it is probable that the bankruptcy laws of the United States will remain a good way short of satisfactory. But it is to be hoped that after next month there will not be quite so much effrontery in their employment by dishonest debtors.

COLONEL GREEN.

The ordinary American, not at all understanding the motives that actuated the most influential of the forces that combined to put over prohibition, will be inclined to gasp in amazement at the frankness of Colonel Green, deposed dry director of California.

"I believe in prohibition firmly because of its economic value to the nation," said Colonel Green. "But it is unfortunate that the temperate have to suffer with the intemperate. As for myself, if any friend or stranger calls on me I will offer him a drink and take one with him, if it gags me."

of admiration for that extremely rare individual who admits that he is for prohibition solely and only because he believes it to be a good thing for the business interests.

Prohibition was brought about by spending money. Wayne B. Wheeler's testimony before a Senate investigating committee put that proposition outside the field of discussion. What was not disclosed, however, was the source of those many millions that were spent on the job.

These people—the heads of these big employing concerns—conceived the notion that if the American people could be kept from spending money for liquor, the total living cost of the nation would be reduced materially, and so, without appreciably reducing the standard of living, wages could be reduced correspondingly and American industries be in a better position to compete with other nations for the world's trade.

The women's societies, the temperance leagues and the churches were the inspiration, the regimental bands of the dry army; the professional prohibitionists were the infantry, but the big business fellows, who thought they saw in prohibition a stupendous economic advantage over the rest of the world, were the artillery.

Of course Colonel Green pays no attention to prohibition insofar as it might be imagined to have anything to do with his personal habits. Not any more than do thousands of those others who, as a shrewd business stroke, financed its promotion.

Prohibition was for the intended purpose of enforcing habits of abstinence from expensive drinks on the part of the employed millions, so that they could work more cheaply, turn out goods at less cost and meet the low priced labor of a poverty stricken Europe that was eagerly glad for mere food and shelter.

It is not Colonel Green who is inconsistent. The bad strategy lay in putting so bluffly frank and arrogantly honest a man in his kind of job.

A great many Americans will be unable to arouse any enthusiasm within themselves over the announcement that Secretary Wilbur has convinced President Coolidge that the Budget Bureau should be asked to approve the building of a Navy dirigible three times the size of the Shenandoah, at a cost of five to six million dollars.

As the kind of person who is lost in admiration of "big" things for their mere bigness, the Navy secretary, himself "head of the biggest Sunday school on the Pacific coast," might well be expected to go in for serial whales bigger than any other nation possessed, even in face of the terrible lesson of the Shenandoah and the contrasting achievement of the little Norge. But we did hope that President Coolidge would say, "Better wait and see."

Speaker Longworth's personality supplies precisely the elements of fellowship which Coolidge's lack that so many thoughts turn to him. At all events Longworth is no more to be overlooked as a 1928 possibility than the President himself, and that without any more artificial manufacturing of a boom for the one than for the other.

That the mission of General L. C. Andrews to England may have not been quite so successful as was expected may be inferred from the appearance at this precise time of what amounts to an official disclaimer from the summer White House of any administration purpose to obtain important assistance from the British government in the enforcement of the prohibition laws here.

The main fact to be borne in mind is that the manufacture of liquor in Britain is a legitimate and respectable business; that its sale abroad is in line with the whole British mercantile policy, and that there is no social, political or economic occasion for the government over there to go out of its way to injure the business of its own subjects to please American faddists.

IN NEW YORK

New York, July 26.—Scattered notes from an afternoon's ramble about Manhattan: Old pretzel salesmen resting from their day's weary plodding. They gather in the shadows of late afternoon on benches in Seaside Park. About them prance dirty-faced children. Children with the faces of the world, smeared by the dirt of New York streets.

The Aquitania lying at pier. And all about are lighters and barges, like so many green and red and black waterbugs. Skating in and out. Just alongside the ocean giant a barge of bright green. Winches squeak, cranes sing a weird, strained chorus, giant chains rattle. All the noises of a great liner loading for sea.

The little green barge huddles close. A plump, ruddy-faced woman emerges from the tiny square room atop the barge. She has a mouthful of clothespins and quite oblivious to the surroundings begins to hang up the day's wash. Then she sits down, as unconcernedly as any housewife on a farmyard porch and begins darning socks. A few moments later she reappears with a sprinkling can and begins to water a little box of bedraggled geraniums.

All is bustle along the piers. Tourist travel overseas is at its height. Taxicabs form an endless pageant of yellow, red, gold, white. Crowds jam the docks waving and shouting at friends aboard ship. As usual there is the man who stands too late and who stands self-consciously holding the great bouquet of flowers he intended for "the girl friend."

Stewart's WASHINGTON LETTERS

Washington, July 26.—Whatever else one may think of prohibition, it's difficult to deny that dry enforcement machinery is expensive. Representative Martin B. Madden, in putting its cost for the current fiscal year at $41,713,106, speaks with authority, as chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, which drafted the legislation for continued war on rum.

Representative A. J. Griffin, also an Appropriations Committee member, not long ago named $38,354,489 as this year's financial allowance in the interest of Volstead law enforcement, but Madden says Griffin omitted a great many items. The latter took into account only the maintenance of the prohibition unit and the coast guard's dry activities.

Then Representative James M. Mead takes a hand in the arithmetic and Mead soars into the realms of higher mathematics at once. He starts with District Attorney Buckner's assertion that $15,000,000 is needed to enforce prohibition in New York, remarks that New York has one-tenth of the national population, multiplies $15,000,000 by 10 and gets $150,000,000.

DAILY POEM

FREEDOM. Consider the moon and the stars and the sun, and the air that is whipped into breeze. Consider the real work that nature has done, through the grass, through the shrubs, through the trees. Just think of the freshness that comes with the showers that occur so that green things may grow. Just think of the beauty of numerous flowers that wait their perfume as they blow.

NORMAS LATEST FILM
COMING TO THE STATE
"The Lady," Norma Talmadge's latest photoplay, reveals her in a new guise—that of a pert, pretty and vivacious soubrette of a musical show of the Gibson Girl period. Norma wears the typical soubrette costume, short fluffy skirts, tight, bare-back a la Kitty Gordon and a huge feather hat. Like so many soubrettes of old, she struts saucily across the stage, does a buck and wing, jauntily sings a song as she tosses flowers to the Johnnies in the first row and takes her exit "cartwheel" fashion into the wings. It's a new Norma the world will see in "The Lady," a Norma who plumbs the heights and the depths of human happiness and despair. From being the toast of the theatrical world, Norma plunges from the height of gay Monte Carlo to society into the toughest dives in Europe, becomes a half demented, bedraggled flower "girl" in the streets of London after she has lost both husband and baby and finally ends as the head of a cafe just back of the world war front, where the soldiers of all nations call her "the little mother of all the world." "The Lady" is a First National attraction produced by Joseph M. Schenck. It was directed by Frank Borzage from Frances Marion's story. The picture will be shown at the State theatre Tuesday and Wednesday. STILL ARE "BITING" DESPITE WARNING

Someone Is Getting "Gyped" Because Fraud Salesmen Are Still With Us.

This is the twenty-first article in a series prepared for The Herald by the Manchester Chamber of Commerce.

Do you smile tolerantly or pityingly at your weaker brethren who have fallen victims to some slick salesman or alluring advertisement? You can't afford to. Sooner or later, if you don't watch out, they will get you too—or perhaps they have already.

Some one must be biting. There must still be easy money to be had for the asking. There must be or there would be no object in keeping the army of salesmen in the field or in paying for the advertisements which appear by the thousands daily in the newspapers throughout the land.

Are you helping to pay these expenses, and millions more for the office, rents and furnishings, not to mention the graft of those higher up, the men behind the scenes who do not let their names appear for fear of what will happen to them when the bubble bursts and the police step in.

Did You Give $15?
An average of $15 for every man, woman and child in the United States was contributed in 1924 to the support of crooks who promoted the sale of fraudulent stocks or merchandise.

Did you pay your share of this blackmail?
Did you help to buy the automobiles and pay for the riotous life of ease and luxury of some of the promoters?
Did you believe the salesman's fairy story about letting you in on a good thing? Why should he let you in on it if it is so good? If it was good—if it had even a fair sporting chance of winning, it would never get far from New York or wherever it was born, and you would never have heard of it. Did you think you could win in the "Suit Club" lottery? Only the stool pigeons, the cappers, the decoys and such as are necessary to advertise the club, ever get a suit.

Do you think you really have a chance to win in any lottery game? Do you know that 90 per cent of the receipts go to the promoters and 10 per cent to those who "pay."

Do you know that, whatever happens to you in your trade with any form of lottery, you have no protection from the law because when you put your money into it, you became a law-breaker?
Do you put your money into lotteries, suit-clubs, puzzle contests, wildcat stock, and real estate gambles because you think you are going to win, or just for the "kick" that you get out of it?
Did you ever make a mental comparison between the amount of money you have put in and the amount of money you have taken out of these games of chance, and wonder to yourself if you weren't paying pretty high for whatever "kick" you got?

That's "Different."
It is a pretty safe bet that if your butcher or grocer, or tailor took a hundred dollars from you and failed to deliver the equivalent in goods that there would be an entirely different kind of a "kick." Even if the trolley conductor short-changed you one measly nickel, you would howl your head off and report him to the management, and be grossly insulted if they didn't discharge him. But when the next well-dressed, fluent stranger drifts into your place of business and tells you that he can let you in on some good thing at from ten to thirty per cent guaranteed return, your pocket-nerve immediately begins to twitch and twinkle and once more the old saying is proved true, that "a fool and his money are soon parted."

It isn't for want of education either, for newspapers daily carry warnings in the form of news items of which the following are a few actual samples: "New York Now Flooded With Fake Stocks." The state's drive against stock swindlers is uncovering new and old forms of fraud, Attorney-General Ottinger announced today. "Bogus Magazine Solicitors Jailed." "Waterbury Woman is Gyped of $1200. Seeks charm for husband's love." "Bogus Priest Gets 8 to 10 Years for Swindling a Lawyer Out of $3,625 on a Forged Check." "Muscle Shoals Realty Boosters Work Public," and so on and on while the "gyps" wax rich and prosperous and the gullible public pays the bill.

WAPPING
Miss Ella Hitchcock of Meriden is spending the week end at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Franklin G. Wells.
The regular meeting of Wapping Grange No. 30 P. O. will be held Tuesday evening, at Wapping hall, and it is to be ladies night. The following committee will have charge of the entertainment, Mrs. Levi T. Dewey, Mrs. Arthur Sharp, Mrs. Alice Smith, Mrs. Mattie Preston, Mrs. Josephine Wetherell, Rose Stubenrauch, Nellie Stubenrauch, Mrs. Mary Nichols, Mrs. Mabel Newcomb, and Miss Kate M. Withrel.
Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Oats and four children moved away from Wilbur C. Hill's tenement, Friday night.
Two young men from East Hartford, in a Ford coupe, turned over just above Eugene Bentley's house. They were not seriously injured, and the car which landed on its top was righted again and proceeded on its own power.
Two other cars, one belonging to Walter S. Nevers and one to Louis Beebe of Manchester, ran off the bank.
Miss Pauline Thompson, who has been visiting Miss Marton E. Hills returned to her home in West Hartford last Friday.
Mrs. Mary Whitehead of Meriden, a cousin of Mrs. Mary Welles of Avery street, is spending a few weeks with her.

SPEAKING OF BUGGIES
"Now children," said the teacher, "tell me the opposite of misery."
"Happiness."
"And of sadness."
"Gladdness."
"And of woe."
"Gliddap."—Tit-Bits, London.

Unfortunately some of the most dangerous reading in the average newspaper today is to be found in the classified advertising column. Unless the management is very careful, there is almost sure to creep in advertisements which, if answered, are sure to lead the answerer into trouble and if followed up, are sure to result in loss of money. Newspapers are protected by a national investigating bureau which warns them against such fraudulent advertising, but the crook is keen to sense the situation and is always originating new forms of advertising and operations which will get by the censors.

70,000 Per.
As an indication to what extent these advertisements are read and answered, we have the statement of the Post Office Department in connection with a recent fraud order which was issued, that the response to a certain advertisement were being received at the rate of 70,000 a day and each one of these responses cost the public $3.50 and enriched the promoters to the same extent.

Harmless appearing advertisements for persons to direct envelopes at home bring first of all, a suggestion that the work can be done so much more rapidly and satisfactorily with an Imperial Fountain Pen, worth 50 cents, but which the philanthropic advertisers are willing to sell for $2.50. Cards to color, gloves and aprons to sew at home, and most vicious of all, the knitting machine fraud, all hold out to the poor, the crippled, the shut-in, the hope of money, to be made by home work, and invariably result in disappointment. The heart-ache and mental worry is had enough, but there is usually a financial obligation as well, and once a contract is signed the promoters are ruthless and unrelenting in their demand for their pound of flesh.

If—or when you find yourself hoodwinked by some cleverly worded advertisement and wonder how you are going to get out of it—just reach for the telephone and call 1468, the Manchester Chamber of Commerce.
We can't guarantee that we can always help you after you have signed the contract, but constant association and our connection with several national organizations certainly gives us a stronger hold on the situation than a private individual can hope to have.

Real Service.
Our service to you is free, and entirely without obligation on your part. Besides helping yourself by turning in your complaints to the Chamber, you help others to steer clear of the same pitfalls. The more frisky we discuss these things the sooner the "gyps" and the "con men" will learn that MANCHESTER, CONNECTICUT, is an unprofitable place for them to operate in.

STORY OF CREATION
Rapid City, N. D.—Chauncey Yellowbride, teacher at an Indian school in Rapid City, son of a Sioux chieftan, tells the old Sioux legend of creation. The Great Spirit made the earth and then molded man out of clay, then baked him in a fire. The first was too pale and the second was too black, so he threw them aside. The third was red and perfect so he put it in his own garden where it multiplied.

THEY NEVER KNEW THE GREAT AMERICAN NONESUCH

You never read a story like this before. And you may never read such a story, again. Maybe it's The Great American Love Story. Or it may be the world's greatest travelogue. It contains heart throb, melodrama, high adventure, sex appeal, fashion notes, advice to the lovelorn and just plain foolishness. In short, it's written

THE STORY OF EDGAR ALLAN POE (12)

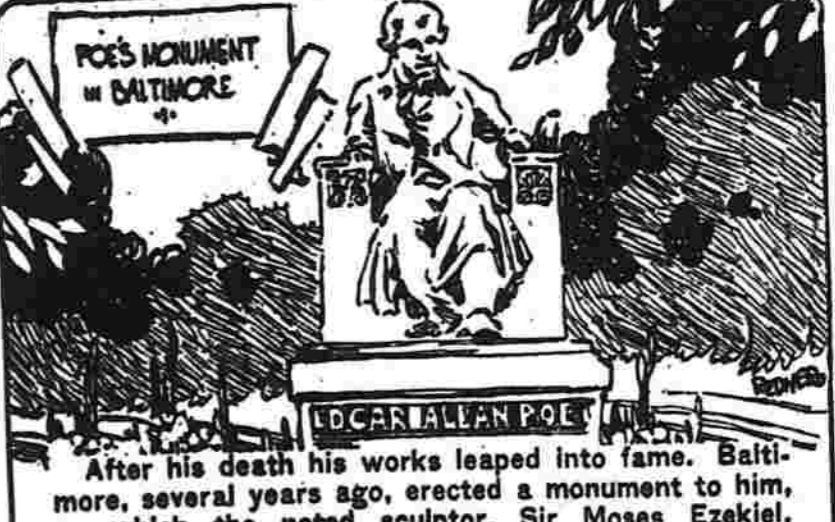

Poe set out, in the fall of 1849 for Baltimore. Here befell the tragedy that led to his death. He was found dazed in a ward voting place. It is believed he was a victim of a political gang, who drugged him and voted him as a "repeater" in several precincts.

He was removed to a hospital where hope of restoring life to his drug-shattered body was given up.

Poe died October 7, 1849. He was buried in Westminster churchyard, Baltimore, beside his grandfather, the soldier.

After his death his works leaped into fame. Baltimore, several years ago, erected a monument to him, on which the noted sculptor, Sir Moses Ezekiel, worked for ten years. Poe's face and his life have inspired several art masterpieces. His works have become immortal. (Next—"The Murders in the Rue Morgue")

Stirring Days of War Recalled By Connecticut Essay Entered In "Back To France" Contest

Indianapolis, Ind., July 26.—(Special).—The longing of a man to return to the scene of his greatest sacrifice is the story of Frank J. Cushner, 22 Grove street, Ansonia, Conn., a member of the 82nd Central Postal Directory, U. S. Marines, Sixth Regiment, U. S. Marines, who, after being sent to a hospital to recover from wounds received at Blanc Mont Ridge, returned to battle in answer to a call for all who were able to shoulder a gun. He was back in the lines only two days when he received a command to withdraw from the left side and lost an eye. That ended the war, so far as Cushner was concerned.

Unable to resume his pre-war occupation of electrical work which required good eyes, Cushner has given up and now is studying newspaper writing. He has been operated on a number of times in the government's attempt to cure his disability, and was discharged last November. Three weeks later he suffered a compound fracture of the left leg in an automobile accident. After it healed it was found necessary to reset it.

Today Cushner uses a cane and his one big hope is that he will be sufficiently recovered to make the great pilgrimage to France with the American Legion in September, 1927. In his contribution as a competitor in the France Convention Committee's "Back to France Essay Contest," Cushner tells why he wants to go. His essay has been accepted for publication, does not indicate whether it will be a winner, it has been designated as one of the best yet received.

The subject of the contest is "Why I want to go to France with the American Legion in 1927." The contest opened June 1 and will close Nov. 15, next, the date having been changed from September 15 due to urgent requests from the field. Three cash prizes have been donated by the Connecticut Legion which will be given to the winner, the runner-up and the third prize winner.

Cushner's essay, follows: "When a man is admitted to the hospital as a patient at Base Hospital No. 80, Beaune, France, under treatment for gunshot wounds in the last drive. The war was over. Where were the months of privation and hunger? Living on the damp ground upon a shelter-half with only that tent of blue, the sky for a cover, chilled and with less than half enough to eat? "After those varied and thrilling experiences my thoughts were only of home, the good, old U. S. A. Within a month I was at a base port and the sight of 'Old Glory' on a mast of a transport made my heart throb, throat choke and eyes dampen. It was these months of separation on foreign soil that aroused my yearning for home. "As the years went by and being a member of The American Legion, attending its meetings, many reminiscences of the war were revived, and there was born the desire to go back to the places that were haunted by my memory; to visit the battlefields where the division, of which I was a member, so gallantly advanced against a military foe who was so greatly feared. "There is Chateau-Thierry, Soissons, St. Mihiel, Blanc Mont Ridge and the graves of those who were among us once—dead now, but their memory will live forever. I want to visit madame if she still is living. She was so kind when we billeted in her little attic of her home, not only letting us take straw which made beds strewn up on the stone floor, but made us hot coffee and pommes de terres, a God send to famished soldiers. "Then there is every doughboy who has been to visit, but which the majority only heard of from others. "The opportunity has come through The American Legion which has done so much and will continue to do so long as there is an ex-service man living. If nothing happens, I am going to make the trip. It will be one that I never will forget. I will meet many of my former buddies whom I haven't seen since the day a shell exploded in front of my section, disabling several. "On to Paris was the slogan the Germans used in June, 1918, but they never reached there."

FRANK J. CUSHNER Formerly of the 82nd Co., Sixth Regiment, U. S. Marines, A. E. F.

CALLES MEETS CHURCH STRIKE WITH WARNING

carried flowers and crosses fashioned from evergreen to lay upon the shrine.

Many women of high station garbed themselves in mourning and cast aside their shoes as they made their way over the roads to the shrine.

Within the Basilica the pilgrims knelt before the shrine and offered vows to maintain their faith and their efforts to bring about a revocation of the government decree.

Temporary Altars.

The central altar was crowded all day long and many temporary altars were erected, all of them facing the central altar where the veiled statue of the virgin looked down over worshippers.

Although Mexico is accustomed to great religious demonstrations, Bradford, Eng., July 26.—Short skirts, low necks and the popularity of the automobile and radio are responsible for serious slumps in the British textile industry, manufacturers say. Thirty to forty per cent less material is needed for the modern dress of woman, and men are spending so much money on automobiles and radios that they cannot afford new clothes, it is claimed.

Jobyna's Engaged

A joke that guests at a California house party started just for the sake of amusement has turned into reality—Jobyna Ralston, leading lady for Harold Lloyd, is going to marry Richard Arlen, actor. Miss Ralston admits that the engagement didn't take place until after their friends had started talking about it in fun.

Church Denies Rebellion

The Catholic church is not fostering rebellion in its opposition to the government's decree dissolving religious orders and forbidding the teaching of religious doctrines in schools, according to a pastoral letter by the thirty-seven archbishops and bishops of Mexico, distributed widely all over Mexico and eagerly read in every Catholic home today.

Catholics are adjured to "try through all legal and peaceful means to attain the derogation of the anti-religious statutes."

"It would be a crime for us to tolerate such a situation," said the pastoral letter. "This legislation is an unheard-of offense—against divine rights. Our conduct in protesting is not rebellion. It is impossible to continue our sacred ministry under the conditions of the decree."

Priests to Retire

The letter announces the decision to suspend divine services and the priests will retire and the churches be left in the hands of the faithful. Catholic parents are warned to see to it that their children do not attend places of education where their faith is imperiled.

"Have faith in us, beloved sons, as we have faith in your unbreakable loyalty," continued the pastoral letter.

"Let us all have faith in God." Excommunication

"At times it seems as if the Divine Pilot were sleeping. But he always helps in the opportune moment to console us. But do not live a sterile life because of this confidence. Remember that Nineveh was saved from destruction by the prayer of penitents.

"Refrain from pleasures. "Try through specific means to secure the repeal of these laws."

The letter declares that excommunication may be the penalty of those who issue laws or decrees against the church, or who force ecclesiastics to appear before civil tribunals.

A joke that guests at a California house party started just for the sake of amusement has turned into reality—Jobyna Ralston, leading lady for Harold Lloyd, is going to marry Richard Arlen, actor. NEW SHAH STARTS MODERNIZING PERSIA

Teheran, Persia.—The modernization of Persia by the new ruler, Riza Shah Pahlava, has started. The government has decided upon establishing an air force. An order for ten planes has been ordered from a leading Dutch company. The new force is to be operated under the direction of Minister of War, who has already appointed as chief of the Air Force a Persian officer trained in France. The government also sent sixty cadets to France to be trained as pilots and observers.

The government already possesses an aerodrome and a few obsolescent planes. The old planes will be sold and new sheds built to accommodate the new fleet, which will be increased to fifty planes when the national exchequer permits. At the present time there are only thirty-four members of the Persian army capable of handling planes.

The ancient system of hanging criminals in the public squares will be abolished. In the future, when the necessary apparatus has been installed, the death sentences will be effected by electrocution, a method adopted from the United States.

Wireless will be installed in all parts of the country. A gigantic broadcasting station is now being erected near here and a receiving station has just been completed. Substations will be built over the country and the regular programs from London, Paris, Berlin and Madrid will be relayed to Persian listeners in addition to a national program.

The new Shah is understood to have drawn up an ambitious program, which includes building new electric railways, new national dress for men and women and even a new water system. This is to be presented to the parliament when the Treasury shows improvement.

5,000 MILES OF PAVED ROADS ON EAST-MIDDLE WEST TRIP

Circle Trip Takes Motorists Over Large Variety of Landscape—Hard Pavement All the Way.

Chicago, July 26.—A circle tour through eastern and middle western United States and a small portion of Canada, for more than 5,000 miles of all-paved highway is one of the most inviting tours in the country.

The route leads through practically every large city in the east and middle west, includes some of the most beautiful scenery in the country and allows the motorist to travel on paved highways the entire distance. Only in the case of temporary detour or road repairs will it be necessary for the motorist to get off a hard-surfaced road.

Leon A. Dickinson, manager of the touring bureau of Illinois Motorist Association, has planned the route from his own traveling experience and gives the following information:

Along Ocean Shore

"The first section of the trip, from New York to Boston, and then to Newburyport, Mass., is a never-ending delight to those who love the ocean. It enables one to visit dozens of the most famous and attractive shore resorts of the North Atlantic coast.

"The New England shore line district is replete with historic associations. Plymouth, with the nearby towns of Kingston, Duxbury and Marshfield, is a region especially dear to lovers of early American history because of the extremely old houses and relics of the Pilgrim Fathers that may be seen there. Of scarcely less interest to the amateur historian are Salem, with its witchcraft legends, and Gloucester, the picturesque old fishing town.

"Boston, with its suburbs, has many attractions. The Boston Common, the Bunker Hill Monument, the Old North and South Churches, Faneuil Hall, the scene of the Boston Tea Party, the Route of Paul Revere's Ride, Lexington and Concord, Washington Elm in Cambridge, the old burying ground on Tremont street, are but a few of the historic shrines that endear this region to Americans.

"Newburyport, in the extreme northeastern part of Massachusetts, has been selected as the point where this all-paved tour turns westward.

Through the Berkshires

"From Newburyport the road continues to the Hudson River, at Albany, and thence northward into the Adirondacks. This road, which is all excellent pavement, leads westward through the beautiful manufacturing cities of Poughkeepsie, Lawrence, Lowell and Binghamton, reaching the picturesque valley of the broad Connecticut River at Greenfield.

"Here begins one of the most beautiful drives to be found anywhere in the eastern states, the Mohawk Trail over Hoosac Mountain into the Berkshire Hills of western Massachusetts. From the west foot of this mountain the route turns southward to Pittsfield, and then west over another scenic mountain to Albany, capital of New York state, on the Hudson River.

"The trip north from Albany to Montreal by way of Saratoga, Lake Champlain and thence southwest to Syracuse, Malone, the Thousand Islands and Watertown is one that offers some of the finest lake, mountain and river scenery to be found anywhere in the east.

"A slight dip south and southwest from Syracuse to Watkins is well worth while, if only for the sake of viewing the famous Watkins Glen, one of the natural wonder spots of the Empire State. This is also the region of the Finger Lakes with many beautiful vistas that alone will justify this slight deviation from the more beaten path.

Along Lake Erie

"From Buffalo the route follows the southern shore of Lake Erie through Erie, Cleveland and Sandusky to Toledo and then north to Detroit.

"The road runs direct to Chicago by way of Jackson, Battle Creek, Kalamazoo, St. Joseph and Michigan City and provides excellent pavement, much of it new concrete.

"In order to secure maximum mileage of pavement the route has been laid out to run north from Chicago to Oshkosh, Wisconsin, Milwaukee and Fond du Lac, south again to Watertown, Lake Geneva and Beloit to a connection with the Lincoln highway at Dixon, Ill.

"The next section of the tour includes a trip down the Mississippi River valley, crossing the big stream into Iowa at Clinton, and back again into Illinois at Davenport. After visiting Springfield, capital of Illinois, and famous, historically, as the home of Abraham Lincoln, the tourist again crosses the Mississippi River into St. Louis.

"Since it is not possible to run very far in Missouri on continuous pavement, it becomes necessary to return at once to Illinois, where fine new concrete roads are to be found extending in all directions.

"Those in a hurry may follow the National Old Trails Road from the eastern edge of Indiana, the logical route eastward is the National Old Trails Road to Indianapolis, Richmond and Dayton straight through to Columbus, capital of Ohio.

"Here begins an extensive but exceedingly attractive detour southward to the Ohio River at Ironton, Ohio, then east to Charleston and south again through the wonderfully picturesque mountain region of southern West Virginia to a connection with the Lee Highway at Abingdon, Va. This place is located in the extreme southwestern section of Virginia, only about ten miles northeast of Bristol, on the Tennessee state line.

"From Abingdon on the Lee Highway is followed northeast through the beautiful valley that lies at the foot of the famous Blue Ridge. This road reaches the historic Shenandoah Valley Pike, an ancient toll road that is now a part of the state highway system of Virginia.

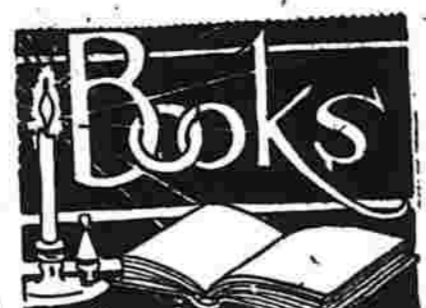

"Between Roanoke and Staunton the road passes over the famous Natural Bridge, one of the premier natural wonders of the country. Hot Springs and White Sulphur Springs, two well-known and fashionable resorts, are easily accessible by short side trips westward from Roanoke.

Virginia Caves

"Further on, between Staunton and Winchester, the tourist deviates from the main route of the tour to visit several wonderful caves, some of which rival the noted Mammoth Cave in Kentucky. The most interesting of these are Luray Caverns and Endless Caverns, both easily reached by short side trips eastward from the main road at Newmarket, Va.

"From Winchester to Washington, by Harper Ferry and Frederick the road passes through a section that figured very prominently in the history of the Civil War.

"On the last section of the tour, from Philadelphia to New York, it is recommended that the tourist deviate from the direct route of the Lincoln Highway for the purpose of visiting Atlantic City and the other popular beach resorts along the New Jersey coast. The stretch from Atlantic City to Lakewood formerly was mostly gravel, but now it is all modern pavement, thus making it a most desirable part of America's all-paved highway tour."

In my judgment it is the best book of its kind since Cooper wrote 'The Deerslayer,' and if you like this type of story I think you will enjoy 'The Black Hunter.'

This is from the publisher's note forwarding for review a copy of James Oliver Curwood's first historical novel, 'The Black Hunter,' (Cosmopolitan) just issued in book form.

Readers may differ as to their favorite historical novel. But certainly the latter part of the commendation is beyond cavil—"If you like this type of story, you will enjoy 'The Black Hunter.'"

James Oliver Curwood

Curwood has the good fortune to have been positioned for a perfectly definite position—like Harold Bell Wright, H. L. Mencken, olives, year-round cold baths and red haired girls. People do not like them just moderately well. Readers may be classified as those who like Curwood's type of story and those who do not. This notice will be of no interest to such as the latter. The former are numerous enough to make up the great majority of the newspaper public.

HEBRON

The Rev. T. D. Martin officiated at the funeral services of the late Mrs. Sarah Gillette, held in William at Avery and VanZandt establishments, on Friday at 2:30 p. m. Interment was in St. Peter's cemetery in Hebron.

Mrs. Edmund Horton and her son John have returned from a recent visit of a few days in Unionville and Hartford with relatives. Mr. Horton's nephew, Richard Lindé of Hartford, is spending the week with the Horton family here.

The American Legion boys have recently purchased a fine new electric light with battery connected which they use for lighting their room, also for dances at the hall.

An almost continual thunderstorm Thursday night and Friday morning brought a little moisture for dry fields and caused fuming among farmers who had hay cut. Another thunderstorm Friday afternoon set haymakers scurrying. There was just about rain enough to spoil the day for hay-making and not enough to do much good.

Benjamin H. Bissell, president of St. Peter's school, was called to New Haven on Thursday on business connected with the school.

There will be a chorus of twenty voices in the musical comedy, "The Church Fair," which is to be presented at the Hebron town hall, Friday evening, July 30th. It will begin at 8 o'clock, standard time. The singers are from Colchester, Gestechester and Hebron. Fancy articles, food and ice cream will be on sale at 7 o'clock. Proceeds are for the Congregational church.

Mr. and Mrs. Ames W. Sisson entertained on Wednesday Mr. and Mrs. Walter G. Davis of Hartford, also Mr. Davis' daughter and four children.

Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Ailing and two children have returned to their home in New Haven after a visit of a few days with Mr. and Mrs. N. C. Johnson. Mrs. Johnson and her children were visitors on Thursday at the home of relatives in East Hartford.

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Wells and son Leonard of East Hampton visited relatives here on Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. D. Arnold Kellogg of Saybrook visited at the home of Miss Caroline E. Kellogg on Wednesday.

The community meet not together as planned on Thursday evening with a large crowd of visitors on the park at the Center. Games were played, the baseball game took place as scheduled. Community singing was started but the whole proceeding was precipitately broken up at that stage by a sudden thunderstorm. This storm assumed the characteristics of a sand storm. There were vivid flashes of lightning and the wind blew down the paper lanterns with which the green was lighted. Clouds of sand and dirt were sifted by whirling winds. Very little rain fell. Thermometers through the day here had stood 97 in the shade. The storm brought a drop in temperature.

U. S. FRUIT GIVES BRITAIN WORRY

London—Great Britain imported more than 200,000,000 pounds of canned fruits and vegetables last year, so the National Food Canning Council is launching a campaign for boosting home products. British canners plan to triple their output this year.

14 KILLED AS JAP SHIP CRASHES CHINESE PIER.

Shanghai, July 26.—Fourteen persons were killed and drowned and scores injured at Wutung wharf today when the Japanese freighter, Taisho Maru, crashed into a pier while trying to avoid a Whang Poo junk. Hundreds of persons were on the pier when the Japanese steamer swung into it.

Zedeler Symphonic Quintet Artists Of The First Rank

The Zedeler Symphonic Quintet, to appear in a full evening's concert at Chautauqua has demonstrated conclusively that the rank and file of the American people thoroughly appreciate the music of the masters when it is correctly interpreted.

Nicholas Zedeler, distinguished cellist, former member of the New York Symphony and now of the Chicago Symphony, believed this at a time when few agreed with him. For years doubtful persons watched Zedeler and his splendid quintet. They marvelled at the fact that Zedeler represented an ideal in music and that he never stooped from his musical standards, no matter how great the temptation. Today, however, he has convinced all those who doubted him. Today his company is perhaps the most popular organization before the American public and strange as it may seem, this popularity comes from his mastery presentation of classical numbers. Mr. Zedeler does not depart from the requirements of the great composers, but correctly interprets their visions, moods and ideals.

In their ensemble numbers, the Zedelers employ two violins, a cello, a piano, and an especially constructed reed organ, which takes the place occupied by wind instruments they secure the fullest symphonic effects. In addition to the ensemble numbers are presented violin and cello solos, as well as two violins and cello. While to some, the word "classical" does not appeal the choice of classical numbers in the Zedeler program is such as to inspire everyone, whether or not a musical expert, or highly educated. The feature of the program are the vocal solos. Many of the instrumental numbers are preceded by illuminating explanations by Mr. Zedeler.

The Zedeler Quintet is composed of artists of the first rank, and with a personnel of the same high type surmounting that the Zedeler Quintet ranks with the greatest of the smaller orchestral organizations and approaches actual symphonic proportions in its musicianship and mastery appeal.

HUNT GOLD BY PLANE

Edmonton, Alberta—Two eight-ton Fokker airplanes from Cincinnati are to be used this summer to take men and materials into the interior of northern Alberta's barren lands where recent gold and platinum discoveries have aroused much interest.

BEGGAR'S STORE

London—A beggar's headquarters, where tramp outfits could be hired, was discovered the other day in West London. Attention was attracted to the place because a number of men would arrive daily, neatly dressed, and leave in shabby attire.

RADIO CHASES GLOOM

Washington.—Following the appeal of Secretary of Commerce Herbert Hoover, 331 radio sets and 100 receivers or head sets have been received. The outfits will be sent to isolated lighthouse stations.

"So you've quarreled with Charles Brown. What was the cause?"

"He proposed to me again last night."

"Where was the harm in that?"

"Well, I had accepted him the night before."—Northern Daily Telegraph.

SHOOTING AND SUICIDE IN BOSTON FAMILY ROW.

Boston, July 26.—A family feud, police said today, caused the shooting of Mrs. Mildred Cripps and the suicide of her step-father, John B. Dority. As Mrs. Cripps fell, probably fatally wounded, Dority fired at Mrs. Sarah Seavey, grandmother of Mrs. Cripps, but the bullet missed its mark. Dority then took his own life.

BRITISH STRIKE PROFITS U. S. SOFT COAL MINERS.

Washington, July 26.—The American bituminous coal industry is profiting by continuation of the British miners' strike.

Soft coal exports for the first six months of the year were about 2,000,000 tons heavier than in the same period of 1925, the bulk of the increase having taken place in May and June to England and markets normally served by British mines.

SMELLS BURGLAR

London.—A police dog led to the capture of a man caught in the act of robbing a newly built home at Kingston recently. The dog was out for a walk with his master, a constable. He rushed into the house, growling angrily, and the constable followed and found the man.

When the Manchester soldier boys returned from Camp Trumbull yesterday, they brought home with them the baseball championship of the 169th Infantry, C. N. G. It was the first time that a Manchester unit had won the regimental title in baseball. Company G was the winner and the Howitzer Company, the runner-up.

The final of the elimination competition at camp in baseball came as a surprise. Several games had been postponed because of weather, but rain and heat handicapped matters. However, on Friday afternoon and Saturday afternoon and evening play was resumed and the tourney completed.

The Howitzer Company won its opening game from the Service Company of Hartford by a 15 to 3 score and then triumphed in the battalion competition by whipping Company C of Willimantic, 4 to 1. In the meanwhile Company G drew a bye in its first game and then whipped the Company F of Hartford, 19 to 0 in the semi-finals.

Company G and the Howitzer Company then battled for the regimental championship and the beautiful silver loving cup which accompanied it. The game was waged Saturday evening. Company G was returned the victory, 8 to 1, although the contest was furiously fought for several innings.

A five-run rally in the fourth inning spelled defeat for Captain Dexter's boys. The Howitzer players, most of whom do not play regular ball, were unable to solve the delivery of Guido Georgetti, Company G's moundsman. The Italian youth whiffed fourteen batters. In the second, fourth and fifth frames, Georgetti struck out three batters. Howitzer hurled fine ball for the Howitzer Company but received ragged support. Mantelli led the batters with three hits in as many trips to the plate. One was a triple. McCavanaugh also poked out a triple.

After the game Colonel D. Gordon Hunter presented Captain Pete Partons of Company G with the silver loving cup and congratulated him on the victory.

COLLEGE HATTER

By ART CARLSON

WATCH THESE LADS.

Within the next two years or so you'll doubtless be hearing a great deal about two college sophomores, George Simpson and Douglas Graydon. Simpson, a sprinter, recently tied the world's scholastic record of 9.8 for the 100, running for East High of Columbus, O. College boys aren't doing much better. Simpson plans to enter Ohio State in the fall. He will be eligible for varsity competition in 1928.

Graydon tosses the javelin. In the recent national prep school carnival at Chicago Graydon, who hails from Little Rock, Ark., heaved the spear 199 feet 5 inches, a new scholastic mark. I know only two collegians to better that performance this season, Kuck of Kansas State Teachers' College and Northrup of Michigan. Graydon should add several feet to his efforts ere he gets his university diploma.

REMEMBER—
• Larry Brown of Penn? • Brown was a star middle-distance runner, especially formidable over the 880. In 1921 he hung up a world record of 2:12.2 for 1,000 yards. • The same year, while a member of that famous mile relay quartet composed of Brown, Rodgers, Ely and Maxam, he helped establish a world mark of 3:18.4 for the event. Brown is far right behind the great. • Ted Meredith in Penn athletic annuals.

If you're looking for a "dark-horse" in the coming regatta at Foughkeepsie, I don't believe you'll be far wrong by selecting Penn. The Quakers, after having caused little disturbance during the last few seasons, have quite a stellar-looking crew this year. In eight races to date the Spahn splashes have won six, falling only to Navy and Yale, two of the country's premier shells. True, Penn may not lead the field, but it should put up the hottest pace a Red and Blue boat has known in a long span.

INTRODUCING—
• Zora Cleveland, former star gragger at Indiana. Cleveland, halfback, played in the old days; in the days of revolving wedges, mass formations and when "guards back" was a net phrase of the quarter-back. Cleveland has followed the sportive trail down through the years. He's now athletic director at the same institution where he once shone as a player.

Within another week or two final will have been written to the collegiate careers of many athletes that have twinkled during the past few seasons. Such university known celebrities as Guthrie, Honser, Locke, Kennedy, Richardson, Dauber, Martin, Norton, Russell, Dye, Waters and Tibbetts, among others, will pass from the picture, but their deeds on track and field will not soon be forgotten.

When Lechnsky of Michigan won the 220 at the recent Big Ten jamboree, he accomplished a feat a Maize and Blue sprinter had been unable to put over for 22 seasons. Not since little Archie Hahn copied the furlong event at the 1903 get-together had Michigan placed a winner in the long dash. Lechnsky, by the way, added to his laurels by running a dead heat with his team-mate, Hester, in the 100 yard final the same day. It was the first time this season Hester had even been tied.

ANYTHING POSSIBLE IN NATIONAL'S RACE

Team That Beats the Pirates Will Win Is Jawn McGraw's Opinion.

New York, July 26.—The Giants have met the common enemy in the West and he is neither theirs, nor vice versa. In simpler words, they left New York on July 7 with a pennant chance and they are returning, nineteen days later with a pennant chance. John McGraw, who has studied the situation far more carefully than most, gives it up.

"Anything can happen in a race like this," says Mac. "To my mind the small advantage that the three leading teams have in the percentage table is more than offset by the fact that approximately three-fourths of their remaining games will be away from home. This is especially true of the Reds, already a bad road team, nor is it probable that the Cardinals can come close to duplicating their last swing through the East."

Nothing About Pirates
You will note that the Little Napoleon had nothing to say about the Pirates. Likely enough it is his opinion, and it most certainly is the opinion of his players, that the team which trims the Pirates will get all the money.

The Corsairs were not, when the Giants were in Pittsburgh, the impressive team that they should be. But they do carry a punch and lots of speed. With any kind of pitching at all they will be dangerous in every game from now on, because they have also a decided psychological advantage. They won last season and they know it is the history of the game that a new champion repeats. They haven't held the title long enough to get blasé about it. Thus they are sure to have both confidence and the will to win the coming battle through the stretch.

After staying on top most of the season, the Reds dropped back during their home stay. That is not calculated to improve their morale, especially with the memory of their last disastrous road trip in mind.

Hornaby Way Off
Hornaby is so far off form that his aspiring St. Louis team is laboring under a pronounced physical and mental handicap. If Hornaby by today were the Hornaby of 1925 or '24 or '23, or what you will, this writer would not have the slightest hesitancy in picking the Cardinals as the next champions, even in view of their past performance records of the last fifty years.

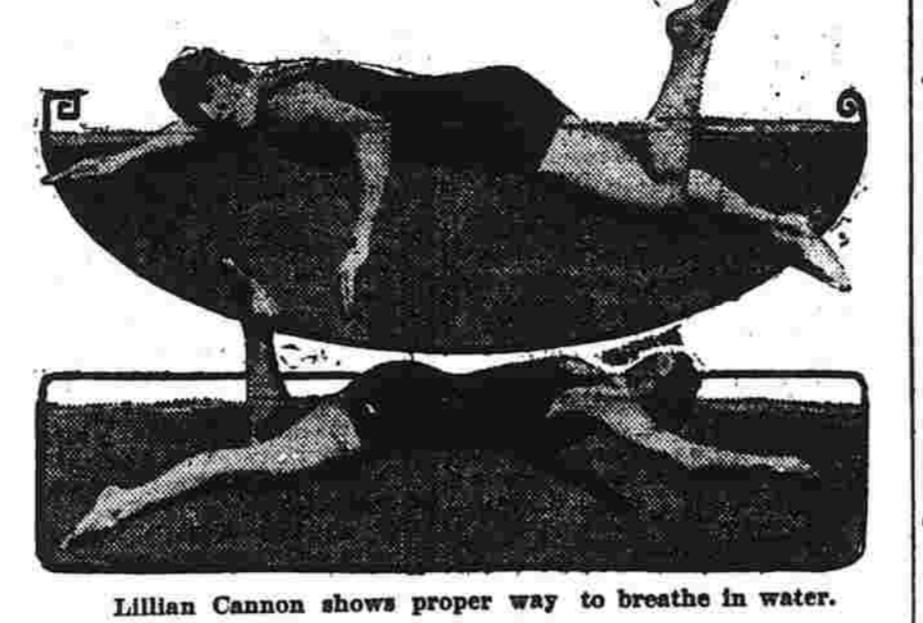

The Cubs scarcely figure. A good home stay by either the Giants or Robins would turn the trick, but neither have shown themselves capable of any protracted winning streak. So, we come back to the Pirates. They are making signs as if they mean to board the treasure ship again and it will take some real fighting to keep them off.

Scoring five runs in one inning, the Indians had little trouble in subduing the Browns, 7 to 4. Spurgeon got four hits.

Detroit massered the Senators, 14 to 4, Harry Hellmann leading the assault with four bingles.

HOW TO SWIM

by Lillian Cannon

Lillian Cannon shows proper way to breathe in water.

After one has the hang of the dog-paddle, the time to learn to breathe while swimming has arrived. When the head starts the downward stroke, close the mouth and hold the breath until the left hand goes forward.

When the left hand goes forward, exhale through the nose until the right hand is ready to go forward again. Then repeat the operation. Go slow at first and do it slowly until it becomes a habit.

SHAMROCKS SPLIT EVEN IN WEEK-END CONTESTS

Locals Trim Glastonbury But Lose to Groton; Errors Hurt the Team's Chances Yesterday.

The Shamrocks split even during the week-end games. They defeated East Glastonbury in a closely contested game by the score of two to one and lost to Groton on Sunday by the score of eight to two. The locals evened up with Glastonbury in the matter of hits each team having five but in the contest with Groton Manchester fell miserably making five to the home teams eleven. Two errors on the part of the locals helped to give Groton two of its tallies. The other six were gained by ten hits, an error, and a home run.

Go to Coventry Lake and Have Lots of Fun—Reward for Work on Diamond.
The baseball team of the local Trade School went on an outing to the Manchester Community camp at Coventry last Friday afternoon and evening.

The team had won twelve consecutive games, thereby establishing a record for the school, and due to their efforts had been promised an outing by the director of the school, Mr. Warren and the coach, John Ehmalian.

Upon their arrival at the camp there was a rush for swimming. Happy Connolly winning all honors by being the first to enter the water. An hour of swimming was greatly enjoyed, during which time many records were broken, Connolly holding first for long distance.

ROWING RACES ARE TOO LONG SAYS CARLSON

Expert Believes Four-Mile Intercollegiate Rowing Races Should Be Reduced a Mile.

BY ART CARLSON

"Are the four-mile college rowing races too long?" That question was put to me the other day. I believe they are. There's perhaps no athletic test that exacts as much from the competitor as rowing. It is one of the toughest grinds in sport. It's a grueling battle from start to finish—20 minutes of the hardest kind of athletic endeavor you might care to tackle.

A three-mile race is "plenty long enough." It's enough to decide one crew's superiority over another; to give an accurate decision on the relative merits of the contestants. It's easier on the oarsmen, making great but not too great demands on their systems, and furnishes plenty of entertainment for the spectators, better, I believe, than found in the longer race.

Princeton is one school that goes in strong for the shorter brush. Yale and Harvard, I understand, would like to have the Tigers join them in their annual clash and Princeton would likewise be royally welcomed at the big Foughkeepsie regatta. But the Tigers have time and again refused to send crews to these four-mile events.

Plans Ring Career
Sandi Esquivel, basketball and track star of the University of Texas for the last three seasons, has pugilistic ambitions. Sandi who has been active in amateur boxing circles in and around Dallas for six years, believes he can make good (incidentally, draw some cash, in the roped arena. Sandi is a welter-weight. He's never met defeat as a simon-pure.

Should the Texan really follow up his ring intentions and make good, he would prove somewhat of an exception. College boys, unlike in baseball, haven't, as a rule, got very far in professional boxing. For one thing, the sport hasn't enticed so very many of the campus stars. True, there have been a few, but only a few, generally speaking.

Sully Montgomery, remembered as a football great at little Centre College six or more seasons ago, has been in the ring several years without making much of an impression. Another, "Ike" Philbin of Michigan was working his way through school by fighting and was meeting with quite marked success until he ran into Tommy Freeman, crack Cleveland welter, last winter. It was a bad match. Freeman kayoed the collegian in short and decisive fashion.

Wayne "Bug" Munn, ex-Nebraska grid star, and former wrestling champion, twice tried the fistic game. He was a "flop" each time, a terrible one. And sprinkled here and there have been other campus idols that gave the sport a whiff, only to find the going a bit too rough and rocky.

Of course, Sandi Esquivel may prove an exception. I hope he does. He, at least, has a good amateur record behind him (if that counts for anything). But playing basketball and romping on the cinders is much different from exchanging wallops in the professional ring with coal-miners, lumberjacks and other tough 'uns.

Diamond Disputes Decided

On infield fly what are rights of runners to advance? When umpire rules that first and second or first, second and third occupied, with less than two out, the batsman is automatically retired. Due to the fact that major leagues once differed on this rule, it is confusing to some. The rights of runners to advance on an infield fly are the same as on any other fly ball that is caught or muffed. If ball is caught, runners must return to their bases to escape being retired. If muffed, they can run at their peril.

SIPPLES' HOMER WINS FOR SONS Local Man Poles Out Circuit Clout and Manchester Defeats Polish-Americans

Sipples' hitting combined with the fielding of Zwick, Robb and Lamprecht gave the Sons of Italy a one-run victory over the Polish-American team of Rockville yesterday afternoon. The locals and the home team were even in the matter of hits, each making seven, but breaks were with Manchester. Sipples poled out a homer in the fourth inning with a man on base and brought in two runs, enough to win the game for Manchester. Weber, pitching for Rockville, had held the locals up to this time with five hits. Manchester took on a new lease of life after this frame and held the home team scoreless.

German Star Hangs Up New Record by Running Half-Mile in 1.51 3/5

Dr. O. Peltzer, famous German middle distance runner, hung up a new world record for the half mile when he turned the event in 1.51 3/5 in the recent Amateur Athletic Association games at Stamford Bridge, London. It beat the old mark of 1.52 1-8 established in 1916 by Ted Meredith, former Penn star. Photo shows Peltzer crossing the finish line in his record-shattering run with D. G. A. Lowe, Britain's great Olympic ace, second.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

JOHN and FAY MILBURN buy a home of their own shortly after their baby girl is born and the advertising agency in which John is partner and copy writer lands a new contract.

Previous chapters told how John, a romantic individual, was fascinated on meeting NELL ORME, of whom PAT FORBES, a friend of John's, hints that she is having trouble with her husband.

NOEL and VERA BOYD, a young married couple, give a party and Vera shows an interest in John which he does not return, but which arouses Fay's jealousy. Noel Boyd later boasts of an arrangement with Vera whereby each leaves the other to do as he pleases.

Fay takes the baby to Washington to visit her parents, and during her absence John runs around a good deal with Pat Forbes, whose wild tendencies have caused some trouble between him and his wife, MARIAN.

An old friend of John's, DOROTHY FRANCIS, now a musical comedy star, comes to town, and the two eat together on several occasions. Although Dorothy's chief interest in John is the advice he can give her in regard to theatrical publicity, he has a hard time convincing several people who see them together that it is not an affair.

NATHANIEL GRAHAM, his partner, takes him to task and accuses him of "running around" and thus endangering the firm's reputation.

At the door she clung to him desperately in a long embrace.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
(The names and situations in this story are fictitious.)

CHAPTER XXIX

"HOLD ON, Nat," said John, raising his voice. "If by 'flashy looking actress' you mean Miss Francis, then you're talking about a girl who is a real artist, who is ambitious to make a great success and who used to be a friend of mine when I was in college. I don't know what you mean by 'running around,' but you might be interested to know that I've done nothing that I'd be ashamed to tell my wife. If people see me eating lunch with an actress and then immediately proceed to cook up a scandal about it, I can't help it. And I don't propose to let my actions be regulated by the interpretations your scandalized friends put on them."

John was angry, and he fixed Graham with a cold stare. The other, looking fixedly at the pencil he had in his hand, said, "Just the same, what you're doing isn't helping you any, and it isn't helping the firm any, either. I'll be glad when your wife gets home."

John started to make a heated reply, but Nat's words about his wife amused him and he laughed.

"Nat," he said, "I wonder if you realize how much like an old woman you're acting. Good Lord! . . . So you'll be glad to see Fay come home."

"I happen to know," Nat went on, ignoring the other's mockery, "that a new advertising agency is coming to town very shortly and they're going out after some of our business—especially our local stuff and our merchandising service clients."

"How did you know that?" John asked quickly.

"I found out over at the Chamber of Commerce. I joined the Chamber not long ago, and a friend of mine told me that these people have been writing for all kinds of information about the town and the business here."

"What's the name of this new outfit, Nat?"

"Kelly and Jones. I don't know anything else about them. But what I've been telling you is right in line with it all. Unless you mind our P's and Q's pretty well, this new outfit is going to be treading on our toes."

"If I lose any business," John said stubbornly, "it won't be because of what I do after office hours but what you and I do during office hours. You can put that in your pipe and smoke it, Nat," and he walked out of the room.

That afternoon Briggs informed him that a new artist was coming to work at the next morning.

"Graham hired him Saturday," Briggs explained. "Pretty good man, too. I've known him some time."

John went out, feeling added resentment against Nat Graham. It was . . . if Nat had decided to ignore him entirely in the conduct of the business, and he decided to bring the subject up the next time Nat had any more complaints to register.

Fay wrote daily and kept him informed as to Judith's activities. It seemed that she was making unalloyed noise and had acquired quite a vocabulary.

At times, reading Fay's letters, a powerful yearning would come upon him to see them both, and he felt self pity. On such occasions he would rise angrily from his chair and pace around the office, always winding up by inflicting all of Judith's latest bright sayings and tricks on Briggs, who listened with a patient grin.

He was surprised one afternoon to get a telephone call from Eleanor Mason, whom he had almost forgotten. It had been so long since he had seen her.

"Are you busy tomorrow evening?" she asked. "Now, don't say you are," she broke in before he could answer. "I want you to take me to a party. I'll tell you first, before someone else tells you, that you're filling in."

He raised an objection at first. There was his work. But under her persuasive arguments he yielded. Well, yes, he admitted finally, he thought he could make it.

He called for her in his Ford coupe and felt rather ashamed of its dingy appearance. "Have to get a decent looking car," he told himself.

She was glad to see him. "It's been a perfect age, John. How have

"I know it," she told him. "By the way, what time is it?"

"Eleven-thirty," he answered, glanced at his watch.

"A shame," she murmured apologetically. "to take you away from the party so soon. Never mind, I'll mix you a drink when we get inside."

He helped her out and she leaned on him heavily. A tall youth passed them and started up the path that led to John's old apartment. It was John saw, Geoffrey Blaby, the gawky son of the neighborhood gossip. There was recognition in the boy's eyes, but his awkward shyness probably kept him from speaking.

Once inside her apartment, Eleanor recovered something of her accustomed sprightliness and she moved quickly in and out of the room, gathering glasses and cracking ice, and presently was before him with a little silver tray bearing two frosted drinks.

"How will this go with your headache?" John asked accusingly, and she laughed.

"Oh, it will make it much better, I'm sure. Champagne is what makes it ache."

That was true enough, John agreed, and lifted his glass, which she clicked with her own. Then she sprawled gracefully on the heavily cushioned sofa, and proceeded leisurely to finish it.

"Have a cigaret?" She indicated a silver chest on a smacking stand.

"Thanks," John declined. "I'll have one of my own vulgar brand. How about you?"

"Oh, you might give me one of yours for a change. Something real masculine. Sit down."

"But I've got to run on," he protested. "Besides, your headache, you know."

"Oh, bother my headache. It's gone now, anyway."

"Look here," he said, "did you play a trick on me?"

She smiled. "Why, yes, since you ask," and at his accusing look she added, "I had you interested in John and I wanted you to myself. Do you mind?"

He looked at her for a moment as he would at a naughty child, then, shaking his head he sat down beside her and at once she moved over to him.

"Vera," she began shyly, "is still interested in you."

"Oh, bother Vera," he cried impatiently. "What's she got to do with it?"

"Why, what's the matter, John?"

"Nothing," he said, a little ashamed of his vehemence, "except that I'm a little tired of both of them. Noel, especially, tires me. As for Vera—"

Eleanor laid a hand on his arm. "And do you think I'm naughty," she asked, "making love like this to a married man?"

He looked at her, trying to appear stern, but she looked sarcastically. "Well, you've had experience before," thinking, as he spoke, of Pat Forbes.

She colored a little. "Oh, Pat," she said lightly, and shrugged. "Fill my glass, John."

He rose to do her bidding, and when he handed it back to her she drained it quickly and boldly put her arm around him.

"Look, my dear woman," he admonished her, "you know I'm a respectable married man."

She laughed. "Yes, but you're not working at it right now," she retorted and defiantly raised her lips in an offering.

Fay was in his mind—Fay and Judith—but common sense and conscience both were routed in the face of this easy temptation. He yielded, and grabbed her roughly to him.

"Wow," she exclaimed, disengaging herself. "A regular cave man!"

He laughed, and reached for her again, but she eluded him. "You play too rough," she said, and raised a warning finger.

He remained half an hour longer, then feeling a little annoyed at her sudden coquettishness, he left, despite her entreaties to stay longer.

At the door she clung to him desperately in a long embrace, and her last words to him as he pulled himself impatiently away floated down the stairs to him:

"Remember, John, you'll come back soon."

A WOMAN'S DAY ABROAD

Paris—I have just returned from the races—the most famous races in the world. But I did not see a horse—not a single horse.

It was the world-famous Grand Prix classic at Longchamps, the yearly race which attracts horse lovers the world over.

I repeat, I did not see a single horse. But, oh babies—as we French say, what clothes I did see!

Most people, anyway, go to the races to see clothes—and not horses. It seems that here in Paris the race track at Longchamps is only an excuse for wearing all the clothes and diamonds and agrettes that they wear when presented at court in England or at a White House reception at home.

It seems strangely like the French who refuse butter with bread, but serve it as an appetizer with pickled snails and crawfish, to choose a dusty race track whither to wear costumes which would grace a ballroom.

My gentle readers may be interested in my own costume for Longchamps before I launch into a description of that which draped the Queen of Spain.

I wore some brown obois coated with a rich layer of bois de rose mud and bluish dust. My tweed coat had a plaque of green grass spots and my hat had a cop dip where Pansy Herring had accidentally sat on it at lunch.

To be really truthful, I did not assemble this chic costume for the races, but for a picnic in the Bois de Boulogne.

We had just eaten the last sardine when the people began to go by.

We thought it was a fire and started following—by taxi. As I have said, one can ride 43 miles for a nickel, so we made no inquiries about cost, but merely circulated our voice-voles—used to follow the people.

And so we came to Longchamps. The reason we knew we were at Longchamps was because the taxi man held up his hands ten times and looked fierce, which meant that we had to pay 100 francs or he would call the gendarme.

To add insult to injury he took us to the hot poll gate and we had to walk back to the main entrance of nobility and mannequins, where we left our lunch basket, behind the hind legs of the horse of the leader of the gang which was all lined up to greet the King and Queen of Spain and the President and Premier of France.

So that's how I came to Longchamps in my own special costume. Now I'll say a word or so about some others.

THE BEAUTY DOCTOR

BY NINON.

Katherine Burke showing waistline exercises.

CONDITION—A waistline that measures more inches than it should.

DIAGNOSIS—You need to cut down on the amount of sweets and starches you consume, and you need specific exercises to reduce this part of your body.

TREATMENT—All bending and stretching exercises are helpful and tend to break down the fatty tissue. This one is particularly beneficial: Stand erect with the heels flat on the floor and the knees together. Then as you bend at the waistline reach as high as you can with one arm, and go as near to the floor as you can with the other, holding the photograph. Soon you'll find all your belts too large.

Good Nature and Good Health

This is the second of a series of three articles on the dangers of water supply contamination.

By HUGH S. CUMMING
Surgeon General U. S. Public Health Service.

Stream and lake pollution has steadily increased in the United States in the last few years in direct ratio to our rapidly increasing population. Now it is extremely difficult to secure a supply of water that is safe to drink without being purified.

In many cases the contamination is becoming so great that if there should be any material increase, it will no longer be possible to purify the water except at a prohibitive cost.

Controllable.

Fortunately many of the factors responsible for stream pollution are controllable, tending to make an otherwise bad situation more hopeful. The object of these articles is to point out the need for serious consideration of this problem or a steadily increasing importance, a problem which the public health service has for years studied in great detail.

At the present time, the subject of stream pollution is engaging the studios attention of many scientists. These workers are seeking diligently to reduce the contamination of natural water courses. So far, progress in combating the conditions responsible for pollution have been slow, because many people fail to realize how the problem affects them individually.

Pollution Limit.

Officers of state and municipal governments are constantly seeking accurate information on this subject so that appropriate action may be taken. There is a limit to the amount of pollution a given body of water may receive and the water still be capable of being rendered safe for domestic use at an expense which is not prohibitive.

The effects of stream pollution vary within wide limits. The volume and character of the sewage entering the water course are important factors in determining the extent of pollution.

The size, character and use to which streams are put are likewise concerned in estimating the effects of contamination.

Fortunately, the principal evil effect of pollution are now well known. Were this not true it would be more difficult to check it at its sources.

QUEER QUIRKS OF NATURE

By AUSTIN H. CLARK
Curator, U. S. National Museum.

A surprise is in store for you the first time you meet with this butterfly alive. The first one I ever met saw me first and flew at me, making as it came a loud crackling noise. That was in Venezuela in a grove of cocopal palms, on the trunks of which this butterfly, which is mottled gray in color, delights to perch, head downward.

Quite a number of butterflies, including several of our common ones, are noise makers, but usually the noise they make is a rather faint grating or rustling sound, more rarely a sharp crackle.

This butterfly makes the loudest noise of all. In Brazil there is a bird with a sharp beak and abnormally big mouth called the Suruga, which is very partial to this butterfly and is at once attracted by its whip-like crackle. It forsakes the branch on which perhaps it has been perching half an hour without having given the smallest sign of life and darts off after the whip-cracker with great eagerness.

This bird frequently alights upon a tree trembling under the blows of the axe, the vibration of the leaves caused by the strokes of the axe deceiving it into imagining that butterflies are fitting about.

The "Whip-Cracker." His noise invites death.

Oh, For a Dip in the Arctic!

"It isn't the humidity," explains this polar bear at London's zoo, "I'm used to that. It's the heat. What wouldn't I give for a good game of tag with a seal on a cool iceberg!"

HER OWN WAY

By WAY. A GIRL OF TODAY

JEM SMITH

"Do you think that Lela will want to see us, Judy?" Joan asked.

"I think, my dear, she will be glad to see anyone that can help her just now. But whether she wants to see us or not, you and I must find out if she has that tell-tale page of the register."

At my mention of the hotel register, Joan's tears drenched her eyes afresh.

"Do you know Lela's address?" I asked.

"No, but I am sure that they have it at The Circle."

"Let us get a taxi then."

"My car is here, Judy. We can take that."

"No, my dear. We must not take your car. It is very probable that there are a number of reporters hanging around Barry Cornwall's place and it would cause a lot of talk if your expensive car rolled up in front of it."

"I have an idea that we will even have to dismiss the taxi or keep it waiting for us on some side street a block or two from his home and walk over. I expect we will find it is a boarding house or an apartment."

When we arrived at The Circle we encountered a number of curious pines from those who had already come for an afternoon dance.

Very ostentatiously the man who owned the place came forward.

"Have you heard the news about Barry, Miss Meredith?" he asked in the most obsequious manner.

I answered before Joan could say anything.

"Miss Meredith saw in the morning papers the deplorable accident that happened to Mr. Cornwall. She asked me to come over here with her to get the address of his home."

"Yes, I wanted to see if I could help."

"Miss Meredith wants to know if she can be of any help at this time. I put in before she could say anything."

I knew that if she told this man that we knew that Barry was married he would keep the address from her as long as he could, hoping to get to Lela first and with her permission carry out some blackmailing scheme.

The moment he spoke my surprise was correct, for in his most oily tone he said:

"I don't think I have Barry Cornwall's address here, but if you will come back this evening I believe I can give it to you."

TOMORROW: Joan Visits Lela.

NOT MUTUAL

"If you're not feeling well, why don't you go to your doctor? Can't you trust him?"

"Oh, yes, I can trust him, but he's not altogether willing to trust me."

Boy's Dog His Teacher

by Olive Roberts Barton.

If you happened to read the account of how a certain eastern city tried to get rid of its surplus dogs, there cannot be much room for doubt that you laughed like the rest of the world.

This city offered a bounty of a dollar for every dog brought to the pound, expecting the boys, of course, to lead in the brave hunt. Instantly every cellar and garage and shed that boasted a boy in the family began to fill up with strange new tenants of all sizes, colors and kinds, and ice boxes were mysteriously depleted in same said family.

Some of the boys worked to pay the bounty of their new responsibilities. In other words, they organized themselves into a first-aid society for hungry and stray dogs and the pound man nearly lost his job.

A boy was offered a bicycle on his birthday if he would get rid of his dog. He wouldn't. His birthday came and went and there was no bicycle. Then one sad day his dog was killed. The boy was inconsolable. "But think," said his mother, "now you may have your bicycle."

"Please don't talk that way," said the boy. "I never want to see a bicycle. He has stuck to it to date. Nothing can replace his dog."

"Love me, love my dog," is a boy's never changing motto. There is a natural affinity between them that is ages old.

A PUZZLE A DAY

A reckless motorist drove his automobile into a fast mail train, and derailed two cars. Bags of mail were torn, and letters were scattered over the countryside. The mail clerks gathered 2340 of these letters and sorted them into 4 bags. The first and largest bag contained 21 more letters than the second, 30 more than the third, and 73 more than the fourth. By checking their records the mail clerks discovered that the same number of letters were missing as were contained in the largest bag. How many letters were missing?

Decorated Cars, Clowns, Policemen and Cowboys in Costume—Prizes Awarded.

The children's parade advertising Chautauqua did not materialize to a very substantial showing on Saturday evening although a considerable number of children were on the street to see it. The day was saved however by the North End playground boys and girls who turned out with much enthusiasm, having taken over Director Washburn's car and trimmed it fore and aft with crepe paper and properly labeling it with a placard "North End Playground." Each boy and girl was in costume—clowns, policemen, cowboys and numerous other get-ups. The parade was headed by Arthur Scranton on his pony who by the way was awarded first prize in the form of a baseball glove. He was followed by the others on foot while the decorated car with additional Chautauqua posters brought up the rear. Arnold Clark was awarded second prize for the most complete outfit as a cowboy. His award was a baseball bat. The third prize went to a Camp Fire Girl dressed as an Indian Squaw. After traversing Main street as far as the South Methodist church the parade was dismissed.

OUR SOLDIER BOYS ARE HOME AGAIN

Tanned by Sun, With Health Greatly Improved They Go Back to Civilian Life.

Greatly benefited by their two weeks of outdoor exercise, Manchester's soldier boys who came back yesterday from Camp Trumbull, Niantic, today returned to civilian life. Minus their olive drab uniforms and garbed in their work clothes, the men commenced their daily routine. The majority were back in the mills at work and could not help but notice the contrast. Instead of the cool breeze which floated across the camp from the Sound the men were fanned by the air sent through the rooms by blowers.

Nevertheless, it was a happy group of soldiers which returned from camp. They had enjoyed their fifteen days of military duty and the good times which accompanied it. But the two weeks was sufficient for the majority of them. They were glad to get back to their homes.

Uneventful Trip The trip home from Camp Trumbull was uneventful. As the train passed through the various stations on its return journey, bystanders looked on with interest. They saw a happy group of bhaki singing merrily. The only drawback of the day was the weather. In the morning, when the final reveille of the encampment was sounded at 4 o'clock in the morning, it was raining hard but the soldiers lived up to their reputation. They were undismayed. The regiment arose promptly. Donning slickers, the soldiers went about their work as the regimental band marched down the main street playing, "Show Me the Way to Home."

First Trainload The first trainload of soldiers bearing the two Manchester units left Niantic at 7:17 o'clock and arrived in Manchester after several stops, shortly after ten o'clock. The Manchester troops went directly to the armory where the men were paid off. The two Manchester companies received over $5,000.

Tonight, the members of Company G will don their military uniforms again in a report to the armory for drill. Second Lieutenant Edgar M. Thompson will be in charge tonight and for the next two weeks because Captain Herbert H. Bissell and First Lieutenant Thos. J. Quish are stationed at camp doing special work.

Camp Notes The last night in camp resulted in but little sleep for any of the soldier boys. No sooner did a man try to retire than someone would upset the cot. Practically the entire regiment stayed up all night.

Corporal Fitzpatrick of the Howitzer Company was much incensed over his bunk being upset and so was the squad in his tent. But this only made his tormentors more eager to pester him. About one o'clock in the morning a group gathered about his tent. One crept forward to the edge of the tent, reached under and upset the bunk. He was off like a flash. An observer from behind a tent first heard a oath and then a second later saw eight soldier boys emerge from the tent clad only in B. V. D.'s and armed with long clubs. It was an odd and intensely amusing, that is for those who were in a safe position to watch the proceedings. Across the open camp field they raced after the night marauders. A few minutes later the party returned unsuccessful in its attempt to catch the disturbers. However, Corporal Fitzpatrick's tent was not bothered again that night.

The Howitzer Company got quite a kick out of initiating The Herald reporter who during the two weeks found abundant opportunities to write jokes and queer happenings about the men. Although the reporter was not caught until the last night in camp, he was nevertheless given his dose of medicine. And, furthermore he got a double dose. First he was arrested by the Howitzer Company and put in the guard house by that company when it was on guard. It was a frame-up to put one over on the correspondent and worked to perfection. Later the prisoner was marched to the Niantic River where he was given a free ducking under a barrage of crabs and egs.
