MRS. MILLS' SISTER IS NEW KEY WITNESS

Mrs. Tennyson Gives Facts to Simpson Which He Says "Finish" New Brunswick Murder Mystery.

New Brunswick, N. J., Aug. 5.—The "mystery woman" who Senator Alexander Simpson, in charge of the investigation, hopes will solve the Hall-Mills murder mystery, was identified today as Mrs. Augusta Tennyson, sister of the slain choir singer, Mrs. Eleanor R. Mills.

It was learned from a reliable source that Mrs. Tennyson is the woman who called at Senator Simpson's offices in Jersey City yesterday and provided new clues to the double murder which, Simpson said, may "break the case" within 48 hours.

Positive Identification.

Mrs. Tennyson's evidence, it is said on good authority, consists of positive identification of two persons she knows were eyewitnesses to the slaying under the crabapple tree on the Phillips farm, near here.

Following his interview with Mrs. Tennyson, Senator Simpson announced that four warrants will be issued if her story is under investigation. Her detectives are checking the story today.

At his Jersey City offices, Simpson announced today that Ralph V. Gorsline, vestryman in the fashionable church of which the Rev. Edward W. Hall was pastor, and Nellie Russell, singer in the choir, were arrested immediately, although warrants had been issued for both.

This statement apparently discounted previous reports that Gorsline had disappeared. Mrs. Russell went to work in New York today as usual.

CASE "FINISHED"

Complete if New Witness' Story Is True, Says Simpson.

Somerville, N. J., Aug. 5.—Special Prosecutor Alexander Simpson has obtained warrants for the arrest of Ralph V. Gorsline, vestryman and choir singer in the New Brunswick church of which the Rev. Edward W. Hall was pastor, and Mrs. Nellie Russell, negress.

Gorsline is charged, with being an accessory after the fact to the murder of the clergyman and Mrs. Eleanor Mills. Mrs. Russell is regarded as a material witness.

Both warrants were issued last night. Gorsline was reported to be at the home of a friend in New Brunswick. He could not be found there, however, and early today his whereabouts were unknown.

Mrs. Russell waited for a while at her home for state troopers to come and arrest her, having been advised that a warrant had been issued for her. Later she took a train for New York, where she is employed. No attempt was made to arrest her, despite Senator Simpson's declaration that he would ask she be put under $15,000 bail.

"I know positively that Mrs. Hall did not commit this crime," said Mrs. Russell before leaving for New York. "I have a very good reason."

In Vicinity.

The authorities are understood to believe that Gorsline was in the vicinity of the old Phillips farm where the Rev. Hall and Mrs. Mills were murdered, on the night of the crime. Senator Simpson said he would demand that Gorsline be held without bail. He said he would agree to Mrs. Russell being released on the $15,000 bond.

Mrs. Russell has figured in the case ever since she came forward to deny the story of Mrs. Jane Gibson, "pig woman." Mrs. Russell declared that Mrs. Gibson was at her house at the time she told authorities she was on the old Phillips farm, where she said, she saw Mrs. Hall bending over the bodies of the slain clergyman and choir singer.

A patrolman reported the violation and investigation disclosed the car was registered to Judge Heady.

SMITH KNEW OF BIG INSULL GIFT

Had Mentioned It in Campaign Speeches, He Tells Reed in Hearing.

Chicago, Aug. 5.—The $125,000 cash gift of Samuel Insull, public utility czar of the mid-west, to the campaign fund of Frank L. Smith, Republican senatorial nominee, was known to the candidate and became an issue in his campaign, Smith testified today before the Senate committee at its inquiry into the Illinois primary.

Smith revealed that in a speech in Springfield, Ill., in the midst of the campaign, he told the voters that Insull had contributed "after taking $35,000,000 in utility reductions, that was his business." This Insull gift, along with other contributions from public utility interests which made a grand total of $206,000 were given to the Smith fund. It was shown, while he served as chairman of the Illinois Commerce Commission.

Smith on Stand.

Col. Smith was the first witness. Chairman Reed questioned him about his statement in which Smith declared improper relations with the public utilities of the state and declared he had reduced their rates generally while chairman of the commerce commission. Reed ruled the explanation would be placed in the record of the hearing.

"Did you know directly or indirectly that Mr. Insull had made contributions to your campaign?" Reed inquired.

"Not directly," Smith replied. "Was indirectly then?"

"Yes, but my information was only indirect," Smith explained.

The suit was filed here June 26 last when Judge Samuel E. Shull of the Common Pleas Court granted a subpoena on Mrs. Child, returnable on the fourth Monday of September next.

The Childs were married in August, 1916.

The police declare that the incident was not an anti-foreign demonstration but was merely the protest of residents who were annoyed because the tourists had disturbed their sleep.

NEW TOBACCO SELLING PLAN SCORES A HIT

Today's Inscription Auction at Hartford Put $198,000 in Hands of Growers; To Be Repeated.

Hartford, Aug. 5.—The first inscription sales of the Connecticut Valley Tobacco Growers Association held here today, yielded a total of $198,248.94 to members of the association, and its officers had on hand at the end of the sales the sum of $49,562.33, or one-fourth the total bid, the rest of the money to be paid within thirty days.

The largest sum of money involved in a single sale today was $17,938.46 which was bid by John Berger & Sons, of Cincinnati, Ohio, and Julius Marquette, of New York. Lot No. 39, one of New York, 1925 short seconds tobacco, weighing 27,551 pounds. The South Windsor Warehouse Company packed the tobacco. The lot was divided between the two bidders.

Another Bigger Sale.

Following the sale, J. W. Alsop, president of the association, announced that the directors "are so gratified at the success of the sale and with the co-operation of the buyers that another inscription sale will be attempted immediately after Labor Day with five times as much tobacco offered, of all grades, mixed and sorted."

The nation's largest tobacco firms were represented and many prominent tobacco dealers and brokers attended to observe the operation of the inscription sales, which closely followed the methods used in Amsterdam, Holland, for public tobacco auctions.

One Fourth Down.

As soon as a bid was awarded, the bidder paid down twenty-five per cent with the balance to be paid in thirty days. Growers and salesmen who watched the bidding agreed that prices, especially for the 1925 crop, were surprisingly good.

Percival R. Lowe, a New York broker who was awarded many of the lots, was acting for various buyers who were not identified except by serial numbers assigned to Lowe's name.

Philo T. Platt, of Newtown, state commissioner of agriculture, and John E. Luddy, of Windsor, were in charge of examination of bids, while Joseph W. Alsop, of Avon, president of the association, announced awards.

With the two crops being moved from the crowded warehouses and with real money coming in, the tension of the situation in which the association has recently found itself was vastly relieved.

HARTFORD NEGROES IN PROTEST MEETING

Resent Newspaper Drives as Discriminating Unfairly On People of Their Race.

Hartford, Aug. 5.—Four hundred Negroes, representing all the Negro churches in the city, met at the Union Baptist church last night and adopted what they termed a "declaration of rights," which was in effect a plea for equal opportunity.

The meeting was held as a protest against local newspaper drives against sections of the city largely occupied by colored people and which the protecting Negroes described as the result of race prejudice, which some of their speakers declared to be more intense in Hartford than in Georgia. Discrimination against clubs and social activities of Negroes was charged. "The black man fills his flask from the white man's barrel," said S. M. Jenkins, secretary of the North End branch of the Y. M. C. A.

New York, Aug. 5.—A drive against "prescription bootlegging" in this city had reached its climax today with the indictment of twenty-seven doctors, thirty druggists, sixteen whiskey agents and four drug corporations by the federal grand jury for conspiracy to violate the national prohibition act.

It is alleged that the whiskey agents paid the doctors $100 a book for prescriptions filled out with fictitious names, causing the withdrawal by druggists last year of 500,000 gallons of whiskey more than the quantity for which legal prescriptions had been issued.

The indicted men will be arraigned next week.

The patrolman protested that he had not taken anything from the envelope containing the money. It transpired, however, that Crocker had left a fountain pen in a pearl street speakeasy. In the barrel of the pen were found two $500 bills. The patrolman is locked up, charged with grand larceny.

WADSWORTH OUT FOR 18TH REPEAL

New York Senator Declares Dry Article Clashes With Constitution.

New York, Aug. 5.—United States Senator James W. Wadsworth Jr., of New York is definitely on record as being in favor of a repeal of the prohibition amendment and modification of the Volstead law.

Wadsworth, who comes up for re-election next fall, opened his campaign last night at a dinner tendered to him here by the Republican Business Men, Inc., with a speech attacking the dry law.

He declared that the prohibition amendment was out of harmony with the remainder of the federal constitution and that temperance could be promoted better by control of the liquor traffic than by an unsuccessful effort to enforce total abstinence.

Scorns Pussyfooting.

Asserting that "the time and the issue will not tolerate pussyfooting," Senator Wadsworth demanded repeal of the prohibition amendment, which he characterized as a "sumptuary law," and declared that the failure of enforcement was due to the fact that the law did not appeal to the public conscience. This present attempt at enforcement were worse than unsuccessful, he said, and caused in the general public a contempt for law.

"Forget-Me-Not Day" Gets Endorsement of President

Washington, Aug. 5.—President Coolidge today endorsed the annual "forget-me-not day" of the disabled American veterans on September 25, the event of the eighth anniversary of the commencement of the Meuse-Argonne offensive. In a message to Brig. Gen. John V. Clinch, national commander of the organization, the President said: "The annual forget-me-not observance of the disabled American veterans is particularly deserving of the most sympathetic attitude on the part of the public. The government is endeavoring in every possible way to alleviate the sufferings of those for whom the war still endures. Yet, there are certain phases of this great problem in which outside agencies may be of vital assistance. The disabled American veterans has proved one of the efficacious auxiliaries in this case."

COOLIDGE STAY AT OLD HOME BRIEF; TOO SAD

Toy Windmill Made by Lost Son Whirls at Gate; President and Wife Visit at Graves of Loved Ones.

Plymouth, Vt., Aug. 5.—A rudely fashioned wooden windmill is revolving slowly this morning at the corner post of the garden fence just across the road from the Coolidge homestead. Back of this toy lies the eternal story of mother love and suffering.

The little windmill was fashioned by Calvin Coolidge, Jr., younger son of the President, when last he summered at the home of his grandfather here. He had first set it on its vantage point on the fence post and proudly displayed its working to his mother.

And now on every visit to the farm, the toy is restored to its place by Mrs. Coolidge with a quiet ceremony that is almost ritualistic. A stone's throw away in the hillside burial ground the boy is buried, dead just two years and a month.

It was primarily to visit the grave of their son and that of the President's father that Mr. and Mrs. Coolidge returned to Plymouth. This morning, soon after breakfast, they walked down the road and placed new flowers on the graves in the family burial plot.

This little cross-roads hamlet offers varying emotions to the President. Three years ago, in the family parlor, his father swore him in as chief magistrate of both Canada, under dramatic circumstances.

Won't Linger There.

When next he returned to his boyhood home it was to bring the body of his sixteen-year-old son. Two more visits followed, both of which he feared his father was dying. And then last March he returned to bury the old colonel in a building now storm.

These conflicting memories prevented the possibility of a prolonged stay at the Coolidge birthplace. It is possible Mr. and Mrs. Coolidge will return to their Adirondack camp in time for church services on Sunday. Certainly they will leave for White Pines by Monday or Tuesday.

CONSTANZO KILLED IN A PISTOL DUEL

Orange Road Tragedy Solved by Waterbury Detective; Slayer Held in New York.

Waterbury, Aug. 5.—Largely through the efforts of Roland Alling county detective here, the mystery of the killing of John Constanzo, of Waterbury, in Orange on July 17 has been solved. Alling and Coroner Mix went to New York this afternoon to interview one Calo Dierano, under arrest there.

Constanzo and Dierano, according to Waterbury police, fought a pistol duel on the Orange road through alive but wounded.

The two men had been bitter enemies. Police here believe they were the heads of a "white slave" ring. Police believe Constanzo waited on the Orange road for Dierano.

Detective Alling picked up clues to the affair here and traced them to New York.

MURDERED YOUTH WAS N. Y. BAD MAN

New Haven, Aug. 5.—Robert De Meliu, of Jackson Heights, New York, was the man whose dead body was found in Wallingford yesterday, according to a statement issued here this afternoon by Coroner E.H. Mix. He was traced through the discovery of an automobile which is now being held by police here.

The coroner's statement says that De Meliu was a chauffeur in New York and was known to the police there as "a bootlegger and a gunman." He was known as "the Dixie Kid." De Meliu at one time lived at 102 Sherman avenue, Astoria, Long Island, and was arrested at Great Neck, L. I., August 17, 1925, and after a trial was acquitted.

Previous to his death he had been living with his wife in Jackson Heights.

In State Tuesday.

De Meliu, in Connecticut on Tuesday, "was driving a Cadillac car, and had his coat off," the coroner's statement says. He was slain in his car, his body was placed in the lot at Wallingford, and his car was driven to Potter Road, North Haven, where it was found.

"A young man driving to North Haven from the City Market found the car. He failed to report it until 6 p. m. yesterday. The car is now in our custody and is in New Haven."

Grill Trio in New York.

New York, Aug. 5.—Three men, their names kept secret by police, were being grilled at police headquarters here today in connection with an old feud between whiskey and narcotic runners. The men are alleged to know something of the slaying of Robert De Meliu, alias "the Dixie Kid."

"The Dixie Kid" was killed after a cocaine runner was slain and his automobile made his funeral pyre near Great Neck, Long Island, in February, 1925. The slaying of the kid was reported to be a gesture of vengeance by associates of the cocaine runner.

The present investigation, according to police, may uncover a smuggling ring with a nationwide territory.

It was stated in the resolution that the "period of watchful waiting was over."

DRIFT TO EARLY SETTLEMENT IS FELT IN MEXICO

Sub-Surface Tendency Is in Direction of a Compromise—22 Priests Accept Government's Rulings.

Mexico City, Aug. 5.—Though portents of peace are lacking today in the controversy between the government and the Catholic church, there is nevertheless a distinct undercurrent of opinion which seems to anticipate an early settlement.

While on the surface both sides are claiming victory and are announcing that there will be no concessions, beneath the surface and in a quiet way it is understood that avenues of settlement are being explored.

If the government would make a statement that its regulations are not directed to the suppression of the church, it is probable that the Catholic episcopate would then see its way clear to accept the regulations, with both sides agreeing that there has been a misunderstanding of motives.

No Disorder.

Meanwhile order prevails generally and the tension is greatly lessened. The economic boycott is still more or less effective, but according to the government it is not effective enough to cause serious difficulties.

Jose Perez, patriarch of the Schismatic Catholic church, was attacked by three unidentified men while performing duties in his office at Corpus Christi church. He beat off his assailants and captured one of them, who later made his escape. Efforts to hold services in the Schismatic church have brought interruptions and disorders in the congregation and two police have been placed on duty there.

While there have been some disorders in the provinces it has been difficult to determine how serious these disorders have been. Reports that three were killed in torreon riots are still unconfirmed.

From Guadalupe some reports that six persons were killed, fourteen injured and 200 arrested in rioting there, but these reports also lack official confirmation.

Swindlers Active.

Several forms of ingenious swindling have developed out of the religious conflict, with women as the principal victims. One of the favorite tricks is for swindlers to waylay women wearing jewels with crosses and figures of the saints attached. The swindlers, posing as government agents, announce to the women that they are under arrest for wearing sacred emblems of a religious belief and then when their victims are thoroughly frightened they pretend sympathy and declare that the women may go but that they will have to confiscate the jewels and turn them into police headquarters. The police have given warning to the public against such swindling schemes.

Church House Cleanings.

The government is taking advantage of its period of control of the churches thoroughly to disinfect them. The majority of the edifices abandoned by the clergy are very ancient. Some of them, three and four centuries old. The public health department declares that the churches have long needed a thorough cleaning. The beautiful though badly ventilated, Cathedral has been closed for cleaning before being reopened for the public.

The government announced that twenty-two catholic priests have registered in accordance with the new regulations, thus indicating their willingness to abide by these rules.

Pastor Backs Calles.

Rev. Dima Anguiano, pastor of a Catholic church in Alvarado, Vera Cruz, has telegraphed to the government his willingness to abide by the regulations and support the government. It was announced. President Calles immediately ordered that the church of Rev. Anguiano be returned to his control.

Rejects Peru Offer.

It was announced that President Calles has abruptly rejected mediation efforts by President Leguia of Peru.

The Mexican constitution is not a special law, but a fundamental code which I am obliged and decided to make respected, without fear of interdicts or supernatural punishments." President Calles wrote in rejecting the proffered mediation.

"If God is the supreme significance of goodness in individuals and nations I don't believe he is on the side of those who for more than a century have provoked interior calamities, international invasions, intrigues and intransigency of conscience." President Calles continues.

The reply of President Calles, while couched in diplomatic terms, made it plain that he did not consider the religious controversy to be any concern of Peru, for he stated that he would prefer to consider the appeal from President Leguia as a personal communication, not a national one.

The American settlement would be taken up shortly afterwards but not until the London pact is ratified and not until the American congressional elections are over, he said.

CHICAGO SUFFERS FROM EXCESSIVE HUMIDITY

Chicago, Aug. 5.—The heat blanket which has extended over the Middle West the last two days causing four deaths in Chicago and a number of deaths in other cities, gave little promise of a let-up today, according to the weather bureau here.

Excessive humidity prevails. The air hangs like a pall with barely a perceptible movement.

FINE DECORATIONS AT 'THE RAINBOW'

Interior Colors in Keeping With Name—Gala Opening Planned Tonight.

With the opening tonight of Frank Pinney's new seaside inn, the "Rainbow," Manchester will be presented with something quite new, distinctive in the way of entertainment facilities, and something that is certain to attract a steady patronage both from passing tourists and local people as well.

Pinney has certainly done a wonderful job in converting the old New England House property in Bolton into one of the most attractive places for dining and dancing that can be found for miles around. Taking the beautiful location at the top of Bolton Hill to start with, Pinney has remodeled the old hotel building and built on an addition to provide for a large dining room, put in new equipment throughout, erect a beautiful big dance pavilion and arranged everything possible for the pleasure and convenience of his guests.

The Furnishings. In no small part the charm and attractiveness of the place is due to the character of the furnishings inside. The whole arrangement and decorative scheme in the new dining room has been done by the Keith Furniture Company under the personal direction of G. E. Keith, who has created an effect of exceptional beauty and distinctiveness.

Furnishing a place of this kind is quite a job in itself, and of a somewhat unusual nature, but the plan has been developed here in excellent good taste, and carries out very effectively the idea embodied in the name "Rainbow." Color has been used profusely, in a manner that is novel and bizarre, but worked out very harmoniously.

Against this pleasant, neutral background the tables and chairs appear in deep blue, set off with a touch of yellow in the trimmings, and green against the white colonial exterior. The draperies of natural colored net are edged with silk ribbons giving a faint touch of all the rainbow colors.

The room is ell-shaped, and the blue tables are many interesting sizes and shapes, scattered around attractively. The cool blue tones down very pleasantly the bright flood of light from the many windows. By night, orange-yellow frosted bulbs cast a bright glow over the room.

Altogether, it's a dining room that will be well remembered for its uniqueness and charm and it does credit to the facilities of the Keith Furniture Company who arranged it.

All the dishes, crockery, and glassware have likewise been supplied through the Keith Furniture Company as agent—as well as the kitchen equipment, including a large hotel type of range and all the kitchen furnishings—these items all having been specially selected for the purpose. With a matter of ten dozen folding chairs for the dance hall and various miscellaneous items, Pinney's place represents quite a sizeable job of furnishing altogether. It has all been done against time, too, in preparing for the formal opening tonight, and is not yet complete in accordance with final plans, but it is a very satisfactory job nevertheless. The new "Rainbow" is a delightful innovation—and it thoroughly deserves inspection.

The dance pavilion which is located just east of the hotel will be one of the best dance palaces in the state. A remarkably fine floor has been built, and the open windows that completely surround the big floor assure a wonderful breeze on the hottest night.

For tonight's opening Pinney has secured an extraordinary cabaret attraction. The Merba Sisters, exponents of song and dance will be present to entertain. The dance orchestra tonight, and for the rest of the season will be the Peerless of Willimantic.

Lost His Nerve

His wife's leap from the 18th floor of a Miami hotel was half-fulfillment of a 7-year-old suicide pact, Baron Michael Royce-Garrett, penniless Russian, told Miami police. He lost nerve to join her in the death rendezvous, he said.

How Old Is Ann? Fifteen, and She's Clever!

Yes, right there under the bed is where Ann hid the bandits "safely" away.

New York, Aug. 5.—Ann Schechter, 15, was alone with her 10-year-old sister in the third-floor Schechter flat when the three bandits burst in the door.

Two of the bandits were wounded. They had tried to hold up a truck driver, and the driver had a gun which he used to good effect.

It was but a moment before Ann comprehended. "Under the bed!" she commanded.

"If the dicks come, don't give us away!" pleaded the bandits as they hid.

The dicks came. They knocked. Ann went to the door.

"Anybody hiding here?" one asked.

"No, sir, not a soul," said Ann. But she nodded her head excitedly, and winked.

"I winked both eyes," laughs Ann. "I never could wink just one of them to save my life."

"There isn't much more to tell than that."

In walked the detectives. A few moments later, out walked both the detectives and the bandits.

"It sure was a lot of fun!" says Ann.

BIGGER, BETTER GIFTS AT THE COUNTRY STORE

State Theater Offers Unusually Fine Entertainment Program This Evening.

Manager Jack Sanson of the State theater is going to make good his threat to give away bigger and better presents than ever at his weekly "Country Store" feature tonight, judging from the display of goods in one of the windows in the State building.

Every Thursday night the State is crowded for this "Country Store" attraction. Wonderful presents are given to the persons holding the lucky tickets. Every person buying an admission ticket to the State theater show gets a "Country Store" coupon free. Many market baskets full of groceries are given away in addition to such handsome gifts as living room chairs, floor lamps, aluminum ware, traveling bags and others too numerous to list here.

Tonight's picture program will be one of the best double feature bills ever presented here. Johnny Hines, the cleverest comedian on the screen will be seen in his latest laugh-getter, "The Brown Derby."

The dramatic hit of the year, on the screen, is Rex Beach's "The Goose Woman." An excellent cast plays this wonderful Rex Beach story, and Connie Bennett, the most willowy, and attractive flapper on the screen, plays her first serious role, and she's wonderful in the part.

Of course there will be screen shorts the news reels and comedies. It's a real big show Manager Sanson is serving tonight.

emanating from the Peruvian government, which as a foreign government could not interfere with the domestic affairs of Mexico.

Laguais "Misinformed." President Calles said that evidently the Peruvian president had been misinformed as to the exact status of the situation in Mexico or otherwise he would have "instantly conceded the Mexican government's position to be correct."

President Calles in his communication, which was timed to arrive just before the date of enforcement of the new religious regulations, declared that he felt it his duty as a Latin-American to appeal to President Calles to incline towards a friendly settlement, thus ending the state which approaches that of an interdict and "avoiding calamities worse than war."

NAMING OF LUSH REVIVES MEMORIES

Old Timers Remember Him as Manager of Rockville in Olden Days.

The news that Billy Lush has been named to succeed Gene Sheridan as pilot of the Hartford Club of the Eastern League is being received with unusual interest by Manchester fans, especially the old-timers. For it was none other than Billy Lush who managed the Rockville baseball team at the time of the great rivalry between that city and Manchester.

And it was that same Lush who called his team off the field that memorable day at the Flower street diamond when the Manchester coach put Holland, the colored pitcher, into the box in the fifth inning with Rockville leading 3 to 2. Lush absolutely refused to allow his charges to play against Manchester while a colored man was pitching.

Manchester contended that Holland should twirl, but Billie Lush was insistent and ordered his team to prepare for the trip back to Rockville. Finally Manchester decided it was unfair to bring a crowd to the ball park—there were over 3,000 present—and not give them a game. Collins went in for Manchester, and Lush's players returned to the field. Rockville won the game.

Lush was not particularly successful as a manager when he was with the Rockville aggregation. He was fortunate in having a clever ball team to work with, but frequently he showed poor judgment. Eddie Collins, famous big league infielder, played shortstop for Rockville under Lush.

Manchester Girls Marriageable Between 21-27, Records Say

Manchester young men and women who are contemplating marriage today, it was discovered that they had better check up to see that they are not outgrowing the marrying age, else they may be a trifle late and thus become passengers on the so-called Old Maid-Bachelor bandwagon. After delving into vital statistics at the Hall of Records today, it was discovered that the male population of the town seek their brides between the ages of 21 and 27 while the opposite sex find a mate at an earlier stage of life, between 18 and 25. Of course there are men and women marrying at younger and older ages but these figures are the average.

Some Figures.
There have been 106 marriages in Manchester during the first half of the year. Of this list only one man under twenty years of age was included. He is nineteen. There has also only been one who has sought a mate at the age of twenty. But, beginning with an average of ten at the age of twenty-one, the list continues on an average of eight until the age of twenty-eight is reached. Here it comes to a halt.

Girls Marry Earlier.
Girls marry earlier in life, however. Three were married at seventeen; seven at eighteen; seven at nineteen; and nine at twenty. After the age of twenty-five is passed, however, the marriage take a big slump.

As usual, June, the so-called "Month of Brides" took the lead in marriages for the first half of the year. The month-by-month report follows: January 16, February 7, March 4, April 16, May 20, and June 23.

Eleven girls married men older than themselves. The remaining ninety-five secured younger mates. Here is a list of the ages of the men and women who have married during the first half of 1926 arranged on a scale of ages, with the latter appearing first:

Men: 19-1, 20-1, 21-10, 22-11, 23-8, 24-4, 25-5, 26-7, 27-7, 28-3, 29-2, 30-2, 31-6, 32-1, 33-4, 34-2, 35-3, 37-1, 38-2, 39-1, 43-1, 47-1, 51-1, 52-1, 53-1, 56-1.
Women: 17-3, 18-7, 19-7, 20-9, 21-9, 22-8, 23-7, 24-6, 25-8, 26-1, 27-1, 28-1, 29-2, 30-4, 31-2, 32-1, 33-2, 35-1, 37-1, 38-2, 42-1, 43-1, 45-1, 55-1.

The Births.
There were 221 births in Manchester during January, February, March, April, May and June. Among these were eight still births and three pairs of twins. Odd to report, the births were very consistent. An average of over thirty-five were born each month. The record shows January 36, February 39, March 39, April 38, May 34 and June 35.

While there were an unusually large number of additions to Manchester's population there were a small number of deaths. The books have 86 deaths recorded against the 221 births and 108 marriages. This makes a net gain of 135 to be added to the census of the town or an average gain of well over 250 persons per year in population.

The death report revealed that the most occurred in the spring. It follows: January 14, February 16, March 23, April 23, May 20 and June 10.

PREACHERS NAMED FOR CENTER CHURCH

Combined Services for Summer Months Proves a Popular Innovation.

Rev. Joseph Cooper, pastor of the South Methodist church today announced the speakers who will preach at the Center Congregational church during the present month of united worship. This is the first time in the history of Manchester that the town has had united worship on this scale. However, it has been used in many other towns and cities several times.

Rev. Charles E. Spaulding, Ph. D., pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church in New London and also dean of the Willimantic Epworth League Institute, will preach Sunday.

On August 15, Rev. Cooper will occupy the pulpit. The following Sunday, August 22, Rev. Albert Legg, pastor of the First Methodist church of Ithaca, New York, will be the speaker.

Rev. Coper will preach again on August 28. He had expected to secure another preacher for either the 15th or 28th but arrangements could not be completed. Therefore Rev. Cooper will preach two of the four Sunday morning sermons. The regular Sunday school session and Sunday evening service at the South Methodist church will be conducted regardless of the united services in the morning. They will, of course, be in the South End church.

Well Attended. Rev. Cooper is very well pleased with the attendance at the united services during the past month while he has been on his annual vacation. He adds that it is even larger than he found attending services in Brookline, Mass., where three churches united for worship. Close to 500 persons went to the South End church every Sunday last month to worship and it is expected that the services at the Center church this month will be no exception.

OLDEST CONGREGATIONAL MINISTER DIES IN CONN.

Burlington, Aug. 5.—Said to have been the oldest active Congregational minister in the United States, Rev. John Webster Wheeler, pastor of the First church here, died last night after a long illness. Last January he rescued his daughter from a fire in his home, suffering serious impairment of health from exposure and over exertion. He was born in Ridgefield, this state, but passed most of his adult life in New York state parishes. He was born in October, 1841.

ALL BUT ELEPHANTS IN THIS PARADE

No Hippopotamus Either But Almost Everything Else Was There.

It looked yesterday as though Barum's circus had descended on the West Side playground. All that was missing were the tents and the elephants but the rest of the animals were there. Seventy-five children had entered their pets in a show that was conducted by the playgrounds of the South End.

Four hundred spectators were present to watch the show. It started with a parade around the race track and at the head of the parade walked a dignified cop. He was Edward Kayan and his uniform was just the same as that of any other cop except for the fact that it was just a little bit smaller. Officer Kayan kept order along the line of march, however, and failed to succumb to the languishing looks cast at him by numerous little girls who stood beside the track. No. Officer Kayan remained solemn and dignified throughout the whole affair.

Rabbit and Turtle. The fabled race between the hare and tortoise, or turtle, could have been re-enacted yesterday for there were both a turtle and a hare in the contest. The boy with the hare was loath to let his pet loose and even though the owner of the turtle was willing, the race couldn't come off for the reason that there were too many bloodthirsty dogs around. In the Parade. In the parade were pigeons, dogs, cats, guinea pigs, a turtle, rabbits, goldfish, squirrels and a monkey. The total number of the pets reached 100 and there was plenty of noise while they were congregated before the judges.

In the judging, first prize for the prettiest pet was awarded to Edith Brown, who appeared with a black Pomeranian dog, its coat brushed so that it shone like jet. It was easily the most beautiful entry in the contest and the decision of the judges was unanimous.

The best trained pet proved to be Edward Smith's white Siamese dog, an animal that could do nearly as many tricks as are listed in the catalogue. Although there were others who could do tricks, the Siamese topped them all.

Guinea Pigs. Sidney Leggett and Albert Eagleson vied with each other for the oddest pet prize. Both had pens of guinea pigs and the judges decided that both should have an equal award.

Prizes given were a pencil box, a silver pencil and jack-knives. Mrs. George Hunt, Mrs. Julia Sheridan and Mrs. Henry Haef's were the judges.

TIMES SQUARE OASES RAIDED IN "CLEANUP"

New York, Aug. 5.—Following a conference of police department and federal officials at which it was decided that "Broadway must be cleaned up," a series of raids were made on speakeasies in the Times Square district early today.

Forty prohibition agents and detectives took part in the raids. Twelve men and one woman, alleged proprietors of a dozen places visited, were arrested. Liquor valued at $30,000 was seized.

SEVEN RUNS IN ONE FRAME BUT WALT WINS OUT

Washington, Aug. 4.—It's rather unusual for a big league pitcher to be nipped for seven runs in one inning without being yanked out of the box. And it's perhaps even more out of the ordinary to win the hit after having taken such a lacing.

That's just what Walter Johnson, dean of major league gunners, experienced in a game against Detroit the other day. After getting off to a seven-run lead in the first two frames, things looked comparatively soft and rosy for Sir Walter.

In the fourth, however, Cobb's boys rocked Johnson for seven tallies, knotting the score. "Barney" weathered the gale, though, finally winning, 10-7.

QUEBEC VILLAGE NEAR LINE ABOUT DESTROYED

Quebec, Aug. 5.—Eighty houses of a total of ninety-two were destroyed early today when fire almost completely razed the village of St. Come de Kannebec. The village is in Beauce county and is known to automobilists from the United States as it is on the Levis-Jackman highway, ten miles from the Maine border and 72 miles below this city.

CHANNEL SWIMMERS.

It is an interesting and perhaps somewhat puzzling fact that no athletic event in more than a year, not excepting world series baseball, nor the tennis contests in which Helen Wills has engaged nor Yale-Harvard boat races nor big university football games, has brought to this newspaper office so many telephone inquiries as did the attempt of Clarabelle Barrett to swim the English Channel.

It is inexplicable, this sudden and extraordinary interest, both on the part of natatory experts and of the public, in the conquest of the Channel. It is not as if the stunt were a new one. Men, and women too, for that matter, have been battling the tricky currents of that obdurate bit of water for years, attracting but little attention, comparatively. Now, all at once, the eyes of half the world seem to be centered on Cape Gris Nez and Dover and upon the colonies of ambitious channel fighters gathered there.

Perhaps it is because people in general are just beginning to realize what a tremendous amount of courage, hardihood and determination are called for by the undertaking. Perhaps it is just a fad. Meantime the Herald is playing no favorites among the numerous aspirants for the distinction of being the first woman to make the swim, and it feels, along with everybody else, that Miss Barrett deserved to win—rejoicing, also, in the news that she is to have opportunity to make another try. But it is nevertheless, naturally, particularly interested in the forthcoming attempt of Miss Cannon because she is the entrant of the Newspaper Enterprise Association, of which the Herald is a member. Just the same we'll root our horns for the winner, whoever she may be—if any.

SPENT WATER.

Solemnly, as a gourmet eats a perfect dinner, the New Haven Journal-Courier rolls under its tongue the circumstances of Negro slavery revealed in another "life" of William Lloyd Garrison, finding extraordinary relish for the dead-and-gone history of a dead-and-gone institution that has had no supporters for substantially a life time. And it will not be only the Journal-Courier that will display its familiarity with ante-bellum conditions in America, in this same connection.

But what good is it, this discussion of a closed incident, when the freed Negro, neglected by everybody but the politicians who notice him for a day or two every couple of years, presents an ever fresh and every unsolved problem to which men had much better apply their minds than to the dusty details of his one-time physical enslavement. Nobody can use a dog whip on a Negro nowadays and nobody can sell him like a horse, to be sure. But aside from that and the generally blundering efforts of a tiny handful of "Negro lovers," which are generally toward ruining him, what has ever been done for or about the Negro?

It is a ridiculous thing to say that he has been provided with equal opportunity to the white man in America. He has not, either economically, socially or politically. He has been used and exploited—and neglected. The poorest way in the world to manifest an interest in the Negro question is to be forever poring over the history of that question as it was in 1855 and forever forgetting that to lift him out of slavery and thereafter do nothing worth while about him was a fairly poor service. The Garrisons, the Sumners and the rest saw but a very little way into the real Negro problem. They are water that has long ago run under the wheel. You can grind no grist with it.

INTERLOCKING.

Completely aside from the merits of the Mexican controversy as involving a particular religious faith, it is interesting to note the position taken by some commentators that for the Mexican government to seize church property, even under strictly constitutional warrant, is for it to engage in an act of robbery against its people.

Is it not a fact that the people of Mexico, almost as a unit, have by the application of the proceeds of their industry created the wealth of church property in question? And is it not also a fact that the republic of Mexico, which has undertaken to take the property, is made up almost altogether of these same individuals who have contributed to the creation of the seized wealth? Is not the situation, then, somewhat like this: Two organizations exist, with separate purposes, separate charters, different sets of officers, but substantially the same membership. One seizes the property of the other, supported by the formal law. The despoiled organization protests that it is being robbed and it has many sympathizers.

But whether or not its protest is justifiable, is the robbery actual or is it only technical? The Mexican people, organized as a Mexican republic, have seized the property of the Mexican people organized as a church. Is not this more or less the case—and rather more than less? All this has not the slightest bearing on the ethical, moral or religious merits of the struggle. But it does seem to us to have some bearing on the extent of the damage done—if any.

NO CRIME.

The naval court of inquiry into the Lake Denmark disaster, quite naturally and no doubt justifiably in the circumstances, decides that it cannot conscientiously hold any one responsible for the calamitous series of explosions at the naval ammunition depot which destroyed many millions in property and a large number of human lives. Then it proceeds with a series of recommendations of steps to be taken to prevent a recurrence of such a catastrophe.

There is not one of the ten separate recommendations—ranging all the way from more lightning rods and the grounding of metallic parts of magazine buildings to the establishment of new ammunition dumps at remote points—which is not a good one. In fact there is not one of them which is not perfectly obvious—and ought to have been obvious to anybody without the terrible lesson of the tragedy.

It is, however, no crime to be stupid. And it was certainly not to be expected that a board of naval officers would have the temerity to arraign the navy department for gross ignorance or for the indifference to peril that was born of that ignorance.

The country has paid half a hundred million dollars and a lot of good lives for a lesson in common sense which, it is sincerely to be hoped, the navy and the army alike will take to heart.

TWO KINDS OF DEBTS.

The French government paid into the Federal Reserve bank at New York for United States Treasury account, this week, the sum of ten million dollars. This was by way of meeting six months' interest on France's debt to the United States for surplus military supplies bought after the war.

In announcing the payment of the interest the acting secretary of the treasury, G. B. Winston, who is permitting himself to become rather conspicuous in Mr. Mellon's absence, took occasion to call attention to the fact that if both Congress and the French parliament had ratified the debt funding pact France would only have had to pay $9,000,000 this year instead of having another ten million dollar interest payment to make, the total year's interest being $20,000,000 on the war supplies debt alone.

There seems to be a sort of implication in this remark that the French are extraordinarily blind to their own interests in not accepting the opportunity to shoulder off onto the next generation all the war obligation that it possibly can.

It is extremely doubtful that a people so astute in money matters as the French do not appreciate the situation to the full. It is just possible, however, that they prefer to pay the higher rate, rather than to pool that debt with others for pretended liquidation through an agreement that they cannot see their way clear to discharge. There is a very sharp line drawn in the French mind between such debts as this one for surplus war supplies and those contracted for the actual carrying on of the conflict itself. It is not a certainty, yet, that even Americans will not sooner or later come to something like the same point of view.

FULLER "STANDS BY."

Governor Fuller has wiped some of the dirt from the heroic figure of "Massachusetts, there she stands!" by refusing to yield to the maudlin urge of 150,000 sympathizers with cold blooded mercenary murder who begged him to spare the lives of the three Waltham car barn killers. All of the 150,000 who can vote will undoubtedly take a whack at Governor Fuller at the polls the first time they get a chance. But the sacrifice on the executive's part is probably less than would appear at first glance, for inasmuch as he is neither crook nor grafter nor abettor of graft and crookedness, probably none of them would vote for him in any event. Meantime it looks as if the miraculous would happen and the law of the Bay State against homicide would actually be enforced, in one case at least, to the letter.

IN NEW YORK

New York, Aug. 5.—See-sawing up and down Broadway, I did see such a horde of medicine men, tricksters and fakirs that, methinks, all the Main Streets of America must be well rid of them this year. . . . And just as we used to gather on the corner of Main Street, so now do the drifting crowds of Broadway choke the highways about Times Square to listen to the hypnotic ballyhoo. . . . Painless dentists, herb doctors, hair tonic vendors and all their motley brethren seem suddenly to have discovered that the "pickings" are far easier among the "city slickers" than the "yokels". . . . Within a single evening, I am told, the more clever of these gentry gather to themselves from $100 to $500. And this in "wise" New York. . . . And with them have come all the hawkers of the midway. Slimy salesmen of dirty French pictures making whispered offers of barter. "All the latest popular songs for twenty-five cents, one-quarter of a dollar!"

So this is Broadway! But few, indeed, are the "personalities" to be seen along Broadway. . . . Broadway wanders the sandy lanes of Long Beach, Long Branch, and Long Neck. . . . So, see-sawing up and down the Long Beach Strand, I did see the "one-show-a-year-man," George White, who has a bungalow perch- ing upon the top of a seashore hotel. . . . And the rent thereof would be considered a fine yearly salary by most folk. . . . Just a few years ago White was doing trick steps in a basement cabaret. . . . Then he took to producing musical shows.

Saw half the beach trying to get a peep at Harry Thaw in a bathing suit. . . . Half the beach means about 60,000 people. . . . His arrival is signaled by whispers. . . . Within a few moments there is small panic. . . . Does Harry mind being trailed about? He does not! At least not outwardly. . . . On the contrary he seems to expand under the attention he attracts. . . . And at Mamaroneck I did see Ethel Barrymore in "sports," most Junoesque and looking tanned and younger. . . . Mamaroneck, Great Neck and Long Branch are the places to be if you would see more "first nights" than Broadway may boast. . . . And here you will find the "celebrities." . . . Spent most of stage fame, dressed in whites in the theater lobby; Win- chell Smith, the playwright, in golf togs; Violet Heming, Blanche Ring, half of Broadway. . . .

As for Broadway, itself—mostly strangers drifting aimlessly about. Pointing at this and that. . . . Fanning themselves with straw hats and looking tired and uncomfortable. . . . But they have to see it. GILBERT SWAN.

GIMME Hal Cochran's DAILY POEM

Baby waddles up to dad, an' climbs upon his knee. Bein' held makes baby glad; she's happy as kin be. Finds that father's feelin' fine, so then the child will shout, "Gimme penny, will ya dad?" And father shells right out.

Son, who's sixteen years or so, pays dad a call, downtown. Father always seems to know just why he's called around. Chats about a thing or two, and then relies on luck. Springs the same ol' "gimme" gag—and father's out a buck. Grow-up sister satters dad anyway, when he comes home at night. She knows how to handle him, and get him feelin' right. Then, when father spreads a smile, she begs a dollar new hat. "Gimme just ten dollars, pop." And father pays for that. All the kids have had their turn. The old man rests at ease. Gosh, he'd rather give to them, than listen to them tease. "Gimme! Gimme!" all day long, but what kin father say? He knows that what the kids don't get his wife will, grow-up sister satters dad anyway.

Stewart's WASHINGTON LETTERS

BY CHARLES P. STEWART

Washington, Aug. 5.—The tariff is a dull subject, but we shall be hearing a great deal about it before long. Congress refuses to inflate agriculture. Therefore agriculture proposes to defate everything else.

It is the corn belt's fight. The corn belt is largely Republican. Republicans are supposed to believe in a protective tariff. Consequently when prices of the corn belt's products slumped after the war, and almost all other products stayed high, most of the tariff wall, the corn belt did not demand that the wall be torn down.

Their Plan First Instead, it demanded the equivalent of a protective tariff for itself—some scheme to hold the prices of farm products up to the level of the prices the farmers have to pay for everything except what they themselves raise.

It took the form of the McNary-Haugen bill, designed to provide artificial price control by the marketing of all farm products through a governmentally created corporation or board.

The bill's backers said frankly that that was what they wanted—or tariff reduction. Being believers in a high protective tariff they did not begin with a reduction demand. They offered their own plan first, but if it was refused, then they would call for reduction and call very loudly indeed.

At two successive sessions of congress, the corn belt's relief measure has been up for consideration, and both times congress has turned it down.

Lower Other Prices Now corn belt senators and representatives have pretty generally decided it is time to fulfill their threat and launch a tariff reduction drive. That will be the main issue in the coming congressional campaign, so far as the middle west is concerned. The corn belt contingent, in short, will stop trying to bring farm prices up to the general level and undertake to bring the general level down to the prices of farm products.

Congressional representatives from the industrial east, which thrives on protection, are considerably perturbed at the prospect, moreover.

If the Republican and hitherto protectionistic corn belt flops, in the direction of tariff reduction, it will mean a great accession of strength to the Democratic group which is committed to such a policy already. Free trade is practically dead even in the Democratic party today, but most Democrats at least favor a lower tariff schedule than the present one.

East is Worried Democrats and insurgent and corn belt Republicans combined might easily form a strong enough coalition to make radical cuts—in the commodities, of course, that the farmer has to buy; not on those that he has to sell.

The protectionists will fight this tendency hard at the polls, but the outlook distinctly is not to their liking.

The Name Means Everything

FRIGIDAIRE was given its name to distinguish it from all other makes of electric refrigerators.

Back of that name are the engineering resources of General Motors, and the guarantee of the world's largest builder of electric refrigerators.

Under the name Frigidaire more than two hundred thousand electric refrigerators have been sold to home owners and industrial users.

The nameplate is placed on every Frigidaire mechanical unit and every cabinet to identify that product—and all the inventive genius, the precise mechanical construction, the features that are exclusive to Frigidaire are represented by that one word—a trade-marked name that cannot be used on any other electric refrigerator.

When you consider an electric refrigerator and want those qualities that have won leadership and reputation for Frigidaire—be sure you get a Frigidaire.

What is a furniture "sale" anyway?

A furniture "sale" is a reduction of prices for a certain length of time.

We can't call our low prices a "sale" because these low prices exist every day in the year at Garber Brothers, not just for a certain length of time.

If our everyday prices were up to a figure that would allow of discounts of 20, 30, 40 and 50% we, too, would have "sales."

But we don't, because our prices are always down.

It is not the amount of a discount that saves money for you. The actual price you pay is the only thing that should interest you.

That is why people who know values and prices come to Garber Brothers when in need of furniture.

Yes, even in August the month of furniture "sales" everywhere except at Garber Brothers.

In August more than any other month

POE'S STORIES: The Pit and the Pendulum (3)

Transfixed with horror, the prisoner watched the hissing pendulum above him. Slowly, just perceptibly, as it swung, it moved ever nearer to the breast of its victim. Long hours, days, might have passed while the man counted the rushing oscillations of the glinting steel. Despair seized him.

The pendulum moved down until he could feel its breath. Suddenly he fell calm and lay fascinated, watching the pendulum as a child a toy.

Then a new hope came to him, the "hope that triumphs on the rack." An idea of salvation thrilled him with a surge of joy.

The pendulum, as it came closer, would sever the cords with which he was bound! With even one cord of the surcingle which bound him severed, he could free himself and roll out of harm's way. But the hope died as he saw that he was bound everywhere but across his chest, in the path of the deadly crescent. (Continued.)

WONDERFUL DOG IN MANCHESTER

"Alexander the Great" Can Do Almost Everything But Talk.

"Alexander the Great," the wonder dog of the movies, is in town. He will appear here himself and will perform some of his stunts for his audiences at the State theater at both the matinee and the evening performances on Friday and Saturday. "Alexander" truly is a wonder dog, and has had quite a remarkable history. He is a thoroughbred German police dog. During the World War, Alexander was entered in the service. At first he was attached to the French White Cross, being carefully trained as a war dog. After America's entry and when the American Red Cross and the French White Cross were merged, he was used in that service. He did his work so well in the war that he was awarded a gold medal by the French government. In the Movies. After the war, Alexander, whose skill in the war had been remarkable, was bought by the Doric Film Company. He was at first used as a double, because he feared nothing. He would make big leaps, carry fire-brands in his mouth, and do other things that the other dog "stars" feared to attempt. He had no fear of airplanes and would readily do stunts on them as a double that no other dog in the movies would do. In fact, "Alexander the Great" is the only dog that has ever been filmed in the clouds. It was soon seen by the company that were using him as a double that he was a real star. Consequently he was given leading roles in several pictures. All together, he has appeared in thirty-six movie sets. A few of the pictures in which he has been starred are "Wolf Heart," "Rose of the Desert," "Fearless, the Detective," "The Fangs of Wolfheart," "Wolfheart's Revenge," "Big Boy William's Big Stunt," "Above Them All," and "The Call of the Wilds," a new film. "When A Man Is In Love," starring "Alexander," has been begun, and will soon be completed.

On a Tour. During the past few months "Wolfe," as his trainer, Joe Sylvia, intently calls him, has been making a tour across the continent. Just now he is touring back to the coast where he will complete "When A Man Is In Love." On his way back he is playing at all the theaters he possibly can so that the people personally how his stunts are performed on the screen. Nearly everywhere he goes he is greeted by capacity houses. His tricks performed on the stage are so reliable that he is now being used as a double and performed as a single word from his trainer that he makes his audiences gasp. Well Treated. Many people think that a dog must be cruelly treated to be made to perform. Such an impression is only natural when a movie dog is seen to cower as though he had just been lashed and to effect such expressions as to convey the impression that he is in great pain. But this is not so at all. In fact, his trainer "Alexander" will shrink back with a look of agony on his face and will appear to be kicked or beaten. Yet it is a fact that the marvelous dog has never been hurt and is now as healthy as a performing in a set, he is never even shouted at. Upon being spoken to conversationally he will perform any stunt. The only time he is ever shouted at is when he is at the top of a high cliff and is about to make a leap. And even then his trainer is usually a hundred or more feet away from him, and is speaking through a megaphone.

THEY NEVER KNEW TOM SIMS

BEGIN HERE TODAY JIMFON WEED, who was called "JIMP" for short, fell into a well and lost his job. Honest, hard-working, he had a wife and three children. Then he fell in love with PEARL HANDLE, who was the daughter of MR. HANDLE and his wife, MRS. HANDLE. And, oh yes, we almost forgot: before JIMP fell in love with PEARL, he made a MILLION DOLLARS. Outside of this you haven't missed much. You missed her PEARL's father shot at JIMP a few times, hitting him once. And you missed reading about DETECTIVE GUMSHOE'S famous PIPE. PEARL showed up missing and HER FATHER thought she had slipped with JIMP because she had. THE STORY has been dragging a LITTLE. But it begins to get BETTER now. You are just in time. Aren't you LUCKY?

NOW GO AHEAD CHAPTER IV

THE road ran along. Jimp and his bride did the same. Only they were in an automobile. The road, instead of being in an automobile, was in a hurry.

What a funny road! It never lolled by the roadside. Just so far as the eye could see the road was running along.

What an ambitious road! Never content with running in one direction, it ran in both directions.

Jimp looked up the road. Yes, it ran that way. He looked down the road. Yes, it ran that way also.

Fuzzled, he stopped the car at a roadhouse. A big sign out front read "Chicken Dinner."

The sign was much larger than that, but space prohibits its exact reproduction.

The highway department puts danger signs at bad curves and narrow bridges, warning tourists to be careful. The highway department should put danger signs before some roadhouses.

The signs at curves and narrow bridges tell the tourists to drive slow, or slowly, according to the extent of their education.

The danger signs tell tourists to drive fast, or faster, according to the extent of their finances.

But, as was said, Jimp stopped at this roadhouse to inquire about the road. "Which way does this road run?" he asked.

Local Sport Chatter

A meeting of the Cubs' football team will be held Sunday morning at the East Side playgrounds at 10:30.

Football players may have enough ambition to go out and tackle the dummy or romp around the field in practice, but we report they don't care to do anything more strenuous than pound a typewriter.

And that's strenuous enough, too. If you don't believe it, just come down to the office one of these sweltering hot days and bang on this Royal for ten or twelve hours, night and day.

During this hot spell swimmers and those who think they are swimmers are flocking to "Globe Hollow" to indulge in water sports. Hundreds go there each day to get away from Old Sol's scorching rays.

In speaking about swimmers, readers of the "Herald" are eagerly awaiting the day when weather conditions will permit Lillian Cannon to make her attempt to swim the English channel.

Dan Smith, Buckland's veteran moundsman, will be the center of attraction at the North End tonight. He is scheduled to pitch for the Shamrocks against East Glasstonbury.

It was he who held the hand hitting St. Mary's team to a 1-1 tie last Wednesday night, thereby creating a great deal of comment, especially among the veteran followers of the National pastime.

Cape Griz Nez, Aug. 5.—Gertrude Ederle's plan of campaign calls for no less than three attempts at swimming the English channel this year.

Lillian Cannon of Baltimore plans to make at least two attempts, but has not yet set the date for her first one.

Burgess, who has trained Miss Ederle, is confident that his pupil will make the swim in fourteen hours. The record is sixteen hours and 33 minutes.

Barrett May Try Again. Dover, Eng., Aug. 5.—Clarabelle Barrett, New York school teacher who came within two miles of swimming the English channel, may make a second attempt this summer but she has not yet decided, she said today.

"My swim has worn me out considerably," she said, "and I must have a few days rest before I decide."

WRESTLING WAR BREWING AGAIN OUT ON COAST

Rival Promoters Seeking Monopoly With Stecher and Lewis in Opposite Camps.

By Dan Thomas.

Los Angeles, Aug. 5.—Trouble is brewing in the select circles where twisting necks, cracking ribs and busting legs are considered art.

In other words, the first gun is about to be fired in the Los Angeles "rings" war almost any time now.

John De Palma, brother of the famous Ralph and himself once a noted auto racer, is to promote matches for the new clan.

Doyle's Vernon arena will be the scene of De Palma's activities while Daro will continue putting on his shows at the Olympic Auditorium.

But the real battles will be waged betwixt the two. The war between Tex Rickard and the New York boxing commission will be minimized to almost nothing as compared to the feud which will be done here by the bone-brushers.

De Palma has Lewis as his ace. A few of his other attractions will be Wayne Munn, "Toots" Mondt, Walter Miller and Russel Yis.

"Those other fellows aren't so much. We have enough high class wrestlers to put on just as good shows as they do," declares De Palma.

"War! There won't be any war. I'm the big promoter," Daro says. "There's only one possible outcome of the 'rassling war of the ages.' Stecher and Lewis will get together and fight it out for the supremacy of the circles where twisting necks, cracking ribs and busting legs are considered art.

Stecher is generally recognized as the world champion but Lewis has never relinquished his claims to the title. Stecher has steadfastly refused to meet Lewis in the ring.

SONS IN TIE GAME AGAINST ROCKVILLE

Darkness Halts Contest in Sixth When Both Teams Have 4 Runs — Graf Is Highlight.

By Dan Thomas.

Rockville and the Sons of Italy battled to a fierce tie in Rockville last night that was not broken when the game was called in the sixth inning.

It was the third game of the series between these two teams, each having won one. Both were on their toes but the Sons took advantage of three errors made by Rockville to score.

Graf, pitcher for Rockville, was the big noise of the game with three hits and Stenwald Hunniford poked out two.

Manchester scored three runs in the first frame and it looked then as though the locals would have a walkaway.

But Rockville came through with one in the last half of the first and tightened up its defense in the succeeding innings.

OF ALL THINGS—EHMKE USED AS PINCH HITTER!

Connie Mack pulled a rather unusual stunt when he sent the lean and lanky Mr. Howard Ehmke in as pinch-hitter against Cleveland the other day.

It was in the ninth, two were down and a couple men were on the cushions with the Athletics behind. Ehmke, boasting the astonishing mark of .148 as a batter last year, galloped to the plate—and ended the fray by grounding out to the pitcher.

Both managers are presenting their strongest possible lineup. Giorgetti and Powell will be the opposing hurlers. Both are in fine shape for the contest and will have no alibi to offer if defeat stalks across their path.

The game should be worth going a long way to watch. There promises to be action every minute.

NEIGHBORS' WIVES

ERNEST LYNN, author of THE YELLOW STUB

BEGIN HERE TODAY

JOHN and FAY MILBURN buy a home when their baby girl is born and the advertising agency in which John is partner and copy writer lands a new contract. Among their acquaintances are—

NOEL and VERA BOYD, whose marriage is strictly "modern."

PAT and MARIAN FORBES, who have three children and whose marriage is unhappy because of Pat's roving tendencies. Previous chapters told how—

John, in love with his wife but a romantic individual, was fascinated on meeting NELL ORME, of whom Pat Forbes hints that she is having trouble with her husband.

When Fay took JUDITH, the baby, to Washington to visit her parents, John "ran around" a good deal, mostly with Pat Forbes.

Fay is always fearful that John will get into some kind of trouble, and it is rather difficult for him to tell her of some of his escapades during her absence. It is left to MRS. BLODGETT and MRS. BENBY, both malicious gossips, to tell her of some of the incidents, and a bitter quarrel follows between Fay and John when she learns he had been going out with other women.

Still smarting under her criticism, John goes to a party with PAUL DAVIDSON, a lawyer, amateur actor and rone, and two married women who are friends of Paul's.

Some time later the Boyds are guests of the Milburns and Vera inadvertently lets slip that she had seen John riding with some women. When the Boyds leave, John, knowing that a crisis is impending, goes into the living room to face Fay.

"There's only one thing left to do. I'm through the next time it happens."

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
(The scenes and situations in this story are fictitious.)

CHAPTER XXXVIII

JOHN was silent. What could he say?

"Well?" Fay repeated.

"Fay," he cried, in an agony of spirit, "for heaven's sake don't stand there looking at me as if I had committed murder. You drove me to it."

"Drove you to what?"

"That night I went out with Paul Davidson. You wouldn't speak to me; you made me feel like a criminal. I went out with Paul, and there were a couple of friends of his along."

"How convenient!"

"Not convenient at all. Don't be sarcastic."

"Who were they? Of course, I realize I am just your wife, but I should like to know some of the details."

"How long was this to go on? He thought, 'Was he to forever torment like this? He lit a cigarette, taking his time about it and waving the match deliberately several times before he threw it in the fireplace."

"I have nothing to confess from you," he said firmly. "I haven't done anything I have any reason to be ashamed of. To tell you the truth, I don't know what their last names were. One of them Paul called Mable, and the other was—let me see—Joyce. We had dinner in Paul's apartment, and then we drove to a roadhouse and danced."

"And you had something to drink, of course?"

John would not lie. He might be guilty at times of holding back the truth, but he would not cheapen himself to save himself. About him was an unconsciousness of a kind of honesty that was part of his English heritage. So he said, without hesitating, "Yes, there was something to drink. Paul Davidson isn't exactly a dry."

"Why did you think it was necessary to go out with those women?"

"It wasn't necessary. I accepted

Paul's invitation without knowing who else was going to be there."

"You're not trying to tell me that you didn't know there was going to be any women."

"No," he suspected that. "I didn't care much one way or the other. Your indifference was responsible for that."

"That's right. Try to blame me, John," and Fay's face had suddenly gone deathly white. "This is the last time. Do you hear me? The last time."

"Now, Fay, don't get hysterical. What do you mean?"

"I'm not hysterical," she cried sharply. "I mean just this. The next time you decide that some other woman's company is preferable to mine I'm going to leave."

"Fay! You don't mean what you're saying. Why don't you look at it sensibly?"

"Sensibly?" She laughed scornfully. "Do you expect to see me sit idly by while you gallivant around whenever and with whomsoever you please? It's no use reasoning with you; it doesn't do any good. There's only one thing left to do. I'm through the next time it happens."

"All right." He turned abruptly from her and walked out of the room. The way upstairs it suddenly came to him with a cold nip at his heart that Fay actually was beginning to dislike him. God! Could she really mean what he had said about leaving him? Didn't she understand that he had meant no harm, that he was still as much in love with her as ever, that he adored Judith, tried to be a good husband—that it was just thoughtlessness, a weakness on his part that caused him to do the things that displeased her? Couldn't she understand that?

"What should he do, what could he do to convince Fay of his sincerity? Should he go to her on his knees and ask her forgiveness? Something in him rebelled at the thought. If she preferred to think the worst of him and threaten him, he would just refuse to humiliate himself. He could meet pride with a pride of his own. Hang it all, why did marriage make enemies of men and women? Paul Davidson was right; marriage was foolish. Was it his fault that he found the conversation and company of other women stimulating? Couldn't he retain his appreciation for a pretty face or a beautiful form? Weren't women made to admire? Did Fay expect him to go around with a label on his arm—"Soldier"?

Perhaps Noel Boyd was right after all. Perhaps it was the part of wisdom to have an understanding with your wife before you married her that a certain amount of independence would be permitted both parties. But there was little comfort in thinking of Noel Boyd—Noel always enraged him. There was something revolting in the Boyds' compact. They—they went the limit—or so, at least, Nbel had informed him.

It was not pleasant around the house at all. He reached the stage where he began to compare Fay with other women he knew and speculate on what kind of wives they might have made. Somehow his mind skipped over Eleanor Mason and others like her and seemed to anchor at the thought of Nell Orme. It occurred to him as rather an ironic circumstance that none of these flirtations that Fay kept throwing up to him meant a thing to him as far as an actual regard for the women was concerned; whereas the woman who interested him above all others—leaving Fay out of it, of course—was one whom Fay greatly admired, and that was Nell.

He had not seen her, he reflected, in a long time; yet he could see her in his mind's eye as clearly as though it had been yesterday, and she was poised—a figure of surpassing grace—for one of those beautiful dives of hers, and her voice came to his ears like low-pitched, languorous mutterings that Fay kept throwing up to him.

These were dangerous thoughts, he knew—he was married and Nell was married, and the whole thing was—well, just silly. Nevertheless, they persisted. In Nell Orme, he couldn't help feeling, there was something deep and worthy of him. He wondered, during these unhappy days with Fay, just what the trouble was between Nell and Howard. Was it something like the thing that was growing up in his own home? No, he told himself, it couldn't be. More and more his waking thoughts became occupied with her, and she began to take shape in his fitful and dissatisfied dreams.

Business and the social round and family finances gradually began to claim more of his attention—especially the last named. There was a new budget that had been worked out by Fay, a budget that was based on his now larger income.

Fay felt that they could afford a maid until Judith was old enough not to require watching. It had been his idea for some time, but Fay had been slow in accepting it. He had traded in the old Ford coupe on a new one and for some time had been arguing for a larger car, but Fay was against it, with the contention that they should economize until they had reduced the mortgage on the house, and, as usual, prevailed.

The uncomfortable feeling began to grow on John that Fay was not the only one who adopted an attitude of distrust and suspicion. He became aware, without knowing just how, that people were saying on the street and in the office that he had been reduced to a state of financial embarrassment by the loss of his job. He had never met Kelly or Jones, but he had had both of them pointed out to him one day at lunch and he discovered both of them to be clean-cut looking young men, obviously "go-getters."

There was luncheon downtown one day with Dick Menefee. The young doctor called John up, saying he had something he wanted to tell him, and Dick, his face a fiery red, said a tremendous amount in his manner, got bluntly to the point.

"Look here, John, they're talking about you. Now what's it all about? I'm your friend—used to be your best friend, didn't I?"

"You still are, Dick, or I wouldn't sit here and listen to you."

"All right, then, I'm not inquisitive; I'm concerned about you. By George, I've had several fights on my hands, almost, telling people these things about you that were exaggerated. Rumor has it that you're drinking heavily and running around with gay women. I don't believe it, John."

Milburn said, a little wearily, "I don't care whether you believe it or not, Dick," and turned his head away from Menefee.

"See here, John, you don't mean that?"

"No!"

"You know blamed well you don't. Why don't you get out somewhere on a vacation—take a fishing trip up north or something?"

John shook his head. "Finish your story, Dick. You had more to say than this, or you wouldn't have come all the way down here for lunch."

"Well, John, for your own good can't I ask you to watch your step a little more carefully? I know you're not going to hell the way these people say you are, but—"

"But what?" John asked, an amused little smile, prompted by Dick's red-faced confusion, playing on his lips.

"Well, Dick blurted out, "it's not what you do, you know; it's what they say you do. And they're hurting you. John said—and Fay ought to be protected."

"See here, Dick, is that necessary?"

"To drag Fay in, you mean? Well, yes, I think it is. I'm not going to sit on the sidelines without saying a word and see you get in trouble. You'll get on your feet and Fay, I love both of you."

"I'm sorry, Dick."

"And the story is going the rounds, John, that you are neglecting your wife. They're even saying that you have to get drunk in order to produce some of that inspired copy of yours."

"That's a lie, Dick. A damn lie! Who's spreading that sort of stuff around?"

Incubator Homes

by Olive Roberts Barton.

H. G. Wells has published an article on "Marriage." In it he refrains from personal opinion but that astuteness which characterizes his writing. He speaks in the role of a prophet, not as a reformer or as an iconoclast.

Marriage and its attendant obligations has changed considerably in five hundred years. It will change more considerably in the next five hundred. To be consistent with our rapidly moving era, it will change in less time than that.

Who knows what the marriage of the future may mean? Perhaps, as Mr. Wells suggests, it may bring community homes for children with highly specialized attendants to look after body and mind. Eugenics will play a part and there will be more perfect children. The mothers may be the breadwinner as well as the father. They may even have homes apart. Who knows what may come?

I am glad that I live now in the twentieth century instead of the twenty-first or twenty-fifth century. I cannot imagine a country without family home as a foundation on which to build its other institutions.

A man without a country is less tragic than a child with a home. Observe all nature! Observe the lower animals and their solicitude for their own young. Tigers and kangaroos and bears do not leave their young in a woodland day-

Walking is particularly needed by so-called brain-workers, for this class, by reason of sedentary occupation seldom gets the amount of exercise essential to well being.

It is almost common knowledge that manual laborers, farmers, ranchmen, postmen, and those engaged in similar occupations are far less subject to attacks of apoplexy and various organic derangements than are brain-workers.

A daily walk is better than an occasional one and a speed of 3 miles an hour is an economical one for the human machinery. Occasionally, however, a brisk walk should be sought so that the lungs may be caused to expand and the efficiency of the leg muscles tested.

Best for Aged

Elderly persons and those with organic impairment should, of course, confine themselves to a pleasant short and level walk, avoiding hard strain or undue exertion. A leisurely walk in the open on pleasant days, remains a most beneficial exercise for the aged.

Probably the best time of the day for a walk is after office hours and before the heavy meal of the evening. At this time the mind rather than the body is fatigued. An hour's walk does much to increase the appetite, disseminate the fatigue poisons, and fit one for sound sleep.

In Morning, Too.

A walk in the morning following breakfast also has its devotees, for then the air is stimulating and the mind is sufficiently alert to appreciate nature's ever-changing moods. As a time for thinking or planning, a walk offers manifest advantages.

No great amount of preparation is required to obtain the benefits of a walk. Of course, the shoes worn should have fairly stout soles and be comfortable. Tight and high-heeled shoes are incongruous, and can only cause discomfort. Ill fitting and darned socks may also detract from the pleasure of a walk.

Chilling of the body through perspiration should be avoided by wearing appropriate clothing and making a change after the walk, if necessary. Wetting of the feet should be avoided.

A WOMAN'S DAY ABROAD

By ALLENE SUMNER.

Paris.—"Are the French women so beautifully dressed as we have always heard?" So I asked in no less than three letters in my morning mail.

This public answer is respectfully submitted.

It all depends. Depends on where you sit and where you look.

On the downtown streets, along the lovely Champs Elysees, at the races, strolling down the Rue de la Paix, one sees the most gorgeous feminine things the world can hold—slim, vivacious things in gracefully short skirts, high heels on shoes of reptile, brocade, or metal cloth, and earrings and necklets and anklets of jade and gold tinkling in the breeze.

Never is one of these fashion plates without her boutonniere of a fresh flower upon her left shoulder. The flower is wound in gold or silver foil. It is generally a fragile petaled orchid; sometimes a cluster of nasturtiums, gay poppies, or a yellow or pink rose.

In the brilliant boxes of the opera or the Polles Berge one again sees gleaming jewels and white shoulders wrapped in ermine-trimmed brocade mantles, worth a fortune.

In the French woman, as one sees her in the masses, cannot hold a candle to the American girl and woman in general.

The proverbial thrift of France garbs her womanhood in cotton hose while their bank books grow fat and juicy.

Cotton hose are much more commonly seen than silk on trains and on those streets which are not the recognized fashionable.

But low heels never. No matter how cheap the hose, high-heeled shoes are with them—generally. But one sees, too, any number of women slouching about in plain bedroom slippers of blue and red felt, alternating with the high heels which torture them.

In the cathedrals a moosh frock or coat or a gay hat is a rarity. Clothes of black in the form of old, shabby, shiny, out-of-date suits blacken the cloisters.

Black is the French woman's color—that of the woman of fashion and of the thrifty woman who puts her husband's money in the bank.

Mourning is worn at the slightest excuse—for husband's third cousin's niece, for dog or bird, for step-niece and grandfather's sister-in-law thrice removed.

The thrifty French woman goes to market. One day we rose with the sun to visit a sunrise market. Here came hundreds of women to get the largest, freshest berries, the plumpest peas.

You American housewives might

"Anxiety Expert" to four thousand is Miss Alda Moorman who is with the firm of Montgomery Ward and Co. of Chicago, the mail order house. She is welfare manager, amusement specialist and has a big job created for herself. She is a college girl and only twenty-five years old. She says: "There's a lot more in helping people like their work—girls especially—than in merely paying them well and providing light and comfortable working conditions." The things she does for the big army of employees are giving financial advice, running, basketball and baseball leagues, giving vaudeville shows and community sings. She occasionally visits the sick among the employees, helps them with their family problems and raising their children.

Warm brown shades in felts and velvets are to be the thing for fall and winter. An odd hat of alternate stripes of velvet and felt in tones of brown was fashioned after the style of an African turban.

A fabric for smart fall shoes is moire. Bags to match the shoes are also made of the moire. Very handsome bags are of alternate stripes of moire and plain black satin.

Do you like honey? Nine persons out of ten will answer in the affirmative, but very few use it in cooking. Here is a delicious recipe with an equally delectable name:

Daffodil Meringue

2 tablespoons granulated tapioca, 1-2 cup honey.

Pinch salt.

1 pint boiling water.

2 tablespoons lemon juice.

3 eggs.

1 tablespoon butter.

Moisten the granulated tapioca with cold water and stir it into the boiling water. Salt lightly and cook until clear. Beat the yolks of the eggs and beat in the honey with the lemon juice and butter. Add cook over hot water until it thickens—about 20 minutes. Pour into a buttered dish, adding a little candied lemon peel if desired. Cover with a meringue made from the whites of the eggs beaten with 3 tablespoons of honey, and bake to a delicate fawn color.

One man who enjoys picnics and insists on doing some of the cooking, has a specialty much liked by his friends. He fries bacon and while it is draining on paper, crisps cornflakes in the fat. These are almost like potato chips. After the cornflakes are taken from the pan, he fries minute steaks. The steak is served garnished with bacon, corn flakes, sliced cucumbers and tomatoes.

HER OWN WAY

A GIRL OF TODAY

A QUIET INTERLUDE.

Jerry bowed stiffly as I introduced him to Joan, and helped us into the car. The drive out to the farmhouse was filled with small talk, although I could feel that Jerry, underneath his manner, was weighing our every word with quiet intensity.

Just as we drew up to the gate, Joan turned to me:

"Only a few days now and we'll be away from all this," she said. "How restful the crossing to Europe will seem."

I smiled at her.

Jerry said nothing, but he looked as though he had received his death blow as he helped us out of the car with great formality.

He made some excuse about parking the roadster and Joan and I walked up the syringa lined path together.

I will never forget that evening as long as I shall live. The soft purplish twilight in which we had started from the city had deepened into darkness. The hedges above were studded with twinkling stars that seemed to have some communication with the tiny glittering earth's stars, as one might have called the fireflies, which flitted in and out among the low foliage, giving one the impression that they had just dropped from among their fellows in the sky.

Turning my head a little, I saw the moon's thin crescent just over my right shoulder and close down by its lower point a brilliant star seemed to punctuate with a period the sensational story I had lived the last few months. I took it for a good omen.

In silence Joan and I went up the walk. Jerry still lagged behind. Joan's hand stooped into mine. I knew that she too was feeling that blessed peace which was filling my heart.

As though to emphasize the prosaic life of everyday we came upon the porch where the table with its white table cloth was set in homely fashion and lighted by four candles in heavy glass candlesticks.

There were pats of new made butter, and dishes of scented honey, crisp pickles, and colorful jams dotted about the table. These things I had not seen since I had left my father's house.

There was an odor of broiled chicken which mingled pleasantly with the scent of the syringas, told me I was hungry—I remembered I had eaten nothing since my coffee in the morning.

None of us spoke as we three were seated at the table. Jerry's face was instructable. I glanced at it furtively, once or twice. He seemed to have shut me out of his mind entirely. It was as though I were not there.

SHOW FINE HANDIWORK

Parents who have already visited the classes in carpentry conducted again this summer at the Trade school during vacation, are enthusiastic over the work these small boys in their early teens are accomplishing. Henry Miller is their instructor, as he was last year, and under his direction they are taught to turn out woodwork articles and also how to rub down, wax or varnish them in order to best bring out the beauty of the wood.

In the collection already completed were noticed fine looking end tables, telephone stands, magazine racks and other useful small pieces of furniture for the home.

The boys are not supposed to attend the classes more than two days a week but some of them are so interested they have asked for the privilege of coming every day. It is not only a boon to the children, keeping them thus employed and out of the heat of the streets, but a comfort to their parents to know they are safe and at the same time gaining a useful knowledge of carpentry.
