NINE ARRESTED AS RESULT OF ODD ACCIDENT

Two Trucks Mired in Bolton; Autoists Disregard Police Orders-- Even Fire Chief Figures in Case.

Nine arrests have been made as the result of an unusual accident on Bolton Hill yesterday when two heavily-laden five-ton trucks went off the road and plunged into a swamp.

The arrests took place yesterday afternoon and evening. More were expected today. The charge is reckless driving, the motorists having been halted for coasting down the hill at the scene of the accident.

State police from the Stafford Springs barracks and Deputy Sheriff Allison Frink, of Andover have been doing traffic duty at the scene ever since the accident, which happened early yesterday morning.

How It Happened. The accident, one which was unusual, happened in the following manner: Two five-ton trucks, one laden with pipes and the other with 30-foot timbers were coming down the hill. One was operated by Santo Culera of Hartford and the other by Raldo Alcido, of Torrington.

When the trucks started to round the slight curve at the foot of the hill, the driver of the front one lost control of his machine and it plunged through the fence for a distance of 150 feet bowling over a telegraph pole which was in its path and plunging into the swamp on the left side of the road.

Drivers Escape. Both drivers luckily escaped without injury. The state police were notified and ordered both drivers to appear in court to answer a charge of reckless driving. Then followed the difficult work of attempting to pull the trucks back onto the highway.

Chief Al. Foy of the South Manchester fire department was asked to come to the aid and he went to the scene in his car bringing with him four tanks of chemicals. All of these were used in extinguishing the blaze.

It was expected that the truck would be pulled out of the swamp late today. Several trucks are being utilized for the purpose.

Both yesterday and today, there has been a large crowd of passing motorists who have stopped to view the unusual scene. Many from Manchester have gone there.

Police believe this outbreak was a sequel to a gun battle between the occupants of two cars in downtown Detroit yesterday. A gang feud is believed responsible.

The dead are Joe Gustella, 30, part owner of the restaurant and Cecil Genevese, 35, chef.

SAME ADDRESS, LO! THE SAME WIFE!

Friends Compare Notes, Show Pictures, Then Girl Is Taken for Bigamy.

New London, Aug. 12.—Quite a coincidence, thought John Francis Walsh and Harry Morie, both of the same address in New London, that they should have married girls of the same residence address. Curious about each other's wives, they produced pictures. The "wives" were one and the same.

That's why New London police were today awaiting the arrival of Florence Walsh, alias Florence Halliday Walsh, who was arrested in Washington yesterday on a charge of bigamy. She was arrested and is to be turned over to New London police.

The woman is alleged to have married Morie, an ex-service man, in New York, in 1923. In July of this year, she married John Walsh, radio man attached to the Coast Guard at New London. A short time ago she visited her home in Watervliet, N. Y. During her absence, Walsh and Morie, living at the same house, became friendly.

During a conversation, they discovered that both had married a girl with the home address of 32 Cohoes Road, Watervliet. The pictures told the rest of the story and Acting Promoting Attorney Perry J. Hollander acted at the request of the two husbands. The girl was traced from Watervliet to Washington.

AMOUNT OF LIQUOR CASE AGAINST BRON

Quantity on Hand Convicts South Main Street Man; Two Other Cases.

Francis Bron of South Main street was found guilty by Judge Johnson in the Police Court this morning of keeping liquor with intent to sell and a fine of $150 and costs was imposed which was paid.

Chief of Police Samuel G. Gordon and three of his force visited the Bron home, which was the old Captain Keeney property, last Friday night. As has been told in The Herald, they found a well equipped still in operation, about 225 gallons of 15 gallons of manufactured liquor, a large quantity of sugar and everything that goes into the making of liquor.

No Evidence of Sale. Bron was represented in court by Attorney William S. Hyde, who, after hearing the testimony of Chief Gordon, maintained there was no evidence to show that Bron was selling liquor. However, Prosecuting Attorney Hathaway contended that the quantity of material found in the place, the condition of the surroundings and the fact that two men were found drinking, was evidence against him. Judge Johnson agreed with the prosecutor, that the strongest evidence was the quantity. No reasonable person would believe that Bron was manufacturing that amount of liquor for his own use, the judge said. He therefore found him guilty.

The liquor and apparatus for manufacturing it will be destroyed. Bron said he would not petition the court for the return of the outfit.

Barker Guilty. William C. Baker, charged with reckless driving, who had his case continued from Monday was found guilty by Judge Johnson this morning and through his attorney, Raymond Carmody, gave notice of an appeal to the superior court. Last Saturday Barker was on his way to Hartford and at Love Lane drove his car against a trolley pole and the car was brought to a standstill up against a tree twenty feet away.

In his own behalf Barker said it was raining at the time. He was

ENCOUNTERS ELEPHANT IN CANADIAN WILDS

Indian Hunter "Sees Things," But It Was Fugitive from American Circus.

Cranbrook, B. C., Aug. 12.—An Indian hunter, riding his horse through the brush near here, could hardly believe his eyes when he saw an elephant charging down upon him. The horse bolted, throwing the rider.

The elephant, however, disregarded the fallen horseman and gave chase to the horse, finally turning and bolting back into the bush.

ENTOMBED MEN RESCUED AFTER WEEK IN MINE

All Five Trapped Kentucky Spar Miners Alive; One Injured But None in Serious Condition.

Salem, Ky., Aug. 12.—Five miners, who have been entombed in the Zinc and Spar Company mine near here since last Thursday night when a slide-in blocked a level 150 feet beneath the surface of the main shaft, were found alive early today.

The rescue was effected when two of the men, making their way through the level which had been choked with mud, water and rock, saw the light of a lamp carried by one of the rescuers and called to him.

The men then returned to where the other three men were imprisoned and the six men made their way to the main shaft.

The rescue was made at 7:10 o'clock this morning. At that hour they had been imprisoned about 53 hours, the slide-in having occurred at 10 o'clock last Thursday night.

Besides Capillo, the others rescued are Roy James, U. B. Wilson, Randolph Cobb and Harry Watson. Joyous Reunion. Great joy reigned throughout the mining camp when the news was spread that the men had been brought out alive.

Relatives of the rescued men rushed forward and a happy reunion followed.

As has been explained before the Kiwanians themselves have pledged $1,000; they have raised one thousand more by plays and concerts and now they appeal to the public for another thousand to make the camp a permanent one. It surely is needed.

WHITTEMORE TO PAY ON FRIDAY THE 13TH

Baltimore, Aug. 12.—Richard Reese Whittemore, bandit, pays on the gallews at Maryland Penitentiary early tomorrow for a hectic career of crime.

Through his counsel, G. L. Pendleton, a negro, has gone to New England in an effort to obtain a stay from one of the federal supreme court justices spending the summer in that section, prison officials went ahead today with plans for the hanging at 12:10 A. M. on Friday, the 13th. They anticipate that nothing will stop the execution.

To meet Pendleton's latest move, Rowland K. Adams, deputy state's attorney, also has gone to Boston. He will oppose any appeal which Pendleton lays before any of the justices to delay the hang.

It is believed that Pendleton went to see Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes at Beverly Farms, Justice Justice Louis D. Brandeis at Chatham, Mass.

As his hour of death approaches, Whittemore smokes countless cigarettes. He has shown little outward sign of concern over the hanging. His father, Rawlings V. Whittemore, said he would witness the hanging.

Last Hope Gone. Beverly Farms, Mass., Aug. 12.—Last hope of saving Richard Reese Whittemore from the hangman's noose went a-glimmering this afternoon when Justice Oliver W. Holmes of the United States Supreme Court, at his summer home here, denied a stay of execution on a writ of error to G. L. Pendleton, Negro lawyer, who had hurried here from Baltimore.

Says Dempsey's Waxen Nose Will Make Him Lose Fight

Berlin, Aug. 12.—If the day of the Dempsey-Tunney fight is a hot one, put your money on Tunney. That is the advice of Dr. C. Peoria, a Viennese nose specialist, who is of the opinion that Jack Dempsey's paraffine nose may be the deciding factor in the battle. "A paraffine nose for boxers is just as dangerous as a celluloid collar would be for a fireman," said Dr. Peoria.

Dr. Peoria recommends ivory noses for boxers. These noses are held in place by silver wires and cannot be smashed or affected by the temperature, he says.

MONEY COMING IN 60 YRS. OLD, OFFERS TO FIGHT DEMPSEY

But Not Fast Enough and Not Enough Small Contributions-- Won't You Help

Money is starting to trickle in for the vacation fund sponsored by the Kiwanian club but there should be a more generous response if one thousand dollars are to be subscribed before next Wednesday. There are not enough small contributions and the success of this campaign will depend more on the number of contributions than on the size of them.

Not that large contributions are not welcome but because it is a popular one, as it should be. Well Endorsed. There is hardly any use of mentioning names for one could take up the telephone directory and call up any name in high or low places and get an O. K.

Is this campaign endorsed? There is hardly any use of mentioning names for one could take up the telephone directory and call up any name in high or low places and get an O. K.

Here is a case reported today to show conditions right here in town: A widow with five children marries a widower with four and then they have three or four. Only the father is working but recently a few of the older children are helping a little working in tobacco. Here is a needy one. Because of the rush of needy cases but two of these children could get a vacation at the camp. The others must swelter in the heat because there is no room for them. At least six of these children are in need of a vacation but what can be done?

Kiwanians' Part. As has been explained before the Kiwanians themselves have pledged $1,000; they have raised one thousand more by plays and concerts and now they appeal to the public for another thousand to make the camp a permanent one. It surely is needed.

M. Clemenceau declared that he had said about all that he cared to relative to the debts question, but he did say that he hoped the American treasury expert would "adjust their conception in keeping with the spirit of Franco-American amity."

MAY ABANDON CASE AGAINST HALL'S WIDOW

New Brunswick Murder Mystery to Reach Decisive Stage Tomorrow; Secrecy Lid Is On.

Somerville, N. J., Aug. 12.—State troopers who served with Henry L. Dickman, who vanished during the first investigation into the Hall-Mills murders in 1922, were to be questioned today regarding reports that the missing state policeman was mysteriously paid a large sum to hide knowledge he had unearthed.

Dickman is believed to be the "Henry Lester Dieckman" serving a year's imprisonment at Alcatraz Island in San Francisco Bay for desertion from the army. Whether he will be brought back to New Jersey to be interrogated will depend largely on the result of today's revelations.

Following Dickman's disappearance, it was widely reported that he had learned the identity of the murderers of the Rev. Edward W. Hall, New Brunswick rector, and the clergyman's sweetheart, Mrs. Eleanor R. Mills.

Stops News "Leaks." Owing to the wide ramifications of the case, which now extend to San Francisco, Senator Simpson, special prosecutor, today clamped the lid of secrecy on the investigation. Names of witnesses were hidden from reporters. "Leaks," which it is said, tipped off prospective witnesses, were given as one of the reasons.

Senator Simpson said that tomorrow will see the climax of the investigation, when it will be decided whether enough evidence exists to bring the accusation of the dual murders pending against Mrs. Frances Stevens Hall, the rector's widow, before a grand jury.

In the event of a negative decision, it was intimated, abandonment of the case against Mrs. Hall will be recommended.

Senator Simpson, however, reiterated confidence in the story of Mrs. Jane Gibson, the "pig woman," that she had seen Mrs. Hall at the scene of the murders, bending over the bodies.

Authorities know where the three bullets are that were taken from Mrs. Mills' body, Simpson said. They whereabouts have been unknown heretofore. He said markings on the bullets, which were of .32 calibre, would serve to identify the pistol from which they were fired. The missing gun of Willie Stevens, Mrs. Hall's eccentric brother, was of .32 calibre, it was pointed out. An expert will examine the bullets.

Burgess was originally hired to train Miss Cannon, but had to give up his contract because Miss Ederle demanded that he give his services to her exclusively.

Mr. Cheney said nothing. He just defeated his fish, after a long and brilliant contest.

FIVE PRIESTS EXECUTED BY MEX SOLDIERS

Call for Revolution Made by Naranjo, Former Cabinet Minister; All Settlement Efforts Fail.

Mexico City, Aug. 12.—Five priests were executed by Mexican soldiers following rioting at La Guaymas, in the state of Michoacan, in connection with the religious conflict between the Catholic church and the government of Mexico, dispatches from La Guaymas said today.

At least forty persons, including several priests, were killed a few days before at Zaguayo, not far from La Guaymas, according to the archbishop of Michoacan, now in Mexico City.

Sects Clash. Bitter clashes between Catholics and Protestants have occurred in Tlapacoya in the state of Guanajuato, according to El Sol.

The Catholics, vastly in the majority, burned down the houses of eighteen protestant families and committed many outrages against Protestant men and women, the newspaper reports.

Following reports of outrages against Catholics in the state of Puebla, the French embassy sent an attaché there for the purpose of investigation. If the reports are confirmed, the embassy will lodge a vigorous protest, it was today stated.

The American embassy today confirmed reports of fighting in Guadalajara. The embassy stated that eighteen were killed, forty wounded and 400 Catholics taken prisoners in the fighting.

Calls for Revolution. The circular calls on the inhabitants to arise and overthrow the government.

Pascual Diaz, acting archbishop of Mexico admitted that all attempts thus far to mediate between the church and the government have been failures. The Mexican Federation of Labor announced today its conditional acceptance of the challenge issued by the National League for Religious Defense to a series of four debates on the religious situation. Trial By Debate. Ricardo Trevino, general secretary of the Federation, stipulated that the Catholic orators must present themselves with full documentary proof of the statements they made and must be prepared to answer charges against the clergy from the speaker's platform, or else be prepared to admit the correctness of the charges.

These debates are no pastime, he said, "but deadly serious events for the purpose of enlightening and formulating public opinion both at home and abroad."

May Prosecute Del Rio. A recent statement made by Archbishop Mora y Del Rio to an American newspaper, criticizing the Mexican government, has been referred to the attorney general for action. Secretary of the Interior Tejada announced.

Secretary Tejada declares that the constitution prohibits the clergy from attacking the government's acts, and charged that the archbishop's statement was "a series of circumlocutions" designed to appeal to the American people for sympathy.

Secretary Tejada denounced the Catholics for "having failed to choose legal methods for changing the regulations, instead they have chosen disobedience."

MORIARTYS TELL OF TRIP TO EUROPE

Carried Away With Beauty of Ireland in Summer; Dr. Moriarty Visits Clinics.

Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Moriarty and their son, Dr. Louis F. Moriarty, have returned to their home on East Center street after a several months' tour abroad, during which nothing occurred to mar their pleasure but the severe storm encountered last Saturday and Sunday on the return trip.

Doctor Moriarty combined study with sight-seeing and in every city of importance which they visited in the British Isles and on the continent he took the opportunity to attend clinics and visit the principal hospitals. The doctor was not present when the Herald reporter interviewed his parents, but it was said he is satisfied the methods of surgical and medical practice employed in the institutions in this country are unsurpassed by any abroad.

See Ireland First.
The Herald has previously carried an article telling how the family were thrilled at Ireland's southern scenery in early June. Unlike the average American tourist who rushes through Ireland in haste to reach Great Britain and continental Europe, they would recommend the traveler going abroad on his initial trip, to "see Ireland first." Americans are imbued with the idea that it is a poverty-stricken country and entirely overlook it in making up their itinerary.

Landing at Queenstown they made a leisurely tour northward, making their headquarters in the principal cities and visiting places of natural and historic interest in jaunting cars and automobiles wherever possible. They visited Cork, Limerick, noted for its laces, Dublin and other cities.

Dublin is the capital of the Emerald Isle and one of the most beautiful capitals in the whole world. It boasts a park—Parks—which is seven miles in circumference. The beautiful bay of Dublin has been the subject of song and story. The city is really built on both sides of the River Liffey and seven or eight bridges of stone and iron join its sections. St. Patrick's Cathedral, founded in 1190, the monument to Lord Nelson and other notable objects of interest, as well as Trinity college, the foremost university in Ireland, founded by Queen Elizabeth. Dublin has been the scene of many a conflict, both in recent and former years.

Portadown.
The travelers naturally made a stay in Portadown where so many of Manchester's residents or their forebears came from. They visited there perhaps the largest nursery in all Ireland, of which the owner is James Walsh, brother of William Walsh of Linden street and uncle of Miss Edith and Walter Walsh. Mr. Walsh and his charming daughters were cordially itself to the Manchesterites. They have a beautiful home and the extent of the acreage devoted to nursery plants is conveyed by the fact that he has five thousand rose bushes alone. These were just coming into bloom when the local tourists were there in June.

The travelers were very favorably impressed with Belfast, the first city in Ireland. It is situated on the Lagan river and about ten miles from the Irish sea. It is noted throughout the world for its great linen and shipbuilding industries. Mr. Moriarty and his son went all over the latter plant on Belfast Lough where many of the great ocean liners have been built. Business is not rushing in any of the mills at present. Belfast has many fine buildings and beautiful parks. It is the seat of Queens college and has many excellent schools.

Mrs. Moriarty remarked that they were greatly surprised to find the hold the smoking habit has upon the women of all the cities they visited. She believes it is even more prevalent than in this country. The women were dressed every bit as stylish in the cities of Ireland as elsewhere, and bobbed heads are seen everywhere.

The Flowers.
She became very enthusiastic in telling of the beauty of the wild flowers and the beautiful gardens of the well-to-do throughout the British Isles. In traveling long distances by train, both in Great Britain and in France, poppies were as common as white daisies here and enhanced the beauty of the golden wheat fields. Heather was also in the height of its bloom in parts of Ireland and in Scotland which they next visited.

adjacent that every American traveler visits were not overlooked. Then they proceeded to Paris where they stopped for a week. There is no other city like Paris in all the world. Its beautiful buildings, wide avenues, art, historic past and gay present attract people from all over the world. It impressed the local visitors as being pleasure-mad. The night life of Paris is unlike that anywhere. Some of the cafes open at 11 p. m. and remain open until morning. Mrs. Moriarty told of a fashion show given by one of the internationally famous dress-makers which she attended and found most interesting.

Their stay in Paris was enlivened by meeting friends from Manchester. Thomas Ward, son of D. J. Ward of Marble street and his family reside in Paris. Mr. Ward being in the banking business. They also saw Miss Anna Ward who is studying art there this summer. The party also visited Germany and sailed down the Rhine river which is to the Germans what the Nile is to the Egyptians. They were very enthusiastic over its beauty and feel that they want to return to Europe for a more extended visit to Germany, and Italy which they had no time for on the present trip.

ANDREWS READY FOR BIGGEST DRY DRIVE

Back from English Trip, Declaring Undertaking Was '125 Per Cent' Successful.

New York, Aug. 12.—General Lincoln C. Andrews, chief of federal prohibition enforcement, will go to Washington tonight to put into immediate operation machinery to curtail liquor smuggling, in conformity with the secret agreement concluded between the United States and Great Britain.

General Andrews arrived here last night from Europe on the liner France. He is expected to inaugurate the greatest drive ever launched by the government in its effort to enforce prohibition. Nine hundred "under cover men," added to the prohibition army in the last month, have been awaiting his return.

Expressing satisfaction with the progress he had made in England, General Andrews said:
"It was 125 per cent successful, and the plan so thoroughly fits in with the integrity of the law that the English themselves were quick to suggest a remedy for conditions which indicated unlawful practices."

"MONKEY MONKEY—"
Johannesburg.—The old song is wrong. Instead of "Monkey, monkey, bottle of beer," it should be "Monkey, monkey, bottle of rum." For that's the way they catch monkeys in the tropics these days. The natives place a bottle of mares, African bootleg liquor, at the bottom of the tree and the simians flock down to get it. They pass the bottle, dance, flight, sleep and wake up in cages.

BROKE HIS HAND 11 TIMES, DELANEY IS CHAMP TODAY

Nevertheless Bridgeport Batters' Right Carries Wick-ed Punch as Berlenbach Can Attest.

By JOE WILLIAMS.

New York, Aug. 12.—Like the delicate aroma which is identified with the festive garlic, a right hand punch and a French fighter are inseparable. This goes as well for the certified Class A Frenchman of the Carpenter type as it does for the boys who are catalogued casually in the genealogy files as being of "French extraction."

By now the world knows that Mons. Orlin Chapdelaine, known less heroically as Jack Delaney, is the new light heavyweight champion of the works. That he is also a French extraction is not a secret, either.

Delaney's best punch is his right hand. He could have checked his left with his Aunt Emma over in Bridgeport, Conn., the night he shellacked Paul Berlenbach and still won the title by at least seven furlongs.

Delaney's right is probably the most versatile right hand that ever dangled menacingly from a belligerent shoulder socket. If there is anything he can't do with it I failed to notice what it was during his brisk rebellion against the "Castro assassination."

Delaney's Right is Different.
All Carpenters could do with that great right hand of his was to shoot it straight from the shoulder. This meant he had to have just the opening he wanted before he could get results. When it did land, of course, it was a kayo. Delaney's right is not like that.

At long range Delaney can shoot his right either on a straight line or from an angle; in close he can drive it hard to the body with plenty of body power furnishing the impetus, or he can shoot it to the jaw, a ripping uppercut, that carries plenty of danger.

There is, in short, a fluency and a flexibility to the operation which makes the Delaney right a rather remarkable weapon. This is a quality not unusual in left-handed punchers but it is seldom found in such abundance in right-handers.

Developed Real Kayo Power.
It might be interesting to recall at this point that the Delaney right is synthetic as to ingredients. Which is to say it is the original pattern torn-down and rebuilt to suit the tenant. When Delaney started boxing his right was brittle as glass. After every fight from one to three bones would be broken.

Finally, after breaking the hand for the eleventh time, flailing Jimmy Darcy in the semi-final of the Berlenbach bout, Wilson fight three years ago he tossed it on the surgical table of G. W. Fralick, noted fistie knife man, and said: "Put in a new battery, grind the valves and give it a Duo-o finish."

Fralick must have performed a miracle on the hand, for not only did it acquire a new durability but it immediately developed a knockout power that the hand in its original design never knew. Except for a slight fracture of the thumb sustained in the Berlenbach bout, Delaney's right hasn't been hurt since.

Lavigne, Walcott and Others.
Other fighters of French blood, though not strictly Frenchmen, to attain distinction as right hand sockers were George Lavigne, who was good enough to beat one of the greatest fighters of all time, namely, Joe Walcott; Tommy Burns, who won the heavyweight title succeeding Jeffries, and Arthur Pelky.

It was around Pelky's right, you may recall, that was written one of the harrowing tragedies of modern boxing. He caught Luther McCarthy, best of the white heavyweights at the time, back of the ear in the first round with a long right and the Irishman fell to the floor dead.

This came only a few minutes after a local clergyman had delivered a sonorous sermon from the ring, the subject of which was "The mystery of death."

Devil's Island, a tropical isle off Cayenne, capital of French Guiana, has been a penal settlement since 1855.

"SNAKE!" FIRST WORD IN 10 YEARS

Girl, Dumb As Result of One Fright, Given Speech by Another.

Bethlehem, Pa., Aug. 12.—Miss Minnie Weisser, 22, of Center Valley, today can speak after being mute for more than ten years, according to her relatives. And it was all due to a snake.

Ten years ago Miss Weisser lost her speech from fright. Yesterday when she was walking home she saw a snake.

The sight of the reptile gave her such a shock, she told her father, that she yelled out "A snake!"

From that time she has been able to utter words almost as distinctly as though her vocal cords had never been affected.

Wakefield, Mass., Aug. 12.—The country's commercial apple crop was estimated at 39,599,000 barrels by V. A. Sanders and C. D. Stevens, government statisticians, today. This forecast is almost 20 per cent more than the crop harvested last year and nearly 32 per cent more than the average crop of the last five years.

The gain of 11.3 per cent for New England compares with a gain of 6.9 per cent in the principal barrel apple states outside New England.

Stalin Reported Flirting With Mensheviks to Prevent an Insurrection.

London, Aug. 12.—Reports of revolution in Leningrad were founded upon ordinary riots in that city, but the reports of Odessa revolts were occasioned by a rather serious mutiny among workers in the naval arsenal there, according to the reports which have been received here through diplomatic channels.

The situation is in hand and there are at present no indications of a widespread revolt, the diplomatic reports declare, but the dissension is likely to grow and the near future may see events more serious than last week's rioting around Kronstadt.

One report coming through diplomatic channels is to the effect that Stalin, the leader of the right wing, is endeavoring to establish amicable relationships with the Mensheviks, thus compromising in hope that any insurrection fostered by the Mensheviks may be avoided. This reported attempt to compromise with the Mensheviks is said to have further aroused the ardent left supporters in Moscow, and the internal political dispute is

SELECTMEN.

Quite well realizing that service on the Board of Selectmen of a big and busy town like Manchester involves a substantial degree of self sacrifice on the part of the members.

These seven citizens who devote so much of their time to the management of the business of Manchester have already achieved a record that is probably unique—that of serving four successive terms without change in membership.

The selectmen are used to each other; they have shaken down to their working bearings, so to speak, and so constitute the best kind of a mechanism—one that is broken in without showing appreciable signs of wear.

While it is always a rather difficult thing to urge volunteer laborers in any field to stay on the job (the pay of the selectmen being negligible) the Herald believes it speaks for all Manchester when it expresses the hope that there will be no change in the personnel of the board this year, at least.

"NEXT WAR." There are in the world a great many people who, despite the terrible experiences of 1914-18, can still speak and think lightly of war.

This machine, called "Cyclops," weighs over eight tons, can travel at the rate of 135 miles an hour and cruise for eight hours with two tons of bombs aboard.

A ton of TNT judiciously distributed throughout the area of Manchester would reduce this happy and prosperous community to a few cartloads of smoking splinters.

It is extremely comforting to know for a certainty that this particular plane will never be employed for the purpose of knocking this or any other American town into a cocked hat.

One thinking of war may no longer think of the heroes of the Bridge at Concord, or Gettysburg—not even of the magnificent hell of the Argonne nor of the bloody spiritual glory of Verdun.

THE TRAGEDY OF EUROPE. Georg Brandes knows his Europe. For more than half a century the famous Danish writer and critic has been living in Europe, dreaming dreams of a greater Europe, hoping for an ideal day when the nations of the world should be one great family.

And the age of 85 finds him pessimistic. He sees in the future of the lands known as Europe only a series of bickerings, petty, selfish disputes among nations, a group of separate countries each ready to fight the other, each keeping firmly before it the goal of self aggrandisement, each hating every other. "It is the age of nationalism," says the Implicable Dane, "with almost every nation deeming itself first in the world. Indeed, this love of self, this habit of praising one's self has spread over all the world, and the United States is not exempt."

Brandes is an internationalist who has hoped, criticized, begged, pleaded, fought for his ideal. Now he sees the ground dropping away beneath him. He is an old man now, and he fears the ideal of love between nations, the ideal of a world-family, has been shattered forever by the war and its consequences.

It was Georg Brandes to whom, at the start of the war, Clemenceau addressed his famous letter, "Good-by, Brandes." The words of "the tiger" have come true, the significant message has borne itself out. What Clemenceau really meant was:

"Good-by, Brandes, and your dreams and hopes and plans for a great Europe. We are about to go out and destroy your glistening bubble. We are about to wreck the Europe of your desires. Good-by, Brandes, and good-by internationalism."

"The future is dark," said Brandes in an interview the other day. "Stupid and insipid things are being praised."

"Does Europe still exist? We have a European civilization in the sciences, but it is questionable whether we have a European culture. Knowledge is no longer regarded as supreme. The nations dislike one another. Classes, political parties, religious denominations distrust one another. Justice remains an ideal."

"The next war? It will hardly take place in Europe. Europe! Does the idea of Europe ever occur to anybody today?"

SUZANNE LOVES US.

It is worth noting that French animosity toward America and things American does not extend to all Frenchmen. For instance, there is Suzanne Lenglen.

This remarkable young lady, whose physical charm, fortunately, is exceeded by her ability to swat a tennis ball, does not allow sentiment or national feeling to interfere with the instinct that is said to be the heritage of all good Frenchmen, notably thrift.

Mlle. Lenglen, empress of the outdoor courts, has signed a contract with C. C. Pyle, whose initials are popularly supposed to stand for "cash and carry," to make a four-month exhibition tour through the United States, Canada, Cuba and Mexico.

Most of this time, of course, will be spent in the United States, where the pickings are better, and she will swat the tennis ball at so much per swat. In fact, it is said that she has been guaranteed $110,000.

Mlle. Lenglen is said to be as good a patriot as the next Frenchman, but it is not strange that under the circumstances the United States should appear to her more as an amiable uncle than a skintight shaver of notes.

But we do not begrudge Suzanne her $110,000. Far from it. The only feeling of regret we have is that, having lost her amateur standing, she will not be able to play Helen Wills for the championship of the world. We have entertained a sneaking hunch for some time that Helen was just about due to take the mademoiselle over.

BLOOD IN MEXICO.

Whatever may be the reaction of the individual to the issue in the Mexican church-and-state conflict, the shock and horror experienced by all Americans alike in the news of bloody fighting, executions and reprisals, should be tempered by a realization of the circumstances and conditions in Mexico.

It is not at all as if a religious conflict in America were to bear such terrible fruit. For centuries the practice has been, in Mexico, to take to the knife, the gun and the torch, in disputes which on this side of the border would certainly go no further than words or courts.

Violence is in the blood of the people. It is in their traditions. It is one of their institutions. Perhaps, after all, the wonder is that there has not been more of it in the present stress, which appeals to the deepest emotions of an excitable and yet filly disciplined race.

We must not gauge the blood letting in Mexico by American standards. There, under sense of wrong, it has been the habit of many generations for the people to resort to killings; it has been the habit of governments to kill and kill, either in return or to forestall. That this provides no justification goes without saying. The point is the bloodshed, violence, summary executions, arson come into the picture whenever Mexico becomes deeply stirred. That the present tense situation should have been solved without horrors was almost too much to expect. The southern Republic has a long way to go.

TRAMP, TRAMP, TRAMP.

During a time when many colleges and universities are trying to cast out military training, it is gratifying to know that there are 40,000 young men who are willing to spend half their summer, without pay, in acquiring the rudiments of soldiering.

Neither is that the only gratifying thing about the Citizens' Military Training camps this summer. Another is the degree of physical fitness which youth seems to be maintaining. A very small per cent of all applicants was turned down by the army doctors. Yet this is an age when everyone is supposed to be devoting his time to the ruination of his health.

It seems that the nation still is filled with fit-to-fight manhood and, perhaps better still, with manhood that is willing to fight. These summer camps are proving grounds for testing our military strength, potential and real. With our regular army organizations skeletonized, and some existing only on paper, the bulk of power in an emergency would rest with the national guard and the organized reserve.

There were thousands of men who wanted to go to summer camps this year and were cheated by an insufficient appropriation. The nation was cheated, too, for there is no other single influence which so effectively gives an appreciation of the highest obligations of citizenship.

All the problems were solved long ago. What we are hunting now is solutions to the solutions.

All birds have a temperature of 108. Which would kill humans. So don't fly around too much.

Stewart's WASHINGTON LETTERS

FARM PROBLEMS VITALLY CONCERN CITY DWELLERS

By CHARLES P. STEWART Washington, Aug. 12.—The western farmer's troubles mean a deal more to the city man than the latter realizes.

The western farmer, yes. The eastern farmer's in a somewhat different class. For reasons which will appear, he's not so badly off. But the bulk of America's farming is done in the west.

Western agriculture is sick. If it took medicine and the medicine reacted only on western agriculture, for better or for worse, then it would matter only academically to the city man.

But here's a case where western agriculture takes medicine, and the city man, as well as western agriculture, feels the effects.

Soon after Secretary of Agriculture Jardine took office, a western farmer himself, I had a talk with him. Western agriculture was sick then. I asked him what of. He said, in effect:

For many years, farmers went west and got land, for next to nothing, from the government. As the country settled up, this land grew more and more valuable. The farmer farmed. Maybe his farming didn't pay. But he was getting rich just the same because his land was appreciating faster than he was losing money on his crops.

The eastern farmer didn't get free land, except in the earliest colonial days. He made money as a producer from the first, and not as an unconscious land speculator, like the western farmer. He's a truck gardener and a dairyman, close to his market. He's a business man, not a pioneer. His era of increasing land values, if any, was long ago.

The western farmer allowed manufacturing to get ahead of him, with a high protective tariff, and labor to get ahead of him, with immigration restrictions, while he was growing rich, not from agriculture, but as an owner of increasingly valuable land.

Now, for the time being, he's hit, and passed, the peak of this increase, and must make money as a producer. That some squatter in the 70's died rich, after incredible hardships, does not interest him. What he's concerned with is his problem of today.

He can solve it in one of two ways: More money for his western farm products, which means a higher cost of living for the city man. Congressman Haugen, prominently the western farm spokesman, says so.

Or he can bring other prices down to his level, by reducing the tariff, and by relaxing restrictions, to let more immigrants in. Dr. T. C. Atkeson, presiding genius in Washington for the National Grange, has just endorsed this program, since Congress turned down the Haugen method.

In one case it means that the city man will get what he's getting now, but it will cost him more to live. In the other, it means that his living cost will be reduced, but his income cut down too.

So isn't the farmer's problem a problem for the city man?

Women are greatly in the majority in the province of Ulster, Belfast alone recording 23,010 "surplus" females.

IN NEW YORK

New York, Aug. 12.—There are as many "hang-outs" in Manhattan as there are people to "hang out". Which means thousands.

The hours of "hanging out" vary with the groups, as does the neighborhood. Sometimes it is a cafe, sometimes a book shop, sometimes a park corner and sometimes a crowded thoroughfare.

Some of these have constituted, and still do, many of New York's most colorful and romantic gathering places; others have been, and still are, drab, tawdry, sordid, placidly conservative, or dynamically radical.

None was more favored than Joel's before he gave up the ghost. Here gathered the writing army of the metropolis and the gay and witty Broadway folk; writers and wits and Bohemians. They furnished but a laughter-filled foreground.

The background seethed with unwritten melodrama. Here came the fearless adventures and plotters of South American revolutions; debonair soldiers of fortune; weavers of European intrigue, spies and romantic dare-devils. They would watch their plots and their adventures over their wine.

When prohibition spelled the end, Joel hung up a sign announcing that it hadn't been a particularly profitable enterprise, but he had learned much.

On East Tenth Street is a little cafe, the "hang-out" of poets and artists "in revolt" against the old conventions. In MacDougal Street is another little cafe where one may find the young radical writers and editors. The trail-blazers of the old "Masses," many of them now calmed by time and changing tides, have followed Floyd Dell and the young firebrands of yesterday into river cottages.

The book stores of Eighth Street lure groups of "bookish" folk; literary followers of all levels. The Rand school is a "hang-out" for those who would talk the newer philosophies, economic or abstract. The more prosperous go to their "summer hang-outs" in Provincetown, an art colony; Saconnet, where they have a school of psycho-analysis in summer, the Maine coast, Woodstock and Mystic, Conn.

The "arrivals" of the popular magazines and the stage "hang out" in New Rochelle, Great Neck, Mamaroneck and way points. For years one could find a certain theatrical group at Dinty Moore's corn-beef and cabbage emporium in the mid-Forties, off Broadway. But the visit must be made in the early morning when theaters are closed.

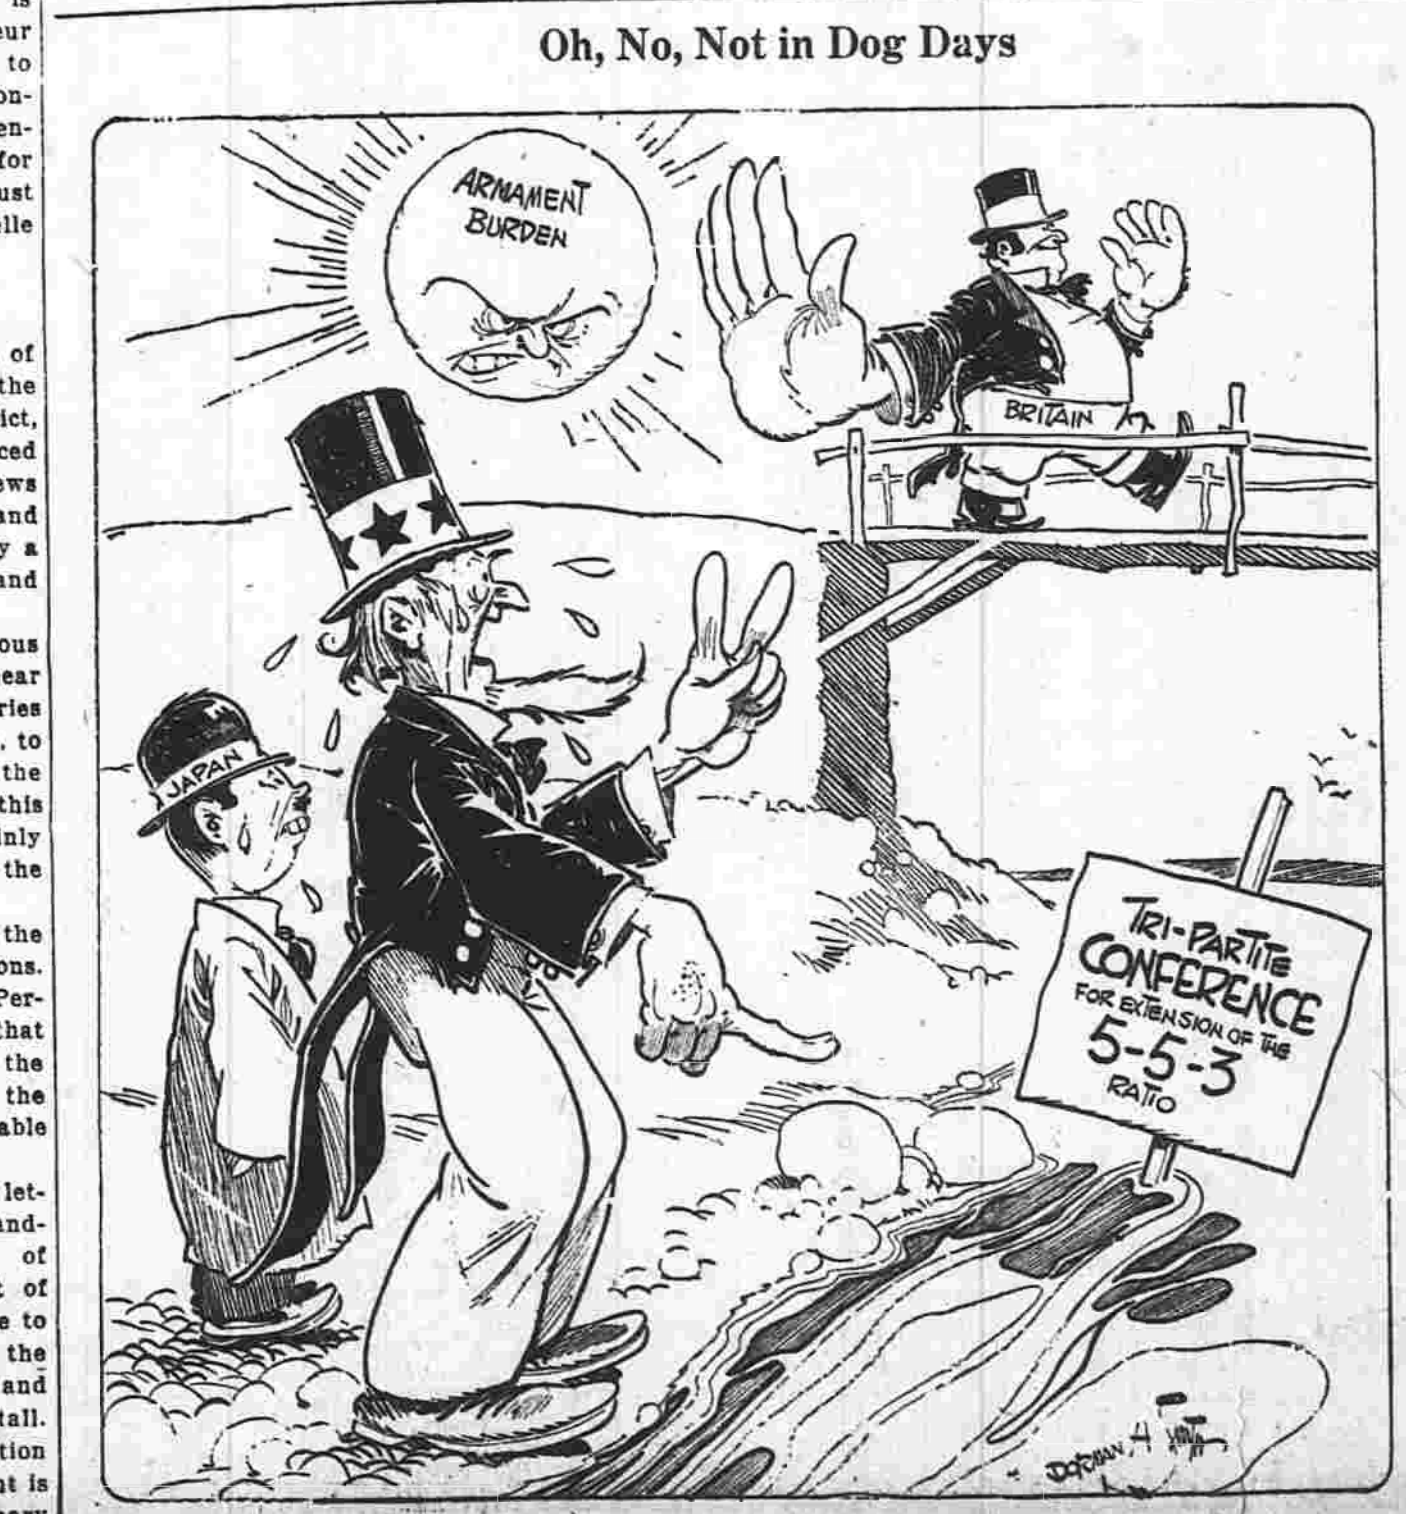

Radio fans gather in the marts near Cortland street; musicians of note gather back of Carnegie Hall; jazz players and band musicians clog the sidewalks at 44th Street park, a garage where organ grinders gather; a book shop run by a cowboy where ex-westerners flock—everything and everybody; all tastes and kinds.

Manhattan is the most "groupy" city in the world. —GILBERT SWAN.

"The Battle of Niantic"

(Many Manchester Boys in Cast At the State, Fri. & Sat)

Yes, in August too, they come to Garber Brothers in Big Numbers

August, the month of "sales" everywhere—except at Garber Bros., yet it is our big month of the year! WHY?

PEOPLE waited for the August "sales" to arrive . . . thinking and hoping they would save some money.

Then the awaited "sales" came . . . but the claims these sales made were so exaggerated that it was impossible to believe everything.

They read Garber Brothers' advertisement. It did NOT announce a sale, because Garber Brothers Never have sales . . . but it did make claims of having LOWER than sale prices . . . and the claims were backed up by facts . . . facts that seemed sound and were certainly sensible.

They decided to look around first. They visited almost every August sale. The more sales they visited the more confused they became and the more disappointed they were.

Then they came to Garber Brothers . . . and they were surprised. There were no discounts to confuse them and there were no wild claims to disappoint them.

They were shown through the entire store and then through the factory. It was a revelation to them. Here at last was a store that had good reason to make claims of selling good furniture for less.

They compared sale prices with Garber Brothers' EVERYDAY prices. They compared the sales quality furniture with Garber Brothers' standard of quality.

and what did they find?

They found that the exceptional values they had hoped to find at August sales were available to them here at Garber Brothers every day in the year without a sale.

It pays to compare with Garber Brothers' everyday prices.

Those who have compared prices find that Garber Brothers' EVERYDAY prices are lower than "sale" prices.

POE'S STORIES: The Black Cat (3)

The mystery of the cat's appearance on the wall above the master's bed was solved by the probability that someone had seen the cat and thrown it through a window of the burning house to awaken the sleepers. Falling walls had pressed the image on the freshly-plastered wall of the bedchamber.

The master was satisfied with the explanation of Pluto's image, but remorse remained in the form of a mental picture of the cat.

One night as the master sat in a den of infamy he noticed a cat reposing on top of a hoghead of rum. He stroked it.

The new cat, which much resembled Pluto, followed its chosen master home. The master's wife, who had been fond of Pluto, and regretted the cruel deed that caused its death, at once made friends with the animal. Next morning, the master discovered that the new cat, like Pluto, had but one eye! (Continued)

TELLS OF MRS. GAINES

SUICIDAL ATTEMPT

Witness Says Threatened Departure of Father and Daughter Prompted the Act.

Seattle, Wash., Aug. 12.—The story of Mrs. Elizabeth Gaines' attempted suicide last fall, told in Judge Robert M. Jones' court by George A. Memmer, state witness against Wallace C. Gaines, on trial charged with the murder of his daughter, Sylvia, Smith College graduate, was the high light of the case today.

Memmer's entire story was objected to strenuously by the defense, but was allowed by Judge Jones, a ruling constituting the state's first victory in its plea for consideration of collateral matters.

"They're going to leave me," Mrs. Gaines cried hysterically as she lay on a bed in the Gaines home just after her suicide attempt, Memmer related.

Nearby, the witness said, were the grips of Bob Gaines and Sylvia, completely packed, ready for the proposed departure of father and daughter to a downtown apartment where they were planning to make their home over Mrs. Gaines' protest.

"Don't hit me, Bob. I'll be good to her," Mrs. Gaines cried during the turmoil in the household following the suicide attempt Memmer recounted.

THEY NEVER KNEW TOM SIMS

START HERE TODAY

(The names of the characters in this true story are entirely fictitious. All gifts for them such as rat poison, bombs, black hand letters and dirty looks should be held until the author calls for them in person.)

JIMSON WEED was born an infant. However, after trying for years and years he outgrew the handicap and had a fine job in the DIRTY PAN BAKERY which did a good business in OMEOMY, OHIO.

JIMP discovers a new way to kill flies and makes a million dollars. One day, while he isn't looking, PEARL HANDLE marries him, so they start on their honeymoon.

That'll give you the general idea of the story. It isn't so complicated, and you haven't missed much. But it's an awfully nice story. Read it, if you like to cry.

TURN TO THE RIGHT CHAPTER X

YESTERDAY'S chapter ended rather suddenly when some dirty bum sneaked into the Pennsylvania Hotel in New York and swiped our Pearl's clothes while she was taking a bath in the tub.

This left Pearl Weed alone in the great city, penniless, husbandless, friendless, and without a thing to wear.

Really, Pearl wasn't even in rags. The dirty crook took every stitch of clothing while she was chasing the soap about the tub.

Knock! Knock! Knock! Someone had rapped at the door these times. If you don't believe it, count them.

Pearl was puzzled. How could she go to the door as she was? She couldn't, just couldn't.

Knock! Knock! Knock! What, oh what, could the poor girl do. The carpet tickled her bare feet as she advanced cautiously.

There, on the other side of the door, she saw Jimp.

"Oh, my husband. Evidently he had escaped from the aquarium where he was held as a fish."

"Yes," whispered Pearl through the keyhole.

"Yes," shouted Jimp. "Open the door. I brought you something."

"Is it clothes?" questioned Pearl, a faint hope sending her dear little heart pounding against her dear little ribs.

"Yes," cried Jimp, tossing a bundle over the transom. "It's clothes. See for yourself."

Pearl tore frantically at the wrappings of the bundle. Its contents tumbled to the floor—a beautiful seal-skin coat.

Slipping into it, Pearl opened the door and fell round her darling husband's rough neck.

"How do you like it?" asked Jimp, giggling sleepily. "They thought I was a fish, so they put me in with the seals."

"It's so exquisite," beamed Pearl. "Yes, he was catching cold. He knew that. His nose told him so. They put me in with the seals."

Strangers gazed at the barefoot lady in the swell seal-skin coat.

So I just skinned the seals and brought you that coat. Where are your clothes?"

Pearl wailed into a chair. "Someone stole my clothes while I was bathing in the bath tub."

"We'll buy some more," smiled the fond husband.

"I spent our last $900,000," sobbed the wife.

It was indeed a mess. What to do now? Now what to do? Both were broke.

"Let's take a walk and formulate our plans," suggested the bright young husband who was not beaten so easily.

A drizzling rain fell as Mr. and Mrs. Jimpson Weed strolled down Broadway in earnest conversation.

Strangers gazed at the barefoot lady in the swell seal-skin coat. To quell their astonishment, Jimp removed his shoes and gave them to his wife.

It was the gentleman in him which made him do so. Any gent will let his wife have his shoes when he loses hers, even if his socks do look more like spats. And Jimp's socks were so full of holes in the feet they did remind one of spats.

Presently, our Jimp began to cough. The sidewalk didn't hurt his feet much, but he was catching cold. He sneezed constantly.

Yes, he was catching cold. He knew that. His nose told him so. They put me in with the seals.

The Chinese have a quaint way of remarking, "The only ill wind that blows no good is a saxophone player."

The Persians frequently say, "If every cloud has a silver lining, then every silver lining has a cloud."

The Eskimos have a habit of singing. "Fools make money and money makes fools."

In Chautney, even the small boys often whistle. "A fool and his money are soon started."

Jimp and Pearl sat in their sumptuous quarters at the Pennsylvania Hotel. Having never visited China, Persia, Eskimonia or Chautney, they knew none of these sayings.

Pearl lifted her delicate hand languidly and rang a golden bell. Twelve maids answered its mellow note.

NORTH END FIREMEN LOSE TO SOUTH IN LAST FRAME

Losers Lead Up to Final Inning But Barrage of Hits Turn Tide in Favor of South—No. 1 Wins All Other Contests at Firemen's Night.

Local Sport Chatter

The North and South End firemen certainly staged one grand ball game last night. It was a regular old time affair with all the old pep and fire that makes a game interesting.

That last inning rally by the South Enders had the entire crowd on its feet, shouting and jumping around as though electrified.

Up to this last inning the South End hadn't been able to do a thing with the slants McGonigal was serving up.

One after another got up and smacked the apple, while several North End players fumbled what should have been outs and McGonigal's work went for considerably less than naught.

Although there was plenty of unorthodox baseball seen in this game, the crowd enjoyed it immensely.

It was Firemen's Night and the red-shirted laddies turned out almost to a man.

An enormous crowd attended the affair and listened to the concert given by Colt's Army band of Hartford.

The volley ball lineup: No. 1. All Stars. Beadie Brooks.

The horseshoe scores: Behrend, Frecheit, No. 1, 15; Kerr, Reymander, No. 4, 10.

ERNEST LYNN, author of THE YELLOW STUB

BEGIN HERE TODAY JOHN and FAY MILBURN buy a home when their baby girl is born and the advertising agency in which John is partner and copy writer lands a new contract. Among their acquaintances are—

NOEL and VERA BOYD, whose marriage is strictly "modern."

FAT and MARIAN FORBES, who have three children and whose domestic life is unhappy because of Pat's roving tendencies. Previous chapters told how:

John was fascinated on meeting NELL ORME, of whom Pat Forbes hints that she is having trouble with her husband.

When Fay took JUDITH, the baby, to Washington to visit her parents, John "ran around" a good deal, mostly with Pat Forbes.

When Fay returned, gossip had retailed some of his doings, and Fay quarreled between him and Fay followed, then Fay drove him "out on a tear." Fay, learning he had been out again with other women, threatened to leave him if it was repeated.

John becomes aware that people are talking about him, and NAY GRAHAM, his partner, blames the loss of a client on the "damaged reputation" he charges John was bringing the firm.

Vera Boyd invites him to tea and overcomes his objections by holding out a "surprise" for him. It is a real surprise, for he finds Nell Orme. He resolves not to go again, as he is aware of Vera's propensity for promoting "affairs." Nevertheless, he does, and this time he madly makes Nell in his arms, and Marian Forbes comes in on them.

Fay learns of it and announces her intention of leaving him. He tries to dissuade her, she insults her, and she smacks him.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY (The names and situations in this story are fictitious.)

CHAPTER XLIV THE blow left a glowing red print on his face. It had taken him by surprise, and he had involuntarily recoiled, but after the shock of it he stood looking at her, wordlessly, his eyes smoldering. A long time he stood that way, and there was nothing said between them. Then he calmly turned on his heel, grabbed his hat and walked out of the house.

Once outside, and away from Fay, self-pity took hold of him. What right, he reflected, had Fay to assume that, just because he had met Nell Orme a couple of times, he was a low cad? Hang it all, were all women alike in thinking the worst of their husbands? And Marian Forbes—she had had a lot to do, to go running to Fay with a report of what she had seen in Vera Boyd's house. Of course, he was classified by Marian, no doubt, in the same category with Pat—a well-a rounder.

If people only would keep their mouths shut and tend to their own business. He reflected that nearly all the quarrels he and Fay had had—certainly all their serious ones—had been the result of some busy-body's tattling something about him to Fay.

"My God!" he burst forth bitterly, "why doesn't she let me alone? Why does she always think the worst of me? The worst I've ever done since getting married is to take a few drinks and kiss a few women. Of course she doesn't approve of it, and I can't expect her to—but by the Lord Harry I'm no drunkard, and I'm no—no adulterer."

He tried to raise the thick white coffee cup casually to his lips. There was an expression on his face that made his heart beat a little faster. He had never seen Jerry Hathaway when he seemed so troubled.

All at once I found that there was new feeling within my soul as I watched him. I wanted to comfort him. I wanted to hold his head against my heart. I wanted to smooth his hair which had become matted in our long ride from the city when he had been without his hat.

For the first time in my short life I felt that motherly instinct that merciful Providence had planted in the soul of every woman. Until now I had been so interested in my affairs and the exciting experiments that I had been making in every-day living, that the idea had never come to me that my own way was the way of every woman. It was the fulfilling of God's great plan. It was the great thing that makes a woman something more or less divine. It was the thing that has made great painters place a halo around the head of Mary—it was the thing which makes all men at some times in their lives look upon some woman and adore.

TOMORROW: Judy Looks Ahead.

CARROTS A teaspoon of sugar improves the flavor of carrots, if added when the water begins to boil.

SAVES A STAIN Fruit acids will stain the finest porcelain table top, if allowed to stand. Always wipe up immediately with warm water.

Jerry looked at me and appealingly, I saw his hand tremble as

"It would be better," he said, "if we were divorced, if you think those things of me."

But Fay thinks I'm both. It would serve her right if I did leave her.

Then he was suddenly reminded of what Fay had said about leaving him. But he shook his head at the thought of it, although a sudden pang of feeling had gripped his heart. Surely, she couldn't mean it. She had spoken in the heat of anger. She was hurt, mad—and she was trying to wound him in return.

Well, he thought, he'd walk around until her anger, and his own, had had time to cool. To think that she had struck him! He could feel the blow, could see the cold fury in her eyes as plainly as if the scene were being re-enacted. Peculiar thing, that. That is, his own emotion when Fay had hit him was peculiar. He had been surprised, but, oddly enough, it had not increased his anger. He had had no desire to strike back, which would have been perfectly normal, he thought, even where the other person was a woman. Rather, he had felt a little pity for Fay, and it had served her right to walk out on her as he had done.

A street car came rumbling by and on a sudden impulse he boarded it and rode all the way down town, where he walked the streets aimlessly for a couple of hours, mulling to himself like an old man. He felt an uncomfortable sensation in his stomach and glanced at his watch. Nine o'clock! And he had had no dinner. He found a restaurant and ordered a big meal, but when it was served a few bites satisfied him and he merely toyed with the rest.

"What's it just right, sir?" the waiter was asking at his elbow. "Eat?" He looked at the other stupidly, and the waiter repeated his question. "Oh, sure. Everything was all right," John assured him. "Just wasn't as hungry as I thought." He left a large tip beside his plate, and the waiter was obsequiously itself in showing him out.

At any rate, John thought, it was nice to know that not everyone was inconsiderate of him. Even if it was a waiter—who doubtless expected to be tipped for it—it was good to see thoughtfulness in others.

A pale moon was riding the sky, and it seemed cold. He shivered a little in the early autumn air and wished that he had taken time to watch his topcoat on his way out of the house. Well, it was Fay's fault. And if he caught cold and developed pneumonia or something she'd have herself to blame for striking him and virtually driving him out of his own house.

Fay, if you only knew! He loved you, Fay. Even with all his faults, he loved you as something more precious than life.

He found himself repeating that over and over again, and self-pity now was nearly overwhelming him. To speak of himself in the third person like that made the thing he was repeating sound like an epitaph, and he found himself visualizing a gray slab over his grave, with a tearful Fay kneeling at the foot of it with upturned eyes asking for his forgiveness.

"Hell!" He dashed his hand against his eyes and was angry with himself when it found moisture there. He looked again at his watch. Ten-thirty. He wondered whether Fay would be waiting up for him and whether there would be reconciliation, or just a renewal of their quarrel. She certainly couldn't be serious about leaving him. The thing was so impossible. It happened in the books, and she happened sometimes to other men, but it couldn't happen to him. Why, what would become of Judith? No, she had merely been threatening.

"I suppose," he said, "I ought to be more careful and a little more considerate of her. This Nell Orme thing is just plain damfoolishness. It's not getting me anywhere. Just to cut it out. I'll tell Fay when I get home—explain the whole thing to her, about Vera and all—Lord, suppose she did leave me!"

Again and again the thought recurred, but he kept shaking his head at it. He wouldn't do that. She was high-spirited and independent. It was high-spirited that he couldn't be serious about breaking up their little home. Why, hang it, he was just beginning to make some money, and things were starting to come back to him. This would be just about perfect if it weren't for Nat Graham, the old kid-joy. He'd have to do something sometime about breaking up partnership with Graham and taking on someone a little more congenial. Eay Nat out that was it. Of course, he couldn't have the money now, but he could raise it if he had a little time. That was it, break with Nat Graham and start all over again with a clean slate, and cut out all his foolishness—these dogmatic flirtations that didn't get anywhere.

He wondered how Fay would take it when he told her that he had decided to break up his partnership with Nat Graham. Fay didn't like him; maybe she'd see that with Graham out of their lives they could start all over again without any handicaps. But how had Graham abandoned them? Fay would be sure to ask. Oh, in lots of ways! When conditions at the office were disagreeable they made other conditions equally as bad. A man ought to be perfectly happy in his work if he wanted to be happy in his home life. That was it, by golly. How could Fay expect him to be a hundred per cent when things down at the office lately were so disagreeable? The little house, when he went up the front walk, was bathed in austere moonlight, and something about its appearance—the cold, silvery sheen of its white paint—chilled him. A light was burning in the front bedroom—his and Fay's room. He slowly and hesitatingly moved toward the front door and went in.

Fay had time to regret striking John, but there burned within her a resoluteness of purpose and a fortitude that had dwelt in the hardy breasts of her Puritan ancestors. She had declared herself, and she was going to go through with it.

She cried a little with remorse for having slapped him, and she cried a good deal more when she saw Fay's eyes and then she went upstairs and started packing her trunk. . . . There in the bottom of the trunk was her wedding dress, and the beautiful white satin petticoat and underthings that had been worn only once. And here in a tray was their marriage certificate. Everywhere, it seemed, were reminders that she and John belonged to each other and she was leaving him. The thought was almost more than she could bear, but she continued with her task, although her eyes were streaming tears.

She did not hear the front door open downstairs, but she heard John's footfalls ascending the stairs, and suddenly he was framed in the doorway.

"Fay," he said gently, and she looked up, stealing her heart against the softness that seemed to be flooding her. This big boy . . . "What are you doing?" "What do you suppose? I'm packing." She got up from her position in front of the trunk and moved over to the vanity dresser, where she started exploring the drawers and pulling their contents on the floor. "You—you're not serious, Fay?" "You don't mean you're really going through with it—that you're actually leaving? Fay, be serious. It's too late now. This thing you're contemplating."

Good Nature and Good Health

WHEN PEOPLE FAINT.

BY DR. HUGH S. CUMMING Surgeon General, United States Public Health Service.

Fainting, which may be brought on by a variety of causes, does not always depend upon physical strength. Strong men faint sometimes, and from very slight causes.

Exhaustion, weakness, hemorrhage, extreme heat, lack of air, or some strong emotional shock are often responsible for fainting attacks.

There is a very important psychic element in nearly all faints. Fear or the sight of blood often produces it. A feeling of weakness comes over the patient and black spots float before his eyes.

He becomes, first pale, then greenish-yellow, and the lips lose their natural color. Cold sweat breaks out on the forehead, the pulse is rapid and weak, the respiration is very shallow.

Falls to Ground. About this time the patient sinks back into his seat or falls to the ground unconscious. If a couch or bench is available, the patient should be laid with his head hanging over the edge so that the blood will rush to the brain.

It is a fairly safe rule that in all accidents where the face of the patient is pale, there is a lack of blood in the brain and the head should be lowered. When the face is red, the body should be propped up with the head as high as possible.

In all cases of fainting it is important that the patient have fresh air. Cold water dashed on the face helps, as does smelling salts or a few drops of ammonia held under the nose. When consciousness returns the patient should be given a teaspoonful of aromatic spirits of ammonia in plenty of water.

It is dangerous to allow a person not yet recovered from a fainting spell to attempt to walk. Another warning is that in case unconsciousness persists after first aid methods have been applied, a physician should be called at once.

very smart. It lends a graceful movement to the evening dress. It is seen more often in black than any other color.

Just one month before school starts and that means new clothes for the kiddies and older girls and boys too. If you make most of them it is a good time to pick up remnants in the stores, or ready-made garments that they wish to close out. Summer dresses can be worn for many weeks yet and little girls wear wash dresses now the year around, a sanitary practice.

Fall's favorite color is to be Chanel red. Do you know what it is—a deep winey red. It is particularly charming in hats, coats or dresses; not alone for children but for adults is it appropriate.

A novel coffee table is in reality a large mahogany tray whose folding legs are unfolded by slight pressure at the handles. Bamboo tables which are light and easily conveyed from one part of the house to another are also much used for porch teas.

Black which has come rapidly to the front for the summer formal frock is to be found in nets, tulle, chiffons, georgettes and laces.

Now that tomatoes are ripe and getting plentiful, they should come to the table in a variety of ways. A nice way to serve the canned spaghetti with tomato is to hollow out the whole tomatoes, fill with this mixture cover with buttered crumbs and bake. Another good filling for tomato shells is corn pulp mixed with a little cream and a beaten egg, baked and served on rounds of buttered toast.

This cabbage dish is really delicious and well worth serving often.

Baked New Cabbage One four-pound head cabbage, 1-2 teaspoons salt, 1-3 teaspoon pepper, 2 tablespoons butter, 4 tablespoons heavy cream, 2 eggs, 1 tablespoon vinegar.

Cut head of cabbage in quarters and cook in boiling water for 20 minutes. Do not cover kettle while boiling. Drain and chop. Beat eggs until light and add salt, pepper, butter, cream, vinegar and 1-2 teaspoon sugar. Mix thoroughly with chopped cabbage and turn into a well buttered baking dish. Bake in a hot oven about 15 minutes until the top is a golden brown. Serve at once.

Selma Lagerlof the Swedish author started out in life as a school-teacher in Stockholm. Then she wrote words for the press and tried her hand at fiction but success did not come until she was 22 when she won a prize for her stories. Her great novel "Jerusalem" in 1902 put the seal on her fame. She is considered perhaps the greatest living woman writer of the day. In 1914 she was elected to the Swedish Academy the first woman thus honored. This was after she had received the Nobel prize for literature. Now at 68 she finds her life crowded with honors and renown.

"I expect," said Jerry, "as much as he will hate it, your brother will have to come out here and be present at the settlement. That will take some time you know. I am somewhat at loss to know why he has not spoken of that before."

"Perhaps he has," said Joan, as a slow blush of shame spread over her face. "There are three letters, one an airplane special at the house. But to tell the truth I was so worried about my own affairs that I did not open them. John often sends me special letters when he wants books or instruments or something done for him in the city, and I thought these letters were about some of the things that could wait until I knew what was going to happen to me. I'll go home now and read them and let you know in the morning."

What Do You Want to Be?

by Olive Roberts Barton.

The old copy-books put it this way, "There is no such word as can't."

"If at first you don't succeed, try, try again!" we chattered each morning after roll call among our other daily dozen maxims in school.

It took a smart little seamstress to wake up and teach me my life's lesson. One day it happened that I was chosen to "do a stunt" at an entertainment. I was only a girl, and to get to work and make up a humorous speech, moreover to put it into rhyme as they suggested, was about the same as undertaking to rewrite the Koran in Singalese. I flatly refused. Who did they think I was? It was bad enough to get up and face people without having to make up your own speech, and in poetry at that!

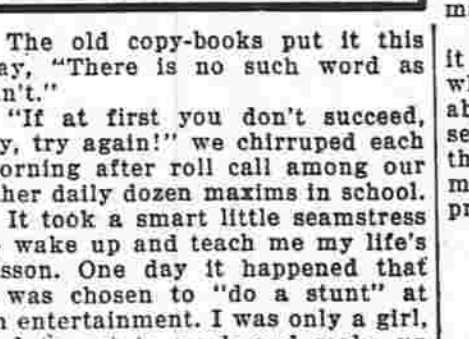

When I got home I started at the front door to blow off the accumulated steam of my wrath. I blew it off through the hall, up the stairs and into the sewing room where spring sewing was in process of consummation. I told the whole story to my mother and received what I was looking for, her sweet sympathy and the gentle assertion that "it was a shame."

Suddenly the little seamstress who came twice each year to dress the family, turned around from the machine and pulled her glasses down on her nose. "What you want to be?" she said tartly. "A cow in a field?"

"Well, you can't even be a cow," I said, "if you don't know how."

Beetle Glove

Orange and black beetles feature this beige kid glove. That on the back of the hand is found on one glove only.

"Bah!" said she, yanking up her glasses and turning her back again. Soon the old machine was roaring away.

I went to my own room and sat on the edge of the bed and thought, "A cow in a field! A cow in a field! I suppose she means just living and never trying." I put on my hat and went to see the chairman of the committee.

I did it! I don't know how good it was, but I did it. To this day when some seemingly insurmountable thing looms large, I say to myself, "A cow in a field!" and I see the little seamstress at the sewing machine, her broad short back expressing eloquent disdain.

KEITH EMPLOYEES'
ANNUAL VACATION

Store Closes Saturday for Two Weeks—Plan Has Many Advantages.

The G. E. Keith Furniture Company again announced that its store will follow its unique policy again this year of closing for two weeks for employees' vacation. After business is over on Saturday night of this week the doors will be closed to the public and no goods will be sold, no deliveries made, and not a wheel turned until Monday morning, August 30.

This is the fourth consecutive year that Keith's have adopted this plan of shutting down completely for two weeks and giving everyone a vacation with full pay. Instituted originally as a means of avoiding the nuisance of employees going and coming all summer long as their respective vacation came around, and as a means of avoiding practically double work all summer long for one half of the force or the other, the plan has proved very satisfactory to the company in this respect and has not caused any apparent loss of trade.

In fact, as a rule more business has been done during the summer months than was formerly the case, with everything going full blast while the store is open and more than making up for the two weeks shut down. Keith's have found that people can and will anticipate their needs somewhat in the furniture line, and particularly this summer they report an exceptionally fine business during the Mid-Summer sale which they have been

PROCRASTINATION

Isn't it peculiar why people will put off ordering coal until the last minute when they could just as well have their bins filled before the cold weather arrives?

It's human nature to put off until tomorrow what can be done today, but every sudden cold snap keeps us busy writing orders, each order stating "must be delivered at once."

All of which leads us to ask, have you ordered your winter supply of coal?
