No One Injured—Severe Electrical Storm Does Little Damage Beside Delaying Traffic Here.

Except for crippled trolley service, Manchester suffered little from the rain of yesterday's severe electrical storm.

Superintendent Speaks. Superintendent Henry A. Nettleton, of the local office of the Connecticut Company, when interviewed by a Herald representative today said:

"Yesterday's storm was the worst of the year as far as the effect it had on trolley service. It caused us to operate on schedule for several hours and also proved a financial loss."

Many Washouts. It was also learned that the heavy rainfall caused numerous washouts. In several instances the sand and gravel was washed out to the trolley tracks and traffic was interfered with.

Storm Hits Town. The storm struck Manchester about 4 o'clock in the afternoon. From that time until almost midnight the trolley cars operated on schedule.

Sub-Station Struck. To add further to the trouble on the Stafford Springs-Hartford route the West street sub-station in Rockville was struck by lightning and it

U. S. EMPLOYEES WILL GET BLUE ENVELOPES

Department Workers to Be Dropped as Result of Budget Cut Decided On.

Washington, Aug. 13.—Distribution of a $100,000,000 cut in the preliminary estimate of the 1923 budget over the various government departments was arranged today by the Bureau of the Budget.

The 1923 budget cut was the lowest since 1922. For the six years, 1923-1928, the Budget Bureau lopped off $1,463,770,000 from the original estimates of expenditure.

Officials explained that the $100,000,000 reduction for the new year will be distributed by a percentage system over the departments. It was anticipated that an important part of the cut would be obtained by a reduction personnel, in which case the heaviest cost pruning would fall on departments with the largest number of employees.

In his last two addresses to the government business organization, President Coolidge called attention to the personnel question, pointing out that salary and wage expenditure is the most costly item of the budget. Declaring that "it is easy to have too many people on the payroll," the President added that reductions which have been made show no detrimental effect upon results.

YOUNGSTER CONTRIBUTES CENT TO AID OTHERS.

MUCH PUBLICITY FOR THE KIDDIES

State Theater Flashing Appeals—Pastors May Help to Pass Word Along.

The publicity campaign for funds for the camp at Hebron for needy youngsters is under way now. Last night on the screen at the State theatre Jack Sanson, the manager, allowed slides to be shown making appeals to the public to make the camp a permanent one.

Lack of Funds. There is still a lack of small contributions. This is not as it should be. Manchester has always contributed generously in the past and there has not been a more worthy cause than this since the war.

Cases Investigated. During the year, the welfare nurses here pick out the neediest cases. They recommend various children. Upon their recommendations the children are given a vacation. This year there were 30 although three times that number could have been sent. That, briefly, is the object of this campaign.

Not Enough. Money has been received already but not enough small contributions as was stated before. When these are received they will be acknowledged in these columns. Send or bring any amount, no matter how small, to Louis H. Sipe at the Home Bank and Trust Co. As related elsewhere today in the Evening Herald, a small boy has contributed one cent to the fund.

A big White truck carrying thirty children from one tobacco plantation to another on the Pleasant Valley road in Wapping, skidded this afternoon and overturned. From all information that could be secured none of the children were injured. Because of last night's storm which put all telephones in that neighborhood out of commission, details of the accident were not obtainable.

Not Too Low. Fishermen in the section whose sportsmanship is unquestioned say that the water certainly is not too low for fishing. Some of them were so indignant at the posting that they called at the commissioner's office at the Capitol in Hartford. One man was told that a protest had been received, but it was finally admitted that a telephone call had been the cause of sending an inspector to the lake.

Inspector Bodnar of Tolland County investigated, but according to M. W. Halling, proprietor of Fannertavern on the lake, no reason for posting the lake was given at the time. Later he received orders to ban fishing there.

Balsinger, the plastic surgeon who corrected the champion's profile, declared today in replying to the statement of Dr. C. Foria of Vienna that hot weather will wilt Dempsey's re-constructed nose.

COTTAGERS RILED AS LAKE IS POSTED

Low Water Given as Reason for Ban on Fishing; Sportsmen Cry "Unfair."

Cedar Swamp, or Bolton Lake No. 1, on the shores of which many Manchester people have cottages, was posted against fishing this week by the State Fish and Game commission. As a result summer residents at the lake and many of the fishermen in this section are indignant.

The reason given for the posting of the lake is that the water is so low it is "unsportsmanlike" to take fish from the lake. However, in other dry periods, the lake water has been low, even lower than at present, and the commission has never before posted it against fishing.

Not Too Low. Fishermen in the section whose sportsmanship is unquestioned say that the water certainly is not too low for fishing. Some of them were so indignant at the posting that they called at the commissioner's office at the Capitol in Hartford. One man was told that a protest had been received, but it was finally admitted that a telephone call had been the cause of sending an inspector to the lake.

Inspector Bodnar of Tolland County investigated, but according to M. W. Halling, proprietor of Fannertavern on the lake, no reason for posting the lake was given at the time. Later he received orders to ban fishing there.

Many of the cottage owners say that the reason for the water being low is that the flow into the lake has been stopped. A committee of the property owners is said to be investigating this, and if the flow of water has been stopped, the committee will press for action by state authorities.

NOOSE FINISHES CRIME CAREER OF WHITTEMORE

Insolent to the Last, Baltimore Thief and Murderer Says "Goodby" Is Best Wish for Anybody.

Baltimore, Aug. 13.—As he stood in the death chamber of the Maryland penitentiary, his body wrapped in a gray shroud, his neck in a rope, there came from the lips of Richard Reese Whittemore no word of regret, no sign of repentance, no indication of fear.

"I wish to say good-bye. That's the best I could wish anybody." That was all he said, and these words he uttered in a manner that stunned the crowd of 150 or more spectators who gathered at the death in that gloomy chamber.

The hubbub and excitement that filled the chamber died as the murderer was led into the room from his cell. There was a stir to look at him, to see if he would turn "yellow" at the end, and then, silence.

Nerve Racking Silence. The silence for a moment was awful. The crowd longed for the agony of it to break. The guards went about the business of death. These guards played their part well, as if they had rehearsed for it. Even Whittemore seemed to sense the scene. He acted his part without a break.

They led him into the death chamber at 12:05 a. m. on this Friday morning, the 13th. The law took no chance. He was bound at wrist and chest, and the gray shroud covered him. He came out upon the balcony, unassisted. Straight to the dangling rope and trap he walked. It was solemn, grim business, yet he smiled.

Below, the crowd surged forward. It was made up of onlookers, demanded by the law—newspapermen and prison officials. The crowd was intensely curious. There were but few moist eyes.

Insolent at End. A guard put himself in front of the doomed gunman. "Is there anything you wish to say?" the guard inquired in a businesslike manner. Whittemore froze to his tracks. He was meditating a reply—had not expected the question.

The crowd was breathless. "I wish to say good-bye. That's the best I could wish anybody." Even the guard was abashed. His face red above his blue uniform, he put the question again. Whittemore had no more to say. He was ready for the trap. The hood went over his head. The hooded figure stood motionless.

Then the guards extended quickly to the business at hand. Neatly Done. The hanging was neatly done, as (Continued on Page 2.)

Present Position. Max Carey, captain; "Babe" Adams, veteran pitcher, and Carson Bigbee, utility outfielder, who presented McKechnie with a petition for Clarke's removal from the playing field, refused to comment, but McKechnie requested that Clarke again don a uniform.

Clarke's reply was that he would remain off the field until proper disciplinary action had been taken against the "insurgents" by McKechnie. McKechnie described the situation as "one of the most distressing in my baseball career."

The players' reason for desiring Clarke's absence from the bench remained a secret. None was willing to discuss it.

HUNGARIAN MUNITIONS PLANT GOES, MANY DIE

24 Reported Dead, 150 Missing in Great Disaster Like That at Lake Denmark. Budapest, Aug. 13.—Hungary's only munitions plant, near here, blew up last night with an unknown number of fatalities.

An official statement declares that 24 persons are missing and 150 are reported injured and there has been extensive property damage.

Practically all of the hundred buildings of the plant have been wrecked. The plant was located at Caspel island, about ten miles out of Budapest.

Windows for many miles around were broken and people at considerable distances were shaken by the blasts.

"Secret Magazines." Vienna, Aug. 13.—The Arbeiter Zeitung states that the explosion of the Hungarian munitions factory near Budapest last night occurred in secret underground magazines of which the Allied Commission of control had no knowledge. The newspaper states that Communists discovered these magazines and blew them up in revenge for Hungarian sentences upon Communists.

U. S. MINISTERS GIVE ADVICE TO MEX CATHOLICS

Protestants Urge First Loyalty to Country—Episcopate Resents, Says Ministers Sold Out. Mexico City, Aug. 13.—Mexican citizens were urged to place loyalty to their government before loyalty to their church, in the report issued today by the "Good Will" Mission of 32 Protestant pastors who have just completed two weeks of intensive study of Mexican conditions.

The report found that the government of President Calles was strong and recommended the adoption of a program of educational and social reform.

Episcopate Resents. The Mexican Catholic Episcopate issued a statement attacking the report. This statement denied that the Calles government was strong because it lacked the support of the people. It also opposed the doctrine of giving first loyalty to the government, averring that that would mean "subjection of the church by the state."

The report of the mission was carefully phrased in an effort to avoid injuring the feelings of the conflicting parties. It pointed out that the mission had interviewed representatives of Mexican labor, Mexican and foreign merchants, the Catholic clergy, Protestant ministers and government officials. They were received courteously everywhere, the report stated.

Saw No Violence. "We have seen no mutinies, no riots, no signs of violence," the report continued. "Representatives of all groups, even those opposed to the government, assured us that the Calles government was strong and fully in control of the situation."

"We believe that when the churches of Mexico, like the churches of the United States, accept that the majority of the people in Mexico owe a greater civic loyalty to the state than to the church, then religious questions in Mexico will be settled and the church will prosper in its own right."

Cites Coolidge View. The Episcopate, in its reply, took up the report point by point, asserting that the majority of the people in Mexico were not in sympathy with the government.

The reply declared President Coolidge had uttered a prophecy when he made the statement that the "government which persecutes religion digs its own grave."

Regarding the statement counseling first loyalty to the government, the Episcopate said: "We don't believe that the United States demands of its citizens a greater loyalty to the state than to God. Yet that is what the visitors demand for Mexico."

"Play Ignoble Parts" "It is very painful to see American intellectuals come to Mexico to play such sad and ignoble parts, selling themselves to the Mexican government in order to distort the truth and mislead the American press and the American people."

The Episcopate today issued a lengthy statement which was a general denial of most of the declarations made by President Calles in his exposition of the religious situation to the "good will" mission.

Answering the charge of President Calles that the church has fostered rebellion, the Episcopate declared that the church commands obedience, respect and support for the constituted authority except when laws are unjust and when they violate rights. "Because first come God and conscience."

Comparison. The Episcopate declares that the present situation in Mexico is similar to what would happen if the Republican party in the United States entirely suppressed the Democratic party.

Sheffield Leaving. Mexico City, Aug. 13.—Ambassador James R. Sheffield is leaving Mexico City for Washington and the summer White House in the Adirondacks, where he expects personally to see before President Coolidge a complete exposition of the situation in Mexico. It is understood here that the ambassador will make urgent recommendations for a firm policy in protection of American rights in Mexico.

Sheffield's friends here are surprisingly confident that once President Coolidge really understands the situation a firm policy, as recommended by the ambassador, will be embarked upon, throwing into the discard the present policy, which Mr. Sheffield's friends characterize as rather lax. Ambassador Sheffield sails for Vera Cruz tomorrow on the steamer. (Continued on Page 2.)

MINISTERS GIVE ADVICE TO MEX CATHOLICS

(Continued from page 1) or Monterey, and is expected to reach New York on August 21. Washington, Aug. 13.—An official request that the American government intercede to protect the rights of Catholics in Mexico was laid before Secretary of State Kellogg today by James J. Flaherty, supreme knight of the Knights of Columbus. Flaherty presented the resolutions adopted at the Knights' recent Philadelphia convention in which the attitude of the Mexican government in the present religious controversy was sharply assailed. President Coolidge suggested that Flaherty take the resolutions before the state department. Kellogg and Flaherty went into conference at eleven o'clock. The state department has received numerous protests on the Mexican religious trouble. To all of these it has replied that this government intended to keep hands off the present controversy because it felt that the question was purely an internal affair, and warranted no action unless lives and property of Americans were jeopardized. Flaherty was accompanied by D. J. Callahan, treasurer of the Knights of Columbus. Charge Favoritism. Mexico City, Aug. 13.—"The Mexican people can not do less than feel a certain resentment against the government of the United States because in our history Washington has favored parties which are enemies of the Catholic church and with this favor they have triumphed and grown strong." This statement was made today by the Catholic Episcopate as a rebuke to the Episcopate's attitude towards the United States government for its failure to intervene in the present religious controversy in Mexico. "Mexicans ask nothing more than sincere impartiality in our national contentions," said the statement, which appeared to be aimed at the report of the American "Good Will Mission," composed of American clerics which has rendered a report on the Mexican situation.

PRESIDENT O. K.'S BUSINESS AIRWAYS

Two, Trans-Continental and Southwestern to Be Put in Shape at Once. White Pine Camp, N. Y., Aug. 13.—The first great national airways were approved by President Coolidge today. The first is to be known as the "Trans-Continental" and will extend from New York to the Pacific coast, terminating at Los Angeles or San Francisco. The second is to be known as the "Southwestern" and will extend from Chicago to Dallas and Fort Worth. The Trans-Continental airway will serve Cleveland, Chicago, Iowa City, Des Moines, Omaha, North Platte, Cheyenne, Salt Lake City, San Francisco and Los Angeles. The Southwestern airway will serve St. Paul, Minn., St. Joseph, Mo., Kansas City, Wichita, Kansas, Oklahoma City and Tulsa, Oklahoma. Secretary of Commerce Hoover, who announced the routes, after conferring with Mr. Coolidge, believes that commercial companies will be operating continuous trips over the Trans-Continental route in less than six months. This route will need little alteration to fit it for commercial navigation as the Post Office Department has kept it in good shape for its own planes. Hoover said. Construction of an airway means that proper landing fields must be selected, landing lights must be erected, intermediate transportation routes from commercial centers be arranged, and warehouses be built. All this work will go forward at once, Hoover said, the newly created Division of Aviation of the Commerce Department is prepared to carry on its duties without hesitation, he declared.

Stays and Stays

FEDERAL FARM FACTS

A report of commercial grain stocks in store in the United States is being issued Monday by the United States Department of Agriculture. Avian tuberculosis exists only to a limited degree in eastern and southern states but it is causing great losses in the Middle West or Corn Belt states. Little likelihood of more than average production of major food or feed crops this year, partly as a result of unfavorable weather, is seen by the United States Department of Agriculture. Mildew on roses can be controlled by dusting the plants with fine sulphur. Despite a reduction of 19,000-000 acres in the area of harvested crops during the last five years, the crop area in the United States still is sufficient to maintain a large volume of exports, says the United States Department of Agriculture, analyzing the latest census figures. Privately owned pine forests in California can be perpetuated by the adoption of less destructive logging methods and adequate protection of cut-over lands against fire, according to study of the problem recently completed by the United States Department of Agriculture. Continuation of relatively high hog prices this summer and fall, and a slight falling off next winter, is the forecast by the Department of Agriculture in its hog outlook report. Seven cents a package for grading rosin under the Naval Stores Act, with a minimum total of $3, will be charged by graders of the United States Department of Agriculture in accordance with a reduction authorized by the Secretary of Agriculture. Intestinal worms are one of the serious pests of poultry raising. Young stock should be kept away from the mature hens and off ground contaminated by them. Growing chicks that have to rustle for themselves at this time of the year will probably not make early-maturing, well-grown pullets, according to poultry specialists. A balanced ration that supplies all of the essentials for good growth should be kept before the chicks at all times. BRITISH COAL MINERS MAKE A PEACE MOVE

Cook Asks for Conference With Government on Wages and Mine Reorganization. London, Aug. 13.—A. J. Cook, secretary of the Miners' Federation, today appealed to the government to invite the miners to meet the government with a view to arranging a national agreement, a national minimum wage schedule, and to discuss the re-organization of the mining industry. This move by Cook was believed to indicate that the miners are ready for peace negotiations, but are not prepared to call-off the coal strike unconditionally. BITES, SCRATCHES HER ABDUCTORS, ESCAPES Perth Amboy, N. J., Aug. 13.—Mrs. Esther Klein, 37, wife of Dr. Alexander Klein of Perth Amboy, is in a hospital here today recovering from shock and injuries received during an abduction last night. A giant Negro dragged her from her home at midnight, she said. Aided by a white man, he fought with her for fourteen miles while another white man drove the car. She jumped out and escaped at Carteret, N. J., after biting one of the white men on his cheek and scratching the Negro's eyes.

NOOSE ENDS CRIME CAREER OF WHITTEMORE

(Continued from page 1) hangings go. Whittemore's body dropped cleanly through the trap. The noise of the chains! The body swinging freely in mid-air! The body tightened, was still. Whittemore had paid for the murder of Robert H. Holtman, guard in the prison in whose white-washed death chamber his body now was hanging. The trap had been sprung at 12:08. All before he was transported in two minutes! It seemed ages. The words, "Jesus Christ" were faintly audible. They came from Rev. Charles Biggs, the chaplain. At 12:19 four physicians examined the body. There were faint pulsations of the heart which soon became stiller and farewell for her. Made Good on Boast Whittemore had "showed 'em how to die," as but a short time before he told his guard in his cell he would. Whittemore's wife and Rawlings W. Whittemore, his father, who had tried desperately to save his life, were not at the deathhouse. His wife had said goodbye six hours before at the cell. They had to talk through a wire mesh. It was a fearful farewell for her. Not so for Whittemore. Mrs. Whittemore fainted and friends had to take her away. Whittemore's body was taken to an undertaker's shop shortly after the crowd had quitted the death chamber. There Mrs. Whittemore will claim it. N. Y. COURT UPHOLDS WETS' REFERENDUM New York, Aug. 13.—The proposed referendum on the national prohibition law, to be submitted to the voters of New York State at the general elections in November, was today upheld by Supreme Court Justice Thomas Crain. NEW ORLEANS NARROWLY MISSES TROLLEY STRIKE New Orleans, La., Aug. 13.—New Orleans was enjoying normal street car service today, despite a strike order issued to carmen, which was to have been effective at midnight, but which was revoked after a last-minute settlement by the city commission.

HEBRON

Morris Goldstein is suing Louis Ellenberg for $3,000, alleging that the latter has damaged his business and character by public accusations of cow-poisoning. Mr. Ellenberg lost several cows by poisoning last spring and for a long time the affair was shrouded in mystery. Ellenberg is a New York City farmer in a New York City suburb and employed hired help through the cold weather to look out for his stock. State police worked on the case and it was at last learned that the poisoner was a young fellow named Robert W. Lester, now living in Marlborough, who had done the poisoning to get even with the owner of the farm for a grudge held against him. Lester who is only 18 years old confessed to the poisoning. He and his uncle were at one time employed on the Ellenberg farm. Mrs. Robert Goodrich of Exeter visited relatives and friends recently in Hopevale. Mr. and Mrs. Dwight Kelsey of Montville were Sunday visitors at the home of their daughter, Mrs. Jared M. Tennant. THREE TOWNS IN STATE GO WITHOUT ACCIDENTS

There are three towns in Connecticut from which no motor vehicle accidents were reported last year, it is shown by a pamphlet entitled "Analysis of Automobile Accidents" which has been issued by the state motor vehicle department as a supplement to its February bulletin on "Another Year's Damage Done by Autos." They are Ashford, population 673; Canterbury, population 836 and Hartland, population 448. The state's smallest town, Union, was named as the place of one accident and New Haven the largest city in the state, was named as the place of 2,716. As was recently announced by the department, this latter figure was not the largest accident total reported by any city of the state, the city from which most accidents were reported being Hartford, the third largest in the state, which had 3,085 accidents chalked up against it.

Eleven towns of the state reported no convictions during the year for violations of the motor vehicle laws. They are Borrah, Canterbury, Franklin, Goshen, Hebron, New Fairfield, Roxbury, Scotland, Voluntown, Weston and Willington. Borrah had fifteen accidents according to the reports received; Canterbury none, Franklin 17, Go-

PROGRAMS PLANNED FOR BRITISH CHAIN

London, Aug. 13.—As the huge project of linking the entire British Empire together by radio is nearing an end, plans are being made for a regular interchange of educational, cultural and entertainment programs among the various countries of the empire.

This chain of broadcasting stations, when completed, will reach 400,000,000 inhabitants of the empire and more than 100,000,000 potential listeners in who live adjacent to the British territories.

A series of "Round the Empire" broadcasts is being planned. The leading station of each country will prepare a program, typical of that country's customs. The programs will be rebroadcast by the other stations of the chain.

The British Broadcasting Company estimates that the contemplated system will cost about $3,000,000.

Mr. Wells declares he saw a fish scoot down from its perch in a tree, trip to the edge of a pool and scoop up water in its fin, which it poured on its head to cool itself.

'Like Two Peas in a Pod'

For 65 years Otto and Alfred Erickson, twin brothers, have lived and worked together—and they've never had a quarrel. Their lives have been remarkably similar. Born in Sweden, each married a Norwegian girl in the same year; each has seven children; each follows the trade of painting and paper hanging; they live on the same street in St. Paul, Minn.; neither has ever seen a movie or been to a dance. And both read their Bibles religiously every night.

BOLT STRIKES FIVE MANCHESTER TROLLEYS

was half an hour before the power could be restored to trolleys on the Stafford side of the power plant.
Two of the trolley cars which were struck by lightning were hit in Stafford. They were manned by Motorman Davis and Ludke and Conductors Gilroy and Cleveland.
Two other Manchester-bound trolleys were put out of commission when struck by bolts on the Hartford-South Manchester line. One was in charge of Motorman Angel and Conductor W. Tedford while the other was operated by Motorman Walker and Conductor A. Tedford.
On the Manchester Green line another car was struck by lightning. Motorman Hudson was in charge.

No One Injured.
In none of the five cases was there anyone injured. Either the motors or the air armatures were crippled. In some cases, it was both. Three of the five cars struck had to be towed to the car barn at the Center. Although there were many passengers on some of the trolleys struck by the lightning, there was not the least sign of a panic among them. In fact there were many who did not even know the car had been struck. The bolts merely passed down the trolley pole and through the motors to the rails whence it grounded.

A Busy Place.
The dispatcher's office at the Center was without a doubt the busiest place in town during the storm. Dispatchers James Duffy and Carl Bush worked frantically in their efforts to restore the schedules. Duffy was supposed to quit work at 5 o'clock but he contributed three hours of overtime work to help Bush.

While the trolley company was hampered by the storm, it is odd to note that the local exchange of the Southern New England Telephone company escaped with an unusually small number of accidents. Only ninety telephones were found out of order today and these, for the most part, were in the outer sections of the town. They were expected to be repaired today. Wire Chief O'Gorman said that usually in a storm of that caliber, many more telephones were knocked out.

Crop Damages.
Today the farmers were busy making a survey of their crops to estimate the damage. However, it was learned that the damage will not be much.
Superintendent L. H. Heebner, of the Manchester Electric company, reported today that the storm seriously affected the electric lighting system in Manchester. The entire section east of Manchester Green was without lights as were many other sections on the east side of the town. Tolland Turnpike was included. It was 10 o'clock before workmen restored the service. The worst trouble in connection with the electric light service was on Vernon street where a bolt of lightning struck a wire. Several transformer fuses were blown, but none was destroyed.

Town in Darkness.
The streets of the town took on a midnight aspect. They were deserted and it was almost as dark as night at times. The storm, which came out of the west, was heralded by a 38-mile an hour gale which raised havoc with articles lying around loose. In a short time electric lights were turned on and everybody was scurrying for shelter. In a few moments the rain fell in torrents. Housewives hurried about their homes taking out screens and closing windows and doors.

Even though it spoiled their half-day holiday, Manchester merchants were little concerned over the storm. They said simply:
"Look at the business we would have lost if it hadn't come on a Thursday afternoon."
Auto Accident.
One automobile accident was indirectly caused in Manchester by the storm. A Jewett touring car owned by Victor Zableskos, of 81 Union street, became stalled on Hilliard street when water got into the carburetor.
When the auto was being towed back to the garage, a car operated by William Clark, of Rockville, crashed into it as it was rounding the dummy cop at Depot Square. The damage was trivial. Both drivers carried insurance and agreed to settle. Patrolman McGinn investigated.

GOOD CROWD ATTENDS DANCING AT "RAINBOW"

A large crowd of dancers enjoyed the first of the Thursday night mixed dances at "The Rainbow" last night. Several sets were on the floor for every old fashion dance announced. Many of the younger people were present, too, to enjoy the modern dances which were featured in between the square numbers.
Prince Hayden, a fine soloist, was present and entertained with songs. His offerings were well received and he probably will sing frequently at "Rainbow" dances.

It takes two or three fewer shovelfuls of coal to run a freight train a mile than it did two years ago, as a result of the railroads' program of conservation.

Only 19, Weighs 612 Pounds

Johnny Webb, who lives at Norton, Va., is only 19, but weighs 612 pounds, and believes he is the largest man in the world for his age. He weighed ten pounds at birth, 109 when a year old and 186 at the age of 3. He eats anything and everything and it takes 12 bottles of pop at one time to quench his thirst. His mother watches his diet, though she says she's afraid he'll get too fat.

BALKAN CAULDRON AGAIN BUBBLING

Czechs and Allied Powers
May Be Able to Prevent War That Threatens.

Berlin, Aug. 13.—The Balkan cauldron is boiling again. Nervous tension is high in the Balkan states, due to the joint ultimatum delivered to Bulgaria by Jugo-Slavia, Roumania and Greece, according to reports received here.
In Sofia there are many rumors of preparations for war and the populace has been stirred by rumors that Jugo-Slavia, Roumania and Greece are preparing for a joint offensive against Bulgaria.

Watches Alert.
President Masaryk and Foreign Minister Benes of Czechoslovakia are reported to be attempting mediation. The diplomatic representatives of the allied powers are watching the situation carefully and it is believed they will be able to prevent any actual outbreak. The Bulgarians charge that Serbians have attacked the border town of Zlata Novi Calibi and wounded three inhabitants, before being driven back across the borders.
From Bucharest comes reports of depredations by Bulgarian commit-adj and insistent demands that these Macedonian leaders be delivered up by Bulgaria for punishment.

HARTFORD PIONEERS PLAY C. B. TOMORROW

Manager John L. Jenny, of Cheney Brothers baseball nine announced this afternoon that he had booked the Hartford Pioneers to play here tomorrow afternoon against the silk mill representatives.
Giorgetti will pitch for Manchester and "Dazzy" Farrell for the Pioneers who are in third place in the Hart'rd twilight league.

TREASURE HUNT STARTS
OVER NORTH TOMORROW

At ten o'clock tomorrow morning there will be a wild scramble around the north end playground when both boys and girls will be given maps and told to search for the hidden treasure. Maybe it will be down toward Buckland and maybe it will be off toward Hickey's Grove. At any rate when the searchers follow their maps they will suddenly find that when they are within two or three hundred yards of their goal the trail will stop abruptly and they will be on their own, then begins the real search in earnest. The lucky searcher may find a gold piece or may find something just as valuable, but they must have sharp eyes and go according to directions.

Director Washburn, accompanied by Mrs. C. J. Conlin, will follow the trail with the children to award the lucky finder. All the children in the community are invited to participate in the Treasure Hunt and should report promptly at the playground at 10 a. m. to receive their instructions before starting out.
Director Washburn is showing several photographs taken of a similar hunt in the city of Middletown, where he was employed as Park superintendent for the past two years.

ARREST WILLIE STEVENS, CARPENDER, FOR MURDER

Frank L. Cleary, acting as committing magistrate.
Pig Woman Witness.
The state is expected to reveal its "ace in the hole" at this afternoon's hearing. Mrs. Jane Gibson the "pig woman," who declares she saw Dr. Hall and Mrs. Mills shot to death on the old Phillips farm on the outskirts of New Brunswick, will be among the accusers who will confront the two men.
Another arrest is expected today, that of the man whom Mrs. Gibson said stood seventy-five feet away while the murders were perpetrated. The authorities will seek to have this man identify the reactor and Mrs. Mills.
Took Money, Says Dickman
Somerville, N. J., Aug. 13.—Special Prosecutor Alexander Simpson today was shown a news dispatch from California stating that Henry L. Dickman, missing New Jersey state trooper, had admitted accepting money to leave this part of the country after he had conducted a lone investigation of the Hall-Mills double murder nearly four years ago.
"I shall do everything in my power to have Dickman brought here and questioned," Simpson said, after reading the dispatch.

Dickman is now serving a term in the United States disciplinary barracks on Alcatraz Island, San Francisco Bay.
The dispatch also quoted Dickman as saying that a former maid in the Hall home had not told all she knows of the case.

GAMBLER AND WON.

By Lillian Cannon.
(Copyright, 1926, NEA Service Inc.)

Cape Cris Nez, France, Aug. 13.—Gertrude Ederle, unquestionably one of the greatest swimmers in the world, either man or woman, not only elected to conquer the English channel, but to gamble with it—and she won.

It is a disappointment to me not to be the first woman to swim the channel, for I have been confident of success upon my trial, but my congratulations to Gertrude were none less cordial and sincere.
The narrow line between guessing right and guessing wrong as to the favorable time to start a channel swim was clearly brought out during Miss Ederle's valiant fight to victory. Selection of a date is a gamble, at best, and Bill Burgess, Gertrude's trainer, began to think he had guessed wrong as the swim progressed. He is said to have advised Gertrude to give it up.

But Gertrude, game to the core, was willing to gamble even further, and she won.

At Top of Form.
Gertrude was at the top of her form on the swim. She had one of the priceless days that come only every so often to an athlete, when mind, heart and muscles are completely in tune.

That is when records are made, and Gertrude established a record that may stand for years.
You may imagine the sea through which she fought when I tell you that I nearly became seasick just watching Gertrude being tossed by the rough water. When I joined her in the water for a time, I was soon chilled. I was not greased as was Gertrude, but the cold must have penetrated even the thick coating of grease she had as time went on.

POE'S STORIES: The Black Cat (4)

With the discovery that the cat had but one eye, like Pluto, a feeling of aversion came over the master. The cat, itself, showed an opposite feeling, clinging to the master's footsteps, crouching beneath his chair, leaping upon his knees, clambering upon his breast and running between his legs as he walked.

Whereas Pluto had been entirely black, the new cat had a white spot on its breast. This seemed to grow larger and more distinct.

In the diseased mind of the master, that white spot on the cat's breast became the image of a gallows. Wretchedness made him its prey.

The feeling of remorse, reflected in the persistent image of the cat and the dreadful picture its white breast outlined, plunged the man into the depths of woe. He would awaken from fantastic dreams to find the cat at his side, its hot breath upon his face. Evil thoughts and frequent outbursts of uncontrollable fury seized him.

PROTECT RARE BIRD AGAINST WILD CATS

Believe Fight to Save Heath Hen Has Been Won at Martha's Vineyard.

Boston, Aug. 13.—Preservation of a rare game bird—the heath hen—from extinction is being accomplished on the island of Martha's Vineyard, Mass., through the combating of evolutionary forces let loose by man.

Skilled naturalists for many months have been hunting enemies of the heath hen, including a race of house cats, deserted by their owners and turned wild.

Allan Keniston, superintendent of the state reservation maintained for the surviving heath hen, believes the fight has been won. Not more than 28 birds could be actually counted this year, and none are in existence anywhere else in the world.

Emergency measures to save the heath hen were started in June, 1925, by a conference of state officials and associations. This bird, also called the pinnated grouse, was once present in great numbers over a wide area in the eastern United States. It was exterminated by hunters and by encroaching civilization, except on Martha's Vineyard, an island about 20 miles long and nine miles wide.

Natural conditions afforded here a perfect breeding ground for birds, particularly the heath hen which required a special sort of cover. The mild climate, almost complete absence of heavy snow in winter, and intense heat in summer, contributed to the favorable surroundings, and a reservation was set aside for the bird.

As the fight against enemies of the bird includes efforts to kill house cats which have gone wild and are developing into large and lynx-like animals. These animals are much heavier than ordinary cats. Their fur is thick, long fur. Their paws are large, and their claws exceedingly powerful. Hair at the tips of the ears is long and tends to form a tassel similar to that of the bobcat.

The intervention of skilled naturalists has been successful in driving the cats off the island.

THEY NEVER KNEW TOM SIMS

THIS IS OVER

THEY NEVER KNEW, including the adventures of Jim and Pearl, and many other extra thrown in for good measure, appears exclusively in this newspaper. Despite this astounding fact, we wish to state positively that the price of the paper will not be changed. It will not be increased. Furthermore, it won't be reduced.

JIMSON WEED was born into a poor but honest family in ONEONTA, OHIO. Realizing that being poor but honest didn't keep them from being poor, JIMP tops up and makes a million dollars. So he's rich, but honest, and finds it quite an improvement.

A girl, PEARL HANDLE, hops up and marries JIMP. They go on their honeymoon together. JIMP loses his million but PEARL sticks to him because she lost it. JIMP makes another million.

Pearl's old man, MR. HANDLE, wants to shoot, poison, choke or stab JIMP. Working with the villain are DETECTIVE GUMSHOE and his wife, MRS. GUM.

Or something like that. You get the idea.

THIS ISN'T CHAPTER XI

THE author here takes the liberty of refreshing your memory with a few details from the end of the previous chapter. Detective GUMSHOE, his wife and Handle, disguised themselves and sneaked into Pearl and Jimp's luxurious suite at the Pennsylvania Hotel in New York.

Mr. Handle, Pearl's father, tried to shoot Jimp, and would have succeeded had not the quick-witted author ended the chapter.

"So," snapped the fire scoundrel, "you escaped my fire yesterday. But I have you now. And you are as good as dead."

"Father," warned Pearl, "don't you shoot the only husband I got."

"I will so shoot him," he threatened the pistol at Jimp, he said.

"Have you anything to say before you die?"

"Yes," said Jimp, "I have. You know as well as I do I had news paper serial technique to shoot the hero at the beginning of a chapter. You were warned of this not long ago."

"Good or bad, I'm going to do it," snarled the scoundrel.

"If you shoot me I'll tell the author," warned Jimp.

"To hell with the author," cried Handle. "I'll do as I please."

As the words left the cruel lips of the dirty bum, the author seized him and kicked him out the window.

Rushing to the window Jimp saw his father-in-law tumble the twelve stories and land upon the sidewalk. There he lay a few brief seconds, then got up, shook his fist at Jimp, and walked away.

"He's all right," said Jimp, turning to Pearl. "Wasn't hurt a bit. Must have hit upon his head."

"Probably did," said Pearl. "Poor father, he doesn't like you."

"Have you anything to say before you die?"

"So I gathered. Where's Gum and the woman detective?"

"They slipped out the door and got away."

"Soup's hot," sang the cook, passing through the spacious room upon a pair of roller skates. It was her way of announcing dinner.

"Jimp," said Pearl, when they were seated at the table, "how often have I told you to keep your feet off the table when your shoes are not shined?"

Jimp apologized. The one point of irritation between the otherwise perfectly mated pair was table manners. Pearl, now that they were rich, naturally wished to put on airs. She ate her pie with a spoon instead of a knife, and had many other little tricks of polite society which Jimp could not acquire.

Women pick up such things much more quickly than men.

But the one thing which Jimp could do gracefully was eat soup. He ate in a rich bass, hitting off even the lowest notes in perfect order when there were enough vegetables in the soup.

Pearl drank tender, and their voices went well together.

After a couple of duets their bowls were filled again. The cook and her helper were called in and seated at the table, making it a quartet. The four drank Home Sweet Home.

The cook called for an encore, but Pearl and Jimp could remain no longer. They had tickets for the theater.

It was a musical comedy and reminded Pearl very much of her adventure in the hotel room when someone swiped all her clothes.

She whispered this to her husband who was highly amused. "If I ever lose my clothes again," whispered Pearl, "I'll come down here, take a bath for a costume, and be an actress."

But Jimp was too busy watching a chorus girl who was posed as a statue. The scene was a garden party. The other girls danced about the statue. Jimp wondered if she would turn and face the audience. She didn't. That would have been considered indecent.

"Jimp," said Pearl, "I have been talking to you for the past fifteen minutes, and you haven't heard a word."

"Yes, my dear," said Jimp, blushing furiously. For the first time since their wedding he felt the old matrimonial hall and chain heavy about his ankles.

Husband and wife lapsed into a strained silence as another dance number began.

Seated in the first row because he had bought the tickets himself, Jimp leaned forward expectantly. It was the dance of the seven veils.

The same girl who had posed as a statue tripped lightly about the stage. She discarded a veil.

"Six more veils to go," figured Jimp. He was afraid she would stick a splinter in her bare foot and leave the stage.

She discarded another veil. "Five more to go," counted Jimp upon his fingers. He wished the music would speed up a bit and hurry her along.

A third veil fell to the floor. Jimp was worried. Evidently the electrician was a jealous friend of the girl. The lights were growing dim.

Another veil and another fell to the floor. The dancer's fitting form was barely discernible.

Only one veil remained. It slipped from her shoulders—and the lights went out, leaving the theater in darkness.

Amid the thunderous applause, Jimp stood up, fumbling in his pockets. "What are you doing?" whispered Pearl.

"Looking for a match," said Jimp, thoughtlessly.

When the lights came on, Jimp and Pearl were gone. The wife had seized her husband's car and yanked him out of the theater.

A cab stopped in the heart of Greenwich Village. Jimp and Pearl stepped to the sidewalk.

"That was a bum show," said Jimp to his darling wife.

"A awfully bum," replied his darling wife with a hint of sarcasm in her voice. Pearl was jealous.

A red light shone before a cellar entrance. Strains of what was considered music were wafted toward them.

The pungent odor of gin and orange juice tickled their noses as Jimp and Pearl went into the basement.

Rows of tables half-hidden by partitions lined the walls. An orchestra at the far end worked feverishly. Numerous couples were drunk enough to be dancing.

"Ah," said Jimp as they sat at a table. "This is the famous 'Pirates Den' about which we have heard so much."

"I don't see any pirates," snapped Pearl, still jealous.

"I was looking at the prices," giggled Jimp.

"Want to dance?" A tall figure in a flowing black tie leaned across the table. He was speaking to Pearl.

"Yes," smiled the bride, without so much as looking at Jimp.

The furious young husband saw his darling wife whirled away in the arms of the stranger.

"It's go to my apartment," suggested the stranger. "Having a big party there."

"I can't," said Pearl. "That little short guy is my husband."

"Bring him along," laughed the stranger. "I'll turn him over to my wife."

Pearl was thinking fast. Jimp's actions at the theater still rankled. Perhaps a little jealousy would be good for the brute.

"Let's ask the brute," said Pearl. The stranger laughed as they crossed the floor to the table where Jimp sat chewing on a nail which he had pulled out of the wall.

"Let's go to this guy's apartment," said Pearl to Jimp.

Beside himself with jealous anger, Jimp kicked over the table and leaped for the stranger.

"Fight! Fight! Fight!" screamed the bystanders. The lights went out. A pistol flashed. The lights came on. The stranger lay dead.

The cops entered just as the chapter closed.

CALLS COMPULSARY INSURANCE UNSAFE

Washington, Aug. 13.—The American Automobile Association has announced its opposition to any program for compulsory automobile insurance.

The national motoring organization believes that such an insurance will place a heavy financial burden upon auto owners and will not accomplish any benefits beyond payment for injuries and damages.

Such a law, association officials claim, would tend to increase lawlessness and reckless driving. "There is no relation between prevention of accidents and compensation for accidents," they say.

In 1925 the port of Vancouver, British Columbia, exported goods to a value of $410,427,868, an increase of $43,000,000 over the volume of 1924.

MACHINES AID U. S. IN DAIRY INDUSTRY

Washington, Aug. —The advantages of cheap labor and cheap fodder, which have given foreign countries a lead in the dairy market, are being offset in America by modern machinery and new methods.

American dairymen are using milking machines, automatic feed and litter carriers, tractors, feed grinders, hay loaders and other mechanical equipment to reduce labor costs.

Testing associations are discovering better methods of handling cows. New and efficient methods for sanitation and herd improvement are being introduced to increase the milk yield.

There are more than 24,000,000 milk-producing cows in the United States, and 732 cow-testing associations operate in 38 states to improve dairy conditions.

The leading dairy countries are Holland, Switzerland, Denmark, Canada and New Zealand, with strong competition from Argentina, Great Britain, Russia and Italy. American machines and methods are giving the dairymen of this country an opportunity to break into the strong world market and make a place for the United States as a dairy product exporting nation.

America imported 63,764,000 pounds of silk in 1925, a 24 per cent increase over the previous year.

TWO STATES.

The state of Maryland has lined up with Connecticut in refusing to permit an infinitely strained homage for legal red tape to defeat the ends of justice in the case of an outrageous murderer.

Richard Whittemore, a creature utterly perilous to society as long as alive, has paid as much of a price for his crimes as his worthless life could pay.

The Whittemore case is done and over. It reads a lesson to gunmen and bandits with relation to the state of Maryland.

It is not to be supposed that the managing committee of the institute anticipated any such outbreak from Admiral Rodgers, but it should have.

FAITH.

Let the intellectual who thinks that he knows religion to be all hokum consider the case of those Kentucky spar miners, rescued after imprisonment in their wrecked mine for almost a week.

Imagine the tremendous consolation to the bereaved kin of these men, had their dead bodies instead of their living selves been found, from that cheering assurance.

If the intellectual cynic has anything as satisfying to offer the world in place of religious faith, it might be well for him to bring it forth.

YAPPING AT THE TIGER.

It is no wonder we are regarded by many Europeans as a race of blatherskites when the only requirement for getting oneself quoted in Europe concerning European affairs is to be a member of Congress and a publicity seeker.

man were devoting himself diligently to the business of preventing the liquor traffic. Much less can it be so when truck drivers, for an extremely good reason, expect to be allowed to depart in peace when they have the right countersign.

We have, for example, Senator McKellar of Tennessee, one of the coterie of Democratic and other obstructionists who, with no higher purpose than to annoy and pester President Coolidge, have fought every debt settlement, crying for "More!"

The letter (the one to President Coolidge protesting against the terms of the French settlement) is full of inaccuracies and misstatements, some of them being misstatements of Clemenceau's own acts, and it can only be accounted for by the infirmities of old age.

Richard Whittemore, a creature utterly perilous to society as long as alive, has paid as much of a price for his crimes as his worthless life could pay.

BAD BOYS.

The Williamstown Institute of Politics is not going to gain in prestige from such fulminations as those of Rear Admiral W. L. Rodgers, retired, who yesterday indulged in a typical U. S. navy tirade against Great Britain.

It is a singular thing that officers of the American navy go on, generation after generation, receiving at the hands and at the expense of the government the kind of education which leaves them wholly indifferent to, or else ignorant of, every principle of civilian life.

NOT SURPRISING.

The surprise of the beer truck driver, who was quite astonished when the password "Ninety-nine" failed to yield him immunity at the hands of a Stamford policeman, need not be shared by those innocent souls who may consider his amazement an extraordinary thing.

Of course it is the usual thing for rum runners over the roads to go unmoled—the unusual thing for them to be apprehended. Otherwise the common practice of transporting such a bulky commodity as beer in motor vehicles on the public highways would have been abandoned long ago.

It could not be otherwise even if every dry agent and every policeman were devoting himself diligently to the business of preventing the liquor traffic.

IN NEW YORK

New York, Aug. 13.—More beauty passes a certain spot on Seventh Avenue in ten minutes than may be seen in many hours elsewhere on this globe.

The reason is simple: This is the heart of the cloak and suit industry, and these are the models filling by when the day's work is done.

The beauty show may be best seen in the short distance between 34th and 40th streets and the hour is generally about 1 o'clock.

There are short beauties and tall beauties, Junoesque beauties and old fashioned beauties, bobbed heads and long, waving tresses.

Some are dressed in fashions that are a month ahead of the rest, yet to see one of them "picked up," The "johnnies" do not seem to clutter the streets in front of the sky scrapers as they do the streets about theater stage doors.

Anticipating their arrival, the buildings are lined with ogles, but I have often noted how few girls are met by men. They generally go yet to see one of them "picked up."

The reasons, I find, are several. The number of lovely models who are married is considerable. This is a quite easy way of getting extra money for the household.

One of the most popular models in a Greenwich Village art school invariably brings her child along with her. I recall seeing the baby some three years ago and hearing the story of a husband who grew tired of married life and disappeared.

Not knowing which way to turn for the support of her child she started modeling for a "life" class. The other day, passing by the school, I was told that the mother is in great demand. Her devotion to the child is extravagant and she hoards every penny to give the child opportunities in the future.

Those models who are not married are hesant to make engagements since, while at work, they do not know when they may be called upon to be guests of out-of-town buyers.

Night club visitors, who frequently wonder about the "old-boy" high bet that this is an out-of-town buyer and a model from one of the many concerns.

Playing the role of "guest" becomes part of the job while on duty. It isn't customary, but it is rather the custom.

Dealers naturally wish prospective buyers to have a "good time" and feel friendly toward their concerns. A pretty model often is the real salesman in a big order. Offhandedly, this would not seem boring, but one of them tells me it becomes as casual as any other job.

—GILBERT SWAN.

I once knew a man who was always cocksure, in spite of the fact that his judgment was poor. When he made up his mind he was ready to fight with any good soul who'd deny he was right.

I wonder what fun he could get from his game, and what would you call him? Sure, stubborn's the name. His iron-bound-up mind, when it once had its fling, would never let anyone tell him a thing.

To college? Well, maybe he did spend a term, and maybe he's really a heavy book-worm. His knowledge, you might say, is really quite rare, but, now, is he treating his old thinker square?

No matter how much you may store in your brain, there's still lots of learnin' a fella can gain. He'll pass this all up, in the years still to come. You may call him wise, but to me he's just dumb.

enabling him to move without a sound, and catch the little ground animals in his strong, pointed claws before they have any warning of his nearness.

And the appetite of the owl is tremendous. He is not particular what he eats, but swallows fur, bones, and all, in unlimited quantities, later disgorging what his stomach cannot digest.

The calls of the different owls—the whimper of the screech owl, the hoot of the great horned owl, the scream of the barn owl, doubtless sound uncanny to some. But that, perhaps, is because we live so much in the daylight that we are not accustomed to strange noises whose origin we cannot locate.

ONE YEAR SHOWS BIG IMPROVEMENT IN ALL RADIO SETS

Wiring Shielded for Both Efficiency and Appearance—Compact Outfits are Convenient and Good Looking.

Radio has changed in the last year as much as the automobile did in ten. Building a receiver, like building your own car, is already almost passe. Only the amateur and real dyed-in-the-wool fans—those who like to tinker with wires and such—still build their own sets. For it doesn't pay. Nowadays the radio fan can buy a receiver of any kind for much less than it would cost to buy just the parts. The time and trouble in building the set, and the question whether it will work when finished, are additional. Yet set building isn't all that's relegated to the earlier days of radio—although we're still in the early stage.

The manufactured product itself is quite a revelation. Even the receiver of last fall is ancient compared to that of today.

No Wiring Shown. Wires are being covered up. Even the tubes, condensers and other apparatus in the receiver are being arranged and boxed in shields of copper almost as much for appearance as for greater efficiency. The receiver within is a clean, finished product, as opposed to the jumbles of wire still in use through the country.

Outside the set, leading to the batteries, the charger, the aerial and the ground, wires made a mess of a pretty living-room corner. They still do today in many homes. But that's passing also.

Instead, we're coming to unsightly outside aerial and ground connections. Many loop sets are coming out this fall, sets ranging from six to eight and nine tubes, much more powerful and effective than ever.

One Line to Batteries. The unsightly storage battery and dry batteries, too, are either being boxed into compact and attractive form, or are being eliminated. Only one trunk line, now, is required to lead from the receiver to the box that holds charger, A battery and B battery all in one. And there's another line from this box to the electric light plug. That's all.

Even here, elimination of one of these two lines is being sought in the design of a receiver getting its A and B battery power direct from the electric light line. This immense improvement has not been perfected.

The set itself, when finished, is an attractive piece of furniture, far superior to the ugly-dialed apparatus that is now on the decline. Leading cabinet makers are making the boxes and consoles for the receivers, so that they may be kept on a par with other furniture in a room.

That is only for appearance's sake. Besides, there are many innovations to make the set fool-proof and easier to operate—one dial control, freedom from squeals and howls, greater selectivity even at the low wave-lengths, elimination of tube and other noises, greater volume with less distortion of sound.

Altogether, the modern receiver, although far from perfect, is a decided improvement over that produced only a year ago.

A PUZZLE A DAY

One of the few forms of recreation Lillian Cannon allows herself during her rigorous training for the channel swim, is her own special form of beach golf.

The game is played in this fashion. Eight golf balls are placed in a square of sand, in the position shown. These balls are connected by one continuous line. This line, shows the course the balls must follow and is made up of six straight strokes.

Miss Cannon has heard it is possible to join all the balls with a shorter line composed of fewer straight strokes.

Can you draw for her the shortest line composed of the fewest straight strokes? Last puzzle answer: Officer Lacey got the hunch that he was on Charles Ponzani's trail at 10 o'clock at night. For one-half of 10 hours—5 hours; one-fourth of 10 hours—2 1-2 hours; one-fifth of 10 hours—2 hours. Adding 5 hours plus 2 1-2 hours plus 2 hours you get 9 1-2 hours, or half past nine, one-half hour less than 10 o'clock, the time struck by the church clock.

NEIGHBORS' WIVES

ERNEST LYNN, author of THE YELLOW STUB

BEGIN HERE TODAY

JOHN and FAY MILBURN buy a home when their baby girl is born and the advertising agency in which John is copy writer and partner lands a new contract. Among their acquaintances are:

NOEL and VERA BOYD, whose marriage is strictly "modern."

FAY and MARIAN FORBES, who have three children and whose domestic life is unhappy because of Pat's roving tendencies. Previous chapters told how:

John was fascinated on meeting NELL ORME, of whom Pat Forbes hints that she is having trouble with her husband.

When Fay took JUDITH, the baby, to Washington to visit her parents, John "ran around" a good deal, mostly with Pat Forbes.

When Fay returned, gossip had related some of his doings, and sharp quarrels between him and Fay followed, one of which drove him "out on a tear." Fay, learning he had been out again with other women, threatened to leave him if it was repeated.

John becomes aware that people are talking about him, and NATHANIEL GRAHAM, his partner, charges his delinquency, Vera Boyd invites John to tea, and there he finds Nell Orme. He resolves not to go again, as he is aware of Vera's propensity for promoting "affairs," but he goes, and this time he madly takes Nell in his arms. A little later Marian Forbes comes in on them.

Fay learns of it and announces her intention of leaving. He tries to dissuade her and a violent quarrel follows, during which Fay strikes him in the mouth, and John leaves the house. When he comes back, Fay is packing.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

(The names and situations in this story are fictitious.)

CHAPTER XLV

BLINDLY, and without purpose, John descended the stairs, his mind a seething furnace of resentment. To be treated like this—as if he were a criminal! How could Fay do it? Well, she wouldn't, if she thought anything of him, and he wondered if, indeed, he really had killed her love for him.

He wandered into the kitchen, apologetic and trembling. Here—a thing of resplendent nickel and porcelain—was their gas range, which Fay had taken so much pleasure in buying and which had given the two of them so much joy as they prepared their little informal Sunday suppers. He wondered, dully, what was to become of it, now that Fay had made up her mind to leave it, and it did occur to him that it was ridiculous that he should feel pity for it—inanimate though it was.

Across the room was the white enamel table with its porcelain top. He had surprised Fay with that in—had bought it one day on impulse, knowing that Fay had wanted it and knowing, also, that she was waiting until they could afford it. Cautious, economical Fay. Practical Fay. That was it—she was too darned practical. Given a little more imagination, she might have understood him better. Oh, shrugged. Oh, well, his glance, roving idly around the room, fell on the cupboard above the table. On the second shelf, he knew, was a bottle of whisky—and forgetfulness. Well, if Fay was going to drive him to it, all right. He opened the door to the cupboard and pulled forth the bottle. He did not bother about a glass, but drank fiercely, bent on drowning his troubles.

Fay was proceeding calmly with her plans for leaving. Breakfast the next morning was a cold, emotionless affair, and John, as he played abstractedly with Judith, was nigh to breaking Fay's heart, and she was compelled to turn her head to hide the compassion and the tears that were in her eyes.

A word from either might have bridged the chasm that had yawned between them since yesterday, but Fay had issued her ultimatum, and John now was too proud to make any more advances. If he had said, at that terrible breakfast, "Fay, I need you. I can't let you go," she would have melted, for she had cried ceaselessly throughout the sleepless night and she was a little agitated and in terror of her contemplated act. Such trifles as what she would tell her mother and father when she returned to them were trifles no longer now that they loomed as actualities, and they in themselves would have been enough to dissuade her if John only had said the proper thing.

But John, as he wiped his lips with his napkin after drinking his morning glass of orange juice, said, "I suppose you're still bound and determined to go through with this silly thing," and Fay could only nod grimly, then, he went on grimly, "I'll give you my check for $5000 today."

"Five thousand dollars? What for?"

"Have you forgotten that you invest $1500 in my business when we were married?"

"Oh—that. But—"

"Well, it's about trebled in value—a little better, even. Five thousand ought to cover it. We won't bother about a few odd dollars."

Fay protested, "I don't want it. You're going to get it with your own money or not?"

"You're knowing he was punishing her."

"But you can't spare it—not right now."

"That makes no difference. The minute you cease being my wife you cease being my partner. You came to me with your money when I needed it pretty badly. I don't want any debts like that hanging over me when you pull out."

"When you pull out!" The words rang in Fay's ears, pounded against her senses, seemed to tear at her heart. To put it so cruelly—pulling out!

"But I don't need it," she was saying.

"Now, look here," he stated cruelly, "you don't want any sentimentalities between us when you pull out, do you? You want to make a clean break, don't you?"

She bent her head down over her plate and made no answer.

"Come," he said sharply, "answer me!"

Fay was realizing the peculiarity do you intend to leave?" His matter-of-factness was exasperating, Fay thought. Well, if it didn't mean any more to her than that, she'd show him she could be indifferent, too.

"I'd like to leave tonight, but I hardly think I can get ready. Suppose I take the morning train?" He showed a little surprise, though not much. "So soon? Well, all right. Shall I get your ticket?"

"If you don't mind."

"Not at all." He was maddeningly polite. He bent down to Judith, kissed her and then, bowing slightly to Fay, departed.

And John, on his way down to the office, at last began to feel the weight of the tragedy that was pressing down on him. His very life, he realized, was being torn up by the roots. What was he going to do without Fay? What were people going to say about him? What would his friends ask him? He could see Dick Menefee now—good old Dick. What would Dick think? And Margaret, and Clara—and Nat Graham. He swore bitterly at the thought of Graham. Hell with him! Very likely Nat would hold him to account for something else now, and doubtless blame the next time something went wrong.

And Fay—why didn't she exhibit some common sense? By the Lord Harry, he wouldn't say or do a thing to hold her back now. He had gone to her, pleading almost on his knees, and she had spurned his advances. Very well, the next move was up to her. He'd show her he had some pride.

And Judith—here he paused and almost cried out with pain at the thought of her being taken away from him. What right had Fay to take her away? He supposed, too, that Fay would never realize the sacrifice he was making in giving her up without a sign of a struggle. But naturally Fay wouldn't understand. She wouldn't see that his willingness to give Judith up to her came from the fact that any other course would be decidedly unfair to Judith. To deprive her of her father was bad enough, but to deprive her of mother and father both—that was what it would amount to if he had kept her and had to hire a housekeeper to take care of her—would be unthinkable.

"God!" He groaned aloud, and great tears rolled out of his eyes. The little car swerved sharply, and he realized with a sense of shock that he had taken his hand off the steering wheel. Well, that's what he felt like going—running into a wall, or falling, or something. Anything to keep from facing this awful thing that loomed ahead—anything to bring pain—and regret—to Fay.

The day passed somehow, and early evening found him once more home with Fay, where the first thing he did was to give her the check for $5000.

"I'll leave the matter of dismissing the maid to you," she told him at dinner.

"Very well," he said wearily. "I got a drawing room on the twenty-nine tomorrow morning. Have you wired your folks yet?"

"No. I'll do it tonight."

"All right. Anything I can help you with?"

"Not a thing."

Silent and more despondent on them, thick, terrible silence, and Fay, to keep from screaming aloud, went early to bed, where she lay sleepless. And John, the awful thought of the tragic tomorrow gnawing at him like a hot, burning coal, once more in the bottle in the kitchen cupboard, but even the heavy liquor failed to bring him restful sleep in the little room down the hall.

Morning came, and the great red sun in its cheerfulness was like a gigantic mockery. More than once John was on the verge of pleading with Fay to change her mind, and more than once Fay, on the point of surrender, was tempted to seek comfort in his arms. But pride ruled, and at the railroad station John experienced the greatest pang of his life when he kissed Judith goodby.

What would tomorrow be like without her and Fay—and the next day, and the next, and the next?

THE BEAUTY DOCTOR

BY NINON.

Posed by Marena George.

CONDITION—A waistline that measures too many inches.

DIAGNOSIS—You should eat less and exercise more. Flesh around the waistline should be fought vigorously, since that is where superfluous tissue first appears.

TREATMENT—Stretching will convince the growing waistline of the error of its ways. Stand erect with heels together, hands on hips. Pivot the upper part of the body, as above, describing a circle with the shoulders. Do this only a few times at first, being careful not to strain the unaccustomed muscles. Another exercise: bend from the waist, without moving the legs, as far as you can from one side to another.

Teach Tolerance to end War

by Olive Roberts Barton.

Dr. Henry Van Dyke says in a recent article on "Tolerance," "I once knew a man whose facial features were more intolerant than if he had pulled your nose. He never got excited, never scolded at his opponent. It did not seem worth while—he merely smiled."

Dr. Van Dyke goes on to say that there are two kinds of intolerance, the above specimen of serene complacency with its innate sense of superiority, and the other kind, which is based upon sympathy.

We may be consumed by inward animosity, yet outwardly calm. This is not tolerance. There can be no tolerance without a friendly state of mind.

"Intolerance," says Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick, "has a long history and bids fair to have a prosperous future. Tolerance is not a weak thing. It is the unconquerable ascendancy of personal goodwill over all difference of opinion."

Dr. Hendrick Van Loon has written a book on "Intolerance." It is a book that tells us that most of the world's wars have been caused by intolerance—racial, political and religious. It seems that we have mis-named the god of war, Mars wears on his hat band, it would seem, the name "Old Man Intolerance."

Most mothers are pacifists. Yes, we dislike the name, we resent the implication, but any one of us who refuses to give up a loved one is a pacifist. The old saying is, "In time of peace prepare for war." I should like to suggest, "In time of peace prepare for peace."

Every pacifist mother and every other kind of a mother can do more to prevent war than all the war colleges of the great powers. A tolerant country depends upon a tolerant people. Tolerance must be taught from the cradle up. Teach a child tolerance in play, tolerance in school, tolerance to the family. The child is father to the man.

When the world becomes tolerant there will be no more war.

THEY'RE SPILL-PROOF

Bridge covers of pebbled oil cloth are not despised for porch use when glasses of lemonade or iced tea are almost as much a part of the game as the deck of cards.

The Bishop of Uregel is the only cleric in Europe having temporal power. He is the joint ruler of Europe's least known republic, Andorra.

IT'S PERFECT ACCESSORIES THAT MAKE THE COSTUME

Left, one of many effective ways of wearing scarf; right, the large handbag that lends vivid color note to costume.

BY HENRI BENDEL.

New York.—Whether you are a real artist in dress or only a dilettante is revealed in the accessories you wear.

It is a perfectly simple matter to choose a becoming frock, provided you have access to good shops. But to get exactly the right hat, pumps, hosiery, jewelry and handbag for that becoming frock is another matter. It requires a subtlety not involved in the original purchase.

It is in the selection of accessories that the French woman shows her mastery of dress. She is apt to buy them first, the frock later. She will economize on the gown, in order that she may have the little extras her artistic taste demands.

Biased by Thrift.

On the other hand, the American woman allows her native thrift to bias her buying. She will pay any price for her gowns and hats, more than the French, because they seem most important to her.

Then, because she has not trained herself to appreciate the value of her hosiery, gloves and shoes and does not always realize what they contribute to her ensemble, she may ruin the effect of very extravagant purchases.

Always I advise women to choose gloves, shoes, bags, scarfs, parasols and buttonholes as carefully as gowns. And if one has to buy with a close eye on the expenses, I advise economy in gowns rather than accessories.

For accessories can make a gown, but a gown, no matter how lovely becomes inarticulate and ineffective when badly chosen hosiery and too ornate gloves keep company with it.

The scarf is the best friend of the woman of limited income, because it gives her such variety.

With any simple, well cut crepe or chiffon frock, charmingly individual effects may be worked out with different scarfs. Pictured today is a stunning one of chiffon with white background and red and black squares. It has a deep border of red satin that is a touch suggestive of the approach of autumn.

This season's scarfs come in all colors and all color combinations, and in all sizes, the square and the rectangular being equally popular. They live up to the tall order of the sport frock, and in chiffon or pastel colored silks they can transform the evening or the dancing frock.

Defy Uniformity.

In handbags, I call your attention to the huge model photographed, which is of plisquin stitched to form decorative squares, and given a monogrammed flap. This one is a purple leather, but similar ones may be found in black, tan, bright red, bright blue, or green.

These bright colored bags, with a hat of the same color, give a note of interest to the street outfit that challenges the commonplace and defies uniformity. Bags that match the shoes, in alligator or snakeskin are also popular.

And I must say a word about parasols. Last summer they were covered with flowers of all colors, but the note of flamboyance is gone, and this year the fashionable woman prefers the pastel shades of soft blues, tender greens and cyclamen pink. The handles are short and the frames on the Japanese style. The younger set carry them in preference to wearing hats.

Quaker Oats "stands by" you through the morning

Feel hungry and "fidgety" before lunch?—try this

To feel right through the morning, you must have well-balanced, complete food at breakfast. At most other meals—that is, at luncheon and at dinner—you usually get that kind of food.

But at breakfast the great dietary mistake is most often made—a hurried meal, often badly chosen.

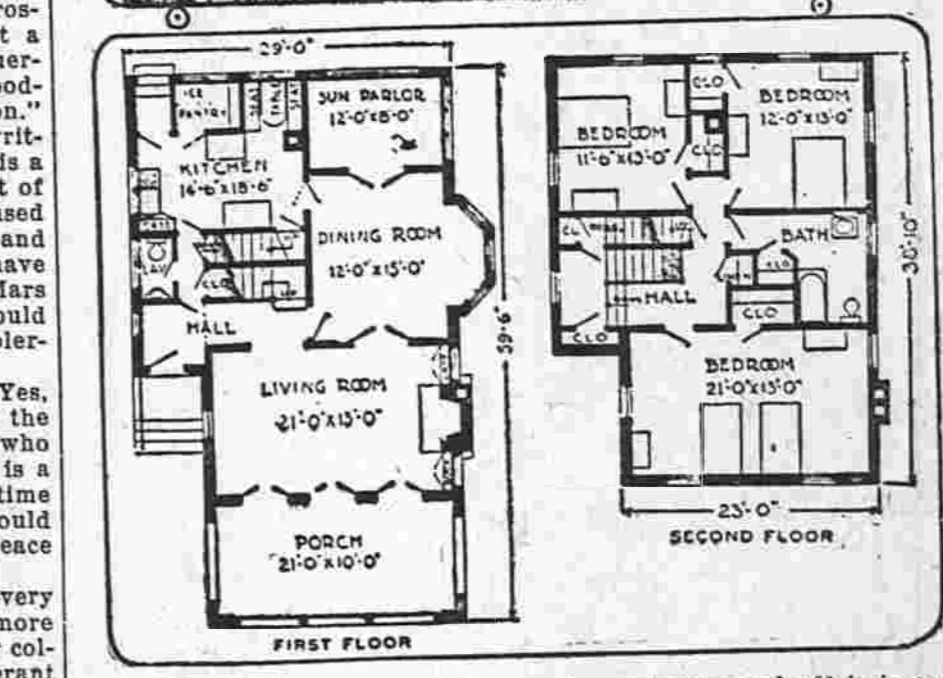

Thus Quaker Oats, containing 16% protein, food's great tissue builder; 58% carbohydrate, its great energy element, plus all-important vitamins and the "bulk" that makes laxatives seldom needed, is the dietetic urge of the world today.

It is food that "stands by" you through the morning. Food that should start every breakfast in your home.

Don't deny yourself the natural stimulation this rich food offers.

Get Quaker Oats today. Grocers have two kinds: Quick Quaker, which cooks in 3 to 5 minutes, and Quaker Oats.

DIGNITY MARKS TOWN HOUSE

The narrow city lot presents a hard problem to the architect. Here he has achieved dignity and a comfortable, spacious floor plan.

Pattern treatment of the brickwork will add greatly to the outside appearance.

The entrance, here, is on the side and leads to the hall. From this the living room, dining room and kitchen open separately.

The main living room is spacious, with an inviting fireplace and a big porch opening off it by French doors. This arrangement gives plenty of light, always a consideration in city homes, and in the summer time makes it almost an outdoor room.

The dining room is lighted by a bay window, and off it is a sun parlor. A well arranged kitchen, with built-in refrigerator and other conveniences, completes the lower floor.

Above are three spacious bedrooms, the master room in front being particularly attractive.

The outside width of the house is 29 feet, and with a driveway to a garage in the rear could be placed on a 45 to 50-foot lot.

HER OWN WAY

A GIRL OF TODAY

A Story of a Girl of Today

Judy Looks Ahead

I looked across the table at Joan and saw that her face was transfixed and I understood that she, too, had the great thrill and that her love had always contained that feeling of maternal responsibility without which any woman's love was dress.

I knew instinctively that what she had just passed through had broadened and deepened her character, and that now that Barry was gone there would come to her some time in the near future, when the hurt was but a scar, the knowledge that after all he had only been a wayward boy—a body who had perhaps loved her as much as he was capable. One who had not really meant to make her unhappy, but one of those weakling human beings whose first thought was for the bringing to himself that which he wanted at whatever cost.

Because she had had that mother feeling I knew that she would forgive him and come to look upon his wife and his child as something which he had given her to pet and care for.

It was her great mother tenderness which poured itself out on something unworthy, and I prayed a little prayer: "God grant that Lela and the child would make up to this poor little rich girl for her poverty in love."

I was glad that Joan was young, for I was sure that this episode would only broaden and sweeten her life in the end, that she would make some other man a better wife and bring up his children to more splendid maturity.

I looked at Jerry. Was it the trick of the candle light, or had the gaunt drawn lines really ironed themselves out of his face in which I only saw pathetic appeal. My hand stole over and rested on that one of his which was lying listlessly on the table.

"Come," I said, "let us all go back to the city and try and sleep away all our cares because tomorrow, you know, is another day. Another day which promises to be full of responsible undertakings."

"Where do you learn all this?" asked Joan. "One to look at you would think that you thought of nothing else than having a good time. And yet in the few days that I have known you I have learned from a girl of about my own age and of my own understanding more than I have learned all together in the years that have gone before."

"Have you also loved and lost?" she said as she looked at me quizzically.

Jerry's hand tightened upon mine.

"I don't know, Joan," I said honestly, "whether I have ever loved or not. If it is a sudden passion that makes one feel that one cannot live separated from the other, I have never loved. And not having loved, I cannot have a feeling that I have lost."

Jerry dropped my hand and rising we all went down the piazza steps out into the moonlighted garden.

Tomorrow—A Queer Coincidence

CLOSED JARS.

Glass or pottery jars with covers are absolutely necessary to icebox sanitation during warm weather. They protect food from absorbing the taste and odor of other food, and prevent spoilage.

Good Nature and Good Health

MILK IS BEST FOOD.
By DR. HUGH S. CUMMING,
Surgeon General, United States
Public Health Service.

Milk probably is the most important of all human foods. It contains nearly all of the elements which the body requires. It carries in his life, and in later years it and its products make up a large proportion of his diet.

A mixture of milk from several cows is much more constant in its chemical make-up than that from a single animal. For this reason, composite milk is to be preferred for infants. Ordinary milk contains 87 per cent. water, leaving only a possible 13 per cent. for food solids. Most state laws now require that milk sold must contain at least 12 per cent. solids, and is not necessarily impure; the buyer simply is not getting his money's worth.

Fat is the most valuable part of whole milk. It is present in the form of an emulsion—tiny particles held in suspension—giving milk its normal color. These particles are surrounded by thin albumen membranes which prevent them from uniting. If milk is beaten, these membranes are broken, the fat particles stick together, and butter is formed.

A number of substances called proteins, of complex chemical composition, furnish an important food found in milk, although they supply only about half the energy supplied by fats. The principal protein is casein, known as curds in sour milk. Albumin and globulin are other proteins present.

Milk deprived of its fat still is a good food, for proteins are always present. When milk spoils, these elements undergo changes and may, when taken into the system, cause with Fay. But when milk sours by the usual lactic acid bacilli, it is an excellent food, especially for adults.

MAKES GOOD SALAD.

For a nourishing salad that is enough for the main dish of the luncheon try combining asparagus, hard boiled eggs, pimientos, lettuce and grated cheese.

PITCHERS.

Milk or cream allowed to stand in pitchers will accumulate an ugly yellow curd. Pour the liquid back into bottles and replace caps.

FRUIT COCKTAIL.

The fruit for a cocktail should be combined at the last moment, to avoid wilting.

HELPS SOAPSUIDS.

When traveling it is advisable to carry a little borax to soften some of the hard water you may encounter.

Wandering Minstrel Successful After Long Career Of Adventure

He's Irish, to be sure. If you couldn't tell it by his name, you could by his face. And if not by his face, his brogue would reveal it.

Yet there's even more Irish to Allen McQuhae than that. His genial nature, his sense of humor, his love of people and children in particular mark him as a model son of the Emerald Isle.

And in return he finds he's just as well liked among the fans who tune in on WEA-F or the chain of stations that rebroadcast his tenor voice. McQuhae is the summer concert star for the Atwater-Kent half hour of music every Sunday night.

This is the pinnacle of his career. He's basking now in the light of fame that had been his ambition for years and for which he had been plunging through all sorts of hardships.

Laborer at First.

McQuhae was a youngster, native of Bray, in County Wicklow, Ireland, when he came to America. He landed in Canada and wandered across the country and on up to the Klondike region where gold was a lure for the adventuresome.

From the Klondike mines, he came back working his way on a ranch, then as a railroad man and even as an engine wiper, always entertaining his fellow workers with his rich voice.

Gradually he made his way back to the east—a minstrel of the cabaret, the movie house and cafe. He began "plugging" songs wherever he could get a hearing. He pitted his voice against the shrieking atmosphere in the open air movie dramas of New York, and with the ballroom of the barker at Coney Island.

Finally he was "discovered" as singers say. It was in a Cleveland cafe, where he used to amuse the beer-drinkers before the days of prohibition, that his voice was recognized as having the capabilities of the opera.

So he went to New York for training. But the war stepped in and he found himself in the front line when fighting was the business of the day, and back in the trenches, singing to his comrades, when there was any recess.

ALLEN McQUHAE, IRISH TENOR OF RADIO, AND HIS TWO CHILDREN, PATRICIA, TWO, AND ALLEN JR., FOUR.

Quick Rise After War.

After the war, McQuhae studied in the United States and completed the cultivation of his voice in Italy. His return to America almost immediately brought him success. Only last November he was signed to an occasional Irish ballad for the Atwater-Kent hour, and by the time the summer program came on and Ad Wolant to a 135-pound Stanley Ketchel and a vest-pocket Dempsey.

Well, it may be that he is all of that, or some of it, at least. What I like about him most is his native enthusiasm for the ring. He actually seems to LOVE to fight. A lot of batters have claimed this extraordinary quality but few have really had it.

Hudkins will take a pasting and then come on to win. In this respect he is like Nelson of old, who was durable enough to win a world championship in the days of long fights but who would probably be a sucker for some of the second-rate speedsters in the sprints which make up fighting for the most part today.

It may be that Hudkins came to the game 20 years too late to win a championship. There is no doubt that he would have been up among the leaders in Nelson's time. His ruggedness, his stamina and his fighting heart would have put him there.

Today when the light-tapping and flashy footwork are more or less a vogue in the ring the qualities which are dominant in Hudkins are not so important, and the probability of his cashing in on them to the extent of a crown is not encouraging.

Hudkins was on the floor in the first round of his fight with Goldstein. A solid, whirling punch to the jaw sent him there. He took a count of five and then got up.

Goldstein looked surprised. The men he had been fighting stayed down when hit. Hudkins not only came back but came snorting fire and throwing thunder all over the ring.

Before the fight some sympathetic scribes were talking to Hudkins about Goldstein's speed and his punch. Hudkins listened courteously until the boys had spilled their gratuitous gab. Then shifting a big black unit cigar—which is ever with him and is never lit—he drawled:

"Well, gentlemen, I figures to hit him once anyway, and that's all I usually need."

The "Cat" figured right. He hit Goldstein once. A right-hander that crashed into the East Side boy's jaw with the force of a baseball bat. This was in the fourth round. Goldstein was out for eight minutes.

The Indians are noted for the deficiency of hair on their faces. Few have beards, and as a rule these are scanty.

HUDKINS 20 YEARS TOO LATE TO WIN TITLE—WILLIAMS

But His Durability and Rushing Tactics Would Have Made Him Champion in Nelson's Time.

By JOE WILLIAMS.

New York, Aug. 9.—This burr likes color and for that reason it likes "Ace" Hudkins, the cave man fighter from Omaha who is now in the important money hereabouts as the result of knocking out Ruby Goldstein, a young phenom that everybody was calling a "second Benny Leonard."

Hudkins is a lightweight. He's been fighting out in the middle west and on the Pacific coast for two or three years. He's an Irishman with red hair and two gold teeth that look like twin pillars of fire. He's managed by his brother, Clyde, who always calls him "Cat" because of his nickname, Wildcat.

The ring critics here have a habit of becoming hysterical over a newcomer who makes the grade unexpectedly. It really wasn't much of a trick to knock out Goldstein, who is only a kid with plenty to learn, but Hudkins did it in a way that fed New York's passion for the spectacular and that's what put him over BIG.

The next day the boys who write for the papers vied with one another trying to see who could lift Hudkins to the highest sent on Mt. Olympus, where only the gods dwell. They called him everything from a cross between Bat Nelson and Ad Wolant to a 135-pound Stanley Ketchel and a vest-pocket Dempsey.

Well, it may be that he is all of that, or some of it, at least. What I like about him most is his native enthusiasm for the ring. He actually seems to LOVE to fight. A lot of batters have claimed this extraordinary quality but few have really had it.

Hudkins will take a pasting and then come on to win. In this respect he is like Nelson of old, who was durable enough to win a world championship in the days of long fights but who would probably be a sucker for some of the second-rate speedsters in the sprints which make up fighting for the most part today.

"BATTLE OF NIAN TIC" AT THE STATE TODAY

Another one of our boys in the movies, at the State Theater. Today and tomorrow you will see Captain Herbert H. Bissell in "The Battle of Niantic" with a cast of Manchester boys. This photoplay was taken in Niantic of the boys of Co. G. It is a comedy drama. Captain Bissell at times makes you laugh and at times makes you cry. You may think this is funny but just the same he is some actor, and the super cast of Manchester boys is also there with fine acting that helps the picture to go over the top. In conjunction with "The Battle of Niantic" there will be a double feature bill, Adolphe Menjou in "The Social Celebrity."

phrase into the English language. This time, it's "A Social Celebrity." The casual reader, on seeing this may ask:—"And pray, tell me, just what is 'A Social Celebrity'?" The answer would seem to be found in Adolphe Menjou's newly completed Paramount production of the same name.

"A Social Celebrity" presents the star in the role of a barber. Our dictionary gives forth the information that "A Social Celebrity" would be "a renowned member of society." But if we look at the Menjou film, we find it's the story of a barber who posed as a foreign count and succeeded in becoming a social success. It's full of typical Menjou-esque humor and is heralded as the best thing either he or Director Mal St. Clair have ever made.

For the second feature we have Hoot Gibson in "The Phantom Bullet." Remember "The Arizona Sweepstakes" and "The Calgary Stampede." More action and speed than either with an absolutely new kind of thrill!

Fur—The Luxurious Necessity

Gone are the days when a fur coat was considered a luxury to be possessed only by a favored few. Today the smart woman realizes that there is far greater economy in possessing a fur than a cloth coat—that the only luxury of a fur coat is the luxury of beauty. That a fur coat outlives a cloth coat by 50 years that in the long run

PLAN MONUMENT FOR TRUDY AT GRIS NEZ
Cape Gris Nez, Aug. 12.—Gertrude Ederle, channel conquerer, is to be immortalized in granite on the rocky shores of Cape Gris Nez.

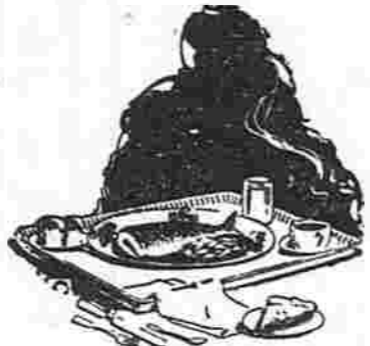

Joe Costa, the "channel tug king," today opened a subscription for the erection of a granite monument, commemorating the remarkable swim of the American girl.

The fur garment actually costs less, to say nothing of the greater beauty and the joy of its possession.

The August Fur sale now in progress at Fradin's Apparel shop offers an opportunity to buy a fur coat at a much lower price now than later in the season. The recent fur strike means a rise in prices of approximately 30 per cent. J. Fradin, upholding his reputation for supreme values, backed by service and the guarantee of satisfaction, has arranged this sale, confident that every woman who intends to purchase a fur coat will take advantage of the extraordinary savings.

Mistress—So you can wash and iron? Now, tell me, how do you know if the iron is too hot? New Servant—Why, mum, by smellin' the linen burnin', of course.—Manchester News.

Commander M. H. Keeney Sustains Broken Hip When Cow Knocks Him Down.

Marathon H. Keeney, commander of Drake Post No. 4, G. A. R., is in the Memorial hospital with a fractured hip as the result of an unusual accident at his home on 210 Keeney street yesterday afternoon.

Commander Keeney was engaged in bringing the cows back from pasture. As he was driving them into the shed and to their respective stanchions, one of the cows knocked him to the floor where he lay unable to move.

Loren Keeney, his son and Elmore McLaughlin, his grandson, found him lying on the floor when they came into the barn shortly afterward. Commander Keeney was carried into the house on a chair and a doctor was summoned. Following the examination, he advised the removal of the injured man to the hospital.

Commander Keeney was removed to the hospital in William F. Quirk's ambulance and was taken into the X-ray room where pictures were taken. Commander Keeney is 83 years old, having reached that birthday on Monday of this week.

POLICE COURT

James Connors and Thomas Rigney, both of Hartford, were in the Manchester police court this morning for shooting craps. They were members of a large party which the police raided Sunday at Mount Nebo. Rigney pleaded guilty and when questioned by Prosecuting Attorney

IF YOU BELIEVE IN SIGNS DON'T BELIEVE THIS ONE! There are signs—and signs. A woman walked into a Depot Square drug store. She handed the clerk a two dollar bill, and a bill to be receipted. The clerk looked at the bill—not the two dollar bill—and found it was for telephone services. "I'm sorry, madam, but we don't collect telephone bills here, only electric light bills and our own." "But, outside, on the sign," said the woman, "it says you do collect telephone bills here." She led the clerk to the door. Above was a familiar blue and white metal plate reading "Telephone Pay Station."

Hathaway he admitted he came all the way from Hartford because he had learned there was going to be a game at Mount Nebo on Sunday. A fine of $2 and costs was imposed. Connors pleaded not guilty. The evidence was not sufficient to convict him. Judge Johnson thereupon found him not guilty. Connors admitted the only reason he was not in the game was because he had no money. The police have learned that these games have been going on for several Sundays and they have been making an effort to stop it. Judge Johnson told Rigney that if it was necessary for him to shoot craps it would be well to stay in Hartford.

John Daveron was found guilty of intoxication and paid a fine of $10 and costs. He was arrested last night by Sergeant Crockett on complaint of some of the trolley conductors. Daveron was sitting very close to the railroad tracks at Laurel Park and it was feared he might get hurt. This is practically the place where he lost his foot some years ago. While intoxicated he was hit by a trolley car.
