CYCLONE TURNS TO WATERSPOUT ON LONG ISLAND

Solid Water Twister Works Havoc at Glen Cove and Sea Cliff—Jumps Over N. Y. from Jersey.

New York, Aug. 17.—One dead, five injured and property damage estimated at more than a million dollars is the toll of a cyclone which tore through a portion of northern New Jersey last evening, jumped over New York city and turned into a waterspout at Glen Cove and Sea Cliff, Long Island.

Leaving widespread destruction in its wake, the twister left the force after striking the Long Island towns and continued along the northern shore to the eastern end of the island, where it lost itself at sea.

Smashes Bungalows. Although J. P. Morgan's Corsair and other yachts at Glen Cove escaped the waterspout, many smaller boats were smashed to pieces as a series of huge waves roared toward the shore, growing in height until the spout extended 150 feet toward the heavens, illuminated by blinding flashes of lightning.

The gigantic wave then crashed down on a bungalow colony on the shore, flattening buildings, washing out roads and smashing trees and telegraph poles. The towns were plunged into darkness as power lines were severed.

As the twister passed over New York City, David Goldfarb, a painter, was struck by a stray bolt of lightning. He toppled from a third-story window to the street, dying instantly.

Damage in New Jersey. The cyclone coming out of the west, resembled a streak of black and white smoke as it struck northern New Jersey at 7:25 o'clock. Rain which accompanied the twister flooded the streets. In Ridgefield the cyclone demolished the Morsemere Community church and tore off the roofs of several buildings.

From Ridgefield the twister streaked through Ridgefield park, Perth Amboy, Morsemere and Palisades Park, directly across the Hudson from New York, snapping off trees and telegraph poles and lifting roofs. Transportation facilities were paralyzed and roads blocked by wreckage.

Hops Over Big City. A catastrophe was narrowly averted when a bolt of lightning struck an oil tank in the Standard Oil Company's baywharf plant, causing a fire which firemen managed to extinguish.

The twister hopped over New York and two miles later struck the Long Island towns, despoiling at least a mile of water front.

Residents of the stricken areas were hard at work today repairing their shattered homes. In some cases their belongings were washed or blown a mile away.

2 WOMEN, 2 BOYS, GIRL LONG LOST IN WOODS

Rescued After 15 Wet, Hungry Hours from Wilderness of Massachusetts Border.

Douglas, Mass., Aug. 17.—Lost in the dense woods on the Massachusetts-Connecticut line for nearly fifteen hours, drenched by rain and hungry, two mothers, two boys and a girl were rescued at dawn today by George Chandler, 65, wood chopper.

As a posse of one hundred scoured the woods, Chandler took a lone course with a lantern over a trail, calling out in the wilderness until he was finally heard.

The lost ones, Mrs. Louis Chabot, 30, her sons Joseph, 10, and Louis, 12, Mrs. Helen Chabot, 45, of Fall River, a sister-in-law of Mrs. Louis Chabot, and her daughter Lillian, 10, were found beneath a tree.

DANCE, SAYS DOCTOR, TO CURE STAMMERING

London, Aug. 17.—Ballroom dancing is an effective cure for stammering, according to H. St. John Ramsey, in charge of the speech clinic at Guy's hospital. By teaching rhythm, such as in the fox trot, waltz or tango, the doctor says the stammerer is helped to a proper pronunciation of his words.

'GREEN' TO BUILD SCHOOL ADDITION

Four Mill Tax Laid at Meeting But No Action Taken on Consolidation.

Harmony reigns again in the Green school district and the gathering clouds of battle on the question of consolidation were dissipated last night when by a unanimous vote the last session of the adjourned school meeting decided to appropriate $35,000 for the purpose of building a four-room addition to the school. A tax of four mills collectible September 1, was also levied by a unanimous vote.

Much Discussion. Considerable argument for and against consolidation preceded the vote.

GET TWO SUSPECTS ON 'BREAK' CHARGE

Man Who Applied for Job on Police Is Arrested by Sergeant Crockett.

Ernest Henry of 232 Spring street, who has previously applied for a position on the Manchester police force, was arrested last night with a 15-year-old boy on the charge of breaking into the canteen at Globe Hollow and stealing a carton of cigarettes. The arrests were made by Sergeant John Crockett who investigated the break.

Canteen Closed. The robbery took place yesterday afternoon after Lifeguard Fred McCormick had left. Rain had spoiled the day for swimming so the bathhouse and canteen were closed at 4 o'clock. Henry and his companion had been at the pool that afternoon and were still there when the lifeguard left.

McCormick returned about 8 o'clock last night to see if there were any swimmers in the pool and found the door to the bathhouse. He found that the wire which encloses the canteen had been ripped off at the bottom and that a carton of cigarettes had been taken. He notified the police and Sergeant Crockett was detailed to work on the case.

Saw Two Boys. Lifeguard McCormick told the sergeant of the two boys who had been there that afternoon and a search was started for them. They were arrested within a short time and are being held for action by Probation Officer Edward C. Elliott.

Entrance was gained to the bathhouse through the wire which encloses a portion of the wall under the eaves of the building. To climb to the roof was easy because of the canopy framework which extends the length of the shed at a height of about seven feet. The wire was ripped off and the younger boy made the entrance while his companion watched.

Of the carton of cigarettes that was stolen, Sergeant Crockett recovered six packages. The younger boy said that he had climbed the building while Henry watched and had given the older boy three packages of cigarettes for watching.

LOCAL DYEING SHOPS AVOIDED BY MRS. HALL

Four Near at Hand When She Sent Coat and Scarf to Philadelphia—Murder Inquiry Runs to Detail.

Somerville, N. J., Aug. 17.—Testimony that a coat and scarf which were sent to Philadelphia to be dyed by Mrs. Frances S. Hall, widow of the slain clergyman, might have contained bloodstains which could not be noticed because of the nature of the fabric, was given today at the Hall-Mills murders special investigation hearing by Charles Collins, detective, who worked on the original probe.

Collins was a Middlesex county detective in 1922, at the time the murders were committed. He told Senator Alexander Simpson, special prosecutor, that on September 20, 1922, he had been sent to Philadelphia to check up on a brown or tan coat and scarf which Mrs. Hall had sent to that city to be dyed black.

Perhaps Not Noticed. Collins testified that he had questioned the proprietor of the dyeing establishment. The proprietor had said that there appeared to be no blood stains on the coat and scarf when it was received for dyeing, but that it was possible that the articles bore such stains which would be unnoticeable because of the nature of the fabric.

The proprietor said also, according to Collins, that it was the first time he had been given work to do by Mrs. Hall. Collins testified that he had questioned the proprietor of the dyeing establishment. The proprietor had said that there appeared to be no blood stains on the coat and scarf when it was received for dyeing, but that it was possible that the articles bore such stains which would be unnoticeable because of the nature of the fabric.

NATIONS OPPOSE U. S. COURT RESERVATIONS

Entry of America in World Tribunal Likely to Be Rejected After Conference.

Geneva, Aug. 17.—The entry of the United States into the World Court with reservations seem unlikely, it was learned at the secretariat of the League of Nations today.

Twenty-five nations have already accepted the invitation of the League to meet in Geneva in September to examine the proposed United States reservations and a majority of these nations have intimated that they will oppose them.

VALENTINO RALLIES AFTER GOOD NIGHT

Not Out of Danger But There's No Cause for Undue Anxiety, Say Doctors.

New York, Aug. 17.—Rudolph Valentino was apparently rallying from his critical illness today. Attending physicians announced that he had spent a restful night at the Polyclinic hospital and that there had been no developments that would warrant undue anxiety.

Valentino, who had been reported as very ill following a double operation on Sunday for gastric ulcer and appendicitis, is not regarded as out of danger, however.

His comfortable night is understood to have exceeded the hopes of his doctors whose ominous bulletins since the dual operation Sunday have caused his friends grave alarm.

Norma Talmadge, the famous movie star, called at the hospital this morning but Valentino was asleep and she said she would come back in the afternoon. She was accompanied by her husband, Joseph M. Schenck, chairman of the board of the United Artists, Inc.

Schenck revealed to reporters that Valentino's death would mean a loss to his company of between $3,000,000 and $4,000,000.

Newspaper men who had been maintaining a "death watch" at the hospital since the secret star was stricken were ordered out of the hospital shortly before noon. Hospital officials said they regretted having to take this action but that the routine of the institution had been disturbed since Valentino's illness.

Large numbers of persons, including many young girls, have tried to see him.

NOTED BRITISH PUBLISHER FOUND DEAD BY BULLET

London, Aug. 17.—Sir Howard Spicer, K. B. E., a director of the United Newspapers, publishers of the "Daily Chronicle," and well known as the editor of several magazines, was found dead in a hotel last night, death apparently having come from a bullet wound. Relatives said that Sir Howard had been suffering from influenza.

Germany the Sole Gainer By Proposal of Sen. Borah

Washington, Aug. 17.—Senator William E. Borah's suggestion to Georges Clemenceau, ex-premier of France, that a solution for the debt problem might be found in the cancellation of all reparations as well as the debts has fallen on deaf ears so far as the United States treasury is concerned.

Borah's suggestion was contained in a reply to the open letter which the "Eger" addressed to President Coolidge, in which he appealed for American generosity to France in the way of forgiving the $4,000,000,000 that France owes the treasury.

Dispatches from abroad have indicated that Borah's proposal is being taken seriously and it is apprehended that Borah may propose legislation when Congress meets in December. If he does the proposal will have a cool reception at the treasury.

COOLIDGE WILL NOT YIELD TO K. C. DEMANDS

Gives Formal Notice That Hands-Off Policy Toward Mexico Will Not Be Abandoned.

White Pine Camp, N. Y., Aug. 17.—The United States will maintain a hands-off policy insofar as the dispute between the Catholic church and the Mexican government is concerned. The appeals of the Knights of Columbus in this country and others for intervention will have to be denied.

This was made known officially today by President Coolidge's spokesman. Neither international law nor existing treaty rights give this government authority to interfere in a purely domestic question, the Coolidge spokesman said, and the administration regards the church-state conflict as absolutely personal to Mexico.

Protest Property Rights. The American government will confine itself to efforts to protect American property rights in Mexico, it was stated. This fight—waged against certain provisions of the Mexican constitution—is not new however.

As a result of the protracted correspondence between Washington and Mexico City, Mexico has made large concessions to American interests, it was made known, but there still remain a number of important questions to be settled. Every effort will be made to give an equitable settlement of these remaining problems—all revolving around the workings of the so-called land laws, which this government holds to be confiscatory.

Objects to "Thirty-Threes." The United States also objects to the thirty-third article of the Mexican constitution which gives the government of the southern republic authority to expel any alien. Many protests have been made by Ambassador Sheffield, it was said, against "thirty-threes," but not always with success.

Thus far, President Coolidge has been informed of only one concrete instance in which American church property has been seized as a result of President Calles' order expelling alien churchmen. The complaint on property in question was lodged with the American embassy and Sheffield has made representations to the Mexican government and has received assurances the matter will be adjusted.

NIP LEAGUE REVOLT

Wide Mexican War Plot Laid to Religious Order.

Mexico City, Aug. 17.—Following the arrest yesterday of General Enrique Estrada, former Secretary of War for Mexico, and 174 men at San Diego, Cal., charged with plotting the overthrow of the Mexican government, it was announced here today that government agents had uncovered a widespread revolutionary plot, and had arrested fifty men and women in connection with the conspiracy.

The seditious plot, which had ramifications in six states, as well as in the city of Mexico, was said to have been planned by a religious order.

DOUBT CONFESSION OF THIS 'MURDERESS'

Believed That Tenn. Woman Shoulders Killing of Child to Shield Husband.

Greenville, Tenn., Aug. 17.—Mrs. Alma Tipton, her husband, Robert, are in jail here on charges of murder in connection with the killing of little Novella Winkle, pretty 13-year-old orphan girl who made her home with the couple, at their farmhouse.

Mrs. Tipton confessed that she hacked the child's head from her body with an axe "because I have always wanted to kill somebody to see what it was like."

Doubt of the woman's story was reflected in the action of the grand jury, which promptly indicted both Mrs. Tipton and her husband for the murder. Officers believe Mrs. Tipton may have confessed the crime to shield her husband.

PLANS CATACOMBS TO HOUSE LIBRARY

London, Aug. 17.—The famous Bodleian Library at Oxford which is growing at the rate of 25,000 volumes a year, and which now contains 4,500,000 volumes, will have reached its capacity in a decade, according to Sir Michael Sadler, master of University College.

Sadler has drawn up a number of plans for enlargement, one of which provides for the construction of miles of catacombs underneath the library building.

BAN ON FILM OF KITCHENER HOAX

British Home Office Prevents Showing of Pictures That Power Had Made.

London, Aug. 17.—The stir caused throughout the British nation by what is becoming known as the "Kitchener hoax" was not abated much today by the disappearance of Frank Power, pen name of Arthur V. Freeman, British writer, who is held responsible for the hoax.

Following the official announcement by the government yesterday that an examination of the coffin in which Power had brought here from Norway, and which he had widely announced contained the body of a British officer whom he believed to be that of Lord Kitchener of Khartoum, revealed that the coffin was a packing case which did not and never had contained a human body. Power issued a statement to the press saying he was "very much surprised to read the result of the opening of the coffin," and wished that he had been present.

Was "In Country." He said Scotland Yard officials had told him that he could not be wanted at the examination of the contents of the coffin, and accordingly, he had kept an appointment in the country.

Today Power was not in evidence. But Lord Broome, son of the present Earl Kitchener, had announced that his family would take steps to prevent the exhibition of a film which Power had made showing the movement of the coffin from Norway to London.

At this juncture the home office stepped in, requesting the company to withhold exhibition of the film. The company agreed to do so.

Possible Solution. A possible inkling to the scheme of the hoax may be found in the fact that very early yesterday morning an abortive attempt was made by two men to break into the mortuary where the supposed Kitchener coffin lay. They were seen and fled. It is believed that they may have intended to open the coffin and leave the impression that the body had been stolen, thus preventing its exposure.

NEW HAVEN TORRENT FOLLOWER OF SHOWERS

Elm City Gets Cloudburst Effect, With Much Damage, After Hours of Rain.

New Haven, Aug. 17.—Damage that may total $100,000 was done during the night by a rain storm that, after eight hours of intermittent showers, suddenly developed into a cloudburst. Street pavements were ripped up and washed away, street cars were disabled, wire service interrupted by water in manholes and falling tree limbs, and cellars of stores were flooded where surface water sewers laid fifty years ago were inadequate for the burden of water.

A rainfall of one inch in less than fifteen minutes, causing the chief damage, was the heaviest downpour for the time in twenty-five years. Only once before in the history of the weather bureau office has this amount been recorded in fifteen minutes. In 1901 New Haven experienced a fall of 1.06 inches in that time. The total rainfall in eight hours during the storm was 2.14 inches.

ACCUSED AS MURDER IS 'TAKEN FOR A RIDE'

Cleveland, Aug. 17.—The bullet-riddled body of Philip Catalano, 37 was found at Richmond and Clabside roads, Lyndhurst village early today. Catalano was using $20,000 bond pending a hearing tomorrow in police court on a charge of killing Pat Clofka, 31, on August 2 last.

Police expressed the belief that Catalano was slain in revenge, having undoubtedly been taken "for a ride" by friends of his victim.

HOLD 1, TO TAKE 2 OTHERS, FOR MELLETT CRIME

Mazer, "Jungle" Chief, Formally Charged With Murder—U. S. Attorney Foretells Clean-up of Mystery.

Canton, O., Aug. 17.—Louis Mazer, alleged murderer of Don R. Mellett, editor of the Canton Daily News, and declared by authorities to be the owner of the "Ivory-handed" revolver, that was used in the assassination, today will be asked by District Attorney A. E. Berntsen, of Cleveland, to tell everything he knows in connection with the crime.

While officials were speeding to Cleveland with the warrant, it was learned that two other arrests on first degree charges were not expected until Friday.

Evidence that is accumulating rapidly, however, may force the hands of investigators and bring about arrests before then, it was said.

Ripping Up Mystery. Action dormant for a month in the Mellett murder, is now ripping its way through a wall of mystery and political and social entanglements, and before the week ends at least two other men are expected to stand charged with murder, first degree.

They now face, according to officials conducting the inquiry, a mass of evidence in the crime that startled America.

Mazer, according to evidence gathered by Joseph R. Roach, Chicago attorney for Ora Slater, Cincinnati detective, and by federal authorities at Cleveland, is alleged to have brought Pat McDermott and Steve Kaschok, informer held here, to Canton from Massillon about a week before the murder.

Warrants for the "pay-off" man and an alleged "triggor-man" are expected Friday. Meantime, other warrants charging several with complicity may be issued.

Implicated by Kaschok. Mazer, the affidavit for whose arrest was signed by Michael Glenn, Indiana detective, working with Joseph R. Roach, was first implicated by Steve Kaschok, informer, who developed "cold feet" in the alleged plot after he claims, he was hired to attack Mellett.

When the news of the murder reached Kaschok, in Cleveland, he consulted an attorney and then came to Canton, where he told Ora Slater, Cincinnati detective in charge of the Stark county inquiry, a story which gave life to the present action in the case.

Threatened Attorney. The Canton Daily News today says Mazer is reported to have visited the home of Attorney Norman E. Clark, former Canton police court prosecutor, within the past two weeks and threatened to put the young attorney "where he will never talk again" if he did not "keep quiet" as to the activities of the Canton vice ring.

Will "Rock Ohio." Sensational disclosures that will rock the state of Ohio, were promised today by United States District Attorney, A. E. Berntsen when he questioned Louis Mazer, Canton "Jungle" lord about the killing of Don R. Mellett, publisher of the Canton News, of which crime Mazer today stands accused.

When we get through with Mazer we will have the goods on every member of the cowardly clique that planned the assassination," the dynamic district attorney declared. "We are going to clean up this case if we have to arrest every man, woman and child in Canton."

Murder Warrant. Mazer was arrested here late yesterday by federal agents on a liquor charge and last night a murder charge and last night a murder charge and last night a murder charge.

FACES DEATH CHAIR FOR POISON BOOZE

Charged With Selling Liquor That Killed 46 People; Chemist's Blunder.

By PAUL HARRISON. Buffalo, N. Y., Aug. 17.—Once James C. Voelke was a bootlegger, and a good one. The white-aproned gentry of the Buffalo speakasies had only to say "It's Voelke's" to assuage any doubts of their patrons. His name carried such prestige that the bootleggers borrowed it as a guarantee of their fiery products. Now Voelke faces death in the electric chair. He is charged with first degree murder for partial responsibility for the way of poison liquor which swept away forty-six lives in Canada and western New York.

New York Stocks

For instance, in 1924, there was a strike in Buffalo. One Mike Jernatowski, a trucker, tried to do his part in a limited way. He was arrested by firing a revolver in the district where the strikebreakers lived. A bullet entered a house and killed a woman. Mike did not try to kill the woman; he never even saw her. He fired only to frighten her. The verdict was affirmed by the court of appeals. "The Voelke case is directly similar to that of Jernatowski," says Moore. "An intent to kill is not a necessary element under the statute. Voelke sold liquor that caused death. We will show that Voelke knew when he sold that liquor that it was deadly poisonous. That he sold it with reckless indifference for the consequences is evidence enough to deprive him of a mitigating circumstance. "I feel confident that we will secure a conviction." A member of defense counsel, Bernard B. Swartz, says: "The entire case, if it ever comes to trial on the charge, will hinge about the question of whether Voelke knew that the alcohol he sold was poisonous. I am sure that he did not know this. The Chemist's Mistake. "Voelke sent a sample of his shipment to laboratories for analysis. A chemist started the test, leaving some of the alcohol in a tube. He then went to lunch and later called his partner, asking him to look at the test, and if it was not discolored to mark it O. K. By some mistake, the alcohol was passed. "The prosecution, however, charges that Voelke was present when the test was made and that the stuff was shown to contain 93.9 per cent. wood alcohol. Attorney Swartz speaking again: "It is inconceivable that the prosecution can show why the most reputable bootlegger in Buffalo would deliberately sell poison and thus ruin his very remunerative business. "That's easy enough," says District Attorney Moore. "He did it for the enormous profit involved and because he thought he could get away with it. "This alcohol came from Germany and cost 17 cents a gallon. Smuggled into Canada, it brought $12 to $17 a gallon. It was a denatured product, but a good grade of methanol alcohol, most deadly of all, and the kind from which the poison cannot be removed. Hundreds are killed annually by it." Customers Fall Off. Meanwhile, western New York has been flooded with prohibition and alcohol officers. Officials have pleaded that drinking be stopped if for no other reason than to keep the death toll from going higher. The warning has been heeded. There are no buyers, and few sellers. Gin is $10 a fifth of a gallon. There is scarcely any beer. Chemists report amazing amounts of liquor brought to them for analysis. Bootleggers are in a frenzy and have lost thousands of dollars. And the boycott goes on. No one will drink from the poison cup.

HOLD 1, TO TAKE 2, IN MELLETT CRIME

der warrant was sworn out against him at Canton. Mazer was in the Cuyahoga County Jail, held incommunicado, while Bernsteen marshaled all his resources to obtain a confession. It was expected that Carl Studer another Canton "Jungle" king, who is in the county jail here on liquor conspiracy charges, would also be cross-examined. Mazer Breaks Down. Mazer broke down and wept today when he learned he stood accused of the murder of Don R. Mellett. He was brought into the United States District Attorney A. E. Bernsteen's office at 11 o'clock by United States Marshal George Stauffer. He was handcuffed. He had no intimation he faced so serious a charge. After the district attorney asked him a few questions concerning the operations of the liquor ring at Canton, he leaned toward Mazer and said: "You are charged with the murder of Don R. Mellett." Mazer gasped with amazement when he heard the charge against him, and then he broke down. While he was weeping with sobs, his parents, Mr. and Mrs. David Mazer, entered the district attorney's office and went to his side. "Louis, what's the matter?" they asked. "They say I killed him," responded Mazer, his voice trembling with sobs, but hardly raised above a whisper. "Oh, no!" cried Mrs. Mazer, and then she and her husband wept. Bernsteen, Stauffer, Ora Slater, Judge H. C. Pontius, and Attorney Joseph Roach then withdrew to the marshal's office for a conference. Carl Studer, "lord" of the Canton "Jungle," held on a liquor conspiracy charge, was brought into the marshal's office where the conference was in progress. There he was confronted with Mazer. From behind the locked doors came shouts of "I didn't!" and "It's a lie!" and other impassioned remarks. Third Man Surrenders. Andrew Pretsky of Canton, the third man for whom a federal warrant charging liquor conspiracy was issued last year, walked into the federal building here today and gave himself up to United States Marshal Stauffer. Pretsky will be questioned immediately, according to word from the conference chamber.

AMERICAN WOMEN HURT IN FRENCH RUM CRASH

Paris, Aug. 17.—Miss Frances Harcourt of Somerville, Mass., an employee of the American embassy here, was badly injured and her mother, Mrs. Edith Harcourt, and Miss Mary Fish of Eau Claire, Wis., were slightly injured when an automobile in which they were driving overturned near Rouen. a session in the Senate chamber of the announced purpose of installing an electoral college in accordance with the constitution. This rump meeting was attended by 117 deputies, who proceeded to elect a president and vice-president. Appeal to Court. The president of the Senate ordered the rump meeting to vacate the Senate Chamber and President Calles was asked to send troops to expel them. The rump meeting, however, put its program through with a rush and with loud "vivas!" The dissidents were just leaving the Senate chambers when the troops arrived. Labastido Igueldo, who was elected president of the rump meeting, is a close friend of General Obregon, which is regarded as significant. Many of the coalitionists claim they have the support of General Obregon. Varying legal opinions on the claims of the two bodies as to validity were expressed today. The coalitionists have communicated with the supreme court, notifying that body of the action they have taken, and asking an opinion as to the legality of their body.

NEW BRITAIN STEAM BLAST MAY KILL 3

Escaping Vapor in Factory Critically Injures Trio of Workers, Blows Out Door. New Britain, Aug. 17.—Three victims of escaping steam, taken from a local manufacturing plant early today, were in extremely critical condition in New Britain hospital this afternoon and were hardly expected to live. They are Frank Rund, 50, Raymond Thiede, 21, and John Paquin, 32. William Pierson, a watchman, barely escaped being killed. Standing at the entrance of a chamber in which the men were working, Pierson was knocked down by a door that the escaping steam blew from its hinges and was unable to get out until the steam cleared away. An investigation is under way to determine the cause of the accident.

ONCE MERCHANTS NOW IN PRISON FOR ARSON

Bridgeport, Aug. 17.—Moses Casper and Harris Feinberg of Brooklyn, N. Y., who once owned the F. & C. Clock and Suit Co., store here were taken to Wethersfield today by Sheriff Simeon E. CIVIL WAR VETERAN HAD RELATIVES HERE

James Ivers, of East Hampton, Fought Under Farragut in Mobile Bay. East Hampton, Aug. 17.—Another Civil War veteran's name was erased today from the rapidly decreasing list of survivors of the great conflict between the North and South with the death of James Ivers, one of the oldest residents of this place. Mr. Ivers had lived here for over sixty years. Death occurred this morning at St. Francis hospital in Hartford following a major operation two weeks ago. Mr. Ivers held the honor of having served on both land and sea in the Civil War. He fought with Admiral Farragut in the Battle of Mobile Bay. Mr. Ivers is survived by his wife, Mrs. Mary Ivers, who lives here and by several children, most of whom reside in Manchester. Those living in Manchester are four daughters: Mrs. D. J. Moriarty, of Florence street, Mrs. Annie O'Connell, of Cambridge street, Francis Hanley, of Hudson street, and Miss Julia A. Ivers, of 38 Florence street; and one son, George Ivers, of Cambridge street. He also leaves a daughter, Mrs. John Walsh, of New Haven and two sons, Charles Ivers, of Bridgeport and B. P. Ivers of St. Albans, Vermont. Mr. Ivers is also survived by three grandchildren, one of whom lives in Manchester. She is Miss Arlyne Moriarty, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. J. Moriarty, of Florence street. Funeral arrangements are incomplete but the burial will be in East Hampton.

Interesting Court Trial In "House of Clocks"

Amid Ticking of Timepieces of Various Sizes and Shapes Law Is Dealt Out in Bolton.

(By Staff Correspondent)

Amid the ticking of old-fashioned clocks, the Bolton Town Court held another of its memorable sessions last evening at the home of Grand Juror N. C. Maine.

The country court scenes differ from those which occur in the Manchester Police Court. And yet, while they are somewhat odd the court is efficient.

The trial was scheduled to start at 7 o'clock standard time. When the reporter entered the court room, he found the kitchen packed.

Stove As a Seat The reporter in the meantime had seated himself upon a stove and was viewing the situation with eager interest.

The Judge Arrives Presently the judge came into the room and took his seat at one side of the table.

At 7:45 Grand Juror Maine came into the room, carrying a handful of papers. He was garbed in the natural farmer style.

Cummings was charged with reckless driving. He was defended by ex-judge Robert E. Carney, of Manchester.

Phone Interrupts B—TTTTTTTTT! The telephone was ringing.

Next Case! A Willimantic driver was the next to face trial. He told the court he was in a hurry to get home.

Then another case was heard and it resulted the same. Then there was a recess while the judge and the prosecutor figured the costs of court on the cases already tried.

An Interruption Then someone came into the room and said: "There's a Sundeaker with flags on blocking traffic out there in the yard. We can't get past it."

No one moved. No one cared to. For it must be remembered that it was pouring last night.

Same Attorney Then came the trial of the two Hartford truck drivers who had figured in the accident and who had narrowly escaped with their lives.

Anyhow it finally resulted that Justice Connors decided the two men had had sufficient misfortune with the loss of the trucks and the narrow escape from death.

Standard Time The trial was scheduled to start at 7 o'clock standard time. When the reporter entered the court room, he found the kitchen packed.

WTIC TO BROADCAST HOME CANNING TALKS Will Start Next Week—Miss Sands to Be in Charge; The Program.

WTIC, The Travelers broadcasting station, will carry a series of radio talks on Home Canning, beginning Wednesday evening, August 25.

Miss Sands will give a series of four talks on Wednesday evenings, 7:50 standard time. The dates are August 25, September 1, 8 and 15.

These talks will cover the important items to remember in successful home canning. Miss Sands is planning to answer questions received, during her radio talk on September 15.

The schedule arranged by Miss Sands for these radio talks follows: August 25 (7:50 p. m., standard time): Improved Practices in Home Canning.

Sept. 1 (Same time): How to Properly Can Vegetables; Especially Corn and Beans.

THE PHONE-A-PIE SHOP J. F. Bailey, who has been chef at the Marlborough public market delicatessen department, has left Wm. Podrove's employ to enter business for himself at 117 1-2 Spruce street.

Men of Babylonia carried walking sticks. The idea is a new one for this town. As its name indicates it will be a pie shop, catering to housekeepers who have only to phone their orders and have the pies delivered, fresh and warm, at their doors.

WARD CHENEY TELLS OF STYLE FACTORS

Beauty, Modernity and Authority Constitute Thing That Is Stylish.

Beauty, modernity, authority, are the three factors which enter into the making of a "style," in its broadest sense, according to Ward Cheney of Cheney Brothers.

Then came the trial of the two Hartford truck drivers who had figured in the accident and who had narrowly escaped with their lives.

Anyhow it finally resulted that Justice Connors decided the two men had had sufficient misfortune with the loss of the trucks and the narrow escape from death.

ROAD SPEED. If Superintendent Hurley of the State Police makes good on his threat to arrest slow moving motorists for impeding traffic he will be displaying courage possibly in excess of wisdom.

Unquestionably it is a highly aggravating thing for a long line of automobiles on a much traveled highway to be held up by a "road loafer."

Also it is not to be denied that there is argument on the side of the "loafer." He might, possibly, put his case this way: "I drive my car at eighteen miles an hour. I hold up faster drivers and so am regarded as a pest by the fellow who wants to drive twenty-five as much as by the fellow who wants to drive forty."

"There will always be somebody holding up the line, so long as there are those in the line who want to go faster than the cars ahead—and this would be the case if the whole works were tearing over the country at fifty miles an hour; somebody would kick because the line wasn't making sixty."

This question of speed on the highway is an intensely puzzling one. Also it has many sides. We very much doubt whether even the genius and experience of a policeman is quite equal to the complete solution of it.

STRAIGHT OVERBOARD. We have always had a great deal of admiration for a straight thinker. The chap whose mind goes smack to a conclusion without wavering or wabbling or hesitating is at least a more comfortable person to get along with than the one whose processes you cannot keep track of, who distrusts his own words before he gets them out and is liable to change "no" into "n-not yet" after he has started it.

So there is much that is admirable about the smash-bang conclusions of Louis J. Taber, master of the National Grange, in his dealings with the prohibition question. Mr. Taber has no patience with President Coolidge's idea that perhaps we ought not to poison off half the population with still more pernicious denatured alcohol.

"Let 'em let it alone or take the consequences," is the Taber solution. No monkey business about that.

Then all you have to do, after that, is to deport all the alien bootleggers, fall all the citizen ones and put everybody who buys bootleg booze in jail too. Simple, direct, candid stuff. Cheers for Taber as a straight thinker.

Straight thinking, is like straight walking. We like to see a good straight walker. Everybody does. One who puts his feet down with a firm, solid thump; who is going somewhere and intends to keep on; who doesn't stagger and mix in short, unsteady steps or meander all over the sidewalk.

Sometimes, however, a good, sturdy, even paced walker, walking in the dark, can and does walk right bang off the dock and into deep water. Sometimes a straight thinker, with no light for his thoughts, can and does think himself into the most utterly wrong conclusions imaginable.

Taber has no idea at all how many people he would thus summarily dispose of either by death or jailing. It is highly probable that if he did get rid of all those he so cavalierly dismisses, he would find that his friends of the Grange would experience a terrific shrinkage in the demand for farm products. Probably a good half of that industrial population which constitute the market for the stuff that Grangers raise would be removed from the list of purchasers, either by being buried or by being incarcerated in places where the food consumption is on an exceedingly restricted scale as to variety and grade, even as to quantity.

As the head of an organization which is, naturally, seeking the prosperity of its members, we should say that Mr. Taber had thought himself overboard.

O. TEMPORA. For thirty years Pittsfield, Mass., has been fighting a losing battle with the trend of the times. That length of time ago it was probably the most hide bound community in New England, dominated by the little group of brahmin blue-stockings whose families had bossed the town and steered it in the way of stiff necked conservatism for generations. Then the outside began to percolate in. Strangers came. The General Electric hit it like a tidal wave, bringing in terrible outlanders who had never heard of Emerson, swarms of raucous creatures utterly irreverent of Pittsfield culture. And ever since then the old timers have had a simply dreadful time trying to keep Pittsfield even relatively nice.

But they have never given up. They have kept on fighting for a restoration of 1855. It is said that they sell more stovepipe hats in Pittsfield than in Chicago and it has even been alleged, probably without truth, that there is still a market there for bustles.

Some of this determination sticks to the ribs of the police. Despite the topsyturvydom of the age, there are old stagers on the Pittsfield force who have never lowered the lily white flag that the first Pittsfield cop raised back in the forgotten days of the nineteenth century—the mental standard of Pittsfield purity. Hence the edict that no girl shall appear on a Pittsfield street hereafter in knickers.

We scent trouble ahead for Pittsfield tradition and Pittsfield cops. It looks like a showdown were coming—a knockdown and dragout between the manners of the eighties and the liberties of the flapper of the twenties. And we can blame well guess who is going to get licked.

THOSE "AMERICANS." Fanny Hurst, who has had experiences enough to be pretty fairly hard boiled, has come back from Europe in disgust, driven out by very shame for her fellow citizens who swarm there this summer and do not know how to behave.

"The man from this country is a level headed citizen," she says, "until he gets to Europe. Then he becomes a true Babbit. It is for this reason that there is so much feeling in France against Americans. That's the reason I am returning to this country now."

Miss Hurst might have gone a little further and indulged in a certain measure of explanation of this phenomenon, so often remarked within the last year and particularly this summer. It is that probably not one in ten of these so-called Americans and actual American citizens is much more than half a generation removed from European origin. It is not, in the vast majority of cases, the person who has a genuine American background, who makes a nuisance of himself in Europe with bad manners and lack of tact, but either the son of immigrants, born in this country within a very few years of the parents' arrival or a person who himself came to America as a child.

The doctor is a graduate of the Seventh Day Adventists' College of Medical Evangelists, at Loma Linda, Cal. The College of Medical Evangelists argues like this: A South Sea island cannibal falls sick. The other cannibals, untrained in medicine, don't know what to do for him. Along comes a good doctor and cures him. The cannibals, presumably, are grateful. At any rate, they have sense enough not to kill and eat their doctor. He's the only one they've got and nobody knows how soon somebody else will need to be cured by him.

The offensive American is the American by adoption, his head turned by a little financial success, his training in Americanism superficial. When he gets back into the environment from which he or his peasant parents sprung, he simply does not know how to act—and so he acts like an ass, a cad and a braggart.

HOAX. It is utterly impossible for the ordinary normal mind to conceive the animus back of the Kitchener hoax. Unless there is some factor in this case which has not appeared in the cables, the deception was such an empty, aimless, humorless and squalid a thing as to suggest sheer lunacy. It lacked every element of the ingenuity that sometimes palliates, while it does not excuse, the practical joke on the public. It toyed with sentiments sacred to the heart of a nation. It was crass, incredibly stupid, lacking in any redeeming quality.

The most charitable view to take is that its author, having thought too long and steadily on one baffling subject, had suffered a serious mental lesion.

It is doubtful whether any of the so-called great hoaxes perpetrated on public within recorded time ever had a sane, valid cause—whether there has not always been a mental twist back of them. But nothing, in all the lot, ever approached this Kitchener episode in sheer imbecility.

That it will utterly ruin the person or persons responsible for it goes without saying. It is sure to bring its own punishment. "The man who put over the Kitchener hoax" will probably lead about as comfortable an existence hereafter as Hale's "Man Without a Country."

It is not well to be a liar and not well to be a fool. But when one combines the two in the Nth degree he becomes a forlorn and wretched creature.

Stewart's WASHINGTON LETTERS

By Charles F. Stewart Washington, Aug. 17.—To Dr. C. H. Parker there's nothing so funny humorous in the supposedly funny pictures one occasionally sees of a missionary or a castaway sailor about to be eaten up by cannibals, and he says he's prepared to go ball that it isn't a bit amusing—except possibly to the cannibals.

Dr. Parker probably knows more about the South Sea islands than any other white man living. For 31 years he has lived in that part of the world and now, after a short visit in this country, he and his wife are going back to die there, when their time comes.

The doctor is a graduate of the Seventh Day Adventists' College of Medical Evangelists, at Loma Linda, Cal. The College of Medical Evangelists argues like this: A South Sea island cannibal falls sick. The other cannibals, untrained in medicine, don't know what to do for him.

Along comes a good doctor and cures him. The cannibals, presumably, are grateful. At any rate, they have sense enough not to kill and eat their doctor. He's the only one they've got and nobody knows how soon somebody else will need to be cured by him.

Thus the missionary—the doctor turns out to be a missionary—gains time enough to convert his patients.

That's the way Dr. Parker worked it. In his many years in the South Sea islands he had a great many tight squeaks for his life, but the tightest, he says, was three decades and a twelve month ago, when he landed on his first island.

The natives were even more cannibalistic than they are today. They still entertain a great fondness for "long pig," which is cannibal flesh. But most of the natives now have learned that it is simply impossible to eat one's doctor and have him too. But the tribe that captured this missionary didn't realize.

They pounced on the doctor as a dainty morsel, produced a big kettle and began to paw their prisoner over to find out how tough he was and decide on the best way of cooking him. "They kindled a fire under the kettle," relates Dr. Parker, "and were leading me to the sacrificial altar, preparatory to taking my life. "But I opened my medicine kit and began applying healing salves to sores on their bodies. Cannibals lead such a rough life and know so little about sanitation that plenty of things, like infected wounds, boils, scrofula and assorted ailments are numerous among them. "When they learned the virtue in my medicine," adds the doctor, "they changed their minds about eating me. I stayed with them a long time and taught them the Gospel."

IN NEW YORK

New York, Aug. 17.—The "gold brick" salesman has never disappeared from the Manhattan scene. He still does a flourishing business, having merely changed his wares.

His latest stock in trade is the "Russian crown jewels." These have been on sale at various times since the overthrow of the Czar and a great revival recently was staged by a young man known to the police as "Sidewalk Sammy."

The "underworld knows Sammy as 'the O.K.' because of his size. He had a gift story of how the jewels came into his possession, just as the "gold brick" man of yesterday had a smooth and convincing "line." One of his deals, which recently came to light, showed that for the small sum of $1200 he had agreed to give up a dozen of the gems.

Analyses of these and most similar "sidewalk jewelry" showed them to be mere paste worth a dime or so.

Another favorite of the modern gold-bricker is the peddling of "smuggled articles." Sometimes it is "furs smuggled in from Russia" and, again, it is European perfume and, again, modern gold-brick gets affects the appearance of a sailor and pretends to be "carefully watched." Which means that the deal must be quickly and quietly consummated.

The other night a three-card monte game was found in successful operation not ten jumps from Times Square and police broke up an old-fashioned "shell game" flourishing in a vacant lot on 34th Street.

And the street beggars, in spite of all that the "wise guys" have been told heap unbelievable harvests. A ragged and apparently crippled mendicant, picked up by the police a few days ago had $12,000 in currency hidden about his person. Under one arm, in a little bag was $3000 in $100 bills.

The case of the Brooklyn beggar who motors to and from his "work" is now historic but recently a rival popped up. A particularly disreputable looking specimen was picked up on Fifth Avenue by a policeman just as business seemed to be getting good.

"Don't call the patrol!" he begged of the officer. "They have a heart. Gimme a minute, will you? Come around the corner and I'll drive us to the station."

And, sure enough, just around the corner was parked a coupe in which the beggar was sitting. In a section of the floor of the car was found a well tailored suit. The beggar also used the car as a wardrobe room.

A THOUGHT

QUEER QUIRKS OF NATURE

BY ARTHUR N. PACK President, American Nature Assn. There is a large, muscular furred animal, once abundant in our northern wildernesses whom, strange to relate, few but naturalists can correctly name on sight. This is the wolverine, which Dr. Hornaday classes high in his "one hundred per cent table" of intelligent animals. For all his sluggish movement and ungainly appearance, there is no animal which can outwit a human more readily than the wolverine.

Observation of the wolverine by scientists tends to support the theory that there was a time, ages past, when it could run and leap with the agility of its brothers of the marten family. But time has evolved in this creature a strong distaste for hurry, and the desire to obtain by cunning and brute strength what formerly required skill and speed.

Like the bear, the wolverine's food consists of animals and insects, and so great in his appetite, and so sharp is he in stalking his prey, that with the agility of its brothers of the marten family. But time has evolved in this creature a strong distaste for hurry, and the desire to obtain by cunning and brute strength what formerly required skill and speed.

The full grown wolverine is about the size of a fox; but is very thickset and muscular. The coat of both sexes is usually of a deep blackish-brown, with bands of chestnut from the shoulders to the tail and the throat and chest are spotted with yellowish white. The wolverine is so hunted for his rich coat that he is well-nigh being wiped off of the continent. The skins find their way into civilized markets, in spite of the fact

Where Annual Meetings Are Held

Entrance to Camp grounds at Willimantic where the annual sessions of religious workers are being held this week.

BIG CHANGES SEEN AT CAMP GROUNDS

Driveways Improved, Shrubbery Planted; Program for Coming Week.

Local people who have visited the Willimantic campgrounds this summer note that they have been made attractive with new shrubbery. The driveways have been improved, considerable painting has been done and at the entrance is a new gate extending a cordial welcome to all entering the campgrounds and a friendly invitation to come again to those who are leaving.

Already reservations have been made by people from Massachusetts and Rhode Island. The boarding house for meals opened Saturday and people desiring rooms may write or telephone the caretaker, S. L. Geer. Everyone, irrespective of creed is cordially invited to attend and share the program every day they can be present.

Yesterday the Women's Missionary societies held their field day. Dr. Charles Barto of New Haven spoke for the home and Miss Florence Nichol of India, the foreign field. The State W. C. T. U. medical contest was to be held this afternoon in the tabernacle.

Tomorrow afternoon Dr. R. E. Gornall of Michigan will speak on world service and Bishop W. P. Anderson will preach in the evening.

Interdenominational day Friday afternoon and evening is expected to bring large numbers of other communions to the campgrounds, and hundreds of men are expected

Saturday afternoon, August 21 which is field day for the Norwich district men and their friends. Dr. Gornall of Michigan will give the address to which the ladies are invited. Afterward a program of tennis, baseball, volley ball and other sports will be conducted by the recreation committee and awards made the winners. In the evening Signor Mario Capelli, the great tenor just back from a tour of Europe will sing and Dr. Philip L. Frick will give his popular address on "Nightingale Island."

Campmeeting Sunday, August 22 will open with a feast of song and fellowship led by Rev. F. G. Baker. Dr. Frick will preach in the morning at 10:30. Dr. G. H. Spencer of Boston will preach in the afternoon at two o'clock and Dr. Rees at 7:30 P. M. Signor Capelli will sing at all services.

WAPPING

Miss Eva Heritage, daughter of Thomas J. Heritage of Wapping who has been confined at the Norwich hospital for the past two weeks, was able to spend the weekend with her relatives here.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur C. Hills and Marion Otis motored to Southwick, Mass. last Sunday returning by the way of Granby, East Granby and calling at the old New Gate Prison.

Harry P. Files from Boston, Mass. spent the week-end with his family here.

Judson Files who has been suffering for the past week with ear trouble went to an ear specialist at Hartford on Monday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. James Sullivan left Monday by auto for a week's vacation to Myrtle Beach.

Mrs. Lawrence Arnold and daughter Marjorie, who have been spending a few days with her mother, Mrs. H. P. Files, returned to her home in Broad Brook last Sunday.

TALCOTTVILLE

Mrs. Ruby LaDott of New Haven was the week-end guest of her sister, Mrs. John Frazier.

Arthur Gardner, a former resident of this place, has resigned his position at Max Pollack's silk mill at Groton and secured another with the Lydall & Foulds paper mill at Manchester. Mr. Gardner expects to move his family to Manchester shortly.

Mr. and Mrs. John Prentice and family were the week-end guests of relatives at Stamford, Conn.

Mrs. Olin Beebe and Miss Caroline Beebe are spending a week's vacation at the Willimantic Camp Grounds.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold P. Bennett are spending a week at the home of Mrs. Bennett's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Olin Beebe.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Smith of North Adams, Mass., were week-end guests of Mrs. Smith's sister, Mrs. J. Edmund Bradley.

There were forty-three children in the Primary Department of the Sunday School on Sunday morning. The pulpit for morning worship was occupied by Rev. H. A. Coolidge of Union.

Mrs. John Kendlish of Stamford is visiting her sister, Mrs. John Prentice.

Miss Margaret Waterman of Manchester is visiting at the home of Miss Dorothy Wood.

The Golden Rule club will hold their regular meeting in the church parlors on Friday evening at 7.30 p. m. The hostesses for the evening will be Mrs. Albert Beebe and Miss Florence Pinney.

Sour Stomach

"Phillips Milk of Magnesia"
Better than Soda

Instead of soda hereafter take a little "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" in water any time for indigestion or sour, acid, gassy stomach, and relief will come instantly.

For fifty years genuine "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" has been prescribed by physicians because it overcomes three times as much acid in the stomach as a saturated solution of bicarbonate of soda, leaving the stomach sweet and free from all gases. It neutralizes acid fermentations in the bowels and gently urges the souring waste from the system without purging. Besides, it is more pleasant to take than soda. Insist upon "Phillips." Twenty-five cent and fifty cent bottles, any drugstore. "Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. Registered Trade Mark of The Charles H. Phillips Chemical Co. and its predecessor Charles H. Phillips since 1875.—Ad.

Here are the "LUCKY 79" winners of the Socony Motor Oil contest

AFTER due deliberation of the contest letters, the Standard Oil Company of New York takes great pleasure in publishing the names of the winners. The "Lucky 79" who received the $2,500 are to be most heartily congratulated. They worked hard for their prizes.

And those thousands of other friends and customers who gave voice to the praises of Socony Motor Oil, as well as many good suggestions, are to be greatly commended. The task of judging was indeed difficult. The winners are:

POE'S STORIES: The Masque of the Red Death (1)

The "Red Death," a fatal and hideous pestilence, had swept the country. Blood was its seal. There were sudden pains and dizziness, followed by bleeding at the pores. Then came death. Scarlet stains upon the face and body marked the victim and shut him out from sympathy of his fellows.

But the Prince Prospero remained happy, one of the few in the land who remained undaunted by the frightful peril.

The prince's dominions half depopulated, he called in a thousand light-hearted friends from among the knights and dames of his court.

With this company he retired to the seclusion of one of his castle-abbey. It was a magnificent structure, surrounded by a wall, with gates of iron. The knights welded the bolts of the gates and bid defiance to contagion, letting the rest of the world take care of itself. They prepared to enjoy life. (Continued)

THEY NEVER KNEW TOM SIMS

HERE'S WHAT Little Nell is alone in the great city. The faces in the passing throngs hold no smiles for Little Nell. Theatrical managers kick her out the door so she lands on her ear.
 A dark guy in a drooping mustache picks her up and carries her to his apartment. She spits tobacco juice in his eye and escapes.
 But it doesn't matter. That has nothing to do with this great novel you are about to read.
JIMSON WEED gets married by PEARL HANDLE. Being fairly good friends they go on their honeymoon together. PEARL'S FATHER has the ambition to kill JIMP.
JIMP loses his money. He and PEARL are working in a hotel near Mammoth Cave to pay their hotel bill.
DETECTIVE GUMSHOE loves PEARL. His wife, MRS. GUMSHOE, loves JIMP. The father finds his best teeth in a patch eating watermelons. It's all mixed up. But you get the general idea.
PLEASE GO ON CHAPTER XIV
GAIN, the threads of this thrilling yarn must be collected. As the preceding chapter closed, Gum was in the kitchen making love to Pearl. Mrs. Gum was in the dining room making love to Jimp. Mr. Handle had just found his false teeth eating watermelons.
 The author was sparring for time. He was waiting for Mr. Handle to arrive by motor and end the chapter with another shooting. But Mr. Handle failed him. He arrived shortly after the chapter ended.
 Of course, he couldn't shoot Jimp then. Nor can he shoot him now. He can't shoot Jimp until the end of this chapter. That may not be right, but it's good technique.
 "Won't you see with me?" continued Mrs. Gum. Jimp was crouched at the top of his window washer's ladder.
 "Shucks, naw!" blushed he. "I got a good wife." He was true to his own Pearl.
 Mrs. Gum made a grab for the true husband. They were hard to find, and she didn't intend letting this one escape so easily. She tossed their hats into the air and Jimp leaped too far backward in his fright, and fell from the ladder.
 landing upon his head with which he had been thinking.
 Pearl and Detective Gum dashed in from the kitchen. Jimp was stretched out upon the floor, unconscious. Mrs. Gum was bending over him, the old she-devil.
 "You did this," screamed Pearl, taking out after Mrs. Gum. The two raced down the street and into the woods.
 Here Mrs. Gum's training as a detective stood her in good stead. She was of the clinging vine type, so she climbed a tree. Pearl passed her by, thinking she was poison ivy.
 Many clinging vines are poison ivy. Hours later, when Pearl gave up the search and returned to the hotel, she found Mrs. Gum sitting on a branch of the tree, looking down at her. "By means of ultra-violet electric (in Germany will receive coats of rays, bathers in a new pool planned in, although they bathe at night).

Gum was in the kitchen making love to Pearl.

commotion was comming all about the place.
 Great Lakes region in general. A fossil here and an ossified foot there all have told their secrets until Niagara Falls past life is as public as that of a man running for office.
 Stratrum by stratrum, the rocky formations in the cliffs have gabbed like neighbors over a back fence.
 Quite a spell ago, as the story goes, there was a big gang of ice sitting up around the north pole. This was millions and millions of years ago—back when the north pole was a congested zone with ex-ploerers arriving by every airplane.
 Well, this huge mass of ice sat around the north pole for a few million years, and then it got restless. Perhaps it just naturally had a hankering to go south for the winter. Perhaps it got some literature from Florida. Or, maybe the pole cats became troublesome.
 Anyway, this ice started south. It didn't just hop up and rush away in the heat of the day. It moved by easy stages. One year it would move a foot, and then it would sit back down and rest a few years. There wasn't any hurry.
 Then, too, any speedy progress was barred by mountain ranges and other bumps. When it met one of these mountain ranges, the glacier, which is what it was, would stop and argue the question.
 "Move," said the glacier. "Move on."
 "I won't," said the mountain. "I been sitting here nigh onto ten million years, and I don't intend to move."
 "What shall I do now?" says Eric to herself. The rest of the lake was coming on behind. She had to decide quickly. So she jumped. Who can blame her?
 Anyway, that's how Niagara Falls was formed. And until this day Lake Erie continues coming down the Niagara River and leaping over Niagara Falls.
 Jimp and Pearl stood upon the brink of the falls and watched the great rush of water.
 "Can't they turn it off?" asked the lovely bride.
 "I don't think so," said Jimp. Turning to their guide who stood nearby, he said, "They can't turn it off, can they?"
 "No," said the guide. "It can't be turned off. Don't get too close. Bad place to fall into."
 "Awfully bad place," said Jimp. "Only one man has gone over and come out alive. He went over in a barrel."
 "I heard about that," said Jimp.
 "Yes," said the guide, "and here recently he slipped upon a banana peel and was killed."
 "Too bad," said Jimp. "Bet you a million dollars I can go over the falls and come out without a scratch."
 "That's a bet," said the guide, pulling a million dollars out of his pocket. He had received a great many tips that day.
 Jimp goes over Niagara Falls tomorrow. Will he make it? You'll just have to wait and see. Perhaps he does. Perhaps he doesn't. But he is determined to make a try. Pearl can't stop him. Jimp's life and his last million dollars are at stake.

Connley Has Umpired For Nearly Thirty Years

(BY BILLY EVANS)

Tommy Connolly, dean of the American League staff of umpires, has been calling balls and strikes for well nigh 30 years. He says he is good for 10 years more.

Connolly came to the American League in 1901, one year after President Johnson had launched the organization. He has been with it ever since and is now rounding out his 25th year of service.

When a Tommy Connolly walks on the ball field he wears a most serious expression. It is really only a mask of what is underneath, for Connolly has a keen sense of humor and often smiles, all reports to the contrary.

Since joining the American League staff, Connolly has seen hundreds of players come and go. As a matter of fact there isn't an active player still in service who was a member of the organization when Tommy made his debut.

Villain Doesn't Laugh A propos of the belief that Connolly never smiles is an interesting yarn. I happened to listen in on the dialogue.

Now in baseball the umpire is generally regarded as a very necessary evil. He really is never missed until he fails to show up, making it imperative that the players handle the game.

There is no applause for the umpire no matter how perfectly he may do his work. The crowd tolerates him when his rulings meet with approval, but groans and jeers when his decisions fail to please.

Recently while walking off the field with Connolly after a doubleheader at Boston, a wise-cracking fan, who apparently didn't like the serious expression that Connolly wore throughout the two games, remarked:

"Don't you ever smile, Connolly?" Whereupon, Connolly looking the fan squarely in the eye and wearing an even more severe expression, replied:

"Did you ever see the villain in the play do any laughing?" The crowd roared and it's no breach of confidence to say that Connolly chuckled at the discomfiture of the fan over the retort courteous; not, however, until we got under the stand away from the view of the crowd.

Less Inside Ball Connolly, who has seen baseball from every angle from the days of the Baltimore Orioles' marvel team to the present time, doesn't think there is as much inside baseball played today as there was 15 or 20 years back.

He attributes the falling off of the so-called inside stuff to the lively ball, the popular demand for more batting, a decline in pitching and the custom of every batter taking a healthy swing.

Connolly's opinion is that better pitching made for tight baseball. In close score games a one or two-run margin means considerable. To maintain such a lead, clubs would resort to all forms of strategy in the old days.

Working for one run calls for smart stuff, while getting them in clusters largely results from brute force.

Favors Uniform Parks Connolly doesn't favor the suggestion that the pitching distance be shortened in an effort to increase the effectiveness of the twirlers.

His old pal, Hank O'Day, dean of the National League staff and once a great pitcher, leans to that view point. Cutting the distance five feet in Hank's opinion would throw the handicap on the batsman.

One thing Connolly would like to see before he retires from active service, is uniform ball parks. In other words the outfield distance would be the same everywhere, with ample room for the outfielders to cover plenty of ground.

There is nothing more thrilling than a sensational catch in the outfield, yet at many parks such plays are few and far between because of the greatly curtailed outfield space.

FIVE WOMEN SHARE IN TENNIS PROBABILITIES New York, Aug. 17.—With the first round nearly completed for the thirty-nine annual women's national singles championship tournament at Forest Hills, the title appears to lie between Mrs. Molla Mallory and either Miss Elizabeth Ryan, Miss Mary K. Browne, Miss Eleanor Goss or Mrs. Alfred H. Chapin, Jr. All these favorites won their opening matches in straight sets, except Miss Ryan who drew a bye. The entire second round will be played this afternoon.

Miss Helen Wills, the present champion, is enroute to California today with her mother.

THINK CAREY MAY STAY ALONE WITH PIRATES Pittsburgh, Pa., Aug. 17.—The belief that Max Carey, deposed captain, may remain with the Pittsburgh Pirates, was expressed on all sides here today prior to the meeting of John A. Regan, president of the National League, with Pirate officials and the three players discharged recently for alleged insubordination.

In Carey's fourteen years in organized baseball, no charge of any kind has been preferred against him before the attempt of the three players to keep Fred Clarke, assistant manager, off the Pirates bench.

COURTS TO ARGUE DEMPSEY-TUNNEY

Rickard Won't Take Legal Action, But Expects Commission Will

(BY DAVIS J. WALSH)

New York, Aug. 17.—Tex Rickard and that two to one majority in the State Athletic Commission will make a final and ultimate effort to force the Dempsey-Tunney match—seemingly an ample helping of flinty castor oil—well down the protesting gullet of the license committee today and, failing this, will throw up their hands, throw down their arms and surrender to the will of the great minority of two. They may have the law on the pair of them before night-fall.

At least, Rickard hinted darkly of court proceedings this morning, as he discussed more in sorrow than in anger, the decision of the committee last night, whereby Jack Dempsey definitely was denied a license until such time as he signifies his willingness to accept Harry Wills—and none other—as a professional equal.

Rickard will not take legal steps himself. He took pains to make that point clear. The State Athletic commission, it was insinuated, would be the aggressor, if any.

Action Today "The commission will take some action at its meeting today," the promoter said. "I probably will attend the meeting but, as far as I am concerned, the match will not leave New York; neither will I take further steps to keep it here. All I can say at this time is that the commission probably will vote to take the license committee into court to show cause why Dempsey should not be granted a license."

In brief, Rickard is maintaining a you-got-me-into-this—now-get-me-out attitude toward the commission, and if I know the man, he is not popping off without definite assurances from Commissioner George E. Brower, who invited the Dempsey-Tunney engagement on here from Chicago. If further action is taken today, Brower will take it.

A lawyer himself, he has the opinion of State Attorney Ottinger to sustain him in his idea that the license committee was not within its legal rights in denying a license to a man who already had been given official abolition by the governing body of boxing in this state.

However, time and not the rights of free-born Americans happens to be the big factor at this moment.

With the scheduled date of the fight less than a month away, it was obvious that, if nothing happened to alter the situation today, or at least within the current week, the enterprise will gently but firmly breathe its last.

Rickard might postpone the inevitable by setting his clock back to September 23 but if he had to wait for action until the next committee meeting on August 23, he might just as well take a short, snappy dive into the East River, for he will be all wet, anyhow. Besides, the Messrs. Phelan and Wear made it quite clear last night that no mere importunity, be it ever so eloquent, can soften them on this point.

Reversals They were so vehement, in fact, that Phelan forgot that, while he was insisting upon Wills' name on the contract, he had less than a week before declared that any name would do, mine, yours or Joe Windmills'. And while they were reversing themselves on this point, they went right ahead reading from the minutes of the commission meetings in tacit complaint that that body had gone into reverse on the subject of Harry Wills.

There are three points distinctly humorous about the entire proposition. The first is that the commission has a perfect right to reverse itself, provided a majority vote is taken. The second is that Harry Wills, over whose interests all these men have come to war, couldn't meet Dempsey in New York under any circumstances. The third is that all of them know it.

C. B. A. NINE PLAYS ROCKVILLE TOMORROW

Tomorrow evening Cheney Brothers' baseball nine will travel to Rockville where it will oppose the J. J. Regan Manufacturing Company outfit at the Fair Grounds. This will be the third meeting this season between the two clubs. Manchester won the first 11 to 1 and then played a 6 to 6 tie in Rockville a few weeks ago.

Guido Giorgetti will do mound duty for the silk workers and "Mike" Zwick will be on the receiving end.

Sunday afternoon Cheney Brothers will play a return game in Taftville.

The finest thing about having a long summer is it can't be winter until summer is over.

BROWNS-RED SOX SPLIT IN BOSTON

Brother Against Brother Hack Wilson Gets 2 Homers; Bottomley Singles With Bases Loaded.

BROWNS 6-1, RED SOX 7-1

Boston, Aug. 17.—After Van Gilder of the Browns had held the Red Sox to four hits, beating them six to one, Slim Harris squelched St. Louis seven to one in a seven inning affair. A case of fratricide marked the second game when Alex Gaston, Red Sox catcher, came to bat with the bases full and jarred his brother, Milton, pitching for the Browns, with a triple that sewed up the game.

SPORT CHATTER

Weather conditions permitting, the Shamrocks will line up against the fast Colored Stars of Hartford tonight at the Community ball grounds. The darkies from over the river have a really classy aggregation. They have been making quite a noise recently in semi-pro circles, and should give the Shamrocks all they can do to trim them. It has not been announced who will pitch for the Shamrocks, but Dan Smith may get the assignment. He started against the Wicos of Springfield Sunday, but it wasn't his day.

A rather busy week faces the Shamrocks. Tonight they face the Hartford Colored Stars; tomorrow, the Aetna Fire Insurance team at the Community grounds; Friday they play the All Rockvilles in the Windy City; Saturday they will again face the fast Wicos of Springfield; and Sunday, the Groton team at Hickey's Grove.

Horseshoe pitching is becoming quite a popular sport with Manchester sport lovers. "Punk" Lamprecht and "Bill" Leggett have copped most of the honors thus far. But they had best look to their laurels. There are several other local fellows who are good at tossing the horseshoe who are determined to stop Lamprecht and Leggett.

CARDINALS WIN ON HARD HITTING

Hack Wilson Gets 2 Homers; Bottomley Singles With Bases Loaded.

CARDS 5, CUBS 4

St. Louis, Aug. 17.—Although his rival Hack Wilson, took the lead in the race for home run honors in the National League by clouting his seventeenth and eighteenth homers, Sunny Jim Bottomley delivered a single with the bases loaded in the ninth which enabled the Cardinals to down the Cubs, five to four. The Red Birds now trail the Pirates by only a game and a half.

DEMPSEY CONFIDENT HELL WHIP TUNNEY

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Aug. 17.—Jack Dempsey, in training at Tommy Luther's White Sulphur Springs camp here is confident of the outcome of his projected battle with Gene Tunney.

"I'm sure the license will be granted and that we will fight in this state," he said today, "just as sure as I am that I will still be champion when the fight is over. Of course, Tunney is a hard nut to crack, but I am confident I can whip him."

Dempsey has a hard program which he is following every day. Starting with five to eight miles of road work with his sparring partners in the morning, he follows with a light breakfast and a short rest period after which he rows a heavy boat five miles on the lake. A light lunch and another rest period, brings him to his daily workout in the ring. Punching the bag, skipping rope and shadow boxing is augmented with ten rounds of boxing with his various partners. This program is followed in all kinds of weather.

The champion is particularly fortunate in the supply of sparring partners who are with him here. Besides Ray Thompson, the boy who has twice fought Tunney and knows the challenger's style and punching system upon which Tunney relies for his knockouts, there is big Bill Tate, the giant Negro conqueror of Harry Wills.

The Jamaica Kid, colored light heavyweight, is expected here some time this week and will be another factor in the work of getting Dempsey ready for Tunney.

Dempsey, although carrying some excess weight, is confident of being down to around 198 for the bout. Besides his sparring partners and Gene Normie, his business manager, his wife, Estelle Taylor Dempsey, is here with him.

Crack Hartford Baseball Nine Should Attract Big Gathering

Visitors Rank High and Have Splendid Record; "Canonball" Strong Likely Choice for Mound Duty; Prentice for Manchester.

If big Joe Prentice is in his best form tonight, the Shamrocks ought to make things interesting for the invading Colored Stars of Hartford in the tilt scheduled for the Community grounds. For Prentice is no slouch when it comes to the hurling art. On the contrary, he is quite a puzzle when in true form. He has speed galore and better yet, he has a fine change of pace into which he injects his fine assortment of curves. Tonight it will be just a case of trying to outwit the heady colored boys. For they have the reputation of being a group of heavy hitters—and, what's more, they like a fast ball. Therefore tonight will show whether Prentice can keep sufficient control of his speed to silence the bats of the Colored Stars.

The Hartford team has won something like 22 out of 26 games this season so it is easy to understand that the Shamrocks are taking no setup. Tonight will not be the first time the Negroes have played before a Manchester audience and it might be said right here that the colored boys have never yet failed to deliver the goods. When it comes to ball tossing, they are almost in a class by themselves. And in funmaking, they stand head and heels above all the other teams in the state. Their comic performances and queer tactics always seem heavily with the fans.

Burke, of Rockville will be at shortstop for the Shamrocks tonight. The Windy City man is well known in local baseball circles and is a player of no little ability. He should prove a valuable addition to the Shamrocks' innerworks and should help do away with some of the errors which have been made. He is also a good hitter.

NEIGHBORS' WIVES

ERNEST LYNN, author of THE YELLOW STUB

BEGIN HERE TODAY

JOHN and FAY MILBURN buy a home when their baby girl is born and the advertising agency in which John is partner and copy writer lands a new contract. Among their acquaintances are—

NOEL and VERA BOYD, whose marriage is strictly "modern."

FAT and MARIAN FORBES, who have three children and whose domestic life is unhappy because of Pat's roving tendencies. Previous chapters told how:

John was fascinated on meeting NELL ORME, of whom Forbes hints that she is having trouble with her husband.

Fay took JUDITH, the baby, to Washington to visit her parents, and during her absence John "ran around" a good deal, mostly with Pat Forbes. When Fay returned gossip had retailed some of his actions and sharp quarrels followed, one of which drove him "out on a tear." Fay, learning he had been out with other women, threatened to leave him if it was repeated.

John finds that people are talking about him, and NAT GRAHAM, his partner, charges his actions are damaging the firm's reputation. John later, by accident, meets Nell Orme at the boys'. He resolves not to see her again, realizing that she is carrying him off his feet, but does he, and the day comes when he finally takes her in his arms.

Fay, learning of it, goes through with her threat. She leaves him, taking Judith with her. John finds that his world has tumbled about his ears. He closes up the house and takes an apartment. Later he tries to negotiate a personal loan at his bank, gets in an argument with HENRY BLODGETT, and when the other makes a reference to his wife leaving him, John slaps him. Later that day he is served with a warrant for assault and battery.

It's just as well you didn't mark him up. As it is I think we've got him licked. I know we have. I'll give him the darndest hiding in court that you ever saw anybody get."

"Good!" John set his mouth grimly.

"You say," Paul went on, "that

"Absolutely necessary," Blodgett stated loudly.

"And in telling the defendant that his character was not all that it should be you were merely giving him very frankly your reason, as a banker, why you could not consider his application?"

Blodgett colored. "I hardly see the parallel," he said with an attempt at cold dignity.

"I want you to answer the question."

"I might."

"You might. Then you admit that in his case you would be breaking a rule and extending credit to a man with a bad character. Is that true?"

"Not necessarily," Blodgett said in exasperation.

Davidson laughed sarcastically. He proceeded then to pin Blodgett down to an instance of the "midnight reverse" he had accused John of holding him in his house, and Blodgett, sweating, could not deliver.

"Never mind," Davidson reminded him once. "You've plenty of time. You're responsible for halting the defendant in court. You've surely got time to see it through."

"I have business to transact," Blodgett told him.

"Well, it can wait. You've said some pretty grave things about my client in open court. For one thing, you made the statement that his wife had left him, implying that she was never coming back. As a matter of fact, you thought that, didn't you? You were only guessing, weren't you?"

"I'm not so thick that I can't see beneath the surface of things," remarked Blodgett. "I know they quarreled."

"Did you ever quarrel with your own wife?"

"Of course not." And at this statement a loud guffaw rang through the little courtroom.

"Well, I congratulate your wife," said Davidson, and another laugh addressed the court. "I think you address this man that you can't substantiate. It seems to me he has pretty good grounds to bring suit against you for defamation of character. Your honor," he went on, addressing the court, "I think you will agree that I have established beyond a doubt that this man entertained a personal prejudice against the defendant, that he is malicious and careless in the way he talks about him."

"Your honor, no man is safe these days when wolves of the type of this man sitting here go around circulating evil and malicious reports about other people's character. Mr. Milburn, defend this man with assault and battery, merely because he slapped the face of a man who had grossly insulted him. I maintain that is why a man is equipped with natural weapons, to defend himself against attacks on his person and on his name. The defendant had sufficient provocation to knock his block off, if the court will forgive the slang, and I think Mr. Milburn exercised admirable restraint in merely slapping his face."

"The defendant had sufficient provocation to knock his block off, if the court will forgive the slang."

you gave him no cause whatsoever to make those remarks?"

"None whatever—unless asking for a loan could be construed as cause."

"Hardly. Oh, the fellow hasn't much of a leg to stand on. He's the sort of person, however, who thinks he's entitled to most of the privileges in this world. Therefore he's trying to order the law around."

"He should have lived in the days of Cotton Mather and witch-burnings," John remarked. "What a lovely figure he would have made at the head of an Inquisition!"

"A sort of super-reformer, eh?"

"Exactly. And custodian of the neighborhood's morals."

Davidson tried unsuccessfully to get the charge against John nolleed, but Blodgett seemed to be a person of influence and the police prosecutor threw up his hands in disgust. "The most vindictive bird I ever saw in my life!" he exclaimed to Paul.

"We'll have to go through with it, I'm afraid," he said. "I suppose I'll have to make it make it, I guess." He smiled ruefully.

"I tried to show him that if Milburn had any provocation at all he'd be laughed out of court—but no use. Can, but I know you're going to give me a licking."

A rather unusual way for a prosecutor to talk, John thought, when Paul told him. "Not at all," Davidson assured him. "He doesn't like to look good for him when he's beaten."

The trial—if it could actually be dignified by that title—was little more than a joke. The prosecutor did the best he could, but his heart was not in his work.

The whole case, as Davidson pointed out, hinged on what was to be considered legitimate provocation to strike another man. The prosecutor staunchly maintained that the plaintiff had been struck in the face as he came to the office chair—albeit because the defendant had been turned down on his application for a loan. Unprovoked assault, he termed it.

With Blodgett in the witness chair, he drew out the details of John's visit.

"And it is necessary, isn't it, Mr. Blodgett," the prosecutor asked, "that good character be pretty definitely established if a man wants to negotiate a personal loan?"

"Exactly. That was the only reason," put in Davidson.

"Object," he proceeded. The judge, prematurely old-looking young man, with shell rim glasses and bald head, could hardly repress the smile that occasionally rose to his lips.

But Davidson, when he got hold of Blodgett, figuratively tore the man from limb to limb.

"Did you tell the defendant," he asked, "that his character was bad?"

"I told him it was not all that it should be."

"That's equivalent, isn't it, to saying it was bad?"

"I suppose so."

"And had anyone else ever told you that he had a bad character?"

"It was hardly necessary to be told. I can observe things for myself."

"Oh! You set yourself up as judge and jury, do you? You know, of course, the difference between character and reputation?"

"I don't see the two amounted to pretty much the same thing."

"Not at all," said Davidson, shaking a finger at him. "Character is what is in a man; reputation is what he is known by. A banker, for instance, can have the reputation of being a miser and skintight and still not have the traits in his character."

"I was satisfied," Blodgett stated grimly, "that his character was not substantial enough to warrant our extending him any considerable credit."

"And where was his character bad? What do you know about this defendant that makes him any worse than you are?"

"He drinks," said Blodgett, "and it is against the law to drink."

"I see. Did you ever see him take a drink?"

"No, but I've seen him come home in an intoxicated condition."

"How many times?"

"Well, just once, that I remember. He was with another man. It was about 2 o'clock in the morning, and he made a loud speech on his front lawn."

The judge had to ruf for order.

"And in your opinion that was proof conclusive that he was intoxicated? A man doesn't make speeches on his front lawn unless he is drunk?"

"Milburn never denied it," Blodgett said.

"Did you ever ask him?" Paul went on.

"No."

"I see. Now then, let me ask you another question. Suppose the presdent of some big business in town here came to you and asked for a loan. You knew that his credit was good. Would you refuse him a loan if you knew that he took a drink occasionally in defiance of the prohibition law?"

Blodgett colored. "I hardly see the parallel," he said with an attempt at cold dignity.

"I want you to answer the question."

"I might."

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
(The names and situations in this story are fictitious.)

CHAPTER XLVIII

"YOU mean," John, with a blank look, asked the officer, "you mean I'm arrested?"

"That's right. This fellow Henry Blodgett swore out a warrant. Says you attacked him without provocation in his office."

John laughed mirthlessly. "Well, this is good. Come here, Briggs."

The little artist, glad of a word from this moody employer of his, hastened over. "I'm under arrest, Briggs, for slapping a man in the face who insulted me. Can you beat it?" He laughed again.

Briggs said seriously, "You'd better get hold of a lawyer. It might mean trouble for you."

"Where's Graham?" John asked.

Briggs told him Graham had gone out. "You'd better not say anything to him about this. You know how he is."

John seemed to be considering it. "Guess you're right," he said finally. "Still, I thought it would be quite a treat for Nat. Will you try to get Paul Davidson on the phone?"

"Right," Briggs sprang into action.

Paul was over within half an hour. He had gone to police court, it seemed, to attend to a few of the preliminaries.

"Now what's the trouble?" He smiled on John in a friendly way.

John told him. "I'm only sorry," he added, "I didn't break his face for him. The dirty—"

"Hold on, now, hold on," Paul cautioned him. "Don't worry, John."

"You might. Then you admit that in his case you would be breaking a rule and extending credit to a man with a bad character. Is that true?"

"Not necessarily," Blodgett said in exasperation.

Davidson laughed sarcastically. He proceeded then to pin Blodgett down to an instance of the "midnight reverse" he had accused John of holding him in his house, and Blodgett, sweating, could not deliver.

"Never mind," Davidson reminded him once. "You've plenty of time. You're responsible for halting the defendant in court. You've surely got time to see it through."

"I have business to transact," Blodgett told him.

"Well, it can wait. You've said some pretty grave things about my client in open court. For one thing, you made the statement that his wife had left him, implying that she was never coming back. As a matter of fact, you thought that, didn't you? You were only guessing, weren't you?"

"I'm not so thick that I can't see beneath the surface of things," remarked Blodgett. "I know they quarreled."

"Did you ever quarrel with your own wife?"

"Of course not." And at this statement a loud guffaw rang through the little courtroom.

"Well, I congratulate your wife," said Davidson, and another laugh addressed the court. "I think you address this man that you can't substantiate. It seems to me he has pretty good grounds to bring suit against you for defamation of character. Your honor," he went on, addressing the court, "I think you will agree that I have established beyond a doubt that this man entertained a personal prejudice against the defendant, that he is malicious and careless in the way he talks about him."

"Your honor, no man is safe these days when wolves of the type of this man sitting here go around circulating evil and malicious reports about other people's character. Mr. Milburn, defend this man with assault and battery, merely because he slapped the face of a man who had grossly insulted him. I maintain that is why a man is equipped with natural weapons, to defend himself against attacks on his person and on his name. The defendant had sufficient provocation to knock his block off, if the court will forgive the slang, and I think Mr. Milburn exercised admirable restraint in merely slapping his face."

of country but love of community? I have read with interest the history of the Murray family in a recent magazine. They live in a Pennsylvania town. There are twenty-four in all, counting sons, daughters, and in-laws. They are a unit.

The children have been educated and come back; all have had a hand in a very successful merchandizing business. It is unique and unusual to read of such a family. There may be a precious item to preserve here.

Mrs. Murray says she does her disciplining before her children are a year old. After that they are companions.

The home is their club. From the time they are able to walk the time they are able to talk, they have a common bond!

COAT DRESSES

Coat dresses of twill are scheduled for fall. These are slightly bloused in the back, but have a straight front line, broken only by a belt or girle. The facings are of soft-colored chiffons and crepe de chine.

LOUNGING ROBES

Long lounging robes of heavy black satin have vivid tufted borders of orange or peacock blue or emerald. These heavy borders give a graceful swing to the hem. Sleeves are long and flowing.

SHADED COSTUMES

Two or three shades of the same color are an interesting feature of smart French street frocks. Browns and beiges are especially lovely in combination with burnt orange or rust.

THE BEAUTY DOCTOR

CONDITION—Badly shaped fingernails.

DIAGNOSIS—This is indicative of plain neglect. Either you bite your nails, a practice which you should break by the exercise of your will power, or you are careless about manicuring them.

TREATMENT—Do not cut your nails with a scissors. Instead, file them into a rounded point. Soak the fingertips in soapy water and rub a little vaseline or cuticle cream at the base of each nail. Then with your orange stick, press back the cuticle, but do not dig into the flesh. If you keep it pressed back, you will not find it necessary to cut the cuticle, which you are apt to do ineffectually. With a polishing cream or powder on your buff, give them a polish. Do not train your nails to an exaggerated point, or stain them a brilliant vermilion, if you wish to be considered a person of fastidious taste.

been calling for you for the last hour."

"Come on Judy," said Jerry, as Joan came away from the phone. "You two girls, both of you, must get a good night's rest, for it looks to me as though you are going to have a long, hard day tomorrow."

Sometimes I think it is most fortunate that we poor mortals cannot see ahead of us twenty-four hours.

Although Jerry wanted to talk with me and would have lingered even after he had stopped the car at the curb in front of Mamie's house for a little while, I told him that I was too tired to be decent to anyone, which was the truth. After I left Joan and I knew the day was over I was so tired I didn't want to open my mouth or croak a finger.

Fortunately, both Mamie and her mother were out as I dragged myself up the stairs, and pulling off my clothes dropped into bed.

Mamie tapped on my door when she came, and as I did not answer I knew that she thought I was asleep. But I lay awake for a long time wondering what my next adventure would be.

The moonlight made a great patch of silver across the floor, just in front of my bed. It seemed to make a path out of the window clear up to the sky.

Was it a good omen, I wonder? Should I go with Joan to Europe, I asked myself? Or should I remain at home and marry Jerry? I was trying to answer those questions when I evidently fell asleep from pure fatigue. For the first thing I knew was a feeling of surprise that when the moonlight had made a silver path there was now a flood of golden sunshine.

I lay quite still. I could not gather my thoughts together. My consciousness seemed to waver, but at last came a knocking on my door, or at least I became more fully awake, for I also distinguished a bell ringing in the hall and Mamie's voice calling:

"Wake up, Judy. I know that telephone is for you. Someone has

A WOMAN'S DAY ABROAD

By ALLENE SUMNER.

Rome Italy. — A great cataclysmic tragedy has occurred unto the author, gentle reader, here in the city where slumber the togaed gents of old!

All because I am not mistress of many tongues. None less than what once was me, but now was but half me. The other half was a bare and naked ostrich egg; in other words, my own scalp as bare of any hair-adorment as a toadstool is bare of lace ruffles.

I howled. I wailed. I moaned and shrieked. It seems that the gracious porter had ordered that I be clipped, and clipped I was.

When Caesar gazed upon the Rubicon he could either go on or go back. So now, I could either remain half-shaven or when I shaved I could shave the latter. I had been taught in my childhood "when a task is once begun, never leave it till it's done." I decided that the spectacle of one neat bald ostrich egg would shock the populace less than a hybrid object half-egg and half-nanny goat.

I purchased, to the accompaniment of my sobs, two clusters of red-gold curls, having always yearned for red hair, but never hitherto owning a shaven pate on which to hang it. The skillful hair dresser created some effective little hooks of courtplaster which he attached neatly to my ear tops, to which the curls were pinned, whence they coyly wave in the breeze.

I wear my hat indoors and out. I explain that I am afraid I will be stricken by the sun's hot rays if I take it off.

They say that my tresses will soon grow out. But I have doubts. If the artist will draw a picture of a nice purple egg plant, you will see exactly how I look. The purple represents sunburn, and the untrimmed egg plant is the rest of me.

What culture a girl does get with travel!

One enters a shop, points at the object desired, and the clerk writes down the price. Thank goodness for the near-universal use of the arabic numeral.

Some few mishaps will happen. One, for instance, may get winners when pointing to that on the menu card which looks like chicken. But then a hot dog by any other name will taste as good.

Do not scorn the little books on sale at most any book store which tell you how to ask for what you want and how to set it in any language! And don't take the pronunciation marks too seriously! All Europe knows these little books as a mother knows her erring child!

The little Rollo abroad merely points to that line in French of Italian or Esperanto or Yiddish which says "from what end, please, does the train go?" and the same-in-every-tongue beckoning hand answers!

And the words one picks up in a week? We laugh, now, at those rank amateurs who must use the books, and we ask prices and pay our bills in native tongue like old birds!

VELVETEEN JACKETS

Quaker Oats

"stands by" you through the morning

That's why millions start their days in this way

To feel right through the morning, you must have well-baked, complete food at breakfast. At most other meals—that is, at luncheon and at dinner—you usually get that kind of food.

But at breakfast the great dietary mistake is most often made—a hurried meal, often badly chosen.

Thus Quaker Oats, containing 16% protein, food's great tissue builder, 58% carbohydrate, its great energy element, plus all-important vitamins and the "bulk" that makes laxatives seldom needed, is the dietetic urge of the world today.

It is food that "stands by" you through the morning. Food that should start every breakfast in your home.

Don't deny yourself the natural stimulation this rich food offers.

Get Quaker Oats today. Grocers have two kinds: Quick Quaker, which cooks in 3 to 5 minutes, and Quaker Oats.

Good Nature and Good Health

This is the first of a series of three articles dealing with the spread of contagion at bathing beaches. For NEA Service and The Herald, by Dr. M. Metzbaum of Cleveland, a nationally famous specialist, tells of the dangers and suggests precautions for your safety.

BY DR. M. METZBAUM

Every summer season, with its "dog days" and crowded public bathing beaches and pools, brings epidemics of infection the nation over.

Eye, ear, nose and throat troubles and skin eruptions reach a high peak during the hot months, mostly due to the carelessness of a few persons in the use of bathers.

It is a serious problem from the standpoint of the health of the community. Often, too, the community itself is at fault, perhaps in laxity of enforcement of restriction, perhaps in the construction of the beaches. Dangerous bacteria in every minor infection. An appalling number of contagious disease cases is directly traceable each year to the swimming places.

Breakwater a Menace

Many bathing beaches, even those at the ocean, are often partially protected by breakwaters or in shallow bays or inlets. This prevents the beaches from being washed away and renders the bathers safer. But in these partially protected places, the water is often stagnant or there is very little exchange of the water there with fresh water.

In most of the Great Lakes, an unfavorable wind will often wash the sewage from the large intercepting sewers in the direction of the beaches, often necessitating closing of the beaches by the local health authorities. Chicago protects its own beaches by sending its sewage down the Mississippi River.

Expert Opinion

An American engineer, who was studying the sewage disposal systems in Germany, was asked "How do the cities in America dispose of their sewage?"

He answered, "They empty it into lakes and rivers, then bathe in it and then take some of it back in their drinking water."

Revolted as that may sound, it is scarcely an overstatement. Many of the last word in sanitation have not yet learned to protect their bathers.

Family Life Lost In Shuttle

by Olive Roberts Barton.

What is the matter with families? Is the family spirit passing as the old neighborhood spirit is passing? Are we turning into a nation of hermits? Is everybody specializing so intensely in his own life that he has no time left for either community—or family—or group living of any sort?

Old Home Week wasn't such a bad thing? The clan spirit of Scotland, the county loyalty of Ireland, the tribal traditions of the Indians, seem to have left no progeny in this land of the free.

Now on top of that one cannot fail to observe the slow disintegration of family bonds. Brothers and sisters scatter; sisters also seek careers and take up their abode separately and away from home in order to have a greater freedom for their special development.

It is not given to the observer to judge whether or not this is as it should be, but we cannot help feeling that true patriotism has its nourishment and sustenance first and foremost in a love of place.

Mothers are not to blame, if anyone is to blame at all. Most mothers are anxious to do what is best not only for their children but for the community. I'm inclined a bit to believe that men are patriotic because they love a fight. Women are deeply, conscientiously patriotic because they have a more deeply rooted love—first, the family as a unit, next the community in which they live. And what is love
