G. O. P. CAUCUS TONIGHT FACES FEW CONTESTS

Brainard for Lieut. Governor, and House for Sheriff
Seem to Be Manchester's Choice— Meets at Rec.

Republicans in practically every town in Connecticut will caucus tonight to name delegations to the state, congressional and county conventions.

In Manchester the caucus will be held in the auditorium of the School Street Recreation Center at 8 p. m., daylight saving time. Judge William S. Hyde, chairman of the Republican Town committee, will call the meeting to order.

The caucus tonight is practically the opening gun of the fall campaign. To each of the conventions Manchester is entitled to four delegates. As far as can be learned there isn't likely to be any conflict for delegates to any of the conventions. The Republicans here long ago established the precedent of sending the town's representatives to the state convention that is to be held in Hartford on Monday and Tuesday, September 13-14. That means that Judge Raymond A. Johnson and Miss Marjorie Cheney will be named to go to the state convention.

Robert J. Smith, who is senator from the Fourth District, will doubtless be nominated as delegate at large from the Fourth District convention.

At the Republican state convention about the only contest that is likely to develop will be that for lieutenant governor. Edward Brainard of Branford has held that position for the past two years. He is being opposed this year by John M. Wadhams of Torrington. Manchester Republicans are likely to choose that he is favorably known here by many of the leading Republicans. He has been here on several occasions.

Contest for Sheriff.
At the county convention which will name a Republican candidate for high sheriff, Manchester will have an opponent in State Central Committeeman Eugene House of Hallowbrook. Mr. House is at present a deputy sheriff and has served in that capacity for the past two years. Manchester Republicans are favorable to the candidacy of Mr. House, and the delegates named tonight will no doubt favor his candidacy. Mr. House is very well known in Manchester, and politically has always favored Manchester's interests. For this reason it is expected that Manchester would naturally support him for the office of high sheriff.

The caucus will also be called upon to name a Republican town committee to serve for two years. The present committee is made up of fourteen members, of whom was named by its chairman, Judge W. S. Hyde.

Favor Bingham.
It is not expected that there will be any contest for congressman from this district, and the Manchester delegation will, no doubt, go favorably to Congressman E. Hart Penn. Manchester has always favored the candidacy of Hiram Bingham for United States Senator and the local delegation will without question be unanimous for him.

BAN ON WINE SHOPS FOR JEWISH HOLIDAYS

Washington, Aug. 27.—The prohibition unit took steps today to prevent illegal diversion of sacramental wine during the Jewish holiday of Yom Kippur and Rosh-Ha-Shanah next month.

H. Kent Weeks, in charge of the wine control division, notified all administrators that wine must be distributed through rabbis, and must be distributed through rabbis, and must not be sold at wine stores. This order will affect at least two hundred wine shops in New York City alone.

MANCHESTER'S HISTORY TOLD BY TOMBSTONES

Although it is little known by Manchester people in general, there lies in a local cemetery the remains of a longtime servant of General George Washington. His stone is not one of those that one would expect to see on an old grave but looks distinctly modern.

Nothing fancy about it. Just the name of the man and the information that he was a waiter to Washington. Under this inscription is the date of his wife's death.

That is not all that is seen in Manchester graveyards. The practice of writing epitaphs was in vogue in the olden days and some fine examples of the art as it was at its height during post-Revolutionary days are seen. Some of these will be given in the Herald's Saturday special, "A Day Among Manchester's Old Tombstones."

NEW YORK ROARS AS EDERLE LANDS

Trudy, Chanel Victor, Gets Greeting of an Empress in Her Home Town.

New York, Aug. 27.—Gertrude Ederle, who swam the channel and lived to laugh at its terrors, and New York, the home that gave her to the world of sport, opened their arms to each other today, and as though by tacit agreement, fell into a fond embrace.

Her eyes shined with the suspicion of tears, her bosom heaving with the emotion of the great moment and her arms literally held wide as again she beheld the city of her birth, Trudy came home on the Boregnaria shortly after 12:30 o'clock this afternoon, stepping ashore at the battery to a demonstration such as would be thought incredible to those not fortunate enough to have beheld it.

Every whistle and siren in the harbor, and along the water front boats big and little bedecked and greeted her.

A navy destroyer loafed on ahead and added its siren to the terrible din. One knew that people were shouting mad words only because their mouths were opened and the tips moved. It was a delicious sight.

"Trude-e-e-e-e!"
The national heroine's pet name came forth in a piercing, sustained greeting from the 100,000 who overran Battery Park as the swimmer emerged from the pier. They had waited since eight o'clock in the morning for just one glimpse of their heroine and just one chance to call her by name.

The call of the masses to the girl who had grown up among them came from all sides, from the air and actually from the ground. Automobiles parked at the curb sheltered children who had crawled under them to be as near the line of march as possible. The Sixth Avenue L structure looked like the giant iron tree, well populated with monkeys. Subway kiosks almost bent under the weight of hundreds.

From office buildings came rib-

YOUNG BANDIT DIES IN GETAWAY FALL

Drops Into Acreway and Hours
Later Holdup Victim Finds His Body.

New York, Aug. 27.—A youthful bandit was killed early today by attempting to leap across an eight-foot acreway to the roof of an adjoining building.

Nearly eight hours after the holdup, Louis Cohen, victim of the robbery, stumbled across the battered body, crushed by a fall of six stories.

Cohen was held up in his apartment by four men who robbed him of jewelry and money. He yelled for help and three of the bandits went toward the roof and one dashed for the street. Two made the acreway leap safely, but the third fell. The fourth man was captured.

Trieste, Italy, Aug. 27.—Although the Adriatic is teeming with fish, there is a shortage of that product along the Dalmatian coast, due to a fisherman's war. Disputes as to fishing rights between the men of Capadista and Chloggia have led to a number of miniature naval battles between the fishing fleets, resulting in the death of several and the sinking of many fishing crafts.

HALF MILLION MILES OF AUTO ROADS IN U. S.

America Now Leads Entire World in Highway Says
Announcement of the Commerce Department.

Washington, Aug. 27.—As the only billion-dollar "highway" nation in the world, the United States now leads all the rest of the world with 500,000 miles of good roads. It was announced today at the Department of Commerce.

With a congressional appropriation of $75,000,000 and a state and local fund of $100,000,000 being expended this year, the American people already have poured out $1,002,000,000 on good roads.

Of this amount, the federal government alone has expended $371,701,000.

The broad sweeping network of paved highways, interlacing virtually every state in the union, government officials said, has opened a new field of transportation for American industry, sharply reduced the cost of marketing agriculture products over short distances and permitted millions of Americans "to see America first" for the first time.

20,000,000 Automobiles.
At the same time, the American people have become far and away the greatest automobile-owning country in the world, with more than 20,000,000 motor vehicles now licensed throughout the states. Of this number, almost 18,000,000 are pleasure vehicles while 2,441,000 are commercial trucks, rendering constant service to commerce and industry.

The department announced that this tremendous motor car activity had brought nearly $750,000,000 in revenues to the federal and local governments in 1925, due chiefly to the availability of good roads. Of this income, $667,000,000 was paid in tolls on trucks and the remainder came from highway taxes and incidentals.

Volume of Transportation.
The volume of highway transportation, due to good roads, department experts declared, has in the last two years surpassed even the wildest expectations of a decade ago. In 1925 alone, 3,040,000 carloads of automobile freight were carried over our good roads; 232,000 miles of bus operations were established; 6,455 common carriers used 23,145 busses for the transportation of freight and passengers; electric lines used 5,100 busses over 5,132 miles of routes to improve their service, while 691,000 children were carried to school daily throughout the country in special "school" busses.

500,000 Miles.
Out of a total of 3,029,916 miles of highways, 495,000 miles were "improved" at the end of 1925, the department said. In the first six months of this year, it was added, approximately 17,500 miles of good roads were added to the total, making the United States the first and only nation in the world with more good roads in the world with more highways.

KEMAL WIPES FOUR PATRIOTS FROM PATH

Last of Leaders of 1908 Revolt
Hanged at Dawn in Turkish Capital.

London, Aug. 27.—Mustapha Kemal today rules unopposed in Turkey. The four chief opponents of Mustapha Kemal, having been sentenced to death, their hanging took place just before dawn today, according to dispatches to the Daily News from Constantinople.

The four were: Djavid Bey, former finance minister; Nasilim Bey, former minister of education; Helmi Bey, former deputy, and Nail Bey, former secretary of the Unionist party.

These four were the last remnants of the Union of Progress, the organization which in 1908 freed Turkey from despotism under the Sultan. Now, these men who fought for the freedom of Turkey, have gone to their death, charged with a conspiracy to revolt against the republic.

Once they were national heroes in Turkey and Mustapha Kemal was their subordinate. They made their first mistake, however, when they led Turkey into the World War on the side of the central powers.

EVERY MEXICAN LAW ILLEGAL, SAYS GEN. DIAZ

Nephew of Porfirio.

New Orleans, Aug. 27.—Mexico has not had a legal government or a legal constitution since 1913, and the only basis on which its present government and constitution rest is the illegal one of armed force.

This is the blunt statement of Gen. Felix Diaz, nephew of the famous Don Porfirio Diaz who held office as president of Mexico for a longer time than any other man before or since.

Gen. Diaz is living quietly on a secluded New Orleans residence street, a fugitive and exile from the land of his birth. Instigator of three revolutions since the overthrow of his uncle's government 15 years ago, he strove for years to win the place of his famous namesake. Failing, he took refuge in the United States to escape a firing squad.

Denounces Calles' Regime.
In an interview, the first he has given since he entered this country, he gives his opinion of the present Mexican regime and its acts.

"I am of the opinion that the religious laws, the anti-alien laws and the oil laws are null and void, and since they are so it is useless to analyze them," he says.

"Since Oct. 10, 1913, when Victoriano Huerta dissolved the Mexican congress, every law that has been passed has been illegal, and continues illegal. The constitution of 1917 especially has been condemned as illegal by many prominent lawyers.

"The latest decrees of President Calles regarding the religious question are absurd. They are absurd because they violate the same constitution they are invoked to fulfill.

No Legal Power.
"President Calles has no legal power to make those laws. He is not legally qualified to act as president, and while the religious laws violate article 49 of the constitution of 1917, that constitution itself has never been legally adopted."

Gen. Diaz asked to be excused from discussing the possibility of a

FRANCE REJECTS GERMAN TRIBUTE TO "UNKNOWN"

Paris, Aug. 27.—France does not desire German homage to France's unknown soldier, such homage being in bad taste and unpardonable.

The police commissioner of the Etoile district made this ruling today, ordering the destruction of a spray of red flowers deposited on the tomb by five Germans. Attached was a card inscribed "from the youth of Germany to the Unknown Soldier."

MAY INDICT SIX IN MELLETT MURDER

At Least Three, Perhaps Twice That Many, Likely to Be Accused by Jury.

Canton, O., Aug. 27.—H. C. Pontius, personal attorney and intimate friend of Don R. Mellett, Canton publisher, murdered seven weeks ago, today was scheduled to appear before the Stark county grand jury that is considering evidence in the assassination.

It was expected that Pontius would attempt to show the alleged close co-ordination between the vice ring and Canton officialdom which knowledge was reported gained by the attorney during his work with the crusading editor.

Mellett's work in fighting the underworld of "the Jungle" is also expected to be outlined to the jurors in an effort to show a plausible motive for the crime.

May Be 6 Indictments.
Authorities participating in the inquiry today were of the opinion that at least six, and possibly five or six, murder indictments would be returned by the jurors when the complete evidence has been submitted.

Records taken from several persons by United States Attorney A. E. Bernstein, of Cleveland, will be submitted to the grand jury next Monday, it was learned.

County Prosecutor C. B. McClintock, who is personally conducting the presentation of the case to the grand jury, announced today that "under the double jeopardy" clause of the constitution, "the case would be called upon to testify at the present time."

FIRST BAIL ALLOWED IN CONN. HOMICIDE

Precedent Set When Man
Accused as Accessory Is Freed on Bond.

Bridgeport, Aug. 27.—A legal precedent was set in Connecticut today when Joseph Fratino, of Norwalk, was released from Bridgeport jail in the security of a ten dollar real estate bond furnishing by relatives. Fratino is charged with being an accessory after the fact in the slaying of Genaro Clemente, of Norwalk for whose death Antonio Padula of Norwalk, is locked up charged with murder.

Judge E. C. Dickenson of the Superior Court, heard Fratino's appeal for liberty at Hartford yesterday and sent a decision here today. E. Earl Gerlich, assistant state's attorney, agreed to Fratino's release. The statutes make no provision for the release of an accessory before the fact must be held without bail.

With Fratino's release Patsy Padula, a cousin of Anthony, who is accused of harboring Anthony for a week after the murder, moved today to secure his own release in the same way. His appeal will be heard next week.

Folkestone, Eng., Aug. 27.—The difficulties of swimming the channel have been many, ranging from heavy seas to jellyfish and an occasional frolicsome porpoise, but Mercedes Gleitze, London stenographer who gave up an attempt to swim the channel early today, reported a new difficulty. Swarms of flies bothered her greatly during her swim, Miss Gleitze said.

MURDER PLAN NOT WOMAN'S SAYS SIMPSON

Declares Mrs. Hall Did Not Seek Death of Pair But Was Involved— Fingerprints Vital in Case.

Somerville, N. J., Aug. 27.—Attempt will be made to force Mrs. Frances Stevens Hall to join her kinsmen, Henry B. Carpenter and "Willie" Stevens, in a cell in the county jail, it was indicated today by Alexander Simpson, special prosecutor in the investigation of the murders of the Rev. Edward W. Hall and Mrs. Eleanor R. Mills.

Mrs. Stevens is at liberty in bail of $15,000 and will remain so until the grand jury meets on September 21, it was indicated. Likewise, Stevens and Carpenter, whose attorneys were refused application for bail release in court yesterday, will remain in their cells in the Somerset county jail until the grand jury either returns indictments or orders the defendants' release.

Fingerprints Vital in Case.
If there is a trial, this depending entirely upon whether the grand jury indicts the three defendants, it was regarded as highly probable today that fingerprint experts would play a large part in the prosecution of the case. The startling revelation that the state would attempt to prosecute through this medium of evidence came during the ball hearing before the Supreme Court Justice Parker, when Simpson suddenly divulged the existence of what he termed "an important piece of evidence" that had been discovered at the scene.

Dramatically, the fiery little prosecutor withdrew a dirty and smudged calling card. He announced to the court that the card had been found propped against the foot of the murdered Dr. Hall "to establish his identity." He followed this with the declaration that the fingerprints on it had been found to match those of one of the three defendants, and inferentially that it was "Willie" Stevens who placed the card at the foot of Dr. Hall's bed.

Didn't Want Murder.
Scarcely less surprising than this charge, which plunged Stevens into a fit of nervous squirming and excited fidgeting, was the following one, when Simpson declared that Mrs. Hall "is not a murderer," her husband and his sweetheart murdered, but plans were misdirected and she became involved in it up to her neck.

Mrs. Hall informed of Justice Parker's action in denying bail for the defendants and the double jeopardy clause that "the murder was committed before her eyes," showed no emotion. According to members of the family who answered telephone calls to her home, she showed no curiosity as to the possible effect on her own present status of the ball refusal.

Defense Secrecive.
Queries addressed to those close to the Hall home regarding Simpson's allegations that Stevens' fingerprint was found on the calling card, met with the reply that "nothing is known about it." There was no hint given today as to what steps defense counsel would take to refute the charge.

Simpson declared this morning that he would make a complete inquiry to determine why the authorities investigate four years ago failed to make use of the visiting card. Police Inspector John W. Underwood, Jersey City, said that the investigation of all phases of the case was proceeding and that state police were co-operating with the special detectives.

Touched by Several.
Simpson said the visiting card which had been found at the foot of the Rev. Dr. Hall had been traced from the time of its discovery until it was turned over to the authorities.

"Although a number of people have touched the card," said Simpson, "it will be offered in evidence." The prosecutor said that he would give his immediate attention to his private law practice.

"ROB" CROCKETT NOT TO RUN AS CONSTABLE

Robinson Crockett, whose name has appeared on the Republican ticket in Manchester as a constable for a long period of years, will not be a candidate for the office this year. Mr. Crockett feels that he has held the position long enough, and prefers not to assume any of the work which the office demands.

Mr. Crockett is employed in the Six Printing department of Cheney Brothers. For many years he was employed also as a special constable around the mills nights and holidays. His name on the ticket and his face at the polls, familiar for years, will be missed at coming primaries and elections.

SCHOOL TRANSPORTATION

PROBLEM IS UP AGAIN

Board of Education Petitioned to Establish Means of Getting Children to Green School

The question of transportation of school children in outlying sections of the Manchester Green school district is under consideration again this year by the Town Board of Education. There are at present about twenty-five children who live in remote sections of the district who find it difficult to attend school during the stormy winter days.

Last year the Board of Selectmen received a request that the town finance transportation for the school children in the Green's outlying territory and referred the matter to the Board of Education which is composed of Edwin A. Lydall, president, Mrs. Florence Shearer, secretary, Edward J. Murphy, H. O. Bowers, Mrs. Jane Wilcox and James Burke, Sr.

QUEER QUIRKS OF NATURE

By ARTHUR N. PACK
President American Nature Association.

Few there are who have not seen this creature of the dark "on drunken wings go staggering aghast the gloom" yet such is the air of mystery that surrounded him, and the number of absurd qualities charged to him that few there be who really know him.

In Bible times the bat was one of the animals considered unclean, and this early sinister reputation has been hard to live down. He is said to harbor bed-bugs, a charge based on error; he will try to tangle himself in one's hair when that is about the last thing a bat would allow to happen.

"Blind as a bat" is a ridiculous way to allude to the sight of an animal that, in semi-darkness of twilight, is able to catch hundreds of insects, large and small, in the course of a few hours.

This is the way the bat spends his life, catching insects, many of which infest our houses. All our North American species live entirely on active living insect prey.

Bats are of many species. Their habits vary. Some spend the day in caves, some in trees, some live only in tropical lands, while others live in summer from our northern states to the arctic, and migrate southward in winter. Some do not migrate, but hibernate in a semitropical state in deep caves, where the winter temperature is relatively high.

Some are only a couple of inches long, while others of our species have a body length of four or five inches and a wing spread of nearly a foot and a half. Creature of darkness though he be, he and all his tribe are interesting.

WAPPING

Mrs. Elizabeth A. Smith left Thursday morning for a few days' visit, with relatives and friends in New London, Conn. She expects to return next Sunday night.

Paul Rustic, son of Mrs. Raymond Lathrop is confined to his bed at the home of his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Crooks, of Buckland, with a severe attack of tonsillitis.

Mrs. Charles E. Lathrop had the misfortune to fall down a flight of stairs, at her home recently, but was, however very fortunate, not to break any bones.

Mrs. Woods, a friend of Miss Etta Stoughton, is spending some time at her home here.

Mrs. Christopher Peterson of Denning street, was taken to the Manchester Memorial Hospital last Wednesday afternoon, to undergo an operation.

Mrs. Emma Skinner, and grandson, Harold Hart, who have been spending a week, with Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hart, of Hawthorne Point, are expected home next Saturday.

Charles Burger, Jr. has purchased a motorcycle.

FRANCE, JAPAN TIED.
New York, Aug. 27.—Tied at one victory each as the result of the first day's play, France and Japan will engage in the doubles match of their inter-zone Davis cup finals this afternoon, the winner of the round to meet the United States in the challenge round early next month.

NOW FOR "SMOKELESS TOWN"
It's an ill wind that blows nobody good. And the laundry folk should give thanks for soft coal and soot. Cincinnati pays an extra $170,000 a year for laundering shirts and collars. Pittsburgh smoke adds $13 per capita per year to the laundry bill; and 90,000 tons of soot fall every year in Chicago.

MANY NEW MOTOR LAWS SUGGESTED TO STATE

Suggestions for amendments to the motor vehicle law in the coming session of the Legislature are beginning to be received at the state motor vehicle department from motor vehicle registrants and operators. Many of them are similar to proposals that have been before several recent sessions for action and been rejected for various reasons. Commissioner Stoeckel encourages people to offer what ideas occur to them and urges those who feel enthusiastic about the suggestions they offer to appear before legislative committees in support of them.

A Torrington man has sent in a proposal calculated to reduce the number of drunken operators on the highways. He suggests that the law be amended to forbid filling stations to sell gasoline to operators who are obviously under the influence of liquor. A second suggestion is to have white lines painted in the middle of roads approaching narrow bridges which are barely wide enough to permit vehicles to pass.

From an active police court official has come a suggestion for a law prohibiting dealers of used cars selling automobiles with defective brakes. The suggestion arises from a number of arrests of operators for driving with unsafe braking equipment, and the statements of many of the drivers that the cars had been bought second-hand.

The department's recent declaration in favor of a 16-year minimum age limit for Connecticut motor vehicle operators instead of the present limit of 18 years, has brought many responses and started considerable correspondence, which indicates that the subject will be a live one in the Legislature. The next session convenes in January.

GOBS SMASH WINDOW IN NEW HAVEN JUBILATION

New Haven, Aug. 27.—Sailors from the navy squadron visiting here during the American Legion convention went forth on a tour of celebration today during which they stirred up the town, smashed an expensive plate glass show window on State street and occasioned a call for police. An officer of the fleet was summoned, the sailors were rounded up and returned to their vessels, and one was treated for a severe wound as the result of coming in contact with the window pane.

AMERICA'S HEROINE EATS OYSTER TODAY

New York Gives Trudie Ederle Anything She Wants Irrespective of Season.

By DAVIS J. WALSH.

New York, Aug. 27.—The national heroine, mind's eye sweetheart of every American is coming home today.

Roughly speaking, more than a thousand passengers will be aboard when the Berengaria steams into port at noon, as far as the average citizen is concerned, the decks will be deserted save for a single modest but muscular figure. It will be a figure absolutely alone with its great honor, for Gertrude Ederle is coming home today the land that gave her the strength the speed and the will to achieve a goal that no woman and only five men had reached in more than fifty years of effort.

But America gives no thought today to its gift; only of the result. America could do no less.

Five men in fifty years came through the test of wind and wave and tide and, as they gazed back over the turbulent course that had been conquered, they thought it was enough that they had swam the channel.

She Fought It.
That consideration, with Trudie, seemed to be only incidental, a mere means to an end. She was not here to float across the channel like a chip in the trough of the tides; she was out to race the proposition into submission and her time of 14 hours and 42 minutes was some two hours faster than any human vehicle yet has known.

America take the credit for producing her? Hardly. It will be there today only to give credit and it cannot overdo the thing, lavish though the proposed reception may seem.

Three municipal boats, with police and fire department bands blaring in harmonic competition, will sail down the bay by way of acting as a marine reception committee. Whistles will shriek and bells toll; surrounding craft will break out in a rash of hunting and the surrounding seas with a so-called "water salute."

Bedlam will follow Trudie as she sails up the harbor on one of the reception boats and the demonstration will seem to have been no less as she rides up Broadway, accompanied by her parents and sister, to City Hall, where Mayor Walker will greet her on the steps in his best receptive manner. An official reception in the city chambers will follow and the city will consider that it has done itself proud.

In Her Own Home Town.
But the end will not be yet; Trudie's Amsterdam Avenue has its own ideas of receptions and these will be tried out immediately, for Trudie is a neighborhood heroine as much as she is the city's and nation's. In fact, the world is her guest and she will eat it today, out of season or in.

Mute evidence to this effect is furnished by the austere Amateur Athletic Union which has marshaled fifty clubs as a guard of honor for the swimmer. This closes the argument, if any. When the A. A. U. begins chaperoning a professional athlete, the case is, indeed, complete.

CROSBY MANSION, WILL BE RESTORED

Philadelphia.—The Crosby Mansion, in Delaware county, Pennsylvania, famous since the days of 1698, soon to regain its old splendor, according to its present owner, Edward Burke.

The ancient house stands in a hill in Riddle Township, surrounded by seven acres of ground. Inside the mansion stands the ancient fire-place surmounted by hand-carved wooden mantel piece. On the ceiling are oak beams.

"I am not going to make any radical change in it," Burke commented, "but am merely going to restore the house to its original condition."

Inside the fireplace is the original spit with a crane, used for cooking during the fifteenth and eighteenth centuries.

The house was built by John Crosby III, known as Judge Crosby. First Lieutenant in the American Revolution. While on a visit home, he was taken prisoner by the British, while washing his hands at a pump in the rear of the house. This pump was recently closed in. Lieutenant Crosby was held for six months on the prison ship "Fairmouth" in New York Bay in 1776.

PLANE FIGHTS FLEAS
New Orleans.—Cotton raisers in Louisiana, Mississippi, parts of Georgia, Arkansas and Texas have become alarmed at the appearance of the Mexican-cotton flea or hopper. In some parts of the south, the flea is being fought by dusting the crops with sulphur dropped from an airplane.

DYE VAT IN POMPEII.
Rome.—The remains of a Roman dyer's shop, with vats, utensils and ovens, is one of the features of the ruins of Pompeii. All dyes were produced from vegetable substances until 1856 when Perkin discovered how to procure beautiful fast dyes from coal tar products.

MODELS OF NAVAL BOATS FEATURE AT STATE FAIR

The Connecticut State Fair is bringing to Hartford for the annual State Fair at some expense a costly exhibit of models of naval boats. These models have been in the Navy Department at Washington. There are seventeen in number and vary from four to twelve foot in length and are enclosed in specially made class cases.

These models tell the story of the development in fighting ships and show in detail the advancement in naval construction and contrast vividly the old war vessels of the early days of the nation with the dreadnoughts, armored cruisers, hydroplanes and submarines of today.

The model which will, perhaps, create the greatest amount of interest is the U. S. S. Constitution, familiarly known as "Old Ironsides." She was authorized by Congress in March 1794 and was built at Samuel Hays' Shipyard, Boston, and launched in October 1797. She cost $320,000 and was known as "Old Ironsides" on account of good fighting in the War of 1812 in which she captured five British vessels of war and ten other British ships. The vessel is now at the Boston Navy Yard and is visited daily by many persons.

Another model is the U. S. S. Bonhomme Richard, flagship of John Paul Jones. She was a converted East Indian. Her famous fight was with the Cerberus of the coast of England.

The U. S. S. Hartford, steam sloop of war, was the flagship of Admiral D. G. Farragut during the Civil War. It was while the Hartford was going into Mobile harbor that Admiral Farragut said "damn the torpedoes, go ahead." The Hartford is still afloat.

A model which should create attention is the U. S. S. Monitor built in 1862 by John Ericsson. She was the beginning of the new type of vessel from which the steel vessels

CRICKET ONCE CRIME.

London.—King Edward IV prohibited the game of cricket because it interfered with the practice of archery, which was then deemed necessary in training men for defense of the country. The law was repealed in 1743, and cricket is now England's most popular game.

Never make tomato sandwiches until just before serving. If made too soon, they become soggy and warm.

"COUNTRY STORE" NIGHT POPULAR ATTRACTION

The largest crowd yet was present at the Country Store night last evening at the State theatre. This attraction is proving very popular and larger crowds attend each week.

Last night not only were there surprises as the many gifts were distributed, but Manchester theatre-goers made a discovery that Jack Sanson can sing. Not only can he sing, but he is a good singer. After a local amateur had obliged with "Let Me Call You Sweetheart," he dared Jack Sanson to come forward and do his stuff. Jack did so, and gave everyone a big surprise when he sang the number so well that the crowd wouldn't be satisfied until he responded to an encore.

Walter Williams also entertained the big crowd with a song "West of the Great Divide." His number was also rendered well, and he was forced to respond to an encore.

100 DROWNED AS INDIA FERRYBOAT CAPSIZES.

London, Aug. 27.—One hundred persons are believed to have been drowned when a ferryboat capsized in the Megna river, a tributary of the Ganges, according to a despatch from Noakhali, Bengal, India. The ferry was crowded with hundreds of natives when the vessel capsized.

TYPIST'S RECORD.

Paris.—The French record for rapid typing has been broken by Mile. Plan, a typist employed by the League of Nations at Geneva. Her speed was 94 words a minute, striking the keys at the rate of 18 times a second for one hour. The old record was 81 words.

KEEP OFF

When green was first invented and 'twas spread around the grass, it must have pleased the eye of every soul who chanced to pass. 'Tis nature's favorite color, and a soothing one at best. That must be why all foliage with shades of green is blest.
 Consider any lawnway, downy grass beneath the trees. Say, is there any place that tempts as much to loll at ease? The softness seems to call you, and you answer to the call. You know that on the spread of grass there's restfulness for all.
 It sorta makes one wonder, when you think of parks and such. Are folk, who tend a lot of them, with true life out of touch? 'Tis true they spread their lawnsed in the open; in the nook. But, as to making things worth while, one point they overlook.
 The green, and soft-like blanket makes a person see the fun of signs I pass, is why folk ever spoil beneath the sun. The thing I can't understand, when'er the Grass.

POE'S STORIES: The Oblong Box (4)

On the theory that perhaps Wyatt was opening the box in his stateroom to enjoy the art piece it contained, his friend, the writer, resolved to chide him about it. Taking his arm, on deck one morning, he turned the conversation to the box, remarking about its peculiar shape. Wyatt grew deathly pale and fainted.

That night the writer watched the Wyatts' staterooms again. He thought he heard sobbing in the room the artist occupied.

Before dawn, he heard a sound as though the lid, was being placed on the box and the nails replaced with a mallet.

After seven days of the voyage, as the ship was nearing Cape Hatteras, a storm broke from the southwest. For 48 hours the ship fought the gale. Gradually the blow increased, until a hurricane was lashing the vessel. Three men were lost in the tremendous waves that crossed the ship from stem to stern. (Continued.)

WETTEST AUGUST HARD ON RESORTS

Shore Business Paralyzed by Long Succession of Rainy Day Slumps.

New Haven, Aug. 26.—The wettest August in seven years has struck shore business men with consternation, giving them the worst season in many years because the August moisture has been scattered over more days than usual.

The manager of a large bathing concession in Eastern Connecticut today reported his concern set a new low August record yesterday when he took in exactly seventy-five cents. He rented three bathing suits where his daily average had been three hundred and his receipts on a good day had run to $2,000.

Record Probably Smashed
 More than six inches of rain had fallen according to the local weather bureau rain gauge, from August 1 to 10 a. m., today, as compared with the normal August rainfall of 4.40 inches. August 1919 had a rainfall totaling 7.20 inches, a mark that weather bureau officials are inclined to believe may be exceeded this month.

Weather bureau officials reported today that a southern storm center, has dissipated itself, some of it moving northward to unite with a low pressure area moving eastward.

This sudden change in conditions is said to have relieved New England of the possibility of a heavy rainfall, but threatening weather with light rain is still in sight.

MAIDEN, 69, WEDS A MARRIED MAN

New York Romance of Rich Spinster Ends in London Arrest of Bigamist.

London, Aug. 27.—An autumnal romance was aired today when Ernest Edwin Brandon, 66, an engineer, was arrested in the Westminster police court charged with bigamously marrying Jane Surden Horne, aged 69, and reputedly wealthy.

It was charged that when Brandon married Miss Horne his first wife, Mrs. Lillian Frances Brandon, was alive in the United States.

Brandon was remanded in custody for a week.

Evidence was given that Miss Horne engaged Brandon as secretary in New York in 1922 and that he later proposed marriage and they were eventually married in Cape Town in March, 1923. The second wife discovered documents which showed that Brandon had been married in August, 1912 in Trinity church, New York, and went to New York to learn whether the first wife was living. She discovered that the first Mrs. Brandon was living but had gone to Texas to visit her daughter.

The second Mrs. Brandon testified today that a summons had been served on her in Paris in 1925. This summons was issued by the New York Supreme court in connection with a suit for $100,000 brought by the first Mrs. Brandon, charging the second with alienation of affection.

THEY NEVER KNEW TOM SIMS

BEGIN RIGHT HERE PEARL HANDLE MARRIES JIMPSON WEED. Her father gets all riled, grabs his pistol, and starts out to cut down the WEEDS.

The chase extends over the greater part of THE UNITED STATES, which is a country hundreds of years old but acts childish at times.

FOR INSTANCE, in the United States they let people ride on motorcycles, and let people have player pianos, and lots of minors go about openly with saxophones.

In the United States there isn't any law against a man's having his hair slicked back with oil; neighbors can buy phonographs without permits from the police, and other strange things.

It's about such a country that old man Handle chases Pearl and Jim. Two detectives, Mr. and Mrs. Gumshoe, join in the chase.

The five are shipwrecked on the Pacific ocean, which is of enormous size, and are picked up by pirates.

YOU MAY CONTINUE CHAPTER XXIII

PEARL sat in the ship's dungeon and sharpened her finger nails.

Now and then she rattled the chains about her shapely ankles, or cast a useless glance into the darkness at her side where snored Mrs. Gumshoe.

Where was her dear husband at? Where was her old man at? Where was Detective Gumshoe at? The pirate chief had said, "Make the men walk the plank and chuck the women into iron."

So here Pearl was in iron in the ship's dungeon, and here Mrs. Gum was in iron with her, but where were the men at?

The water lapping against the outside of the ship was regular in its hiss. Pearl listened now and then to see if she could hear her husband's body fall.

But the darling girl heard no extra large splashes. She knew that if she time Jim would contrive a means of escape.

When he started from her reverie by a grating sound as the bolt slid in its lock. The heavy door creaked back upon its rusty hinges. A blooming pirate with a lantern entered.

"Which one of you two's the best looking," said the pirate.

Pearl hung her head and blushed. At the same time she caught a glimpse of an unshaven face with a cruel mouth.

because he turned into a professional football player while in college.

"Could I see the captain?" asked our adorable girl. Perhaps the outlook wasn't so dark after all.

"You certainly can," replied the pirate. "He sent for you. Said for me to come down here and bring him the best looker of the two."

Pearl blushed again, and made ready to go.

"Say," said the pirate. "What's your name?"

"My name's Pearl," smiled our Pearl. "Pearl Weed. That little short guy's my husband. Where is he?"

"Oh, he's all right. He's down in the kitchen peeling spuds." And then he added, "My name's Smith."

"Smith?" said the astounded girl. "How do you spell it?"

"The pirate spelled it out for her. Pearl felt she was on the verge of a great discovery.

"We have some Smiths in Omeo, Ohio," said she. "They spell it the same way as you do."

The pirate shook his head, sadly. "No," he said, "I don't think they are related to me. We come from California."

"I just thought perhaps they would be," said Pearl. "It's such an odd name."

"Yes," admitted the pirate, "it is an odd name. And he paused, slightly flustered. "Say, Pearl," he continued. "Get your girl friend here some night, and let's frame a party."

Our lovely darling was stringing him along a while. "Sure," said she, "but I got a date with the captain now."

The captain of the pirates sat in his cabin, idly puffing on an opium pipe and tossing a skull up and catching it. When Pearl entered he paused to drink a quart of absinth, then smiled at her.

"Hello, cap," greeted Pearl, laughing sweetly.

"Hello yourself and see how you like it," said the captain. He had just finished killing the cook, so felt fine.

"Did you send for me?" asked Pearl.

"Yes," admitted the captain, tossing the skull to one side and putting up his pipe.

"Did you wish something?" smiled our darling. She was stringing the captain along. Soon she would twist the dumb brute around her little finger. It was a way she had with men.

"Yes," said the captain. "Yes, I wished something. I was sitting up here all by my little lonesome. So I thought perhaps you would like to come up and have a necking party."

Pearl's blood boiled at the audacity of the suggestion. She was on the point of calling her husband and having him thrash the dirty scoundrel. But she knew that would never do. She must handle the situation herself. If Jim got in bad he might have to walk the plank.

"Oh, Captain," blushed our lovely girl, hiding the resentment she felt deeply in her bosom.

"Now you get away," said the captain, skipping about the room and slapping our Pearl on the wrist as he passed her.

The lovely girl's smouldering anger burst into flame. She poked the captain in the eye and he went down for the count of ten.

Now what had she done? What would the captain think when he realized she had poked him.

Hastily, she bent over her prostrate form. She took the nine pistols which he carried about his waist.

In his hip pockets she found two million dollars. "I'll give these to my husband," said the dutiful wife. "That'll make five millions we have."

The captain stirred. He moved ever so slightly. "Touch down, Harvard. Touch down, Harvard," he sang. He was delicious.

Suppose the crew should hear him singing and suspect something? To avoid this, Pearl poked him in the eye again, and he quieted.

She must find Jim. The pirate had told her Jim was in the kitchen peeling spuds. But as she started to leave the room, the captain burst forth into song again.

"Buildgit! Buildgit! Eh Yale," sang the captain.

Pearl paused long enough to kick him in the ribs, then rushed away to find her husband.

"Jimp! Jimp! Jimp!" she called as she entered the kitchen. "Come quickly. I've knocked out the Captain."

Jim was peeling spuds. Old man Handle was peeling spuds. Gum was peeling spuds. The pirates were having spuds for dinner.

"I can't get away until all these spuds are peeled," said Jimp.

"You must," exclaimed the excited girl. "Perhaps it is too late even now. Come quickly, Jimp."

"I can't get away until I peel these spuds."

Detective Gumshoe and old man Handle upheld Jim in the assertion. They aided with him on the question.

While they argued, the captain appeared.

"You poked me in the eye," said he to Pearl. "Why did you do so? All I wanted to do was neck a little while with you. And the thanks I get is a pokes in the eye."

"I'm sorry," said Pearl, trying to smile to hide her fear. "I won't do it any more."

"Being sorry doesn't count," shouted the captain, angry. "Just for that your husband walks the plank."

"Can't walk the plank right now," interrupted Jimp.

"Why not?" The captain was growing madder and madder.

"Got to peel these spuds," said Jimp.

"You'll walk when you finish," snarled the captain. "And you had better get a move on. I'll tell you that."

"No hurry," smiled Jimp. "This chapter will be over before I finish the spuds. Have all of another chapter then."

The captain realized it was true. Because just then the chapter ended. (To Be Continued)

SCIENCE SHOWS
GREAT ADVANCE IN CANCER STUDY

British Empire Campaign
Offers Hope of Final Victory Over Scourge; Report
Discloses Effects of Treatment.

London. — "To predict the time when the problem of cancer will be solved is as yet impossible, but it is not too much to hope that with a combination of the present efforts a solution of this great problem is attainable."

That, in effect, is the genesis of the report issued by the British Empire Cancer Campaign after its annual meeting at the House of Lords here. The Campaign was instituted two or three years back to assist research into the causes and means of combating the scourge.

"It would be dangerous to raise false hopes at this stage," writes Lord Cave, chairman of the Grand Council. In his introduction to the report, "but we all know that even difficult problems yield in the end to continuous effort and careful organization."

Important Advances
The report discloses that important advances have been made by the scientists subsidized by the Campaign during the past year. It is shown that Dr. Thomas Lumsden, working at the Lister Institute, has found that anti-human cancer serum kills mouse cancer cells out of the body almost as rapidly as an anti-serum made to mouse cancer itself.

This effect is so selective that when a fragment of mouse cancer and of mouse heart and kidney are grown in the same drop of serum application of the anti-human cancer serum selects and kills every malignant cell without damaging the normal mouse tissues in the slightest degree. The heart fragment continues to beat and its cells actively divide and multiply.

"This observation," says Dr. Lumsden, in the report, "opens up a large field for further investigation, and if an anti-serum made against mouse or rat cancer is found similarly to select and kill human cancer cells, then as far as in outward work goes an almost perfect re-agent would seem to have been found."

Unusual Experiments
"Nevertheless it would only be harmful to the progress of this inquiry to attempt to select agents to human sufferers, and no such attempt is at present contemplated or even possible at this stage."

The report states that further experiments have been made into the cancer-producing properties of tar products and of mineral oils used in industrial processes. The general opinion and conclusion of the Research Institute of the Campaign is that all mineral oils are under suspicion of being dangerous.

Hospitals associated with the Campaign are still examining the theory put forward by Dr. Gye and Barnard. The report intimates that up till the end of 1925 the hospital experiments had yielded no support for the virus theory.

The theory that cockroaches are one of the causative agents of cancer is entirely negated by experiments conducted by the Campaign, according to the report.

JUSTICE.

It is axiomatic in police circles that any crime two years old is "cold" beyond hope of constructing a successful case against its perpetrators. There may be—have been, in fact—noticeable exceptions, but so important is it that evidence be collected while the case is still fresh that the chances of eventual escape of a malefactor are almost a hundred per cent if the state's preparation for trial can be delayed for a matter of some twenty-four months.

In the Hall-Mills murder not only twice that period has elapsed but it is increasingly obvious that many busy hands have been engaged in wiping out the trail of the guilty persons. Yet the predicament of the three individuals directly charged with the murder of the minister and his choir singer is no longer a thing to be laughed off. Two successive denials of bail, the second, by an unquestionably competent court after a most unusual hearing; the accumulation of fresh evidence connecting these three persons very seriously with the crime and battering threateningly at the defenses behind which they have smiled for years; the very experience of defeat which for the first time is shaking their placidity—these things have gotten beyond the point of security for the defendants in the Hall-Mills murder.

A master hand is at the helm of the prosecution. There is power in the mechanism. It is beginning to look extremely probable that there will be, in this crime involving persons of large means, a jury trial in which they will have to fight for their lives, just as any other person, similarly situated, would have had to fight long ago.

There is every indication that justice is returning to New Jersey, where once upon a time she was traditionally at home.

CONTEMPT.

An issue of the Stamford case where ten reputable citizens were haled into court like a bunch of craphooters, shepherds as a gesture in a local political rumpus, ought to be a firm determination on the part of the people of this state to insist that the next Legislature take up the business of statute control of the powers of courts in contempt cases.

It is necessary and eminently proper that the courts be endowed with certain powers, and the right to exert them more or less peremptorily, in maintenance not only of authority but of dignity. It is not necessary, and it is eminently improper, that there shall be no limitations within reason upon the powers of courts to bully the state's citizens.

Connecticut has always been and is now extremely proud of its courts. In no American commonwealth have courts been freer from taint than here, and the fairness, serious mindedness and efficiency of these bodies, in this state far outrun those qualities in the courts of other parts of the country. There has been almost no occasion, in a life time, for protest against court abuse of the right to punish for contempt, for that right has been exercised with the finest self-restraint and rare good judgment.

Nevertheless there have been, recently, several instances of flagrant tyranny on the part of judges in other states and it is conceivable that—with the upgrowth, regrettable, of a new type of lawyer in this and every other American commonwealth—there may come into power, in the lower and municipal courts particularly, an occasional judge lacking the traditional background of Connecticut law givers, and that the processes of contempt proceedings may be grievously mis-handled.

There is no necessity on any just ground for continuation of a medieval system to insure a proper respect for the courts of Connecticut.

RUSS BIG BUSINESS.

Unless the possessor is, as has now and then happened in history, a madman, possession of governmental power is bound to have a sobering and broadening influence on even the fiercest and most radical mind. The transition of a wild and wool extremist into a rather conservative sort of individual when he gets into a position of political responsibility is a common enough spectacle, even in our own country. And history is full of instances of men who have been ready to turn the world upside down—until they get into the places where such a proceeding was within their power, when they generally did little or nothing out of the ordinary.

Even in Soviet Russia the blood color is fading out of the reds pretty rapidly, judging from the news that the governing group there is trying to dicker with "big business" in the United States in the hope of establishing relations for the development of Russia's vast untouched resources.

Nor is it to be supposed that such overtures are hopelessly doomed in advance to failure. The inherent richness of Russia is incalculable. The opportunities there for the creation of enormous wealth are probably unequalled in any other part of the world. And the appeal in the situation is not at all to cheap cupidity but to the higher vision of those great American capitalists who have come to see themselves and their money as mere agencies in the making of a civilization.

There is fascination about the Russian economic situation. And it is not at all impossible that, if the rulers of that country and the rulers of big business in America should get together, tremendous strides could be taken in an amazingly short time toward opening the Russian cornucopia.

That there would have to be a reconstruction of the face of Russian affairs, just as there unquestionably is going on a reconstruction of the inner vitals of them, before Americans would tolerate any such partisanship as is being proposed, goes without saying. But the chances are that the Russian powers-that-be are aware of that as anybody, and that they are preparing—provided they can be assured of the support of the American money power—to scrap the red flag, the nomenclature of communism and the skeleton which is all that remains of its fundaments.

CHEAT.

Midshipman Earl B. Zirkie of Kansas, who attained to some celebrity a few months ago by refusing to take the oath of allegiance to the United States upon the completion of his course at Annapolis, has returned from the usual mid-dies' cruise which constitutes the finishing touch of a Naval academy education, still stubborn in his unprecedented determination.

There being no parallel to his case, and his extraordinary conduct not, apparently, coming within the scope of any particular law, the naval authorities find themselves helpless. The conclusion has about been reached that there is nothing that can be done except to cancel his commission and fire him out of the naval service, in all probability with a bobtail discharge.

Possibly there is something else that can be done and should be done. This young man has bummed an education from the United States government under false pretences. It required a tremendous amount of gall for him to eat government rations, wear government uniforms, take up room in the academy and put the United States to the very considerable expense of caring for him through an entire Annapolis course, when he did not intend to serve a day in the navy—

Under these circumstances he, if he has any personal means, or alternatively his parents or guardians, if any, should be sued for the cost of his maintenance and schooling, at least during the period of his minority. It would be ridiculous to assume that Zirkie has not violated a distinct contract, implied if not formally signed. He is a cheat and should not be permitted to get away with the fruits of his cheating if court action can prevent it.

IN BACKWARD LONDON.

A great and dazzling thought has hit the London traction managers. Because motorbus travel has been more comfortable than the old, hard seated trams, the patronage of the street cars had fallen off so that their continued usefulness was seriously called into question. But the London Council, which handles these things from a different point of view, perhaps, from that of the Connecticut Company, conceived the idea of experimenting with a comfortable trolley car. So they had built a tramcar with seats like those in a limousine, with adequate lighting so that passengers might read their newspapers without going blind—a regular de-luxe trolley car. This they put in operation on the Thames Embankment.

So speedy was the reaction of Londoners to the innovation that the car never had an empty seat—and now the Council has ordered a hundred more of this type of car. Presently, no doubt, all London trams will provide the same degree of comfort for their patrons.

That is in London, England—over in old Europe, you know, where they are so very far behind us in everything.

Imagine the Connecticut company putting in new tracks on Main street—and building trolley cars with limousine seats! Imagine it, and then call in a commission in lunacy to find out, if possible, how you got that way.

Stewart's WASHINGTON LETTERS

BY CHARLES P. STEWART

Washington, Aug. 26.—Groans were heard emanating from the war and navy departments the day the news of President Coolidge's latest budget plans arrived here from the Adirondacks.

"Cut to the bone!" exclaimed officials of the two services, when word that the president insists on, "Why! the army and navy are nothing but skeletons already, and some, even of their ribs are missing. Another cut and their very spinal columns will be in danger."

Only the aviation folk can see a ray of light in the gloom. Their services, both land and sea, are to be expanded.

As much as two years ago army men were pointing out that they simply had to have more money. Barracks were falling down, they complained, uniforms were wearing out, their wartime accumulation of munitions were deteriorating.

They didn't get more. They got less. And now they're to get still less.

It always is difficult for a layman to tell how much merit there is in such lamentations from a crowd of specialists. Professional soldiers are enthusiasts of course. To have to economize seems to them a national calamity. It may not be as bad for the country as they think it is.

If they really are right about it, however, the prospect is terrible.

The navy people's despair is deeper, if anything, than the army of-ficers'.

"The navy," as young Col. Theodore Roosevelt told me—this was a long time ago, too, when he was assistant secretary—"has been living off its fat ever since the war."

That is to say, it hadn't been getting any additional nourishment even then. It's been getting less since "then. Now it's to be cut down still further.

Up to a certain point it may be healthy to fast and reduce, but beyond that point it's weakening and finally fatal.

The navy department had an idea it was going to get 10 new 10,000-ton cruisers. Congress authorized them. Building them, however, cost for money.

With a reduced, instead of an increased allowance, they're impossible.

In deed, some of the ships in commission now probably will have to be tied up, if there's to be fresh financial parting.

Maneuvers will have to be curtailed also. There won't be money enough to pay for the necessary fuel. The navy thinks highly of these war games. To be compelled to abandon them will be a serious blow at training and discipline, experts assert.

The war department has been deeply concerned in the strengthening of the land defenses of the Panama Canal Zone, since their weakness was disclosed by fleet operations in the last three years.

The navy department has been equally interested in the establishment of more formidable bases on the Pacific coast and the Hawaiian Islands.

These improvements were impossible with past appropriations. Maintenance of such defenses as exist already will be impossible, too with still smaller ones.

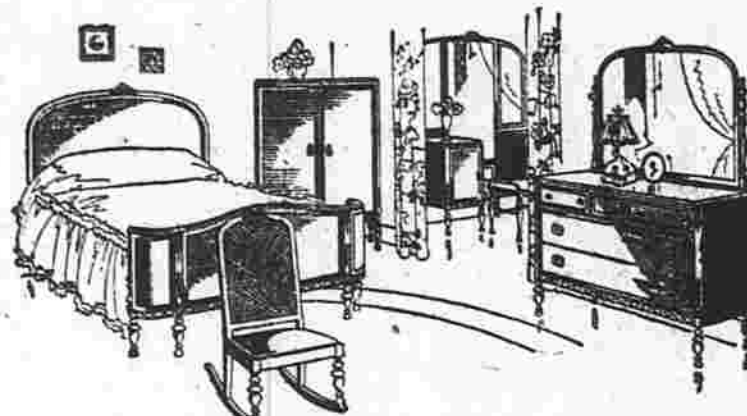

Such, at any rate, is the verdict of military and naval authorities.

IN NEW YORK

New York, Aug. 27.—See-sawing up and down Broadway I saw Marcus Loew, an imposing figure in a straw hat and grey Palm Beach suit. . . . Managing, somehow, to look cooler than the dripping crowd in a Broadway lobby. . . . Surrounded by the usual horde of hangers-on that trail the successful and important. . . . Like most men of great wealth and power, he is unassuming. . . . He attracts not one-tenth the attention given an over-dressed, soft looking young man who recently began to get by in the movies who thinks, no doubt that he must affect artificial mannerisms to keep in the lime-light. . . .

See Buster Collier almost anywhere nowadays with one of the McCarty Twins, who dance most pleasingly in a revue. . . . And 'tis said Buster is smitten most sorely. . . . But which twin it is, I dare not say. . . . And how a young man chooses between twins is another mystery I cannot fathom.

Business As Usual

HUDSON TUNNEL OPEN TO AUTOS EARLY IN 1927
$46,000,000 Tube for All Vehicular Traffic Soon Ready Under River; 3,800 Cars Per Hour is Capacity.

New York.—The new Holland Vehicular Tunnel connecting New York with Jersey City under the Hudson River is practically completed and will be thrown open to the public the early part of next year.

Imagine, if you will, two spacious, well lighted, tile-walled caverns, increased in a tube two miles long, with 1,900 vehicles bulging forth at either end every hour, and you have some conception of this stupendous engineering accomplishment.

There are vehicle tunnels in London and other European cities, but none approaches the Holland Tunnel in length and traffic capacity.

With 3,800 vehicles an hour rolling through the two twenty-foot roadways, the engineers were confronted with the extremely difficult problem of providing a ventilating system which would properly eliminate the resulting dangerous exhaust gases.

Ventilating Scheme
Because of the tunnel's length and the presence of these gases, the ordinary method of ventilating a tunnel, blowing in it at one end and the other, was found impracticable. The amount of air necessary to dissipate the gases would have created a veritable gale which would have been uncomfortable and even dangerous.

Therefore, a plan was hit upon whereby air comes into the tunnel roadway through continuous openings on either side of the roadway at from ten to fifteen foot intervals leading from fresh air ducts under the roadway. The air mixes with the exhaust gases and they gradually rise and are eliminated through openings leading into exhaust ducts. This method also minimizes the smoke danger from possible fires, as tests have shown that smoke cannot spread more than thirty feet on each side of its source because of the upward course of the air currents in the tunnel.

Tolls to Pay Bill
It is estimated that it will take ten minutes for pleasure cars to negotiate the tunnel with fifteen minutes allowed for trucks. By the present ferry route, trans-Hudson motorists must consume a half an hour when traffic is at its lightest and as much as two and three hours on Sundays when tourists abound.

The Sinstad, chief engineer, attributes the success of the project to the work of its first engineer, a man named Holland, for whom the tunnel was named. Holland died October 27, 1924, two days before the New York and New Jersey legislatures were scheduled to meet under the river. He was succeeded as chief engineer by M. H. Freeman who also died less than five months later.

It is expected that the tunnel will soon earn its cost, $46,000,000 by revenue from toll charges.

"BARON" NOW SAYS HE IS DISOWNED KRUPP
Held in New Mexico for Police of Eastern Cities in "Short" Check Affairs.

Albuquerque, N. M., Aug. 27.—Following many hours of grilling by local police "Baron" Frederick Von Krupp, Jr., today still maintained that he was the 21-year-old son of the Krupp family of Essen, Germany.

The "baron" is still held here pending instructions from Pittsburgh, Pa. and Wilmington, Del., police who asked that he be detained in connection with alleged issuance of worthless checks in those cities.

Von Krupp was taken into custody at the request of Denver police where he was charged with passing "short" checks. Denver authorities, however, telegraphed that complainants there refused to prosecute the youth after he had relinquished a Ford automobile said to have been "loaned" him in the Colorado city.

In his killing here, Von Krupp is said to have admitted that he had been disowned several years ago by the German Krupps.

"OUT OF SHIPPING BY XMAS," SLOGAN
Board Begins Looking for Purchasers for Leviathan and Other "Cracks."

Washington, Aug. 27.—"Out of the shipping business by Christmas." With this slogan, the United States shipping board today began looking around for purchasers for the United States and American Merchant lines, which include the Leviathan and other crack trans-Atlantic ships.

None of the ships will be sold except to Americans and then only under stipulations as to their continuance under the American flag. The board does not anticipate many bidders, for the amount of capital involved is so great as to make the lines available only to a few combinations.

If the lines are not sold the board will go to Congress next session with a demand for sufficient appropriations to properly maintain the lines permanently under government operation.

CONN. TROLLEY ACCIDENTS ARE CUT 8 PER CENT.
Crashes With Autos Comprise Nearly 60 Per Cent. of Total—Step Mishaps Greatly Reduced During Year.

Connecticut Company street car accidents were reduced by 8 per cent. in 1925 as compared with the figures of the previous year, according to figures just compiled by the American Electric Railway Association. This is an average of only one accident for approximately 4,000 car miles. Of the accidents in which street cars were involved in 1925, nearly 60 per cent. were collisions with motor vehicles in which the automobiles in one manner or another were traveling on or across trolley tracks.

Carelessness on the part of trolley passengers in boarding and alighting from the cars was reduced 11 per cent. in 1925 as compared with the figures on the same type of accident in 1924. The carriers apparently have become well educated in exercising caution in entering and leaving the trolleys. Street railways devoted much attention last year in attempting to reduce this type of accident and were apparently successful to a large extent.

YOUR DEATH ESSENTIAL TO US ALL
Sapulpa, Okla. — Besides being better for everybody concerned, it is positively necessary that you die. Here is how the pastor of a local church figures it out:

Beginning at the time of Christ, with 300,000,000 people alive then, and figuring that the population doubles every 50 years, there would now be 412,316,850,416,000,000 persons inhabiting the globe.

Considering the earth's surface, 56,000,000 square miles, of which 15,000,000 is not inhabitable, that would be a population of 10,307,921 to the square mile. Too many.

OCCUPY CITY HALL WITHIN 2 WEEKS

Some Departments Will Move in Next Week; To Hold Primary There.

According to present plans of the town officials there will be no formal relocation of Manchester's new city hall building, which is now nearing completion. It is expected that within the next ten days some of the town departments will begin to move in. The Board of Health, the town engineering department, and the building inspector now have quarters in the old town hall at the rear of the new building. It is the plan of the town officials to have these departments established in their new quarters within the next week or so and then the work of tearing down the remainder of the old town hall building will begin and grading about the new building will be completed.

The officials will occupy quarters provided for them on the second floor. Inoleum is now being laid on the floors of the other new offices.

The town treasurer, town clerk and other officials will all be settled in their new quarters within the next two weeks. A slight delay has been caused awaiting plumbing fixtures. Town Treasurer Waddell said this morning that the entire building will be ready for occupancy within the next two weeks.

To Vote There
The town primary which falls on Tuesday, September 14 will be held in the new building. The voting machines which have been stored in the Lincoln school will be moved over and set up in time for the primary.

Workmen in the employ of the town began trimming one of the two large oak trees that stand in front of the new city hall. Many people believed they were going to cut one of the trees down. There is a growing sentiment in favor of doing so as a view of the building from the street is obscured by these trees.

OLD GRASS HOUSE
Honolulu. — No less a personage than the mayor of Honolulu, John H. Wilson, will direct the remaining operations on the old Queen Emma Home, a grass-hatched remnant of regal days in Hawaii. The mayor was commissioned by the Daughters of Hawaii, a local organization, because as a youngster, his honor lived in a grass house at Waikiki. Six hundred bags of pill grass will be used. The Queen Emma Home is 75 years old, being completed at the time of King Kamehameha V.

OCCUPY CITY HALL WITHIN 2 WEEKS

Some Departments Will Move in Next Week; To Hold Primary There.

Along the line of march to City Hall, where Mayor Walker awaited the star of this great drama, the cry was taken up and sustained until one could hear nothing else. Slightly overcome, Miss Ederle waved her way to the mayor's doorstep, her arms working like animated pistons. It really took the muscles of a channel swimmer, who had beaten the record by nearly two hours, to do justice to the demonstration.

A catch in her voice, she turned to her mother and with wonder in her tones, said: "I can't believe it. This is really all for me? I'm just too happy and thrilled for words."

She might well have expressed surprise. Some seven years ago, Pershing came back from the war to a semi-hysterical nation and its gratitude. We thought then that nothing could have exceeded the sincerity of expressions that New York gave to its hero then.

Yet Pershing was something of a fictive character, slightly unreal to the man in the streets. Miss Ederle grew up in an Amsterdam avenue butcher shop, and today the man in the street knew her and loved her and said so.

He knew that she was a girl of the people, born and bred. They knew she was without guile; just an everyday human being, whom Providence has endowed with the mind and the sinews to swim a turbulent body of water in 14 hours and 34 minutes.

Business? Blow Business!
He knew that no other woman and only five men, had been able to make the crossing in all the years it had been attempted. He knew, in fact, everything about her, including the butcher father who wanted to bet his life's savings on the swim and her proud mother who kept the home fires burning against the great heroine's return.

And so New York went absolutely and sincerely mad for the hour and the business in this business center of the universe was allowed to go by default.

With Trudy were her father, known affectionately as "Pop," and her sister, Mrs. Margaret Deuschle. On the Macon were Mrs. Ederle and her mother. The hour postponed reunion was a sight to see as the star was escorted to the gateway of the Berengaria.

NEW YORK ROARS AS EDERLE LANDS

Trudy, I'm the happiest mother in the world," murmured Mrs. Ederle after the first lingering embraces had sufficed.

Speech by Trudy.
"And I'm happy to bring home this honor to such a mother and such a country," Trudy replied.

Finally, they lifted the star bodily aboard the Macon, followed by her father and sister, and then she was claimed by the newspapermen. She was visibly disturbed by all the attention and bit her lips nervously as reporters plied her with questions.

In reply to one of these, she declared that the accompanying tug, far from helping her swim, as charged in England, really interfered with her so badly that she had to stop until they bore away.

"We met the English writer who said the tugs helped me later in Calais and he apologized for his article, after he realized how wrong he was," she said.

Greenwich, Aug. 27.—Lawrence Martin, of New Britain, believes that if he holds out his hand when he is about to stop an automobile he is driving. It is up to following car drivers to be on their guard. Martin today appealed a borough court fine of $25 and costs on a charge of reckless driving. He was taking a truck through cob cob last Saturday and slowed down to a stop at a standing trolley car. Harry C. Coombe, of Stamford, kept going and wrecked his car against the truck. Judge W. RISKO OUTWEIGHED; PERSSON WHIPS HIM

New York, Aug. 26.—Harry Persson, of Sweden, the European heavyweight champion, proved to be the customers last night that not all foreign heavyweights forsake the perpendicular at a moment's notice when he gained an easy victory over Johnny Risko, of Cleveland, at the end of ten rounds.

Every cent above actual expenses and the latter will not amount to much, will be donated by Cheney Brothers toward the Christy Mathewson monument. Manchester baseball fans remember the great pitcher vividly, for it was he who, years ago, pitched Rockville to a victory over Manchester. We said "pitched," but to this should be added "batted" for Christy Mathewson won his own game with his solid drives into safe territory.

As it was, the Swede crossed hard rights to the head many times and, while these punches rocked Risko, he always shook off the effect and came back for more. He still was coming in when the bell ended the fight.

Risko, at a great physical disadvantage, never had a chance. When the weights were announced, a murmur of surprise ran through the crowd and this became open disapproval as the boxers were called to the center of the ring and it was seen that Persson fairly towered over Risko. The latter weighed 184 pounds, Persson 206.

Scorekeeper Butts Into Discussion Between Managers and Receives Kayo; Shamrocks Led at Time; Score 5 to 3

Managers Were Discussing Advisability of Calling Game on Account of Darkness When Pandemonium Broke Loose.

Pandemonium broke loose in Meriden last night, ignited by a fist fight spark, and set the Silver City agog with excitement in addition to breaking up an otherwise perfectly good ball game between the Shamrocks of Manchester and the Maplewoods of Meriden.

A discussion over the advisability of continuing the game after the sixth inning because of semi-darkness was the cause of the riot. It appears, according to Manager Clemson's story, that he and Captain Jim McLaughlin had spoken to the umpire, Probel regarding the calling of the game. The umpire, for some reason, was not passed the buck, saying it was up to the manager of the home team.

It was during the discussion between Managers Clemson and Cohen, according to Clemson's story which is corroborated by the Shamrock players, that trouble started. A young man, reported to be the scorekeeper for the Maplewoods, came onto the field and interrupted the confab between the two managers. Heated arguments followed. Then came the denouement. It is claimed the scorekeeper attempted to push Clemson, the result of which Manchester man's reliable right came into play with a resounding crack; and its target went down for the count, so it speak.

Almost a Riot. In an instant the crowd surged onto the field. Some grabbed baseball bats. Cooler heads intervened and Clemson was whisked away in an automobile. The crowd and players were in an uproar but no further hostilities occurred. The injured man was revived in a few minutes, but he had been knocked senseless. That ended the game. It was too dark to continue and Umpire Probel did not forfeit the game to Meriden, so therefore the Shamrocks won the game. However, a Meriden dispatch this morning said Probel had declared the game void, which is a rather amusing decision. Whether it is in the rule book or not is doubtful.

"Well, I'll tell you, Nat," he said, "I'll have to think over your offer. But it still sounds like a low price for a half interest in this business. I think you ought to do better." Graham shook his head. "I'm sorry it isn't worth any more."

could it be, he wondered—an amalgamation? Graham had purposely undervalued the business—he knew that. Knowing he could name his own price, he was forced to the... He shook his head hopelessly, got up from his chair and walked aimlessly back and forth across the room, his hands shoved in his pockets—thinking. Thinking if only there was some way of raising the money—some friends he could go to who could help him.

Nat going to merge with Kelly and Jones? What kind of a deal was the air? What had Nat up his sleeve? Merge with Kelly? All the stubbornness in him rebelled at the thought. And supposing the impossible happened and somebody dropped the fifteen thousand in his lap. What then? Could not Graham, if he were going with Kelly and Jones, just about ruin him if he tried to struggle along on his own?

"By God, though, I'd like the chance!" he whispered fiercely, and brought his fist down resoundingly on the table. "I'd work. I'd show them something. I'd lick them. But— And a despairing shrug of his shoulders. Hopeless.

With a courage born of desperation, he went the next morning to his bank, laid his cards on the table and, assuming an air of bravado he was far from feeling, asked whether they'd be willing to lend him the money—two hundred it ever he'd struggle through somehow raising the rest.

The bank official was kindly but discouraging. "I'm afraid not, Mr. Milburn. The business is too intangible. You're willing to show for your investment, you know, but good will. Now if you had some physical property; for instance, if you were in some business where you had a lot of stock, why—

"But our contracts are tangible enough. You could take a lien on the business, you know." "A lot of your clients have no contracts. And none of them has as much as a year to run. Besides, if they were to revoke them, you'd have a lot of trouble. Litigation and all that. I'm afraid we can't take the chance. Besides, business conditions right now, you know—" and he made a little face—"well, the advertising business is beginning to feel the pinch. You'll see some mergers before long."

"Undoubtedly that was true, John thought, and he could come very near naming at least one of the mergers. "Then you can't do anything for me?" "Sorry. Now, if you had some property. Do you own any real estate?" "It's in my wife's name," John began, and stopped short.

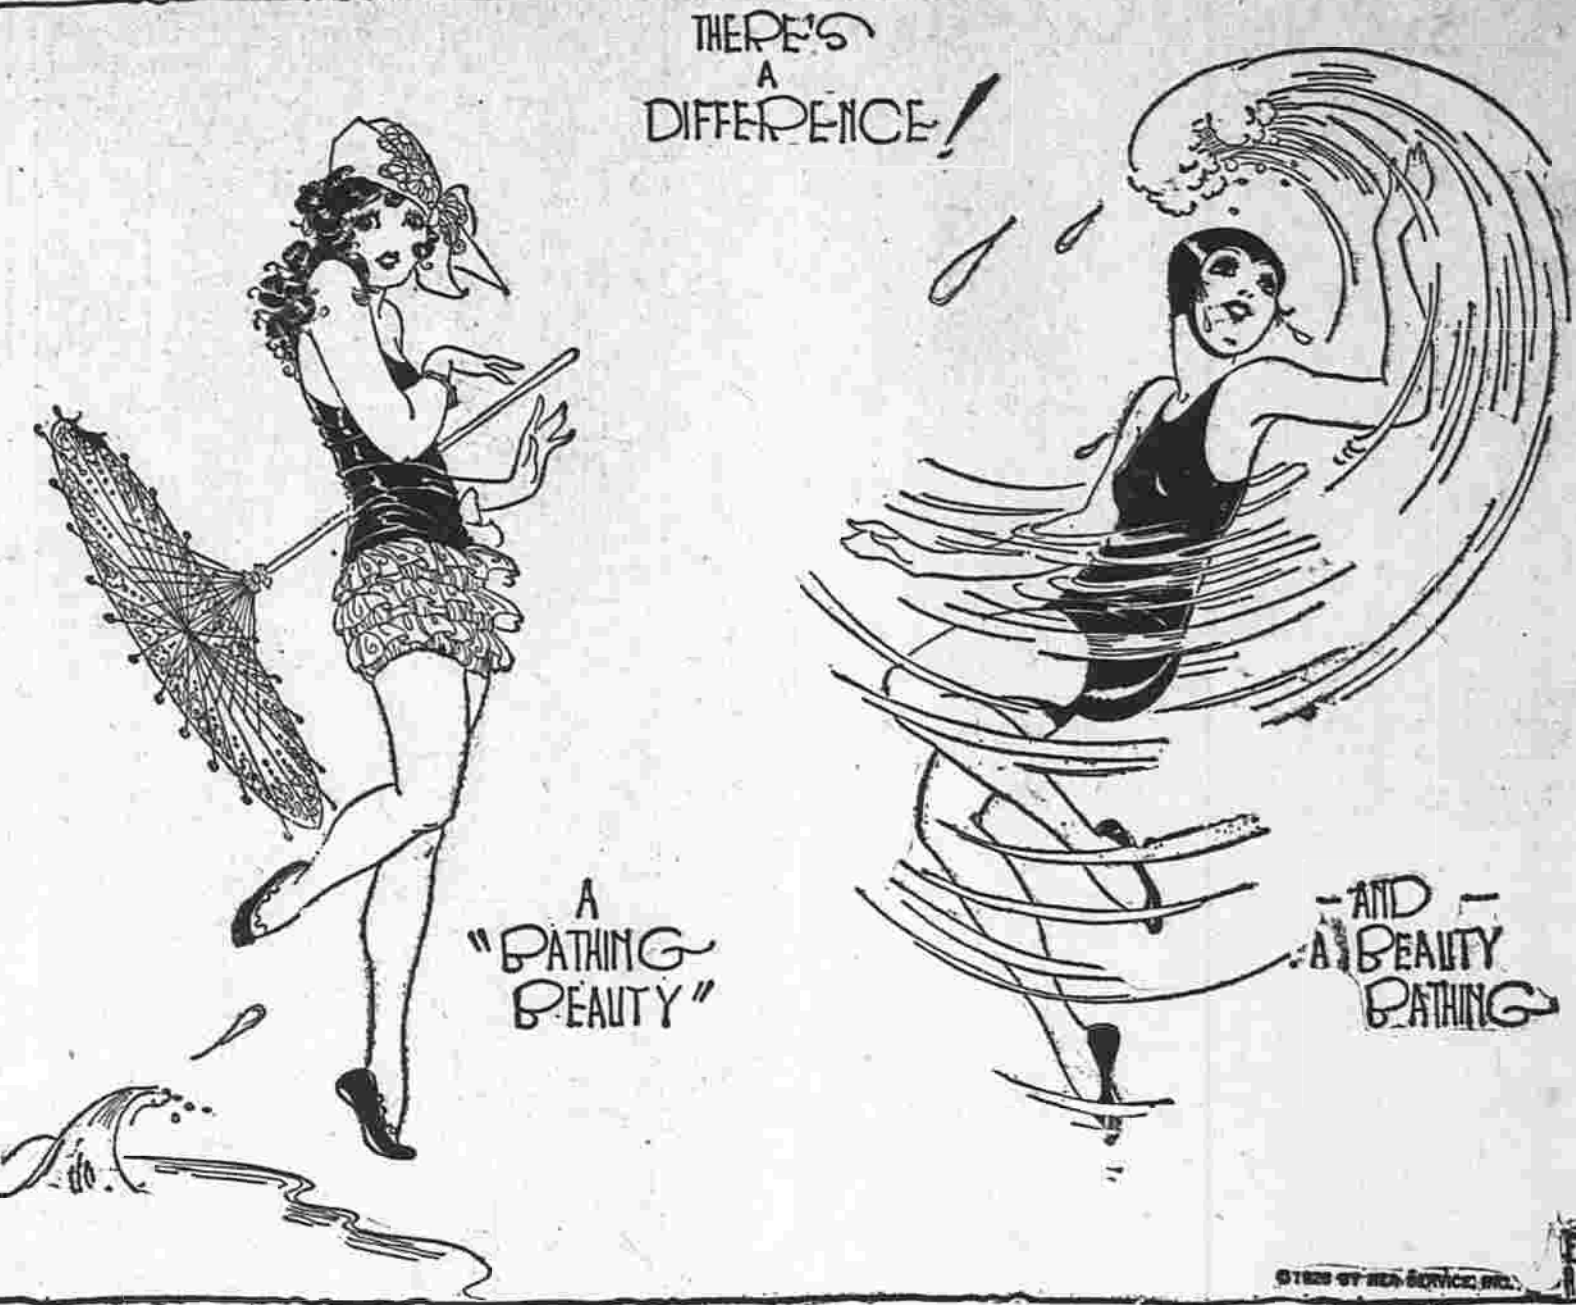

"Well, why not get her to sign?" "I haven't got enough of an equity to amount to anything," John said shortly and reached for his hat. And why not, he was thinking as he walked away from the bank, why not write to Fay and tell her the story? Would she, as a business proposition, be willing to re-invest in the firm again? She had done it once. But no; he'd be damned if he'd do it—he'd be damned if he'd go to her asking for help. What did he mean, to her, anyway? Nothing.

But hold on, hadn't her letters of late been more sympathetic? Wasn't it possible that she had softened toward him? "Well, what of it?" he said fiercely. "Do you suppose I'd crawl before her? If I can't lick this thing without her, I'll get licked myself!"

And suddenly he was possessed of a fierce joy—the joy of battle. Yes, by all that was holy, he'd fight this thing out, and if he were beaten he'd take his licking to a man. It was a relief that nothing mattered save that he keep that business he had so hard to put over. It was all he had now, with Judith gone and Fay gone and all the world whirling behind his back.

"I'll go," he said, with sudden resolution, "to Dick Menefee." (To Be Continued)

Germaine Shops for Newest Furs; Novel Dress Creates Paris Furor

Black velvet bouffant skirt, shirred over panniers with a front panel of rhinestones and pearls that is creating a sensation in Paris. Paris. with three fur coats already, she really needs another one. Chinchilla and ermine coats are more beautiful than ever before, but such prices, my dear cousin, such preposterous amounts as they cost! Though I remained temperate to the point of complete abstemiousness in the fur shops, I indulged in a slight shopping thrill—a new hat. Gaze upon the enclosed photograph and see if you don't believe it's irresistible. Fundamentally, it is only a tam of moire silk with a band about the head and a pom-pom on top, but spiritually it is a tower of strength. I really needed it, for Jacques since his return from England shows signs of extreme susceptibility—to other women. It required all my wiles to keep him from pursuing a dizzy little blonde who seemed to follow us everywhere, and scarcely had she given up in despair when a gorgeous Argentine lady appeared on the scene. I am sure he has seen her several times. Whether he is punishing me for my interest in Jimmy, or whether he is really captivated by the lady, I cannot say. I only know he is giving me some uneasiness. And Jimmie will return to America in a week or so, his parents having arranged for a very deluxe sea-

Good Nature and Good Health

MR. CITY DWELLER, BEWARE THE IVY! By DR. MORRIS FISHBEN. Editor Journal of the American Medical Association and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine. The vacation season gets people out of doors into the woods and the uncleared spaces. There the city dweller wanders rashly about paying little attention to unaccustomed hazards. Just as the visitor from the country on his jaunt into the metropolis is likely to cross diagonally in the middle of the block. A peculiarly unpleasant experience for one is the painful irritation and itching that are the accompaniment of exposure to the sap, broken leaves or branches of poison ivy, oak or sumac. A few people seem to be naturally insensitive to these substances but the majority respond to contact with the painful symptoms enumerated and some people are so sensitive that they need have only the slightest indirect contact before responding with serious inflammation of the skin. One is susceptible. The susceptibility to poison of this type or resistance to it seems to run in families. About one person in eighteen is especially sensitive. The thickness of the skin seems to have something to do with it and, perhaps for this reason, animals are not likely to be affected. If a person is particularly sensitive he can prevent much of his trouble by covering exposed portions of his skin with a solution of iron chloride, 5 per cent in a half and half mixture of alcohol and water, either before or immediately after going into a district known to contain poison ivy, oak or sumac. The iron chloride has the power of neutralizing the poison. Best Treatment. According to J. B. McNair who has given special study to this poison, the best general treatment for the condition is the same as that which might be given to a superficial burn of the skin. The parts affected are first bathed with the solution mentioned to overcome the poison; the skin is then dried and melted paraffin painted over it so as to protect the parts concerned from the air of any other contact. A thin sheet of cotton is then laid over the melted paraffin and then more paraffin painted on the cotton. This makes a light, firm, and clean protective covering. Scientists working in various research laboratories have attempted to develop anti-toxins for the poisonous sap of the ivy, oak and sumac, but thus far none of these have been established as successful in any considerable number of cases.

sage home so that, though he is very comfortable. He says as soon as he is able to navigate again, he will return to Paris and continue his continental education where it was broken off. Incidentally, I am sending you a photograph of a velvet dress that is making quite a sensation over here. Perhaps you might like to consider it for your very formal evening frock this winter. The black velvet bouffant skirt is shirred over panniers and hangs very full and long, with a front panel of rhinestones and pearls that is creating a sensation in Paris.

Rich in flavor... that's why Quaker Oats entices youngsters

THE way to make children like oatmeal is to give them the kind they like. Thus millions of mothers insist on the Quaker brand. Children who ordinarily don't like oats, take readily to this rich and tasty kind. Quaker flavor is due to exclusive milling processes which took some 50 years to perfect. Processes, too, which retain much of the "bulk" of oats, which makes laxatives less often needed. This protein, carbohydrates, vitamins and "bulk" are combined in making Quaker Oats an excellent food balance. Quick Quaker cooks in 3 to 5 minutes. Thus makes the richest breakfast the quickest. The price is the same as for ordinary oats. When a substitute is accepted, you alone are the loser. Quaker Oats

Home Page Editorials Your Boy's Pay Who Spends It? by Olive Roberts Barton.

Some one asked me what I thought about a boy just starting out to earn his own living contributing part or all of his earnings toward the family budget. What could I say but, "It depends." It depends on how much he is earning, the circumstance of his family, if they have educated him at sacrifice, and if he has an opportunity to pay at least part of it back. Yes, I should say decidedly that it all depends. It is not a bad idea in any case for parents to ask a son to contribute at least a small part of his monthly income to the family budget. This can be proportioned according to the amount earned by the boy and the amount needed by the parents. But even though there be no need, and the boy has no more urgent use for his earnings than to spend it on pleasure, he should be taught the feeling of responsibility in helping to keep up a home, whether he happens to have a wife in that home or not. I knew a man who was not taught this idea of responsibility. When the family was his and what was his was his own. He married and to this day it bothers him not whether his children have decent shoes. If a boy does not have this feeling of responsibility when he is twenty, he is not likely to roll up his sleeves and tighten his belt at forty. On the other hand, I know a boy now who works in a machine shop, whose parents wait for his pay envelope every week and give him two dollars out of it. His mother buys his clothes, although he is over twenty. They are making a first-class Bolshevik out of him. If the pay is small, it might be a good idea to put Jim's contribution to the house on a percentage basis. When he gets a raise, Mother's allowance goes up. If the boy is in a profession and just beginning, I should say that the first few years must be considered as a continuance of his education. He will need every cent of what he can earn, and more, until his success is assured.

HER OWN WAY A GIRL OF TODAY

WHAT ABOUT JERRY? "But, Judy, aren't you going to marry Jerry?" asked Mr. Hathaway in a surprised voice. I do not know why when Mr. Hathaway asked me that question that the sigh of John Meredith should rise up in front of me, but it did. So plainly in my mind's eye was his image planted that I even caught myself painfully trying to smile back into those tortured eyes. I must have been silent longer than I expected, for I found myself again listening to Mr. Hathaway, who was repeating his question. "I looked around quickly to see if the apparition my brain had called up was still standing by the mantel. It was not there and I answered with perfect honesty. "I don't know." "Then such is the perversity of one's brain that at the moment, I spoke the pleading eyes and sympathetic mouth of Jerry Hathaway arose suddenly before me. I drew my hand across my forehead and wondered if I was going mad. I had come nearer loving Jerry Hathaway the night before as we had stood in that spry-scented garden, than I had been since I knew him. Then I thought if he asked me in so many words I would have given him my promise, but this morning I could not see myself married to him at all. "I'll not worry you any longer, Mr. Hathaway," I said, with my eyes on the transmitter. I did not want to see either of the men whose pictured faces in my mind had called up. "Will you please tell Jerry to call me up at Mammie's. I'm going over there right away." "Yes, I'll tell him, but my dear girl, you must think that over. Gerald Hathaway is not to be lightly refused by any girl, provided his father favors his son's choice." Remembering that Mr. Hathaway, Sr., had tentatively tried to make me feel that his son's attentions were purely without intention, I could not for the life of me refrain from asking: "Remembering that Mr. Hathaway, that you approve of me as the wife for your son?" "Come over to the office after luncheon and I will tell you—or better still, I'll meet you and Jerry at the Beaux Arts tonight for dinner and we'll celebrate your betrothal there." Before I could tell him that I was not going with Jerry to the Beaux Arts he had rung off. When I got to Mammie's and told her the whole story she said I had no business to tell Mr. Meredith that I would go with them when I had already made a date with Jerry. TOMORROW: Judy is Grown Up. 72 Years' Difference in Ages But Father and Son Are Pals, Says Stout Atlantic Skipper

Capt. Young, "Buster" and Mrs. Young

BY CHARLES P. STEWART

Atlantic City, N. J., Aug. 27.—"My! What a fine boy!" remarked the visitor at No. 1 Atlantic Ocean. "Your grandson, sir?" "That boy's 10 months old," he continued. "There's only 72 years difference between our ages. Buster'll be president one of these days," predicted the fond papa. "But he has to be a native American to be president," objected the visitor. "Well, he is, isn't he?" questioned the captain rather indignantly. "Why, being born out here in the Atlantic Ocean, this way," began the visitor. "I thought maybe—" "Ah, but you see," interrupted the captain triumphantly, "we're inside the 3-mile limit!" "Sounds crazy, doesn't it?" "Yet it's perfectly simple, when you know the answer. The captain runs Young's Million Dollar Pier, on the Boardwalk. The pier extends about a quarter of a mile out to sea, and the captain's home—No. 1 Atlantic Ocean—is about midway between the land and sea ends of it. The breakers roll right under it. The pier is an amusement pier, of course. The captain's a showman. But No. 1 Atlantic Ocean is private. The pier is open to the public, but folk who get into the captain's home get in as company. It's a handsome, roomy house, with a garden—in pots and tubs and urns—in front of it, and in the rear a hothouse. Yes sir, out there in the Atlantic with the spray dashing against his windows, Capt. Young raises his own vegetables. The inside of his home is so maritime it makes squeamish visitors seasick. Everything in it is reminiscent of salt water. Uncle Sam officially recognizes it as No. 1 Atlantic Ocean, by delivering the captain's mail at that address. There couldn't be a nicer place to bring up a baby. John Young, junior—they call him "Buster" for short—evidently thinks so, too. He's a robust infant.

SHUCKS! WHY SHOULD YANKS WORRY? GO BACK TO FRANCE!

BY LEON M. SILER

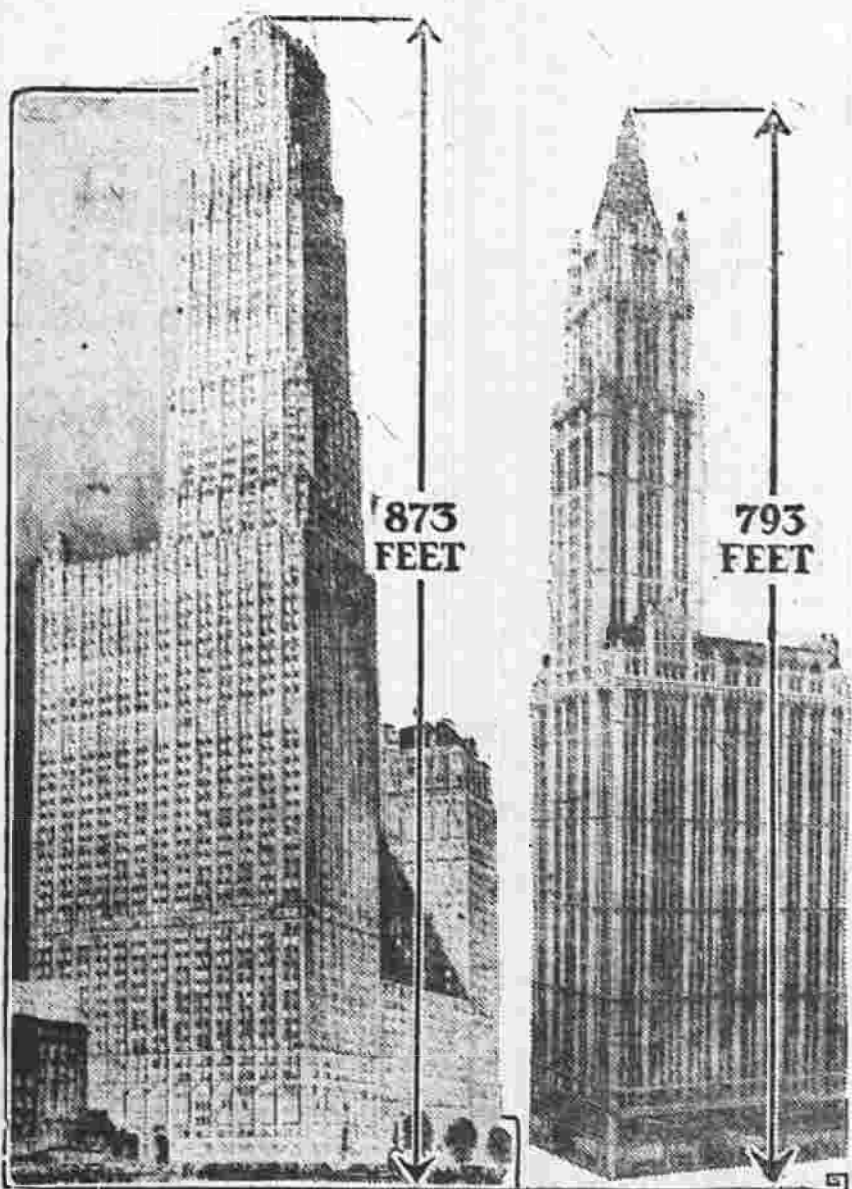

New York, Aug. 27.—War debt wrangles, national and international politics, the price of the franc—For get 'em, doughboy, forget 'em! Back to France next year! It's true, perhaps, that a couple of unsober tourists got sarcastic over this war debt business and were rough-housed out of a night club or commerce du vin or whatever-you-down-in-the-Montmartre. It's altogether possible a couple more went on a rampage over the wooden money a Paroo taxicab driver gave them, and were taken in hand by the johndarmes. You know—those "anti-American riots" you read about. But—shucks! Ask Ambassador Herrick, if you want to know whether to sign up for that American Legion "Back to France" pilgrimage. He knows. He's just home from Paris for a vacation. "It's a fine scheme," says Herrick. "I hope the boys respond to it by thousands. And France hopes so too." "Every doughboy who pays France a return visit will find it a happy one. He will find that French-American friendship, especially as concerns World War, remains very real." "As for this talk of 'anti-American riots' in Paris, it's all bally nonsense."

Ambassador Herrick

And that's that. Back to France, buddy! Even M'siet Clemenceau probably will be in such a good humor again by the time you get there that he'll want to give you a kiss. And if he doesn't, you probably know a mam-selle who will.

Topping the Woolworth Tower

The Woolworth building in New York, heretofore the tallest building in America, is to lose that distinction. The Book Tower, under construction in Detroit, will top New York's most famous skyscraper by 80 feet. This picture shows the comparative height of the two buildings.

FLORIDA FINANCES IN GOOD CONDITION

Tallahassee, Fla.—The state government of Florida is in an exceptionally strong position financially. Fiscal year statistics just completed reveal. The assessed valuation of Florida property to be taxed this year is approximately $778,000,000 compared with a total of $620,000,000 last year.

The tax rate applicable on this year's valuation is 7 1/2 mills, compared with 10 1/2 mills last year. The 29 per cent reduction was announced by Governor John W. Martin after conferences with the state comptroller, treasurer and tax equalizer. The balance in the state treasury on June 30, 1926, when the last fiscal year ended, was $17,665,317.32. This represents an increase of about two millions of dollars during the last month of the fiscal year. The state has no bonded debt, except $601,567 of 3 per cent refunding bonds held by the public education funds. The state road department alone has a balance in the treasury of more than six millions of dollars, with a highway construction program under way costing approximately $16,250,000. There is a treasury balance of $2,222,493.18 in the general governmental expense fund. Holland has a river called Y. In China there is a city called U, and in Sweden a town called A.

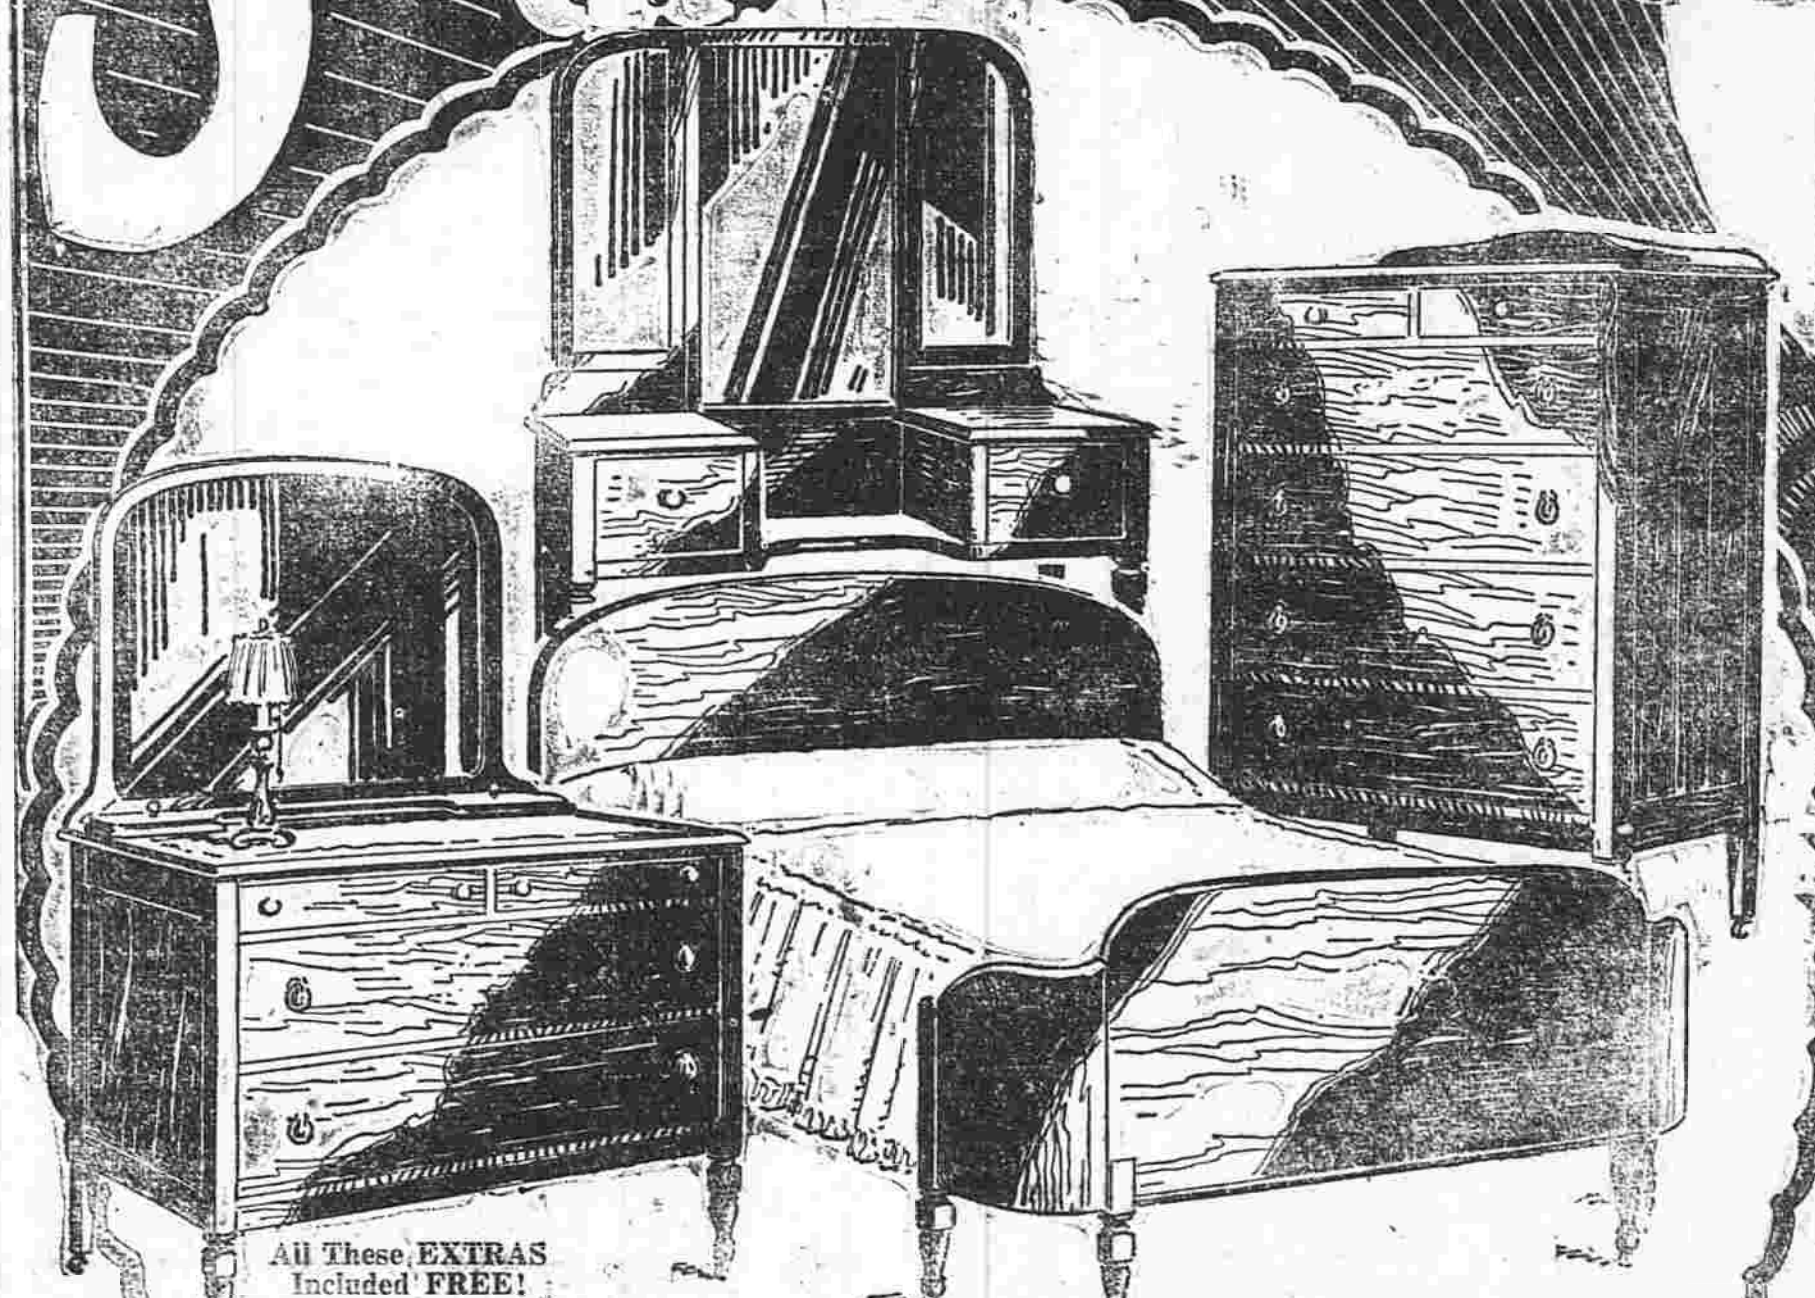

NEW HEADLIGHT SAID TO ELIMINATE GLARE

London.—An anti-dazzle device for automobile headlights has been invented here by S. L. Price. It promises to solve the riddle of having a strong motor headlight which, at the same time, will not blind persons facing the car. The light has an amber shield inside the bulb which fits directly over the filament. There are two filaments. The auxiliary is covered by the amber shield and the main filament is back of the shield and in regular focus with the lamp reflector. The light emanating from the auxiliary filament is yellow and diffused while the light from the main filament is white and of usual strength. The light strength of this headlight is of ordinary character. To anyone standing in front of the car, however, the headlamp appears to be yellow and instead of the eyes being troubled by a white glare, it is found that little dazzle is noticeable. BRITISH COAL STRIKERS TO SEEK RUSSIAN AID. London, Aug. 27.—The coal strike situation today remained unchanged, with no further joint meetings between the miners' representatives and the government scheduled. A miners' delegation is leaving for Russia tonight to make an appeal there for funds.

PAROLES ON MERIT IN ILLINOIS JAILS

Springfield, Ill.—Sweeping changes in Illinois' parole system, which has been under fire several times recently, are announced by Hinton G. Claybaugh, named recently by Governor Len Small as head of the state division of pardons and paroles.
Paroles hereafter will be meted out to an inmate of Illinois' penal institutions on a merit basis exclusively, Claybaugh said.
The announcement came at a conference between Claybaugh and his assistants at Chicago. The new parole chief was appointed following resignation of Will Colvin, who was under fire at a grand jury in-

No second chance will be given a prisoner who consciously violates his parole, Claybaugh said.

The Price of Steaks
is very largely governed by the price of the cheaper cuts of beef. If the cheaper cuts are low in price, naturally the steaks are high. A good way to help bring down the price of steak, and at the same time save money on your meat bill, is to use more of these cheaper cuts.

DANCE MUSIC PUT FIRST BY DIRECTOR

Cincinnati. — While old tunes and "old-time" music makers draw the largest applause to radio station WLW, here, dance music is the most popular type of broadcast program, says William Stoess, studio director.

Stoess believes that old-time music appeals to a class of people who have the time and inclination to write applause letters, while the dance music has a huge following of the younger set who seldom write applause cards.

"The life of modern young people is crammed so full of things to do that they have no opportunity to carry out the polite conventions of other days," Stoess explains. "Suppose a few of the younger married set gather one evening and dance to the strains of a Vincent Lopez or Paul Whiteman orchestra. They may be appreciative of this program, but in the whirl of business and social affairs how can one expect them to sit down and write an applause letter to the station from which the program was broadcast?"

The normal weight of a child at birth is eight pounds.

ONE BLAST, 35,000 TONS.
Ishpeming, Mich. — One blast from the hillside of the Cleveland Cliffs Iron Company's Ogden mine here the other day moved 35,000 tons of iron ore. More than three tons of dynamite were used, and the drills had been worked for several months to sink seventeen 60-foot holes.

There are more than 1000 varieties of the rubber tree.

MISS GEARY TO BE RECREATION HEAD

Associate in Charge When Olson Leaves - Has Had Wide Experience.

Miss Marjorie C. Geary of Montclair, N. J., who has been an associate director at the Recreation Centers in the Ninth district here since September 1 last year is to be supervisor of all recreation work in that district.

Miss Geary will assume work of Walter Olson on September when Mr. Olson leaves the employ of the Ninth district. Mr. Olson has been with the Recreation Centers for 8 years. It is the first time that the Ninth district has placed a woman in charge of its recreation work.

Her Training: Miss Geary came to Manchester from Dalton, Mass. She is a graduate of Arnold's College, New Haven, and has served as field secretary of the Playground and Recreation Association of America.

Mr. Olson has no plans for the immediate future. He said that he had several opportunities in view, but has not decided which one he will accept. John H. Hyde of the Ninth district Recreation committee, was authority for the statement that Miss Geary would take charge of the work in the district.

Cut Expenses: The Recreation committee has been cutting down expenses wherever possible. Jobs have been combined, and unnecessary overhead has been done away with in many instances. It is the aim of the committee to conduct the work as economically, and at the same time, as efficiently as possible.

LARGE CROWD ATTENDS KISSMAN GIRL FUNERAL

Friends Pay Final Tribute to Popular Manchester Girl; Many Floral Tributes.

The funeral of Miss Hilda Kissman, popular local girl who lost a fourteen weeks' battle with Bright's disease, was held yesterday afternoon at the home on Gardner street and at the German Lutheran church on Winter street. It was one of the largest attended funerals in the history of the church. Wednesday night there was a large number of persons who came to the home to pay final tribute.

At the church Mrs. Fred Woodhouse sang "Face to Face" in English and "Nearer My God to Thee" in German. Rev. H. O. Weber officiated. The bearers were Martin Frederickson, Charles Rohan Jr., Walter Senkbell, Edward Sinnaman, John Sinnaman and August Kissman. There was a profusion of flowers. Committal was in the East cemetery.

POLICE COURT

Because of a drunken party and a row that ensued on Ford street yesterday afternoon, James Brown and William Hunt of Pawtucket, and Alexander Muirhead of this town were in the Manchester police court this morning, charged with intoxication and breach of the peace. Muirhead was arrested by Officer Martin and the other two by Officer John McGinn.

In court this morning before Judge Johnson they all pleaded guilty and a fine of $10 and costs was imposed for intoxication and $5 for breach of the peace. Hunt and Brown were unable to pay and were taken to jail. Muirhead settled.

John O'Brien, charged with intoxication, paid a fine of $10 and costs. He was arrested by Officer John McGinn yesterday afternoon. Thomas J. Foley, who belongs in New York state, a road-builder, was before the court on the charge of driving an automobile without a license. He pleaded guilty and a fine of $10 and costs was imposed. Foley had a slight accident on Main street Tuesday night and was placed under arrest by Sergeant John Crockett.

TWO FEATURES TODAY AT STATE THEATER

If you like thrills and hectic love on your screen menu, you will like Paramount's picturization of Laurence Eyre's stage play, "Martini-que" at the State theatre today and tomorrow under the nom de cinema of "Volcano!"

The thrills are provided by the very realistic eruption of Mount La Pelee while the islanders are celebrating their Carnival night. And because of the effects obtained, Director William Howard deserves such medals as the movie manufacturers may give to their prize pupils.

Our love interest is amply taken care of by Bebe Daniels as "the girl," Ricardo Cortez "the boy" and Wallace Beery, as the villain. Miss Daniels is seen as a little French mademoiselle. The second feature is Ken Maynard in "Senior Daredevil." "Senior Daredevil" is the first starring vehicle of Ken Maynard, who, judging by the reception accorded to this picture all over the country, is destined to rise quickly to great popularity. To those who become Maynard's "fans at first blush" it should be said that "Senior Daredevil" is only the first of a series of Maynard pictures to be offered by First National. Next will be "Gun Gospel," a fast moving story by W. D. Howells, after that "Flame of the Border" and "The Unknown Cavalier."

MANCHESTER'S HISTORY NEARING COMPLETION

It is expected that Manchester's new town history will be ready for distribution within the next thirty days. The work of compiling the book has extended over a period of several years. Frank Cheney Jr. and Mathias Spies have received much time and attention to the publication and it is because of this that the history will finally appear. The book will contain some fifty or more illustrations of men who have served Manchester in the past in one way or another and who are not now living.
