

BABY CARRIAGE HOOD PEDDLER GIVEN 4 MONTHS

Lanzano Pleads Guilty to Liquor Charge and Agrees To Take Previous Sen- tence—To Serve 6 Mos.

Rafael Lanzano, Manchester's most persistent bootlegger, was in police court here today for the fourth time charged with violating the liquor law. Lanzano's home at 170 Bissell street was searched Saturday night by Sergeant Crockett, Patrolman McGinn and Roberts.

A careful search of the home disclosed but a lone quart of liquor. It looked as though Lanzano didn't have such a big stock on hand after all. But the owner of the home wasn't there when the search was made. He returned and found the police waiting for him. He was shown the search warrant, and he told the officers to "go to it, and search the house."

In the Carriage
Mrs. Lanzano had left a baby carriage and their infant on the veranda. Leaving the house Sergeant Crockett followed a hunch, and looked in the carriage. The baby was reposing on 9 pint bottles filled with hooch.

In court today Lanzano was represented by Judge W. S. Hyde. A plea of guilty was entered and Judge Johnson imposed a fine of $250 and costs and a jail sentence of 4 months. On a previous sentence which Lanzano appealed to the higher court he must pay $300 and serve 60 days in jail. This means that his total fines with costs amount to $578.44 and he must serve 6 months in jail.

Prosecuting Attorney Hathaway asked for a continuance of the case when it was called, but Judge Hyde said his client was ready to plead guilty and asked that it be heard today. Then Prosecuting Attorney Hathaway made a strong plea for a stiff sentence. He maintained that a stop should be made to this breaking of the law definitely.

Other Cases
Alfred Schatz paid a fine of $10 and costs for driving an automobile without registration. He was stopped by Sergeant Barron, because of the loose way the plates were tied on his car.

Louise Genovese of Rose street was arrested by Supernumerary Patrolman Leeberg for intoxication. He was driving a horse, and the officer said there were no lights on the wagon. Captain Schendel testified that Genovese was intoxicated. He was fined $10 on the intoxication charge and $3 for driving his horse and wagon without proper lights.

Joe Spono appeared in court for driving a car with defective brakes. He nearly ran into a flagman at the Center last night. He paid a fine of $10 and costs.

Assault Case
Benny Jis of North street was arrested upon complaint of his wife, and charged with intoxication and assault. Annie Lis, his daughter was a witness. Patrolman McGinn investigated. Lis denied the assault charge, and it appeared to the court that family trouble was the cause of the arrest. He was found guilty of intoxication and a jail sentence of 20 days, and released on $100 bonds when he gave notice of an appeal.

Eugene James was arrested Saturday night for driving without a license. When he pleaded he didn't have the money to get a license and was waiting until he could, the case was nolle.

Greenwich, Aug. 30.—Mrs. Mildred Young, wife of Judge Samuel Young, of Stamford, was today dropped as member of the Republican State Central Committee at a caucus of the 27th Senatorial District held here. Mrs. Julia M. Emery, of Stamford, was named in her place. Mrs. Young declared later she would carry the matter to the state convention.

START DRIVE TO MAKE SCOTLAND BONE DRY

SMITH AND HUNT NAMED DELEGATES

Republicans of Fourth Sena- torial District Convene in East Hartford this Noon

Glasgow, Aug. 30.—"Beer or no beer" is to be the burning question in two-hundred Scotch burghal areas during the next three months, local prohibitionists having started another drive to make Scotland as dry as the Sahara.

This time the "drys" mean to go about the matter thoroughly. Their offensive has opened with the issuance by local town clerks of requisition forms, which, under Scottish law, must be signed by ten per cent. of the electorate of any ward before a poll can be taken in their area.

At the convention of the Fourth Senatorial district which was held at Wells hall, East Hartford, this noon, Robert J. Smith of Manchester and Henry E. Hunt of Glastonbury were named as delegates at large to the Republican state convention which will be held in Hartford on September 13 and 14.

Those attending the district convention from Manchester included James Raymond A. Johnson, George H. Waddell and Thomas Ferguson. Representatives attended the convention from every town in the district.

Mrs. James J. Grace of Wethersfield, a member of the State Central committee, called the meeting to order. John Havens of East Hartford was elected chairman and George H. Waddell of Manchester, secretary.

Committees Named.
In addition to naming the delegates at large to the state convention, the following committees were named:
Vice President—James T. Pratt, Rocky Hill.
Committee on Permanent Organization—Charles F. Lane, Rocky Hill.

Committee on Credentials—Benjamin B. Merrill, East Hartford.
Committee on Rules—J. H. Maurice, Wethersfield.
Committee on Resolutions—Judge Raymond A. Johnson, Manchester.

Deputy Sheriff Eugene W. House of Glastonbury and Mrs. J. Francis Saunders of East Hartford were elected members of the State Central Committee. Mr. House has served in that capacity the past two years and Mrs. Saunders succeeded Mrs. James J. Grace who declined election because of the condition of her health.

Marines at Bluefields
MAY SQUASH REVOLT
American Forces Again Land
On Nicaragua. To Prevent
Fighting at Port.

Mexico City, Aug. 30.—The landing of American marines at Bluefields, Nicaragua, which was effected yesterday, may mean the collapse of the Nicaraguan revolt, according to a statement made today by the spokesman for the Junta of the revolution here.

The spokesman said the rebel forces had hoped to capture Bluefields and use it as a base for operations against Pres. Chamorro's troops.
The Mexican foreign office apparently intends to ignore the protest sent by President Chamorro of Nicaragua charging Mexico with aiding the rebels.

BROADWAY IS SILENT AS FILM STAR GOES BY

Packed Thousands Watch Funeral Cortège of Valen- tino—Ex-Wife, Fiancee at Bier Together.

New York, Aug. 30.—An impressive, dignified ceremony touched with deepest pathos, was held in New York today, in St. Malachy's Roman Catholic church, just off Broadway—the funeral of Rudolph Valentino.

No similar spectacle in the history of New York City was ever witnessed by a larger crowd than that which silently watched the funeral procession move slowly from Campbell's funeral parlors to the church.

That mile of Broadway was black with people. Traffic came to a dead standstill. It was even impossible to traverse the sidewalks, so dense was the throng, block after block, all the way to the church.

Mounted police, motorcycle men and patrolmen were kept busy holding the people back of roped-off spaces. Crowds thronged elevated stations and other vantage points. Thousands viewed the procession from office buildings. Business came to a complete halt.

Thousands of fans
Although they had been warned repeatedly that they would not be permitted near St. Malachy's, thousands gathered in the vicinity while solemn high requiem mass was sung.

Police reserves were on duty and kept off Forty-ninth street between Sixth and Seventh avenues. Only six hundred persons were permitted to pass these barriers. They were those who carried printed invitations.

Valentino, reported engaged to a girl, was near collapse as the procession moved down Broadway. She arrived at the church at 10:30 o'clock with S. George Ullman.

P. C. KNOX CUT AS WIFE THROWS GLASS

Son of Late Secretary of State Wounded in Family Row, So Police Say.

Washington, Aug. 30.—Philander C. Knox, son of the late secretary of state, was recovering in Casualty hospital today from a severed artery, suffered, according to the police report, in an altercation with his wife, Mrs. Josephine Poole Knox.

According to the police, Mrs. Knox threw a water glass at her husband which struck his wrist and broke, one of the fragments severing the artery. Later the Knoxs denied there had been any marital discord, and said Knox was injured when he fell in the bathroom. His condition is not serious.

SAYS HE SAW MINISTER AND WOMAN SLAIN

Somerville, N. J., Aug. 30.—The mysterious "Mr. A. L.," who is the author of a letter declaring he was an eye-witness to the murders of the Rev. Edward W. Hall and his choir-singer sweetheart, Mrs. Eleanor R. Mills, was expected to tell his story to the authorities today.

"A. L." wrote a letter two weeks ago to Special Prosecutor Alexander Simpson, and since that time, it was said today, detectives have been in close touch with him, and have reason to believe that he has important evidence to offer.

The man's letter, detectives said, stated that he was on the Phillips farm, where the bodies were found, on the night the murders were perpetrated. He said he was with a young woman now married, and the mother of two children, who could corroborate his story. She is now living in a mid-western city, about 1,000 miles from New York, "according to the letter."

Will Be Protected.
Inspector John J. Underwood, in charge of the detectives investigating the murders, said that the man's name was being withheld, should not be given out, unless the individual so desired, but would also be afforded every possible protection.

The completion of a list of sixty names which the September Grand Jury for Somerset county is to be chosen will start today. Simpson plans to present his evidence against Mrs. Frances S. Hall, the slain rector's widow, Henry B. Carpenter, her cousin, and "Willie" Stevens, her brother, to the Grand Jury about September 10.

Two New Witnesses.
The two new witnesses who were questioned yesterday are Charles Jones and his wife, who live in a little vine-covered cottage near Landing's Bridge, about 1,000 feet from the Phillips farm. Their cottage is only about 100 feet from the house occupied by Harry J. McCabe, bridge-tender, who testified in the recent hearing before County Judge Frank L. Cleary in Somerville, N. J., that he and his wife heard screams on the night of the murder and that they seemed to come from the direction of the Phillips farm.

Mrs. Jones said yesterday that she and her husband heard the screams "coming on to midnight" the night of Sept. 14, 1922. This coincides with the time at which McCabe testified he and his wife heard the screams. The screams, according to McCabe and the Joneses, occurred considerably later, however, than the time at which Mrs. Jones heard the "pig woman" and Mrs. Anna Hoag, sitting on the porch of the Green farmhouse, a short distance from the crabapple tree, said they heard four shots.

Only Estimated.
Mrs. Gibson could only estimate the time at which she said she heard a single shot, followed by a woman's scream, another woman's exclamation, "Oh, Henry," and then three more shots. She figured it must have been somewhere around 10 o'clock, Mrs. Hoag, who said she had heard first three shots

MAY INVESTIGATE LANZANO CHARGE

Claims He Was Promised Freedom from Jail By A Hartford Lawyer.

Rafael Lanzano on trial in court here today on charge of violating liquor laws created a sensation when he said that a Hartford attorney had promised to get him out of a jail sentence upon payment of $600.

Lanzano was in court on June 29 and fined $300 and costs and given a jail sentence of 60 days. He appealed. The case was to come before the Superior court in Hartford next week. Lanzano said the reason he appealed the case was that a certain attorney said he could "fix" the jail part of it for $600.

The facts in the case will be placed before State's Attorney Hugh M. Alcorn, and an attempt will be made to disbar the lawyer, if Lanzano's story holds true.

Chicago, Aug. 30.—Two bandits are dead and four other persons were being treated in hospitals for gunshot wounds here today following an unsuccessful attempt to rob a Chicago surface lines car barn of $6,000 in cash receipts.

The bandit party consisted of three men and two girls. The girls were posted as "look-outs" as the men entered the car barn. Street car officials had been tipped off, however, and detectives were posted about the building.

Killed One, Wounded Another.
When the bandits entered, the officers opened fire. One bandit was killed, another wounded and captured, while the third escaped. Three detectives were slightly wounded, as was Robert J. McKinney, superintendent of the barns.

One of the girls was captured, but she refused to give her name, or those of her companions.

Third Man Captured
The third member of the bandit gang was captured by police today in a rooming house. He had been wounded four times. He said he was Ernest ("Red") De Lavergne. He admitted his part in the holdup, police said.

When the arrest of Ernest became known, the girl captured at the scene of the hold-up collapsed and on regaining consciousness said she was Frances Vaughn. The other girl—driver of the car—she identified as Marie Nolan, nineteen.

William Maloney, participant in the hold-up, died shortly after noon today.

De Lavergne's brother Joseph was the man who fell victim of police bullets at the scene.

WON'T YIELD SAILOR TO BRITISH POLICE

GET 10 OF 25 CONVICTS IN PRISON DELIVERY

London, Aug. 30.—The Gravesend police announce that they have abandoned efforts to arrest a Negro sailor of the United States Destroyer Lardner, who is wanted in connection with a brawl in Gravesend.

Captain Peterson of the Lardner has refused to deliver the Negro to the police.

"The refusal ignores the fact that the brawl occurred on land and not on the ship," said the Star, commenting on the case today.

United States withdraw. Trammell voted for the court last January. He says events in Europe this summer have convinced him that it would be unwise for the United States to become a member, and he desires an opportunity to change his vote.

If Shortridge and Lenroot are defeated by their anti-court opponents, and Moses is renominated, the anti-court crowd in the Senate confidently predict it will complete the route of the court, and they will set the stage for a reversal early in the next session, or at the latest in the first session of the seventieth Congress.

Stanfield's Reversal
In Oregon, too, developments are promised. Senator Stanfield, who voted for the court, was defeated there by Frederic P. Steiwar. Political leaders here heard today that Stanfield has about decided to run independently upon a platform in opposition to the court.

This far in the current primaries the political tide has run strongly against those who voted for the court. Every anti-court senator who has faced the polls to date has

PITTSBURGH HAS PLAN TO BE A LAKE PORT

CORSON-EDERLE MATCH IN MAKING

Pittsburgh, Aug. 30.—Pittsburgh seeks a waterway to the Great Lakes. A concentrated movement is being formulated to build a $750,000,000 canal from the headwaters of the Ohio River to Lake Erie.

Mindful that two great natural waterways, the Monongahela and Allegheny Rivers, flowing into a third, the Ohio, have brought to Pittsburgh the great bulk of Western Pennsylvania's raw products of iron and coal, Pittsburgh capitalists are taking steps to exploit a fourth waterway which would make the city a virtual Lake port.

New York, Aug. 30.—A naval as well as a civil welcome to Mrs. Clemington Corson, channel swimmer, and a match race around Manhattan Island between Mrs. Corson and Miss Gertrude Ederle, first woman to achieve this feat, were in the making today. Secretary of the Navy Wilbur will be asked for permission to have some of the warships stationed here to steam down the bay and give Mrs. Corson a naval salute on her return to this country. She is swimming instructor of the Naval Militia here and her husband is an enlisted man.

Up to Trudy.
The Ederle-Corson race now is strictly up to Trudy, according to Arch Selwyn, theatrical producer, who has taken charge of Mrs. Corson's professional engagements. He said Trudy and her manager, Dudley Field Malone, had insisted on a formal offer and that he was advising Mr. Malone that Walter Lisberger, financial backer of Mrs. Corson, had posted $25,000 as a purse for the race.

Mr. Malone appeared to be anxious to have the offer in writing and he said he would do so.

He added that Mrs. Corson had cabled him an acceptance of the Ederle match race and also expressed willingness to compete for the $25,000 purse offered by William Wrigley, Jr., for the proposed swim to Catalina Island.

Malone Sarcastic.
Dudley Field Malone, Miss Ederle's manager, stated that no details had been made regarding the challenge of Walter Lisberger, for a match swim between Trudy and Mrs. Corson around Manhattan Island.

"Miss Ederle and her friends yield to no one in their admiration of the splendid achievement made by Mrs. Corson," said Malone, "but it would be unfortunate if the ill-advised friends or representatives of Mrs. Corson attempted to raise an unfair discussion as to whether Miss Ederle was aided by her accompanying tug. The American public resented this insinuation from British critics, and they would be no more pleased with it if it came from home sources."

"It is not necessary for Miss Ederle to swim around Manhattan Island with anybody to prove that she is the champion of the world. Her established record proves that."

"Mrs. Corson was aided by good luck," Malone said.

EDERLE RECORD BADLY WRECKED BY VERKOETTEN

German Swimmer, Lucky in Tide, Swims Channel in Almost Two Hours Less Than American Girl.

Dover, Eng., Aug. 30.—Ernest Verkoetten, German swimmer, today was added to the small group of those who have been able to swim the English channel.

Verkoetten landed at Dover at 2:10 this afternoon and thereby set a new record for speed in swimming the channel, breaking the record set by Gertrude Ederle.

Verkoetten started from Cape Gris Nez at 1:35 this morning and accomplished the swim in twelve hours and thirty-five minutes, which is the fastest time ever made in a channel swim. Gertrude Ederle having held the previous record of fourteen hours and thirty-two minutes.

Had a Tug.
The German swimmer made his landing at Langdon Stairs, a mile and a half north of Dover.

Verkoetten was accompanied on the swim by a tug. Heavy mists off the English coast during the morning made it questionable whether Verkoetten would be able to make the shore and his landing at Langdon Stairs was something of a surprise.

The German swimmer had the advantage of the flood tides, which Mrs. Corson barely missed when she made her swim on Saturday and this aided him materially in setting up a new record for time.

Until Verkoetten made his remarkable swim today, the fastest time ever made by a male swimmer across the channel was that of Tira Boschi, the Argentinian, who negotiated the channel in 16 hours and 33 minutes. This record was beaten by Gertrude Ederle a nd again by Mrs. Clemington Corson, but the record created by Verkoetten has a considerable time.

The German swimmer, it is estimated, covered well over two miles an hour, in his swim from France to Dover. He was favored by excellent weather conditions with the exception of a heavy mist.

Approach Unhindered
Immediately after he had landed Verkoetten, who was not greeted by as large a crowd as would have gathered had his approach been heralded, boarded the boat which accompanied Mrs. Corson's swim and returned to Cape Gris Nez.

The German swimmer came ashore beneath steep and dangerous cliffs, upon which is situated a battery of the royal artillery.

Collapses on Shore.
Thirty soldiers lowered themselves down the cliff with a rope and on the beach when the swimmer staggered ashore.

As soon as he reached dry land Verkoetten collapsed and the soldiers had to work over him for some minutes before he was restored to consciousness. He reached consciousness, he asked in German: "Where am I?" "Dover, England," replied a soldier. "Hoch! Hoch!" responded Verkoetten and then, thanking the soldiers in German, he waded back to a small boat and boarded his tug for the return to Cape Gris Nez.

Trudy Sends Challenge.
New York, Aug. 30.—Gertrude Ederle today cabled Hans Verkoetten, German swimmer who established a new channel record, by swimming across the treacherous water in twelve hours and thirty-five minutes, expressing the hope that he would race her from Cape Gris Nez to Dover next summer.

"Congratulations on your great swim," Trudy said in her message. "I hope that we can race across the channel next summer, so that I may have an opportunity to bring the record back to my sex and my country."

Predicted Burgess.
Cape Gris Nez, Aug. 30.—News of the success of Ernest Verkoetten in swimming the English channel today, caused no surprise in the camps of the channel swimmers here.

Conditions were perfect for Verkoetten's swim and it was pointed out that T. W. Burgess, the veteran trainer, had predicted that it would be easily possible to break Miss Ederle's record under perfect conditions.

CANTON DEATH CAR
Canton, O., Aug. 30.—A man whom officials declared is known to have driven the "death car" that carried the assassins of Don R. ARRLINGTON RITES FOR
COMMANDER RODGERS
Washington, Aug. 30.—Aviators who helped him develop the Navy air corps were named today as honorary pall-bearers for the funeral of Commander John Rodgers, fatally injured in an airplane crash near Philadelphia.

Following services this afternoon at the ancestral home of Havre de Grace, Md., the body will be brought to the receiving vault at Arlington national cemetery here. A military funeral will be held at 3 o'clock tomorrow afternoon. The pall-bearers are: Commander H. C. Rickardson, Captain George C. Westervelt, Commander Kenneth Whiting, Capt. F. V. McNeil, Capt. S. M. Robinson, and Commander M. K. Metcalf.

One Michigan Fugitive Shot
After He Opens Fire on Police Officer.
Lima, Mich., Aug. 30.—The state-wide manhunt for escaped inmates of the Ionia state reformatory today had resulted in the capture of ten of the men, one of whom was shot three times in a gun battle with town police at Albion last night. Fifteen of the convicts are still at large.

Late yesterday a citizen of Albion notified police that two suspicious characters were loitering about an Albion hotel. Patrolmen Walter Delicke and Robert Parrise found the pair in the street adjacent to the hotel.

Without a word, one of the men, identified as Fred Osberghaus, one of the escaped convicts, whirled and opened fire. Delicke returned the fire and the convict dropped. He was shot in both legs and the right hand.

Fred Paquin, Osberghaus' companion, was captured in the outskirts of the town. Russell Andrews, of Detroit, said to have been a ringleader in the jail delivery plot, also was captured at Albion Sunday morning after holding up a motorist near Kalamazoo, and taking his car and trousers. He offered no resistance.

Meantime W. H. Porter of the state prison commission is conducting an investigation of the plot.

Coming Primaries Regarded
As Test of Court Adherence
Washington, Aug. 30.—Whether the United States ultimately becomes a member of the World Court probably will be decided within the next ten days, and the decision rests not so much with Geneva, where the powers are now gathering to discuss the Senate reservations as with American voters in the widely scattered sections of the country.

In three of the states that hold senatorial primaries this week and next: the court has become a paramount issue. These states are California, Wisconsin and New Hampshire, affording an index to electoral thought in the far west, the central west and New England.

World Help Aids
If the court suffers reverses in these primaries, as it already has in Pennsylvania, Illinois, Oregon and Iowa, tremendous impetus will be given the movement to revive the question of American adherence when the Senate meets in December and secure a reversal of the action voted last January.

Senator Park Trammell, (D., Fla.), already has announced he will sponsor a resolution at the opening of the Senate to have the

ANOTHER WOMAN IN TRUDY'S SPOTLIGHT

N. Y.'s Ardor for Ederle Damperns As Mother of Two Makes Big Swim.

New York, Aug. 30.—Having feted one lady channel swimmer until she took to her bed exhausted New York "came to" this morning feeling not unlike the gent who attempted to tell a Siamese twin that she was the most beautiful woman in the world. He was trying to make a choice between a carbon copy and the original, and if a man can't do that, neither can he reach an honest decision on two lady channel swimmers. New York has two lady channel swimmers today and it is feeling just a little bit fatuous about that extra-ordinary celebration it staged under the erroneous impression that Gertrude Ederle, the only lady channel swimmer at that moment would continue to be the only lady channel swimmer until the end of time.

Who's Next? Mrs. Clemington Corson of New York, swam the turbulent stretch of sea between France and England in a manner that indicated she could give Trudy an excellent debate, a la aqua-marine, had they attempted to swim together.

The same question is asked in barber shops and swimming circles today:—Who's next?

Beyond any argument, a lot of the punch departed with all due haste from the Ederle home-coming fete when announcement of Mrs. Corson's successful effort became public property. One simply can't continue shouting oneself voiceless over two Mt. Blancs.

The second might not altogether spoil the effect of the first but it would do it practically no good.

On Friday, Trudy was a woman apart, the only one of her kind in the world. On Saturday, she had company.

Will a rival cut into the vast earnings that are being claimed for her? Trudy captured the popular fancy because she is young and feminine. But Mrs. Corson is feminine too, and the mother of two small children. That looks like an excellent human interest angle to me.

Practically Unaided

Another is the fact that this mother made the attempt almost alone and unaided—no tugs, no jazz music, no famous trainers and conditions. She was followed by a motor boat merely as a bearer of nourishment and a precaution against drowning. And, at the finish, she was caught in the turn of the tide and swam the last quarter mile into what probably was a mill-race.

It seems to me that such a woman must have great public appeal. Will she go big in vaudeville? Trudy is supposed to have an offer of $125,000 for twenty weeks. Will Mrs. Corson get a similar offer? And, if so, is there room at that price for two lady channel swimmers? It would seem that one simply must cut down the earnings of the other in the various avenues of revenue that are being opened.

Maybe a Third

Of course, Trudy must remain the bigger public figure, being the original lady swimmer and the world's record holder, at that. But how can we say we won't have a third before we know it? Clarabelle Barrett, an unknown New York girl was in the channel over twenty hours and experts declare she would have conquered it if the fog hadn't become so thick. Does it seem possible that Clarabelle might yet succeed?

In that case, New York would refuse ever again to become excited about a lady channel swimmer. Its greeting to Trudy was so enthusiastic and prolonged that today on the advice of a physician, she is enjoying comparative privacy for the first time since she landed. The chances are she would have it, anyhow. The town has another lady channel swimmer to talk about now.

GRIFFIN, LOCAL BUILDER, IN BANKRUPTCY COURT

New Haven, Aug. 30.—John J. Griffin, a Manchester building contractor, today filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy in the United States District Court here with liabilities of $11,872 and assets of $8,933. His liabilities are all unsecured.

FIRE IN SOUTH END

Fire which started from a clothes closet upstairs in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Orfitelli of 21 Warren street at 10 o'clock yesterday morning, caused but slight damage. Hose and ladder companies No. 3 and 4 answered the alarm and extinguished the blaze by means of chemicals. Water was not needed.

It is not known how the fire started. Mrs. Orfitelli and her children were home at the time, her husband being out at work. A neighbor turned in the alarm from Lewis and South Main streets. The damage will probably not exceed $5, Chief Albert Foy said.

IN NEW YORK

New York, Aug. 30.—Scattered notes from a ramble about Manhattan:

The coffee houses of Roosevelt street. . . Jammed now with the sailors in port from Latin lands. . . Mostly Spanish. . . They cluster about the long broad tables, talking in low tones. . . There is a brooding something about these seamen. . . Nothing of the friendliness, gaiety or sparkle one might expect from men just in from a long cruise. . . They seldom wander more than a block or two from the neighborhood.

One who has been away for an entire year comes in. . . He does not greet his fellows cordially, nor is he greeted. . . He sinks into a chair as though this were an old custom. . . Quietly he begins to sip his black coffee. . . Soon he will be away again. . . Another year of the quiet of the sea and then a few days ashore to sip at a long broad table. . . One feels the quiet brooding of the waters.

A waiter at one of the coffee shops tells me that no visitor ever sees less of New York than these sailors. . . "You see," he began, "they come from small seacoast towns in Europe. The center of things there is a tavern or a place like this. They become afraid of life and know the sea is a quiet and they are alone a lot. One fellow told me he was afraid of automobiles and street cars and subways. He wasn't quite sure what a subway was, and he wasn't going to find out. The tall buildings frighten him too."

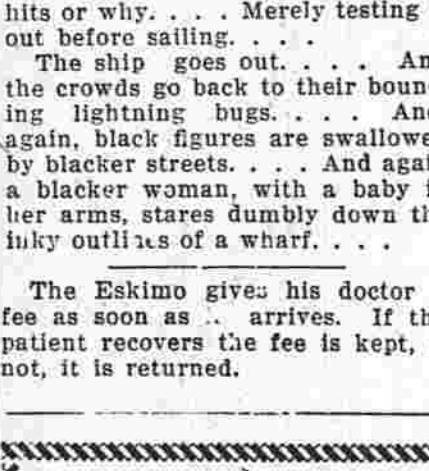

And so they sit, near the edge of the water-front. . . Sipping black coffee, hour upon hour. . . Talking almost in whispers. . . Men whose courage has faded every sea hazard, but who fear to so much as look upon life.

And, again, this waterfront belt at night. . . Black figures darting into blacker streets and being swallowed. . . The blinking lights of beach counters. . . Sweating stevedores, shirtless, scuttling in and out ordering "pie and—". . . Mobs returning from river excursions. . . And looking blankly about for means of conveyance. . . Biase taxi-drivers pairing up the best prospects. . . Sailors walking in lonesome pairs.

Haunting some wharf-shadowed ship. . . A woman with a baby in her arms peering through the black of a dock. . . Her man hasn't been home for three days. . . He was working on that pier. . . A little tragedy of the night. . . Did he tire of endless going homes and getting up? . . . Or just a sporadic spree. . . "He'll be home when he sobers up," a policeman assures her, smiling. . . She does not move. . . Just stands dumbly staring.

Stylian plumes from the smoke-stack of a great liner preparing to put to sea. . . The electric bulbs on the pier wink like the lights of a festa. . . Carnival reigns just next door to the furtive mysteries of murky midnight. . . As midnight nears the cobblestones bounce with taxicabs that look like many overgrown lightning bugs. . . Laughter and shouting. . . Snatches of song. . . Bustle of baggage and grunting of wharfhands. . . Kissing and waving and calling. . . A great searchlight feels its way down the midnight-black streets, searing up startled figures as a hunter scares deers at night. . . The man at the searchlight trains it here and there, without thought of where it hits or why. . . Merely testing it out before sailing. . . And the crowds go back to their bouncing lightning bugs. . . And, again, black figures are swallowed by blacker streets. . . And again a blacker woman, with a baby in her arms, stares dumbly down the lily outlaws of a wharf.

LEAGUE OF NATIONS NEARS A NEW CRISIS

Problem of German Entry to Be Attacked at Meeting That Opens Today.

Geneva, Aug. 30.—The League of Nations today enters another period of crisis. The committee on organization of the council meets today to attempt to solve the knotty problem of giving Germany a permanent seat in the council, without giving permanent seats to Spain and Poland.

Proposals for non-permanent seats to Spain and Poland, which are automatically renewed for a period of five years, will probably be made, but whether they will satisfy those countries remains to be seen.

Unless the question of re-organization of the council is satisfactorily worked out it is possible that Germany's entrance to the League may again have to be deferred or either Spain or Poland or both may withdraw from the League.

U. S. Case Wednesday. On Wednesday the question of the United States' entry into the World Court with reservations will be taken up by a conference of thirty-four of the signatory powers to the World Court. The prospects are that the United States' reservations will be either rejected flatly or a request will be made for changes in them.

The situation is more or less electric here and with the arrival of the major delegates tomorrow it is anticipated that events will move rapidly towards a climax next week.

Briand Optimistic.

Paris, Aug. 30.—"I am leaving for Geneva tomorrow with the greatest optimism," said Foreign Minister Briand today. "The skies are cloudy but I am confident the sun will come through. The greatest difficulty is regarding Germany's admission to the League, and this has been virtually settled. I am leaving Paris with no fears whatever regarding the League's future."

The optimism of M. Briand is not reflected in other quarters, for there is the knotty problem of the mandate over Tangier. Spain demands such a mandate and threatens to raise issues in the League, which might bar Germany's entrance. France is unalterably opposed to granting the mandate.

ARMY PRISONER KILLED IN ATTEMPT TO ESCAPE

Washington, Aug. 30.—Benjamin Cowen, an army private, was shot and killed while attempting to escape from the military guard at Fort Meyer. He was under arrest and facing a charge of desertion. The guard who fired the shot, John W. Taylor, is under technical arrest but probably will be released. Taylor was guarding Cowen and another prisoner, Robert S. Ritchie, when they set upon him and attempted to escape. After he had been knocked down and pummeled, Taylor drew his gun and fired.

ROOMING HOUSE KEEPER MURDERED AT PASSAIC

Passaic, N. J., Aug. 30.—Mrs. Ollie Brown, owner and operator of a rooming house, was found murdered in bed today. Police said the robbery was apparently the motive. More than $200 which the woman had as missing. Roomers in the house said Mrs. Brown was formerly Miss Ollie Moye of Georgia.

RIN-TIN-TIN AT STATE LAST TIMES TONIGHT

"Mismates", A Mighty Heart Drama, Starring Doris Kenyon, Showing Tuesday and Wednesday.

Rin-Tin-Tin, the greatest of all movie dogs, is the greatest ever in his latest picture "A Hero of the Big Snows" which will be shown for the last time at the State tonight. Rin-Tin-Tin is everybody's favorite. He is almost human in his playing on the screen, and has won a great movie audience all over the United States. In "A Hero of the Big Snows" he seems even more human than in any of his pictures he has yet made.

In this picture Rin-Tin is a great friend to a shiftless man of the north country. He "reforms" the man, saves a child's life twice, and makes happiness all around. He does all this at a great danger to himself, for he is mistaken in his efforts by both his friends and enemies.

"A Hero of the Big Snows" is a gripping and thrilling drama all the way through, and is certainly one of the best pictures of the current season. It will be shown for the last two times at the State tonight.

The picture for Tuesday and Wednesday is "Mismates", a picture with a kick, a heart throb, a laugh, and a tear. It is a picture that will tug at your heartstrings, tickle your ribs, and then make you gasp. In short, it is just about everything that a picture should be.

In this latest First National masterpiece, Dorothy Kenyon, who scaled to such great heights in "The Hal, Way Girl", attains even greater honors in her latest picture. Miss Kenyon is ably supported by Warner Baxter. Others in the cast are the inimitable comedian, Charlie Murray, Philo McCullough, the villain who makes you want to shoot him on sight, pretty Mae Allison, Nancy Kelley, the wonder child, John Kolb, Cyril Ring, Maude Turner Gordon and several others.

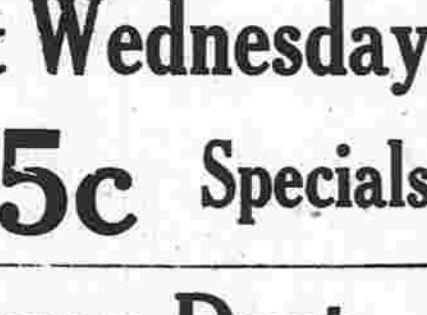

It is an excellent production, should please everyone, and will be shown at the State on Tuesday and Wednesday, during the matinee and twice each evening, as usual. Remember—the Kiddie Revue will be presented at the State on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week. Do not fail to see it. There is one grand surprise in store for you. You can not begin to imagine what Manchester's kids can do in the way of theatrics.

This revue has been arranged under the personal supervision of Jack Sanson. Special scenic special stage sets, special lighting effects, and a big jazz orchestra are all on the menu. It will be presented at no advance in prices. The regular picture prices will prevail.

BAKER WOULD CALL OFF WAR'S DEBTS

Former Secretary of War Proposes Cancellation as Part of Wisdom.

Washington, Aug. 30.—An international conference in which the United States would participate in the reconsideration of all questions pertaining to interrelated debts, including the British settlement and America's terms to France, was proposed in a statement made public today by Newton D. Baker, wartime Secretary of War in the Cabinet of Woodrow Wilson.

Declaring the United States cannot "sow seeds of international distrust, ill-will and selfishness" and expect a "harvest of friendship and eager trade," Mr. Baker came out frankly and unequivocally for a mutual cancellation of these debts and expressed the conviction that the American policy should be one of cancellation.

Believes It Wise. "Personally," said Mr. Baker, "I believe that a cancellation policy will be wise. Such a policy ought to relieve England, France, Italy, Belgium and the rest of our allies and in turn ought to require the release of some part of the burden imposed upon Germany."

This ought to be done, said the former war secretary, who was in a position in the Wilson Administration to obtain an intimate personal knowledge of many facts involved in the debt situation, "at a round table," where a representative of the United States "should be authority and to demonstrate to the rest of the world that America's interest is not in dollars but in a reconstructed international order with as much as possible of the grief of the World War swept into oblivion" and the great industrial nations of the world freed to "start afresh with harmony and good-will in fair economic competition."

Will Attract Notice.

Mr. Baker's statement is certain to attract international attention, not only because of his confidential relation with President Wilson, but as the judgment of a man now outside of politics.

Mr. Baker is the first Cabinet official of any prominence in any administration since the entry of the United States into the World War to declare outright for the cancellation of debts to America on the basis of mutuality of action by all the allied powers respecting inter-related obligations growing out of that conflict.

Clemenceau To Follow Up

Paris, Aug. 30.—M. Clemenceau chucked to himself and prepares for another attack on the American debt settlement. "The Tiger" declares, that he may indict another open letter to President Coolidge on the matter. "I hope I have made ratification of the American debt settlement forever impossible," he told friends who visited him at his seaside home in Vendee.

"I am glad that I wrote to President Coolidge," he said with a chuckle. "It was my first letter to him and it may not be my last. I have more to say and it is good to keep your weapons warm."

TURNING POINT TODAY IN BRITISH COAL WAR

London, Aug. 30.—A turning point in the British coal dispute was confidently expected today. Leaders of the striking miners were prepared to enter into negotiations of wages although still holding out for the seven-hour day. Parliament, in the meantime, entered a special session at 2:45 this afternoon to confirm the emergency regulations which will enable the mines to continue operations under the old conditions, for another month.

FIVE KILLED IN WRECK ON ARGENTINE RAILROAD

Buenos Ayres, Aug. 30.—Five persons were killed and twenty-three injured today in a wreck on the Central Argentine railroad. The wreck occurred on a suburban line which serves many American and English residents, but none of the victims of the wreck were Americans.

2 SHOT, ONE DEAD IN HAMDEN RAID

New Haven County Coroner Probing Death of Patron Of Gambling Place.

New Haven, Aug. 30.—Coroner Ell Mix today began behind closed doors an effort to discover who, on Saturday night, fired a shot that cost the life of Frank Whitman, 55, a Hamden resident.

State and local police conducted a raid on the home of James O'Connell, Hamden, and arrested a dozen men charged with gambling. Whitman, supposed to have been in the house, was found lying in the gutter some distance away after the raid, with a bullet wound in his right leg and weak from loss of blood. He died in a hospital yesterday.

Not Badly Injured

Michael Juliano, who lives near the O'Connell home was also found wounded in the leg and is in a hospital here not seriously hurt. Juliano, who was near the O'Connell home at the time of the raid, says he does not know who shot him.

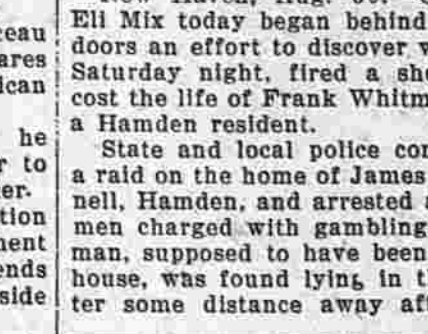

Surgeons at Grace hospital where Whitman was taken extracted a bullet from his leg and this has been turned over to the coroner for examination. The prisoners taken in the raid will be given a hearing in Hamden town court tomorrow night.

SHRIEVELY

The Herald finds it impossible to become enthusiastic in support of the candidacy for re-nomination of High Sheriff Edward Dewey of Hartford County.

This is not because Sheriff Dewey has not discharged the duties of his office faithfully enough, for he has. It is not, even, because of certain temperamental characteristics of the sheriff which sometimes make him difficult to deal with on the part of less highly placed officials whose business brings them in contact with him, for most folks have their little peculiarities. It is not because he does not measure up to the requirements of the job intellectually or morally, for there is no fault to be found on that score. It is for other reasons.

Mr. Dewey has been high sheriff of Hartford County a long time. He came into office in early middle life. He has served until he is no longer as young as, conceivably, a high sheriff might well be. And for more than a year he has permitted it to be understood that he would not again be a candidate. Even if there is not on record any particular occasion on which the sheriff specifically renounced a further candidacy, it has been well understood for a long time that such was his attitude.

In these circumstances, the aspiration of Eugene W. House of Glastonbury to become Mr. Dewey's successor was timely and justifiable. Mr. House is at least as well qualified for the shrievalty as another. He enjoys wide acquaintance in the county, is an exemplary citizen and a man of consequence and responsibility in the community. It goes without saying that there is no requirement of the sheriff's office that he would not meet. He is, moreover, diplomatic and adaptable, as a high sheriff, dealing with many people, within reasonable limits should be, and as House has proven himself to be in his political experience as a leader in the Fourth Senatorial district.

Mr. House's aspiration met the views of a great many Hartford County republicans. It became recognized that he was the strongest bidder in sight for the nomination. Into this situation, at the eleventh hour, entered the determination of Sheriff Dewey to hold on, after all, to his office if he could. It is this newspaper's belief that the determination is belated—sufficiently so to make the present sheriff, not the Glastonbury man, the intruder if intruder either be.

On the score of age, of all-around compatibility, of service to the Republican party, we believe Mr. House to be at least as excellent a candidate as the present incumbent. And on the score of priority in the present campaign, it is our opinion that he is more entitled to the nomination than is Sheriff Dewey.

SMITH "USED CAR"

Republicans can afford to view with complacency the processes by which the 1924 model Al Smith machine is being tinkered into "running order" for competition in the 1928 presidential race. Jimmy Walker went to Bridgeport yesterday and signed up the Democratic organization of that turbulent political center as one nut in the machine. The New York mayor was assured by former Mayor W. E. Thomas of Waterbury that Connecticut's 14 votes in the next Democratic national cyclone would be for "Al" first, last and all the time.

Because there are so many of these nuts to be fitted, and bolts found for them to fit, and because there are so many cracks in shafts and so many stripped gears and so many leaks in the gas line and so many parts bent or broken, the Smith tinkers are starting in early in hopes of being able to get the old bus up to the scratch line two years hence—and they undoubtedly intend to sit up nights at the job for the entire two years.

Good luck to them. For if there has been one political curse in this country for a long lifetime it has been the existence of the "solid South"—an unscientific, uneconomic, unreasonable solidarity of a section. And if Al Smith becomes the candidate of the Democratic party for President in 1928, that will be the end of a solid South in this country forever and a day.

No longer step could possibly be taken in the United States, in progress toward political good health, than the destruction of this sectional unity. Until it is destroyed party principles will never be quite as honest and as admirable as they should be. The smashing of the solid South will clear the ground for the building of better politics—politics in the best sense.

Let it be sincerely hoped, then, that the Smith used car not only gets into the Democratic convention race but wins it.

It will put at least four and probably six southern states in the Republican column.

RAILROADS

It is less than six months since the people of the United States were being daily bombarded with propaganda setting forth the plight of the railroads. They had been practically ruined by government control during the war and had been prevented from rehabilitating themselves, ever since, by cruel rate fixing which made it impossible for them to pay wages, buy equipment and meet interest on their investments.

If any individual in this country had been granted the concession of cashing in, at waste paper prices, on all the thousands of tons of newspaper and magazine print devoted to those arguments, he could have built a row of houses from the proceeds.

Within the past two weeks railroad shares have come to be the strongest issues in stock market dealings. While the industrial stocks have been doing somersaults the rails have been manifesting a genuine forward tendency that has shown them to be regarded as genuinely desirable investments, not by the outside public so much as by the insiders who have been dumping the industrials on the public at inflated values.

It is several months since the bombardment of propaganda for "railroad relief" died down into practical silence. Yet there has been no government action, no congressional rescue.

Why, then, was all the howling? Even heroes are human. There is a jolly row on between Capt. Rene Fonck and Capt. Homer Berry in relation to whether Berry is or is not to be one of the pilots of the forthcoming—if any—flight from New York to Paris.

Captain Berry says that he, as well as Captain Fonck and Lieutenant Allan P. Snoddy, is to share in the glories and perils of the great adventure. Captain Fonck says that Captain Berry isn't going to be in the flight at all. Fonck and Snoddy will be the pilots, there will be a radio operator and a mechanic—and nobody else at all whatsoever. He says Berry has tried to force his hand by getting himself included in the personnel of the undertaking by telling the newspapers he was to be the third man.

Captain Berry says he'd like to see them pull off the affair without him—he'd just like to—when he it was who interested the capital and made the voyage a possibility. "Pooh-pooh!" says Fonck; and so does Snoddy.

Yet these are men who have proved over and over again that they are the biggest kind of fellows—valorous, imaginative, vast of vision. And they squabble like little kids over a frozen lollypop.

THE CORSON VICTORY.

The channel swimming feat of Mrs. Corson will not, of course, receive the same kind of recognition in her homeland or in her home town as was extended to Trudy Ederle on her return to New York last Friday, for you can't stage such demonstrations to order, nor can they be played as repeaters. But there is one factor in the Corson achievement which may be just as important, in a sporting sense, as the whirlwind welcome of the big town to its natorial pet. Mrs. Corson swam the channel without the lee of a tug to help her—or to be accused of helping her—and she turned the trick in contest with a crack English swimmer—and a man at that.

Mrs. Corson's feat establishes beyond the remotest chance of a quibble that an American woman holds the channel honors, even though there should still be some disgruntled individuals to claim that the Ederle swim was not a fair test.

Stewart's WASHINGTON LETTERS

BY CHARLES P. STEWART Washington, Aug. 30.—President Coolidge will have a very turbulent 70th Congress on his hands if the Democratic party makes a creditable showing in the November elections.

Just now the Democratic leaders think they stand a good fighting presidential chance for 1928. Badly beaten again in November, their hopes for 1928 will fade. They won't be much of an "opposition." They may do some shadow boxing, but there'll be little emphasis behind their punches.

But let them get a reasonable amount of November encouragement and they'll be truly blood-thirsty.

A creditable Democratic showing in November means control, between Democrats and insurgent Republicans, of the Senate at least. The House of Representatives doesn't matter so much. The Democrats must gain some seats there in order to show that they're on the up grade, but to expect them to produce an actual majority is asking a good deal at the present stage of the game.

In the Senate, however, so few votes will shift the balance that the Democratic-insurgent combination can hardly gain anything at all without shifting it.

A good many Democrats are not particularly enthusiastic about controlling both houses in the 70th Congress.

It would tie the president's hands, certainly, but that's just it—he'd be in a position to say they were tied. But if he has a Republican House of Representatives, and a Senate which, but for the insurgency in his own ranks, would be Republican—why, that would be ideal, from the Democratic standpoint.

It would tie his hands just as tightly as they'd be tied in the other case, and yet he couldn't very well make any excuses.

A Senate of one political complexion and a House of Representatives of the opposite complexion naturally wouldn't get along well together.

The Democrats in Congress wouldn't be able to accomplish anything constructive, to be sure, but that wouldn't matter to them. They'd simply say, "How can we do anything, with a divided Congress and a Republican president?" It would be clear enough that they couldn't.

On the other hand, let the president say, "How can I do anything with the Senate against me?" and back come the answer: "It wouldn't be against you if it weren't for those insurgents. Can't you keep order in your own party?"

Besides, Congress is a large body. Very few people keep track of what individual senators and representatives are doing.

But they know it if a presidential administration is placed in a more ridiculous than an abortive administration. It's what the Democrats are praying that the last half of President Coolidge's may be.

Of course the Democrats' November election showing may not be creditable. Or it may be creditable, and then they may spoil their chances by falling, as they did at the last session of Congress, to look up with the insurgent Republicans.

But it will be a lively two years, if they have good luck in November and then play their cards right.

POT OF GOLD OFTEN HOLE-IN-GROUND

There's Money in Them But Not for the Investor Who "Falls for a Smooth Line."

(This is the twenty-sixth article in a series prepared for The Herald by the Manchester Chamber of Commerce.)

Oil wells, gold mines, silver mines, copper mines, emerald mines—all of which never existed. Such a business! Gold, silver and precious stones still continue to exert their accustomed influence on the imagination of the general public and likewise on their purses.

There are certain combinations of gems and precious metals which are perfectly legitimate and highly desirable, as for instance, in the form of an engagement ring of gold or platinum set with an attractive, smooth-cut diamond or emerald.

Great Promises. When, however, one allows their imagination to get out of hand and invests in some hole-in-the-ground which a well-dressed, smooth-tongued individual assures them is about to yield fabulous returns, then they have invested in nothing at all but hot-air and future regrets.

To be sure there is money in these wild-cat holes-in-the-ground. To quote the words of one investor, "I know there's money in that mine, I put it in myself." The trouble is, the promoters won't leave it there.

The sale of mining stock is a highly specialized industry requiring certain settings, stage properties, and atmosphere, not necessary in the sale of other stocks.

One of the most persistent promoters of mining stock sales organizations is one George Graham Rice. Rice has operated under several different names and has been active in numberless shady financial and stock selling transactions.

By the aid of his tipster sheet, "The Wall Street Iconoclast," he has successfully boosted the stock of such properties as the Idaho Copper Corporation, General Mines Corporation, Columbia Emerald Development Corporation, the Union Gold and Silver Mines, Fortune Consolidated Mining Co., and so forth and so on.

By the means of manipulations of stock, fictitious sales and other methods, by Rice and his confederates, fictitious values have been created at the expense of the gullible and greedy investors.

Rice has served several prison sentences in connection with bucket shop activities, using the mails to defraud, obtaining money under false pretenses, grand larceny, etc.

Some Articles. "Facts and Fakes of Wall Street" and the "Financial Criterion" are two other publications used by Rice and William L. Jarvis, one-time running mate in the promotion of their numerous schemes.

The thing that is hard to understand is that there should be a sufficiently large number of people with enough intelligence and money to follow the stock market, who will accept tips in such publications as the "Wall Street Iconoclast," the "Financial Criterion" and others known to emanate from interested sources and written by men who are known to be actively engaged in buying and selling for their own personal profit.

The sums of money handled by Rice and others of this kind are, however, the only proof one needs of the fact that a goodly crop of suckers is still ready to bite at any sort of bait.

The Great Del Norte Mining Company is another recent mining promotion which has been enjoined in the State of New York. The injunction was issued on the ground of fraudulent practices and the following paragraph from the Boston Better Business Bureau Bulletin sheds an interesting light on the so-called "wash" sales method employed to boost the price of stock for the purpose of creating a demand and unloading on the public.

"This is a typical instance of a class of fraud that is being worked on the citizens of this state by means of 'washing' sales on the Boston Curb. Practically worthless stocks are listed on that exchange at fictitious prices. Sales are then washed between curb brokers in large amounts at rising prices. A feverish demand for the stocks is created and the public is lured into the market. The promoters unload at the high prices.

"In one swindle, that of the Home Deposit Company, fifteen or twenty corporations were openly solicited to list their stock on the Boston Curb for this purpose.

"The treasurer of the Great Del Norte Company made no secret of his concern having engaged in the practice. Claims were made for the Great Del Norte that the purchase of its stocks and bonds was a safe investment for widows and conservative investors. They could not lose on the bonds. It was urged, as they were insured. We found that the company has paid only $4,000 on its premium of $28,000, and could not turn over the policy to the bond trustees. There was no security whatever. They weren't shipping ore; they had no mine—only a lease and bond."

Butte Copper. Dutte Copper and Zinc Mining Company is still another stock which has engaged a wide field as evidenced by the fact that there is reported to be 3,500,000 shares outstanding at the present time.

A recent report on the company was that their offices in Detroit, Michigan, were closed in June and

DAILY POEM

LIL CARPENTER I guess our little son will be a carpenter some day. At least the way he's acting makes it look that way. We never fret 'bout where he is. We always know he's round, 'cause even when he can't be seen, we plainly hear him pound. Yep, pop bought him a hammer and a saw for birthday gifts, and every morning to the cellarway he always drags his hammer. We've heard the saw saw busin', and the sound of driving nails. Whatever he runs into is the thing he assails. He's split the ironing board in two, and smashed the furnace door. There used to be a shelf downstairs. There isn't any more. He's found a window squeakin'; never shuttin' it as it should, so sonny got his hammer out—and now it's shut for good. There's nothing he won't tackle, when a hammer can be used. He simply starts in bangin' and he never sets himself confused. He may turn out a carpenter as both of us expect, and if he does, just call him—if you want your whole house wrecked.

CONN. HERO CITED AS DEAD, LIVING

Lieut. Drew of Mt. Carmel, Vanquisher of 3 Planes in Fight, Gets Recognition.

Washington, Aug. 30.—A citation awarding the distinguished service cross to First Lieutenant Charles W. Drew of the 13th Aero Squadron, Air Service, which was published in general orders of the Department of War in 1919 as having been a "posthumous" award, has been corrected by the Department because it has been discovered that Lieutenant Drew still is alive.

The original citation declared Lieutenant Drew had been awarded the cross because of "extraordinary heroism in action" in France, and although not in that particular engagement had "been killed in action."

Leaves Out Death. The corrected citation sets forth the action of heroism, but leaves out reference to his death since it has been discovered that Lieutenant Drew is alive and has by letter acknowledged the receipt of his citation. He has left the service and lives at Mt. Carmel, Conn.

The text of the department's corrected citation, as it is contained in Army General Order No. 15, is as follows:

The citation awarding the distinguished service cross on page 113, General Orders, No. 37, War Department, 1919, relating to First Lieut. Charles W. Drew, having been erroneously published under posthumous awards, is corrected to read as follows:

Desperate Fight. "Charles W. Drew, first lieutenant, 13th Aero Squadron, Air Service. For extraordinary heroism in action near Flirey, France, August 15, 1918. Lieutenant Drew operated one of a patrol of four machines which attacked four enemy battle planes. In the fight which followed he attacked in succession three of the enemy airplanes, driving one of them out of the battle. He then engaged another machine at close range and received 10 bullets in his own plane, one of which penetrated his radiator, while another pierced his helmet. In spite of this he followed the German plane to a low altitude within the enemy's lines and shot it down in flames. During the latter part of the combat he courageously refused to abandon the fight, although he had become separated from his companions and his engine had become so hot, because of the leak in his radiator, that there was imminent danger of its falling him at any moment."

POE'S STORIES: The Oblong Box (6)

The mystery of Wyatt's devotion to the oblong box which he carried with him to his death in the sea remained unexplained until one day, several weeks later, when the writer met the captain of the ship. The captain told of the events leading up to the tragedy.

Wyatt's wife had died on the day the party was to sail for New York. Wyatt found it impossible to call off the trip.

Wyatt, overcome by grief, persuaded the captain to let him take the corpse on the voyage with him to New York.

Had the passengers known a body was being taken upon the voyage, they would have refused to take the boat. One of Wyatt's servants was pressed into service to take the part of his wife, and introduced as Mrs. Wyatt, whose person was unknown to any on board the ill-fated ship. (NEXT—THE PURLOINED LETTER.)

NO SECOND MARRIAGE CEREMONY, SAYS BERLIN

New York, Aug. 30.—Irving Berlin, song writer of renown, and his wife, formerly Ellin Mackay, are in seclusion here today, the husband in his own home and the wife in the home of a friend, in an effort to dodge the ever-present spotlight of publicity.

Berlin, after much nagging on the part of reporters, issued a statement denying a report that another marriage ceremony, other than the one on January 4 last, had been performed.

SPANISH THRONE HEIR IN DANGER OF DEATH

London, Aug. 30.—The Duke of Asturias, heir apparent to the Spanish throne, is critically ill and his life is feared for, according to a dispatch to the Daily Express from Hendaye. The Spanish cortes have been summoned in order to name Don Juan, the third son of the king, as the heir if the Duke of Asturias dies. Don Jaime, second son of the king, suffers from impediments to speech and is deaf.

Warnock Noses Out Markley in Thrilling Battle

Wins 100 Yard Dash by 3 Inches; Outpoints Rival in Diving 45-44

Duck Chase Amuses Large Gathering at Successful Annual Swimming Meet at Globe Hollow Saturday.

What can probably be termed the closest competition in any sport in Manchester in many years occurred at the annual swimming meet at Globe Hollow Saturday afternoon between "Wes" Warnock and Eddie Markley. Both are 18 year-old.

The showing made by Young Markley was a surprise to the large crowd of spectators which lined the banks. It fact Markley almost defeated Warnock for honors in their class. Here is how they fared: Both made 50 yard dash in 38 seconds; Warnock beat Markley by 3 inches in 100 yard dash; Warnock won from Markley by a few feet in 50 yard back stroke; both were tied for second place in underwater swim for distance; Warnock defeated Markley 45 to 44 3/4 in diving.

Competition Weaker

In the other classes there was not nearly as much competition. Art McKay won the up for the senior class, H. McHale for the 12-

"Wes" Warnock

14 year class, and L. Hicking for the 10-12 year class. The time made by Hicking was better than that made by McHale in the older class.

Diving Exhibition

After the competition had been concluded, an exhibition of fancy diving was given by Joe Maurice, of Hartford, State A. U. diving champion, Frank Sobral, former local youth and State Y. M. C. A. diving champion. Albert Addy and Fred McCormick, local lifeguard. Their efforts drew repeated applause from the spectators. They performed seemingly impossible feats in the air.

Fred Jr., youthful son of Lifeguard Fred McCormick, also gave an exhibition of diving that was well worth watching.

Duck Chase

One of the events which caused much fun for the swimmers and amusement for the spectators was the duck chase. Three ducks were let loose in the middle of the pond and swimmers swam out in an attempt to catch them. After laborious efforts, A. McKay, Aspinwall and Raymond succeeded in capturing one apiece. Their reward was a duck dinner yesterday.

The Results

Following is the result of the meet:

HARTFORD DROPS TWO GAMES TO NEW HAVEN

New Haven, Aug. 30.—Hartford lost two ball games and a good catcher here yesterday afternoon. Jimmy Knox was badly spiked when Griffin's slide was two split-end. New Haven used three pitchers in the first. Thomas returned in the second game and subdued the Senators easily. Schinkel's triple in the second was the longest hit of the afternoon.

CAPITOL PARK FIGHTS

Joe Howard, state amateur middleweight boxing champion and Bat Battalino, the Connecticut featherweight champion, face hard battles at the amateur card at Capitol Park, Hartford, tonight. Howard will tangle with Andre Anderson, who hails from Boston and the holder of the Massachusetts middleweight crown, while Battalino takes on Johnny Rizzo, also of Boston and also the Bay State champion in the 128 pound class.

Errors Help Shelbourne Falls to Beat Shamrocks

(Special to The Herald.)

Shelbourne Falls, Mass., Aug. 30.—The Manchester, Conn., Shamrocks fell prey to the local nine here yesterday afternoon 7 to 3. The home team took the lead at the start and was never headed thereafter.

Seven errors, four by Burke and three by Kellar, marred the team-play of the Shamrocks and contributed largely to their defeat. The remainder of the visitors played errorless ball.

Home run, Bell. Stolen bases, Burns. Double plays, Shelbourne 2. First base on balls, Cunningham 2. Hit by pitcher, Burns. Struck out, Cunningham 8; Prentice 4. Umpire, Sullivan.

NINTH INNING RALLY ENABLES FORT TRUMBULL TO WHIP SONS

Both Teams Play Ragged Ball as Local Nine is Defeated 9 to 8. Ten Errors Made; Partons Triples.

The Sons of Italy were returned a 9 to 8 loser in their game with the Fort Trumbull Stars Saturday afternoon at the West Side. It was a free scoring tilt and there was plenty of loose playing by both sides. The Sons committed six misplays while their opponents muffed up four plays. The ten errors played a potent factor in the scoring.

McKernan, former Eastern Leaguer, did mound duty for the Sons and was touched up rather freely. He allowed ten hits but made two himself while the rest of his team was having difficulty in solving the delivery of Brown.

A five run rally in the ninth inning gave the ball game to the visitors. The Sons had entered the frame up 7 to 5 but fell to pieces. Partons made a three-base hit for the Sons.

A WOMAN'S DAY ABROAD

BY ALLENE SUMNER

For us and took forth some nine cents each for booth and suit. They down a flight of steps to where the suits were hurried at us and a handmaiden opened the booth doors for us.

A word here to such of you as may swim at the Lido. The handmaidens must be tipped for opening and closing said door or she will cry unto the heavens for it even as do the ushers who seat you in the foreign theaters and who, if you are ignorant of the tipping fact, chime in with the yalkyries chorus telling the world of your stinginess.

Clothed and in our right minds, so we thought, having bathed at the Lido for some 33 cents, Herring and I decided things were not right at all and went gunning for the real Lido.

We found it. We had merely gotten off at the wrong stop. Gaul was divided into three parts, and the Lido is in two. One is Coney Island for the hot polios. The other is Palm Beach at its palest.

We had heard something of a pajama and bathing suit style show at the Excelsior, where a sup of watery tea and a thin slice of bread cost a dollar. But I owe the truth to my clients, I reasoned. We must go.

The water grows blur as one walks from the thirty cent end to the most expensively spot in the world. The beach was lined with the millionaires' bathing huts, the placards sunning themselves upon silk sheeted coats in the sun, servants' wedding palm leaves over their reclining forms.

Dollar-a-Cup

The waves were agleam with silken suits of purple, orange, red and white, with bracelets and necklaces and rings and real gems on the wearers.

There are as many jewelry stores at the Lido as on the Rue de la Paix.

So, bowed low unto by the most uniformed porter in or out of captivity, we teared at the Excelsior and saw what the well dressed man and woman wear in and out of the wild waves this year.

More of them were on the teasers than on the fashion mannequins, for it seems to be very poor taste to wear ought but bathing suits and pajamas in or out of the water at the Lido.

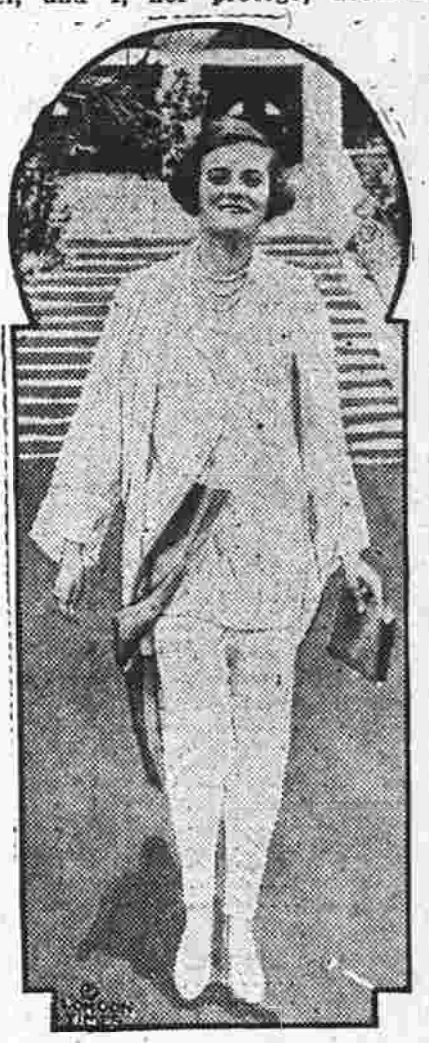

"Drip, drip, drip," went the suits as the waiters pattered about with the dollar-a-cup tea.

The leopard skin suit was a favorite. A piece of leopard pattern silk thrown over one shoulder and caught under the knee with topaz jewels to match.

Fashion says that the neck-length bathing suit is best this year.

And the well-dressed man will lounge in nothing but purple or orange terry cloth pajamas.

Travel abroad is so cultural and instructive, imagine!

Beach Pajamas at The Lido

therefore that it was our duty to slysee The Lido.

One hour later we found our sylphlike forms encased in the Lido bathing suits which no pen can do justice to, but which I now attempt to describe.

Ankle length, striped and checked gingham, combination Kewpie romper and Mother Hubbard wrapper effect with cute little belts that tied here and there and everywhere, pantslets and a bustle.

Pretzel gazed at me. I gazed at Pretzel. Then we chorused in girlish accents, "So this is the Lido."

Things seemed all wrong, somewhat. But in we plunged into the blue Adriatic, white salled with sporting yachts, and blue and pink with native fishing boats, hoping for the best.

We found the worst. Most of the maids and matrons wore but the pantslets and the same delectable suits which Pansy and I with native modesty, wore in toto.

And the hideous striped reform school gingham bobbed up and down upon the bouncing main.

"This cannot be the Lido of song and story," said we sadly, emerging upon an onion-laden strand and blistering in the sun.

We decided, therefore, to hunt that Lido of song and story which never spoke of busted pantslets and bathing suits and onions on the shore.

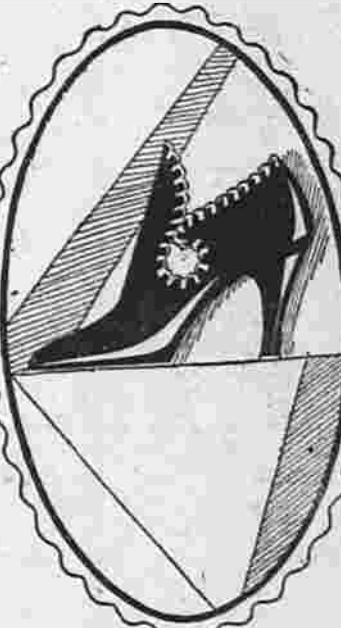

How To Do It

We might digress a moment and speak of bathing in the bounding surf in a foreign tongue.

First of all, we had paid about two cents to enter the bathing casino, with its shops above, its bathing booths below. An attendant at the ticket booth marked us for lost babes in the woods and shouted "the Americans come!"

Handmaidens and minions came trooping to take us by the hand and lead us by the perils of the ticket widows. They opened our purses

Good Nature and Good Health

MODERN INDUSTRY KNOWS IMPORTANCE OF FIRST AID.

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEN, Editor Journal of the American Medical Association and of Hygiene and Health Magazine.

Since the World War, increasing attention has been given by the Red Cross, by public health educators and by industries to the training of a considerable number of persons in the elements of first-aid. Such work is particularly important in industries that spread over much territory; for example, in mines, where an employee may be seriously injured at a point far removed from medical assistance.

Many industrial plants now have regular classes for instruction in first-aid methods, under the direction of the plant physicians or instructors provided by the Red Cross. Interest in the work is stimulated by the holding of competitive first-aid exhibitions, and by the advertisement of employees showing special aptitude for the work to positions as safety engineer or social worker in the industry.

Methods Simple.

The conditions which occur most frequently in industrial work and which require prompt first-aid, properly carried out, are hemorrhage as a result of any cutting or mutilating accident, shock as the result of a fall or electric phenomena, and burns.

It is, therefore, obvious that first-aid instructions are first concerned with proper methods of preparing and transporting persons suffering from fractures or from shock, which prevent their walking to a place for treatment.

Persons unconscious from electric shock, from drowning, or from inhalation of gases have to be resuscitated. The method is essentially simple and easily comprehended by any employee who is willing to take the time to learn. The method must, however, be taught by an experienced worker in the first instance.

Realize Importance.

Burns are mutilating and many secondary complications of a serious nature occur, unless the first-aid treatment that is given is prompt and accurate. This involves the cleaning of the wound and the use of simple antiseptic substances, by the covering of the wound with melted paraffin and sterilized gauze. All sorts of first-aid cabinets have been prepared for use in industrial plants. Some of them resemble miniature drug stores in their completeness.

In general, the first-aid equipment requires hardly more than eight or ten simple articles, such as gauze, scissors, simple antiseptics, tourniquet and assorted bandages. With these, all necessary first-aid treatment may be applied and the patient kept safe and comfortable until first-class medical treatment becomes available.

QUEER QUIRKS OF NATURE

BY ARTHUR N. PACK, President, The American Nature Association

To one whose boyhood days were passed in any of our northern or mountain states, what memories cluster around some favorite trout brook of that particular section.

On its banks grew alder and willow, and fronds of cinnamon fern and meadow grasses, rooted in the cool sphagnum bogs and to its current. Other inhabitants were in its waters, bright-finned dace and smooth-shelled turtles, and many lesser creatures which were their prey, yet the brook owned its name and fame only to that king of fishes, the trout.

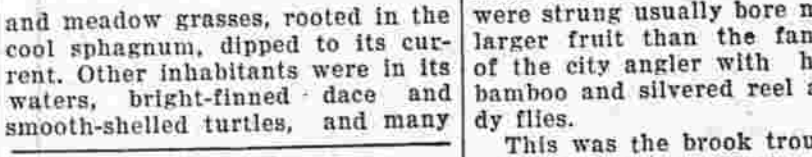

These others, which shared its waters and its bounty with bright-hued ones, had no share in its namelink. It was a trout brook.

Thence in those days of May when all the earth seemed new, the boy of long ago made eager haste. Perhaps some older fisherman might protest that the signs were not just right, or the wind or weather unfavorable, but to this boy the time to fish was when opportunity beckoned.

Nor was he hard to please in the matter of tackle. A thin, strong line, a few cheap hooks from the village store, knife to cut a willow or maple sprout, these and the bait that nature yielded, were enough.

And when, tired and hungry and wet he turned homeward through wood road or cow-path the larger trout upon which his trophies were strung usually bore more and larger fruit than the fancy creel of the city angler with his split bamboo and silvered reel and gaudy flies.

This was the brook trout's summer home, but when the northern winter came the tiny stream was choked with snow and ice. Then the trout and their cousins made their way down stream and, in the deeper pools of the river or in some sheltered lake, they waited until another summer called them to the cold tumbling brook.

CONDITION—A neck that begins to show lines and sagging muscles.

DIAGNOSIS—This is one of the indications that youth is being threatened by middle age. However, it is possible to delay such manifestations with extreme care. The circulation must be stimulated and the muscles strengthened.

TREATMENT—For increasing circulation, pinching is one of the best known exercises. After cleansing your neck with cleansing cream, go over the surface, pinching it with rapid movements between the thumb and fingers. When you are pleasantly a-tingle, go over the surface of your throat with tea wrapped in a towel. It is astonishing how this builds up the contour and improves the skin texture of the neck.

Whether you agree or not, this is the way Jean de Mar of Los Angeles says the bride will look in 1936 if present style trends continue. She made this dress out of her mother's wedding gown. Rumor says there's enough material left over to make three or four more.

NEIGHBORS' WIVES

ERNEST LYNN, author of THE YELLOW STUB

BEGIN HERE TODAY

JOHN and FAY MILBURN buy a home when their baby girl is born and the advertising agency in which John is partner and copy writer lands a new contract. Among their acquaintances are:

NELL and HOWARD ORME, who seem to be unhappy together.

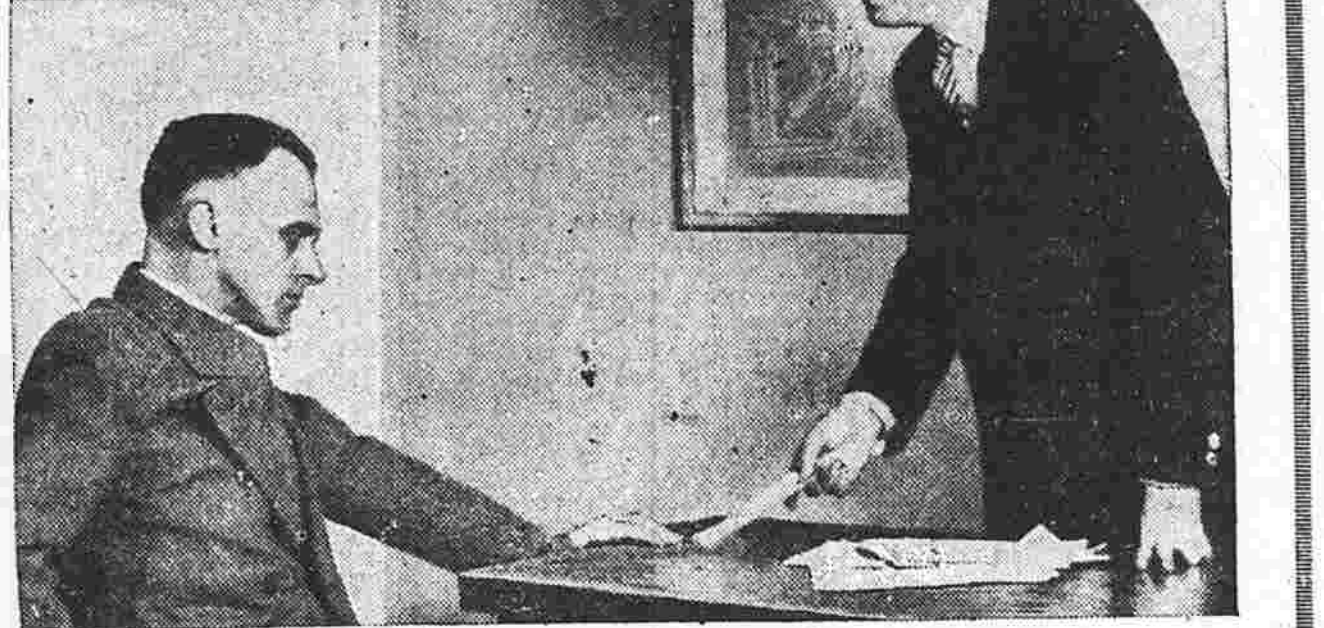

DR. DICK MENEFEE, John's best friend, and MARGARET, his wife.

Previous chapters told how Fay took Judith, the baby, to visit her parents in Washington, and during her absence John "ran around" a good deal. When Fay returned, gossip had retailed and exaggerated some of his activities, and sharp quarrels followed. One of them drove him "out on a tear," and caused Fay to threaten to leave him if it was repeated.

A growing interest in Nell Orme is brought to a head by Vera Boyd, who takes delight in promoting "affairs." The day comes when he takes Nell madly in his arms.

Fay finds it out and leaves John. He closes the house and takes an apartment, where Nell comes to see him one night after a violent quarrel with her husband. Howard comes in on them, threatens divorce and that night commits suicide.

Then NATHANIEL GRAHAM offers to buy him out for $15,000, but John, believing he cannot raise the money. And John, realizing the business is all he has left now that Fay and Judith are gone, tries desperately to raise the money. Menefee lends him several thousand dollars, and when John has grown discouraged, Menefee and his wife write to Fay, explaining the situation to her.

John said casually, "There's the $15,000, Nat."

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

(The names and situations in this story are fictitious.)

CHAPTER LIX

HAD John known that Dick and Margaret had written to Fay, he would have quit then and there. Dick realized this and for that reason was careful to let the slightest hint of it away from him.

Nevertheless, Menefee told himself and Margaret, it was time something was done. He had written Fay before, and something in the letter she had written in reply told him that she had not ceased caring for John.

At the end of that week John was mighty close to despair. Four days ago—and still six thousand dollars away from his goal. No one knew the sting of the feeling of defeat that sat upon him—the sense of futility—the baseness.

And then, just when things looked blackest and he was on the verge of going, to Nat Graham and saying the hell with the whole thing, Dick Menefee called him up, and exuberant joy was in his voice as he announced his news.

"It's been done, John—I've raised it."

It was unbelievable. "Where? Where?"

But Dick refused to tell him. "I've promised not to reveal my source of supply. Promised on my word of honor as a gentleman and physician. But it's done—no need to worry."

"But Dick—it's like a fairy tale. You've got to tell me or I won't believe you. I've got to pay it back. Where did you get it?"

"Don't worry about that. You pay me back. Consider yourself indebted to me to the extent of twelve thousand dollars. Now then, old man, go ahead and look 'em all."

He beckoned them all, John told himself. Imly as he turned away from the phone. Across the room sat Nat Graham, and John smothered an impulse to run over and say it had been done. Instead, he fished from his pocket the paper on which Nat had written down the terms of the agreement. He'd wait, he told himself. He'd wait, and meanwhile expression, seemed reluctant to get down to business.

"Well, John, how about it? Ready to buy me out?" The condescension of his manner told John that he was far from believing that he was ready.

But John stilled. "I still think, Nat, that you're offering me too little for my share. Will you make it twenty thousand?"

"Lord, no! Now," irritably, "we've gone into all of that before. You agreed. You gave me your word. I've got it here in writing."

"But don't you think you're getting it mighty cheap? I hate to let go, Nat. Do you think fifteen thousand is 'it'?"

"Why of course it's fair. It's not worth that. It's not worth more than twelve."

"Very well, Nat, I just wanted to make sure," he said casually.

"There's the fifteen thousand, Nat," and John laid the certified check on the table in front of Graham, who stared at it as he had seen an apparition.

"But—" Graham sputtered. "Look here, what are you doing, tricking me?"

"Not at all. That check's O. K. You just said fifteen thousand was more than what a half interest was worth. You said it wasn't worth more than twelve. All right. I'm overpaying you three thousand."

"Damn you, Milburn. You double cross a man," Graham was furious.

"Strong language, Nat, strong language."

"I won't sell. I'll be damned if I do."

"I've got it in writing, Nat. Right here. In my pocket." He started out of the room.

"Hold on," Nat called; "where are you going?"

"I'm going to get a witness." He raised his voice. "Briggs!" he called.

"Briggs," he said when the artist arrived, "what time is it?"

"The artist glanced at his watch. "Quarter to twelve."

"Right. Now, do you see this check?" and he picked it up from the table.

"Yes," Briggs was grinning broadly.

"Now will you read this agreement?" Briggs read it.

"All right. Sure. What about it?"

"Well, what do you gather has happened?"

"Why, I gather that you've bought Mr. Graham out."

"Sinking nothing! This ship is going to sail!"

And so the fight began in earnest. There were just three of them now—himself, Briggs and Miss White, the inexperienced stenographer Graham had hired to replace Miss Kinsley and who seemed to be over her depth, but whom John hadn't the heart to fire.

He realized Nat would be making an effort to land all of the old Graham and Milburn accounts—especially Milltown Tools and Barker and Williams Toys. And Nat, most likely, would be knifing him pretty severely—telling all he knew of John's troubles.

He had proof of that in the letter that came from the Milltown Tool advertising manager.

"Graham tells me he has gone over Killy and Jones and that they've got a real agency. He also says—well, pretty mean things about your personal habits—that you've been messing around and getting your fingers burned. Of course, we don't like to hear about that, but we like the people who spread such news a great deal less. As long as your copy gets the results it has been getting, we're pretty well satisfied to string along with you."

And John replied with a wire: "My heartfelt appreciation of your downright decent letter. As for my copy, you haven't begun to see real copy yet. Wait a week and I'll show you something new."

That was the way, he told himself. Make the work believe he was going to do something big. And at the same time, he was tremendously heartened by the friendliness of the Milltown letter.

"Nat won't get anywhere there, he'll fail with satisfaction."

"Briggs," he said later that day, "we need a real executive around here—follow with sales ability. But I can't afford one just yet, so I'm going ahead and be my own sales manager. I'm going to proceed on the theory that good art and good copy—the best we know how to turn out—will be the best sales talks we can deliver for a while."

"Well," Briggs grinned, "I'll show you a few things about drawing that'll surprise you. You've got me going—p now, and I'll work my head off."

"It means," said John, "that you're going to be given an interest in this business."

Briggs said: "I know

Why Dance So Much?

by Olive Roberts Barton.

One night at a theater I witnessed an amateur Charleston contest. By the time we got in the affair was half over and all the contestants had been eliminated but four. After a while two more were voted out and that left one couple, a boy and a girl about sixteen years of age.

I think they had been dancing for an hour.

The evening was warm. Their faces were flushed, their shoulders heaving. There was an alluring prize of a hundred dollars and a trip somewhere.

The two started again and danced for five minutes. The voting was done by applause. The house was divided evenly. They danced again! Again it was even! Again they danced! Again even! It kept on indefinitely. I closed my eyes. I expected, if I opened them, to see one or both lying dead. As it happened, the girl won. She had to dance some more to show her appreciation.

It was painful to watch her breathe. Her heart must have been strained to the limit of all endurance. Shades of the old juggling rope! It was a slow motion picture compared to modern dancing.

I know of a girl and her "boy friend" who never miss a night at either a public park pavilion or a road house. And they never miss a dance when they are there. Sum-

HER OWN WAY

by MAMIE'S TRAGEDY

"What are you crying about, Mamie?" I asked. "Surely now that you have everything that you want and have been able to borrow two or five thousand dollars from Buddy for your musical education, you ought to be happy that he's gone back to New York. You told me just the other day you were agrieved to have him stay here."

"Yes, I know," answered Mamie, tremblingly. "I suppose I should be very thankful that he has gone, but Judy, while Buddy has gone, his wife is staying on here."

"What's that you're saying?"

"I say Mr. Robert Tremaine has gone to New York, but his wife has decided to stay here indefinitely. The night before he left Buddy told me that they had the worst quarrel they ever had in their lives."

"You see, Mamie," he said, "I have never quarrelled with my wife to any extent. She never seemed to care upon how many women showed my attentions, provided I gave her plenty of money and let her do about as she wished. You, my dear, are the only woman she has ever honored with her jealousy. Since we've been in Chicago some of her dear catty friends have told her that you were here and she accused me of following you."

"Of course, Mamie dear, I would have followed you if I had known where you were, but I did not and I got very angry because she would not believe me."

"But, Buddy, I told him," said

Mamie. "You told her the truth. I ran away from you and came to Chicago. Did you tell her that?"

Why Some or Down and Some Are High.

One sadly sees the setting sun And views his day's work with a sigh.

The other drops his tools to run. Nor cares how little he has done. And people still go asking why Some men are down, and some are high.

Somebody might make a respectable fortune by fixing up stories for the big butter and egg men to tell their wives when they get home.

GAS BUGGIES or HEM AND AMY—More Trouble

FINE STUFF! THAT BUNCH OF STOCKHOLDERS THREATENING TO SUE ME FOR THEIR DOUGH WHEN IT WAS ALEC SMART WHO BEAT IT WITH THE JACK. THE PIKERS... THE...

THIS IS WRITTEN ON A LAWYER'S STATIONERY. THEY MUST MEAN BUSINESS. THEY CLAIM YOU ARE LEGALLY RESPONSIBLE BECAUSE YOU WERE PRESIDENT OF PETRIED GAS.

AND WHAT GETS ME IS, ED PLOP'S NAME HEADS THE LIST. I'M DONE WITH HIM AND ALL THE REST OF THOSE FAIR-WEATHER FRIENDS. THAT'S THE THANKS I GET FOR HELPING THEM.

IF THEY DRAG YOU INTO COURT, THAT'LL FINISH US IN THIS TOWN. WE'LL LOSE OUR HOUSE TOO. I JUST FEEL IT IN MY BONES

I'M NOT WORRIED. LET 'EM SUE. IF THEY TAKE THIS TO COURT, ALL OUR OTHER CREDITORS WILL BE THERE TO PROTECT THEIR INTERESTS AND THEY CAN FIGHT IT OUT BETWEEN 'EM. I'LL JUST BE AN INTERESTED SPECTATOR.

AND IT'S ALWAYS THE BYSTANDER WHO GETS IT IN THE NECK. DON'T FORGET THAT.

IF I ONLY HAD THAT HUNDRED BUCKS YOU HANDED OUT FOR OIL STOCK, I COULD HIRE A LAWYER AND GET THIS THING SIDE-TRACKED TILL THEY GRAB ALEC SMART.

HM! THAT REMINDS ME OF SOMETHING. I MUST SKIP DOWN TOWN AND ATTEND TO A LITTLE MATTER RIGHT AWAY.

FORECAST RAISE IN MILK PRICES

Dealers Say That They May Be Forced to Increase Pasturage Shortage.

A joint meeting of the directors of the Chamber of Commerce and the local members of the Connecticut Milk Producers' Association, was held recently to consider the probable necessary advance in the price of milk and what, if anything, could be done to prevent it.

The members of the association outlined the conditions as they exist at the present time in the Manchester district. It appears that it has been customary for the local distributors to absorb the regular fall increase of one cent, a quart instead of passing it along to the consumer as is done in Hartford. This gives the majority of Manchester householders a rate of one cent a quart cheaper than Hartford.

This year on account of dry weather, the shortage of pasturage, and the necessity for feeding grain earlier than usual, the wholesale price is advanced earlier than in former years.

This advance is being taken care of by most of the local distributors, although a few have advanced their price.

Another Increase A second one cent increase is announced by the Association for November 1 and if this goes into effect, local dealers feel that they too, will have to advance their price as they cannot absorb two cents a quart and make any profit. The local dealers feel that business conditions in Manchester are not such as to warrant a general increase in the price of milk at the present time and have asked the Chamber's co-operation, in preparing a general authoritative statement of trade and living conditions in Manchester to be presented to the Connecticut Milk Producers' Association directors in Hartford with a view to getting some special price consideration after November.

A special committee of the Chamber of Commerce already was appointed and is at present occupied in preparing such a statement which the Association directors have promised to receive and consider at a special conference meeting with the Manchester members.

DESCRIBE GRANGE TOUR THROUGH NEW ENGLAND

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur E. Loomis Relate Interesting Account of Two Weeks' Trip With Grangers.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur E. Loomis, of Keeney street, have returned home from the two weeks' Grange tour of New England. They were the only Manchester Grangers who made the trip and are very enthusiastic over the treatment they received at the places visited.

Granges, Chambers of Commerce, state colleges and normal schools where stops were made, gave them a cordial reception. Band concerts were given in their honor in a number of places and where it was impossible to accommodate the great gathering of Grangers at dining places, tables were set for them outdoors.

The headquarters was at Orono, Maine. From Providence where they were guests of the Rhode Island State college they proceeded to Cambridge, then to the University of New Hampshire at Durham, and Bowdoin college at Brunswick. Sight-seeing trips were arranged for to various museums and places of interest. They had a delightful sail on Casco bay, visited Presque Isle, Bath, Belfast and Farmington, Maine, the Belgrade Lakes, Livermore falls, the Little Niagara and places in Canada, returning to Orono, then to the White Mountains.

During all the time they were touring Maine, they were under the care of the state police, two were at the head of the long string of automobiles, two at the rear and two at different places in the procession of cars conveying more than one thousand Grangers. The New Hampshire state police department accorded them similar treatment.

SPAIN DENIES DISORDERS. Madrid, Aug. 30.—An official denial was made today of reports circulated throughout Europe of disorders in Spain. "All Spain is calm," said an official statement.

OFFER COMMUNITY CAMP SITE FOR SALE

Desirable Property on Coventry Lake Plotted for Cottage Sites.

The Community Camp property at Coventry Lake, owned by several South Manchester men, has been acquired by Elman & Rolston, the local real estate promoters and will be offered in convenient size plots for cottage and camp sites.

This property originally purchased for community camp purposes, became available for subdivision when the camp location was moved to Hebron this summer. Its location is familiar to many Manchester people. Situated on the west side of the lake, near its upper end it is easy of access past the Ayer property. It is on high ground overlooking the lake, with a splendid view. The lake frontage of over 100 feet will be improved for the use of owners of plots on the property.

A map of the plot may be seen at the office of Elman & Rolston, who will be glad to give any desired information and will take interested persons out to the lake for a personal inspection.

ACCIDENT CAUSES ARREST

Because of a slight automobile accident at midnight Saturday at the Center, Loyd W. Savage, of the U. S. S. Bushnell, who is home on furlough, was arrested on a charge of driving without a license.

A Buick touring car he was operating collided with a Ford touring car operated by William Cranston of 16 Knox street. A bent left front fender and a blowout of a tire was the extent of the damage. Patrolman Joseph Wall investigated.
