

TALK OF DARK HORSES LOOMS AT HARTFORD

Wolcott Candidacy Meets Wadhams Claims; Alling Figures in G. O. P. Race for Attorney General.

Hartford, Sept. 13.—Dark horse rumors held the interest of delegates as they arrived here today for the Republican state convention which opens today with United States Senator George F. McLean's keynote speech at Foot Guard Armory where tomorrow United States Senator Hiram Bingham and Governor John H. Trumbull will be renominated.

Two sharp splits over the nomination for lieutenant-governor and for attorney-general will preclude any monotonous routine at tomorrow's session. The present acting lieutenant-governor, J. Edwin Brainerd of Brantford, who was chosen as president of the state senate in January 1925, is a candidate for actual election as lieutenant-governor but is vigorously opposed by the chairman of state board of finance, John M. Wadhams of Goshen, head of the Torrington Savings Bank.

Wolcott A Figure

Claims that Dada has a distinct lead to date were met today with hints that a third candidate might be injected and such a move would embarrass Dada because dark horse is state senator. Frederick C. Wolcott, who comes from Wadhams' own Litchfield county.

Astute political observers deprecated the mention of Senator Wolcott and also of Senator Charles M. Bakewell of New Haven as lieutenant-governor possibilities, pointing out it was too late to make a successful campaign for either of them as a compromise.

Similarly it was declared that Judge Benjamin W. Alling of New Britain could scarcely hope to win the nomination for attorney-general, although his friends were active here today discussing his chances against House Speaker Elbridge D. Darbie, of Killing, and Charles E. Williamson, of Darien.

Linked Candidacies

The Wadhams and Darbie candidacies were linked by the fact that Darbie is a strong supporter of Wadhams in Eastern Connecticut and as Williamson is a political lieutenant of State Labor Commissioner Harry Mackenzie in Fairfield county, political manager for Brainerd, the Williamson boom seemed likely to rise or fall with the Brainerd stock.

Mr. Williamson has been mentioned as a probable compensation commissioner to succeed Edward T. Buckingham of Bridgeport, whose term expires January 1, 1928, and this report tendered help to Darbie and Wadhams. All the avowed candidates opened their headquarters here today at Gardiner Hotel and their agents and lieutenants were active meeting and interviewing the early arriving delegates who were uninstructed or unpledged.

200 ALIENS CAPTURED SNEAKING INTO CANADA

Smuggled Italians Rounded Up After Being Landed in Nova Scotia.

Halifax, N. S., Sept. 14.—Canadian authorities have balked an attempt to smuggle about 200 Italians into Canada. It became known today with the arrival of the Italian steamer Dori.

Immigration officials co-operating with the Royal Mounted Police took the immigrants into custody and seized the ship's papers.

The aliens, all of whom had paid heavily to be smuggled in, had been landed at Mill Cove, on St. Margaret's Bay, Nova Scotia, when word reached the authorities. Quick action resulted in a complete round-up of all concerned.

MEDICAL SCIENTISTS TAKE GHASTLY RISKS.

London, Sept. 13.—To verify certain conclusions he had reached in his study of cancer, Doctor Kurtzahn of Koenigsberg grafted a living cancer into his own flesh, performing the operation himself. No effects resulted, which strengthened his theory that the disease cannot be induced into a body which is not in a pre-cancerous state.

An equally daring experiment was performed by Doctor Pettenkofer of Munich, who, during a lecture, drank a glass of water in which he had introduced millions of cholera germs. He believed that he was immune to the disease, and the experiment proved him right.

GORSELINE, ANGRY, IS READY TO TALK

Scapegoat Long Enough, He Says, and Now Plans to Aid Prosecution.

Somerville, N. J., Sept. 13.—Ralph V. Gorseline, declaring that he had been made the scapegoat of the Hall-Mills murder case, today announced to Inspector John J. Underwood that he was ready to do everything in his power to help solve the mystery of the killings.

Gorseline, who was a vestryman in the church of the Rev. Edward W. Hall and sang in the choir with Mrs. Eleanor Mills, the woman slain with the minister, has admitted that he was near the scene of the crime, and heard shots and screams.

He was accompanied on the fact night by Miss Catherine Rastall, who has corroborated his story. Gorseline stated that his home had been broken up, and his daughter's life at school made unbearable by insinuations against him.

Scapegoat No Longer

"I am no longer going to be a scapegoat in this matter," he told Inspector Underwood angrily. "I protected Miss Rastall as long as I could. Then she told what she knew of the murders, which we had kept secret for four years. Now I am going to protect myself and my family as long as I can."

Ever since the murders in September, 1922 Gorseline has contended that he was not at the Phillips farm when the shooting occurred, and knew nothing about it. The Miss Rastall confession forced him to disclose his information.

"I don't know how this matter will end," he told the inspector, "but I do know that I am going to tell the truth. My lips have been sealed too long."

Inspector Underwood then questioned Gorseline about reports that he and James Mills, husband of the slain woman, had been paid for silence since the murders.

"I have never received any financial assistance from the Hall family, nor do I want any," Gorseline said. "I see my way clear now, and I am going to help the state in clearing up the murders in every possible way that I can."

Hits Back at Hall Lawyer

Gorseline denied knowing anything about the love letters found at the feet of the murdered rector.

Gorseline is angry because one of the lawyers for Mrs. Frances Hill, the slain rector's widow, is allied to him. He has charged that Gorseline and James Mills, husband of the slain woman, know more of the actual slaying than they have so far divulged.

One of the things that Senator Alexander Simpson, who is conducting the investigation, wants Gorseline to clear up is a statement the vestryman is alleged to have made to a friend the morning after the murder. Gorseline is charged with saying he recognized a person coming from the scene of the crime just a few minutes after the shots, and had exclaimed:

FRANCE TURNS AGAINST ATTACK BY MUSSOLINI

Protests Against Blame for Bombing — Assassin Denies Conspiracy; Fascists Beat Deputy.

Rome, Sept. 13.—Premier Mussolini's first move as the result of the bomb attack against him on Saturday has been within his own household. The government today announced that General Police Director Crispinacada and Signor Pirilli, chief of police of Rome, have been dismissed. It is understood that the government holds these two officials were lax in their duty in permitting the attempted assassination and in failing to uncover the alleged plot which fostered the attack.

Signor Bocchini has been named general police director and Signor Angelucci has been named chief of police of Rome.

Changes His Story

Geno Lucetti, the supposed assassin, who first gave his name as Ermete Giovannini, has been further grilled and now confesses that he arrived in Rome on September 2 and spent more than a week studying the daily routine movements of Premier Mussolini, the police state. Earlier he had said that he had been in the city but two hours.

Lucetti, despite arrests which have been made and the police charge a widespread plot, still persists that his act was that of an individual. He declares that several times during the past week he has stood before the Chigi palace prepared to bomb Mussolini, but each time something prevented him from acting. He states that when he emigrated to France in 1920 he hid in Rome the bombs which he used in the attack on Saturday.

The police say that Lucetti has rattled upon his breast the words "give us more."

Members of Lucetti's family have been placed under arrest at Aveza.

Many anarchist leaders were under arrest today, including Signora Malatesta, whose husband was arrested yesterday. The police admit, however, that they have not yet sufficient evidence to make definite charges against any as accomplices.

Hold Two as Aides.

Carrara Ferretti and Enrico Walata, alleged anarchists, have been arrested. Witnesses have been found who declare they saw two men, whom they believe to have been Ferretti and Malatesta, with Lucetti shortly before he made the attack.

Two women have told the police that Lucetti used them as a screen, for he stopped them under the pretext of asking them a question just as Mussolini's car came along and then threw the two bombs while standing behind them.

According to the police Lucetti

SPEED NECESSARY TO SAVE MERTON FAMILY

So Financier Explains in Testimony in the Daugherty-Miller Conspiracy Case.

New York, Sept. 13.—Richard Merton, German financier, was on the witness stand again today in the conspiracy trial of Harry M. Daugherty and Col. Thomas W. Miller.

Merton testified he had recorded the dates of the transfer of the C. M. holdings in the American Trust Co. to Swiss control as March 1917, in the claim papers submitted through George Williams of the alien property custodian's office, for the seized property of the Swiss Society.

Then the witness reiterated details of the alleged "deal" with the late John T. King, Connecticut politician, for the "fixing up" of the claim. Merton testified his purpose was to avoid employment of lawyers. He intimated that the $441,000 alleged to have passed to King—$50,000 as a "retainer" and $391,000 in liberty bonds—was cheaper than lawyers' fees.

"Speed was necessary to pacify Swiss interests," Merton answered. "Under Swiss law if the value of shares of a corporation is impaired fifty per cent, the creditors may demand the filing of a balance sheet."

The witness pointed out such a situation might cause the Merton family "to be bucked out of office" in the affairs of the Swiss society.

"Did you suspect or have any reason to suspect that any government officials received part of the $441,000 retainer fee you paid John T. King for aiding your claim to the seized property of the American Metal Company?" Colonel Williams demanded for Miller, asked.

"Certainly did not," replied Merton emphatically.

HUGE DAMAGE BY FLOODS IN KANSAS

Three Known Dead, Many Believed Lost as Three Rivers Take Sudden Rise.

Kansas City, Sept. 13.—Three known dead, many believed lost, and property damage estimated at seven million dollars, is the toll today of floods in Kansas which have centered in the Verdigris, Cottonwood and Neosho river valleys.

At Burlington, scene of a disastrous flood in 1922, 150 families have been forced to flee their homes and National Guard troops have been called out to patrol the streets.

At Emporia, the Cottonwood river is rising a foot each fifteen minutes.

Railroad Bridges Go.

Railroad bridges on the Missouri Pacific and M. K. T. railroad have been washed out, delaying trains.

Nesho Falls, near Emporia, is under several feet of water. The Neosho river at this point had reached a stage of 32 feet at 7 o'clock this morning. Several refugees were being taken to Highlands. No outside aid had been able to reach the town.

Peril on the Neosho.

Iola, Kan., Sept. 13.—The crest of the flood which has already taken a toll of three lives in the Burlington section, and property damage of millions, is expected here at noon.

The swirling waters of the Neosho river, rising rapidly, have reached to within four blocks of the business district and are increasing at more than an inch an hour.

Fear is felt here for the lives of the inhabitants of Neosho Falls, fourteen miles northeast of this city, cut off from all lines of communication, and for hundreds of farmers living along the banks of the Neosho.

LOOT SUMMER HOME OF $10,000 IN JEWELS

Hyannis, Mass., Sept. 13.—Search is being made today for burglars who looted the summer home of Robert D. Forgan, Chicago banker, of $10,000 worth of jewels.

After locking the family and servants downstairs, the robbers climbed a ladder to a second story bedroom where Miss Martha Forgan had left the family jewels in boxes.

MEDEIROS STORY IS BACKED BY HIS PAL

Affidavit by Second Bank Holdup Man Exonerates Sacco and Vanzetti.

Dedham, Mass., Sept. 13.—Two affidavits, one by Celestino Medeiros, convicted Wrentham, Mass. murderer, and another by James F. Weeks, serving a life term in the Massachusetts state prison for his part in the same crime, today furnished a sudden turn in the plea for a new trial for Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti, convicted of killing a South Braintree payroll messenger and his guard.

Medeiros, now awaiting execution in the Dedham all, made a direct admission of his connection with the South Braintree holdup, and charging a certain gang of crooks with the two murders. He refused, in the affidavit, to name the gang. He charged that he had been cheated of his share of the spoils.

Weeks, in his affidavit, said that Medeiros had told him of his connection with the South Braintree murder while they were planning the Wrentham bank holdup.

He further stated that Medeiros had said Sacco and Vanzetti had ample money for defense, but that if they did not get free, he would go forward before the day of execution and admit his part in the crime before he would permit them to die. In both affidavits absolute denial of Sacco's and Vanzetti's connection with the case was made.

No names were mentioned by Medeiros in his affidavit, but Weeks furnished the names "Mike," "Joe," "Patsy," "Fred," "Frank" and "Bill" as members of the gang, as told to him by Medeiros, as the latter's accomplices in the South Braintree case.

The affidavits were two of 63 defense papers to be introduced by William G. Thompson, now in charge of the Sacco and Vanzetti fight for life. They were read by Herbert B. Ehrmann, Boston attorney.

DECLARE EXPLOSION WAS FASCIST BOMB

Antis in New York Say It Was Intended for Them But Went Off Prematurely.

New York, Sept. 13.—An explosion which killed two men, seriously wounded another and spread confusion in Harlem's "Little Italy" on Saturday night was the result of a Fascist bomb plot to avenge the attack on Mussolini in Rome, according to Carlo Tresca, anti-Fascist editor of Il Martello, published in New York.

Mr. Tresca, an eyewitness of the explosion, said that he had received an anonymous telephone call warning at his office on Saturday afternoon.

"You people tried to kill Mussolini," the voice over the telephone said. "We're going to get revenge tonight."

Tresca and other anti-Fascist speakers, who were grouped on a platform at 118th Street and First Avenue when the explosion occurred, discovered yesterday, they said last night that one of the dead men, Alfredo di Nardo, was a secretary of a branch of the Fascist League of North America. Frank Esposito, who was killed, was also a member of the New York Fascist organization, Tresca said, and had been in this country less than two years.

The anti-Fascist speakers who saw the explosion are convinced that a bomb intended to be thrown against them, exploded prematurely and killed the men who were carrying it.

They ridicule the police theory that it was a gasoline tank that exploded.

BIG VOTE IS EXPECTED IN PRIMARY TOMORROW

ROGERS PREDICTS JOHNSON VICTORY

Tells Why Present Legislator Can Represent Town Best; His Letter.

The following letter was received at The Herald office today:
Editor of The Herald:

In this age when tongues out-wag an eight-day clock and when in many instances there is little more intelligent thought behind some of those tongues than there is behind the pendulum of a clock, I would like the opportunity of offering to the voters of Manchester a totally unprejudiced opinion regarding Tuesday's primaries.

To begin with, I want to say that I could not sincerely belittle the ability of E. L. G. Hohenthal. No one could get me to say that Mr. Hohenthal is not qualified as an individual to represent the Town of Manchester. And while I have differed with Mr. Hohenthal on several issues I would not even say that he is wrong and I am right. I have lived long enough and gained experience enough to respect other views than my own and I am one hundred per cent convinced that there never was and never will be a political issue in Manchester which justifies unkind remarks or an aftermath of ill-feelings.

Johnson and Miss Cheney. But, I honestly believe I am justified in the conclusion that I should vote for Raymond A. Johnson and Miss Marjorie Cheney on Tuesday and herewith are my reasons:

First: Although I have never been allied with either Judge Johnson or Miss Cheney in politics, I have followed their legislative work and I am satisfied that either of them are as well qualified as Mr. Hohenthal to represent the Town of Manchester.

Second: The very name of the office suggests the all-important place of this contest. Representative. Exactly. This is a representative form of government under which we are living and, if you please, living more happily than in any other country in the world. If Mr. Hohenthal were nominated and elected, he would be representative in name only. He knows, as does every man and woman familiar with the political set-up in Connecticut that the powers-that-be in the Republican party would give him an assignment to any important committee, and that no measure, regardless of its merits, would have a chance of adoption if sponsored by him. Mr. Hohenthal will not deny that.

In line for leadership.

On the other hand, Judge Johnson has twice been a member of Representative Contest Sure to Bring Out Many Republicans; Selectmen and Constable Fight Stir Interest, Too; New Polling Place.

A record number of Republicans may vote in the Republican primary here tomorrow. At any rate when the moderator closes the polls a big vote will have been cast. Three contests, one for Republican Representative in the General Assembly, another for a seat on the Board of Selectmen, and the third for Constable, have stirred interest to such an extent that many predict a record Republican vote. There are no contests in the Democratic primary.

The Representative contest has almost drowned out the campaign being conducted by other contestants. Miss Marjorie Cheney and Raymond Johnson are opposed for re-nomination by E. L. G. Hohenthal. Miss Cheney and Mr. Johnson are the Republican party candidates while Mr. Hohenthal, not a registered Republican and not qualified to vote in the contest tomorrow, was injected into the primary when proper papers were signed by 11 registered Republicans.

Selectmen Contest

Eight candidates seek the Republican nomination for Selectmen and seven can be named. Albert Jackson, of Winter street, and an employe of Cheney Brothers, entered the contests this year upon the request of friends. The present Board of Selectmen is composed of Chairman W. Treat, Secy. Charles John H. Hyde, Carl S. Johnson, John H. Cheney, Thomas J. Rogers, Robert J. Smith, and Wells Strickland.

The six candidates for Constable of which four can be named are: Frank W. Hohenthal, Treat, Secy. Nicholas Marcantonio, George R. Riskey, Harry E. Russell, and William Shields.

A new polling place, Manchester's new municipal building, will be used for the first time tomorrow. The machines, eight of them, have been set up and then go into use by the Republicans and the other will be used by the Democrats.

HOURS FOR VOTING

The polls will open at 10 a. m. daylight saving time and will close at 8 p. m. daylight saving time. Charles R. Hathaway, prosecutor and attorney, has been chosen as moderator.

THE NEW MUNICIPAL BUILDING PROVIDES A CONVENIENT PLACE IN WHICH TO VOTE.

Voters will enter by the main door, pass through the machine area, and then go through the rear exit. There should be no confusion and there should no waiting in line.

WORK FOR CHENEY-JOHNSON

The Republican town committee is unanimous in support of Miss Cheney and Mr. Johnson for representatives. This committee has perfected a strong organization during the past ten days and hopes to pile up a big majority in favor of its candidates. This committee of Judge William S. Hyde Jr., chairman, is composed of, in addition to Mr. Hyde, James Jackson, Robert N. Veltch, P. J. O'Leary, W. B. Rogers, Arvid Gustafson, Aldo Pagani, Thomas Ferguson, Mrs. H. A. Nettleton, Mrs. Maud Shearer, Mrs. R. J. Smith, Mrs. Hazel Trotter, Miss Pauline Beebe and Miss Mary McGuire.

MISS CHENEY AND MR. JOHNSON WERE PROPOSED BY JUDGE HYDE AND ENDORSED BY THE REPUBLICAN TOWN COMMITTEE.

While Mr. Hohenthal was proposed by Chester W. Shields, a trolley conductor, and endorsed by 10 Republicans, several of whom have since said they did not support the candidacy of Mr. Hohenthal but signed his papers as matter of form.

MR. HOHENTHAL HAS NOT FOUND FAULT WITH THE PRESENT LEGISLATORS DURING THE CAMPAIGN, BUT HAS ONLY SAID HE WOULD LIKE THE HONOR OF REPRESENTING MANCHESTER IN THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY.

The Cheney-Johnson supporters have argued that Mr. Hohenthal is an intruder and should not be given a nomination by the Republican party which he has often attacked.

Up to the Company. But, voters, stop listening to this propaganda about making this a political issue or carrying this fight into the general assembly.

I repeat that I do not think for one moment that Mr. Hohenthal is responsible for the circulation of this "blab" by some of his supporters. Months ago, I suggested to Mr. Hohenthal in the Hall of Records that he should enroll with the Republican party.

BANKRUPTCY PETITION.

New Haven, Sept. 13.—One sign of a backward season at the shore during the past summer became apparent today when Edward Weber, of West Haven, filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy in United States District Court here. Weber lists his occupation as "same stand operator" at Savin Rock. He owes over $3,000 beside his rent for his concession and has $900 assets.

Coolidge Luck

The well known Coolidge luck still holds out. This time it turned up in Illinois where Marilyn Ives Coolidge, of near Bloomington, won highest baby honors at the state fair. Her score was 99.5.

FOREIGNERS' PERIL IN CHINA IS LESS

U. S. "Involved" Is British View—Prince George on Ship Off Hankow.

London, Sept. 13.—The situation in China is more reassuring, according to reports received by the war office this afternoon. The Chinese authorities at Chang Kiang have issued a proclamation declaring that foreign lives and property must be respected.

The British government has issued a denial of reports that it intends to ask the aid of other powers, declaring that it now has sufficient forces in China to deal with the spasmodic outbreaks.

The admiralty is prepared to send an expedition to Wanh-sien where several British seamen were killed recently by Chinese troops, unless interference with British interests ceases immediately. It was announced today. Force, however, will not be resorted to except as a last resort, it was stated.

Prince George Aboard. The government is centering its hopes for the restoration of order upon Vice-Admiral Sir Edwin Alexander Sinclair, whose flagship, H. M. S. Hawkins, with Prince George aboard, is moored off Hankow. Sir Edwin is under instructions to dispatch an expedition five hundred miles up the Yangtze river to Wanh-sien if such a measure becomes necessary.

Peaceful negotiations are favored because it is feared that force would endanger the large British population dwelling in the interior of China.

Sir Edwin is expected to negotiate with General Wu Pei Fu and General Yang-Sen, his associate. The pair are held largely responsible for the recent slaying of Britishers.

Although no formal agreement exists between Great Britain and the United States for united action in China, British and American naval commanders are apparently working together to clear the Yangtze of its havoc-working bandit generals.

U. S. "Involved" The artillery duel between Chinese forces and the United States destroyers is displayed prominently in London newspapers.

The Daily News remarked: "The United States now appears to be seriously involved in trouble with China."

Dispatches from Shanghai state that firing on foreign steamers continues on the Yangtze despite the Anglo-American display of force.

A Central News dispatch said that Marshal Feng Yu-Hsiang's communist troops were concentrating in Shensi province with a view to attacking the forces of General Wu Pei-Fu.

Advices from Malta state that the British airplane carrier Hermes, detached from the Aegean fleet, has arrived for fueling and will proceed at once to Hongkong. She will carry two bombing planes equipped with machine guns, both capable of deck landings.

Cantonese Losses Heavy. Shanghai, Sept. 13.—Cantonese casualties resulting from the Wanh-sien engagement with British warships on the Upper Yangtze last week exceeded 2,200, according to advices from Hankow received here today. Further attacks on

VOTER TELLS WHAT E. L. G. WON'T SAY

Open Forum Letter Received Today Attacks Primary Candidate.

The following letter addressed to "Open Forum, The Herald" and signed by a voter and taxpayer who asked that his name be withheld, was received this morning:

Editor, The Herald: Emil Lewis George Hohenthal is going to make a speech tonight and he is going to tell the people who listen that he has always worked for the benefit of Manchester. He is going to claim that he was the man that secured the free delivery of mails in Manchester; and he is also going to overlook the fact that in order to have this delivery it was necessary to have paved streets, and he will probably not say that he was, as a selectman, instrumental in getting the extension of walks on the north side of Center street, where he lives, although there were many petitions for walks in the more thickly settled part of the town.

He will tell about his service as a fire commissioner, but will not say that he has had bought for him three times as many badges as the president of the commission, Frank Cheney, Jr., has had, although Mr. Cheney has served as a chief of the fire department and president of the district since it has been organized.

Nor is Mr. Hohenthal going to tell the voters that when the question of insuring the firemen of the South End was up, his Mr. Lester got the insurance. Nor is he going to explain how his son, Emil Hohenthal, secured the contract for the erection of No. 3's headquarters.

He is going to tell that he was unable to vote in Manchester in 1886, because of his moving from New York state to Connecticut, but he will not tell the people of Manchester that when in New York he was a Tammany Democrat. He may state that in 1886 he attended a prohibition party rally in White's Opera House in Rockville and became so convinced with the cause

INSURES AGAINST THE EFFECTS OF LAUGHTER.

It's no joke when a patron of a movie house "almost dies from laughing." Several fatalities have occurred as a result of strong emotional feeling, so some picture theaters have insured their patrons. They may "laugh their heads off" now, for they are insured by a policy which reimburses for any medical attention given to persons suffering from hysteria caused by laughing at the film.

that he decided to throw his lot with that party—and has continued with it since.

He may or may not say he was so willing to hold an office that he was endorsed by the Democrats as a candidate for judge of probate against Olin R. Wood, but that he lost because some sixty or more Democrats saw fit to retain Judge Wood in office and voted for him against Hohenthal. He will tell how he has been named by Republican congressmen to attend foreign conventions, but will probably overlook the fact that he is not in Europe this year because Uncle Sam refused to pay his expense bill. BOTH THEATRES CROWDED TO DOORS LAST NIGHT.

Capacity houses greeted the opening of the fall and winter season in the State and Circle theatres last night. At the State Rudolph Valentino's last picture, "The Son of the Sheik," was shown. It made a big hit with the large audiences that attended both showings. At the first show the State was crammed to over-capacity. At the Circle the showing of Mary Pickford in "Sparrows" drew such big crowds that the sale of tickets was stopped long before the first show was over.

The State theatre orchestra was back again last night to usher in the new season. Under Samuel Kaplan's direction the orchestra rendered an exceptionally fine score for the "Son of the Sheik." The feature went over big with the audiences, for it was the same type of picture in which the illustrious Valentino began his career as a silver screen artist.

The new three manual Austin pipe organ at the Circle theatre is a fine instrument. Its tone is exceptionally good, and it made a good impression on its listeners last night.

Prize Winners? Sure!

POLICE COURT

Two motor vehicle violators were arrested over Sunday for speeding. Jack J. LaLuce of East Hartford pleaded guilty and paid a fine of $10 and costs in the police court this morning.

The case of George Pelletier was continued until Wednesday at the request of Judge William S. Hyde. He was arrested yesterday for speeding.

A fireman leads a hard life, but he gets to park by fire plugs.

THE LITTLE FASHION SHOP.

"A little bit of Fifth Avenue transplanted," is what is promised in The Little Fashion Shop, which will be opened tomorrow on the second floor of the State Theater building by Mrs. M. S. Higgins of New York.

The shop will feature the newest effects in ladies' apparel, including dresses, coats and accessories and the ladies of Manchester are invited to call and inspect these offerings. Among other things Mrs. Higgins will place at the service of her patrons a special shopping service in New York.

GO AND VOTE.

Manchester Republicans—those of them at all events who have any serious understanding of their political responsibilities—have a duty to perform tomorrow, and that is to go to the primary polls and vote.

Any voter who thinks of himself as a Republican does so for a reason. He lists himself with that party because he believes that it is the agency through which is obtained the best in government—the best for himself and the best for his community.

Long experience has instructed the people in the necessity of making party service a condition of party leadership. In American politics—the most successful political system in the world—leaders are not sprung from nowhere, in a moment, like a Mexican desarrollo "general," seizing command by virtue of lung power or persuasive promises.

It is because this method of selection has been in vogue for a long, long time, that the Republican party has achieved and maintains ascendancy in Connecticut—and in Manchester. If it should be abandoned it would not be long before that party had sacrificed its claim to the confidence of the people of the state, for it would no longer be a party, merely a list of political individualists, every fellow pulling his own way.

Republicans of Manchester are requested to note the effect of changing after the individualist rainbow as demonstrated in certain states of the West and Northwest. Persons in some of those states who were no more Republicans than they were Hindus have intruded into the party primaries and by making extravagant and impossible promises, have won nominations to the United States Senate.

How serious the result of permitting this kind of thing may become can be now realized with the growing likelihood that President Coolidge is likely to face an antagonistic Senate for the last two years of his term—with even the possibility that the Democrats may be able to organize that body and engage in a deliberate campaign of destruction of the whole Coolidge program.

We must not contribute to this kind of disintegration, here in Manchester. It is essential for the good of the town and the good of the state that our political system be preserved—that the Republican party put none but Republicans on guard. We cannot afford a Pangalos, we cannot afford a Smith Brookhart, we cannot, by the same token, afford a Hohenthal.

That there are some individualists registered as Republicans in Manchester goes without saying. That some of them will vote to nominate an anti-Republican for representative on the Republican ticket is probable. It is the affair and responsibility of every Republican in Manchester who believes in preserving the integrity of the Republican party to vote in the primary, tomorrow, for Republican nominees on the Republican ticket.

STOCK STILL.

Shall we all open our eyes presently and discover that we have just awakened from an anticipatory dream—learn that there are no such things as flying machines, radio and automobiles; that there never actually was a World War? The Democratic congressional campaign book, just issued by the party's committee at Washington makes no account of the passage of time, sticks to the formulae of ancient days, sounds as if Hancock were running for President.

There is one thing the Democratic party in this country seems incapable of learning, and that is that the tariff policy of the Republican party is not only the policy which has ground into dust every chance of Democratic domination but that it is wrapped up, tied with many strings and put safely away in the strong box of the American people as their one unalterable article of political faith and their outstanding economic security.

Time and time again the Democrats have destroyed themselves by sticking to the ancient fallacy of "tariff reform," yet every congressional and national election finds them committing themselves anew to a creed which has been repudiated by the country through generations. And now again, in the face of the tremendous facts of unparalleled industrial and commercial activity, at a period when the worker is taking the greatest share of the fruits of production ever known in the world, the habit is still so strong upon our Democratic brethren that they trot out their old, hopeless, utterly antiquated promise to "readjust the tariff on a competitive basis"—which is another way of saying they would kick the protective principle into the ocean if given the chance.

One would almost suppose that, after watching the world move by for forty years, the Democratic party would begin to realize that there was a procession going on. But it never will.

BOMBS.

To Italians who believe in Benito Mussolini as the savior of Italy the latest attempt to assassinate the premier brings a mighty rage of indignation. To foreigners, even those who view with the most serious apprehension the apparent success of an utter dictatorship, murder as a solution of Italy's political problems reacts with a singular agrivation.

There is almost always an exasperating ineptness about such attempts to kill off a political chieftain by assassination, particularly in Europe. Nine times out of ten the long-planned coup ends in the stupidest kind of a bungler. Some fellow tries to shoot a tyrannical king or prime minister—and hardly knows which end of the gun the bullet comes out of. Or he fabricates with infinite pains a bomb that will not go off. Or he throws a grenade that lands half a block away and kills a nurse and a baby.

In other words the assassin is usually a nervous, frightened creature perfectly unfamiliar with the tools he is trying to work with and lacking altogether in the calmness and sand necessary to make such an attempt successful.

And by the same token there is corresponding ineptness in the mind that conceives assassination to be a cure for political ills. The slant is all wrong. Mussolini could not rule Italy for a moment if the mass of Italian influence were not back of him. The czars could not have ruled Russia if the mass of Russian influence had not supported them. Killing a czar did the people of Russia no good. Killing Mussolini would do the people of Italy no good.

The plan to murder the Duce, no matter by whom originated, was as inept as its execution—as dull and as futile. The bomb and the bullet are the stupidest of all political agencies.

KING.

As developments in the Daugherty-Miller trial grow apace, the conviction is made more certain that the late John T. King of Bridgeport planned a lily on the Connecticut State Republican organization when he went off the reservation and for the better part of a decade fought the recognized leaders of the party tooth and nail. Hardly anything could have turned out to be a higher and more responsible of the men at the head of the state's organization, in the light of the Merton disclosures in relation to King, than the hearty disapproval of that able but now sadly discredited politician.

The King brand of political activity was not the brand with which the Connecticut Republican organization has either dealings or sympathy. Those occasional persons throughout the state who used to feel, now and then, that perhaps there was more merit to the King insurgency than to the attitude of the "machine" toward the Bridgeporter, have reason at this late day to congratulate themselves that they did not allow their small doubts to grow into an obsession, as did so many of their fellows in Fairfield county.

If the Republican party has one thing to be especially thankful for it is that it repudiated King and all his deeds years and years before they became a public scandal.

CHINESE MYSTERY.

Quite aside from the involved political aspects of the Chinese situation and the complications of feudal ambitions of the leaders in the five-sided war going on there, there is an angle from which the long continued campaigning would be of absorbing interest—if we could learn anything bearing on it.

How, in a country of such primitive economic development as China, can great armies be raised, equipped, supplied and kept in the field over a period not of weeks but of many months, even years?

These Chinese armies are not mere mobs of natives, conscripted on the spot and armed with clubs and spears. They are fighting machines with modern arms, machine guns, artillery, some air service. They must be supplied with food, ammunition, fresh replacements of arms, uniforms, tentage. They move rapidly, so that they must have adequate transport.

Three great leaders, who have been fighting each other—Sun Chuan-Fang, Wu Pei Fu and Chang Tso-Lin, the Manchurian, are talking of joining forces now to suppress the so-called Bolshevik army of Canton. They will probably come to such agreement.

Calling for troop movements on a very large scale, this consolidation would appear, on the surface, to require months of preparation. Yet likely enough in a few days we shall hear of a new campaign starting against the Cantonese in Hankow.

How much opportunity foreign military observers are getting to watch the practical workings of these Chinese armies we do not know, but if there is any real chance for Europeans or Americans to see how these things are done, a comprehensive report on them ought to make extremely interesting reading.

A sad looking Hindu has arrived in the United States to tell Americans how to be happy.

Perhaps a man in Chicago who shot two train porters wanted to carry his own bags.

The world moves. The king of England has started creasing his trousers in front instead of down the sides.

Women not only smoke a lot of cigarettes, but $20,000,000 worth of lettuce is eaten in the United States every year.

Spain has had no rain for 53 days. Perhaps a few well-planned planes would bring about a little shower.

The rising generation is a speedy one. A San Francisco baby only two weeks old is cutting teeth.

The price of bootleg stuff is enough to drive a man to drink.

About all college does for some farmer boys is educate them so they can't tell when it's going to rain.

The only real menace to civilization. Wonder why it is a bill collector never seems to break his leg?

Procrastination is the thief of success.

Money talks, but a dollar doesn't say much to a tax collector.

Stewart's WASHINGTON LETTERS

By CHARLES P. STEWART.

Washington, Sept. 13.—Financials use so many technical expressions that frequently they're hard to understand.

"For instance, they talk about 'stabilizing the franc.' They mean stabilizing the paper franc. A gold franc is as good as ever. Being gold, it's worth its weight in gold. But the paper franc is worth next to nothing, unless some government or some reliable bank will pay a gold franc for it when it's turned in.

So many gold francs are deposited in the Bank of France. A corresponding number of paper francs are issued against them and circulated. A few more paper francs may be issued than there are gold francs on deposit, for it isn't likely all the paper francs will be presented, for redemption, at once.

But suppose hundreds of times more paper francs are issued than there are gold francs to redeem them. Then the paper franc slumps for everybody knows they don't represent their weight in gold. Nobody knows just what they do represent. How can paper francs like that be stabilized?

Germany did it by mortgaging Germany—not in francs but marks.

She had hardly any gold at all but she kept on issuing paper marks. Presently they were no good at all.

The time came when she wanted to "stabilize."

Still having no gold, she threw her paper marks, still supposedly backed by gold, into the discard.

Then she began issuing a new kind of marks, backed, she pledged herself, by the country's resources—its land, its industries, its productive capacity, everything.

It has worked pretty well. The mark is stabilized. It buys something like the value—allowing for higher prices—of the former mark in gold.

But it has this drawback—The holder can't cash it in for anything specific, tangible.

The holder of the paper paper marks goes to a bank and trades it for a substantial gold poker chip. How can you cash in on a nation's resources? You can't.

The Argentine Republic once stabilized its currency by the most primitive and effective of all ways. Its original circulation unit was the gold peso, of 100 centavos—a peso being the equivalent of $1, U. S. A., less about 5 per cent.

Against these gold pesos it began to issue paper, in moderation at first, and then in great quantities.

But it had its troubles—a war or so and a revolution or two. The government was tempted to issue too much paper and it fell. So did the peso's value. It had more paper in circulation than it had gold to redeem.

No country likes to have its paper money at a fluctuating discount.

The Argentine government faced the situation. Its money was at a discount but it could stop the fluctuation.

It simply announced that it couldn't redeem paper pesos at 100 centavos per peso but it could redeem them at 44 and it would. It had that much gold, and it did.

It issued a terrible outcry at the time, but today the Argentine Republic has one of the soundest currencies in the world, with as safe a gold reserve—at 44 gold centavos to the paper peso—as the United States.

That's drastic stabilization, I'll say.

Perhaps a stenographer who tried to swim the English channel quit because someone told her it was five o'clock.

QUEER QUIRKS OF NATURE

By AUSTIN H. CLARK Smithsonian Institution

In the West Indies you are sometimes served with a dish of what appear to be fried worms an inch or so in length. Observing your reluctance to experiment with these, your host hastens to inform you they are "white-bait."

You may not know what "white-bait" are, but the name at any rate has a reassuring sound, and so you eat them and find them very good.

They are the young of a curious little fish, a kind of roby, that lives in the mountain streams. It lays its eggs, however, in the sea, and at the proper season great multitudes of young enter the rivers on the long journey to their future mountain homes.

Persistent They are the most persistent little things. Provided with a large sucker on the under side just behind the head, they are able to "cling" to the rocks and by short dashes forward, alternating with long periods of rest stick tightly to the rocks.

They are also able to live for a long time out of water. Once on St. Vincent, a river in its course crosses the flat land near the sea shore suddenly coming to a let up in the mountain range.

Covered With Dust On both sides of the river I noticed many little hollows in the ground now hot and dusty filled with curious hopping things.

These proved to be "white-bait" covered with a thick layer of dust and evidently uncomfortable in the hot glare of the tropic sun.

One of the most delicious foods that England has to offer is the "white-bait." This "white-bait" is the young mostly of the herrins, but also of the sprat more or less mixed with the young of other fishes. Also on the coast of China there is a "white-bait" most excellent as food. This is a different kind, either of the others, a small and delicate fish more or less related to the salmon.

DAILY POEM

RATTLE TRAP.

Let's see, it's just eight years ago I bought a motor car. The thing's been driven—oh, my goah, I couldn't guess how far. I've changed a lot of tires, and I've painted her a lot, but other things are just the same in this old car I've got.

The fenders do the shimmy when I'm drivin' down the street. If I remember right, there once were springs beneath the seat. The engine's kinda rusted to an aged looking brown, but the spark plugs work, an' keep the pistons movin' up and down.

My horn's long since been busted, but no pleasure does that mar, for the town can hear me comin' when I drive the bloomin' car. I step upon the starter—then I sorta hold my breath, 'cause the trusty motor's gonna shake itself to death.

But, anyhow, I travel like the classy millionaire. I ride around the country in the wondrous open air. I know I've got a rattle trap, but, shucks, what do I care, 'cause anywhere I'm goin'—well, the old bus gets me there.

Women are so inconsiderate. A Los Angeles man was so worried over his wife's bad health he took chloroform.

Only a few more weeks now until you can start making faces at the ice man.

IN NEW YORK

New York, Sept. 13.—The dirt-begrimed, moss-tinted, crumbling old tombstones of Trinity churchyard, which form the incongruous approach to modern Wall street, are perhaps the outstanding attraction of New York along with Brooklyn bridge, the Woolworth building and the Broadway lights.

Innumerable paragraphs have been written of the stenographers who gather at lunch time and spill their sandwich crumbs on the earth that holds the dust of Robert Fulton, Gen. Kearney and Alexander Hamilton.

The tombstones of these great ones have been scanned by numberless millions. Then there are the rows of topping slabs which bear little known names and these barely legible.

Among these you will find the name "Charlotte Temple," and therein lies one of the strange legends of the churchyard.

Some years ago a ghoul removed the plaque that once graced the grave stone and thus cast the shadow of uncertainty over dates and data.

Now back in the nineties a certain Mrs. Rowson wrote a novel entitled "Charlotte Temple: A True Tale." It told of a girl who eloped from England with an Englishman of rank, of how he deserted her after betrayal and, finally, of her death from heartbreak. It told of her burial at Trinity and the remorse of her betrayer who pleaded with the girl's father to kill him and when met by refusal came week upon week to sob on her grave.

Maybe true—maybe not! Nevertheless there is a grave in Trinity with the name Charlotte Temple graven on the stone.

Throughout the summer there was reported a steady increase of resorts just east of Broadway where "real beer" was to be had with meals.

But the most ambitious effort to date is announced by a card which comes to my desk. It announces a "$2.00 Beer Dinner."

Diners, it is announced, will be provided with a nice "growler" or bucket full of beer and, that the right crowd may be obtained, salesmen are going round selling meal tickets for the opening days.

The place, an old saloon, has been revamped and, I am told, $8,000 spent for new fixtures.

So this is prohibition! Speaking of bootleg! Liquor is not the only commodity illicitly peddled.

Recently a blue law was passed compelling New York barbers to close shop on Sunday.

Now a number of places operate with side door entrances and drawn blinds and signals, while itinerant shavers have a "route" of customers, going from place to place in the good old-fashioned way and charging from 50 cents up per shave.

Good Nature and Good Health

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN

Editor Journal of the American Medical Association and of Hygiene the Health Magazine.

The housewife ordinarily has sufficient to occupy her during the day. When her usual duties are added the problems associated with the care of a none too pleasant invalid, she is likely to need and to appreciate kindly advice.

The first problem that will concern her is the room in which the sick one is to be placed. Ordinarily the invalid is promptly deposited in the bedroom of his usual occupancy. This may not necessarily be best suited to his condition.

For many reasons, he should be in very close relationship to the bathroom facilities and not too far removed from contact with the daily life of the household. Of course, if he has a nurse who is to do the carrying back and forth of icepacs, toilet utilities, food, soiled dishes and linens, the matter of steps is of lesser importance.

Minimize Steps
If, however, it is to attend to these factors in addition to her regular household problems, she will want to minimize the number of steps as much as possible, in order that there may not be another invalid to occupy the place of the sick one as soon as he is well.

A board or a suitable ventilator may be adjusted at the lower opening so as to prevent direct exposure of the invalid to wind or drafts. The irritability of the sick one is greatly increased by rattling windows and noisy opening and closing of doors.

Control Rattling
The rattling may be controlled by the use of suitable wedges of either wood or paper that may occupy the space in which the window sash moves. A door may be made noiseless by binding a cloth of any kind from one door knob to the other.

This serves the double purpose of softening any slamming of the door and also prevents a tight closure. A call of the invalid can be heard through the opening that will be maintained by this method, and at the same time enough sound will be cut out to make a considerable difference.

An invalid needs sunlight as much or more than a person in normal health. Sunlight has valuable disinfectant properties and from the psychological point of view induces cheerfulness. A distinct glare is, however, always harmful to a patient whose eyes are likely to be made more sensitive by his disease.

Colored Glasses
In some diseases in which the eyes are especially susceptible to light the patient may wear dark colored glasses.

Since the sick-room must be frequently cleaned, and since the patient must avoid the irritating quantities of floating dust, it may be well to strip the room of unnecessary hangings and frilleries, without giving it a crude bareness. One or two pictures and hard furniture are usually cleaned and decorated. Heavily tufted furniture, thick rugs and double drapes and curtains are likely to serve largely as dust collectors and disseminators.

This is the first of a series of five articles on "The Patient at Home." Tomorrow Dr. Fishbein will discuss "The Patient's Bed."

HOTHENTHAL ADMITS MISTAKE IN LETTER

Editor, The Herald:
Your publication of my circular letter, with your editorial comment, prompts me to write this communication.

The error in my letter, to which you refer, was due to my thinking of two presidential appointments. President Harding honored me with an appointment to represent the United States at an international congress held in Switzerland, which appointment I considered more exceptional than the appointment by President Wilson to the "Draft Board."

Regarding my own candidacy I refrain from using your columns because of the "Herald's" attitude toward it.

A stranger would be led to believe from reading your news and editorial columns, that Manchester had only one member in the General Assembly.

This plucky woman Miss Cheney did her bit, as I think did Senator Smith for the Army bill, and without the support of the substantial citizens who appeared in its behalf, the bill in my judgment would have failed. Personally I put in some work on it myself. I doubt if my fellow townsmen would agree with you that "Manchester has never been represented at the State Capitol, by a man who has attained the influence Judge Johnson seems to have," when we recall the names of some of those who have represented the town in other years. To mention only a few, Judges Wood, Bowers, Arnold and Hyde, William C. and Frank Cheney Jr., Drs. Tinker and Whitton, Aaron Johnson, F. Ernest Watkins, Harry Burke and the late lamented Senator Bowers, not omitting Senator Smith.

Of course Republicans will nominate their candidates for Representatives, and they will have the opportunity to make their choice on Tuesday.

Yours very truly,
EMIL L. G. HOTHENTHAL,
South Manchester, Conn.

LOLLY-POP STICK CUTS BOY'S THROAT

Beaton, 12-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. H. Warren Case of Buckland, met with a very painful accident Saturday morning and is now confined to his bed under the doctor's care.

The little boy had gone to the Buckland store on his bicycle on an errand for his mother. He bought a lolly-pop and started sucking it. As he came out of the door, he turned in such a position that the screen door slammed against his face striking the lolly-pop stick which protruded from his mouth.

The blow knocked the lolly-pop down in his throat, almost an inch. For a few moments the boy could not breathe. The candy was choking him but he had enough presence of mind to pull the lolly-pop out of his mouth. But this did not completely remedy conditions. The sharp point in the candy end of the lolly-pop had cut his throat which bled freely.

Mrs. Jean Keeney, a Buckland nurse, attended the child the best she could and then rushed him to the Memorial hospital where he received treatment. It was feared tetanus might develop and the boy was given an injection of anti-toxin. He was then taken to his home where he is now under doctor's care.

JUGO-SLAVES IN FIGHT WITH ALBANIAN BANDITS

London, Sept. 13.—Sharp fighting, which continued for several hours yesterday between the Jugo-Slavian gendarmes and Albanian political bandits, was reported today in a dispatch from Belgrade to the Central News. Fourteen Albanians were killed and four Jugo-Slavians were wounded.

AMERICAN LEADING IN NICARAGUA PARLEY

Washington, Sept. 13.—Peace negotiations are under way in Nicaragua with Lawrence Dennis, American charge d'affaires, the mediator, the state department announced today.

Fighting, however, continues between the Chamorro government and revolutionists. Three American warships are in Nicaraguan waters to protect American interests.

AARON COOK REACHES HIS 84TH MILESTONE

Manchester Green Residents and Hundreds of Other Friends Congratulate Him.

Aaron Cook, Manchester Green's grand old man, was eighty-four years old yesterday and received the congratulations of many of his friends on reaching this milestone, as well as telegrams and messages by mail. Relatives and friends came from Hartford, Springfield, and other places to felicitate with him upon the happy event. He is in good health and particularly fond of taking long auto rides about the country.

Mrs. Arthur Cook and her children, with whom he makes his home at the Green, informally entertained in his honor. A party of twelve gathered around the table on which was a beautifully decorated birthday cake and other good things provided by the hostess. A profusion of flowers was sent to Mr. Cook and he was remembered with other gifts.

Aaron Cook was born and has lived all of his long life in Manchester Green with the exception of his service in the Civil War, in which he enlisted when a boy of fifteen. He was for more than twenty-five years clerk of the Second School District and took an active part in community affairs. He is a past master of Manchester Lodge of Masons and years ago received a jeweled badge from the lodge, signifying fifty years of membership.

Mr. Cook was a skilled mechanic and two of his sons followed in their father's footsteps—Frank Cook, many years a foreman in the Underwood Typewriter factory at Hartford, and George Cook, formerly at the Navy yard in Bremer-ton, Washington, but now proprietor of a public garage there. His son, Arthur Cook, who died last March, preferred carpentry and built a number of cottages at the Green. Aaron Cook also has a daughter, Miss Edith Cook, kindergarten supervisor in the Northwest district of Hartford.

MRS. BUDLONG LOSES
Newport, R. I., Sept. 13.—In a hearing characterized by the same snappy manner in which she has conducted her cases, Mrs. Margaret Jessie Budlong lost another decision to her husband today when her petition for control of her children and their estates was denied by Judge Walter Curry in probate court. She appealed.

A Beautiful Gift---to you Tomorrow!

The Little Fashion Shop opens tomorrow. It's a little shop, dainty in its fittings, charming in its character, delightful in its atmosphere, modern in its methods, as nearly perfect as possible in its selection of things worn by women, complete as possible in its variety of kinds and colors and fabrics of dresses and coats and all of the accessories so necessary with present season's fashions.

Mrs. Higgins invites you to call. She is enthusiastic over her little shop and beautiful new styles and she knows that you will share her enthusiasm.

She has a gift for you—your own selection from her regular stock of costume jewelry—your choice of a necklace, a brooch, a novelty bracelet or anything else that you may prefer from her assortment of the new costume pieces, all of them just as fine in quality as are offered for sale in the finest shops—your own selection with a purchase of any amount.

The Little Fashion Shop is like a bit of Fifth Avenue moved to South Manchester. It will be in constant touch with the best New York fashion designers. If a new color, or fabric, or model is shown in New York, The Little Fashion Shop will show it at the same time and EVERYTHING will be of such fine quality and workmanship that the most critical customer will be pleased.

Surveyors were at work on the layout for the proposed new state road from Marlborough to Hebron center on Thursday. There will probably be considerable of a change in the course of the road through the green when the survey is decided upon. As the completion of this road will mean through traffic from New York to Boston it is likely that this old town will be more or less of a changed place, certainly not so quiet a one.

M. CARLYLE JOHNSON DIES IN HARTFORD

Inventor of Friction Clutch Made Here Passes Away After Cerebral Hemorrhage.

Moses Carlyle Johnson, inventor of the Johnson friction clutch and founder of the Carlyle Johnson Machine Company, is dead.

Death came yesterday morning to the well known mechanical engineer and inventor at his home at 43 Congress street, Hartford. A cerebral hemorrhage was the cause.

Mr. Johnson was 82 years old. The Carlyle Johnson Machine Company was first located in Hartford but when it became necessary for expansion, the company was moved to Manchester in 1909 where it is now located at the north end.

The Johnson friction clutch is universally used.

Mr. Johnson was born in Hinsdale, N. H., January 5, 1844, son of Lawrence and Rebecca Johnson. He came to Hartford in 1850. Later, when the Civil War broke out, Mr. Johnson enlisted in Company E, 22nd Regiment, and served under the late Captain Buell Root. After his honorable discharge from the army, Mr. Johnson connected himself with the then newly organized Pratt & Whitney Company as an apprentice and later devoted himself exclusively to the development and invention of mechanical devices.

Mr. Johnson was a member of the Robert O. Tyler Post, G. A. R. He is survived by eight children, Mrs. E. W. Beardsley, former Alderman Osmond C. Johnson, Mrs. Resina Birney, Miss Anna Johnson, Miss Alice W. Johnson, Mrs. James C. Cowlshaw, Mrs. George B. Maynard, and Carlyle N. Johnson. He also leaves a sister, Alice R. Johnson, and nine grandchildren.

The funeral will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2:30. Services at the home will be conducted by Rev. Richard H. McLaughlin, pastor of the Church of the Redeemer. Burial will be in Cedar Hill cemetery. Out of respect for the deceased, the Carlyle Johnson Machine Company plant here will suspend work during the period of the funeral service.

The WENTWORTH by-the-Sea, Portsmouth, N. H.

Did You Ever Drive Up Here?

ONE of the finest of New England's shore resorts, as thousands know, is THE WENTWORTH. It is located in a private park of 125 acres on an island in the harbor of Portsmouth, N. H. On this island, in 1669, Samuel Wentworth opened the first inn in this section. Here occurred the first overt act of the American Revolution.

This splendid hotel became world famous when the Russo-Japanese Peace Treaty was signed here at the instigation of President Roosevelt. Now hundreds of people find here their ideal summer playground.

Interesting facts about La Touraine (Extra) Coffee

It is the largest-selling coffee in New England, the birthplace of fine coffees in America. In this home of exacting coffee critics, it is considered the supreme result of 237 years of coffee development.

It is the coffee served in many dining places famous for their coffees. In all Statler Hotels, for instance, in the magnificent Shoreland of Chicago. In countless country homes which study fine hospitality.

The blend combines the four finest coffees that grow. Each comes from a different country, each is the pride of a nation. Each derives its excellent flavor from one of the rarest soils of the earth.

Three of the coffees combined in this blend cost 50% more than ordinary coffee, and 25% more than Sao Paulo, the prize coffee of Brazil. One is so rare that only 30,000 bags are grown yearly.

The formula for this blend is a secret, carefully preserved. Coffee experts spent twenty years in perfecting it. No other blend has been made to resemble it. Those who find here their ideal flavor can find it nowhere else.

Mr. E. J. Butler, the noted coffee expert, personally tests, tastes and selects all coffees used in this blend. His duty is to maintain, without regard to cost, this premier coffee flavor. He pays any price necessary to combine in La Touraine (Extra) the maximum delights.

POE'S STORIES: Thou Art the Man (5)

The corpse in the wine-box seemed to gaze full into the eyes of Charles Goodfellow as it muttered the accusing words. The crowd was panic-stricken. Over the face of Goodfellow came a look of mortal agony. He fell heavily upon the table and poured out a confession of the murder of Barnabas Shuttlesworth.

The guilty man told how he had followed Shuttlesworth, killed him near the pool and taken his pocketbook, which held a large sum. He then had placed the bloody waistcoat, belonging to Pennifeather, in the pool to attract suspicion to the nephew.

The investigator heard his confession, the story bearing out the suspicion he had held from the first, because of Goodfellow's disgusting frankness and the fact of the bullet that he had picked from the horse's wound. At the conclusion of his story of guilt, Goodfellow fell over on the table, dead. (Continued.)

EAST GLASTONBURY

DEFEATS SHAMROCKS

Jack Wilson Gets Revenge in 4-2 Contest; Allows Only Three Hits.

A two run lead chalked up in the initial frame proved sufficient for the East Glastonbury nine to defeat the local Shamrocks in Glastonbury Saturday afternoon. The final score was 4 to 2. The defeat squared accounts with the visitors who had previously won from Glastonbury.

Jack Wilson held the Shamrocks to three scattered singles. He struck out eleven batters and walked two. Godek, the opposing hurler, fanned ten and walked but three. But he was given poor support, the Shamrocks contributing four misplays.

The box score:

THE PENNANT RACES

As a result of double victories by Pittsburgh and Cincinnati yesterday, the Cardinals hold on first place in the National League race. St. Louis now leads the Red Sox by only one game, while the Pirates trail Cincinnati by only one and one-half games.

The Cleveland Indians, fighting tooth and nail to get within striking distance of the Yankees, beat Washington again and cut New York's lead to seven games.

HARTFORD THISTLES

DEFEAT MANCHESTER

Locals Try Out New Men in First Soccer Game; Waterbury Here Next Sunday in League Contest.

A poor crowd watched the first soccer game of the season at the McKee street Stadium yesterday afternoon when the Manchester team, the new organization sponsored by the British-American club fell before the Hartford Thistles, by the score of 3 to 2. The game was excellent although Manchester appeared with several new players.

Hartford did not gain the verdict until a few minutes before time was called in the second half. Up to that point both teams had been deadlocked at two goals each but the work of the Hartford forwards, Lindsay and Johnson, kept the Manchester backs on their toes most of the time and Johnson broke through for the final goal with five minutes to go.

Marshall opened the scoring for Manchester about 20 minutes after the opening whistle and Lindsay equalized to put Hartford even with the locals at half time. Manchester came through again shortly after the second half opened with a neat goal from Nichols and Keefe of Hartford shot one through the posts for the equalizer.

The match will be divided into two rounds of 18 holes each, the first at 10:30 a. m. and the second 12 at 2:30.

The prediction is freely made among Hartford district golfers that Stait and Simpson will beat Hagen and Stein, the latter a former Naugatuck boy.

Stait has broken 70 on his home course, where the match will be played, while Simpson has been a consistently low scorer in important New England tournaments this summer.

Hagen, past of the professionals, is a player who combines rare golf talent with fine showmanship, making him the most interesting match player in the world.

The admission fee is $1.10, including tax, for all day or for either of the 18-hole rounds.

ALEX SIMPSON IN

MATCH WITH HAGEN

Local Club Pro Paired With Jack Stait Against Hagen and Stein.

Hartford, Sept. 13.—The largest gallery ever to see a golf match in Connecticut is expected at the Hartford Golf club tomorrow when Walter Hagen, king of professional golfers, and Joe Stein of Nashua, N. H. engage Jack Stait of the Hartford Golf club and Alex Simpson of the Manchester Country club in a 35-hole match.

The match will be divided into two rounds of 18 holes each, the first at 10:30 a. m. and the second 12 at 2:30.

BOBBY JONES SEEKS

AMATEUR CUP AGAIN

By DAVIS J. WALSH

Baltusrol Country Club, Short Hills, N. J., Sept. 13.—Robert Tyre Jones, Jr. of Atlanta, Ga. and 151 ordinary mortals this morning began the week-long quest that leads to amateur championship and the title of Amateur Champion of golfing America. No pot of gold awaits the ultimate survivor at the end of the multi-colored trail; no promise of mere wealth beyond the dreams of avarice.

Money means nothing to the man who loses, all save honor and there will be honor in plenty for the man who wins the 1926 National Amateur cup championship. If that man should happen to be Bobby Jones, the honors that have been his in the past must be on his mind beyond all reason. If the winner comes from the ranks of the ordinary 151, his new-born greatness will be amplified by the fact that it came to him over the figurative dead body of such a man as Bobby Jones.

What price mere money in these circumstances? It is in laugh. There are millionaires in the field that will break from the barrier in the first half of the 36-hole qualifying round today and the writer could name a few of them who would gladly lose their wealth for the chance to call the championship cup their own.

To Jones, of course, it is the big moment of his career. Amateur champion in 1924 and 1925, he faces the alluring prospect of being the first man to win the title over three successive campaigns. Open champion of America and Great Britain, he can add this three-time trick to his reproductive and go down in history as the man who ruled alone.

Boston, Sept. 13.—Following a "spat" with her fiancée, Helen Baud, 18, attempted suicide in her room on Berkeley street and is in a serious condition. The girl requested the police to notify Albert Wilson of Lynn of her attempted suicide. According to the police the girl came here recently from Pennsylvania.

TILDEN TO DEFEND HIS

SIX YEAR CHAMPIONSHIP

New York, Sept. 13.—The national men's tennis championship gets under way at the West Side Tennis club, at Forest Hills this afternoon, with William T. Tilden defending the title which he won for six straight years. Tilden is the favorite to keep the championship in spite of a defeat at the hands of Rene La Coste in the last Davis cup match on Saturday, and in spite of earlier setbacks at the hands of Vinnie Richards and Alfred Chapin.

Richards, Coste, William Johnston and Henri Cochet are looked upon as the men most dangerous in their challenge to the champion.

Morris, Ill., Sept. 13.—A. T. Parker, 40, manager of the Elgin Motor Club and leader in the movement to abolish or guard all grade crossings, and his sweetheart, Miss Ione Long, 36, of Elgin, were killed when their automobile was struck by a Rock Island train on a grade crossing near here today.

SMUGGLER STORY

IS "OLD STUFF"

Door Bell Ringers Generally Have Some Fake Yarn in Trying to Sell Goods.

This is the 26th article in a series prepared for The Herald on the Chamber of Commerce.

Ting-a-ling-a-ling! The door-bell.

Mrs. Brown goes to the door and is confronted by a dark-complexioned, smiling, foreign appearing gentleman with a heavy grip in his hand, who announces that he comes from Mrs. Jones (a neighbor) to show Mrs. Brown some beautiful imported lace. Having visions of high-priced material, Mrs. Brown does not enquire at first, but the salesman announces confidentially that owing to the fact that these goods were smuggled into this country by himself and comrades, that he is able to sell them for a very low price as compared to their real value.

Bargains! Mrs. Brown is very keen on a bargain and she hears at once. The lace does look nice and the salesman is a smooth talker, and before she realizes it she has bought several pieces, each of which seems surprisingly cheap. The total of the bill, however, is considerable and she is startled when she comes to pay it, but still feels that she is getting a bargain and takes the goods.

Of course, she just can't resist telling her friends about the bargain she has secured and has a very superior feeling of having made a good "bade, until one evening the Smith's come to play cards and she brings out her imported lace. It chanced that Mr. Smith is buyer in charge of the lace department in a large department store, and recognizes the lace at once as ordinary machine-made produced in some nearby community, which could have been obtained of local merchants for half the price which Mrs. Brown paid for it.

Cigars, Too The scene shifts. Dr. Jameson is seated in his office when his secretary brings in a nicely engraved card, which, although very impressive, does not convey any idea of the man's business, but the card gets him and from a businesslike looking case, he produces a box which the doctor, an inveterate smoker, recognizes at once as a box in which he has often seen an expensive brand of cigars. Then has a slightly Spanish accent, and represents himself as being connected with extensive Cuban tobacco interests and states openly and frankly that by a happy fortunate stroke of luck they have managed to smuggle into this country quite a number of these boxes of fine cigars which he is therefore able to dispense of at considerable reduction.

The doctor is invited to have one from the top of the box, and being a connoisseur, recognizes it as the real thing. After some dickering, he agrees to take five boxes, and pays for the one which the salesman leaves, with the promise that the other four will be delivered the next day.

Orders Pile Up In the meantime the doctor has told of his good luck to his several friends and they pass the word along, so that on the agent's return he is given orders for a number of other boxes which he is able to produce from a waiting automobile. He is paid for them all and makes his departure.

The doctor feels like a full-blown Santa Claus when he distributes his boxes among his friends, but his feelings are somewhat changed when each and everyone of them return to report that the cigars in the boxes which they got were a long, long way from those which the doctor bought in his first box. In other words, the doctor and his friends had taken a good round stinging and paid dearly for doing business with a man whom they did not know. Furthermore, they had become accomplices with him, or an accessory after the fact, in violation of the customs laws and have no recourse in law, even though the Spaniard gentleman could be located.

Once again the scene shifts. The girls' rest room of a large manufacturing plant is filled with young lady employees at the noon hour, when someone announces a salesman with some wonderful imported linens, which he is selling cheap on account of their being smuggled. Everyone crowds around and the "smuggled" goods find a ready sale, largely on the strength of the price and the fact that they are believed to be a bargain.

Only Cotton One of the girls, Mary Murphy, goes home at night and is showing the goods to her brother Terence, who is an officer on the local police force. He listens to his sister's story and then remarks "Smuggled nothing. That slyster sold stuff to half the officers in the guard room of the station yesterday with that same bunk and they turned out to be nothing but cotton, which they have paid about three prices for."

The scene changes once more. This time Rev. Thaddeus Thompson is waited on by two men in sailors uniforms. The boys tell him in reference that they are sailors on one of the trans-Atlantic passenger boats and that they have smuggled in a few choice foreign rugs, and as they only have a single day of shore leave they have to dispose of these rugs quickly and at most any price they can get. The rugs look good and the dome is sorely tempted between his conscience and his desire to get a bargain. Yes, the rugs do look good, the colors are soft and beautiful and although he is no judge of rugs, they seem to him to be worth far more than the price being asked, and so his conscience finally has to take a back seat and the sailor boys depart with a goodly roll of the parson's money.

Of course the rugs turn out to be cheap chenille affairs and Rev. Thompson hasn't even the consolation left of having secured a bargain.

Lots of "Smuggled Goods" And so it goes with the bland old Scotchman with his bundle of "smuggled" woolsens, or the French-Canadian with the "smuggled" furs taking the place of the Spaniard and the sailor boys. The difference in nationality is merely for the purpose of furnishing the requisite atmosphere and stage setting. The game is all the same, pure bunk and whoever deals with this type of salesman is sure to be left "holding the bag" with mighty little in it. The chances are better than even that you will bite at the next bait of this kind which is dangled before your eyes, believing of course, that this time the story is true and that the old Scotchman, or the Spaniard is real. Only when the top layer of your box of cigars is gone and your shrunken and slazy "Scotch woolen" is ruined by the first wetting it will you admit that once more you have been "stung."

Let the Chamber of Commerce get you the facts. If the proposition is a good one it can wait; if it can't wait, it is no good.

6 TIMES AS MANY AUTOS AS HORSES

The total number of horses in Connecticut has decreased to a point where there are six times as many motor vehicles as horses in the state today, judging by assessors' reports made to the state tax department. Fifteen years ago there were slightly more than three and one-half times as many horses as motor vehicles registered in Connecticut. In the intervening time, however, the horseless buggy has pushed Old Dobbin back steadily until it is today in possession of more than 85 per cent of the field served by both.

It is estimated, from tax department returns, that there are six times as many motor vehicles as horses in the state today, and registrations of motor vehicles are increasing steadily, standing at about 265,000 today, the state motor vehicle department announces. There are less than 45,000 horses left in the state today, and conditions in the private transportation field is shown to illustrate the rapidity with which the public is changing. Safety authorities are trying to keep ahead of the swelling tide of motor vehicles.

AGGRESSIVE NEW ENGLAND URGENTLY NEEDED-ROGERS

Manchester Man Addresses Kiwanis Convention in New Hampshire Today; Boosts Community Advertising

Urging New Englanders to more aggressive loyalty and advising them to remove the shackles of ultra-conservatism, Willard B. Rogers, former president of the Hartford Advertising Club, spoke on "Advertising to the Kiwanis" at the New England Kiwanis District convention at Newcastle, N. H., this noon.

The convention opened with registrations Sunday afternoon and this morning's sessions were devoted to getting the meetings under way. Lieutenant Governor Harry B. Kennedy presided at the luncheon meeting, at which Mr. Rogers spoke in part as follows:

"The connection between the two parts of my subject, 'Advertising and Kiwanis' is so palpable

Willard B. Rogers.

I will spend little time emphasizing the tie-up. Suffice it to say that I know that the Kiwanis clubs live up to their slogan, 'We Build' and that no one trained in this age will deny that everything worth while is built only with the inestimable aid of constructive publicity.

"Permit me, then, to focus your attention for a few moments upon—not the unadjusted child to whom leading educators now are giving so much attention—but rather to 'The Unadjusted New Englander' for to my mind, his case is more pitiable than that of the unadjusted child.

"By 'The Unadjusted New Englander' I mean the man who either cannot or will not realize that just as there has been a great change in the administration of business so there has been a complete transformation in the upbuilding of communities, cities, states and even greater sections of the country.

Rapid Growth Elsewhere.

"I am not going to invite the wrath of all New England businesses which have been encountering many obstacles by attributing their dilemma to a lack of commercial acumen but I would like to direct your attention to the rapid growth of the newer companies in other sections of the country. I have been told by men who have investigated that when many of our New England industries started, there was such a demand for their products that practically all of their attention was concentrated upon turning out goods with little or no attention given to their departments now known as sales promotion and advertising. On the other hand, the new industries of the west, the middle west and the south, entering, as they were, into competition with long established business in the east, divided their attention about evenly between the problems of production and sales.

"I know that the west and south have blazed the way for the east in community building. And right here, I want to emphasize that I do not and never have advocated the advertising methods used by either the west or the south for New England. I would not attempt to launch a sales promotion or advertising campaign for a private industry until I fortified myself with a complete survey of the goods I had to sell, to whom I wanted to sell them, and the best media with which to build and maintain good will for those goods. Demand creation for either merchandise or a city or state must be based upon the most careful survey and unless applied most intelligently your efforts will make for negative advertising.

Still Re-adjusting.

"We do not have to turn to Babylon or other business barometers to know that there are black spots in New England. I think I know of at least some of the seemingly unsurmountable problems which have confronted the cotton and woolen industry in New England. I appreciate too that some of our other industries are still passing through the re-adjustment which was the aftermath of the World war.

"We know the trouble caused by the cotton strike through the cotton valley down into Rhode Island and later the migration of the cotton industry to the south. It is encouraging to note, however, that your great Amaseck company over in Manchester, N. H., has re-adjusted itself to conditions by en-lion dollars while in 1924 our crops amounted to 505 million dollars, an increase of 375 per cent. But, during that same period the agricultural products for the entire country increased 770 per cent. In 1887 New England's manufactured products valued one and one-half billion dollars while in 1924 they had mounted to 7 billion dollars, an increase of 380 per cent. But, during that same period, the increase in manufactured products for the entire United States amounted to 566 per cent.

Like Switzerland.

And to prove that we have always succeeded in adjusting ourselves here in New England, let me direct your attention to the fact that we import 85 per cent of our food stuffs and that despite our great industries we have no coal, no iron, no copper and no cotton. Verily, we have adjusted ourselves as well as much-talked of Switzerland which buys pressed steel at $60 a ton and then in the form of Swiss watches sells it to the world at $60,000 a ton.

And, according to foremost electrical engineers, we will shortly solve our fuel problem by harnessing our great rivers for hydro-electric development. I predict that the time is not far distant when such rivers as the Penobscot, the Kennebec, the Androscoggin, the Merrimack, the Connecticut and the Housatonic, aided probably by the St. Lawrence and the harnessed Bay of Fundy to our north will be furnishing us with not only power for our factories but also heat and light for our homes. Ordinarily the cost of delivering this current might be a serious obstacle but with a net of rivers throughout New England engineers will undoubtedly solve even this phase of the problem.

Boosting at Home

And while I do not want to assume the role of a diagnostician and although I do not claim that advertising is a panacea for all our troubles, I do advocate an advertising campaign for every community in New England and, if you please, in the local paper. Why? First, because admittedly your local newspaper is the greatest media with which to reach the people of any given community, and second, if there was not another argument in favor of local advertising, one would be the fact that practically every other section of the country is advertising its virtues to our people. To combat that, we should not take up their publicity but should use the money ready at hand to play the spotlight upon the many advantages that give our community but very often overlooked because we are all prone to think that, 'The further away the greener the grass.'

I know of New Englanders who say conventions help only hotels. I will cite that Springfield, Conn., has done along this line, but let me direct your attention to another example of this nature. How long can our New England people graciously accept the hospitality of the rest of the country without at some time coming face to face with a convention? Of course, conventions are an asset to a community. They have distinct advantages that are difficult to measure but even if there was not another argument for them, we, in common decency, ought to start reciprocating sometime. Else, added to the pretty much substantiated charge that we are ultra-conservative will be the unforfeitable offense of being inhospitable.

And now that I have painted the dark side of the picture, let us about-face and look at the other side which although dark some time ago, is now bright and argues well for the future.

The Other Side

"New England is awake. 'Maine is spending $90,000 in state publicity; New Hampshire is spending $75,000; Vermont $35,000; Massachusetts $70,000 and Rhode Island $24,000, according to a recent issue of Printers' Ink. In addition, many communities have launched publicity campaigns. 'New Bedford, Conn., is holding a continuous industrial exhibit and is using road bulletins freely to tell its story to tourists. The Springfield Chamber of Commerce boasts that through conventions it has brought $7,000,000 into that city, to say nothing of bringing thousands there to whom she has to offer. The Boston Chamber of Commerce is doing a great job in awakening not only the Hub City and Massachusetts but the rest of New England. Little Rhody has organized a conference of its Chambers of Commerce, Board of Trade and other trade organizations.'

And last but not least, the governors of the six New England states have gotten behind the Forward New England movement and have succeeded in organizing the New England Conference. This is a body of upwards of 1,000 men representing finance, industry, agriculture, education and other important branches of this section. The next conference, by the way, is to be held in Hartford, Connecticut. A feature will be the invitation dinner to be given by our live-wire Governor, John H. Trumbull, one of the pioneers in this New England awakening movement. One of the speakers will be Mr. Owen D. Young, whose timely subject will be 'Take the Collar Off New England.'

Awaken Loyalty

"I say New England is awake. I do not mean that we will resort to sectional advertising which will be offensive to any other part of the country. I do not mean that we will make exaggerated claims about our states or cities. What we strive to do is to awaken in every individual in New England the same loyalty which has motivated every progressive movement in the rest of the country. Certainly, we will tell the world of New England's matchless advantages. Of course, we will talk about our industrial achievements, our agricultural pursuits, our great educational institutions, outranking as they do those in any section of the world; our unlimited money power,

"Miss America" 1926, of the Atlantic City bathing beauty contest, here has on her crown and her smile of victory.

er, our great recreational facilities, including not only lakes and mountains but also one of the greatest ocean fronts in the world; naturally we will tell of our transportation facilities both by rail, motor trucks and water, and by all means we will shout aloud about our buying power. Remember, we, of New England, are in the golden radius from a merchandising point of view for within a few hours of any point in New England are those great trading centers of New York and Boston.

Here's Loyalty

Maybe you would like an example of community loyalty. Here is one contained in a letter from a woman at Seward, Neb., who received a questionnaire from one of the greatest publications in the world which was helping its advertisers by making a survey of the customs and buying power of the country. Before I read it, may I ask you to follow me carefully with the idea of recalling it possible, any instance where some New Englander took the time to write, not a humble defense but such a strong endorsement for his section of the country:

Seward, Neb., Sept. 1, 1917.

Dear Madam:

Your favor asking various questions, is duly received. I think I shall answer them in my own way. I am pleased to realize that you, living in an age of electricity, are inclined to sympathize with us out-time barbarians, of whom you confess you are not. I am sure that you, as still living in the age of coal stoves, etc. As a matter of fact, water runs down hill here, very much as it does in New England, and a group of gentlemen, observing that phenomenon, assumed that it might generate electricity as with you, and they installed a plant, with the result that we farmers also light our homes, cook our meals, wash, iron, churn, grind our grain, pump water, milk cows by electrical power, etc.—much as doubtless you farmers do, although I have noticed a great many who, when visiting at the home of my ancestors in Bristol in the state of Rhode Island which lies a little to the south of Massachusetts.

Some of us also read on occasion about desert politicians and the daily newspapers are left at our door about as early as The Transcript finds its way to your doors. Almost any county in the state could supply more blooded stock than the whole of Massachusetts. I do not believe there is a farmer in this country who does not own from one to two or three automobiles. Most of us see a good deal of the country. This family has just made a little run of 1400 miles through Colorado and I am inclined to think it will visit your part of the country next summer. However, traveling in New England becomes each year more and more difficult, as we do not understand Canadian French, Portuguese, or any of the Slavic languages.

I regret that the cut at the head of this letter shows our farm buildings, a part of them at least, instead of those of our neighbors, as our improvements are somewhat obsolete. I assure you, my dear madam, that the Central West is not behind New England. Indeed, I am positive we have much more of our country as a whole than do the denizens of your section. I am well acquainted with the location of King's Chapel, the Granary Burying Ground, Copp's Hill, and many other objects which attained historical importance before politicians deemed it necessary to have Gaelic taught in your primary schools and all the Yankees had not yet emigrated to Kansas. I regret that you people do not travel more in the hinterland of America. You would find it interesting. It is, as my husband says, a h— of a fine country.

Yours truly,
Know Your Subject.

"And now I want you. Our success in this great campaign will depend entirely upon the extent to which we, as individuals, get behind this movement. We must know our country to talk about it. We must start boosting and stop knocking. We must divert the

"RUDY" SCORES BIG HIT IN "SON OF THE SHEIK"

Valentino's Last and Greatest Film Showing Again Tonight and Tomorrow.

Last night an over-capacity house viewed the first local showing of Rudolph Valentino's latest, last and greatest picture, "The Son of the Sheik." Without doubt the State Theater's first attraction for its fall and winter season made a tremendous hit. "Wonderful!" was the comment heard on every side after the show.

This great feature will play at the State twice again tonight, and three times tomorrow, once in the afternoon and twice in the evening. To all those who attend the matinee tomorrow afternoon, an autographed photo of Rudolph Valentino will be given.

"The Son of the Sheik" is a fascinating drama of the land of endless sands and where love triumphs most fervently, and where hate is greatest. Rudy has a role that offers him the greatest opportunity he has ever had, and he makes the most of it. He began his illustrious career with "The Sheik," and incidentally finished it with "The Son of the Sheik," a sequel to the former picture.

"The Son of the Sheik" is devoted in his love, and most wrathful and unforgetting in his hate. He is dashing, romantic, heroic, and makes a most fitting picture with which to ring down forever the curtain of life on his work.

This will be the last time that the movie public of Manchester will have a chance to see the screen's greatest lover in a current attraction. The State orchestra presents a special musical arrangement with each performance.

"Country Store Nite" has been changed from Thursday to Wednesday night this week because of the opening of the vaudeville season. This week there will be a bigger and better "Country Store" than ever before. There will be loads and loads of presents, pleasant surprises, and lots of fun. Do not miss it. And with the country store there will be a double feature picture program of quality. It will most certainly be a big bargain show.

Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week will be red letter days. On those days the fall and winter vaudeville season will open with five acts of select vaudeville. All these acts are guaranteed by the management to be of the best quality obtainable.

With the vaudeville program will be a latest Corina Griffith picture, "Into Her Kingdom." In this film the charming Corinne steps from comedy to masterful drama. People laughed with Corinne in "Mlle. Modiste"; now they hold onto edges of their chairs as they view her dramatic achievements in "Into Her Kingdom."

"SPARROWS" MAKE HIT AT CIRCLE RE-OPENING

"The World's Sweetheart" Is Great in Her Latest Film of Love and Comedy.

"Sparrows," Mary Pickford's latest picture, played to capacity audiences at the grand re-opening of the Circle theater last night. It scored a big hit, for it is a really fine drama. The new play organ also went over big with the crowd.

The story of this film deals with a baby farm whose owner is a cruel old rascal who would just as soon murder his own children as let them "out of the way" if it had not been for "Mama Mollie," as Mary Pickford is known in this picture. She is a captivating little heroine who will win your heart. She's daring and fights desperately against big odds for the welfare of her retinue of little half starved waifs. And she wins out in the end, too.

A THOUGHT

ALL FOR NOTHING

Paris—A tourist car full of people was delayed on a road near here by a traffic jam. A party of bystanders began to shout remarks about "dirty Americans." A brick was thrown into the car. A bottle of wine was thrown into the crowd. With a fist fight going full tilt, it was discovered that everyone was talking French. There was not a single American in the group. The bus carried some factory workers on their annual outing.

CHAPTER I

Mrs. Lane lowered her heavy, middle-aged body into her chair with a groan. The family paid no attention.

"Where's Cherry, Faith? She'll be late for work. You shouldn't let her oversleep so often."

"No, it's not too short," Faith said. "It's three inches below my knees and Cherry wears hers so the knee cap shows."

"I wish you wouldn't call me Junior, Dad." The tall, very thin, good-looking boy paused to straighten his new dark blue, polka-dotted tie at the murky mirror of the sideboard.

"It's a long lane that has no turning," Joy laughed shrilly. "That's where they got your nickname, Pop. He's about the longest lane in the world, I guess. Ain't you got a silly name—Lance? Me—Joy Lane! All the kids tease me—call me 'Giggly Alley'! And Cherry Lane—the kids say that a street in New York—"

mother interrupted sharply. "Faith Hope, Charity! I thought they were lovely names. But with Hope dead—God rest her blessed little soul!—and Charity calling herself Cherry—"

"Well, Mother, they haven't nicknamed me," Faith smiled at her fondly, as she filled the half-brother and drew it scraggly across the linoleum of the dining room floor, to plump herself down as close beside her mother as possible.

"How are you this morning, Muggy darling? Did your bad little girl wake you up when she came home last night? I walked so careful! And I tiptoed in so easy to kiss you good night! You were sleeping like a lamb, and I just quarrel. "I'm tryin' my best to land that Hathaway contract. Two six-room-and-bath bungalows."

"Daddy," Cherry said, the musical sweetness of her voice edged slightly with contempt. "I do wish you'd quit working on the jobs yourself. I tell the girls and the fellows I go with that my father is a contractor, and then they see you in overalls, carpentering."

"You shouldn't say things that aren't true, Cherry," Faith said quietly, as she slipped into her father's vacated chair and drew toward her. "Father is a carpenter, and a good one, and it's just enterprise on his part that makes him land a small bit of contracting now and then. I hope you get the Hathaway contract, Dad. What's your bid?"

"Six thousand, three hundred and fifty," her father answered, straightening his bent shoulders and looking down at her with boundless pride and affection.

"Your fingerin' helped me a lot. Ain't so good at figure myself. But I think Halloran is going to underbid me—crooked as a dog's hind leg. Halloran is. He'll get the job at the lowest bid, then ring in a bunch of extras. Don't see how he gets away with it."

"I wish you wouldn't use such language in front of the children, Jim," Mrs. Lane complained wearily, as she scraped butter upon her fourth piece of toast and reached for jam.

Joy Lane giggled. "Darnedest! That's an awful old-fashioned curse word! You ought to hear Long reel 'em off, Mom—damn 'n he—"

"Joy, leave the table this minute!" Her mother half rose from her chair, then sank back with a groan. "Oh, dear! If life isn't one thing after another!"

"I don't see how you can eat eggs scrambled with cream and butter, and stay as thin as you are," Faith Lane commented, a little enviously, as she set the hot plate down before her sister. "I'd get fat, too. Of course, you aren't really fat—just plump!"

"I dance it off," Cherry laughed. "Umm! That tastes good! You are a good cook, Faith, you sweet old thing! If I stayed at home all day, loling around the house, I'd get fat, too. Of course, you aren't really fat—just plump!"

Miss Anna Chambers has returned to Briton, Mass., after visiting her parents Mr. and Mrs. Robert Chambers of Knox street.

There will be a special meeting of the Holy Name Society of St. Bridget's church tonight in the parish hall at 8 o'clock. The purpose will be to further arrangements for an old-fashioned Huskin' Bee which will be held some time in October. At a well attended session last Thursday evening, it was decided to hold a Huskin' Bee and to hold a meeting tonight to consider the matter further.

A daughter was born yesterday morning to Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hadden, of 101 Laurel street, at the Memorial hospital.

C. Elmore Watkins is at Tufts College today supervising the installation of furniture in Fletcher hall. The local firm obtained the contract of furnishing 96 rooms in the dormitories.

FUNERAL OF KERIN MOONEY.

The funeral of Kerin Mooney was held this morning at 9 o'clock in St. James' church where a requiem mass was sung by Rev. James P. Timmins. As the body was borne into the church the choir sang "Nearer My God to Thee" and at the offertory Mrs. Buckley sang "Ave Maria." As the body was brought out of the church Mrs. Claire Brennan sang "When Evening Comes."

A large crowd attended the church and a profusion of floral tributes was evident. The bearers were Clarence Borst, Edward Strauss, Phillip Dwyer, Joseph Miner, Francis Quinn and Edward Dwyer. Burial was in St. James' cemetery.

LIFEGUARD HOME.

There were no drownings at Lake Bomazeen this year where Frank D'Amico, formerly lifeguard at Globe Hollow, was in charge this summer. Lifeguard D'Amico did not have any opportunity this year to add to his 174 lives saved. The local man returned to Manchester last week after being in Vermont all summer and will remain here until after Christmas when he will go to Ormond Beach, Florida, for the winter. D'Amico says he will go to Pennsylvania next year where he will be in charge of a $150,000 swimming pool at a resort near Pittsburgh.

S. A. MEETING.

There will be a meeting at the Salvation Army canteen this evening at 8 o'clock. It will be an informal reception to one of the local corps former officers, Field Major William Antrim of San Francisco who is in the East visiting relatives and will be in Manchester for the evening. He will be accompanied by Commandant M. Donald and Adjutant James Campbell of Springfield, Mass. A cordial invitation is extended to all to attend.

Saturday he was forced to quit work and today the knee was placed in a cast.
