

TWO SHIPS IN PERIL, ONE IS FEARED LOST

British Freighter With 30 Believed Sunk Off Florida; American Vessel Races for Shore Afire.

New York, Sept. 15.—The British freighter Loyal Citizen sank in a tropical storm off the Florida coast during the night and her crew of thirty are afloat in lifeboats or drowned according to information received today from the Dutch tanker Denhaag.

The tanker's captain reported he answered S. O. S. call from the sinking freighter but saw no sign of her when he reached the position given in the distress signal.

The Denhaag scoured the vicinity for lifeboats, its radio message said, but saw nothing but a black rolling sea.

American Ship Afire
Meanwhile, another S. O. S. call from the Robin Gray, of American registry, was answered by the Coast Guard cutter Manning from Norfolk and the cutter Modoc from Wilmington, N. C.

The Robin Gray, with a crew of thirty-eight, reported a fire in her hold and indicated she was racing toward Frying Pan shoals off the North Carolina coast. The vessel carried a general cargo and was bound from New York and Norfolk for the Pacific coast via Panama Canal.

Belief that the Loyal Citizen had gone down with all hands was strengthened later today when the Independent Wireless Company reported that the Denhaag had sighted a capsized "feboat" tossing in the stormy sea at approximately the point which the freighter was last heard from.

Little Chance for Boats
The message from the Denhaag stated that it was unlikely that any boats were successfully launched from the ship, as the sea was too heavy.

Two tankers in the same general position, the Lumina and the Panad Head, reported that they had been unable to locate the Loyal Citizen despite a thorough search of surrounding waters. The lost vessel, which was built in 1906, was of 4,007 tons gross register.

The last S. O. S. call received said "Number three hold full of water, rails awash, take to lifeboats soon."

Gray Not in Port
Wilmington, N. C., Sept. 15.—The steamer Robin Gray, reported to be headed for Wilmington with fire in her No. 2 hold, had not arrived here at noon today. The coast guard cutter Manning has been dispatched to the burning vessel's aid.

NEW YORK-PARIS FLIGHT DELAYED

Storms Off Newfoundland Cause Fonck to Put Off Start Till Tomorrow.

Westbury, N. Y., Sept. 15.—The New York-to-Paris flight will not start until dawn tomorrow owing to unfavorable weather reports, Captain Rene Fonck, the flight leader, announced early today.

DEMOCRATS GROPE FOR SENATE NAME

Have No Candidate to Oppose to Bingham as Convention Opens Tonight.

New Haven, Sept. 15.—Democrats gathering here today for the state convention which opens tonight at music hall with a keynote speech by Town Clerk Frank P. Fenton of Wilmantic, minority leader in the 1925 House, appeared to have no definite slate ready and the early arriving delegates earnestly asked one another who was to be named to oppose Senator Hiram Bingham and the other Republican nominees.

Early this afternoon, state chairman James J. Walsh of Meriden, said at Democratic headquarters in the Taft Hotel, that the state committee had "no cut and dried program" for the convention.

The chairman intimated that, late in the afternoon, he might be able to make an important announcement presumably concerning the willingness of a prominent Democrat to run for United States senator.

Search Latest to Refuse
Judge John K. Beach, who retired last year from the state supreme court, has followed President Emeritus Arthur T. Hadley of Yale and Editor Norris G. Osborn of the New Haven Journal-Courier in refusing to consider the nomination to run against Bingham.

The message from the Denhaag stated that it was unlikely that any boats were successfully launched from the ship, as the sea was too heavy.

APRIL JURY IS CALLED IN THE HALL MURDER

Simpson Springs Surprise on Defence by Sudden Action for Indictment of Three Under Arrest.

somerville, N. J., Sept. 15.—Special Prosecutor Alexander Simpson planned to ask the April panel of the grand jury today to return murder indictments against Mrs. Frances Stevens Hall, her brother "Willie" Stevens, and her cousin, Henry De La Bruyere Carpenter, in the double killing of Rev. Edward W. Hall and Mrs. Eleanor Mills four years ago last night.

The dramatic suddenness with which the grand jury was summoned came like a bombshell. Thirty witnesses, the cream of the prosecution's list, gathered in Somerville early this morning to be ready to testify. Startling hidden evidence is expected to be revealed when Simpson presents his case to the jury.

Decision to Defence
The decision to place the evidence before the retiring April panel took the defence attorneys by surprise. It had been expected the case would be considered by the September jury which convenes next Tuesday.

"For reasons satisfactory to the court," Justice Parker told the jurors, "you have been recalled here today for the special purpose of considering the evidence relating to the alleged murder of the Rev. Edward W. Hall and Mrs. Eleanor Mills some four years ago, with a view of ascertaining whether one or more indictments ought to be found in this matter, and if so who should be the parties indicted."

Justice Parker explained to the jurors that their first move must be to decide whether Dr. Hall and Mrs. Mills actually were murdered. When this fact should be established, he said, then the jury must decide whether the evidence presented warranted the holding of one or more persons for trial. They need not concern themselves with the degree of murder involved, he added, as that was up to the trial jury.

Many important witnesses had already entered the court when the special charge was begun. Among them were Ralph Gorseline, who was near the scene of the crime; James Mills, husband of the murdered woman; Barbara Tough, former maid in the Hall home; and Arthur Applegate, whose appearance led to the report that an indictment would be sought against Henry Stevens also.

Applegate was one of those named by Stevens to establish his alibi for the murder night. He is a brother of Willie Stevens and Mrs. Hall and a cousin of Carpenter.

MEIGHEN'S CANADIAN MINISTRY DEFEATED
King, Returning to Power, Will Join With Andrews in War on Rum Smuggling.

Ottawa, Ont., Sept. 15.—The Meighen ministry was defeated in the general elections yesterday and Premier Mackenzie King will be returned to power. It was indicated today that King and his ministry, when sworn in, will immediately have a royal commission investigation of smuggling between Canada and the United States and will confer with General Andrews of the United States prohibition forces to halt the flow of liquor across the border.

As a result of the landslide that ousted the Meighen ministry, King will have 118 Liberal followers in the new parliament. The balance of power in the new house will again be held by Progressives, Progressive-Liberals, Laborites and Independents.

COOLIDGE PUTS EMBARGO ON ARMS TO NICARAGUA
White Pine Camp, N. Y., Sept. 15.—An embargo on shipment of arms and ammunition to Nicaragua was issued today by President Coolidge because of revolutionary conditions in the Central American republic. The proclamation was issued as effective today and will remain in force until order has been restored.

No More Work When Radio Is Perfected, Expert's Prophecy

New York, Sept. 15.—A prophecy of human progress, inconceivable in its scope, was today made by Lawrence M. Cockaday, radio engineer, attending the third annual radio world's fair.

"It won't be long now before all theatrical productions will be perfectly reproduced—both sound and vision—in every home. Motion pictures even now are being transmitted by radio. They are as yet imperfect, but should be perfected within the next year. Every home will have not only ear sets but sight sets."

"Radio will transmit power from a central heating plant, for every household in the land. Every man will carry in his pocket his own sending and receiving set."

IRISH MAY CLAIM SEAT IN COUNCIL
Free State Likely to Demand Vote in League Body Apart from Britain's.

Geneva, Sept. 15.—The League of Nations assembly today began to clear the way for the election of a new Council, upon the basis of the compromise plan suggested by the committee on reorganization of the Council, providing for nine non-permanent seats.

An obstacle loomed, however, when there were indications that the Irish Free State might seek a seat in the Council, independent of Great Britain's permanent seat.

The way for the Irish Free State claim appeared to be paved by a speech made by Sir George Foster, Canadian delegate.

BEGINS ARGUMENT IN SACCO-VANZETTI CASE
Thompson Claims to Have Shown Providence Gang Did South Branitree Murder.

Dedham, Mass., Sept. 15.—Charging federal and state operatives with conniving to "railroad" Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti to the electric chair, William G. Thompson, veteran Massachusetts lawyer, today in Norfolk county superior court began his arguments for a new trial for the men convicted of murdering a South Branitree payroll messenger and his guard.

Thompson, in the course of his charge that Sacco and Vanzetti had been railroaded, made a sensational charge against A. Mitchell Palmer, former Attorney General.

Johnson Gets Majority of 263 in Hotly Contested Republican Party Fight—Miss Cheney's Vote Is 1336; Albert Jackson Makes Fine Showing, But All Selectmen Are Retained—Russell High for Constable.

Manchester Republicans refused E. L. G. Hohenhal's nomination as Representative in the Primary held yesterday. Miss Marjory Cheney and Judge Raymond A. Johnson were renominated by wide margins. Miss Cheney's vote was 1336, Johnson's, 1127, and Hohenhal's, 864. The total vote cast by the Republicans was 2124. The total Democratic vote in the primary, in which there were no contests was 59.

The present Board of Selectmen was renamed by the Republican Primary despite the fact that Albert Jackson made a fine showing on the board but did not contest any. He made a fine showing with 1025 votes. Jackson's defeat must be attributed to the fact that the votes of his friends were not concentrated on his name.

Interest in Representative
Interest in the Republican primary centered around the Representative contest. Both the E. L. G. Hohenhal and the Albert Jackson-Johnson group worked hard during the polling hours to get out a big vote. For the few days which preceded the primaries a good campaign was conducted by the Hohenhal faction. In some sections of the town houses were canvassed and the voters asked to signify their intentions. If they were favorable to Hohenhal the names were taken and yesterday automobiles were dispatched to bring them to the polls.

The Hohenhal stump speech on the eve of the primaries although not given before a large audience was quickly spread through the town by hearsay. Automobile stickers were used and yesterday at the polls a close watch on the check-list was kept and several automobiles were pressed into service.

SEEK BOY WHO WENT WITH AN EX-CONVICT
Detroit Minister Sanctions Son's Trip, With Former Crook—Both Disappear.

Boston, Sept. 15.—A nationwide search for John Milley, son of a Detroit clergyman, who disappeared from the Michigan city in company with an ex-convict August 1 is centered today in New England. Four Detroit police detectives have arrived in Boston looking for a possible clue.

On August 1, young Milley, a high school student, left his home in company with Edward F. Cole, a former inmate of the Thomaston Me. prison, who had been befriended by the minister following his release from prison. An automobile trip to eastern cities was sanctioned by the boy's parents.

CHANNEL VICTORY NOT HER BIGGEST

By HORTENSE SAUNDERS

New York.—That remarkable 15-hour and 32-minute swim across the choppy English Channel was not the most successful one of Mille Gade Corson's life.

Granted, it took her from Gros Nèze to Dover, but her first swim around Manhattan Island back in 1921 landed her from the Hudson River into the Sea of Matrimony.

The sudden rise to fame of this swimmer, the mother of two children, uncovers a delightful romance and reveals a bit of enviable comradeship and a wholesome home life with a salty flavor to give background to the victorious feat.

Mille Gade came to this country some nine years ago from Denmark and became a swimming instructor in the Harlem branch of the Y. W. C. A.

Perhaps she decided it would be the quickest way to get around in the city of New York, when she decided to swim around Manhattan Island—at any rate, she conceived the idea and, not knowing the procedure, went down to the militia training ship, "Hullcock," stationed in the Hudson river.

"Held the lady out, will you, Corson? See if you can't dip up the map and the information she needs."

"I've got the whole day off today."

BEAT HOENTHAL, SELECTMEN RENAMED

Small taxpayer if that group sincerely desired representation on the board, Jackson was heartily congratulated by several last night because of his fine showing in his first contest.

The new municipal building was greatly admired by the voters who visited the polls. The voting was conducted with a minimum of confusion. The space about the main stairway was used for the voting machines.

Groups gathered at all of the street corners after eight o'clock and discussed the possible results. The predictions seemed to be that Hohenthal would be defeated but it was thought the contest would be very close.

Closing the polls at standard time had many puzzled. It seemed that most of the residents who were at home thought the results should be known a few minutes after eight and from that time on until half past ten, the telephone at the South End office of The Herald rang almost continuously.

From the number of calls and from the interest displayed on the streets last evening yesterday's primaries caused more discussion than any primary in the past six or seven years.

During the day up until the mills aren't it a wonder all the mosquitoes don't have the gout?

CHEMIST IS WAR'S FOE He's Breaking Up a Favorite Alibi—National Monopoly of Resources

This is the first of a series of articles by Israel Klein, science editor of The NEA Service and The Herald relating the part chemistry is taking in the welfare and progress of the world.

Chemistry is depriving war of one of its greatest alibis—the world-wide struggle for the sources of raw materials.

Natural monopoly of any one natural resource soon may be a thing of the past. The chemist is breaking it up.

Working in his research laboratory with test tube and retort, he is finding ways by which the need for foreign basic minerals is met at home.

He is substituting the chemical factory for nature in many cases. He is taking advantage of the necessities of the last war and converting its horrors into important factors for peace.

The World War has been the great leveler of national ambitions. It has forced each country to look to its own resources for the materials it had been seeking elsewhere.

Germany, dependent with other nations on Chile for her nitrates, found the British fleet blockading her supply. Her chemists quickly enough fell upon the plan of getting nitrates for sale from the world's nitrate monopoly that Chile has held over the world since being broken.

The world also was forced to look to Germany for the better dyestuffs and the war turned over to the chemical laboratories of other countries. The dye industry no longer is a German monopoly.

Nations More Independent. And so the nations and themselves independent of others in the

OPEN FORUM

HAS ANYONE PHOTO OF JOHN MATHER?

Editor, The Herald:

The celebration of the Centennial of Manchester Lodge of Masons and the plan for laying the corner stone of the new temple on October 2nd, has caused a revival of interest in Masonic events of earlier years. John Mather was the first master of the lodge to be elected by the craft. He had the office for nearly fifteen years and during the whole period of the Morgan trouble. The lodge met from time to time at his house, thus retaining its charter. The house is still standing on Mather street and is the property of Senator Robert Smith. A picture of the house will occupy a prominent place in the historical sketch which is being prepared by Superintendent Alfred F. Howes. A portrait of John Mather would be highly prized by the Masons of the town. Can any one help to find one?

NEW WATER MAIN

Work is progressing fast on the new water main which is being laid on Apol Place to the Manchester Grain Company's new warehouse. The main is being installed for the purpose of a sprinkler system in the storehouse. The work is being done by a force of nine workmen for the Manchester Water Company. Charles B. Loomis is in charge.

The new main is about half completed today. The distance from the main water pipe to the building is about 450 feet. Work was begun Monday and Mr. Loomis said today he expected it would be completed Saturday night.

"HAVOC" IS FINE VERSION OF PLAY

Great Drama, and "The Cat's Pajamas," Make Up Double Bill at Circle.

Tomorrow and Friday the Circle theatre presents an unusually fine double feature bill. One of the pictures, of a mighty drama is "Havoc." In fact it has been proclaimed the most realistic picture of the year. In "Havoc" are featured George O'Brien and Madge Bellamy.

A mighty drama of hearts, love, and booming cannons, "Havoc" vividly portrays the horrors of "the big row," and also shows how unscrupulous women may raise as much ruction as a universal war. This certainly sounds interesting, and with such a theme as a basis, Henry Wall, a playwright, made a most successful stage drama. But the Fox film in its own version of the great play, is even more interesting and dramatic. All of the big moments in the play are retained in the picture, and some extra ones are thrown in for good measure.

With all good reason New York went absolutely hughous over "The Big Parade," but people may give "Havoc" just as big a reception the country over.

"Havoc" is a picture that will capture your interest at the opening flash and hold it all the way through until the great climax.

The other picture is a Famous Players-Lasky picture, and that, of course, spells "the best show in town." The film is a whole of a laugh-maker, for it's "The Cat's Pajamas." And of all people—can you imagine it?—Ricardo Cortez and Betty Bronson are featured in the leading role. You remember the dancing, gliding, fascinating

Cortez of "The Spaniard?" And do you remember the winsome, plump, charming little Betty Bronson of "Peter Pan?" And now just think of it—these two stars are featured in a screamingly funny comedy, "The Cat's Pajamas."

Did you ever see a cat off on a bat? No? Well, then, be sure to see "The Cat's Pajamas." And you'll just tell the world it is "The Cat's Pajamas."

For the last time tonight Mary Pickford will be shown in her greatest picture, "Sparrows." Not enough can be said about the brilliancy of Mary's work in this film. She is an impish, pert little hoyden, and a tender, charming little mother. If you miss seeing this picture, you will miss one of the year's very best cinema productions. "Ask the man who's seen it."

Planned On a Scale to Outdo Last Year's Successful Sale

WE would like to have a thousand men walk in here and say "here's where I save 1.00 money." One look at these overcoats and you will shout for joy. They certainly are snappy—the quality is 100 per cent, and the savings are immense. This is the second year for this sale. We have planned it carefully so that your purchase now will justify your wisdom in buying in September what you ordinarily would not buy until you were forced to late in November. The importance of this event is that you are buying AN OVERCOAT now BEFORE THE SEASON begins for less than we could possibly sell the same quality later on. Included are all the new fall shades including blue, in such smart models as tube, and wedge coats for the snappy dresser. There are beautiful hard finishes for wear as well as the soft rich fleecy cloths. There are plenty of plaid backs and that good through and through so many men prefer. Sizes 33 to 46.

WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 15, 1926.

THE PRIMARY

Manchester's Republican town primary results in the production of a list of candidates which it can offer to the electors without apology—and that is better praise than it may sound like at first speaking.

The determination of the party voters to return to office the entire board of selectmen is a wise one. These men are experienced. They are, as a body and as individuals, devoted to the interests of the community. They are, to an individual, capable, honorable, representative citizens. They are used to each other. They form an admirable working mechanism. Change in the board at this time is neither necessary nor desirable. The primary did well to make no amendment in its list of candidates.

In its adhesion to the present legislative representatives the primary did no more than fulfill a moral obligation to two extremely efficient and worthy public servants and to the town. It is a slight thing to obtain really capable representation in the Connecticut legislature such as Manchester enjoys. It would have been a serious error for the party to have introduced any new element into the situation this year. In Miss Cheney and Judge Johnson the party has candidates who are not only assured of re-election but who, by native equipment and by experience, are especially qualified to serve the community as its delegates in the state's parliament.

Because of its preponderant strength at the polls the Republican party owes a very special responsibility to the people—all the people—of Manchester. It vindicated that responsibility yesterday in the selection of its nominees. But it would appear as if the entire responsibility did not end there. An attempt was made to seize the machinery of the party by practical outsiders in the interest of a single outside individual. There is something wrong when such a raid is possible. It is time for a close scrutiny of the primary law for the purpose of ascertaining whether it is not possible, under that law, to prevent destructionists from voting in party primaries for destructionist candidates. And if it should turn out to be impossible, under the present letter of the law, to carry out the law's spirit, then it would seem to be demanded, in the public interest, that the law be amended.

Persons who have no intention whatever of abiding by the determinations of a primary have no business with a voice in the primary's deliberations. Proforma registration is not alone an adequate safeguard of the party primary.

CONVENTION

The Republican party of Connecticut demonstrated in its state convention that it is a virile, red blooded organization, possessing every qualification for political control and deserving of it. It named a list of candidates of extraordinary fitness. The renominations that it made were absolutely demanded, not by party exigency but by the best interest of all the people of the state. It offers to the voters an able, admired and virile governor for re-election. It offers for re-election a United States senator of already proven ability of far more than ordinary grade, a fitting colleague to a senior of outstanding genius. It offers in the other renamed candidates men whose records withstand every test.

Its two contests were conducted with wholesome vigor, in the best possible spirit of intra-party competition. In the selection of acting Lieutenant-Governor Brainard for second place on the state ticket the convention was undoubtedly influenced somewhat by the fact that, as promoted incumbent of the office, he was entitled to an elective term, other things being equal. And in the nomination of Judge Alling as attorney-general choice was made of one first class candidate over another first class candidate in a fair contest and an open field.

The Republican party comes out of its Connecticut convention of 1926 like an athlete, fit for a glorious fight—with nobody worthy of his mettle to fight. For the sake of the permanence of its well being, so that it might be sure of not going soft, it is a genuine pity that the opposition in this state has fallen into its present condition of decrepitude.

It would be fine to take a few wallops as well as to give them, in November. But as it is the Democrats will have to serve the G. O. P. as a punching bag.

RIDICULOUS

Those who have accused President Coolidge of timidity and bledness must have been a bit surprised at the rapidity of his counter-punch at the Democratic tax plan launched as a basis for the congressional campaign.

The President smashed back with lightning rapidity and with a deal of muscle in the blow, when he pointed out the ridiculousness of the position of those who, in the same breath, talk of war debt cancellation and of such reductions in taxation as the $660,000,000 cut demanded by Senator Simmons of North Carolina, ranking Democrat on the Finance Committee, who has sounded the slogan for his party.

The President makes no straddle. He says, straight from the shoulder, that any appreciable tax reduction in the immediate future is out of the question unless the government is prepared to abandon the sinking fund, let the national debt run at large and continue indefinitely the absorption of $800,000,000 of the public's money every year by the interest account. And certainly to abandon any idea of debt modification or cancellation.

Whatever views the average American may hold on either debt cancellation or tax reduction, one thing is certain—the same individual cannot advocate both without adopting an utterly silly attitude. And neither can a party. There may be something to be said for cancellation. There may be something to be said for a tax cut next year. It is impossible for the same advocate to say something for both, for the one flatly contradicts the other.

In his quick seizure on this obvious weak spot in the opposition's position Mr. Coolidge has scored, promptly and effectually.

BLOC VOTING

The quality of the sense of political responsibility that backed E. L. G. Hohenthal in yesterday's Republican primary is traceable through the table of returns. In what was, presumably and legally, a meeting of the Republican electors of the town of Manchester, held for the purpose of determining its entire list of candidates for the coming election, more than half of those persons who voted to place Hohenthal's name on the ticket as a candidate for the position of town representative in the Legislature deliberately declined to take any part in the business of the day beyond casting a vote for this one special candidate.

Note how the figures work out: The largest vote received by any person was that of Thomas J. Rogers, candidate for selectman, who received 1423. Miss Marjory Cheney, candidate for representative, received 1336. It is a fair presumption that the 87 persons who thus voted for Rogers and failed to vote for Miss Cheney voted for Hohenthal. Judge Raymond A. Johnson, candidate for representative, received 1127 votes. It is a fair presumption that the 296 persons who voted for Rogers and did not vote for Johnson voted for Hohenthal. This accounts for 333 of the Hohenthal votes.

And it leaves 481 Hohenthal votes that do not appear, by any conceivable examination of the returns, as having been given to any other candidate for any other office. There are two deductions to be drawn from this. The first is that 481 persons voted for a prohibition candidate in a Republican primary without any intention whatever of functioning as members of the Republican party. That this is a violation of the spirit of the primary law goes without saying, though regrettably it may not involve any violation of the letter of the statute. Of the morality of such a proceeding, of the kind of citizenship it demonstrates, the less said the better.

The other deduction is that there has never been, in Manchester history, a more complete exemplification of the worst kind of "machine" politics than is shown by this trial of the ballots.

Does anyone imagine, for a moment, that more than half of the Hohenthal vote was cast in this manner by sheer confidence?

No more effective arrangement could have possibly been arrived at, in the Hohenthal interest, than to have his supporters refrain from voting for any one else. In his open campaign Hohenthal directed his drive at Judge Johnson, to be sure. But it was no more to his benefit to beat Johnson than to beat Miss Cheney. If he could beat either he would win. It was always possible that, after all, Miss Cheney's vote might be less than Johnson's. It was not to the Hohenthal interest to aid her candidacy any more than to aid Johnson's. And so the Hohenthal phalanx moved to the polls with the trick up its sleeve of scratching everybody else and just voting for Hohenthal.

Why anybody should get excited about the Ku Klux Klan, so long as it refrains from acts of violence, we do not see. It is not possible to take seriously an organization, essentially non-Masonic, which refers to itself as "the Masonic body in action," which has a unit which calls itself the "Theodore Roosevelt Ku Klux Klan" and which thanks God that General George Washington "did not have a single Catholic among his officers" when there were scores of them, as everybody not quite illiterate knows.

New York, Sept. 15.—Broadway personalities: No. 1—The blank looking man with the inevitable two puppies for sale. He says he does his best business around midnight or after. The theatre crowd says "how cute" but seldom buys. But if a chorine passes on the arm of her Johnnie and says "how cute" the sale is as good as made. Yet having, passed this man every night for a week, I would swear the two puppies are always the same. But, then, I never was good at faces.

No. 2—The good-hearted, grinning cop who makes his gesture of chasing the Charleston kids off the street, but gives them plenty of time to pick up their dimes. I'm sure I met this same fellow in the Horatio Alger stories when I was about 13. He was the copper that always helped the poor hero arriving in New York and then and there I swore to build a monument to him. Here it is!

No. 3—The loud shouting salesman of rubber chickens and 10-cent airplanes. "Take one home to the children. At ha—fun for everyone!" he cries and snaps a piece of trick rubber to prove the durability. But I've never known anyone who was able to blow the darn things up without bursting them. Some night I'm going to Broadway armed with a pin.

It has been a tough summer, apparently, and the Broadway curbstone where jazz band players gather while waiting for jobs to show up takes on the appearance of a movie mob scene. I am told there are more musicians out of work here now than at any other time.

Here's a new one on us: A prominent night club dancer took our insurance with Lloyd's to cover the loss of his petty dancing partner in the event of her marriage. He explains that he spent many years developing her as a dancer and her presence makes possible a $500 a week income. Why doesn't he marry her himself, you ask. Perhaps his wife won't let him.

Sandwich bars are now sweeping this fair city. There's at least one of them to a block and they are designed as a sort of substitute for the saloon. Near beer is sold and an assortment of sandwiches served. No, Rollo, they're not free! Like so many of the old beer bars they are backed by brewers.

The particular novelty of these places lies in the effort to make the servants look as much like European bar-maids as possible. Strapping German and Scandinavian women are employed and joke robustly with the customers.

Stewart's WASHINGTON LETTERS

By CHARLES P. STEWART

Washington, Sept. 15.—The Washington monument is a landmark certainly.

But why all this raving about its good looks.

People come from all over this broad land and go down to the park where that monument stands and look at it and enthuse and then go home and tell everybody what a perfectly beautiful thing it is.

I can't see it so myself. Not that I've anything against it. I wouldn't call it ugly, but neither is it particularly ornamental, so far as I can make out. It's just negative. It isn't a blot on the landscape but the landscape would be equally satisfactory if it weren't there.

The impression I get is that people go into monument stands and because they've been told in advance that, when they see it, that's what they'll throw.

The Washington monument is nothing but a plain obelisk. The original Egyptian obelisks are interesting in various ways. They're not aesthetic appeal but they're curiosities. There's the puzzle how the old Egyptians cut 'em out in such large chunks and got 'em set up. Then the inscriptions on the sides contain information well worth finding out. But beautiful?—not a bit.

That the Washington monument is a curiosity, to, as a beck of a big sample of masonry, I'm prepared to admit. But what there is beautiful about it I'll be blamed if I can make out.

It's admirers talk about the Washington monument's "simplicity of line." So has a drygoods box got "simplicity of line." And a box car. And an oil derrick. A pile driver has purity and simplicity of line till you can't rest. The only thing I can make out to distinguish the Washington monument is bulk. The Chicago packing houses have bulk—and simplicity of line, as well—and nobody writes home to mother how majestic and impressive and perfectly lovely they are. They're all right. They have their function—which is more than the Washington monument can say. But you don't worship at 'em, like a shrine.

Looking at it from a long way off, you could easily mistake the Washington monument for a light-house. It has the same "simplicity of line." Coming down the Connecticut avenue hill in a rubber-neck wagon one day, I saw and heard the conductor point to a teeny-weeny little needle against the skyline and inform his passengers that that was the Washington monument in the distance. At that minute there came a puff of smoke from the upper end of the needle. It was a factory chimney and he'd got 'em mixed up.

The view of Washington from the top of the monument is pretty good, but that's up to Washington, and not the monument, and even at that you can get a better view of the capital from an aeroplane.

I don't criticize the monument. It does no harm. On the other hand, I can't discover that it does any good.

In some folks' mind it may arouse patriotic thoughts—of the Revolution and the Declaration of Independence and the Founding Fathers and George Washington and all that. If so, it's a good thing. As for me, I get more kick out of seeing George's picture on a dollar bill.

QUEER QUIRKS OF NATURE

By AUSTIN H. CLARK

Jelly-Fish

The Japanese edible jelly-fish is abundant in the island sea and is also found off the coast of China. A very similar, not indeed identical, sort is found in the Indian ocean, and closely related kinds live in the eastern Pacific and in the Malay region, and on our coasts from North Carolina to Cape Cod.

The Japanese preserve these jelly-fishes with a mixture of alum and salt, or between the steamed leaves of a kind of oak. When desired for food they are soaked in water and flavored with condiments, and when so prepared constitute an agreeable dish.

There are several other edible kinds of jelly-fishes. One is regularly eaten in the Philippines, and in times past others were used as food in southern and western Europe, including southern England as we learn from the old books on Cornwall.

POE'S STORIES: Hop-Frog (1)

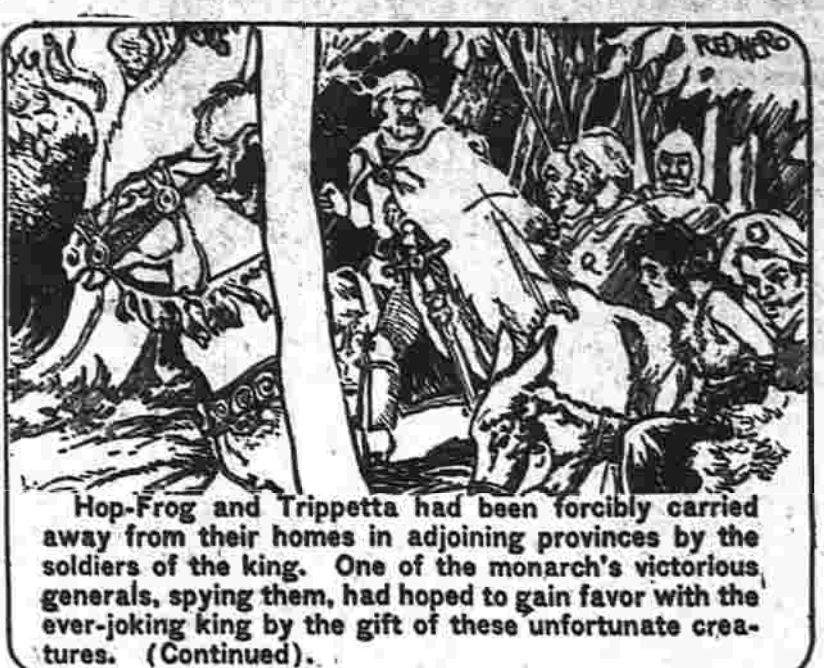

The king was a famous joker. He seemed to live only for pranks. His seven ministers, oily, fat men, like the king, also were noted for their jovial accomplishments. Practical jokes excited the king's admiration especially, but he also enjoyed jokes that bordered on the crude and the cruel.

In the king's court was the jester, Hop-Frog, a crippled dwarf who could not walk, but was only able to hop.

Hop-Frog's greatest friend was a dancing girl, Trippetta. Although a dwarf, too, she was exquisitely formed and a marvelous dancer.

Hop-Frog and Trippetta had been forcibly carried away from their homes in adjoining provinces by the soldiers of the king. One of the monarch's victorious generals, spying them, had hoped to gain favor with the over-joking king by the gift of these unfortunate creatures. (Continued).

G. O. P. PLANS VIVID CAMPAIGN IN CONN.

Hartford, Sept. 15.—With a united front for the first time in twenty years Republicans throughout the state were today setting their plans for the election of November. A vivid campaign will be conducted, entering every corner of the state and showing the people their candidates for office. J. Henry Roraback is again at the party helm, having been re-named chairman and treasurer of the Republican State Central Committee, with Miss Catherine Byrne, of Putnam, vice-chairman. Mr. Roraback is expected to keep in their present positions Judge A. W. Creedon, of Hartford, as secretary, and Mrs. E. W. Frisbie, of Hartford, and Clarence G. Willard, of New Haven, assistant secretaries. Their formal re-appointments to come later in the week. Headquarters of various city organizations of the Republican party will be opened next Monday or shortly thereafter until the state is covered. A series of dinners throughout the state is being planned by individuals, with the state ticket members as guests and speakers, and the various autumn fairs will be visited by the candidates.

SUSPENDED DRIVERS' LIST ANNOUNCED

The weekly list of operators whose licenses to drive automobiles in Connecticut have been suspended for one year for driving while under the influence of liquor was given out today at the state motor vehicle department as a part of the effort to reduce this highway menace. There are twenty-six names on the list. Two names are appealed. Four were Connecticut operators convicted in other states. The department statement advised people to notify the department or the police in case they should see any of the suspended drivers operating motor vehicles. Topping the list are Daniel Beecher, Torrington; Daniel Capotosti, Willimantic; Charles J. Casey, Hartford; Fred A. Channey, Waterbury; Muzio, Ciaramello, New London; William J. SARATOGA OFFICIALS GUILTY, SAYS JUDGE

Report on Gambling Probe Condemns Three—Smith Orders Speedy Answer. Albany, N. Y., Sept. 15.—Gov. Al Smith today made public the report of the investigation of gambling conducted at Saratoga Springs made by Supreme Court Justice Christopher J. Heffernan, and at the same time called on three Saratoga officials to file an answer to the report with him not later than Monday, September 20. The three officials, who were charged with being negligent in their duty toward alleged gambling at Saratoga, are District Attorney Charles B. Andrews, Sheriff Arthur G. Wilmut and Dr. Arthur J. Leonard, commissioner of public safety. In his report to the governor, Justice Heffernan charged that the three officials are "guilty of wilful and criminal violation of public duty and their conduct merits the severest condemnation." Claims by counsel for the three officials that they had no knowledge of gambling at Saratoga was characterized by Justice Heffernan as a "pretense and a sham."

Local Sport Chatter

Football claimed its first victim in the 1926 season yesterday in Hartford when John L. Walker, 18 years-old, of 9 Whiting street, died following practice.

With the prevailing cool weather, basketball talk is once more looming over the distant horizon. Is Manchester to have a representative team this season?

It seems to be the general pre-conception that basketball conditions here should be forced to undergo a complete renovation.

It is true that attempts have been made in previous years to organize a representative basketball team in Manchester with little or no success.

However, this season, it appears that another, bigger attempt will be made to put Manchester back into the sporting limelight in basketball.

The preceding four paragraphs should not be taken as the first blow of a campaign against local clubs which have been putting basketball teams on the court.

Briefly, we have been in the rut long enough. Let's snap out of it. We can if we faithfully try.

JEFFRIES, FAMOUS OLD BATTLER, PICKS JACK TO WHIP TUNNEY

Chicago, Sept. 15.—As becomes an elder statesman, Jim Jeffries now doing a vaudeville skit with Tom Sharkey, the latter a minor ring statesman himself once upon a time, makes a long-range forecast on the outcome of what will happen at the Sequoi grounds this coming Sept. 23.

Jim, still as big and husky as ever, and once wearer of the same crown that Dempsey and Gene Tunney will mix it to retain or possess, says great clairvoyant power is needed to see what's going to happen on the aforesaid date mentioned.

"Dempsey's going to win and win easily," so Jim opines. "Why?" "Because Jack has fought more tough men than Tunney. The only great fighter Tunney licked was Tommy Gibbons. Had he licked or even met more men like Firpo, I might give him a better chance," says Jim.

TUNNEY SAYS DEMPSEY IS OPEN TO UPPERCUT. Stroudsburg, Pa., Sept. 15.—Refreshed physically and mentally by a rest yesterday, Gene Tunney got back to the training grind today in preparation for his championship bout with Jack Dempsey.

Gene Tunney's style of fighting is "made to order" for him, "Dempsey's style of fighting is such that he is wide open to a hooking uppercut from either hand and his stance is such that he can be sent back on his heels and kept there," he asserted.

WORTH IN SPORT KNOWING

Bobby Jones has won the national amateur golf crown the last two seasons. He's one of the very few to turn such a trick. Oddly enough, the Georgia star overwhelmed his opponent in each final round.

Ten Rounds With Dempsey

BY JOE WILLIAMS

Two Humiliating Experiences Stand Out Conspicuously in Dempsey's Pugilistic Career.

BY JOE WILLIAMS

There have been very few cheers in Jack Dempsey's life as a fighter. The one time he was cheered he came within a fluttering fraction of losing the championship.

"I shot the old under-taker's punch at his jaw and in my eagerness to land I missed. The miss almost proved fatal. Firpo countered with a right that caught me close to the button. Not many of the ring-siders saw it. I didn't either, but I felt it.

"That blow made me dizzy. I remained dizzy throughout the round. I was dizzy before Firpo half hit and half hoveled me over the ropes. If it hadn't been for those cheers I would have fought a different fight and the chances of my being hit by that right hand would have been hit by that right hand.

"But it was Jeanette. Kearns assured him there would be no rough stuff. By that he meant Dempsey wouldn't knock the Battler out with the first punch. What he did do was to wait until the third round.

Diamond Disputes Decided

Until 1920 it was permissible for the pitcher to get on the rubber without having the ball in his possession, provided he made no motion to deliver it to the batsman.

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE
The LANES are an average American family, hard up but ambitious.

There is MRS. LANE, fat, middle-aged, richly. MR. LANE, a carpenter, trying to land a small contracting job with a young business man, BOB HATHAWAY, who has been invited to dinner.

JUNIOR, 21, irresponsible, wild.

FAITH, the stay-at-home dresser for the family, tall, splendidly built, but not pretty.

CERRY, a stenographer, pretty, tiny, with strange topaz eyes.

JOY, 9, the irresponsible, who sticks a finger in everyone's pie. CERRY and Junior have both lost their jobs, and Cherry sets out to find a new one, making a telephone date with CHESTER HART, Faith's own "steady," whom Cherry has succeeded in "ramping." Faith cleans house vigorously to make it nice for Bob Hathaway's visit, and under Cherry's pillow finds a letter from ALBERT ETTLESON, a traveling man of Indianapolis, whom Cherry has evidently picked up, although she has a swarm of home-town suitors.

When Faith is introduced to Bob Hathaway, Chester is forgotten.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER III

"Isn't he adorable?" Cherry whispered to Faith, while Mrs. Lane was engaging Bob Hathaway in conversation. "I've fallen for him already! Do I look all right, honey? I didn't have time to change my dress." She smoothed the short, petaloid green skirt, fluffed her artfully tousled copper-and-gold curls with expert fingers, then, before Faith could answer, jumped up from theavenport and ran to lay a hand on Faith's shoulder with expert friendliness upon Bob Hathaway's arm.

"Dinner's ready, Mr. Hathaway. I hope you're starved so you'll overlook any shortcomings." Whirling lightly toward her mother, she helped her to rise ponderously from theavenport, conscious that Bob Hathaway's eyes were upon her, and that she made a pretty picture of filial solicitude.

Then, with a gay little laugh, she ran ahead of the slowly moving procession into the dining room. With quick darts of her tiny body, she flew around the table, straightening a "company" napkin here, more neatly lining up a spoon or a knife there, touching the bowl of roses—flowers that Chester Hart had given her that day—with expert fingers. To the already infatuated eyes of the guest, it looked as if she were wholly responsible for the hospitable spread table, though she had not arrived home in time even to set it.

"We have to manage without a maid—servants are so hard to keep, away out here on Myrtle Street. You'll have to excuse us if things aren't—just so, Mr. Hathaway," Cherry slipped into the chair he was holding for her—beside his own—with a wistful smile on her face, pleading for sympathy and understanding.

"I should say you manage beautifully, Miss Cherry, judging from this delightful table."
Bob Hathaway's calm blue eyes took in the immaculate tablecloth, the bowl of roses, the shining silver—which Faith had dusted and polished just half an hour before his arrival—the tall, gleaming ice tea glasses, already filled with crushed tea; the crisp leaves of the green lettuce, cupped around vivid slices of firm, red tomatoes; the heaped platter of golden-brown fried chicken; the "boat" of thick, creamy chicken gravy; the sandwich basket—a gift from another "steady"—trailing napkins high with tiny, triangular slices of brown-crustied home-made bread.

Faith saw his admiration-filled eyes turn back to the glowing, dimpling Cherry, and her heart contracted sharply with a pain which she already half understood. Of course Cherry had snatched all the credit from her! She hadn't expected anything else. And of course this new young man was instantly smitten with Cherry's charms. Hadn't she known that he would be? But the pain still clutched at her heart.

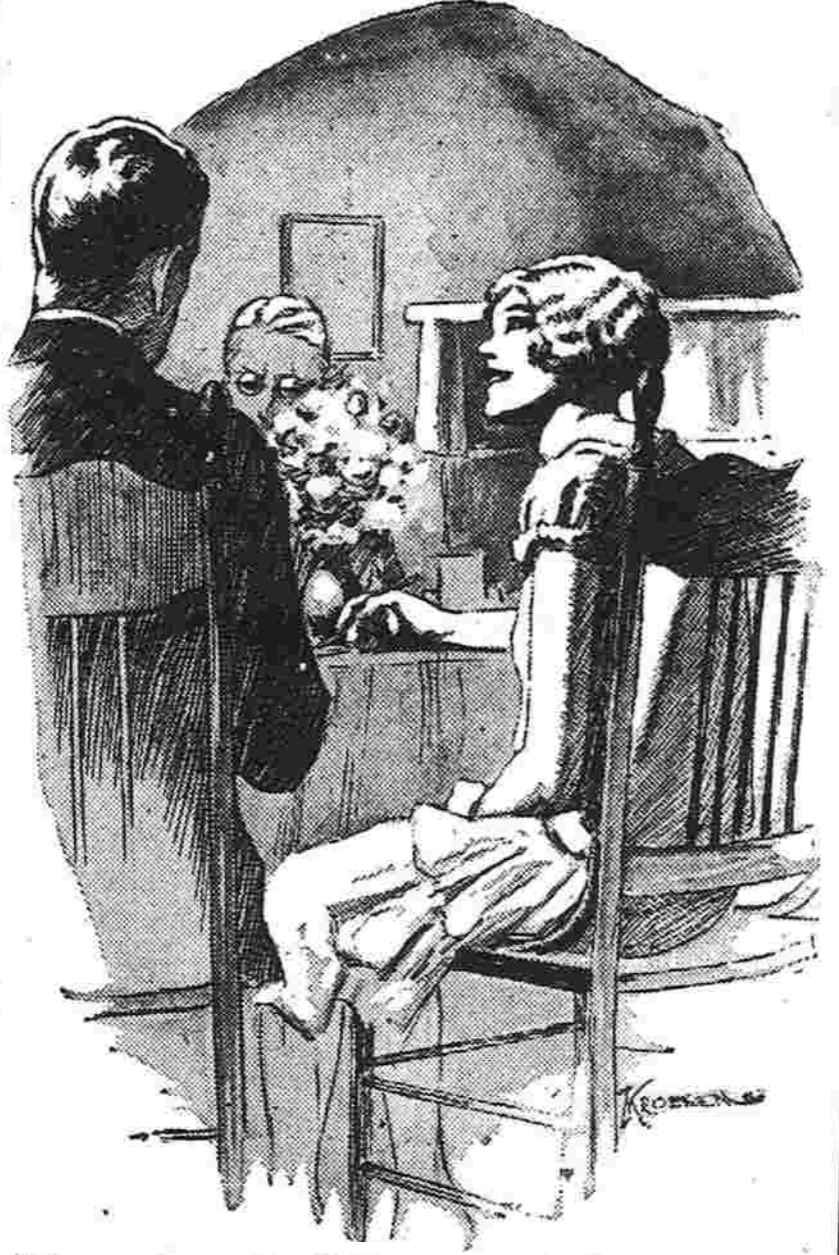

"Do you know, Mr. Hathaway, you look a lot like Ben Lyon, the movie star?"
"Ben Lyon?" Faith started, but Cherry, leaning close to her, hissed, "It's just a compliment. You look just like Ben Lyon, the movie star. But your hair's much nicer—I bet your girl accuses you of having a permanent wave!" she laughed her tinkling, musical little laugh.

Bob Hathaway ran an embarrassed hand over his curly mass of crisp chestnut hair. "I used to plaster it down with vaseline, but I've given it up as a bad job," he told her, his blue eyes very shy and his lean, tanned cheeks ruddy with a boyish blush.

"Don't mind Cherry, Mr. Hathaway." Mrs. Lane begged him in her gentle, murmuring voice. "She's all animal spirits. I call it. But she don't mean a mile of harm. I suppose some people might call her forward."

"Maggie, darling!" Cherry pleaded, pouting deliciously. "Mr. Hathaway will think I'm just an infant, if you talk about me like that! I'm not a child, all Bob—Oh, I mean, Mr. Hathaway! Aren't I a case?"

"I wish you would call me Bob, all around the table, to include them all in his invitation."
Faith rose hastily from the table, as if she wanted to avoid his eyes. "Excuse me," she murmured. She was glad that the making of waffles called her to the kitchen. She felt that she could not bear any more of Cherry's exhibition of Chester's waffles. It meant—made her ill. How tall! He was! Taller even than Long Lane, who was six feet. And his lips had such a funny, dear way of curving up at one corner and down at the other, as if he were smiling at some wonderful secret joke.

In the kitchen, she poured waffle batter upon the smoking iron and closed it, then from the warming oven took the two waffles that she had made while the others were becoming acquainted with Bob Hathaway in the living room.

"Waftest Good Lord! I haven't seen waffles like these since I was a kid!" Bob Hathaway exclaimed with boyish enthusiasm, as he reached for the little glass jug of maple syrup that Mr. Lane was offering him. "Um! Chicken and waffles!"

"Yeh, Faith's a good cook," Mr. Lane commented with pride. "Now, Joy, honey, don't grab Chicken for everybody! Here's a drumstick for you!" He turned again to his guest. "I'm sorry my boy, Junior, isn't here. Mr. Hathaway. Wanted you to meet him. A fine boy, but a little wild."

"Long's out car-ding with that fast Fay Allen!" Joy contributed eagerly. "Mom says she's a shameless hussy! I seen her and Long—"

"Saw them, darling?" Cherry turned to wink at Faith's short, leaped over to tweak Joy's shorts with a pretty gesture of sisterly affection, designed to cover up Joy's "break."
"Doesn't your teacher ever correct you?"

"Cherry's no dead set on all of us speaking and acting proper," her mother smiled fondly on her favorite. "I do declare, Mr. Hathaway, I don't know where she gets all her ambition. And smart—smart as a whip! Finished business college in six months, and has held some of the finest positions in the city."

"I wish she'd hold some of 'em a little longer," Mr. Lane commented dryly. He had learned of Cherry's loss of a job from his wife.

"Don't you think, Mr. Hathaway, Cherry but in quickly, 'well—Bob then—don't you think that working girls—nice girls, it mean—have an awful lot to put up with in business? Just yesterday," she said, with a breathless little rush of words, as if she had determined suddenly to make him her confidant. "I had to leave my position, because my employer tried—to—kiss me!"

"I'm afraid I can't blame him," Bob Hathaway winked at her.

"Oh, Bob, don't—don't tease me!" Cherry begged, rose-flushed.

"Cherry's really a modest, old-fashioned little girl," her mother commented proudly.

"Oh, in an effort to giggle, speak and eat chicken all at the same time, choked and sputtered, so that bits of food sprayed out upon the tablecloth.

"Joy, leave the table this minute!" Her mother rapped sharply with her knuckles upon the table. "Oh, dear, that child will be the death of me yet. Faith, give Joy her supper in the kitchen and bring some more waffles. Faith, I'm sure Mr. Hathaway would eat another one. I love to see young people eat, Mr. Hathaway. I ain't got any appetite at all myself, but it does my heart good to see you eat so heartily."

"Mama!" Cherry cried out, a little too sharply. "You'll embarrass the poor boy to death! Oh, Faith, darling, just a wee bit more lemon for the tea. Can't we have any more, honey?" she called sweetly, as Faith's flushed face appeared in the doorway between dining room and kitchen.

"No, thank you, nothing more," Faith said with quiet, bitter emphasis.

Bob Hathaway looked up from his heaped plate, seemed to see her for the first time. There was a tense moment when blue eyes were locked with brown.

In the kitchen, after she had wrenched her eyes away from his, Faith laid her head wearily against the cupboard and two tears slowly trickled down her cheeks. She had made him hate her. He saw Cherry as the bright little "Merry Sunshine" in the home, the sweet-tempered, thoughtful daughter, and he breathless he waited for my answer to his implied question. I knew that if I made the slightest confirmation of his tentative question, the African expedition would be off.

I had to think fast! Which would be best for him? I knew in my heart that I wanted him to stay, but I must put myself aside.

"Of course," I said lightly. "It is not for me to advise you, but looking at it dispassionately as a rank outsider it seems that as you are interested in anthropology, it would be a splendid thing for you with your wealth to help along the cause of science and incidentally make a name for yourself. By the time you returned, you will have forgotten all about your petty personal troubles."

"The man had imputed to me the same self interest in John that he himself had."

It was pitiful to see how the poor man hung on my words. How breathless he waited for my answer to his implied question. I knew that if I made the slightest confirmation of his tentative question, the African expedition would be off.

I had to think fast! Which would be best for him? I knew in my heart that I wanted him to stay, but I must put myself aside.

"Of course," I said lightly. "It is not for me to advise you, but looking at it dispassionately as a rank outsider it seems that as you are interested in anthropology, it would be a splendid thing for you with your wealth to help along the cause of science and incidentally make a name for yourself. By the time you returned, you will have forgotten all about your petty personal troubles."

HER OWN WAY
A GIRL OF TODAY

JUDY'S DILEMMA.

"Do you really think, John, that I would play with you?" I questioned.

Instantly he stepped away with a sigh, as he whispered, "Forgive me, dear. You know in my heart that I do not think it."

"I know you are not playing with me. I know that you have done nothing more than you would treat any other man, but you see, my dear girl, I have never thought of myself, as 'other men are.' You have awakened in me something that whispers that even I might possibly find a happiness that other men enjoy."

"Don't foster that idea, Judy. It would hurt me so to lose it, for now I am determined instead of hiding myself away from everyone and nursing that feeling of hurt and self, I am going to try and overcome it all."

"I have been thinking this afternoon, and now since I have seen you, the idea has become stronger, that perhaps it is not even best for me to make that African expedition. It will only take me away from people again, you know."

I grew a little frightened. Things were pushing along much faster than I had expected, although I had not said anything about the African expedition, I had already begun to influence John against it. I had unconsciously done the thing that Mr. Symington accused me of trying to do.

He was right, he knew that when John got a taste of the companionship of women, his influence over him would be gone. He would no longer be necessary. His ambitions would be quashed.

The man had imputed to me the same self interest in John that he himself had."

AFRICA SETS PACE IN FALL TURBANS

Agnes Model, Close in Front and Expanding in Rear, Sounds Keynote in Feminizing Small Hat, Asserts Noted Designer.

Three of the many new turban variations: Left to right, black velvet with Chinese note, bottle green velvet with fascinating high lights, and chic Rebox model, reminiscent of the beret.

By YENKI BENDEL.

New York.—This is to be a season of extremes in millinery—for afternoon functions demanding formal dress, the large picture hat but will prevail, but for all other hours, the smaller the chapeau, the smarter.

Until the close bob yields to a more ample style of hairdressing, the small hat is a fixture, and the smartly gowned women of New York and Paris, though they yield gracefully to more feminine styles, hold out unanimously for the clipped locks.

This insistence has forced the Parisian modistes to use their imaginations, and create something besides close fitting felts. They have responded with new turbans which, I believe, will reign supreme this winter.

Undoubtedly Agnes determined this trend when she was inspired by the African head dress, to create in velvet and silk, her famous turban, perfectly close to the head in front, with a tendency to extreme expansiveness in the back.

While most women were not ready to adopt this very extreme new line, they were glad enough to depart from the cloche and sponsor any new mode, and a modification of this turban filled the bill perfectly.

The new turbans fit like the proverbial glove, and they suggest the advisability of a shoehorn as a likely tool for ease in manipulation until they are broken in.

Three Paris models, photographed today on Mary Young, the charming actress who shows them to such advantage, show three interesting interpretations of the turban.

There's a decidedly Chinese note to the black velvet model with the pleated half moons of rose colored grosgrain ribbon planted on each ear.

The color breaks what might be otherwise too monotonous a line, and adds that picturesque touch which every milliner wants to achieve.

The model in the center is an Agnes creation, where the severity of the line about the face is quite offset by knotted ears at the right side of the back, and the desirable soft, careless effect achieved.

Not the least interesting feature is the color, which is bottle green, or the material which is velvet of the softest possible texture which taxes its most fascinating high-lights in its subtle folds.

Touch of Beret. The third is another Rebox model, colorful and chic, with something of the beret as well as the turban in its makeup. The crown is a softly draped tam of brocade in which green and gold are the predominating colors. The coard at the front is of green, white and magenta, and the close brim is of black velvet.

To be smart, the turban must follow closely the line of the head, and show practically no hair, but it must have some distinctive variation, and some note of contradiction.

While the turban has always had some part in the mode, it has been a bit too stereotyped and severe, and we might as well admit it, a bit too suggestive of the matron to be universally popular.

This season the turban is treated less seriously than before, and it has lost its self-conscious air, so it can be worn with the casualness that the smart woman insists her clothes have.

If you want to be ahead in your millinery, I suggest you do your turban shopping early.

SCHOOL LUNCH SHOULD DELIGHT THE CHILD

By SISTER MARY.

The mother who must pack a lunch box every school day in the week often finds that she must plan four meals a day in place of the usual three.

The planning of the lunch-box menu is most essential. This meal must be a satisfactory supplement to the other two meals of the day and a sandwich and piece of pie wrapped up in a newspaper is not satisfactory from any point of view.

Plan the lunch the day before. The busy time in the morning when every minute must count allows little time for "hunting up" something to put in the lunch box.

Next in importance to the food itself is the packing of it in the box. Keep plenty of waxed paper, favorite napkins, tiny covered waxed cardboard containers, small paper baking cups and picnic spoons all in one drawer or cupboard close to the shelf or table where the lunch is packed.

Wrap and pack carefully, putting the dessert in first and the sandwiches last. If the cookie, fruit or custard is put in the box the last thing the box must be unpacked in order to reach the sandwiches.

Try to keep the lunch interesting for the child. And by doing this you will keep it interesting for yourself, too. A surprise of some sort tucked away in a corner of the box adds much to the luncheon.

This surprise may be in the form of one or two pieces of candy, a favorite cookie, a specially fine apple or other fruit or anything your little luncher considers particularly alluring.

To prepare the lunch box orange, peel and separate in sections. Pile in your time with turkey track stitch on tides and the widest excitement you knew was a chafing dish party. Mother dear, your lectures are all personal history and I simply can't make practical use of them. I'm educated and know nothing but books and now life has no use for me.

The mother looked worried. "Well, I don't like to have you sit around reading," she said. "You need exercise and you are getting stale. I wish I knew what to do."

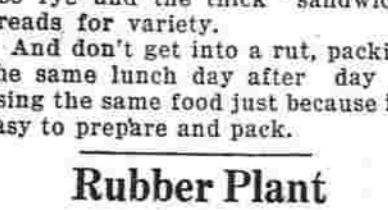

"Then I spoke up. 'I might suggest something,'" said I. "Do you mind? Let your daughter take a business course and go into an office. You have no idea how happy she will be."

Both looked amazed. I said goodbye and left, to let the idea soak in.

I met the girl today coming home. She had taken my advice. There is a different look on her face. A look of purpose and happiness.

Good Nature and Good Health

CHANGING THE BED CLOTHES IS A DIFFICULT TASK.

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEN, Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association and of Hygienic Health Magazine.

A trained nurse or hospital orderly can change the bedding among which an invalid reclines without making the patient swear more than five or six times. As the process is usually carried out at home, both the invalid and the housewife are completely exhausted at the end of the task.

The matter is, after all, a relatively simple one. First one loosens all of the bedding by pulling out the tucked-in portions, from beneath the mattress, then all of the pillows are removed, but one.

The patient turns on his side so as to occupy only one-half the bed, the blanket being kept over him to keep him warm. Now the under-sheets are rolled from the side of the bed to the middle of the bed; the mattress is cleaned and the clean sheets unrolled to the center, until they almost meet the soiled sheets.

Rolls Back. Now the patient, still covered with the blanket, rolls back over to the clean sheets; the soiled linens are then removed from the opposite side and the clean sheet spread over the remainder of the bed. The top sheet is smoothed and should be taken that no water and soap remain in the ears.

Now each arm is brought in turn over the blanket, the hand placed in the water, soaked and washed, and the arms sponged carefully and then dried completely. The patient's chest and abdomen may be washed and exposed, depending upon the physical condition.

After the upper half of the body had been washed, it is well to pour away the water in the basin and to replace it with clean water from the pitcher. The lower limbs are then washed in turn in the same manner as the arms, then the patient is turned on his side or abdomen, and the back and hips are thoroughly washed.

A spoonful of whipped cream and a dash of paprika improves any clear soup, both in looks and in taste.

FRUIT STAINS.
Fruit juices spilled on porcelain tables or sinks should be immediately wiped up, for they will cause a permanent discoloration if left standing.

KITCHEN STOOL.
A kitchen stool that can be transformed into a miniature step-ladder is invaluable to the busy housewife.

CONDITION—Fat wrists.

DIAGNOSIS—Usually this manifestation accompanies overweight. You should cut down on your sweets and starches and reduce generally as well as break down these particular fatty deposits by massage.

TREATMENT—Grasp one hand firmly with the fingers of the other hand leaving the thumb free. With the thumb massage the too adipose portion with firm, circular strokes. If you persist, you can break down these tissues, and restore a more classical contour.

BOILED EGGS.

Boiled eggs will continue to cook if left in hot water, even though the fire is turned off. To keep them warm until needed, pour the water off, replace eggs in hot pan, and replace cover tightly.

"COUNTRY STORE" AT THE STATE TONIGHT

"Into Her Kingdom" With Corinne Griffith, and 5 Acts of Vaudeville Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

Tonight will be "Country Store Nite" at the State theater. As usual, there will be a large number of presents given away, lots of fun, and some pleasant surprises. Country store nights have proven extremely popular in the past, and will undoubtedly be even more popular in the future, for tonight's "Country Store" will be bigger and better than ever before. Come and enjoy all the fun, the presents, and the good share of the presents, and enjoy all the fun, the presents, and the good share of the presents.

With country store will be two feature pictures. "Blarney," featuring Renee Adoree, the masterful little actress of "The Big Parade," will be one of the pictures. It's a story of how a colleen loves and wins a hard-boiled Irish prizefighter, in the typical hard-boiled Irish way. "Blarney" will banish your troubles away, for it's Irish through and through, and as funny as they make them.

The other feature will be a thrilling crook melodrama, "Honesty The Best Policy." The picture starts right off with a thrilling criminal hunt, and keeps up the fast pace to the very end. It's a deeply mysterious story, that baffles all the way through, and that surprises everyone at the end with an astonishing solution of the whole problem. In "Honesty The Best Policy" are featured Pauline Starke and Johnnie Walker.

Tomorrow will be the big day, for on tomorrow night the new vaudeville season will open at the State. Five acts of select vaudeville, all guaranteed by the management to be of the finest quality, will be presented. The first act will be Chester and Len Earl in "The Greatest of All Aerial Acts." This act will be McDonald and Oakes in a singing and dancing specialty. Wait until you see these two make their feet go. You'll just shout, "Great!"

For the third act there is Harry Goodwin and Company in a comedy sketch entitled, "A Striking Affair." This act has in its personnel six people who make you applaud for more at the conclusion of the act. Then Kemper and Bayard appear in another comedy sketch. This act is famous the country over for its mirth provoking moments. For the final act the State theater presents "The Bickford Family" in a musical revue with five people, mostly girls. It is a versatile and talented family of real musicians and entertainers. The mother, father, two daughters, and son have appeared in every first class theater from coast to coast. Young Harry Bickford, only seventeen years old, is considered by music critics to be a master pianist—youth, personality, and ability have helped to make this act a credit to any program.

There will be a fine feature picture in conjunction with the five acts of vaudeville. The State theater presents one of the finest pictures of the year, "Into Her Kingdom," featuring Corinne Griffith. The most beautiful woman in the world in the most beautiful role she ever played, is Corinne Griffith in "Into Her Kingdom." Corinne is a glittering little grand duchess in royal jewels—a million people to pay her homage, but she is lonely. Then into her kingdom came a little baby, and the girl who had walked to her throne to the fierce beats of drums and military boots, is thrilled at the patter of baby feet in the great royal halls. Then, flung away is her royal title of duchess, and firmly set on her head is the infinitely more beautiful coronet of mother.

The admission prices for vaudeville performances will be Matinee 15 cents for children and 35 cents for adults. Evening, Orchestra 50c Balcony 35c, Children 20c. Matinees will be 2:15, and in the evening the feature picture will be shown together with short film subjects at 7 o'clock, while the vaudeville will be presented at 8:30. The feature picture will be repeated following the vaudeville performances on the evenings. Saturday continuous from 2:15 to 10:30.

MANY INTERESTED IN "DECORATING"

Noted Lecturer Addresses Two Large Audiences at Watkins Bros. on Home Furnishing.

Evelyn D. Hansen spoke to two enthusiastic audiences yesterday at Watkins Brothers' music room. Her subject, "Interior Decorating" was given in such an informal and pleasing manner that it held the interest of her listeners every minute. In demonstrating her talk, Miss Hansen used three groupings of furniture which were selected from Watkins stock, transforming a bare and uninteresting wall space into three livable settings during her talk.

One interesting fact in connection with her demonstrations and which the audience did not see, was the way in which the speaker selected her groupings earlier in the day. She walked through the different floors of the store selecting a piece here and there which she planned to use. Then she visited the rug department and fitted the drapery shop. When the furniture was moved to the music room and grouped it was found that every piece was in perfect color harmony and every single item fitted into the different schemes. Not a single piece had to be exchanged. Miss Hansen had carried the color schemes of the three groups in her mind from one floor of the store to another.

Important Rule In opening her talk, Miss Hansen brought home one important rule. She said the home should be furnished to meet the needs of every member of the family. "Whether or not your home establishes in the mind of a person a sense of livability, depends on whether or not it meets the needs of the people who are going to use it. It will show if you have successfully solved your homemaking problems," she said.

Miss Hansen then continued to give the audience many rules on interior decorating, rules that ordinarily would have been cold and uninteresting, but which she brought home so clearly and in such an interesting manner that there is no doubt but that those present will recall each one.

Her groupings consisted of a formal setting of wall cabinet, formal chairs and torchie rest against a background of a figured oriental rug and a wall tapestry, a comfortable group arranged around a window, which included a luxuriously upholstered chair, end table, bridge lamp and accessories against a background of drapes and a wilton rug. The third group was a feminine group of grace and charm and daintiness, showing chairs and ruffled curtains, a delicate French chair, a dainty inlaid table and a little painted ladder back chair, against a background of drapes, hooked rug, an open book shelf and a small hall clock.

Discussions In closing Miss Hansen said, "If we can select things that are beautiful and group them properly we are as much artists as the people who have designed the beautiful objects." Following each lecture a round table discussion was held and the audience was invited to come up to the front and connect the groupings at close range. Many difficult decorating problems were solved for those who presented them to Miss Hansen.

Following the evening session, Miss Hansen devoted an hour talking to Watkins employees in regard to floor displays, telling how the displays could be improved and changed.

CLEAN OUT CHIMNEY, CHIEF FOY ADVISES

Especially if You Used Soft Coal Last Year; Cause of Most Fires.

Chief Al Foy issues a warning today to all householders to see that their chimneys are free from soot before they start up their furnaces during these chilly nights. He said that those who have been using soft coal and wood will find the flues filled with soot and danger of fire is great in those cases.

It was also reported at headquarters that the improvement of Center street had closed up Cooper street crossing for today but that it could be used in case of fire after tomorrow. Today, in case of emergency, McKee street will have to be used.

WILLIAMS IS ELECTED K. OF C. GRAND KNIGHT

George H. Williams is the new grand knight of Campbell Council, No. 573, Knights of Columbus. He was former deputy grand knight and succeeds Grand Knight Edward J. Murphy, who automatically becomes past grand knight. The nomination and election was held Monday evening in the club-rooms on Bissell street. Installation will be next month. There was a large attendance. Winter activities came up for a long discussion.

George H. Williams.

The other officers elected were: James D. Burke, recorder; Charles O'Connell, chancellor; Wilfred Messier, advocate; John F. Tynan, warden; Edward Mooney, inside guard; Thomas Moriarty, outside guard; Arthur E. Keating, trustee; Thomas Danaher, Patrick J. Hutchinson, William P. Quinn, Bernard O'Neal, Robert J. CHLORINATOR FOR NORTH END WATER

New Machine to Be Installed at Reservoirs—Improves Present System.

A new chlorinating machine of the latest type is to be installed by the Manchester Water Company, it was learned today. The new purifying device will be similar to the one now in use by the South Manchester Water Company and will be a great improvement over the one being used at present.

It is expected that the new machine will arrive in a few weeks. It has already been ordered and the plans call for installation before winter. Workmen are already at work at the reservoir in Lydallville digging the cellar for the foundation for the new building which will house the machine. It will be located next to the gate house, Charles B. Loomis said today in verifying the news. The new machine is up-to-date in every possible way. It will be far more accurate and much more dependable than the one in present use, Mr. Loomis said. The chlorinating machine at the reservoir now will be discontinued. There have been times especially in the winter when it has not been reliable.

PLAN BIG RECEPTION FOR TOMORROW NIGHT

The members of the St. Mary's Episcopal church have planned a reception in honor of Rector and Mrs. J. S. Neill who have just returned from a long visit in Europe. It will be held tomorrow evening in the parish house.

The affair will start at 7.30. No formal invitations have been issued. Every member of the church is cordially invited. There will be an entertainment and refreshments will be served. It is expected that Rev. Neill will favor the gathering with a short address dealing with his experiences while abroad. The members of the church are requested to do their bit to make the affair a rousing success.

More fossils found in South Dakota. If they could talk they would say "Bathing suits are terrible."

Better than Ever-

Following their traditional policy of constant improvement with no yearly models, Dodge Brothers, during the past eight months, have vastly bettered their motor cars in many vital respects.

Indeed, there has never been an equal period in Dodge Brothers history when so many refinements of a popular and fundamental nature have been made.

The public is registering its appreciation of this progressive industrial service by purchasing every motor car Dodge Brothers can build—in spite of the fact that Dodge Brothers production, during these months, has broken all previous records by an impressive margin.
