

PHONEY MONEY MADE HERE, IS POLICE BELIEF

Sergeant Barron Finds Evidence in Hunt for Thief at North End—Arrest Worcester Man.

In a search for clues which eventually led to the arrest of Philip Salenik, of Worcester, Mass., on a theft charge, Sergeant William Barron, of the Manchester police, unearthed counterfeiting materials that may lead to nationwide activity of the Federal Secret Service. The importance of the arrest cannot be estimated until the government agents make a report on the case. Police officials of the state and of Massachusetts believe that it may lead to the headquarters of a big counterfeiting ring.

There are several angles to the story before the counterfeiting case appears. First in order there appears Anthony Prihodko, of 60 North street. He came to the police station early in the week and reported that he had been robbed of $1,000. His statement was, in substance, as follows:

"I received a letter recently from my sister in Russia asking me to send her money to come to this country. I went on the truck gang of the Connecticut company and have been saving up my money and putting it in the bank. When I got the letter I decided to draw $1,000 and send it to my sister. A short time ago I met Philip Salenik who boarded with a man I knew in the Buckland block in the North End. On Monday when I went down to the bank to draw my money I accidentally met this man again and he accompanied me to the bank. He was a Russian like myself and I had confidence in him so I told him that I was about to draw the money. He stood outside of the bank when I went in and came back with me. I put the money under a pillow in my bedroom and stepped out of the room for a second. This man must have seen where I put the money. I missed it shortly afterwards, but my supposed friend had left my house. I hurried around to the Buckland block but they told me there that he had left hurriedly."

Police on Job. Sergeant Barron was assigned to the case. He started from the home of the family in the Buckland block. The head of the house there also a Russian, admitted that the man had boarded at his house for two weeks or more but that he knew nothing about him and, strange still, he did not even know his name. That started suspicion at once. Other persons were interviewed with the result that the man's name was learned and that he came from Worcester. Then the Bay State police got busy and yesterday Salenik was arrested in Springfield on clues furnished by Sergeant Barron. Salenik's victim was taken to Springfield and recognized him and he was brought to Manchester, lodged overnight at the police headquarters and this morning on his plea of guilty to the theft charge, was held under bonds of $5,000 for the Superior Court.

But before this came about, Sergeant Barron had been looking over the house in the North End. He saw a loose board and prying it off discovered some mysterious articles. There were vials of chemicals, an odd-looking board and clamps and paper with silk threads running through it. The paper was the big clue. Wires at once hummed between police officials and it was learned that Salenik had served three years in Atlanta penitentiary for counterfeiting. That fact was brought out in the local police court this morning and the prisoner made no denial. When searched by the Springfield police, $20 was found in his possession that presumably belonged to Prihodko and also some bills that looked queer to the police. These were turned over to the Federal authorities as were the materials found by Sergeant Barron.

Of course the Manchester authorities are only interested in the theft charge as the Federal end is out of their hands. U. S. Secret Service men are silent men and they will give out no information but it is presumed that they consider the clues turned over to them very important.

COUNT SALM GETS A SLAP IN THE FACE

Vienna, Oct. 7.—Count Salm Von Hoogstraeten is the center of a new society scandal. His uncle, Count Erich Salm, recently filed suit against the monarchist leader Prince Johann Lichtenstein for slander. As a result one of the prince's adherents met young Salm on the street and slapped his face. A row ensued, and now the count threatens suit against his assailant, whose name has not been made public. Count Salm first gained fame as far as America is concerned, when he wooed and won Mill-cent Rogers, New York heiress. They later were separated.

NORTH END WATER AGAIN ON RAMPAGE

Maybe Storm Was Cause, Official Says; Supply Unfit for Use Say Customers.

With two shifts of workmen engaged in cleaning water pipes, William Foulds of the Manchester Water Company expressed the opinion today that the water supply at the North End would be restored to normalcy in a day or two. The cause of the trouble is unknown. The water suddenly became riled yesterday morning. Between 30 and 40 complaints were received stating that the water was dirty and unfit for use. Investigation revealed that in some manner considerable fibrous substance had worked its way through the filter screen at the reservoir in Lyndalville. It is possible that the heavy rain storm yesterday morning caused the trouble. The same difficulty arose last year at about the same time. After the pipes have been cleaned out, they will be flushed which, in the opinion of Mr. Foulds, will restore first class service.

AIR MAIL BANDITS' SECOND VICTIM DIES

Robert Kearney, Shot When Father Was Slain on New Jersey Road, Succumbs.

New Brunswick, N. J., Oct. 7.—Robert Kearney, 18, died in a hospital here today. He was shot in the head by two bandits who shot and killed his father, Frank Kearney, wealthy lumberman of Maplewood, N. J., on a road near here on Monday night. Mrs. Kearney, who was thrown from her automobile by the bandits after they had killed her husband and shot her son, was prostrated when she learned of the boy's death. Meanwhile Gov. Moore has ordered the whole police power of the state to track the slayers. The Kearney family ran into tragedy when the bandits' plan to rob a $50,000 mail coach on a segment west of New York and they wanted the Kearneys' car.

TRINITY COLLEGE THIEF IS JAILED

Caldwell, Social Figure Who Dined Schuman-Heink, Sentenced to a Year.

Hartford, Oct. 7.—Donald Caldwell, a former student at Trinity college and reputed to be the son of a wealthy St. Paul, Minn. manufacturer, was today sentenced to jail for one year on a charge of theft. He was accused of stealing clothing and jewelry from students and faculty members at Trinity last spring. He pleaded guilty and did not appeal. The sentence was imposed by Judge Nathan A. Schatz of city court, and was divided between six months for theft of a watch and six months for stealing an overcoat. A third charge of passing a worthless check was nolle. Caldwell was described as a brilliant scholar. He came here last fall and soon became prominent in exclusive social circles. It was recalled today that on the last appearance here of Madame Schuman-Heink was the guest of Caldwell at a dinner party.

VEHICLE DEPT' BUCKS PLAN ON TOWN AUTO TAX

Makes Opposition Known at State Meeting of Assessors—Collect Taxes Promptly, Says Trumbull.

Hartford, Oct. 7.—The state motor vehicle department is opposed to the proposal that collection of taxes on automobiles as levied by towns be made at the time auto registration fees are collected. This opposition was made known today at a meeting of more than 200 assessors representing nearly every town in the state, held under the auspices of the state tax department at the capitol. The assessors were to be in session all day to consider problems which arise in their work. The limited space allowed the department, the specific amount of appropriation, the difficulty of handling the present registration, and a tendency that tax collections would have toward destroying the machinery of the department were advanced as reasons for its opposition to the plan. These were outlined by Assessor William F. Connelly of Bridgeport, a member of the special committee appointed last year at a similar meeting to study the auto tax problem. Governor Urges Promptness. Governor John H. Trumbull urged prompt collection of taxes as well as efficient and equitable assessment. Unless taxes are collected promptly, he said, the burden of taxation is distributed unfairly. The citizen who pays promptly bears the burden for the delinquent who dodges his tax for several years. Nicknames Blodgett. Referring to Tax Commissioner W. H. Blodgett, the governor said that Mr. Blodgett has always been an advocate of prompt tax collection. "If I deserve the title of 'Pay-as-You-Go Jack,' the governor said, 'he should be known as 'Pay-as-You-Go Bill.'" Then the governor advocated tax maps for every town. These, he said, should show the location of every piece of taxable property, as often property escapes taxation because of the discovery of assessors. A splendid aid in the preparation of such maps.

The towns would be reimbursed for the cost, the governor said, by the first year's addition to the tax code, because of the discovery of property which has been untaxed, in many cases, for years. New Plan Motor Tax. A new method of assessment valuation for motor vehicles, based on the weight of the car instead of on the adjusted value of the motor, was advocated by Assessor William C. Kemp, of Winsted. Under his proposed system the cars weighing 2,000 pounds would be taxed $5. Those from 2,000 to 2,400 pounds $6.25. Those from 2,400 to 3,000 pounds would pay $7.50 each while those from that up to 3,500 would pay $8.25 and those from that up $10. Other Speakers. Fred L. Lehr, of New Haven, was elected chairman of the meeting today. Other speakers on the program are R. B. Stoekel, motor vehicle commissioner; Ernest L. A. Verill, attorney for the town of Branford; Louis A. Kornblut, attorney and chairman of the board of relief in Bridgeport; Henry F. Long, tax commissioner for Massachusetts; Reinhold Heckler, assistant secretary of the Texas Oil Co., whose subject is taxation of gasoline stations; and Arthur O. Lamb, tax appraiser of Rocky Hill.

A. F. L. MAN ATTACKS FORD IN PULPIT ROW

Charges Edsel as Cause of Barring Out and Calls Him Chief War Slacker.

Detroit, Oct. 7.—Renewal of the acrimonious denunciation of Detroit manufacturing interests over the scheduled closing of Detroit pulpits and the Y. M. C. A. to union labor speakers next Sunday, marked the opening of today's session of the American Federation of Labor convention. Some of the convention's most vigorously militant leaders assailed the action of the Detroit Board of Commerce yesterday as coercion of the churches and religious agencies of the city in an effort to prevent the organization of 700,000 industrial workers here. George L. Berry, president of the International Printing Pressmen's Union, branded the Board of Commerce as an organization of "cut-throats, profiteers and slackers in time of trouble." Berry named Edsel Ford, president of the Ford Motor Company, who with his father-in-law, Henry Ford, has contributed $1,500,000 to the Detroit Y. M. C. A.'s building fund, as one of those he believed responsible for the present situation and called Ford "one of the chief slackers of the war."

Somerville, N. J., Oct. 7.—Stanley Sabotka's wife left him and that made him gloomy. Yesterday he went fishing with two friends off a bridge over the Raritan. They had some drinks and caught a lot of fish. Toward dark one of the trio gathered up all the fish in a bag and disappeared. That made Stanley more discouraged still.

BUD STILLMAN TO WED WOODS GIRL

Will Marry Mother's Maid, Daughter of Canadian Woodchopper.

New York, Oct. 7.—James A. (Bud) Stillman, Jr., son of James A. and Anne U. Stillman, Princeton student, is engaged to marry Miss Lena Wilson, 18-year-old daughter of a Scotch-Canadian wood cutter. Miss Wilson is employed as a maid at the Grand Anse, Que., lodge of Mrs. Stillman. They expect to be married soon after Bud graduates from Princeton next June. Young Stillman, who is in his twenties, himself announced the engagement at Princeton early today. He described his fiancée as blonde and beautiful. His announcement was made following news of the betrothal given out in Canada by his mother, who is now staying at the Grand Anse lodge. Mr. Long Ago. "I met Lena in Canada when I first went up there seven years ago," said young Stillman. "She lives in the next house to mother's place. I spent this summer up there."

James A. Stillman, former president of the National City Bank, and Anne U. Stillman were reconciled last spring and spent a "second honeymoon" in Europe. It was at the Grand Anse lodge that Stillman charged. Mrs. Stillman with misconduct with Fred Beauvais, an Indian guide. The present match is said to have the wholehearted approval of both Mr. and Mrs. Stillman. Bud's mother, in an announcement to the press, referred to Miss Wilson as "my little woods daughter." The girl has long been a favorite of her future mother-in-law, who is now said to be preparing her for entry into New York society. Through the marriage Miss Wilson will become related to the socially powerful families of William G. Rockefeller, Percy Rockefeller and Henry P. Davison. Bud is a brother of Mrs. Henry P. Davison. Davison is a son of the late partner of J. P. Morgan. Has Woodcraft, Home Lore. Lena Wilson's father is Scotch, her mother Canadian. She is described as pretty and charming, well versed in the lore of the woods which Mrs. Stillman so loves. Yet skilled in the arts of cooking and the home. Her brother, Johnny Wilson, is a hunter and trapper. During the Stillman divorce trials he stood staunchly by Mrs. Stillman.

Losing His Wife, Then Having His Fish Stolen, Finishes New Jerseyite

"It's tough when you lose your wife but when your friend runs away with the fish you've caught, that's the limit," he protested to the remaining friend as they made their way homeward beside a railroad track. A train came along and Stanley, resisting his friend's attempts to prevent him, sat down on the track and let the locomotive kill him.

CARDS AND YANKEES GRIP IN FIFTH GAME

U. S. TO IGNORE RESERVATIONS ON DEBT PACT

Qualifications by France No Concern of America Is Position Taken by Washington Officials.

Washington, Oct. 7.—Any reservations which members of the French government or parliament may attach orally or in the form of a preamble to the ratification of the Mellon-Berenger agreement for the settlement of the French debt will neither concern the American government nor be regarded as binding. In making this point plain today officials at the same time explained that any distribution of proceeds of German railway bonds would naturally and legally involve consultation with and participation by the United States government. This is provided for in the Paris agreement which the United States signed, even though the United States did not participate in the formulation of nor sign the London agreement relative to the distribution of German reparations. Paris Agreement. A clause was inserted in the Paris agreement that if the bonds contemplated under the Dawes plan to enable Germany to pay her treaty charges were sold or distributed the United States would be entitled to her share of the proceeds for application on the debt due from Germany for maintenance of the American Army of Occupation on the Rhine, etc. These distributions, in accordance with agreements concluded several years ago, were to be made after the costs of administration under the Dawes plan, including the costs of the occupational armies, etc., had been taken care of. So far the American government has not been approached on this subject by France or other interested powers. If the German railway bonds are offered to American banking interests it is for the latter to decide whether they care to purchase them, in the opinion of Administration officials, and the bankers will naturally follow the practice of asking whether the State Department considers it wise to invest American private banking funds. Gentlemen's Agreement. As to the suggestion in press dispatches from France that the Poincare government is disposed to accompany ratification of the debt settlement compact with reservations written into a preamble, it was ipso facto in official quarters that they would be disregarded. In other words, there could be no gentlemen's agreement about reservations and the Mellon-Berenger agreement would have to speak for itself so far as the State Department is concerned. Senators might, in their minds, have any reservations they pleased when they ratified the international agreement, but that would make no difference as to the agreement itself. It is recognized here that the French government is anxious to satisfy public opinion at home, but it is felt that willingness to make this possible should not permit any juggling with the agreement itself in such manner as to lead to disputes later over its interpretation.

NEW BRITAIN BOY ON A THEFT SPREE

Steals Ten Autos, Much General Loot in Seven Weeks Absence from Home.

New Haven, Oct. 7.—A New Britain boy, whose folks had been seeking him since the middle of August, is being held here in default of bail of $5,000 while the city detective department works up a case against him. The boy, Howard C. Newton, 18 years old, is accused of stealing ten automobiles, a fair-sized collection of watches, much clothing and a few accessories such as cameras, a revolver, and knickknacks. Newton was arrested by uniformed police last night as he was loitering along Dixwell avenue, shortly after he had been temporarily released by the detective department. Newton had been picked up by the detectives after his mother came here seeking him, having traced him, after an absence of two months, through a post card. All Around Chief. Since his arrest Newton, so detectives say, has admitted taking automobiles in many towns, his latest in New Britain yesterday afternoon while his mother was seeking him here. He has admitted picking up a large trunk from a Yale dormitory and carrying it to suburban Woodbridge, breaking it open and later selling the contents. Canvassing pawnshops here today police found eight watches, a camera, five overcoats, several suits and many other garments sold by Newton to the pawn brokers in his own name. When his case was called in city court today Newton was ordered held a week at the request of the detective department. Meanwhile police of New York are expected here as the detectives say, the boy admitted stealing considerable property in that city.

Pennock and Sherdel Once More Opposed

PITCHERS WHO WORKED IN FIRST GAME OF SERIES FACE EACH OTHER IN FIFTH; YANKS 6 TO 5 FAVORITES; DOUTHIT OUT OF CARDINAL LINEUP.

Sportsman's Park, St. Louis, Mo., Oct. 7.—Somewhat chastened by the melancholy events of yesterday but vocally undefeated and unchallenged, St. Louis this afternoon sent more than 37,000 of its best open-faced citizens to the fifth game of the World Series prepared to assist their Cardinals into a decision over the Yankees. However, if accomplished and eccentric vocalizing could do it, St. Louis would have won the series in four games. As it was, the Cards and Yankees were running a dead heat at two-all in victories, prior to today's game, and unless the rampaging Ruth can be restrained, all the shouting from a convention of fish salesmen couldn't be figured to send the Cardinals back east in the lead. Our Mr. Ruth played home-run-or-no-count yesterday in hitting three out of the park and breaking a dozen competitive records, more or less. The Good Old Try. However, the multitude was here to give the thing the good old college try and they basked in the rays of a pleasant sun. The Cards took the field shortly before noon. The Yanks ruled a six to five favorite to win today's game, largely because Herb Pennock was due to pitch. Bill Sherdel, just about as left-handed as any man can be, was the popular choice to pitch for the Cardinals. Bill lost a left-handed altercation with Pennock in the series' premiere at the Yankee stadium, but the young man was himself plenty of prestige. Even Money on Series. In any case, even money prevailed for the entire series, with the winner of today's game to be

PEACHES' MA SAYS SHE SET BIRD FREE

Sees No Chance of Those City and Country Homes Browning Promised.

New York, Oct. 7.—Edward W. Browning, wealthy 61-year-old real estate operator today had received word from his girl bride, "Peaches," who left him without any explanation a few days ago "to go back to mamma." Browning would not discuss a report that he wrote to leading shops that he would not be responsible for his wife's bills after he learned she had ordered $200 worth of finery from a Fifth avenue store. "Peaches'" mother, Mrs. Catherine Heenan, was located in the apartment of a friend in Manhattan and indicated that she and her daughter were preparing to get away to Toronto or Montreal. Skeptical on Promises. "I want to get Babe beyond the psychological reach of Mr. Browning," she said. "He is trying through the press to exert his influence over her to get her back in his possession, with his promise of city and country homes for her. This is one of the many promises that he will never fulfill. "Babe will only get the proper rest when she is away from his influence. She needs physical rest, but more than that, she needs mental rest. "There has been a bird in a cage. Well, I've set the bird free."

It was officially announced that Holm would play center field in place of Douthit and would lead off the Cards batting order.

London, Oct. 7.—The miners delegate conference, meeting today in Kingsway hall, voted to reject the government plan for settlement of the coal strike by districts. SUGGESTS PLAN TO SAVE MONEY

Local Citizen Thinks That Annual Town Report Could Be Dispensed With.

Just at this time when economy as applied to town government is so much the topic of conversation by the men of the street, a suggestion made by a prominent citizen last evening is worthy of some consideration.

"Before I came to live in Manchester," he said, "I resided in a New Jersey town about twice the size of this town. I was reminded of this town when I picked up the annual report and figured how much the town could save by doing away with it.

To Save Money "I have no exact figures on the cost but I believe that it cost over two thousand dollars to publish besides a lot of work on the officials and the distributors. And in the end I believe that not one person in fifty takes the trouble to read the report.

"In the Jersey town they did things differently. After every meeting of the town board which is here called the board of selectmen, the official minutes of the meeting were printed as an advertisement in a daily newspaper. Here the taxpayer could read everything that was done and how much was spent and so on the day after and not wait for a whole year later to find out. Then if he had a complaint he could attend the next meeting. He could stop what he thought was a waste of money in time.

Better Informed "We got used to reading these minutes and that, in connection with the reporter's account of the session which gave all the arguments for and against a measure, gave us taxpayers a very clear account of the town's affairs. It also brought up discussions the year round which made for a better government.

"In Manchester, I notice, nobody seems to know a thing about town affairs until election time comes around. Then they all start to argue and mostly about things that happened six months or nine months ago by that time the things have changed about and is very dim in the minds of those who are arguing. That is why you get such wild statements at the annual meeting. The taxpayers have forgotten the details of the subject and what caused that or that matter to be brought up or dropped. And I believe that the selectmen themselves, what with their affairs of private life, have forgotten a goodly part of the details of matters that were brought up nearly a year before.

"If there is nothing in the town ordinances against the plan I think the Jersey scheme would work wonderfully here as the town was similar in nearly every respect to Manchester. And also the taxpayers would save money."

GOOD VAUDEVILLE BILL HERE FOR THREE DAYS

Five Select Acts and Gloria Swanson at State Today, Tomorrow and Saturday.

Tonight, tomorrow and Saturday the State theater will present a bill of five carefully selected vaudeville acts. This week's bill will, no doubt, be the best so far this season. All the acts are of the very best quality obtainable, and make up an excellent bill.

With the vaudeville will be a good feature picture, Gloria Swanson in "Fine Manners."

The first act will be Watson's Dogs. The act is termed "Educated Pets," but when you've seen these marvelous canines perform, you will wonder if they are not almost human. They do all imaginable tricks, and their seeming human intelligence is most remarkable. This act has played in many of the finest and largest vaudeville theaters the country over.

The second act will be Leddy and Leddy in a rip-roaring comedy act, "Comedy Bits and Trimmings."

The third act will be the three Keena Sisters. They have a pleasant surprise for you. They're quite a trio of "Entertaining Misses."

Following them will come Bobby Carbone and Company in "The New Boy." This is something really good. You'll like it immensely.

The headliner will be a crackling act of five people, Ed Scofield presenting his "Modern Revue." It's a snappy, peppy, up-to-the-minute fast stepping dance act that will make your toes tickle. This bill should be on everyone's "must list."

"Fine Manners" with Gloria Swanson is an amusing social satire. Do "fine manners" make "fine ladies"? That's the question asked in this latest Gloria Swanson production. Gloria is seen in a burlesque music hall. With a brother who jealously tries to guard her from the world's lawdy influences, she lives in a tiny tenement apartment.

On next Sunday, Monday and Tuesday the State will present Douglas Fairbanks in his latest and greatest picture, "The Black Pirate." This thrilling tale of blood-thirsty sea pirates in the times when "black pirates" roamed the seven seas in a world filled with daring adventure and sparkling romance is filmed entirely in beautiful natural colors. It is the first feature length picture to be so photographed. "The Black Pirate" comes to Manchester directly from Broadway where it has been enjoying long runs that have amounted in all to fifteen weeks in the Selwyn and Mark Strand theatres.

Cecil Ogden Playing in Picture at Circle

Has Important Part With Lefty Flynn in "The College Boob." Imagine a college picture with a thousand laughs, a former Yale half back as its star, and a beautiful girl to furnish the love interest, and you have the ingredients of Lefty Flynn and Cecil Ogden's latest F. B. O. production, "The College Boob," now showing at the Circle theater. Cecil Ogden is a Manchester boy. There is a tremendous amount of humor in the country boy who comes to college and because of his good nature and lack of sophistication is made the joke of the campus. However, jokes have a way of turning and this same boy later proves to be the hero of the greatest event of the year, the last football game. A lovely romance is introduced when the most beautiful girl on the campus falls in love with the boy from the country.

The Circle will present two features today and tomorrow. The second feature will be "Black Paradise" with Madge Bellamy and Edmund Lowe. "Black Paradise" is something new in the way of a story, something that is not purely a detective yarn, nor yet the story of a crook, but into which each element is blended in a way that will hold the attention of the audience from start to finish.

AIMEE OR DOUBLE WIRED FROM GILA

Operator at Arizona Town Tells of Message Sent During 'Kidnap' Period.

Los Angeles, Oct. 7.—The preliminary hearing of Mrs. Aimee Semple McPherson, her mother, Mrs. Minnie Kennedy and Mrs. Lorraine Wiseman-Sellaff, all charged with criminal conspiracy, was resumed here today.

District Attorney Assa Keyes and his assistants were busy yesterday gathering new evidence with which to confront Mrs. McPherson, who they claim, perpetrated a gigantic hoax when she alleged she had been kidnapped and spirited away to Mexico while her followers thought she had been drowned at Ocean Park last May.

The state is attempting to prove that she was not kidnapped, that she was the companion of her former radio operator, Kenneth G. Ormiston, at Carmel, subsequent to her disappearance from Ocean Park and that she offered Mrs. Sellaff money to produce a "Miss X" to pose as Ormiston's companion.

Another important witness for the prosecution was unsworn by the district attorney yesterday. He is F. Bivens, a former telegraph operator at Gila, Ariz. Bivens issued a statement in which he said a woman resembling Mrs. McPherson sent a telegram from his station to a man in Douglas, Ariz. on June 15, eight days before Mrs. McPherson made her re-appearance.

Alonso B. Murchison, Douglas police officer, who was on the stand when court adjourned Tuesday, was to resume the stand again today. Murchison was the first officer with whom Mrs. McPherson talked after crossing the Mexican border. Following their conversation, Murchison said he returned to Mexico, where he unsuccessfully sought to check up Mrs. McPherson's story.

Deaths in Needless Diving. Other developments over the day of recess were: Robert Hunt, deep sea diver of Venice, told prosecutors he informed Mrs. Minnie Kennedy, mother of Mrs. McPherson's body was not in the sea; nevertheless he was hired by "Mother" Kennedy to dive with as much ostentation as possible.

Oliver Allstrom, engaged by Mrs. McPherson to collaborate with her on a book recounting her abduction, "The Kidnappers," declared the evangelist assisted him in writing a chapter in the book, "Good News and Sad News." The good news was the enthusiastic welcome given the evangelist upon her return; the sad news was the death of two men engaged in hunting her body. Appearing at a later date before the grand jury, Mrs. McPherson testified she had not heard of the death of the divers.

Prosecution Hard Up. The prosecution is handicapped by shortage of funds. Supervisor McClellan offered to give District Attorney Assa Keyes sufficient funds to bring Operator Bivens to Los Angeles if Keyes personally would petition for the allowance. Keyes, at loggerheads with the supervisors over embezzlement complaints issued by him against them, believed a personal request unnecessary.

Hearing of the squabble, the evangelist herself offered to pay Bivens' transportation, as she knew she "never had been in Gila Bend."

BINGHAM ON PLANES.

If there were the remotest likelihood that the November election of a United States senator in Connecticut would take the form of a real contest we should feel constrained to utter a word of warning to Senator Bingham, about to be re-elected to that office.

In a speech at Hartford last night the senator, whose personal courage everyone knows to be of an unusually high order, showed more or less impatience with the prevailing notion that he who steps into a plane is taking his life in his hands.

Nothing of the sort, explains the senator, who ought to know—and does. Eight-tenths of the airplane accidents occur because the flyers are reckless, fail to use the brains that God gave them or flout disobey orders, he declares.

Undoubtedly correct. But suppose that George Washington, shortly before his choice as first President of these United States, had asserted that it was entirely feasible for man to create a self-propelling vehicle that would travel the roads of the country at thirty or forty miles an hour with fewer accidents per travel-mile than were then resulting from horseback or carriage transportation—would he ever have been made President?

Instead he would probably have been restrained of his liberty as a lunatic. There is a deep-rooted conviction on the part of the public, as a whole, that air travel is essentially a hazardous proceeding. It comes, probably, more from instinct than from reason—and is therefore all the more difficult to unseat.

Wherefore, it is gratifying to feel quite sure that Bingham's natural majority in November is more than ample to provide for the disaffection of those who will be repelled by his "hifalutin" notions about air travel.

RUTH.

Where now are Trudy Ederle and Gene Tunney? Can one even recall at the instant, in the midst of the echoes from Sportsman's Park, just precisely to whom those recently distinguished names belong, and what were their achievements? Have we really in our midst a noted person by the name of Coolidge—or is the name something out of a dream? Was there some untoward event recently in Florida? Did somebody mention that there is to be an election next month? Let's see—did they ever pass that prohibitory amendment? Was there a big war?

Names, personalities, facts, probabilities, fears, hopes—all the consciousness of America—are submerged, buried, nullified, swept into oblivion, by the stupendous roaring resonance, extending even to the milky way—Ruth! Ruth! Ruth! Bambino Ruth! Ruth and his world-encompassing, all-pervading, history-eliminating three home run swats!

As England dates from Alfred, as France dates from the Revolution, as Ireland dates from the Big Wind, so shall America date henceforth from the Day of the Three Thumps. Nothing that has passed is of any account, any more; nothing that is likely to transpire will ever be of any account; the Hall of Fame is emptied of its tawdry occupants, and a single Titanic figure takes their place.

Into a ten-mile gigree, reading, "Ruth—1926"; and then let us all take a hop into the sea and leave the world as a finished job—for a fresh race of monkey descendants to rediscover a million years hence, figuring out for themselves, what sort of god, anyhow, was this super-creature Ruth.

MILLS AND SMITH.

The sort of campaign which Ogden L. Mills, candidate for governor of the state of New York, has inaugurated ought to have an extremely sobering influence on the bettors of that state who, a short time ago, would have given pretty much any sort of odds on the redoubtable Al Smith.

For the first time in the experience of the latter as a candidate for governor he is now opposed by a man who knows as much about the business of the state of New York as the governor himself. Heretofore Smith has possessed the enormous advantage of debating before the people of his state with antagonists who were simply outclassed by the governor's familiarity with the many and intricate problems of that big commonwealth.

There is not a move on the chess-board of its business with which he is not intimately acquainted. He is not under the handicap of dealing in generalities. He has possessed himself during the years with an astonishing array of facts and figures dealing not with the last few minutes but with all the period in which Smith has been governor.

When he points out that under Governor Smith the state requires 2,000 more employees to transact its business, exclusive of 2,500 more persons employed in state hospitals and institutions, than it did under Governor Miller's administration, he does not have to let that broad statement go unamplified, but proceeds to exhibit details. "Let us see," he says, "what some of these Smith extras are doing."

Secretary Wilbur was an athlete himself in his youth. High-kicking was his specialty. He still holds the record at Annapolis, where he graduated, for the highest kick. He ought to have been a good kicker. He has the longest legs in the cabinet. Attorney General Sargent is taller but Wilbur has longer legs.

Apparently the Republican candidate for governor has an endless supply of such ammunition. It is good ammunition—ininitely better than reckless generalizations about Al Smith's being a partner with gunmen and thieves—which nobody believes.

It is so good and there is so much of it that if it were not for the defection of a group of New York Republicans who can see no issue in New York, nor yet in earth nor in heaven, save the impossible one of prohibition, Mr. Mills might very well have Governor Smith on the run long before election day and overwhelm him on that important date.

DANBURY WEATHER. The weather bureau of the United States has one theory of forecasting, a thousand other prophesying agencies have a thousand other theories, but none of them pay any attention to the Danbury fair. Yet the memory of man runneth not far enough to recall the Danbury fair week when at least two of the days of that ancient institution were not piping hot. Piping hot, that is to say, for October, when fair visitors possessing ordinary caution go to Beantown swathed in such garments as belong to the post-harvest season, only to sweeter in temperatures reminiscent of the Fourth of July.

IN NEW YORK

Stewart's WASHINGTON LETTERS

By CHARLES P. STEWART.

Washington, Oct. 7.—Secretary of the Navy Curtis D. Wilbur doesn't believe in boxing. It seems on the night of the Dempsey-Tunney battle in Philadelphia he refused to let commercial airplane take off at League Island flying field, which is under navy control.

The "gobs" had a boxing carnival planned for the night of Sept. 21 at the Norfolk (Va.) naval base. Wilbur called that off. An effigy labeled "Wilbur—Flat-head" was used as a punching bag in the gymnasium at the base until an officer saw it and had it destroyed, 'tis said.

It was against naval regulations, he said. Secretary Wilbur had put his foot down on the carnival the minute it was suggested, the gobs wouldn't have been so sore. He didn't do it, however, until after several thousand dollars had been spent on advertising and a whole stack of tickets had been sold, for the benefit of the navy relief fund.

One notes a certain sympathy with the effigy-punching gobs among navy officers. Few navy officers consider boxing the brutal thing that Secretary Wilbur evidently does. But it isn't healthy, professionally, for a navy officer openly to proclaim himself a fight fan just now.

The trouble with the Norfolk naval base boxing carnival was that it synchronized too closely with the Dempsey-Tunney mill. Left to itself, it might have slid by almost unnoticed except in its immediate vicinity, but boxing was too live a topic, just at the moment, to be missed. Consequently Secretary Wilbur got a lot of protests.

They told me the sequel afterward, Carlo Perroni, the conductor, and Mme. Pagli demanded the death penalty. A show was barked for the chance as executioner, Harry Nicolai and the brave gentlemen of the property room grabbed up the property swords from "Il Trovatore" and stood them off, Fortuna Gallo, impresario, was called in. He saved Nick's life but decreed that, by way of punishment, he could not go on the road this season.

So Nick returns to the street and the consequent economic hazards. Mayhap as I wander along Broadway some night, I will see him, and as will seem like any other black cat that dodges furtively beneath the millions of feet. Well, Nick has had his moment. Why shed a tear? —GILBERT SWAN.

IN NEW YORK

New York, Oct. 7.—Broadway has innumerable tales of mishaps and accidents that changed tense and tragic moments in the theater into high comedy for the audience. There was the gentle snowfall that became an avalanche when the property men dropped huge sacks by mistake and buried the actors; there was the great tragedian whose false mustache insisted on coming off; the petticoat that fell to the stage in the days when women wore petticoats; the stage horse that became balky and refused to leave the footlights—and so on through a hundred volumes of anecdote.

This tale concerns Nick, a sleek, black cat, who made his opera debut the other night. And until this occasion I had never been eye-witness to any of the oft-described stage catastrophes. Nick was named in honor of his father, patron and owner, one Harry Nicolai, property man with the San Carlo Grand Opera Company. Several seasons ago Nick was found pathetically abandoned just outside the stage door, was nursed with an eye-dropper and lived to survive many tows across the nation. His reputation was spotless.

Perhaps mention he had received in certain newspaper stories went to his head. Perhaps he supped with great cunning a great ambition to become an actor. Perhaps he was seeking publicity. I can but guess at his motive.

I can only report that it was the death scene in "Traviata." Tina Paoi, soprano, lay dying with that fervor in which only a coloratura and a tenor robusto can die. The stage was slightly darkened. The orchestra was somberly pitched.

When out from the wings, left stage, walked Nick, in a death throes does not observe cats—or such would be my speculation. Arrived at the death bed Nick sat down and bided his time. The audience was valiantly trying to suppress its snickers and the orchestra leader was nervously waiting to see what would happen.

It happened! Nick waited patiently for a note that would be within his particular range. It came. Came, too, a loud and plaintive "meow." Nick had done his stuff. As grateful as he had come upon the stage so he left it. Mayhap he hesitated in the wings for the applause. He found only a toe and a "scat." Outside the audience tittered and the dying diva made the best of it. Nick, his song rendered, crept upon the tenor's cloak and fell asleep.

So Nick returns to the street and the consequent economic hazards. Mayhap as I wander along Broadway some night, I will see him, and as will seem like any other black cat that dodges furtively beneath the millions of feet. Well, Nick has had his moment. Why shed a tear? —GILBERT SWAN.

QUEER QUIRKS OF NATURE

By AUSTIN H. CLARK This large and handsome moth, brown with lighter markings, is very common in tropical America, and also lives in the warmer parts of Florida and the states bordering on the Gulf of Mexico. When I was in Caracas, Venezuela, there were great numbers of them in the hotel in which I stayed. They especially liked to hide during the day in the folds of the portiers from which they darted out like bats when they were disturbed. Quantities of them were swept up from the hallways every morning. Occasionally in late summer this moth by storms gets blown far northward, even as far as southern Canada. I have seen several which were caught near Boston, and Dr. W. J. Holland once secured a specimen which was taken at Leadville, Colorado, in a snow storm one Fourth of July. It was found fluttering about in a snow drift, a most unexpected place to find a creature of the tropics.

GETTING SET Hal Cochran's POEM

It won't be so long, now, till snow starts to fly, till warm days of summer have drifted on by. And into confusion the woe tots are tossed through thinkin' of times when they deal with Jack Frost. You'll find little Willie is workin' away. Yet, workin' instead of his every day play. He's down in the cellar. To mom it's quite clear that he's seeking the acid that he put there last year. It needs to be cleaned, and then put into trim. He'll scrub with a wash cloth with vigor and vim. He'll drag the thing out, take it down to the store, to have the ol' runners re-sharpened once more. And then, there are skates that were hidden away. You'll find Willie's gettin' them ready today. He gazes upon them with kid-like disgust. It means lots of work to remove all the rust. The snow shovel, too—but forget about that, 'cause Willie cares not where the pesky thing's at. To fix up his sled and his akates he is glad, but the snow shovel—shucks, he'll just leave that ter dad.

TODAY'S OFFER—STOMACH AGONY GOES

Or Money Back, Says Magnell. And still there are stubborn people right in this part of the country who won't accept this offer, but continue to suffer from gas on stomach, belching or sour food, stomach pains, foul breath, dizziness, biliousness and headaches, just because—just because—that's all, there is no other reason. Doro's Mentha Pepsin will stop dyspeptic agony in five minutes; will conquer obstinate cases of indigestion, and turn the old stomach into a new one in a few weeks. If you want quick and lasting relief get a bottle today. It is dispensed by Magnell Drug Co.—and druggists everywhere.—Adv.

CHAPTER I.

The hatbox had fallen down exactly five times when the gray tweeds came to the rescue.

Judith was so busy soothing the enraged old lady in the seat behind, upon whose head the box had read: Had descended twice, that she scarcely noticed the man who wordlessly stretched out a long arm and adjusted the baggage securely on the rack.

But when she turned away from the sputtering dame, she saw that her rescuer was tall and that the shoulders beneath the gray tweed were somewhat stooped, as he bowed to her and stepped back in the aisle.

"Thank you," she smiled. "You've saved my best bonnet."

The knight errant flushed. "I think it will stay in place now," he said awkwardly.

Judith smiled again and looked up at him, her wide gray eyes dancing, her lips parted for another smile. But the gray tweed shoulders straightened and retreated down the aisle, their dignity somewhat impaired by the lurching of the train.

So she closed her mouth, stared at him, and allowed an impudent wrinkle to mar the perfect contour of a normally straight nose. Humph! She patted the edges of her hair; which flamed a dark but her brilliant red beneath her tiny hat, shrugged her shoulders and returned to her book. It was a dull gray volume, titled "The Comparative System of Grading, as Used in American Universities." She apparently became interested in it, and the injured old lady behind her, after darting one or two more hostile glances at the back of her neck, finally turned her attention to the landscape.

The next station was a junction, which evidently had been accumulating college students for hours past, for when the Pendleton train drew up at the platform, an army of noisy young barbarians, storming the coaches, and Judith's suddenly was full of bright scarves and raccoon coats and bizarre language with loud labels.

As the seats filled, Judith removed her coat from the vacant space beside her and laid it on the misbehaving hatbox. Immediately a mouse-colored youth slipped into the place. Judith glanced sidewise at him, without turning her head, and met his eyes in a similar maneuver. The youth laughed, and Judith, blushing faintly, smiled.

"This seat occupied?"

Judith shook her head. "No," she said, demurely.

The youth pulled a ponderous pipe from a bulging pocket and stroked it thoughtfully. Then, glancing over his shoulder, "Wonder if I could smoke a few drags before the trainman comes through? They don't enforce the no-smoke rule very much, anyhow, on these college trains."

"Not much chance against a mob like this, I guess," commented Judith. "Are all the trains like this one?"

"This one's tame compared with most of 'em," he answered dryly. "You ought to see one of the trains after a big game, when everybody's got a singin' jag. Victors celebratin' an' losers drownin' their sorrows. You a newcomer?"

"Yes," said Judith. "I don't know anything about university life."

He stopped puffing at his pipe and regarded her some surprise. "A freshman?"

Judith's lip curled and straightened again. "No. But I went to a girl's school, you see." If he had looked at her more closely he would have seen an amused twinkle in her eyes.

The mouse-colored one nodded sagely. "M-m-m. One of those high finished models from a female academy. Well, you've got a lot to learn."

"But I'll give you a rule of three," he added. "Keep your eyes and ears open, keep your liquor shut, and don't drink any liquor until you've had it analyzed. Follow directions, and you may live to graduate."

He paused, and a shout went up from the coach behind. At sound of it he straightened up and smiled faintly—rather condescendingly, Judith thought.

"That smoking car," he remarked indulgently, "is full of Betas and Phi Deltas, and they're spouting high-powered propaganda into all our best rush prospects. And not a Sigma Psi on board but me. Judith's eyes followed him as they glanced at the small pin, heavy with rubies and diamonds, on his vest.

"Probably ought to crash the gate back there," he confided, "and corner a mess of frosh for Sig Psi. But I don't feel equal to it. After three years that sort of thing kinda palls on one, y' know. But then I suppose you don't know. Probably didn't have national fraternities where you came from. What sorority are you aiming at?" Judith hesitated a moment.

"Why, I don't know. None probably."

His sparse eyebrows went up in mild surprise and he stared at her with a new interest. "How do you get that way? Do you know what life is like for a barb in Pendleton?" He surveyed Judith's trim chiton ankles and the choker of stone marten that she wore against her dove-colored suit.

"Tell you what I'll do," he went on. "I'll give your name to some friends of mine—Thetas and Kappas and a German Delt. It's prett' late, but they're still making dates for rush week. Tell me about yourself so I can boost your stock. Make 'em think I've known you all my life."

Then, seeing that Judith was searching for a reply, he added, "Only fair to tell you something about myself first. I'm Will Wetherel, of the Sigma Psi house. Member Scabbard and Blade, former editor "Sugar and Spice," charter member Carlyle Club and Talk Club and chief high mogul of the Gerhart faction." His lips curved in a fatuous smile. "That enough recommend?"

Judith's brows knitted. "Certainly," she said, "and it's good of you to be interested. But I really think I shan't have time for sororities. Thank you just as much."

Wetherel gazed at her solemnly. Then he pursed his lips in a soundless whistle. Judith looked out the window and Wetherel filled his pipe again and thrust it between his teeth. A sound of shouting came from the rear coach. He rose lazily and stood looking down at her. "Guess I'll wander into the window and throw the hatbox those Phi Deltas," he remarked and retreated elegantly down the aisle.

Judith sat and frowned at the landscape whizzing by. To be taken for a freshman! Well—and she thought of the thought—the day might come, of course, when she would look upon such a mistake as a compliment rather than a blow to her sophistication. But not yet. Not while her years were so few.

Azarin the impudent little wrinkle chased itself across her nose. She smiled once more at the recollection of something the youth had said, and thought of her knight of the band box to flit through her head and turned once more to her book at a forbidding paragraph beginning, "The advantages of the comparative system of grading in colleges where the honor system is employed have been questioned by several leading authorities."

The riotous train, it seemed, had not yet reached the height of its riotousness.

The next station produced a still larger and apparently younger crowd of students than the last. And these evidently had a "singin' jag."

They burst into the train in full chorus, jamming the aisles and flapping crazy pennants, to the annoyance of mature passengers and the obvious disgust of those older students who were staring indifferently out of the windows.

The seat beside Judith was taken by a girl who dropped into it without so much as a glance to see who was beside her and began applying her lipstick with great concentration. She would not be distracted from her absorbing occupation until a cavalier of striped hatband and blotchy complexion approached, to hand over her.

"Great joint this school's gettin' out to be," he remarked. "Heard old Timothy Brown's heading the discipline committee. If so, Lord help the student body. He's a regular old woman. Never knew the delights of wine, woman and song himself, and doesn't mean to let anybody else know 'em."

"Yeah," the girl said, still pecking at her mouth with the corner of her handkerchief and staring into a looking glass in the top of her handbag. "Timothy's pretty sour."

"D'you hear Eric Waters is coming down? You know—the Princeton celebrity. They say his dad's sick of spending cash on him at Princeton and has sent him down here on an allowance of a hundred and fifty a month."

The girl closed her bag and flicked her lips carefully. "That's tough," she said. "Is he good looking?"

"Couldn't say," answered the blotchy youth. "The girls seem to think so, but I wouldn't be surprised if it was a case of money making the man. I imagine I could think most anybody was handsome if he had John D. Rockefeller's money."

The girl shrugged, and essayed a careful smile, as if she were afraid her heavily made up lips were going to crack. "I could myself," she agreed. "The sheiks of Pendleton will have their work cut out for them from now on, with Eric Waters providing the competition."

Their conversation drifted on. Judith had been reading one paragraph over and over while the chatter of the youthful pair invaded her left ear. She jerked angrily and concentrated on her book, and a tiny frown furrowed her brow.

The girl beside her glanced her way, and then, as if she had seen something unusual, began "taking Judith in." The blotchy youth, too, seemed to find the sight of the red-haired girl not uninviting, and permitted himself to stare and then to exchange a knowing look with his companion.

Judith, aware of their regard, shifted uncomfortably and a slow wave of color suffused her pale cheeks. She closed her book with a snap, and the pair beside her, apparently conscious at last of their rudeness, turned their attention elsewhere. Judith heard vague snatches of their murmured talk—"majoring in English"—"made up six hours at summer school"—"hope Prof. Robby takes me in his medieval history course."

Judith was suddenly aware of a tall, gray figure moving down the aisle. It was the gray tweeds, and she allowed herself, this time a good look at her knight of the hat box. His face, like the rest of his figure, was lean, and his clothes, while apparently new, gave the effect of looseness. He had a small mustache. Apparently, Judith thought, he was one of those men of whom tailors despaired of ever presenting a "natty" appearance.

He passed Judith without a glance, his tanned face a trifle averted from her, and she experienced a little feeling of amusement, not unmingled with a little pity for the man's obvious self-consciousness. As he went by, Judith's eye caught the glint of a Phi Beta Kappa pin dangling from his vest, and she nodded her head sagely. Just as she thought—an instructor, very likely. Or maybe a professor, although he did look young for it.

"Almost in," said the blotchy young man, who was still half draped over the back of the seat. He began gathering his lady's assorted baggage.

Through the window pane, Judith could see that the train was sliding through the outskirts of a town. There were squalid gray houses on all sides, and crooked, muddy streets, with gas lamps just beginning to glimmer in the twilight. An involuntary shudder ran through her. She saw people detach themselves from their seats and begin to assemble their grips and suitcases. A confused murmur ran through the car.

"Pendleton Station!" yelled a brakeman, banging open a door, and there was a general scramble.

Judith assembled her belongings and stood back to await her chance to get out of the mad press of noisy youth. The gray tweeds had disappeared, and she saw not a trace of the mouse-colored Wetherel. She was the only young woman in the coach who lacked a squire to entourage her. She felt suddenly lonely.

The whooping, giggling throng fled out. Judith was one of the last passengers to step from the platform. She was instantly engulfed in a still larger and more clamorous throng, which milled about her with confused thunders of noisy greetings. There was a strenuous backslapping on the part of the young men, and the girls greeted one another with shrill cries and kisses. For a moment she was swept by a wave of helpless consternation.

But relief came swiftly, though unexpectedly. A young giant in a loose-fitting light top coat detached himself from the crowd and took swift strides toward her. A smile was playing about his lips, though Judith did not see it. Indeed, all she noticed was that the shoulders beneath the top coat seemed extraordinarily broad. A football hero, probably, was her thought.

The next moment the giant had stepped beside her and had snatched her suitcase and handbag. His free arm went around her and she felt herself being carried along.

Her mouth opened to voice a protest, but she was suddenly crushed against the topcoat and staring into a pair of strange green eyes. There was a merry light in the green eyes. They seemed to be laughing at her. She struggled feebly, and then the giant kissed her soundly on the mouth.

Warding off the mob, he half pulled, half pushed her toward the taxi stand. Judith was too dazed to speak. He opened the door of a cab, thrust her inside and then slammed it shut.

"What—" Judith began, but the rude young giant had turned away. She saw him toss a bill to the driver, heard him say, "The lady will give you directions."

Then he vanished in the crowd.

Who is the strange young giant that welcomes Judith to Pendleton University so unceremoniously? Judith finds out soon, and it's his turn to be surprised.

PROCRASTINATION

Isn't it peculiar why people will put off ordering coal until the last minute when they could just as well have their bins filled before the cold weather arrives?

It's human nature to put off until tomorrow what can be done today, but every sudden cold snap keeps us busy writing orders, each order stating "must be delivered at once."

All of which leads us to ask, have you ordered your winter supply of coal?

ASSESSORS TO MEET

EVERY DAY IN WEEK

Board Will Begin Daily Sessions Next Monday in Municipal Building.

The Board of Assessors, which includes S. Emil Johnson, John Jensen and Samuel L. Nelson, will hold its annual sessions in the new municipal building, beginning Monday, October 11. With the exception of Saturday, October 16, the board will be in session every day up to and including November 1, the last day upon which lists may be filed.

The board is now in a position to give better service to the taxpayers, sitting each day from 9 to 11:30 a. m. and from 1:30 to 7:00 p. m. On two Saturdays the assessors will be in session the same as any other day. This will give taxpayers who are employed in the mills or in Hartford an opportunity to file their lists without loss of time.

The assessors are hoping that the taxpayers will get their lists in early and thus avoid the usual rush at the latter part of the month. Persons who neglected to file their lists on or before the first day of November will have 10 per cent added to them. It is the plan of the assessors to call many of the taxpayers on the telephone to remind them that their lists have not been filed. This will be possible by the new card index system whereby the assessors will be able to readily tell just who has filed his or her list and who has not.

The advertisement of the assessors will be in session the same as any other day. This will give taxpayers who are employed in the mills or in Hartford an opportunity to file their lists without loss of time.

A fire has been burning for 67 years in the Summit Hill coal mine in Pennsylvania. Engineers estimate that it has consumed 14,000,000 tons of coal. More than $3,000,000 has been spent in fighting it.

THE NEW HOUR AND A HALF

STATION-TO-STATION toll telephone rates now start to decrease at 7 o'clock instead of 8:30 in the evening. During the new hour and a half from 7:00 P. M. to 8:30 P. M. a decrease of 25% of the day rate is in effect. A second decrease at 8:30 P. M. makes the rate from 8:30 P. M. to 4:30 A. M. about 50% of the day rate. These discounts apply where the day Station-to-Station rate is 40 cents or more, with a minimum reduced rate of 35 cents.

These two decreases, one at 7 P. M. and the other at 8:30 P. M., give an excellent opportunity for the wide-awake toll user to save money. Toll telephone service carries your voice quickly, naturally, and accurately over the wire.

THE ROMANCE OF AMERICA: Stephen Decatur (8)

Decatur flung his broken cutlass at the man's face and sprang toward him, but before he could close with his giant adversary, the Turk wounded him with his pike in the arm and side. Then Decatur grappled with the pirate, and they rolled over the deck of the ship, locked in a struggle to the death.

Decatur's foot slipped and he fell in the mass of struggling Americans and Tripolitans. Decatur was below, the Turk on top.

Drawing a short, sharp knife from his sash, the Turk lifted it in the air to stab the American captain.

Be sure and get Friday's Herald—and turn to the comic page. There's where you will find them.

Good Nature and Good Health

DANGER OF MASTOID LURKS IN COMMON COLDS.

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN. Editor Journal of the American Medical Association and of Hygiene the Health Magazine.

The physician who treats a patient with one of the acute infectious diseases, or even the common cold, stands most in fear of a secondary infection of the ear, which, if not relieved promptly, may result in mastoiditis.

For instance, Dr. Anna B. Leder, of California, reported to the specialists attending the annual meeting of the American Academy of Ophthalmology and Otolaryngology, that 45 of 345 patients with scarlet fever seen during 1925 developed a secondary infection of the ear.

These patients were treated by a prompt cutting of the ear drum to release the infected matter held under pressure within.

Don't Wait. As a result all but three recovered promptly and not one had to have a mastoid operation. Unfortunately, persons are inclined to wait too long with ear infection before having the ear drum opened.

The pus then burrows its way into the bony tissues behind the ear where it causes mastoid infection.

The physician diagnoses the condition on the basis of a bulging, inflamed ear drum, high fever, and frequent redness, swelling and pain on pressure behind the ear.

The latter symptoms are not, however, always present. As Dr. A. W. Alden pointed out at the most recent meeting of specialists in diseases of the ear, an infant may have a severe mastoid infection capable of producing profound general symptoms and even death without any external signs.

The records of cases studied in the St. Louis Children's Hospital showed that early operation, even in the absence of bulging and redness behind the ear brought about the saving of lives.

Close to the Brain. An infection in the ear is serious because of the secondary symptoms. The delicate tissues of the brain lie very close to those of the ear, and pus, causing a brain abscess or infecting any of the large blood vessels about the brain, is likely to produce a fatal result.

In this condition, as in most other diseases affecting mankind, early diagnosis and prompt treatment make a vast difference in the duration of illness and the final recovery.

The fine weather on Monday brought out a fairly representative number of voters and the election, as it was to be expected when Republican ranks are working with any show of harmony, resulted in a clean sweep for the Republicans. There are about 300 voters and 175 votes were cast, 95 Republican and 86 Democratic, and 13 split. Clarence Porter, Democrat, who was elected collector of taxes last year ran thirteen votes ahead of his ticket on Monday's election for the same office. The principal officers elected were as follows: assessor, Robert E. Foote, r; board of relief, Edmund Horton, r; selectmen, F. Elton Post, r; Claude W. Jones, d; agent of town deposit fund, Anne C. Gilbert, d; auditor, Frank R. Post, r; Susan B. Pendleton, d; grand jurors, Frank E. Clark, John B. Lyman, Mrs. Edwin T. Smith, r; collector of taxes, William G. Freese, r; constables, Carl Links, r; E. Buell Porter, r; Carlton H. Jones, d; Frank Jones, d; William S. Griffin, d; Fred Rowley, d; Charles Segar, d; registrar of voters, John N. Hewitt, r; Carlton B. Jones, d; town school committee, Susan B. Pendleton, d.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Worswick and Mrs. Lulu Lord of South Manchester and Mr. and Mrs. Sherwood Raymond of New Britain, were Sunday guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Francis H. Raymond of Raymond Manor, Hebron. Mrs. C. D. Washburn who has been the guest for ten days at the Raymond home has returned to her home in New Haven.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold House and Mr. and Mrs. Dwight Tucker, all of Hartford were week-end guests at the home of Mrs. Carrie Burnham.

The Rev. and Mrs. C. P. Lillie gave a birthday party at their home on Sunday in honor of their children, Amy and Raymond. The party was attended by several children from the neighborhood.

Inhabitants of the picturesque town of Hebron were surprised to read a few days ago an article in the Hartford Courant in which headlines set forth the statement that the old town above mentioned was "one of the youngest towns in Tolland county" and as such was just to celebrate her tenth anniversary, in a community fair.

Hebron groaned, muttered, and almost woke up. Settled 1708 on land coming directly from the Indian chieftain Uncas, Hebron has lived to see her territory in part stripped from her to build up the adjoining town of Marlborough and Andover. Since the days of the Civil War and the opening of the great West she has suffered a decline in wealth and population so that from 1800 to 1890 the wealthiest town in the county and second in population, it seemed as if dissolution were all there could be in store for her. Yet the height of industry perhaps had not been reached until this ancient town, mothers of governors (at least of one) judges, historians, noted clergy, celebrated in colonial lore, having housed Washington and Lafayette, having seen missionaries to Hartford and being herself the scene of the founding of the oldest missionary society in the United States—is accused of being a ten year old. She celebrated her bi-centennial in 1908. Age and the atmosphere of venerability that goes with it were all she had and being put suddenly into the infant class was a rude surprise.

But look out for this old "ten year old." There may be life in the old girl yet. A federal road this very fall is being put through her center supplying a link between New York and Boston, connecting Marlborough and Williamantic. Colonial houses from one hundred and seventy-five years old already look upset at the thought of the thunderous stream of traffic which will shortly sweep through their quiet midst. It may be that the old town is due in a sense to a renewal of it youth and that the Courant headlines will be prophetic of her future. Let us hope she may not turn out to be an "infant terrible," in that case.

The largest electric locomotive in the world has been constructed by a Geneva, Switzerland, firm. It weighs 126 tons, is more than 60 feet in length and is driven by six motors generating 4500 h.p. The engine can travel faster than 100 miles per hour.

WITHOUT giving Faith a chance to utter the shocked protest...

"Hello, Daddy!" In her musical voice there was no hint of anger...

"Where's Junior?" Mr. Lane asked a few moments later, as he laded generous helpings of Irish stew...

"This isn't a short-order lunch wagon, son," Mr. Lane said mildly, but Faith smiled with amusement...

"For cryin' out loud!" ejaculated Junior. "Where'd you get the headlight?"

"Yes, Cherry has told us the news," Faith said bluntly, feeling that she and her father could not bear to have the visit prolonged...

One time a business man born in a city, reared and trained in a city and indebted to the same city for his financial success, without word or warning to his astonished family, bought a farm in a beautiful valley and announced his intention of ending his days there.

"All my life," he said, "I have had a feeling that man was born to work with his hands. Not to hold a pen, or a telephone receiver or a spade or a pick or a hammer or chisel."

When I see the avalanche of labor savers that flood the world every year, and watch the human race being lost in the power of both hands and feet, I often think of his words.

"I decided that when my duty to my family was done, as the world nowadays thinks, of a father's duty to his family, I was going to do my duty to myself. Now I am doing it. My hands are getting rough, my nails broken with hard work, and no one on earth can know how proud I am of them."

CONDEMNNS 655 CATTLE IN CONN. IN A MONTH

State Department Issues Report for September; Mad Dog Epidemic Disappears.

Hartford, Oct. 7.—Connecticut's Department for Domestic Animals condemned 655 head of cattle during the month of September after giving tuberculin tests to 4,781. In doing this work the department examined 293 herds in all parts of the state and then issued 22 "accredited herd" certificates for herds that totaled 516 head of cattle. Certificates showing that the herds had been tested and reactors removed were issued for 1,413 head and certificates were given for 1,381 head in herds that had no reactors.

September saw 1,013 head of cattle imported into the state for dairy and breeding purposes and 401 for immediate slaughter. Other live stock importations during the past month were: 114 horses, 6,083 swine, 281 sheep and 71,955 poultry.

An epidemic of rabies prevalent in the state during July and August has apparently been checked, according to George E. Corwin, deputy commissioner of the department, who today announced that no new cases have been reported in upward of three weeks. The epidemic was particularly severe in Hartford county.

There are 332 parks and squares in Paris.

At Least He Comes in for One of May Baker's Numerous Engagements.

Belgrade, Oct. 7.—The engagement of Mary London Baker and Count Boshdar Pouritch, Serbian secretary of the Jugo-Slav foreign office, will be announced on Saturday, it was reliably reported here today.

The Chicago heiress has been in Belgrad for several days, and has almost constantly been seen in the company of Pouritch, who at one time represented his country in the consular office in Chicago.

Miss Baker gained fame through her repeated engagements and disengagements to Allistair McCormick several years ago. On one occasion she left him waiting at the church. He later married Miss Joan Tyndale Stevenses, of London.

In Persia the wedding service is always read in front of a sign.

Walsh Says Yankees Rule 6-5 Favorite Today Because of Pennock

YANKS SWEEP TO VICTORY ON TIDE OF RUTH'S HOMERS

Cards Must Now Depend on Sherdel, Alexander and Haines to Win Two of Next Three Games.

By DAVIS J. WALSH
St. Louis, Mo., Oct. 7.—Hitting being a cumulative proposition not like the downhill roll of a snowball or failure to wash behind the ears, the New York Yankees stepped into the light of day this morning to a strange, if not an ominously quiet, town and found themselves with a lot of overnight friends for the fifth game of the world series with the St. Louis Cardinals. The Yanks didn't hit the size of a wedding ring finger through the first three games.

But, as far as that went, it was possible that Johnstown was short of water before the flood. Carried With Tide
The Yankees were carried with the tide that rushed along behind the inspired progress of Babe Ruth yesterday and today the boys thought so well of their chances that they wouldn't lay one dollar against ninety-five cents that the Yanks would win every one of the next three games.

For today's game, in fact, they ruled a six to five favorite, largely because the pussant Mr. Pennock was due to labor in the vineyard of the Yanks. Herbert left-handed the Cards wonderfully in the first game of the series so the boys can't see anything else but that the must and the Yanks will repeat against Bill Sherdel, the man he bested in the opener. Otherwise, everything was as level as a ballroom floor. The Yanks won the first game, the Cards took the second and third and the Yanks won the fourth by a large majority.

It was this latter circumstance that brought the natives down on their flat feet and caused them to desist from making the night hideous with sound. They still had confidence in their ball club but it was that quiet confidence, usually attributed to the capable young man who starts blithely at the bottom of the ladder and climbs rapidly to the hand of the beautiful hetress.

What really made the Yanks a hoot bet so suddenly was the fact that our Mr. Ruth suddenly became the fearsome hitter that popular impression had seen fit to make him. His performance yesterday established this fact, even if he never tips another foul.

Records Established
Among the records he established, in the estimation of our most irritatingly correct statisticians, were these:

The first man to hit three home runs in one game of a world series.

The first man to hit two home runs on two pitched balls.

The first man to score four runs in one world series game.

The first man to hit seven home runs as a world series lifetime record.

Scored the most total bases and extra bases in one game.

Scored the most total bases and extra bases as a lifetime world series record.

The first man to tie the home run record for an entire series by his performance in one game.

The game not only established Mr. Ruth as a man who hits a baseball with frequency and some vehemence, but completely eliminated Messrs. Rhem, Reinhart, Hallahan and Herman Bell from further consideration as pitchers in this series. Sherdel, a commendable loser in the first game, was an almost inevitable choice today.

Alexander, having pitched one of the greatest world series games on record, was due when the teams jump to New York for Saturday's game and the final game, if any, on Sunday, was expected to bring Jess Haines, another winner, back to the races.

Cards Have Edge
In other words, the Cards still had an edge in pitching and didn't look the part of a bad bet, in spite of the fact that they lost by an overwhelming majority yesterday. The Yanks had one winner, Pennock, and two losers, Shocker and Ruether, to muster for their dash to the wire, although it was thought possible that Bob Shawkey might slip his collar in time to join the general hilarity in New York.

GRANGE AND TRYON UNUSUAL ATTRACTION

Red Grange's appearance at Clarkin field, Hartford, Sunday with the New York Yankee football team against All-New Britain, takes rank as the premier football event of the year in state professional gridiron circles.

The "Galloping Ghost" has never set foot on Connecticut soil and his advent has stirred the interest of fans all over this state and in Western Massachusetts.

There is almost as much interest here in the fact that Eddie Tryon is with the Yankee eleven since Eddie formerly was star Suffield backfield man and has a host of admirers in this section.

Eddie was Colgate captain last year and was rated by many football experts as one of the three greatest open field runners of the year.

It is expected that more than 10,000 will see the game here Sunday and seats for 13,000 will be provided.

The gates will be open at noon and there will be entertainment for the early arrivals.

Play is set for 2:30.

Sultan of Swat Slams Three Long Home Runs Setting 6 World Records

(BY BILLY EVANS)
Sportsman's Park, St. Louis, Mo., Oct. 7.—As Babe Ruth goes, so go the Yanks. That has long been a Yankee truth. It was proved beyond a doubt in the fourth game of the World's Series yesterday.

Dropping around to the New York bench, while the Yanks were taking batting practice, I engaged Manager Miller Huggins in conversation thusly: "When do you expect your noble athletes to start hitting?" "I've been wondering about that very same thing for a month" was his reply.

Up To Babe
"If the Babe will only start, the rest of the boys will follow up. You know he always shows the way when the Yanks are in a slugging mood."

Colonel Ruppert owner of New York club was listening in on the conversation. The Colonel, by the way, was in far from an optimistic mood. "You can tell the boys, if any pinch hitters are necessary in today's game, I think I can do the job just as well as some of the players," said Mr. Ruppert.

"The Colonel talked rather loudly and the irony of his opinion of the Yanks batting apparently sank in." However, there was no need of calling on the colonel. Babe Ruth personally looked after this.

The only Bambino, baseball's greatest slugger, gave the most extraordinary exhibition of long distance hitting ever seen in a World's Series game.

3 Tremendous Clouts
Anytime the Cardinal pitchers got the ball within socking distance Babe proceeded to hit it over the garden wall. He did it three times.

There was nothing synthetic about Babe's home runs. The first cleared the right field bleachers a mile, the second, was a line drive over the right center stands, while the third, settled far up in the extreme center field seats, the longest distance in the park from the

ANSONIA SOCCER ELEVEN PLAYING HERE ON SUNDAY

It was announced today that the Manchester Soccer eleven will play its next game Sunday afternoon at the McKee street stadium. It will be the second league game of the season for the locals.

The crack Ansonia eleven will be the attraction and it is expected that a large crowd will watch the fray. Play will begin promptly at 3 o'clock.

In order that the fans may hear the returns of the world series, providing it is not concluded before that time, Secretary McCullough has made arrangements with Barstow's Radio shop to have a radio set installed. The park gate will be opened at 2 o'clock in order that fans may hear the start of the game.

Further particulars of the game for Sunday will be announced in Saturday's Herald.

SOCCER GAME SATURDAY

Springfield, Mass., Oct. 7.—The Providence Clamdiggers of the American Soccer League are scheduled to meet the Springfield Babes in a league game at League Park, Springfield, on Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock. The day will be known as "Jack Izatt Day" in honor of Jack Izatt, centerhalf of the Providence team and formerly with the Falco team of Holyoke. Springfield has signed another star from Scotland, William Finlayson, an inside-left, who has seen service with Third Lanark in the Scottish League and with Chelsea, Clayton Orient and Bradford City in the English League.

Springfield has been displaced from top place in the league standing by Bethlehem Steel, national professional champions, and the Babes will make a big effort to regain the lead. The officials are working on one or two well-known players to bolster weak spots in the team and signings are expected soon. It is announced that the eleven, to represent Springfield against Providence, will be on the following lines: Carlson, G. Fitzsimmons, rb; Gibson, lb; Black, ch; Stewart, ch; McNair, lb; Farquhar, or; Campbell or Travers, lr; Paterson, c; Finlayson, lr; Lawson, ol.

FOOTBALL PRACTICE

The North Ends will practice tonight at seven o'clock at the playground. Coach Ray Mooney wishes every player to be on hand. The team will play the Laurel club of Unionville Sunday at Hickey's Grove in preliminary game to the Cloverleaves.

Did you ever notice that experienced smokers will offer or ask for a Camel—not just a cigarette? A little observation will reveal the overwhelming preference for Camels—a popularity that has never been equaled in all the history of smoking.

More smokers demand Camels, because Camel is unlike any other cigarette made.

Camel is as different as the rare quality of goodness. This difference costs millions to maintain. The choicest Turkish and Domestic tobaccos grown . . . the most skilful blending—that is Camels. More cannot be had at any price. When you light a Camel, you may be sure you are smoking the best.

When invited to have the world's favorite cigarette, accept with pleasure. It will be your personal introduction to the mildest, mellowest blend of choice tobaccos ever produced. "Have a Camel!"
