ENDED.

It can always be said for Harry M. Daugherty and Thomas W. Miller that they were fairly tried for the crime of accepting bribes for the passage of the Swiss Society's claim on the property of the German owned, war-seized American Metal Company, and that the jury failed to convict.

It is significant that the outcome of the trial was distinctly pleasing to the accused men. They greeted the statement that the jury could not agree with smiles, their friends hastened to congratulate them.

How the jury mind functioned in this case it is, of course, impossible to know. That a huge fee was paid for the rushing through of the Merton claim was established beyond question or doubt.

The jury was not there to pass upon the ethics or morality of the Metal Company scandal, but upon the legality or illegality of the proceedings of the defendants.

It might be well to remember that the charge against Daugherty and Miller was in effect that they passed the German claim solely because they were paid to pass it and without regard to its merits.

The upcome of this mess is that several men in positions of power in the government yielded to the temptation to take irregular money for doing what seems to have been a more or less regular thing.

McPHERSON CASE. The Almee Semple McPherson case is rapidly approaching a stage where there is liable to be a grouping of sympathizers and non-sympathizers along religious lines.

and predispositions well in hand. There is one place where there is very little religious prejudice indeed—the average newspaper office.

In view of this it is perhaps worth while to take stock of the McPherson episode as reflected in newspaper office opinion. And it is probable that in not one newspaper shop in twenty, in the whole United States, is there any serious belief that Almee Semple McPherson was kidnapped away from that California beach, held captive in Mexico and subsequently escaped, as she has declared.

Religious prejudice or predisposition has nothing at all to do with this—merely a balancing of known facts and probabilities without any other interest than to know the truth—which is the trade of the newspaper worker.

It is conceivable that a person in Mrs. Semple's situation might, indeed, be made the object of a crusade of lies. One does not set aside that aspect of the case as an impossibility, though it is a demonstrable fact that there has never been, in the criminal history of America, a "frame-up" of such elaborate construction as this would be if it were a frame-up at all; but it would be immensely improbable, even though it failed to agree with the known facts, the admitted facts.

Now if Mrs. McPherson did indeed enter into this conspiracy to hoax the state of California and the country concerning her absence she did a wicked thing. The whole machinery of the law was devoted to the wasteful task of finding her.

It would seem as though, with all the known circumstances—all the circumstances supported by conditions and by more than the assertions of a single person—indicating that Mrs. McPherson has not been frank in this affair, the sane and sensible position for people of all sects and all sympathies to assume in the case is that of the open mind.

There is not a newspaper office in the country, probably, where the evangelist has been finally, conclusively convicted in the judgment of the workers. Yet there is probably not one where it is not perfectly well understood that she has a lot of explaining to do before she can be at all entitled to the enthusiastic confidence that is being placed in her by her congregation.

It would seem as though, for the good of the cause which she espouse, Mrs. McPherson's Los Angeles followers, would see that they have hardly any moral right to give her a support that bears every impress of deliberate blindness. She is absolutely entitled to a fair hearing. She is not, by virtue of the fact that she is an eloquent and convincing talker, entitled to an exonerated that would be denied to any other citizen.

LAWYER TARGETS. Chicago Gangland seems to be unable to start spraying the streets of the city's tough sections with machine gun lead without hitting a lawyer. This is an interesting situation. Elsewhere it is the practice of the legal advisers and willing helpers of the crook gangs to sit safely in well guarded offices and let their clients come to them.

Since the universities and law schools of the United States are turning out lawyers at least five times as fast as there is any legitimate need of them, it is not so remarkable a situation as it might seem at first glance.

WHISTLING. "Tyler Out to Beat Senator Bingham."—News head in Hartford Times.

Mr. Tyler has been "out" to beat candidates before. Suffice it to say were the Democratic chances of beating Senator Bingham worth a nickel Rollin U. Tyler would not be the Democratic candidate.

Washington, Oct. 12.—Though five months will elapse between now and next March when the Coolidges expect to move out to permit repairs on the White House Washington hotel keepers already pulling every imaginable string to get the presidential family as guests.

Reconditioning the executive mansion will be a six-month job, during about half of which the president and his wife will be away on their vacation. Where they'll go has not yet been determined.

For the rest of the time, it has been intimated in official quarters, the president plans to put up at one of the numerous hotels. If he has decided which one, however, nobody knows it.

Three months of presidential patronage obviously will be of incalculable value to the hotel which draws the prize. Not only will it jam the establishment during the three months but the publicity, it will mean will be good for all time.

What the president pays for his accommodations, of course, is no consideration. Any hotel in Washington would entertain him like royalty and pay him any price for the privilege, if it could get him that way.

All the classier hotels in the city have "presidential suites," but that doesn't necessarily imply that any presidents have been in them. In the cases of most of them, they haven't. The one that becomes the real thing will be at an enormous advantage over the others.

The understanding is that the Coolidges will not take a very large retinue into hotel life with them—probably only the president's valet, Mrs. Coolidge's maid and, of course, their inevitable staff of secret service and police guardians, who may be counted on to keep shary eyes out in the lobby.

to watch the presidential private elevator and to clutter the corridor outside the chief executive's suite whenever he's in it. The president will transact business at the White House executive offices, as usual, since that part of the building, to which repair operations will not extend, can be kept open.

He simply will walk or motor from his hotel to his office in the morning, and back again at night, like any other professional man. Ordinarily he'll walk probably, being a good pedestrian and inclined to complain that he doesn't get enough exercise.

The net result of the whole arrangement promises to be that the presidential pair will be seen as human beings, rather more than as usual with a president and a "first lady."

The president may have thought of this, in electing to go to a hotel rather than to take a house. He could have had his choice of a dozen or more, for nothing, if he'd chosen—the finest in Washington.

IN NEW YORK

New York, Oct. 12.—Underneath the appearance of rush and scurry, the city has a heart. Sounds like a cheap song, all about the big, generous soul that the tinsel hides, but it took a visiting correspondent to dig down and lay it bare.

"A generous town. It gives more transportation for a nickel than is to be had anywhere else in the world, though there is said to be some question about who pays the losses incurred in the operation of the rapid transit system."

"Some harsh spoken persons say the taxpayers bear it in paying for political government that keeps in power by keeping fares down. I don't know, but it's a generous government; costly, perhaps, but good."

"Hear Charley on the subject. Charley chatted as he guarded a gate at the Metropolitan museum. In the heavy rains last summer Charley's district had turned out a hundred men in hip boots, on 30 minutes' notice, to open a clogged sewer. The district leader had sent word he wanted a hundred men in hip boots, and they came, a-running, that's all."

"How does it smell, Paddy?" "Smells like hell," says Paddy. "How about it?" we say. "Leave it to me," he says. Chemical works torn down, and gone in five weeks.

"Two street car lines in our district. Every man that works on them born and raised in the district. Conductor gets out and helps the old ladies on. Knows 'em all. Garbage drivers all born and raised in the district. Sure, Paddy he get them their jobs. He's district leader. Why wouldn't we do anything for Paddy?"

Christopher Was Somewhat Of a Sheik, Too, It Appears

HE STRUMMED A MEAN GUITAR 'NEATH THE MOONLIT WINDOW OF HIS BEAUTIFUL LADY LOVE IN OLD SEVILLE

New Orleans, Oct. 12.—Christopher Columbus, who sailed beyond the blue rim of the world to discover the golden Americas, was something more than a great adventurer. He also was considerable of a sheik.

The grizzled old navigator, painted for centuries as a dour man of gloom and shadows, in reality was a romantic stroller who twanged a guitar under the sleepy moon of old Seville as ardently as any youthful hero out of an old-fashioned novel.

"—nights when Columbus, in true Spanish style, took a guitar and strummed crooning love songs beneath a balcony of old Seville."

This new light on the old explorer is given by Prof. Rudolph Schuller, European linguist and ethnologist, who came to this country to examine early America data in the library of Tulane University.

companied Columbus on one of his later voyages to the New World—the strange New World that Columbus, to the day of his death, thought was only an outlying part of Asia.

CONTEST FOR AMATEURS AT RIALTO THURSDAY

The theme which evoked from King Lear his immortal plaint, "How sharper than a serpent's tooth it is to have a thankless child" and which caused Absalom to break the heart of his aged father, David has been used in one of the greatest of photoplay stories, "The Wise Guy," which has just been issued and will be shown at the Rialto today, tomorrow and Thursday. The picture was brought back by popular request and it is scoring another country-wide hit upon its second presentation.

INTELLIGENCE TESTS

COLUMBUS TEST

Today is Columbus Day and the questions in this test are all concerned with the life and work of that great navigator. The correct answers to these questions appear on another page. 1-Who is shown in the accompanying picture? 2-Where was Columbus born? 3-What were the names of the vessels which Columbus used in his first voyage across the Atlantic? 4-On what date did Columbus land on the American shore? 5-Who was the queen that made Columbus' voyage possible? 6-How many persons were carried by the three ships on Columbus' first voyage? 7-In what year did Columbus die? 8-How many voyages did Columbus make to America? 9-What was the occupation of Columbus' father? 10-After whom were the American continents named?

Seven little sweethearts, still enough to mix; Called Alice Flossie, and then there were six.

Six little sweethearts, kicking and alive; Father could kick harder, and then there were five.

Five little sweethearts, one was said to snore; I couldn't face the prospect so there were four.

He'd given them a heap of fun and he turned about to run 'cause he was glad to get away—as glad as he could be. "What's doing now?" said one wee voice. "Say, if I really had my choice, I think I'd rather eat some food, than anything I know." The Tynmites all howled "Hurrah! We haven't had a bite today. Let's camper to the bushes where the big wild berries grow." They ran along, and puffed anduffed. Then ate until they all were stuffed. And shortly they were back beneath the birdhouse in the tree. Then came a lot of little sighs, for ere they met a great surprise. Some robins in the birdhouse were busy as could be. "They've got our home. That's right," announced brave Cop-

STORK PICKS OUT OUR TOWN FOR A VISIT

Even the stork knows Manchester is the finest place in New England, for although he hovered over a score of towns and cities since yesterday morning, he alighted at the Memorial hospital with his precious burden at 7 o'clock last evening.

Mrs. Josephine Rosinski, of 41 Cleveland avenue, Westfield, Mass., started yesterday morning in an auto to visit her husband who is at the Norwich hospital.

Some relatives and her three children were with her on the trip. After the visit at the hospital the party started back to Westfield.

On the way up from Norwich, Mrs. Rosinski became ill. The driver, knowing of the proximity of the noted bird, stepped on the gas after a passing autoist told him there was a hospital in the next town which was called Manchester.

The woman had just been placed in a bed in the maternity ward when the stork entered the room and with him a bouncing baby boy.

Today, reports from the hospital say that both mother and child are doing well.

STANHOPE-PORTER.

A very pretty autumn wedding took place last evening at 8 o'clock at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wesley B. Porter of 241 Garden street when their daughter Miss Dorothy J. Porter was married to Seth Lyman Stanhope, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Lyman Stanhope of South Lyme, Conn. The ceremony was performed by Rev. William Weston Evans, a close friend of the family and Field Secretary of the Connecticut Federation of Churches.

The bride looked very charming in a beautiful gown of white satin trimmed with Chantilly lace and her veil was of tulle with a wreath of orange blossoms. She carried a sower bouquet of white Killarney roses and lilies of the valley. The bride's attendant was Miss Irene Anderson of Highland Park who wore an exquisite frock of pink georgette trimmed with valpoint lace with large pink picture hat and carried pink roses.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother Wesley Carter Porter. The wedding march was played by James Vincent Freeman, organist of the Burnside Methodist church and Miss Ruth Austin of Rockville sang "O Promise Me."

The bride's gift to her bridesmaid was a pearl necklace, and the groom's gift to his best man was a hammered silver cigarette case. Mr. and Mrs. Stanhope left later in the evening by motor for a trip to Cleveland and Akron, Ohio.

Among those present from out of town were Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Lyman Stanhope, of South Lyme, father and mother of the groom, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Stanhope of South Lyme, and William State also of South Lyme and Rev. Barton Proctor of Bristol, Conn.

MISS CHAPMAN HEADS LOCAL GARDEN CLUB

The regular monthly meeting of the Manchester Garden club was held last evening at the Community Club with a large number in attendance. The annual election of officers was held and the following took office for the ensuing year: Miss M. O. Chapman, president; W. J. Galavin, vice-president; Mrs. R. K. Anderson, secretary; Miss Madeline Smith, treasurer.

The club voted to hold the charter membership rolls of the club open till November 1 at which time the membership dues may be advanced, the present membership fee being $1.00 per year. The memberships are open to all towns people who are interested in flower growing or for just the flowers themselves. The clubs program committee will report at the next meeting, to be held Monday, November 1, the events both social and other activities in the form of speakers, stereopticon lectures and special dates to be anticipated by the members throughout the winter months.

Those wishing to add their names to the charter membership list should call Mrs. R. K. Anderson, telephone 748-2 or G. H. Washburn, telephone 2983 before November 1.

POLISH GIRLS' CLUB.

The first meeting of the Girl Falcons will be held in the conference room of the Community club this evening at 8 o'clock. This organization will be unique in that the membership will be for the Polish girls of the town. Already more than a dozen have expressed their desire for a club of this type and have been working for the past several weeks to bring the membership up to the required number. If the club proves a success they will affiliate with other Junior Achievement clubs which are carried on throughout the state.
