Bodies Discovered Under a Boat; Police Find Man Wandering Dazed, Search for Missing Mechanic.

New Haven, Oct. 14.—The bodies of two women, almost entirely without clothes but wearing hats, were found beneath an overturned rowboat in shallow water at Morris Cove here today.

An unknown man, whose memory appeared to be entirely gone, was found wandering the Morris Cove district by police shortly after the bodies were found.

Lying on the shore near the spot where the bodies were found was a pocket book belonging to Barney Hanna, Philadelphia, who has been employed in the construction of the new Yale theater here.

Coroner Ell Mix, Dr. Scarborough, medical examiner and the city detective department are working on the case.

No identification
So scantily clad were the bodies of the women that they were absolutely nothing by which they could be identified.

The strange man had nothing about him by which he could be identified and his memory seemed to have entirely collapsed. He is under treatment in a hospital here.

Hanna had lived at the Hotel Royal, Meadow street, during his stay here and it was ascertained that a strange man had met him in the lobby of the hotel last evening. Hanna went to his room and had not been seen since. His bed was not occupied during the night and he did not appear on the Yale job.

Seek Drowned Man

The harbor police squad this afternoon was searching the waters of Morris Cove, at the lower end of the harbor, seeking Hanna's body or something that might lead to the identity of the dead women.

Rumors concerning the tragedy also were being run down by the police. It was reported that the women had come into the harbor on board a yacht from Long Island and that a drinking party had taken place on the boat during the night. Police could find no trace of such a party at noon and were searching wharves there and along Mill and Quinipiac rivers for clues.

Sailor Quizzed.

Omon Oumundsen, of Brooklyn, N. Y., a sailor, is being examined by Coroner Mix in connection with the case. The examination is being conducted in strict secrecy, following Coroner Mix's set plan in such cases.

Oumundsen is the man found wandering in Morris Cove. After treatment he was able to talk and told police here that he and Hanna, now missing, were old friends. Oumundsen is employed by Sherman Holt, of Oyster Bay, L. I., as captain of Mr. Holt's forty-foot gasoline boat Captain.

Party on Boat.

Mr. Holt crossed from Long Island on Monday afternoon to go by train to Boston. He was expected here tomorrow to take his boat home. Oumundsen met Hanna yesterday and invited him to the boat. Hanna appeared last evening with two women who were strangers to Oumundsen and Oumundsen rowed the party out to the Holt boat where they spent the evening.

According to Oumundsen, Hanna wanted to row the women ashore and promised to do the row boat up at the New Haven Yacht club landing. That was the last Oumundsen had seen of the party.

SEEKS HIS IDENTITY AMONG LEGIONAIRES

Service Man Who Has Lost Himself Appeals to Throng for Recognition.

Philadelphia, Oct. 14.—An ex-service man appeared at the convention of the American Legion today seeking his identity, hoping and praying that some former buddy would recognize him and tell him his own name.

"Jerry Talbot," he is called now. It is not his right name. Witnesses have testified to having seen him in France, and Legion officials are convinced he fought either in the American or French armies.

Talbot was shot through the head and regressed consciousness in a Boston hospital, a victim of amnesia. Attempting to discover his name has become an obsession.

Major General J. C. Harbord, former deputy chief of staff, became interested in the strange case and sent the man to Philadelphia.

The Kilg lights for the movies were turned on Talbot as he stood in the rostrum.

Benjamin Spang, of Philadelphia, a member of the 47th Company, Fifth Regiment Marines, told officials he was certain Talbot was a member either of the 16th or 20th Company, Marines.

Spang and Talbot got together with a neurologist.

San Antonio to Get the Legion for Year 1928

Philadelphia, Oct. 14.—San Antonio, Tex., will entertain the American Legion in 1928. The boys decided to meet two years hence in the Texas city after considering bids from San Antonio, Miami, Detroit and Denver.

Dan Moody, governor-elect of Texas, extended San Antonio's invitation. Among other things he promised "first class hotel rooms at $2.50, ham and eggs at 40 cents, coffee at a nickel and free automobile transportation."

"Black Jack" Pershing, officially General John J. commander of the A. E. F., will lead the Legion to Paris next September for its ninth annual convention as permanent honorary national chairman.

Tomorrow the Legion convention here will battle out with ballots the business of selecting the working national commander for 1927.

COACHED TO FAKE AIMEE'S WRITING

Mrs. Seilaff Testifies Evangelist Had Her Practise for Two Hours.

Los Angeles, Oct. 14.—After the second day on the witness stand, during which time she flatly accused Mrs. Aimee Semple McPherson, evangelist, of coaching her in details of the alleged hoax in connection with the asserted kidnapping of Mrs. McPherson, Mrs. Lorraine Wiseman-Seilaff, co-defendant and the state's star witness in charges of conspiracy, was scheduled to take the stand again today.

Miss Bernice Morris, secretary of R. A. McKinley, a blind lawyer, who was alleged to have been dictating with Mrs. McPherson to produce purported kidnappers, was scheduled to follow her on the stand. McKinley was killed in an automobile wreck several weeks ago.

Practiced Writing
Yesterday, Mrs. Seilaff testified that Mrs. McPherson was angling for another "Miss X" to assume the role of companion to her former radio operator, Kenneth G. Ormiston, at the Carmel cottage.

Mrs. Seilaff said that she and Mrs. McPherson spent more than two hours of one day practicing handwriting. She declared that she concentrated on imitating the writing of McKinley, who had written on grocery slips at the Carmel cottage and that Mrs. McPherson tried to make her writing as much alike as possible. The grocery slips disappeared during the grand jury investigation of the case and a woman member of the jury is accused of having destroyed them.

She also declared that Mrs. McPherson and Ormiston had communicated with each other as late as Sept. 9.

Documents Stolen.

Important documents bearing on the McPherson case, including a letter received by the evangelist from Ormiston on August 8, have been stolen from the office of S. S. Hahn, attorney for Mrs. Wiseman-Seilaff. Hahn announced today.

Hahn said the documents were kept in a secret compartment in his office desk.

In the exception of the letter from Ormiston to Mrs. McPherson, I can duplicate the other documents," Hahn declared.

In the Ormiston letter to Mrs. McPherson, sent from Chicago, Hahn said the man promised to keep in close touch with the Angelus Temple pastor and come to Los Angeles to help her whenever she wanted him to come.

This letter had not been made public," Hahn said.

TAXPAYERS TARDY IN FILING LISTS

Assessors Report That Few Have Appeared Thus Far; Fear Last Minute Rush.

Although the Board of Assessors have been in their office daily there have been comparatively few taxpayers who have come to file their tax list.

This is going to result in a last minute rush unless the taxpayers "snap out of it," one of the assessors stated today.

"It would be far better for all concerned if they came now and avoided the rush. We are in our office daily from 9 until 11.30 in the morning and 1.30 until 7 o'clock in the evening. This affords opportunity to file the tax lists before the closing date, Nov. 1," he said.

BRITISH LABORITES WOULD SCUTTLE PEACE PACTS

Margate, England, Oct. 14.—The Labor Party conference, in session here today, adopted a resolution demanding the annulment of the Versailles treaty and the Dawes plan and repudiation of the Locarno pacts, which were described as a threat directed at Russia.

DIRIGIBLE LOS BRAVES INLAND FLIGHT'S PERIL

Starts Late This Forenoon on Trip That Proved Fatal to Shenandoah a Year Ago; 44 on Board.

Lakehurst, N. J., Oct. 14.—With fair weather predicted along her route, the dirigible Los Angeles hopped off for Detroit at 11:05 today from the naval air station here.

Forty-four persons were aboard the airship, including Rear Admiral William Moffett, chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics. The ship's destination is the Ford airport in Detroit where a mooring mast large enough to hold the Los Angeles has been erected.

The flight today began the first extensive cross country dirigible trip since the ill-fated Shenandoah, sister ship of the Los Angeles, crashed into the valley at Ava, O., in September, 1925. The route to be taken by the Los Angeles was to be almost the same as that followed by the Shenandoah.

Commander C. E. Rosendahl, in command of the Los Angeles, is one of the survivors of the Shenandoah disaster. He had sketched out four different routes for the journey to Detroit but said he would not follow until he had tested weather conditions on the first leg of the flight.

On Route 8.
Washington, Oct. 14.—The Los Angeles is following route Number 8 on its way to Detroit, according to an announcement by Lieutenant Commander C. E. Rosendahl, commander, to the Navy Department just before the dirigible left Lakehurst at 11:05 o'clock.

The route, with the approximate flying time from Lakehurst to each city, follows:
Lakehurst, 11:05 zero; Philadelphia, one hour, eight minutes; Lancaster, two hours, 46 minutes; York, three hours, 22 minutes; Chambersburg, four hours, 37 minutes; Bedford, five hours, 45 minutes; Somerset, six hours, 34 minutes; Conowingo, seven hours, one minute; South Brunswick, 7 hours, 20 minutes; Pittsburgh, 8 hours, 8 minutes; Akron, 10 hours, 49 minutes; Sandusky, 12 hours, 34 minutes; Toledo, 13 hours, 42 minutes; and Detroit, 15 hours, 5 minutes.

Passes York, Pa.

York, Pa., Oct. 14.—The navy dirigible Los Angeles, en route from Lakehurst, N. J., to Detroit, passed over York at 1:55 o'clock this afternoon. It was headed due west for Chambersburg.

MARIE, WITH SLIGHT COLD, AVOIDS DECKS

Well Enough, However, to Eat Chicken Maryland With Mrs. Woodrow Wilson.

Aboard the Leviathan, Oct. 14.—Queen Marie of Rumania is suffering from a slight cold.

Although members of the queen's suite stated that there was nothing serious in her condition she is taking every precaution against arriving in the United States indisposed, and for this reason she abandoned her plans for a morning swim and also refrained from exercise on the decks.

The queen lunched in the general dining room with Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, and the menu was of typical American food, with chicken a la Maryland as the piece de resistance.

"When in America eat as Americans do," is to be the slogan of the Queen Marie. And to be sure that she gets to a right start the queen will be served with real American meals while on board the Leviathan, starting with the lunch today. This she has requested.

The royal request caused a furore in the big ship's galley, where all of the cooks are graduates of the best European schools of culinary art. The situation was saved by Chief Steward Billie Linn, who handled the food problem for thousands of American doughboys during the World War when the Leviathan was a troop ship. Linn will personally cook the queen's American luncheon.

HURT IN ACCIDENT

It has just been learned that Mr. and Mrs. Victor Piquard, of 238 Oak street, were injured in an auto accident in Hartford on Sunday evening and Mrs. Piquard is now in St. Francis hospital suffering from minor bruises and lacerations.

From the meagre details available the couple were driving along Farmington avenue beside a trolley car. In some way the rear end of the auto bumped into the trolley which caused Mr. Piquard to lose control of the wheel. The auto dashed across the road and hit a telephone pole which threw Mrs. Piquard through the windshield. It is reported that Mr. Piquard also lost several teeth in the accident.

Boy Who Thinks He's "Missing" Finds Out That He Really Was

Milwaukee, Oct. 14.—"I think I'm missing—How can I tell you my name if I can't remember it?" It was a plaintive, perplexed voice that came to Joseph Lebow over the telephone at Central Telephone at a drug store somewhere, Lebow was told next.

"Get into a taxicab and tell the driver to take you to headquarters," Lebow directed.

The distracted youth did as directed. Enveloped by a strange mental fog, and sobbing, he showed his ring. On it were the initials "J. W."

"I've been calling myself Bob Levy, but this morning something began to stir within me, and I know it's not my name."

NEGRO GIRLS START A WILD JAIL RIOT

Citizens Shoot Up Mob of Nearly 200 Who Make Wreck of Their Prison.

Media, Pa., Oct. 14.—Released from their cells in the Delaware County Jail by seven "trusties," nearly 200 prisoners men and women, drove out the guards, wrecked the interior of the jail and tried to set the building afire. They were subdued by special deputy sheriffs, recruited from citizens of the town, and police, after a fight in which blackjacks, shotguns and tear gas were brought into action.

Six of the remaining prisoners were shot, one in the head and the others in the legs and thighs, with bird shot. None was seriously wounded.

Interior a Wreck

An hour after the mutiny began all the prisoners had been forced back into their cells, but the prison was so badly damaged by the inmates that few of the cell doors could be locked. Twenty-five guards armed with shotguns patrolled the corridors last night or stood sentry over the broken doors.

The outbreak, the authorities said, followed a night of wild disorder brought on by the shouts and taunts hurled at the prisoners by twenty-four young negro women recently taken to the jail from the Sleighton Farm for incorrigibles. Many complaints of overcrowding and a reduction in their food rations recently had been made by the prisoners.

The ringleaders in the rioting, the authorities said, were the seven "trusties," who occupied one cell, the door of which was not locked. These men, all short term prisoners or men awaiting trial, had been trusted to aid the guards and do small jobs about the prison.

Set Jail Afire

Liberated from their cells by the "trusties," they smashed the locks with iron bars, the prisoners dashed through the corridors brandishing parts of iron beds and clubs and forcing the five guards on duty to flee. Then, picking up shovels from the kitchen ranges, they set fire to one corner of the building.

The guards, who had locked the corridor doors behind them, quickly fled to the main building, leaving the doors open. The rioters, led by a posse of more than 100 citizens, State troopers and police from near-by towns, were hastily called and armed with shotguns and pistols.

At the jail doors by the prisoners, the posse first tried to drive them back into their cells, but blackjacks. This method, however, proved ineffective and an order to open fire on the rioters was given. When six of the rioters fled, the doors were locked and they were driven back into their cells. Scores of primitive weapons were found on them.

65 them, 196 inmates
The jail has 196 cells for the 196 prisoners. It recently has been the subject of unfavorable reports which pictured the prison as "disgraceful and inadequate."

"Despite these recommendations," said Warden Allen last night, "the county has failed to take action. The dissatisfaction and unrest among the prisoners is justifiable, but they had no right to break out. The only thing to eliminate further outbreaks like this is provision for a county prison farm."

Warden Allen said a special meeting of the Board of Prison Inspection here was called to investigate the mutiny.

REFRIGERATOR GAS IS FATAL TO TWO

Danbury Man and Grandson Die, Wife Is in a Serious Condition.

Danbury, Oct. 14.—S. W. Force, 55, and his grand son, Henry Forme, aged nine, are dead, and Mrs. Force is dying in Danbury hospital from the effects of methyl chloride gas that escaped from the refrigerating system of an apartment house here during the night.

Mr. Force is an Oklahoman, who had lived here about two years. He was an official of the American Insulator Co., which has a large plant here. Mr. Force and his family moved into the apartment house "Olive" yesterday afternoon.

Pipe Leaked
It was disclosed by an investigation after the tragedy that a pipe leading from the main pipe line to the Force apartment developed a leak and the family were overcome by the gas.

A milkman who had been ordered to leave milk at the apartment for the first time today climbed to the fifth floor and rang the bell. Mrs. Force appeared at the door and asked the milkman to get a doctor. "Olive" died after a few minutes.

Medical aid reached the apartment quickly and the three sufferers were removed to the hospital. Mr. Force and the boy died just before noon. Mrs. Force is in critical condition.

G. O. P. SPLIT IN THREE STATES A SENATE THREAT

Candidacies of Bolters in Oregon, New York and Illinois Put Republican Seats in Danger.

Washington, Oct. 14.—With election day only a matter of three weeks away, Republican leaders here are feeling somewhat glum over three senatorial spots where they had considered G. O. P. victories as good as "in the bag."

The Republican sore spots are in New York, Oregon and Illinois, and in each instance the aggravation is the same—party insurgency. In each state, the regular Republican nominee is menaced by an independent Republican candidacy and the leaders do not mask their fears that the split vote resulting from this situation may allow the Democrats to slip in.

The concern felt by the Republican campaign directors is manifested strikingly in Oregon, where strenuous but unavailing efforts are being made to persuade Senator Robert N. Stanford to abandon his independent candidacy in favor of the man who defeated him in the primary, Frederick Stetwar.

May Elect Haney.

Republican scouts report that the most likely result of the Stetwar-Stanford feud will be a sufficient division of Republican strength as to allow Bert E. Haney, the Democrat, to slip through to victory. Haney is remembered for his spectacular feud with President Coolidge a year ago when he refused to resign from the Shipping Board.

To a lesser, but still alarming degree, the Republicans regard the independent Republican candidacies in New York and Illinois as constituting a real menace to G. O. P. success, despite the normal Republican leaning in these states.

In New York, Franklin W. Cristman, bone dry and Anti-Saloon League backed, is opposing Senator "Jim" Wadsworth, who favors the adoption of the Quebec System of liquor control. Disturbing reports have reached leaders here as to the heavy Cristman is making in the upstate dry counties in New York.

Wadsworth must come down to the Bronx line with a sizeable lead if he is to defeat Gov. Al Smith's senatorial running mate, Justice Robert F. Wagner.

Brennan a Possibility.
In Illinois, the candidacy of Hugh S. Magill, backed by those Republican elements that turned thumbs down on Frank L. Smith because of the Insull donations to his campaign fund, is regarded much more seriously here than it was at first. If Magill can cut into Smith's strength seriously downstate, as Republican leaders here frankly fear, they have visions of seeing George E. Brennan, the rotund wet "cross" of Cook County democracy, step into the Senate over the bloody heads of the Republican factions.

Until a week ago, Republican leaders here professed to have but little fear in Oregon, New York and Illinois. Developments since then have been such as to make most of their property, many of them seeing their homes in flames as they fled.

Entire settlements are believed to have been destroyed by the fires. Cattle and live stock have fled in panic.

The losses in timber will run into huge figures, it is feared. Efforts made to check the flames have proved futile.

HUGE FIRES SWEEP NEW SOUTH WALES

County Ablaze for a Hundred Miles Along the Coast; Loss Is Immense.

London, Oct. 14.—Disastrous bush fires are sweeping the New South Wales coast, driving settlers from their homes and destroying valuable timber and burning herds of cattle, according to a Sydney dispatch to the Evening News.

A message from Brisbane says that city is encircled by flaming bush, and that every hill within fifteen miles is ablaze. It is indicated that it is not anticipated that the fires will reach the city limits of Brisbane.

The dispatches state that the fires are most devastating in the country north of Sydney. The country between Lismore and Port Macquarie for a distance of a hundred miles is a mass of flames, burning dried grass and timber.

The spread of the fire has been so rapid that settlers have been forced to flee with very little of their property, many of them seeing their homes in flames as they fled.

Entire settlements are believed to have been destroyed by the fires. Cattle and live stock have fled in panic.

No confirmation was obtainable at either the legation or the state department.

Newmarket, Eng., Oct. 14.—Miss Iris Rickaby, England's foremost woman jockey, today won the Newmarket Town Plate, riding Stephanie. Miss Ellen Joel, who comes from a famous racing family, finished second, and the male jockeys managed to barely nose into the money, when Dixon finished third.

Elizabeth, N. J., Oct. 14.—Seven bandits armed with automatic pistols and a machine gun today shot and killed a United States mail truck driver, wounded his helper, ran down and injured a motorcycle policeman acting as escort, and then escaped with a number of mail bags containing a fortune in cash.

It was reported, but not confirmed, that one of the bags contained the $167,000 cash payroll of the Singer Sewing Machine Co.

Another payroll amounting to $1,700 in cash also was stolen, according to the People's National Bank, to which it was consigned.

An official of the Elizabethport Banking Company admitted that one of the pouches stolen contained approximately $160,000 in cash being transferred by registered mail from the Federal Reserve Bank in New York to the local bank.

Used Two Cars

The bandits overtook the truck in two large closed cars. As one of the automobiles ran down Jacob Christman, the motorcycle policeman, throwing him to the roadway, the other was driven opposite the truck and the bandits opened fire on the two men on the seat.

The driver, John Enz, was killed and Patrick Quinn, who accompanied him, was shot twice in the arm.

The bandits in the other car, after turning their machine gun on Christman, wounding him three times, ripped open the door of the mail car, seized the pouches, and drove rapidly away. The second car disappeared in another direction.

Police said that as far as they knew today's holdup was the first in the eastern part of the country in which a machine-gun had been used.

The gun, a Thompson .45 calibre, was found in the street when police arrived. Several bullets were still unfired.

Suspect Rodgers Gang

Details of the hold-up and such meagre description as could be had of the bandits and bandit cars were broadcast from W O R radio station in Newark. Lookouts were posted at all the principal ferries along the river.

Police here are working on the theory that the bandits may have been members of the James (Kill)er) Gunfire and John (Bum) Rodgers gang, believed to have been the men who on October 4, shot and killed Frank Kearney, Newark lumber dealer, and his son Robert 16, at Hildley Field, N. J.

Police in Parsippany, which is pushing the probe.

Christian declared that, while acting as Stephenson's counsel during his trial for murder for the death of Madge Oberholzer, for which Stephenson now is serving a life sentence, he saw in Stephenson's possession a cancelled check for $5,000 made payable to Governor Ed. Jackson.

He also said, according to his statement, a letter bearing what was claimed to be the signature of Mayor John Duval, of Indianapolis, in which the mayor guaranteed Stephenson favors in return for his support in the election.

May Be Ten Strike

These documents, among others which Adams and his committee claim to have in their possession, are being used to prove a ten-strike for the prosecution. Stephenson had declared that if he could once get outside the walls of the penitentiary, he would tell the grand jury a story which would shake the entire state, for he came from Michigan City dramatically, stealing away with two carloads of guards in the dead of the night.

But when the opportunity to talk came, Stephenson said less than 100 words, setting forth his refusal to testify.

Even Court Asher, Stephenson's friend, admits it looks "funny."

"They say he's 'sold out' to the other side," Asher said today. "Perhaps so. A man who's been in prison almost a year—and who faces a life-time more of the same dose—will do funny things."

Subpoena Black Box.

It became known today that a subpoena had been issued here for the mysterious "black box" said to contain Stephenson's records of his political deals. The order calls for the appearance here of the present possessor of the box, the box and all its contents. General opinion here, however, is that this box and its custodian, said to be a former partner of Stephenson's, are outside the jurisdiction of Indiana law and that they will remain there until such time as Stephenson personally orders them returned.

Meanwhile, the grand jury probe continues. Several more witnesses were scheduled to be heard today.

Governor Denies.

Governor Jackson today categorically denied that he had any knowledge of the case.

AVIATION FIELD FOR MANCHESTER

Local Chamber of Commerce Suggests Action in Securing Landing Field.

The Chamber of Commerce directors met in the chamber rooms last evening, and with the exception of one member, the full board was present.

The Chamber year ends November 30th and a nominating committee was appointed to make up a list of nominees for new officers and directors for the coming year.

The annual banquet of the Chamber is usually held in February, and a committee was named to open negotiations at once with speakers of national reputation.

Town Plan Report.

A report of progress from the committee on town plan was received. This report precipitated a discussion of the growing need which existed in Manchester, in common with all other growing communities, for some adequate zoning law. Attention was called to several undesirable building operations now in progress which materially damaged adjacent property. An adequate zoning law would control and prevent such abuses. It was voted that the directors of the Chamber of Commerce favored the adoption of a zoning law for Manchester, and that the chair appoint a committee to investigate and report back at the next meeting of the board.

Annual Convention.

The secretary of the Chamber was authorized to attend the twelfth annual convention of the National Secretaries Association in Pittsburgh October 24 to 27. A feature of this year's convention will be a kit which will be delivered to each registered delegate. This kit will contain a number of articles of particular interest to men. A prominent safety razor concern has contributed 300 safety razors. A similar number of high grade fountain pens have been contributed by the manufacturers. Manchester, Connecticut, will be represented in these kits by 300 Yale Blue silk ties, through the courtesy of Cheney Brothers.

To Represent Town.

The Manchester Chamber will be represented at the second annual convention of the New England Governors' Conference to be held in Hartford, November 18 and 19 by President Austin Cheney and Secretary George E. Rix. A letter is also being sent by the Chamber to the chief official of each Manchester industry, to all real estate dealers, contractors and bankers, asking them to attend this conference with a view to later holding a local conference to discuss the possibility of carrying out in Manchester, some of the plans proposed at the New England Governors' Conference, for furthering the interest of New England made products.

In view of the rapid progress of commercial aviation and the necessity of taking early action in securing a suitable landing field if such a field is to be developed, it was voted, in view of his well-known active interest in aviation, to invite Frank H. Anderson to speak on this subject at the next regular meeting of the board of directors.

Motor Tourists.

The growing importance of motor touring tourists and their influence on a community was discussed by the directors, and a committee was appointed to consider the possibilities and report at the next meeting on the erection of a suitable booth in the form of a small artistic cottage, preferably on the triangular space at the Center, where a permanent attendant would be employed to give information regarding Manchester and general touring instructions to passing motorists. This plan is not original with Manchester, it having been adopted with very favorable results in several New England cities and the reaction is of distinct advantage to the community.

In connection with this information booth, it was voted to appoint a committee to confer with the selectmen relative to the possibilities of establishing in the new town hall, a permanent industrial exhibit to which inquiring motorists stopping at the information booth, might be directed and where they could see artistically displayed, samples of all merchandise manufactured in Manchester. Such an exhibit would probably surprise not only strangers but townspeople as well.

AUTO CONCERN INCORPORATE.

Hartford, Oct. 14.—The Nash-Stamford Auto Corporation filed its certificate of incorporation at the office of the secretary of state here today. Authorized capital will be two hundred shares of no par value of stock and the firm will start business with $20,000. Incorporators are Arthur Skillman, of New York; A. J. Johnson, Jersey City, and E. Krayhite, of Astoria, Long Island.

GAUL'S HOLY CITY TO BE PRESENTED

Famous Oratorio to Be Given on Sunday Evening at the South Methodist Church.

On Sunday night, at 7:30 o'clock at the South Methodist church, the inaugural musicale of the season will be given by the choir assisted by a number of well known artists. The work to be given is "The Holy City," an oratorio by A. R. Gaul, and is of such a type as is certain to be most interesting. The treatment of this work is almost entirely reflective, the more dramatic parts of the book from which many of the numbers are taken, viz., the vision of St. John, having already been treated in so masterly a manner by the great German composer, Louis Spohr, in his oratorio "The Last Judgment." The first part of "The Holy City" is from suggestions taken from Holy Writ such as "Here We Have No Abiding City," "Thy Kingdom Come," "My Soul is Athirst for God" and other scriptural passages.

The second part of the work is founded on a theme "I Saw a New Heaven and a New Earth," thus realizing the desire and promises contained in the first part. The work is intermixed largely with solos, duets, trios and quartets, as also many very stirring choral numbers.

The "Intermezzo" is a number "Adoration" with a harp solo predominating a large amount of mystic beauty, that is appealing and thrilling in its theme. The choruses are varied from pianissimo simplicity, to the profound and stirring fortissimo, and judging from previous performances as given by this well known choir, it is certain that under the able direction of Archibald Sessions, they will again acquit themselves with honor.

The soloists on this occasion are: Soprano—Miss Eleanor G. Willard. Contralto—Mrs. Bertilene Lashinske. Tenor—Wm. H. Stamm, New York. Baritone—Robert J. Gordon. Bass—Fred J. Bendall. Harp—Mrs. Mildred G. Godfrey, Meriden.

Of these artists much could be said as to their suitability for their work in this performance, but their former splendid renditions in town is sufficient recommendation to those, who will be glad to again hear such a combination of talented musicians.

There will be no charge for admission and everybody is heartily welcomed to hear this most beautiful work.

THEATER EMPLOYEES PUT ON "MINSTREL"

Without Rehearsal They Gave a Show That Pleased Audience at State.

Last night the State and Circle theater employees put on an impromptu minstrel show at the State's weekly "Country Store Nite." Considering the fact that there were no rehearsals beforehand they didn't do such a bad job. Everyone, except Jack Sanson had a funny costume on. And they were funny, too. Jake Greenberg was one of the end men, and besides several "wise crackers," Jake sang "West of the Great Divide." Carl Johnson and the chorus sang "Let Me Call You Sweetheart" to the satisfaction of everyone. Milton Kelman and an "unknown" danced a comedy Charleston. This was the best "bit" on the program. By request, Jack Sanson sang the old favorite, "Sleep Baby Sleep," and was heartily applauded. The Blevins twins danced a clever Spanish Dance. After the "minstrel," the "troupe" was forced to respond to encores, and received a half dozen or more curtain calls.

DUNCAN PHYFE CLUB STARTS FALL SEASON

First Meeting Held by Watkins Brothers Organization—Members Form Theater Party.

The first fall meeting of Watkins Brothers Duncan Phyfe Club was held at the club rooms of the organization last night. The club omits meeting during the summer months when everyone desires to be out in the open as much as possible, holding meetings only during the fall, winter and spring months.

At last night's meeting the supper committee provided a delicious dinner consisting of boiled ham with all the fixings, a feature being home baked pie with cheese. Following their regular business meeting C. E. Watkins spoke to the members on "The Store Policy." R. K. Anderson talked on "Store Improvement."

Cecil A. Robertson, chairman of the entertainment committee sprang a surprise when he invited the club members to be the guests of Jack Sanson at the State theater. Following the meeting the members climbed into cars and rode to the State where they enjoyed the regular bill which included the ever popular "Country Store" feature.

WAVES TO MOTHER DIES IN AIR CRASH

Aviator, One of 2 Killed on Long Island, Had Just Flown Over His Home.

New York, Oct. 14.—Lack of experience in making close landings is given as the cause of an airplane crash in Port Jefferson, L. I. harbor, in which William H. Preston, Jr., of Belmont, Mass., and Henry R. Peys, of Taunton, army reservists, lost their lives.

Officials at Mitchell field toward which the plane was being piloted when it plunged into the harbor, announced that the men had not completed their three years of flying service, required for full pilot commission, and that in attempting to land on a narrow sand bar at the harbor entrance, had lost control.

Had Waved to Mother.

The two reservists had just returned from a flight to Boston and were making their way to the landing a few miles distant. Perra had but a short time before flown over the home of his mother at Taunton and waved a greeting to her.

Preston was alive when taken from the water by the crew of the Bridgeport ferry "Park City," near which the plane plunged. Perra's body was not found for more than an hour.

NO KIND OF CAMPAIGN.

This is no kind of a political campaign. It is an example of what is called, in sporting parlance, bad matchmaking. Here is a Republican party, healthy, vigorous, fit for a fine fight—and nobody to fight but a Democratic party which is a sheer set-up.

When the chairman of the Democratic State Committee can think of nothing more effective to say than that the Republicans are letting the public service corporations off with paying $20,000 of taxes in a year, though as a matter of fact they pay nearly three and a half millions; when the Democratic candidate for United States senator can conjure up no better argument than a question as to whether Senator Bingham intends to permit about-to-be Senator Vane take his seat; when the Democratic candidate for governor can present no stouter reason for his own election than that somebody told him that somebody or other wasted something or other in the building of some highway or other, somewhere or other and some time or other in the state of Connecticut—then there isn't enough of a fight on to be worth bothering with.

There is something almost sad-denning in the situation. Time was when every two years there was a fine and lusty shindy in this man's state. The Democrats didn't win so very often but they did win sometimes and there always was vigor enough to their organization to put up a valiant battle and make the G. O. P. step along at its best clip. Now the party of the donkey emblem—and we say this with no disrespect to the individuals who constitute it—is a poor old bum of a party, down and out and helpless, and pathetically courageous to dare to enter the fight at all.

It is easy to wish that the opposition had about twice the vim and virility it possesses. It would make things so much more interesting.

TOWN PLAYERS.

Perhaps the Herald may be pardoned if its reaction to the proposal to "boost" the Town Players after the latest approved methods of boosterism is not one of uncontrolled enthusiasm. Far from intending to throw cold water on any method by which the original purposes of the little-theater movement may be furthered, it is nevertheless the Herald's belief—and it may be absolutely wrong—that such purposes are not to be advanced after the manner of a Fourth of July celebration.

If we have any true conception of the little-theater movement it is a cultural and not a business development. It is a genuine interest in the theater, in dramatic expression of human life through the vehicle of the stage—the urge to play which is as inherent in many adults as in all children—which makes the little theater worth while; not commercialism nor yet the patronage of money or crowds.

Approached in the right spirit, there is immense value to the movement. Men and women find in it a means for self-expression, a really absorbing interest aside from the routine of existence. And even from the least informed beginnings its adherents often grow to a surprising conception of the vital qualities of the theater.

But it had never occurred to us that the idea of the little theater was to give a whole town a chance to show off. If that were the idea it might not be a bad thought to finance a municipally owned circus and send it forth with a loud band to "advertise Manchester."

It would seem to us that if the Town Players are after the satisfaction that comes from doing earnest work of the theater in just the best way one knows how—even though everything be done wrong at first—and the way for them to operate is the way in which the genuinely worth while little theater workers have always operated—on their own hook, on as small a scale as may be necessary, with as slow developments as may prove needful and without very much ballyhoo.

We say this in a sincere desire to be helpful, as a word of warning against that over-extension which has destroyed many of these movements before they were fairly born.

GREAT VISION.

It is a stupendous vision that has come to August Heckscher, New York multimillionaire, but who shall say that it is not entirely susceptible of realization? Heckscher proposes to do away with all the city's East Side slums. He would start with a fund of five hundred million dollars and plan for the ultimate expenditure of a billion and a half—heroic figures, surely. He would pull down all the bad housing and build model tenements, with parks, fountains and tree lined avenues. He would have the city and state put up half of the initial half billion and raise the rest among the city's men and women of wealth. He himself, it is understood, stands ready to chip in a hundred million of the amount. He would have the entire enterprise completed inside fifteen years.

The feasibility of such a scheme may or may not be apparent to the ordinary person. But when it is seriously proposed by an individual who is willing to back his ideas with a hundred million of his own money it is impossible to dismiss it as impracticable, because a man who has amassed so much wealth that he can spend a hundred million of it must be a person of the very first grade in this matter of practicality.

What Heckscher has in view will be marvelous if it is put into effect. But there will be many who will speculate in their minds as to whether, when it is all done, the people who are to be benefited will be any happier, any more content, than they are now, in their slums.

"SAVAGES."

There is something to think about in the assertion of a Philadelphia man, James A. Branagan, that the American Indian, before the arrival of the whites, knew more chemistry than half the college graduates ever learn.

He points out that by the use of the bark of trees and the brains of animals the Indian made a leather of softness and durability that modern, chemically-wise manufacturers can seldom equal; that with glue from fish scales he fastened feathers to his arrows, and in pine tree pitch discovered a canoe cement that has never been excelled; that he powdered clam and mussel shells to mix with his pottery clay and produced a marvelously enduring article and that he knew enough to apply oxide of iron to the clay before he baked it; that the Indian scorned to use flint for his axe because it would not hold an edge, and found water worn stones of basalt or diorite, closest of grain, and then sharpened them with a wonderful chisel made from the leg bone of a buffalo or deer which he had buried in hot ashes moistened with water; that he knew colors and their chemistry, using hematite for brown, malachite for green, ochre for yellow and for other colors the juice of the pokeberry and the bark of walnut or butternut—producing dyes that would shame many of those employed by American cotton goods manufacturers in their fadlessness and resistance to water.

There is probably not one single thing in what the Philadelphia man says that is not well known—too few people. But how many boys and girls in the schools of this country have ever had the slightest intimation given to them that the "red Indian" was a scientist of no mean parts?

What, after all, is a correct definition of the word "savage?"

LICKED.

The peanut-political scheme of peanut-minded politicians to block the pilgrimage of the American Legion to France in 1927 received precisely the treatment at the hands of the Legion convention to which it was entitled. It was swept away like a straw in a deluge. Weeks of insidious propaganda, filtered out from Washington in hope of influencing the veterans to abandon the decennial "re-invasion," proved to be of just no effect at all.

This is exactly as it should be. This political interference with the plan of the Yanks to visit the scenes of their struggles, their sufferings, their tragedies and their triumph, was one of the least admirable of many unadmirable things that have been done in this country since the war.

It is a muddy soul that fears the consequences of increased friendship between America and France. And whatever the devious and roundabout processes of reasoning that set up such fear, that and that alone was the animus of the campaign against the Paris convention. The Legionnaires went over it like they went over the Hindenburg line.

STEPHENSON.

It now appears that what former Grand Dragon Stephenson of Indiana was after was not a chance to tell a grand jury what he knew about political corruption in that state, but to use the threat of such exposure as a lever to pry himself out of prison, where he is serving a well earned life sentence for the abominable murder of a girl.

Stephenson has been demanding a chance to get out of prison and into a grand jury room long enough to "blow the lid off" Indiana politics and Klan affairs. Probably nobody was more surprised than Stephenson that he got this chance—and nobody less pleased.

He was in the position of the blackmailer who is defied and told to make public his secrets. If he told, all his ammunition would be gone. He would no longer have anything left with which to bargain for his release.

Stephenson is a first degree rascal. He knew better than to spill the beans when he had no other provision for the future.

Old Masters

The quality of mercy is not strained, It droppeth as the gentle rain from heaven Upon the place beneath; It is twice blessed; It blesseth him that gives and him that takes: 'Tis mightiest in the mightiest; It becomes The throned monarch better than his crown; His scepter shows the force of temporal power, The attribute to awe and majesty, Which doth sit like dread and fear of kings, It is an attribute to God himself, And earthly power doth then show likest God's: When mercy seasons justice. Therefore, Jew, Though justice be thy plea, consider this, That in the course of justice none of us Should see salvation; we do pray for mercy. And that same prayer doth teach us all to render: The deeds of mercy. I have spoken thus much To mitigate the justice of thy plea, Which if you follow, this strict court of Venice Must needs give sentence 'gainst the merchant there.

Stewart's WASHINGTON LETTERS

By CHARLES P. STEWART

Washington, Oct. 14.—French debt settlement will be one of the first things for Congress to take up when it meets in December.

Election will have no bearing on the question, for the same old 69th Congress will be on the job until March. Before it adjourns, in all probability it will have ratified or rejected the tentative agreement between the American World War Foreign Debt Commission and the last set of negotiators from France.

If anything, the last session's displays of anti-American feeling abroad have served to consolidate national legislative sentiment in opposition to any further concessions on the debt settlement proposition.

The pending agreement having been framed on the American side, by a Republican administration the Republican "regulars" probably will quite generally support it. Senate "insurgency," however, will be quite as generally against it and there may even be "regular" dissenters.

This will mean the bargain's rejection unless the administration can get help from the Democrats. The talk of Democratic senators like Pat Harrison and Thaddeus H. Caraway doesn't sound much like it.

"Pay or repudiate the whole debt," is the Harrison and Caraway idea of what France ought to be told.

The fact that the pair actually were in France throughout the summer places them in a position to pose as authorities, and perhaps the more effectively combat the cancellation arguments of fellow Democrats like ex-Gov. Cox of Ohio and ex-Secretary of War Newton D. Baker.

Besides, Harrison and Caraway have Senate votes and Cox and Baker haven't.

The settlement is particularly unfortunate in having two such men as the Junior Mississippi senator and the senior from Arkansas in opposition to it.

With the exception of Senator Reed of Missouri—they'll have his help, too—though he won't be able to boast of so recent a visit to the seat of hostilities—Harrison and Caraway are the most important Democratic debaters in the upper house of Congress.

The method of Harrison, a humorist of the first class, is to laugh to death a proposition he doesn't like.

Caraway skins it alive and leaves it quivering. No proposition looks its best under such circumstances. Anything that Harrison and Caraway overlook Reed will attend to.

Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, who had more than any other single American to say about the French deal and wants it indorsed, to get it off his hands, has a) been in France.

He'll have his remarks to make—not on the Senate floor, of course, but in statements that are sure to get plenty of publicity.

Mellon is one of the world's foremost financial authorities and his opinions can't be respected. At the same time, his utterances haven't the pep of Harrison's, Caraway's and Reed's.

He's cold and statistical. He's read by his eyebrows. They appeal to the emotions and are listened to by everybody.

All of which isn't to say positively that the French debt settlement agreement won't be ratified. It may squeak through, but all the best Washington authorities agree that its present prospects are very doubtful.

THE CANDID CRITIC

Artist: Here I have tried to express poverty in all its wretchedness. What do you think of it? Critic: I have never seen anything more wretched.—Passing show, London.

IN NEW YORK

New York, Oct. 14.—I doubt if there is another street in the world where extremes of flaunted extravagance and homely simplicity are to be found in such glaring contrast as upon Park avenue.

Turn the corner at Grand Central station and walk along this highway of old army parkways flanked by the rigid array of sky-seeking apartments!

This is, indeed, a veritable lap of luxury! Whereas one can purchase a handsome home in most communities for some such sum as $25,000 or $30,000, such figures are not at any unusual for a single year's rental on Park avenue.

Now make your way to the other end of the street. Turn the corner anywhere in the upper reaches, say 125th street or thereabouts.

Here you can find a village blacksmith, holding bravely out against the inroads of the garages. That peculiar ebony blackness that somehow attaches to a smithy's shop is there, as surely as upon any dirt road outside Punkinville.

Now and then the sidewalks become restless paths. Small shops cater to a neighborhood business. Whites, foreigners, Negroes stand in groups on the corner. Aproned women hurry to the market with little baskets.

Twenty blocks down, the ladies of luxury are just ordering French bathsalts in the bath. There is a swish of silks, soft-voiced conversations over the telephone, parade of ultra-riffy French automobiles.

Time was when Riverside Drive was the capital of Manhattan lavishness and luxury. No more!

On this street, also, may be found the extremes in what people are accustomed to regarding as respectability.

Respectable virtue and respectable lack of it dwell side by side. It is difficult, almost impossible, to distinguish between those of one and those of the other class.

The deportment, dress, and decorum of those who survive through the bounty of wealthy romancers are eminently refined. In some instances, perhaps, suspiciously refined. The necessity of fitting into a social niche is taken quite as seriously by them as by the wives of the rich.

Most of them are widely traveled, skilled in small talk and wit. Having little else to do they make beauty a profession and are, generally speaking, strikingly attractive.

And, again, some twenty blocks up, the cobble's wife stops on the street corner to gossip with the old woman who runs the corner grocery.

Their problem is keeping a roof over their heads and feeding children who, mayhap, one day will build fortunes out of their father's pennies and have a $20,000 apartment four blocks away from Grand Central station.

U. S. WILL SEEK CAUSE OF CRIME AMONG CHILDREN

Will Gather Statistics to Find Cause of Growing Delinquency Cases; Mental and Physical Cases Increase.

Washington. — A psychological study to get at the bottom of causes for juvenile crime, and other physical and mental deficiencies of children has been started by the children's bureau of the labor department.

Arrangements have been made for cooperation of the federal census bureau, juvenile courts, schools and social organizations in the preparation of essential statistics.

On the basis of census figures officials estimated that there are 300,000 delinquent, neglected, dependent, crippled, blind and deaf children under public or private care in the United States.

Because of the inadequacy of statistics and the lack of knowledge of the situation in past years officials said that it is impossible to say whether conditions are better or worse.

Defectives Increase. Figures show less delinquency among juveniles, but a large increase in the number of mental and physical defectives under care or institutions. It was explained, however, that this increase means that more adequate attention is being given to unfortunate children, rather than delinquency and defectiveness is increasing.

Estimates prepared from census figures give the following probable conditions: 1. Approximately 200,000 children appeared in juvenile courts last year, some being sent to correctional institutions, others placed on probation.

2. Private and public agencies are caring for 213,000 dependent children. 3. There are 200,000 blind, crippled or deaf children under public care.

4. About 135,000 mental defectives are cared for in private and public schools. 5. The average age at which juveniles appear before courts is 13 years.

The labor department has made arrangements with twenty-four juvenile courts for cooperation in compiling statistics as to child delinquency. An effort is being made to extend this service to all juvenile courts in America.

Experts pointed to the grave necessity of obtaining accurate statistics as to dependent, delinquent

TO MAKE VOTERS IN CITY HALL

Town Clerk's Room to Be Used Saturday — Last Chance This Year.

The last opportunity to become a voter for those eligible will be given Saturday when the Selectmen and Registrars meet in the new municipal building. Although it has been advertised that the registration board would meet in the old Hall of Records it has been decided to make voters Saturday in the new building.

Town Counsel Bowers could see no reason why this would not be legal. The town clerk's office has been moved to the new building and it will be far more convenient to have the work transacted there.

Saturday will positively be the last day this year for voters to be made. The registration board will meet from 9 a. m. until 8 p. m. The meetings will be in Room 8, the first door on the right entering the new building.

DOUBLE FEATURE SHOWING AT CIRCLE

"The Gay Deceiver" and "Yellow Fingers" Make Up a Quality Program.

A complete reproduction of the Theatre Porte St. Martin of Paris was built at the Metro-Goldwyn studios for use in John Stahl's production, "The Gay Deceiver," from the stage success, playing at the Circle theatre, tonight and tomorrow.

The theatre was built full size, corresponding exactly in every detail to the original structure, one of the most famous of Parisian playhouses.

An audience of several hundred extras was required to fill it for a performance of "Othello" which formed a background for a sequence of the film.

Lew Cody has the title role in "The Gay Deceiver," and the cast includes Carmel Myers, Dorothy Phillips, Roy O'Arcy, Edward Connelly, Antonio D'Algy and others. The film is a comedy drama based on the stage success by Maurice Hennequin and Felix Duquesnel.

The other feature will be "Yellow Fingers," starring the screen's sensational emotional actor, Ralph Ince. The unrequited love of a beautiful half-caste girl for the man who has reared her from infancy is the theme of "Yellow Fingers." Olive Borden makes her debut as a screen actress in great style. She is pretty, enticing, charming and lovable.

There is something in this picture to please everybody's taste. The story is a weird, dramatic episode of the Malay Archipelago.

Headlines that tell the story: "I am innocent," cries city treasurer.

VAUDEVILLE AND "SHOW OFF" NOW AT STATE

Five Pleasing Acts and Fine Comedy Feature Make Up Excellent Program.

Five vaudeville acts of high quality; five acts that are just the kind you want to see; five acts that make up a "hit" bill; that's the kind of vaudeville program the State theatre will present for tonight, tomorrow and Saturday.

There will also be a feature picture with the vaudeville, a rip-roaring comedy of American life, "The Show Off." As an added attraction, there will be a song reel, "Dolly Gray."

The first act on the vaudeville program will be The Arleys in a sensational perch offering act. These two will do stunts that will make your hair stand.

The second act will be Helen Wyeth. Miss Wyeth says "Just wait till you see."

The State will present for its headliner Monsieur Berge, a creator of Parisian dress models. Monsieur Berge will dress two models on the stage. He will amaze you with his most remarkable ability to almost make dress models disappear from nowhere.

The fourth act will be Clifton and Brent in "An Eccentric Comedy Duo." Laughs and laughs—and still some laughs.

Another headliner will be presented for the fifth act, "Five Musical Roses." Here is some nice, bright music and some nifty presentation.

The feature picture will be "The Show Off" with Ford Sterling and Louise Brooks. This is some comedy.

"The Show Off"—he's a chuckle headed braggart, a conceited fool, a homo boobus, a cheap knave, an incorrigible jackass, a guttawing bluff, a loud-mouthed prig, a maddening bluffer, a garrulous four-flusher, a gib faker, a gaudy liar, a bumptious ass, a Spanish athlete, a cocky big-talker, a cheap mount-

HOW TO REDUCE VARICOSE VEINS

Rub Gently and Upward Toward the Heart as Blood in Veins Flows That Way.

Many people have become despondent because they have been led to believe that there is no remedy that will reduce swollen veins and bunches.

If you will get a two-ounce original bottle of Moore's Emerald Oil (full strength) at any first-class drug store and apply it night and morning as directed you will quickly notice an improvement which will continue until the veins and bunches are reduced to normal.

Moore's Emerald Oil is a harmless, yet most powerful germicide and two ounces last a very long time. Indeed, so powerful is Emerald Oil that old chronic cases of Piles are often entirely absorbed and anyone who is disappointed with its use can have their money refunded. North End Pharmacy, So. Manchester agent Magnell Drug Co., sell lots of it.—Adv.

tebank, an obnoxious windbag, a boasting brawler, a swanking poser, a megalomaniac, a hot-air artist, an egotist, swaggerer, blusterer, and pretender; in other words—if others are necessary—a show-off.

Such is Aubrey Piper, the central figure in "The Show Off," the master comedy of the "big bug" American. The picture was directed by Malcolm St. Clair, and is an example of his finest work.

Ford Sterling, in the title role, does his crowning work as a comedian. He is an engaging personality, who arouses laughter and commands admiration by the sheer artistry of his braggadocho.

You remember the immensely popular Koko Song Kar-Tune rascals the State used to run? Well, there will be another one here, as a special added attraction with the vaudeville and feature. It will be "Dolly Gray."

AMATEUR CONTESTS AT RIALTO TONIGHT

The program at the Rialto theatre tonight will be headed by an attractive amateur contest in which some of the leading amateurs in the East will participate. Much entertainment is afforded in a contest of this kind and tonight's affair should prove beyond a doubt a complimentary comment passed about it during its short run in this town.

Most of us are familiar with the story it presents but for the benefit of those who are not it is sufficient to say that it recounts the tale of the joy and sorrows of a typical mother, who raises a large family of children, only to have them drift away upon reaching their majority. The old lady is allowed to live on charity when she is no longer able to support herself. "The Black Sheep" of the family returns however at the crucial moment, discovers her condition, rescues her and all ends happily enough—with the little mother, just like every true mother that ever lived, forgiving and forgetting. There is really nothing remarkable in the theme, but it contains that intangible something that appeals to everyone no matter how blasé. Its humor is subtle and its pathos are real.

All in all "Over the Hill" with Mary Carr as the mother is one of the finest and most appealing pictures ever screened. A rollicking comedy "Hold Your Hat," a novelty reel and news events complete today's offerings.

Tomorrow and Saturday "Men of the Night" a thrilling crook drama starring Herbert Rawlinson and Wanda Hawley will be shown on the same bill with Gene Tunney who appears in "The Fighting Marine." Selected short subjects will also be shown.

For Head Colds

THERE are many ways to treat a cold in the head, but only one DIRECT way, and that is with vapors that can be inhaled.

The easiest and most satisfying way to get these vapors is to snuff a little Vicks VapoRub well up the nose, or melt a little in a spoon or tin cup and inhale.

The medicated vapors reach immediately into every corner of the air passages, soothing and healing with every breath.

For other forms of cold troubles just rub Vicks over the throat and chest at bedtime. It is then the body heat which releases these vapors.

THE ROMANCE OF AMERICA: Aaron Burr (2)

At the age of eleven Aaron was ready to enter Princeton College, having read Virgil and mastered the Greek alphabet. He was rejected because of his youth. In his thirteenth year he was allowed to join the sophomore class. He studied often sixteen to eighteen hours a day, and surpassed his classmates but undermined his health.

Burr was a gay young man with a fascinating personality. Aside from his studies he spent a great deal of time in feminine society.

Despite the faults and vices of his later life, Burr retained the regard of his friends, many of whom were of high character.

He belonged to a literary club called the Glisophilic. Members presided in turn at its meetings. Professors were also members. Once a professor by whom Burr had often been admonished came in late. Burr, then chairman, ordered the professor to rise, and administered a sarcastic rebuke which brought laughter from the assembly. (Continued)

QUEER QUIRKS OF NATURE

By AUSTIN H. CLARK, Smithsonian Institution. After the leaves have fallen in the autumn you will find securely fastened to the twigs of various trees and bushes large, dull, coppery cocoons. Before the leaves fall you do not notice these as the caterpillar in constructing them draws down upon itself several of the leaves by which they are concealed to a large extent. If you cut one of these cocoons across you find within it loose, lustrous silk and in the center a tough thin capsule smoothly polished on the inner side within which lies the chrysalis. These cocoons vary much in size. I have raised a perfect, though small, moth from one which was only an inch and three-quarters long. But often they are more than four inches long and much inflated. These large cocoons are most common near the ground. In the winter great numbers of cocoons are destroyed by woodpeckers which drill a hole in them and through the hole eat out the contents of the pupa. These are the cocoons of our largest moth, known as the cecropia. They are very common almost everywhere and you can gather them in numbers once you learn to find them. Prizes will be awarded for the finest, the prettiest and the most original costumes. There will be stunts and games and a fortune teller, also refreshments on sale. Admission only ten cents. This troop will meet Monday afternoons at 4:30 o'clock until further notice.

FIND 2500 GALLONS OF ALCOHOL IN FREIGHT CAR. Auburn, N. Y., Oct. 14.—Twenty-five hundred gallons of grain alcohol, valued in bootleg channels at $25,000, was stored at the county jail here today following its seizure by Sheriff Willis Miller in a freight car on the New York Central railroad siding at Cayuga village near here. The seizure, the largest of alcohol contraband ever made in this district, resulted from a tip received by the sheriff's office. The identity of the consignees and the point of shipment were withheld by the sheriff pending an investigation.

BINGHAM COMPARES HIGH-LOW TARIFFS

State Saved Over Eleven Million by It Which Would Have Had to Be Raised by Income Tax. Hartford, Oct. 14.—Additional facts concerning the working out of the present Republican tariff were brought out today by United States Senator Bingham, in an interview, in which he compared the present, with the past low tariff.

"Let us compare the facts with regard to the actual way in which the last Democratic tariff and the present Republican tariff worked out," said Senator Bingham. "The Underwood-Democratic Tariff bill was passed shortly before the European war. Abnormal war time conditions make it unfair to base any arguments on the war years, consequently let us take the last two calendar years in which the Underwood-Democratic tariff act was effective, namely 1919 and 1920, and compare them with the Republican-Fordney-McCumber tariff act has been effective, in the calendar years 1919-1920, under the Democratic tariff we imported from foreign countries $9,100,000,000 worth of goods. In 1924-1925 we imported $7,900,000,000 worth of goods. In other words, we spent $1,300,000,000 less for foreign goods and that much more for American made goods. Since Connecticut has been picked out by the leader of the Democrats as one of the manufacturing states most deeply concerned in foreign competition, it means that our factories got a good share of that one billion, three hundred million additional gold dollars used in the purchase of American made goods. Democrats' Home. "When the present Republican Fordney-McCumber Tariff Act was passed the Democrats raised a terrific howl of protest that it would lay additional burdens on the American taxpayer, that raising the tariff would keep out imports to such an extent that the duties formerly collected would not be available to be used toward paying the expenses of the American government and, therefore, we should have to increase domestic taxation to make up for the deficit. "What are the facts? In the years 1919-1920 under the Democratic tariff there was collected in our customs houses $560,000,000 to be used toward paying the expenses of the domestic tax payer. In the years 1924-1925 under the Republican tariff there was collected $1,116,000,000 or twice as much as under the Democratic tariff. In other words, instead of producing less income and increasing the burden of the domestic tax payer, as the Democrats had prophesied, it greatly reduced his burden and doubled the amount collected. Actually in the last two years the Republican tariff has relieved the burdens of the domestic tax payer by considerably more than $500,000,000. This would have had to be raised by income taxes and internal revenue taxes of one sort or another, had it not been paid at the custom houses by the importers of foreign made goods. Connecticut's share in this saving is over $11,000,000. Thanks to the Republican protective tariff, Connecticut was spared during the past two years of having to raise $11,000,000 more in income taxes for the Federal government. The states which are not such large contributors to the Federal Treasury as is Connecticut of course are not interested in this saving. States which produce few, if any, manufactured articles are likewise not interested in protecting the domestic market against foreign competition. But as has been so strikingly pointed out to us by the Democratic leader of the Senate, Connecticut is vitally interested in the way in which the tariff functions and it is peculiarly gratifying to us, as Republicans of Connecticut, to learn that the Republican tariff has not only resulted in greatly increased purchasing power in the home market, but also in decreased Federal taxation. Under these circumstances when the Senate leader of the Democratic party urges Congress to return to the Democratic doctrine of free trade he virtually recognizes the truth of our claim that those who are interested in the prosperity of Connecticut will vote Republican. "Connecticut is committed unalterably to a tariff policy."

COLUMBIA NOT IN CLASS WITH O. S. U., SAYS WALSH

New York Team Not the Team It Was Last Year; Only Three Experienced Men on Eleven.

By DAVIS J. WALSH.
New York, Oct. 14.—It seems to be generally understood that one doesn't drive in that run from first base with a spectacular base on balls nor score a knockout by making the other gent miss. Therefore, the writer is disposed to believe that Columbia University will not be greatly irritated on Saturday if it doesn't finish worse than second to Ohio State, the first Big Ten team ever to show in New York.

The official attitude at Columbia today was strictly a defensive one. "We are concentrating on stopping Karow," was Charley Crowley's summation. "He tore our line apart last year, forced us to play seven men up and left us without an adequate defense against the passing game. We are hoping to perfect a defense that will allow us to play six men on the line and let the center rove."

Crowley's Plans.
What Crowley might have said was that he was trying to accomplish two ends and that neither of them were easy. He hopes to stop a good line plunger with a set of inexperienced forwards and at the same time use a running attack of his own inside and outside of tackle. He happens to have two fair plunging backs in Madden and Seitz but they will need to be better than that to click with any degree of regularity behind a Green.

Columbia is not the team it was last year. Only three 1925 regulars will start the Ohio State game—Madden and Seitz in the backfield and Brady at end. Pease, quarterback, is gone. So are Wagner, a fine end; Kirchmeyer, a back; and Schmittsch, Wiberg, Aulick and Raphael.

Experienced Forwards.
The only experienced forwards in the present squad are Reynolds and Alkoff and they serve to give the right side of the line a rather superior aspect, with Brady playing right end. The others, French, center; Shaw, left guard; Kerrigan, left tackle, and Furey, left end, never have faced an outfit of Ohio State's speed and general class.

Crowley, a product of rather contradictory systems at Harvard and Notre Dame, seems to be a confirmed conservative and I don't know that I blame him in this case. One doesn't feel the urge to break a neighbor's windows with only a sponge available.

The injury to Empringham has necessitated a backfield shift and, with Norris at fullback, it is likely that Columbia will employ the old Harvard idea of kicking early and often and waiting for the break, if any. Rieger, a fast man, will be used at quarterback.

Who's coaching the University of California football team this season?—D. F. G. Clarence Price.

NEVERS DESCRIBES HIS GREATEST PLAY

'Twas Not an Offensive Play, But an 80-Yard Run for Tackle That Prevented Defeat.

By ERNIE NEVERS, All-America Fullback, 1925.

(Copyright, 1926, N. E. A.)
The greatest play I ever made? That's another tough one.

It's not because I have pulled so many. Please don't get that impression. More than likely it is because I have performed so few thrillers.

At that, I feel I am going to give my readers a surprise when I let them in on the play that I regard as the best of my career.

No, it wasn't a long end run that resulted in a touchdown. It was but 30 seconds to go, thereby winning the game.

Neither was it the intercepting of a forward pass, followed by a long run that gave my team enough points to win the game.

No! It wasn't a field goal from the 40-yard line with only a play or two to go before the sounding of the timer's whistle.

I am going to surprise you by telling that it was a defensive play, as I see it, was a defensive rather than offensive feat.

Most players in speaking of the greatest play they ever made are almost certain to refer to some offensive play, a scoring feat. Mine was just the opposite.

Stanford was playing Washington. It was the last quarter and the game was close. Each team was resorting to various bits of strategy in an effort to put over a play that would produce the winning touchdown.

We had the ball on Washington's 20-yard line. I essayed a long pass across the field. It was intercepted by Guttormson of Washington on his 20-yard line.

Stanford by straight football had worked the ball well into Washington's territory, and when I saw my pass intercepted, I felt the failure to complete it had undone all the hard work of my teammates.

When I made the pass that Guttormson received on Washington's 20-yard line, I was standing on the 20-yard mark. Not until I saw Guttormson rushing down the sideline on the opposite side of the field did I come to.

When he reached the 30-yard line I had started across the field in pursuit of him. Guttormson was a track man, who had stepped 100 yards in 10 seconds, so no one took me seriously as I started after him.

I felt the only way that I could erase the intercepting of my pass was to bring down the Washington star before he had crossed the goal line.

They still talk about the play on the coast. My coach, Glenn Warner says he has tried all forms of mathematics in an effort to prove my feat but as yet has not solved the mystery.

To make a long story short, I cut across the field from the 30-yard line, ran about 80 yards to the 70 Guttormson covered in his dash down the sideline, and finally managed to bring him to earth on Stanford's 7-yard line.

Stanford held for downs and kicked the ball out of danger.

To me that defensive play was the greatest I pulled during my entire career.

TUNNEY CHALLENGED.
New York, Oct. 14.—Gene Tunney's newly-won laurels will not be permitted to remain with him unchallenged, for long Johnny Buckley, manager of Jack Sharkey, made this known today when he announced that he would go before the State Athletic Commission on Tuesday and file a challenge on behalf of Sharkey for the world's heavyweight title.

Sharkey qualified as a logical challenger on Tuesday night when he forced Harry Wills to foul him in the thirteenth round to escape the ignominy of losing the decision. Pete Reilly, manager of Jack Delaney, light heavyweight champion, also issued a sweeping challenge today to Tunney, Sharkey, Wills and Jack Dempsey.

ROGERS HORNSBY FELL TO .316 MARK IN 1926
Rogers Hornsby, manager of the Cardinals, not only dropped the National League batting crown he had held for six straight seasons, but turned in the unusually low average of .316 during the 1926 chase. At least, it was low for the Rajah, who has been wont to swat the agate around the .400 mark. Managerial responsibilities together with injuries and illness helped to pull Hornsby down as the league's premier batter.

There'll Be No Love Lost When Maroons and Quakers Clash Saturday Afternoon

Philadelphia, Oct. 14.—One of the most important of the early season inter-sectional games will be played here Saturday when Pennsylvania and Chicago meet in the second of their two-game series.

Last year the Maroons gave a strong Quaker eleven a real battle, a cleverly executed forward pass enabling Penn to win, 7-0. The Young machine was tickled with the verdict and somewhat relieved when the final whistle tooted.

This season another close tussle is anticipated. The Maroons loom out of the middle west as more formidable than they were a year ago. Penn is about as strong as it was in 1925.

Coach Stagg of the Chicago eleven has several good bets in his battlefront. Wallie Marks, captain, is about the best. Marks can run, pass and punt—a triple threat boy.

Stanley Rouse, another backfield star, along with Marks, bears much of the offensive burden. Robert Wolff, guard, is one of the mainstays in the line.

Penn will have the brilliant Thayer, captain and All-America end; the speedy Charley Rogers and "Tim" Murphy, a clever quarterback. Each of these lads is a star and are "big guns" in the Penn platoon.

Coach Young, like his rival, Stagg, is expecting one of the toughest tilts of the entire campaign. He's anxious to win, for he wants to make it two straight over the wily Maroons.

Great Britain Plans to Reimburse Treasury by Taxing Racing Bets

Result Will Be Highly Beneficial to Treasury as $800,000,000 Changes Hands Annually on Race Betting.

By MILTON BRONNER

London, Oct. 14.—On Nov. 1 next, for the first time in its history and probably for the first time in the history of the world, Great Britain will levy a tax on every bet made on horse races.

Not only will a fixed tax be placed on every bet made with a bookmaker, but the bookies themselves will pay a tax for the privilege of accepting bets.

It's a sign of the desperate attempt the government is making to fill the British treasury. For the law was not put upon the statute books by Parliament without a stiff fight.

Hardly a newspaper of any prominence had a good word to say of the proposal. The British are a race-mad nation. They are betting crazy.

Gage it from this: the early morning editions of the afternoon newspapers are largely given over to reports from the race tracks, to form sheets, to reports on the betting odds.

In the afternoon the regular editions largely synchronize with the completion of races at the various race tracks. The American grabs his afternoon paper to see what the latest big news is. The Briton rushes out to get his paper to see what horses have won in the last race.

The taking of bets is a huge industry in Britain. There are men who have palatial offices in swell streets. They are the bookies who open up accounts for swell clients. Upon recommendation of somebody already favorably known to them, you are given a betting account. You telephone or telegraph or wire in your bet, giving your name, the amount you are betting and the horse. At the end of the week or month the bookie sends you by mail an accounting. If you have won, he remits a check. If you have lost, he tells you how much you shall send him.

Then there are of course the usual bookies at the tracks. And there are other bookies who work in the humblest quarters of the big cities. They send men around the Princeton, N. J., Oct. 14.—Princeton is not over-confident of defeating the Navy on Saturday following the varsity's poor showing yesterday. The regulars made only one touchdown against the scrubs.

New York, Oct. 14.—George French has clinched the Columbia center post for the Ohio State contest. The coaches today will concentrate on perfecting a defense against the Buckeye passing game.

Cambridge, Oct. 14.—Harvard probably will present a poor defense against William and Mary on Saturday. The scrubs scored on the varsity yesterday.

West Point, N. Y., Oct. 14.—Defense against the forward pass features Army's preparation for the Syracuse game. The coaches are pleased with the team's progress.

Ithaca, Oct. 14.—Cornell may use the huddle system against Michigan on Saturday and in future games. The team has mastered the shift in this week's practice.

NORTH ENDS PLAY UNIONVILLE NEXT

The North Ends will practice tonight at the playgrounds at seven o'clock. Coach Ray Moonan requests that every player be on hand as an important meeting will be held after the practice. The team will play the Laurel Club of Unionville Sunday at Hickey's Grove.

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

ERIC WATERS, young college student, kisses JUDITH MARTIN, on a bet, not knowing she is a teacher.

He proves to be the sweetest of MYRA ALDRICH, whom Judith meets at her boarding house.

Eric climbs to Judith's window to ask her to unlock the door for Myra and is seen descending by a man passing the house.

WILL WETHEREL, popular senior, takes her to a party given by EVE GERHART, attractive widow, of whom DR. PETER DORN and the faculty disapprove. To her surprise she finds Dr. Dorn at the party.

Eric takes her into a sunroom, saying he wishes to talk to her.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER VIII

THE sunroom was in half shadow. Eric struck a match as they walked toward a wicker settee.

"Don't want to sit on anybody's lap by accident," he remarked.

Judith paused by a window and stood gazing out at the harvest moon.

"You have so much to say to me, my dear sir, better get started. I don't intend to affront my hostess by staying in here too long, before I've been introduced to her other guests."

Eric came and stood in front of her, both hands thrust doggedly into his pockets.

"The first thing I have to do is to apologize for the kiss. Of course, if I had guessed that you were you, I'd not have kissed you, for twenty dollars—no, nor for fifty," Judith said nothing.

He went on. "For two reasons I wouldn't have kissed you—first, I'd have known you wouldn't appreciate it. Second, you're a schoolteacher. I'm sorry I kissed you and I'll never do it again. Now are we quits?"

Judith yawned. "For a moment I couldn't think what you were talking about. But now I remember. You did kiss me once, I believe, at the railroad station. But don't let that worry you. I had quite forgotten it in the press of more important affairs."

She grinned in his direction under cover of the shadow.

"Well," said Eric ruefully, "I knew you wouldn't appreciate it at its true worth. But you needn't try to tell me you'd forgotten it. Kisses aren't an everyday diet in the school teaching business."

Judith turned blazing eyes toward him and was pushing past him to ward the drawing room he had left. But Eric laid his hand on her arm.

"I also intended to beg your pardon for that window-climbing incident, and to ask to be released from the class in Horace. But you already know that the trellis-climbing was mere coincidence. And as for Horace—I've decided I'll stick to it. I think I'm going to enjoy it more than any other course in my curriculum."

Judith did not answer the challenge. She left him and walked back into the other room. Just inside the door she almost bumped into Myra and was about to call out some joke in greeting, but the girl walked hurriedly away, keeping her face straight ahead.

Eve was just rising from the anybody wants tea, he'll have to make it in the kitchen. What about you, Dr. Dorn? I'm sure Dean Brown would sanction one cup of freshly brewed orange pekoe."

A roar of laughter went up. "Oh," breathed Judith, "that was vicious."

"Not at all," countered Will. He had it coming to him, Eve thinks he's here as a faculty spy. He's never come before. Anyhow, she had to get rid of him somehow."

Judith's eyes were on Dr. Dorn, who had obtained his coat and hat and was making his way toward the front door. "Good night, Peter," called Eve, and several voices followed with "Greetings to Timothy, old dear."

"The professor went out without answering."

It was long past midnight when Judith sank back in the taxi beside Will Wetherel, on the homeward drive.

"Pretty good party," mused Will. "But you should see Eve at her best. Dorn's coming sort of cramped her style. She confessed to me after he left that she feared she'd been too hard on him. Seemed to think he might have come just because he wanted to be human and not to spy. She thinks he likes you pretty well, Judith."

The girl said nothing. "Funny about that man," her companion mused. "Damn strong man in astronomy. Couple of comets and a nebula to his credit. Regular fellow in the observatory, but a perfect grandmother on the purity question. Still, he doesn't interfere much with other people's fun."

He moved a little closer to Judith, so that his sleeve touched her bare arm. She sat quite still. The silver cloth, where her cape fell back, gleamed in the darkness of the cab. The boy's eyes sought her face.

"You're very lovely," he said. "I wish you were dumb. If you were, I'd kiss you."

Judith fumbled for her pass key. The silver dress was hanging in the closet and Judith was sitting on the edge of the bed, wriggling her toes luxuriously after their release from the silver slippers that lay on the floor beside her, when she heard Eric's car drive up in front of the house. She looked uneasily at the silver gown, which was thrusting one fold through the closet door. Then she began to brush her hair and prepare for bed.

Pounding steps on the porch below were followed by a slamming of the front door and loud heels on the stairs. Judith sat staring at herself in the mirror, a worried frown between her eyes. Then the door of her own room burst open and in the m. Judith saw Myra standing in the doorway, her arms outstretched against the door frame.

Judith did not turn away from her fascinated gaze into the mirror until Myra spoke.

"Well," said the girl against the door, "so it was you that kissed Eric at the railroad station." Her voice was sibilant, through sneering lips. A wave of hot blood surged to Judith's forehead. "No, you're wrong. He only kissed me. I didn't have time to kiss him back."

"You're shameless," breathed Myra, rage choking the words. "You're treacherous, too. No wonder you were so kind and sympathetic with me. You wanted to get all the dope on me, didn't you? So you'd know how to work. But I'll tell you this much—you'll fall with him just as I've failed. It's nothing but misery to be in love with Eric Waters." She caught her breath for a moment, then rushed on.

"Thank God I tumbled in time, before you wormed any more secrets out of me. You wanted to put me wise—that and your staying in that dark room with him so long. Somebody had said the girl he kissed was red-headed. But I never suspected you. Oh, no, no, no, were such a LADY—on the surface."

Judith pushed a chair against the table. The movement seemed to bring her relief. "Look here," she said steadily, "you'd better go to bed. Midnight brawls aren't in my line. Neither are men who kiss strange women against their wishes at railroad stations. Good night."

Myra laughed. "Good thing for you they aren't in your line. For you'll never make any headway with this young man. He was scornful enough when he spoke of tonight. I made him tell me the truth about it. After I'd caught a word or two from the sunroom that put me wise. But he didn't stand up for you. Just laughed."

Judith walked to the closet, swung open the door and took down the dress with a shudder. She slipped it on. She tossed the dress over the back of a chair near Myra's post by the door and walked away to the dressing table.

The next moment the door rattled. Judith turned around and saw the silver dress lying on the floor. There was a rent from neck to hem.

HER OWN WAY A GIRL OF TODAY

FOR JOHN'S SAKE.

Just outside the door Mamie Riley bent down and kissed my forehead. The men seemed to understand that she wanted them to put me down for a moment.

"Judy," she whispered tremulously, "forgive me for thrusting myself and my affairs upon you at this time, but I think you would like to know that Mrs. Tremaine was found dead in her bed this morning. The doctor said that she died from an over-dose of morphine."

"Mamie," I exclaimed. "I suppose I am wicked, but still I must say I am very glad."

Again Mamie kissed me. The first kiss she had given was for myself and my love, but this time I knew that she was kissing me for the love that lay between her and Buddy Tremaine.

The attendants began to wheel me toward the door. I felt as though my brain were numb. I didn't even feel any physical pain. I noted a number of men leaving John's room. Among them was Mr. Robinson, who gave me a most peculiar glance as he passed. It was as though he were acknowledging a great defeat.

"You are a very clever young woman," he remarked in a low voice. "John Meredith has just willed his entire share of his mother's property to you."

At the time, this did not register for John, his face radiant with happiness, held out his good arm to me. They trundled me over to the bed, I put my hand in his and immediately found myself saying, "I, Julia, take thee, John, to be my wedded husband." And so on through until with faltering voice I heard myself saying "Until death do us part."

John said his part of the ceremony with greater vigor than I and at the end when the minister said: "I pronounce thee husband and wife" it seemed as though he would in some way make his poor paralyzed limbs do his bidding and take me in his arms. "God!" he said. "I cannot be here like a log and look at her mouth!"

"Turning, I said to Dr. Phillips, "Put me in the arms of my husband."

John's fever-hot lips met mine. "My wife," he murmured. "now death can do his worst."

Involutionarily I screamed as his head slumped down away from me. Joan, the doctor and others came rushing toward us. Quickly Dr. Phillips placed me on my bed and wheeled me away to the hospital cot upon which John Meredith was sleeping his last long sleep.

"Come, Mrs. Meredith. You can do nothing more. Let the thought console you that your husband died when he was happiest."

"Joan, Joan, is John dead?" I whimpered.

"Yes, dear sister, you can do no more. Let me take you to your room."

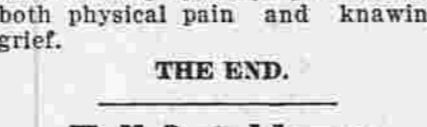

With one long lingering look at the peacefully smiling face, I turned my head and was wheeled out the door where I found standing just beyond, straight like a staunch rock of comfort and safety—Jerry Hathaway.

"Jerry," I sobbed, "John is dead. Take me back to my room."

"With a trembling lip, I closed my eyes as a feeling came over me that Jerry Hathaway, as always, was standing by, helping me to bear both physical pain and knowing grief."

CONDITION—A protruding abdomen.

DIAGNOSIS—Insufficient development of the muscular walls of the abdomen and stomach. Often, this results, too, from careless posture, the wearing of too high heels, or a weakness of the vital organs that needs medical attention.

TREATMENT—Exercise that strengthens the muscles relieves this unbecoming condition.

Try this—lie flat on the floor, and with the knee bent, bring the leg as far over the chest as you can, exercising first one leg and then the other, and finally both at the same time. This exercise also helps make the contour of the legs more symmetrical.

The WOMAN'S DAY by Allene Sumner

Like an old legend runs this news note from modern China. The wife of a Chinese bandit fled with her husband when he was pursued by the law. She took her infant child with her. Deep in the woods he hid in a cave buried in jungle vine. The pursuers lost the trail and waited, hour after hour. Then a tiny wall split the stillness. One wall, stifled in a moment, but it led them to the bandit's hiding place. There stood a wild-eyed mother with a dead baby in her arms, its tiny throat clutched in its mother's hands. "I had to kill it to save its father," she said stoically.

Rarely does a woman's love for mate so exceed love for offspring. Psychologists would call this wife an abnormality of the female species.

We hear so much about poor Europe and the darkness of poverty in which she walks! They now have $100 frames or almost $100 a day for rooms in the Deauville hotels, and they affirm that actual buckets of diamonds are turned out on the baccarat tables. Yesterday a man paid $200,000 for a diamond pendant.

Girls who can hold their tongues are considered rare finds in the famous London diamond markets where the size and whereabouts of famous gems must be grave secrets. Only brunets are hired in this diamond world, it's said, as the gem merchants trust the brunet's discretion rather than the blonde's.

Almee Simple McPherson, evangelist, can even buy a pair of stockings or a toothbrush, if they say, without asking her Ma, who is her business manager, for the money. Ma is supposed to have dedicated the infant Almee to the Lord when the child was five years old. Another daughter, who can say, "All that I am I owe to my gray-haired mother."

Time was when a bunch of roses and a box of candy were supposed to be all that a woman needed or desired. Now comes this word from China where a Woman's Rights Society was just organized.

"We find no sense of security in being given presents and made much of. All this is a mere subterfuge to lull us into a false sense of security."

And now the yellow men are in for an uncomfortable spell!

Hard times for girls in Canada! They have just unearthed an ancient law, which reads:

"Whosoever attracts in bonds of marriage any male subject of His Majesty by means of rouge or powder, perfumes, false teeth, false hair, steel corsets, hooped petticoats, high heels or false hips, will be prosecuted for sorcery, and the marriage will be declared null and void if the accused is convicted."

A resident of Toronto seeks divorce from his wife on the strength of this law because she kept him ignorant before marriage of her false teeth.

A nice and neat way of committing race suicide if the law were actually enforced universally. Imagine any of the swains getting married without a little help in the way of attractions waited at them by the gals?

Perhaps you know that delightful book "Once on a Time," about children for grown ups. Now comes the author, A. A. Milne, to say:

"What do we mean by 'children'?" A boy of 3, a girl of 6, a boy of 10, a girl of 14—are they all to like the same thing?"

Don't overlook Ellen Glasgow's

"Romantic Comedians," a tale of the sort of man whom women call "an old fool," old in years, but the perennial lover. And you'll like Cornelia Stratton Parker's "Daughter of Pan," and "Early Autumn," by Bromfield, a sequel to "Possession."

If some of you girls who are chairmen of club program committees are stewing about for some "meaty" books worth reviewing, and also entertaining enough to keep the sisterhood awake, assign some fair member to review Dr. Horace Camarosa's "Escape from the Primitive," and R. F. Dibble's "Mohammed." The former, somewhat like Dorsey's "Why We Behave Like Human Beings," also tells why we act as we do. In "Mohammed" you find the great prophet a nice likeable Arab who married a rich widow and was just an all-around fellow.

How I Dress My Hair

By Edna Wallace Hopper

The thousands who see me daily on the stage wonder at my beautiful hair. It is wavy, glossy and abundant. Nearly everyone thinks that some wonderful hair dresser gives it daily care.

Not so—I'm too busy for that. I never go to a hair dresser, have never had a Marcel wave. I simply apply twice weekly a hair dress which great experts made for me. It is not sticky, not greasy. Before they made it I never dreamed a liquid could do so much. Now all toilet counters supply it as Edna Wallace Hopper's Wave and Sheen. The price is 75c.

Nothing else I know gives a girl or woman so much added loveliness at once. No one can resist it when she knows. My guarantee is enclosed with every bottle, so it costs you nothing if it doesn't please. Go try it at my expense.

Good Nature and Good Health

RATE OF INFANT MORTALITY MUST BE KEPT LOWER.

By DR. MORRIS FISHEIN, Editor Journal of the American Medical Association and of Hygiene the Health Magazine.

Although general mortality rates have dropped steadily for many years, infant mortality rates have not always kept pace.

The reasons for this discrepancy are varied. The infant mortality rate may, indeed, be taken as an index of the general sanitary conditions and health education qualification of the community concerned.

Emphasis is made on the latter point particularly because education of the mother before birth of the child is one of the most important factors in assuring its successful birth and life beyond the first year.

Last year, according to figures compiled and published by the American Child Health Association, cities in the birth registration area in this country had a rate of 75.8 deaths of infants per thousand births, including all babies dying before reaching one year of age.

Two villages with populations under 25,000—Stonington, Conn., and Winona, Minn.—had the lowest records, 22 per thousand.

New York had the lowest rate of the 10 largest cities in the country with 64 per thousand, but Seattle continued to maintain its supremacy among all large cities in the birth

Home Page Editorials Glamor To Glare

By Olive Roberts Barton

"You may break, you may shatter the vase if you will, but scent of the roses will hang 'round it still."

Were it not for these memories of ours that cling to days of romance and courtship, one cannot help but wonder how many homes would hang together. Marriage seems to be a door which clangs shut upon glamour and illusion, and which most benedicts take for granted has hinges that work only one way, like a gate from a flower garden into a vegetable garden, with no thought of going back to the flowers.

It is a mistake to live on memories, particularly the memory of romance. It is too much like dried flowers under glass. Hearts do not change with marriage, they are still human and thro with the same emotions. We owe it to ourselves not to let workaday things and workaday worries, even though those worries be children, crowd out a natural craving for a bit of glamour.

I believe that women lose it first. Men are more impressionable than women and react more quickly to surroundings. They are but "boys grown tall." They do not age in spirit. Strange to say, it is women who are most likely to turn married life into a vegetable garden, and men must make the most of memories. That or nothing!

ROSE AND GOLD.

A very lovely evening frock is made of rose crepe over a slip of cloth of gold, the upper tunic being slit to reveal the golden lining.

Yet when husbands, craving the bit of romance they can no longer find at home, turn weakly, you wish—aside to look for it, it is wives who usually talk the loudest and longest about love.

I have no hesitation in saying that if wives were as solicitous in creating an atmosphere of romance after marriage as they are before, there would not be half so many divorces. Of all the things necessary to do this, personal attraction comes first.

Never do I suggest that a cold supper compensates for a marcel, but pink ruffled aprons have been known to go with good dinners and—well, women know what I mean.

WHAT'S A MOHR?

Question No. 3 concerns a mohr. We'll tell you it's an animal. The rest you'll have to answer yourself. The correct answers appear on another page. 1-What is the name of America's foremost beauty shown in the accompanying picture? 2-Who pays the title role in the moving picture, "Stella Dallas"? 3-What is a mohr? 4-How many letters are there in the English alphabet? 5-What is the meaning of "love" in tennis? 6-How many points are there in a game of casino? 7-Who is Tommy Connolly? 8-Where is radio station KFI? 9-How many weeks are there in a year? 10-In what Shakespearean play does the following quotation appear: "There is nothing either good or bad, but thinking makes it so." Nothing's as good or bad as exaggeration makes it. Twenty-seven years after we won Cuba's freedom we go there to enjoy it.

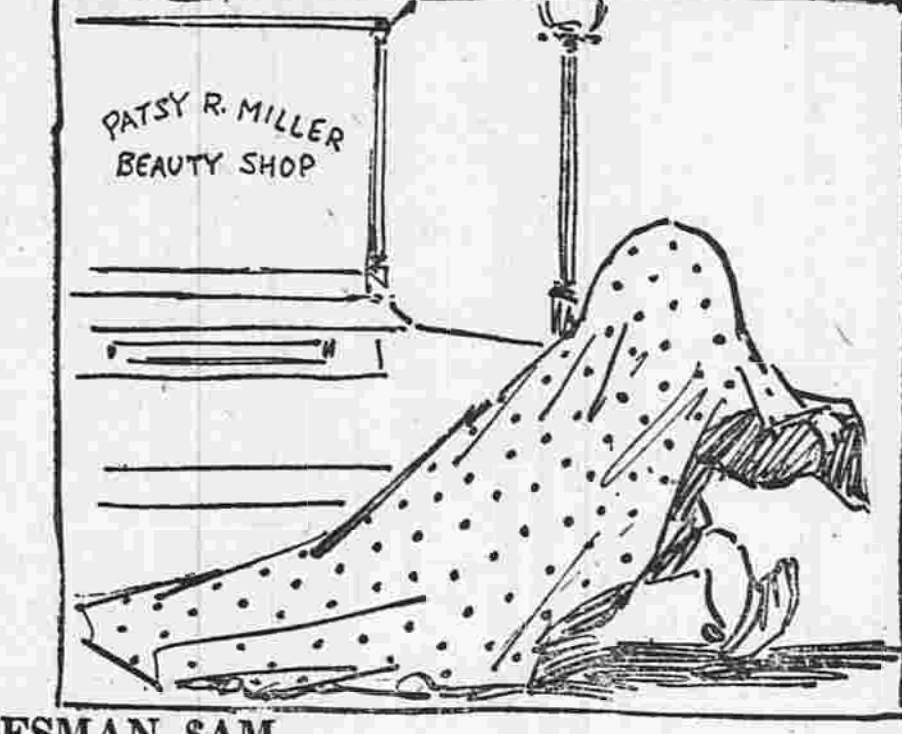

SENSE AND NONSENSE

Somebody ought to write a popular song about a cossack in a cossack eating haddock on a hassock. If you can't buy marks or deal with Poni, you can at least lend money to relatives. Question (small boy): Papa, what is a parasite? Answer (Papa): A person who passes through a revolving door without pushing. If you are not in great demand you have not made yourself scarce enough. A man bought a building plot in Florida last winter. He says he is quite satisfied as he got good measure—brimming over, in fact. The Awful Truth. Are you the first man to ask me for a kiss? The truth about it is this—You are the first to ask me this—You say you doubt it? Have I been out with others? I should smile! In fact, I book them... And yet you are the first you asked me while The others took them! Few of us worry over how much money we make, but we all worry over how much money we get. You cannot travel very far on lame excuses. Gold can make a woman melt. But, O, it's nothing to the way a woman can make gold melt. The wind is blowing in the trees, it's time to pull the ancient wheeze of saying farewell to beeevedees. Starting at the foot of things—corns. When radio comes in the door, sleep flies out the window. "What's economy, Dad?" "Anything your mother wants to buy, my son." Mary had a little cow. And, oh, how it did stutter. In place of every quart of milk It gave a pound of butter. Joe is the laziest guy I know. His idea of hard work is trying to think up designs for the costumes of the "Artists and Models" chorus. We call the neighbor's dog comparison, because he's odious. An Iowa man did not speak to his wife for years, but possibly she gave him no opportunity. "Doesn't it make you laugh to see a printed article beginning 'When a man chooses a wife—'" "An investment bubble comes from the soft soap of a slick stock salesman." SIMILE—as useless as a pair of cuff buttons with a bathing suit. If a hot dog man's wife went to the beach would she be a sand witch?

THE TINYMITES BY HAL COCHRAN

(READ THE STORY, THEN COLOR THE PICTURE) The Tynmites were in a heap, right in a field of grazing sheep. The pipe that saved them from the cow had landed in the dirt. Then Scouty jumped right up and said, "I didn't even bump my head. It's lucky, after such a ride, that none of us were hurt!" And then the sheep much closer came, and showed that they were very tame. "Oh, gee," said Clowny Tynmite. "What say we have a race? The sheep will help us, like as not, and carry us around this lot." And then he hopped upon a sheep and quickly set the pace. "Come on, this ridin's great," said he. "You all can ride as well as me." But all the other Tynmites were kinda scared, I guess. They just stood still and heaved a sigh as Clowny's sheep went sailing by. They thought that he would tumble soon, and be in great distress. But Clowny fooled them. He was good, and rode as all good riders should. He once was with a circus where he learned to do such tricks. The sheep would jump high in the air and jar poor Clowny up for fair, but never did it seem that he was really in a fix. Then, suddenly, the sheep stopped short, and put an end to all the sport. For Clowny went assailing through the air, right o'er his head. He landed in a pile of hay. The others shouted loud, "Hurray!" They knew he wasn't hurt because hay makes a downy bed. The sun had disappeared from sight, and day had drifted into night, so Clowny had a happy lunch, too good for him to keep. "It looks like we are best with some place for a good night's rest." So, shortly, in the haystack all the band was sound asleep. (The Tynmites build a bridge in the next story).

He has sold practically all the chestnut on the tract to the Central Vermont railroad for ties. As he cuts the ties he delivers them to the railroad at Ashford Springs. The maple and white wood he will sell to the different woodturning establishments.
