

FIVE PERSONS OVERCOME BY POISON FUMES

Third Case in Two Weeks in Manchester; Mother and Four Youngsters Faint in Home But Later Recover.

Manchester almost had another tragedy yesterday and once again a flawless gas water heater was the cause. Five persons were overcome with the poisonous fumes at the home of Charles M. Milkowski, well known local florist, who lives at 89 Hollister street.

This is the second case of the kind to happen in Manchester within the past two weeks. Recently six members of the family of Frits Johnson, of Clinton street, were overcome by the fumes. The night previous, a local woman was accidentally asphyxiated by fumes escaping from an unit gas jet.

The latest near-tragedy again brings strict attention to the editorial account in The Herald recently which pointed out the danger of burning gas water heaters without fuses attached. Although it is often that a gas water heater may be burned for a long time without any trouble, it is impossible to foretell when trouble may arise. Poor ventilation brought about by the closing tightly of doors and windows as cold weather approaches, is one of the main causes. It was only a couple of weeks ago that a Hartford firm which deals in the sale of gas water heaters gave notice that in the future it would not make any sales unless fuses were installed.

Family At Home.

Yesterday's near mishap occurred at 11:30 in the morning. Mrs. Milkowski and her two children, Bobby, three years old, and Jean, a year and a half, were in the house with little Ruth Patton, a child who lives next door, and Pauline Marshall, an orphan girl who works at the Milkowski home.

When the fumes were first noticed, she had been playing in the kitchen and suddenly trotted into the living room where her mother was. The child climbed into her mother's lap and then fainted away. The alarmed mother, an instant later, found the rest of the group unconscious on the kitchen floor. She quickly opened the doors and the summoned a doctor and telephoned for her husband. The doctor declared the illness due to gas poisoning.

All Recover.

Some of those who had fainted recovered but it was found necessary to take the others out to the lawn outside in order that they might be benefited by the fresh air. The effects of the gas poisoning confined most of the family to bed for the remainder of the day but today none appeared any the worse for their experience.

However, Mr. Milkowski said last night he would take no further chances. "I have had the gas water heater for five years," he said, "and never had any trouble before, but now I'm going to put it in the cellar."

FRITZ KREISLER IN A LONDON TAXI CRASH

London, Oct. 19.—Fritz Kreisler narrowly escaped serious injury today when a taxi, in which he was travelling to catch a steamer from Belfast to Glasgow, collided with an automobile. The famous violinist was badly shaken up and covered with debris, but escaped without injury.

FACE LONG TRIAL OF STRIKE THUGS

Many Challenges Likely in Selection of Jury in Garment Assault Cases.

Bridgeport, Oct. 19.—A long drawn out trial was in prospect here today when the New Yorkers faced Judge Newell S. Jennings in superior court to answer charges of assault with attempt to murder and with aggravated assault. The men pleaded not guilty and elected a jury trial. Judge Jennings ruled that each of the defendants might have eight challenges, with the same total of seventy-two available but twenty-eight veniremen prospects were that a new call must be sent out in a short time.

George E. Tompkins, of Westport, was the first man to be chosen to the jury. Eight talesmen were rejected previously, six being challenged by one member of the defendant group. State's Attorney William H. Conley challenged a talesman when he admitted being a member of the United Hatters of North America.

The nine men on trial are accused of assault upon Enrico and Ulrich Porziolo, of Stamford, who worked for a New York garment firm that had established a factory at Stamford because of a strike in New York. The affair occurred on September 24, last. The defendants had been out under bonds of $15,000 each.

The men are Jack Lipman, 33; Henry Tittlebaum, 25; Charles Kaky, 25; James Cavis, 28; Louis Harris, 33; Harry Bloom, 35; Sam Rosenberg, 23; Max Baer, 28 and James Corti, 28, all of New York.

The charges, including the two victims, also appeared in court for the opening of the trial. Henry E. Shannon, of Bridgeport, is chief defense counsel, with Isaiah LeBove, of New York, assisting. Mr. Shannon asked each juror man "do you think a workman has a right to strike to obtain better working conditions or to obtain higher wages?" and "would failure to take the witness stand prejudice you against any of these defendants?"

Chicago, Oct. 19.—Eugene V. Debs, for 30 years leader of the Socialist party in America and five times its candidate for President, is fighting at a hospital here today what physicians declare will be his last fight.

WORLD BANKERS PLAN TO TEAR DOWN TARIFFS

Big American Financiers Among 200 Signers of 18 Nations to Declare for "Economic Freedom."

London, Oct. 19.—A manifesto to be issued tomorrow by leading international bankers and industrialists of Europe and America, will urge the removal of all tariff barriers and urge the substitution of "economic freedom for a revival of world trade," it was learned today.

More than forty British signatories are affixed to the manifesto, including that of Reginald McKenna, Sir Montague Norman Lord Bradbury, it is understood.

Among the nations the manifesto is to be issued tomorrow are reported here to be J. P. Morgan, of New York, Gates McGarragh, of Chicago, J. J. Mitchell, of Chicago, Thomas N. Perkins of the Reparations Commission, Melvin A. Taylor, president of the First National Bank of Chicago, and Albert Wiggin, president of the Chase National bank of New York.

The manifesto will bear nearly 200 signatures, it is understood, and sixteen nations will be represented.

Germans Cautious.

Berlin, Oct. 19.—Forecasts of the anticipated international financiers and industrialists manifesto, as reported in news dispatches from London, meet with a cool reception at the hands of press here.

Chancellor Luther, today issued a warning that optimism regarding the pact may be premature. The paper says that unless the problems of reparations and war debts are included in the discussion its chances for success are small.

The Reichstag, Foreign Minister Stresemann's organ, declared the union of German industrialists, the most powerful economic body in Germany, knows nothing regarding the forthcoming manifesto.

A Queen Admires a Goddess

Queen Marie gazes upward appreciatively as the welcoming tug Macoon, bearing her to the Battery from the Leviathan at Quarantine, passes close to the unnoticing Statue of Liberty.

HEARTBREAKS IN WAKE OF DINNERS TO QUEEN MARIE

Very, Very Few of the Socially Elect to Be Bid to State Affairs at the White House.

Washington, Oct. 19.—A sanguinary social war raged today beneath the placid surface of the capital.

Tonight a queen will sit at the great state dining table in the White House. A great many people who enjoy the rating of "socially prominent" would like to be there. Only a few will be. And there is the rub. The heartaches of some will be partly assuaged by invitations to "drop in" later for dancing in the East room, but even this cannot cure them all.

It was announced at the White House today that the great list for tonight's state dinner to Queen Marie will not be available until after the dinner, tomorrow perhaps. This apparently was considered necessary to prevent any more disappointments than exist already.

Red Room Reception.

The favored ones will meet the queen in the Red Room. The royal party will be conducted to the manor by J. Butler Wright, assistant secretary of state, who will make presentations. After the guests are all assembled and have been introduced to the visitors, the President and Mrs. Coolidge will emerge from their private apartments upstairs, and go to the Blue Room where Queen Marie and her children will be waiting. The other dinner guests will not witness the presentations of Mr. and Mrs. Coolidge to the Balkan queen.

While ordinary mortals are traditionally supposed to curtsy and kiss the hand of royalty upon introduction, the same does not prevail upon a meeting of the heads of nations. Consequently an ordinary American handshaker will mark the presentation of Mr. Coolidge, the tactful New Englander, to Marie, the colorful queen of the Balkans.

The queen will go into dinner on the third floor. Her second floor neighbor Mrs. Walter Cole, Irving in the same house, beat out the fire with blankets but too late to save Mrs. Riordan's life.

Errand of Mercy.

Mrs. Riordan, who was 28, lived on the third floor. Her second floor neighbor was ill and Mrs. Riordan intended to start a kitchen fire for her. When she slipped she rolled to the landing and there the blaze started. Mrs. Cole heard the screams, saw the flames and ran up stairs with blankets. One blanket was consumed instantly. Another one extinguished the fire.

100 CIVIL WAR VETS MEET AT HARTFORD

Hartford, Oct. 19.—Nearly hundred Civil War veterans gathered here today to keep open the continuity of an annual meeting of the Army and Navy Club of Connecticut. The club, established in 1879, has brought together soldiers and sailors of the Union forces at least once each year since that time.

The feature of today's gathering was a banquet at which Governor John H. Trumbull was a speaker.

CLERGYMAN GIVES LIE TO DRY LEAGUE

Tells Reed Anti-Saloon Leader Admitted Falsehoods Were Given to Public.

Chicago, Oct. 19.—The lie was hurled at the Anti-Saloon League here today at a sensational session of Senator James A. Reed's "one-man" inquiry into the use of slush funds in the Illinois Senatorial campaign.

The league was charged with issuing false campaign statements concerning the candidacy of Hugh S. Magill, Independent Republican candidate, and favoring Frank L. Smith, Regular Republican nominee, by Rev. Robert E. O'Brien, a Methodist Episcopal minister. That the statements were known to be false by league officials, so Rev. O'Brien charged, was admitted by George H. Safford, state superintendent of the League, to a delegation of Chicago ministers here last week.

Says Safford Admitted.

Mr. O'Brien declared Safford had confessed the "untrue statements" in the present senatorial campaign. This occurred last Thursday, the minister testified, when a delegation of leading Chicago clergymen called on Safford to urge the league to withdraw its endorsement of Smith and to issue a new endorsement of Magill.

"At this meeting," the Rev. O'Brien said, "I told Safford I had found him thoroughly untrustworthy and he asked when and I told him he had issued untrue statements about his conferences with him. Mr. Safford said, 'I know they weren't true but I am not responsible for it.' He admitted the statements sent out by the league were not true and all the clergymen there heard his confession."

State Dinner Tonight.

The big event of the thirty-six hours to be spent in Washington comes at eight this evening, when in the state dining room of the White House, surrounded by all the pomp and cold braid at the command of the American government, the queen and her consort will be royal guests at a state dinner.

RUMANIA MARIE HAVING A JUST WONDERFUL DAY

First Pays Tribute to Un- known Dead, Sees Mt. Vernon, White House Guest This Evening.

Washington, Oct. 19.—A Democrat wearing the crown of royalty, stirred Washington today as it has not been moved in more than two years—Marie, Queen of Rumania, bobbed-haired and vivacious, come to America to tell us how much Rumanian loves the "Land of the Free and the Home of the Brave."

Today, this striking guest of the government honored America's World War dead at the tomb of the Unknown Soldier and inspected and lunched at Mount Vernon, home of George Washington. This afternoon, she exchanges calls with President and Mrs. Coolidge and tonight she and her son and daughter, Prince Nicholas and Princess Ileana, dine at the White House.

And wherever she went today, thousands of the residents of the national capital, ordinarily blasé to visiting royalty, craned their necks for a fleeting glimpse. For the people of America are interested in this enterprising Balkan ruler.

They are eager to see this most remarkable woman who has balked at the conventions of the courts of Europe and has lent her name and signature to American ads and syndicated newspaper articles. They showed their eagerness by enthusiastically lining every street down which the royal procession passed and cheering her majesty to the echo.

Early this morning, the queen and her entourage set out for the National Cemetery at Arlington. That move in a very crowded day, first move in a very crowded day, plaudits of the populace was evident from the start. Every gesture of welcome was returned. Marie very frankly was on a sight seeing tour and took to it hugely.

From Arlington, the official party motored to Mount Vernon for lunch. A brief rest at a state luncheon at the Rumanian legation in the early afternoon prior to the official call at the White House at 4 o'clock—a call to be returned by the chief executive half an hour later.

The big event of the thirty-six hours to be spent in Washington comes at eight this evening, when in the state dining room of the White House, surrounded by all the pomp and cold braid at the command of the American government, the queen and her consort will be royal guests at a state dinner.

HOLD A SUSPECT IN BIG MAIL ROBBERY

Man Arrested at Wilkes- barre Had New Jersey Markers in Car.

Wilkes Barre, Pa., Oct. 19.—Taken into custody as a suspect in connection with the $150,000 mail robbery at Elizabeth, N. J., in which one man was shot to death last week, Samuel Kostanzo, 38, of Mocaqua, was arraigned before Police Magistrate George Dryer here today and ordered held without bail for investigation.

Neither Kostanzo nor the police offered any testimony at the formal arraignment. Kostanzo was returned to his cell immediately after the hearing.

New Jersey Markers.

Kostanzo was arrested at midnight when he walked into police headquarters to inquire about the disappearance of his automobile. Although the machine, which had been located on a lonely road by police, bore Pennsylvania license tags, New Jersey plates were found under the seat, police said.

ERRAND OF MERCY FATAL TO ITS DOER

Waterbury Woman Burned to Death by Freak of Chance While Aiding Sick.

Waterbury, Oct. 19.—Mrs. Anna Riordan slipped on the stairs of her home here today while carrying a can of kerosene and some matches. Her fall ignited the matches, spilled kerosene caught fire and she was burned to death before aid could reach her. Mrs. Walter Cole, Irving in the same house, beat out the fire with blankets but too late to save Mrs. Riordan's life.

Errand of Mercy.

Mrs. Riordan, who was 28, lived on the third floor. Her second floor neighbor was ill and Mrs. Riordan intended to start a kitchen fire for her. When she slipped she rolled to the landing and there the blaze started. Mrs. Cole heard the screams, saw the flames and ran up stairs with blankets. One blanket was consumed instantly. Another one extinguished the fire.

DRY AGENTS BITE AT FRESH GRAPE JUICE.

Waterbury, Oct. 19.—Two New York prohibition agents who have been guarding a brewery here for some days, held up a truck driven by Luigi Jemele and carrying three barrels today. They took Jemele to the police station and ordered his arrest for transporting liquor.

"Get the stuff tested," said the police. The agents had the barrels' contents tested and received the report "fresh grape juice." Then they asked Jemele's release and returned his grape juice, as well as his truck.

POWDER MILL BLOWS, LONE WORKER KILLED

One-Man Plant of Dupont Concern at Moosic, Pa., Goes in Unexplained Blast.

Scranton, Pa., Oct. 19.—One man was killed and property damaged by a heavy when the glass mill of the Dupont Powder Co., located at Moosic, Pa., near here, blew up shortly before noon today.

George F. Brown, 36, of Minooka, Pa., the only man employed at the mill, was blown to pieces.

The mill, also known as the Bell Mill, was leveled by the blast. It was one of a number of isolated mills owned by the Dupont company.

The cause of the explosion will never be known, it was said.

EXPECTED TO TELL OF CONN. BEER OUTFLOW

Cases of Two Men Sent to Superior Court After Arrest at Darien.

Darien, Oct. 19.—Lawrence Hartman and James A. Holmes, both of West Haven, have been bound over for trial in the superior court on charges of transporting liquor and are being held in bonds of $1,000 each. Max Speike, local prosecuting attorney, announced that John Buckley, federal district attorney, and William H. Conley, state's attorney for Fairfield county, had asked such disposition of the cases rather than have the local court take jurisdiction.

While no formal announcement of the fact has been made it is understood here that the two men are expected to reveal facts concerning a large Connecticut scheme for distributing beer. Hence their case was turned over to the higher courts for disposition.

OUT-OF-STATE BONDS NOT TAXABLE HERE

Supreme Court Rules in Favor of Estate of Stamford New Yorker.

Stamford, Oct. 19.—The estate of the late Robert B. Hirsch, wealthy New York business man, is saved over $50,000 in the successful tax claim by the state through a decision by Supreme Court of Errors that has just reached here. The local probate court inventoried the estate at $2,400,894.78. The supreme court's decision puts the estate at $1,785,186.14, ruling that and cash that Mr. Hirsch kept in Liberty bonds, treasury certificates to the Connecticut tax. These amounted to over $618,000.

TRIES TO FIX POLICY OF CATHOLICS IN MEXICO

Executive Body of National Council Holds Secret Session at Cleveland.

Cleveland, O., Oct. 19.—The policy of the twenty million Catholic citizens of this country in regard to the Mexican religious situation was being determined here today by the executive committee of the National Council of Catholic Men in convention here.

Resolutions, the tenor of which were being vigorously debated, were being drawn and redrawn as the committee labored to set on paper the opinions of the majority of laymen.

Although it was stated in authoritative sources that intervention by the United States government in Mexico to settle the religious strife would not be asked, the same sources disclosed that the people of this country will be urged to petition President Coolidge and his cabinet to request President Calles of Mexico to attempt to establish amicable relations with the Catholic church and abstain from his policy of restraining foreign born clergymen from preaching and teaching in Mexican churches and institutions.

TOO YOUNG TO PASS THE STAMFORD POLICE

Unchaperoned Foursome from Boston Stopped and Boys and Girls Are Held.

Stamford, Oct. 19.—Two Boston youths and two girls of Stoughton, Mass., fell into the hands of local police today and are being held for the arrival of their parents.

Has No Idea of Eloping With John Coolidge, Says Florence Trumbull

South Hadley, Mass., Oct. 19.—Miss Florence Trumbull, daughter of Connecticut's governor and Mount Holyoke college student, today admitted that she had thought of marrying John Coolidge, son of the President, but insisted that they were not engaged.

"John and I are much too young to get married and we don't want to tie ourselves down too soon," she said. "You see, I don't want to drive all my other boy friends away just yet."

The reason given by John to her, for the placing of a secret service guard over him, was that his father feared harm might come to him because of curious persons and because of a threatening letter received at the White House, said Miss Trumbull.

"Some reports said we planned to elope and that was the reason for the guard, but I don't intend to elope with him," declared the governor's daughter.

Not Till Graduation.
Miss Trumbull said she does not want to make her friendship with the son of the president too conspicuous, but she does like to go out with him. She would take no "definite step" she said until after John graduates from Harvard Law school which will be at least four years from now.

"John comes over to see me for consolation," she said. Colonel Starling usually comes with him, but when John gets to the campus he leaves him outside and calls for me at my dormitory.

ACID STOMACH

"Phillips Milk of Magnesia" Better than Soda

Here after, instead of soda take a little "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" in water any time for indigestion or sour acid, gassy stomach, and relief will come instantly.

For fifty years generally "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" has been prescribed by physicians because it overcomes three times as much acid in the stomach as a saturated solution of bicarbonate of soda, leaving the stomach sweet and free from all gases.

BINGHAM ARGUES TARIFF QUESTION

Answers Democrats' Attack on Measure—Points Out Advantages.

Hartford, Oct. 19.—Speaking at a Republican rally held in Norwich last night, Senator Bingham made a number of interesting references to the tariff issue and took occasion to point out some inconsistencies contained in the speech of Congressman William A. Oldfield in New Haven, October 13.

has given us an additional $553,000,000.00 during the past two years and thereby enabled us to reduce the rate of direct taxation, to relieve more than two million people of the necessity of making income tax returns and we have not had to issue bonds.

"Again the chairman of the Democratic National Committee then admitted that there were between four and five million men out of employment, without money with which to feed and clothe their families or educate their children. He predicted, however, that if the Republican tariff bill should become a law the number would be increased to eight or ten million idle men. Everyone knows that that prophecy has not been fulfilled. On the contrary, the number of idle men has been enormously reduced, thanks to the operation of the Republican tariff bill.

"Again the chairman of the Democratic National Committee told us that if the Republican tariff bill were passed it would erect a Chinese Wall so high around this country as to make it impossible for foreign nations to send their goods into our ports. He said that if the Republican tariff law went into effect 'the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans might just as soon be oceans of fire instead of the great highways of commerce as God intended. What are the facts? The Republican tariff bill went into effect Sept. 22, 1922. In 1923 the total volume of our foreign trade exports and imports which had to use the 'great highways of commerce' amounted to $7,595,900,000.00. Perhaps you will say that the tariff law had not gone into full effect. Notice, however, that in 1924 the total volume of our foreign trade which had to cross these 'oceans of fire' so graphically depicted by the chairman of the Democratic National Committee was $8,200,000,000.00 and in 1925 it was $3,138,000,000.00. In other words the volume of our foreign trade has steadily increased and the prediction of 'oceans of fire' and 'no commerce' has proven to be false.

"In view of these things it is amazing that the chairman of the Democratic National Committee and the leader of the Democrats in the Senate of the United States should boldly propose that as soon as they can they will make a material reduction in the tariff. A reduction so serious as to make a difference of some six billions of dollars in the amount paid for manufactured articles. They are inviting the discontented western farmers to join with them in this attack on the prosperity of the East. They are perfectly consistent in fighting for the old-fashioned Democratic idea of free trade or tariff for revenue only, but it is important for us to realize that their views regarding tariff matters have been proved by the facts to be mistaken. It is to be hoped that the predictions of the chairman of the Democratic National Committee with regard to the complexion of the next Congress turn out to be equally mistaken.

POTATO DEMONSTRATION ON LOUIS GRANT'S FARM

A potato field meeting to demonstrate that large yields of potatoes can be grown in Hartford County when quality seed and proper methods are used, is announced by County Agent Ben Southwick of the Hartford County Farm Bureau. This meeting, to which any one interested is welcome, will be held Friday afternoon October 22, at the farm of Louis L. Grant, Buckland.

Mr. Grant is the largest potato grower in Connecticut, and according to County Agent Southwick, one of the most skillful and successful. For the field meeting on Friday measured acre of potatoes will be dug and weighed from one of Mr. Grant's best fields. A guessing contest on the yield of this acre is scheduled for 1:30 P. M. Cash prizes are offered for the three nearest guesses.

"Anyone who either wants to see, or doesn't believe it possible to grow, five hundred bushels on an acre should be on hand and convince themselves," says Mr. Grant. Plans are also made to visit the storage barns on this farm and inspect the potato machinery. Mr. Grant uses to increase his labor efficiency. A large tobacco shed that is being remodelled for potato storage will be visited.

Mr. Grant is firmly convinced that high quality seed potatoes is the most important essential for securing good yields. This year Mr. Grant grew fifty acres of potatoes from every select certified seed that he secured directly from northern growers. His seed included one strain of New York Certified seed and three strains of Vermont Certified Green Mountains. Five acres of Cobblers that he grew were also from Vermont Certified seed. During the last half of September, Mr. Grant visited personally some of the very best seed potato growers in New York, Vermont and Maine. He drove 2,000 miles in doing this but considers the trip well worth the expense in time and money.

Mr. Grant started digging in September a field he estimated was the poorest that he had. He was happily surprised by securing from this field a yield of fully 350 bushels per acre. In 1925 he raised 72 acres of Green Mountains potatoes from which he harvested 23,000 bushels. His yields this year will more than equal those that he secured last year. He does not attribute good yields of potatoes to luck, but to good seed, good fertilization and very thorough spraying. "Anyone interested in potatoes can learn something worthwhile by attending this 'Potato Field Day,'" says Mr. Southwick, Agricultural Agent of the Hartford County Farm Bureau.

ZANE GREY FEATURE CIRCLE ATTRACTION

"Forlorn River", His Latest Story, to Be Shown Tonight and Tomorrow.

Tonight at the Circle ought to witness a turnout of Zane Grey fans and that means a legion in Manchester. Grey's masterpieces "Forlorn River" is the feature of a well balanced picture bill. For the past ten years there has been doubt in the minds of managers here which of the western authors was the most popular here. It was between Curwood and Grey and Grey won out because the movie house attracted more with his name than did the same manager with Curwood. We can only judge of the future by the past so it is safe to say that all the old friends of Zane Grey will be on hand either tonight or tomorrow.

Here is a swift, exciting romance-drama that has much of interest to moviegoers quite apart from its entertainment values. It recreates one of the most colorful and violent periods in the upbuilding of the West that rip-roaring era when the forces of law and order clashed in a desperate struggle for supremacy with the forces of outlawry. Those were the days when a quick trigger and a fast horse were a man's best friends. Because of this historic significance, "Forlorn River" has an heroic flavor usually lacking in the average so-called western. The romance of a Million Dollars, George C. Hull, the scenarist, and John Waters, the director, have done full justice to Mr. Grey's original story, both in the matter of adaptation and staging. The picture is a thing of speed and suspense, bristling with dramatic action, which has been skillfully balanced with some excellent comedy moments. In addition, it has the advantage of extra-ordinary scenic settings, for it was filmed against the rugged background of Zion National Park, Utah.

MEIGHAN'S BIG PLAY STILL PACKS 'EM IN

"Tin Gods" Grows in Popularity—Last Showing Tonight; Tomorrow's Big Bill.

And still they come around to "The Theater Magnificent" a really appropriate name for the State, to see Thomas Meighan in the greatest picture of his career "Tin Gods." There is a sharp division of opinion between the hundreds who saw this picture Sunday and last night as to whether Tom Meighan or Renee Adoree is the better in this wonderful play. The men vote for the actress and the women for Tom which is as it should be. Tonight will be the last time the feature will be shown at the head of a full program of pictures and it would be well to profit by the experiences of those who came too late and had to wait at previous showings in this town.

For tomorrow Manager Jack Sanson has arranged an unusual big program. There will be first "The Country Store," an innovation that has been growing by leaps and bounds here. It is so well known and so popular that the mere mention of the name brings them out. Then there will be two features. The first will be "The Enchanted Hill" with Jack Holt in the star role. Your old friend Noah Beery, the great character actor is also in the cast. It is a Peter B. Kyne story and has already been read and loved by millions of Americans. The other feature will be "The Romance of a Million Dollars," a regular melodrama of the old school. It's exciting, unusual and has a pretty love story running through it.

But that is not all. On the same bill with all of this there will be "A Surprise." What this will be no one but those in the secret know. Thursday, Friday and Saturday big time vaudeville will occupy the State stage and the feature picture will be Coleen Moore in "It Must Be Love."

COVENTRY

Mr. and Mrs. George Bennett, Jr. and three children of Harrison, N. Y., motored up to spend the week-end with Mrs. Bennett's mother, Mrs. A. B. Porter.

Mrs. Alton Taylor and son, Alton, spent Sunday at Mrs. Arthur B. Porter's.

Miss Laura K. Kingsbury spent the week-end at home.

Miss Ruth Taylor of Hartford was home over the week-end.

Miss Gladys Orcutt, teacher at Lincoln School, spent the week-end with her parents.

Miss Doris Gowdy was home for the week-end.

Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Elliott and family visited at J. E. Kingsbury Monday.

Coventry Grange, No. 75 P. of H. visited Andover Grange, Monday evening and furnished part of the program.

Thursday evening is the regular meeting of Coventry Grange, No. 75 P. of H. During the lecture hours there will be a competitive program, the married folks against the single folks. Each is to furnish one-half hour program. Mrs. Foster Hall is taking charge of the married people and Miss Lillian Ayer, the single people.

Whooping cough has broken out in the Pond Hill district. Friday evening the Christian Endeavor Society will hold their regular meeting and social at the chapel.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hill and son from Worcester, were week-end guests at Mr. and Mrs. Walter S. Haven.

The fellowship visitation campaign starts tomorrow. Everyone in town is to be called upon during the next two weeks.

TUESDAY, OCT. 19, 1925.

MARIE.

A charming lady, this Marie of Rumania. Gracious and tactful and human, and very, very wise, she is that almost unbelievable entity, a queen who is also a woman of the world.

Why, she acts, in the trying circumstances of her visit, just precisely as some tens of thousands of well bred, right hearted, sunny American women would be sure to act, in similar case.

Anyway, in the few hours since she landed on American soil, Queen Marie has actually endeared herself to the American people.

DOCTORS' LICENSES.

Whether or not the Connecticut law authorizing the State Department of Health to cancel the licenses of physicians without preliminary hearing is, in all its aspects, a wise and just law may still, perhaps, be open to debate.

Even if, in a well intended and generally useful law, there may be possibilities of abuse or injustice in special cases, the right to make mistakes in the course of legal experimentation is an essential one if the states are to be self governing.

It was not to organize a single state, with equal laws in all its components, that the American Union was established—else it never would have been established.

Some day the United States supreme court is going to take the same view of the eighteenth amendment that it has taken of the subject of interference with Connecticut's medical license law—that the amendment is nothing in the world but interference with the inherent rights of the states, and so incompatible with the body of the constitution and, therefore, void.

BIG AFFAIRS.

There is to be given to the world tomorrow a manifesto signed by an immensely powerful group of the world's financiers, concerning the world's trade and proposing measures for alleviation of the unsettlement brought about by the war.

For three or four months great international bankers of many countries have been conferring as to ways and means of restoring the world to what Warren Harding called normalcy.

Among the signers are said to be Gates W. McGarrah and Albert H. Wiggin, of the Chase National Bank of New York, J. P. Morgan, J. J. Mitchell, president of the Merchants Trust Company of Illinois and Melvin A. Taylor, president of the First National Bank of Chicago.

That American financial leaders of such standing as these should be definitely committed to such an enterprise is enormously significant. Not only is it very certain that they are acting not for an occasional banking house but for the dominant financial interests of the country, but it is practically quite certain that their decisions must go a long way toward laying down the lines of the future foreign policy of this government.

It is highly probable that the wisdom—and actually the disinterestedness—of these stewards of the nation's capital will have a hundred times as large an influence in shaping America's attitude toward Europe, in the next five years, as all the windy isolationists that the sage brush country and city stunts can send to Congress.

HONEYED WORDS.

If you care to read sweet words about a candidate of one party printed in newspapers of another party, find a copy of any Democratic New York state newspaper and peruse the admiring article practically certain to appear therein concerning Mr. Cristman of Herkimer.

Mr. Cristman is not a Democrat. In the Herkimer point of view and by the criterion of past performance he rates a Republican. He has run for office, in the past years, as a Republican—and when he did no Democratic newspaper in his part of the Empire state, or in any other part of it, gushed over his loveliness.

They find him such a kindly man, such a likable man, such a strong man with the upstate dries—so immensely more account a man than anybody had understood before. It's almost—but not quite—a wonder that they don't advise the members of their own party to vote for Cristman instead of for Wagner.

All of which is accounted for by the fact that the more votes Cristman gets the better for Wagner, for absolutely every one of those votes will be a Republican vote that will be diverted from Senator Wadsworth.

What is really happening in New York, with relation to the senatorship is that the Democrats are running a two-to-one combination against Wadsworth. They have their own candidate, for themselves to vote for, and they have Cristman to be voted for by as many dumb Republicans as can be induced to do so.

Hence the loving regard which their newspapers have developed for the renegade candidate.

NORWAY GOES WEST.

Norway is senior to the United States in the matter of prohibition. That country adopted the strictest kind of a prohibitory law in 1914. It did not work as well as was expected and was amended. It has been amended time and again since. Instead of doing away with the use of alcohol it fostered bootlegging and general law breaking, just as it has done in this country.

It is conceivable that American dries may dismiss this matter with a shrug and the intimation that the Norwegians are an "inferior" people. They will have the job of their life to make that explanation stick.

NINETY-AND-NINE.

Two weeks ago Leon Trotsky and a group of once notable figures in the Soviet regime of Russia attempted to stage a demonstration in opposition to the Stalin crowd that now controls the destinies of that great if demoralized nation—and failed to put over their purpose, which manifestly was in the nature of a bloodless revolution. They have now formally capitulated to the power of the little group in control.

It is not possible, in this kind of an American community, to arouse a very lively interest in the affairs of Russia. But very few persons indeed can fail to appreciate one statement made by Max Eastman, probably the American best informed on Russian affairs.

In an article in the New York Times Eastman declares that the entire Communist party of Russia, including both the Trotsky "outs" and the Stalin "ins," numbers less than one million persons.

Much less than one per cent of the people of the country have anything whatever to do with its control. This is a factor, above all other factors, to be borne in mind when regarding the present red regime with relation to permanency.

Stewart's WASHINGTON LETTERS

BY CHARLES P. STEWART

Washington, Oct. 19.—Senator Swanson is the latest solog to return from Europe with an account of the old world's lack of gratitude for the war debt settlement terms offered by this country.

Unlike Senators Harrison and Caraway, who came back as mad as hounds, the Virginia senator is hurt rather than angry.

He makes some allowances for the Europeans, particularly the French, on the ground that, with the exception of a few financiers, they don't understand what they're getting.

Swanson also lets this cat out of the bag: Europeans are wrought up, for one reason, because the American debt commissioners were trying to tell this country one thing, while the European debt negotiators were trying to tell their respective countries something else.

In the case of France, for example, Ambassador Berenger went home prepared to say he had made an excellent bargain.

Simultaneously the American commissioners, apparently afraid of being blamed here for over-generosity, as Swanson points out, were assuring the United States that they had exacted from France the last copper it was possible to get without bankrupting her.

Perhaps this latter story would have been all right for "home consumption," if Swanson thinks the French could have been prevented from over-generosity.

In these days of rapid transmission and no censorship it couldn't be kept from getting to the side of the water, but was probably called to France and published under the headlines "In all the newspapers, Swanson can see that the French public can be much criticized for assuming that the commission knew what they were talking about."

Attor: it wasn't very easy for Berenger to get himself believed when he said the terms were most liberal to France.

The commission Swanson finds fault with consists of: Secretaries Mellon, Kellogg and Hoover; Senator Smoot, Representatives Burton and Clegg, Richard Olney and Edward N. Hurley.

Senator Smoot, out of the whole group, has been most frequent and emphatic in declaring that, in every instance, the commission has insisted on every cent America's debtors were able to return to her.

Smoot, consequently, seems likely to be the main object of the fault finders' attack when the subject comes up in Congress next winter, as it's sure to do. Swanson, Caraway and Harrison are, all cocked and primed and there are some others who can be depended on to help them.

Senator Goff is another statesman who's going to Europe—and he's going in the hope of benefiting his health rather than to study international relationships.

Senator Underwood of Alabama has bought an estate in Virginia. Politicians see a deal of significance in this.

Underwood's term expires next March. He wasn't a candidate for a renomination. It's no secret that he knew he couldn't get it—in Alabama.

The hope is that he's going to move there for a couple of years, establishing a residence, and run for the Senate from Virginia.

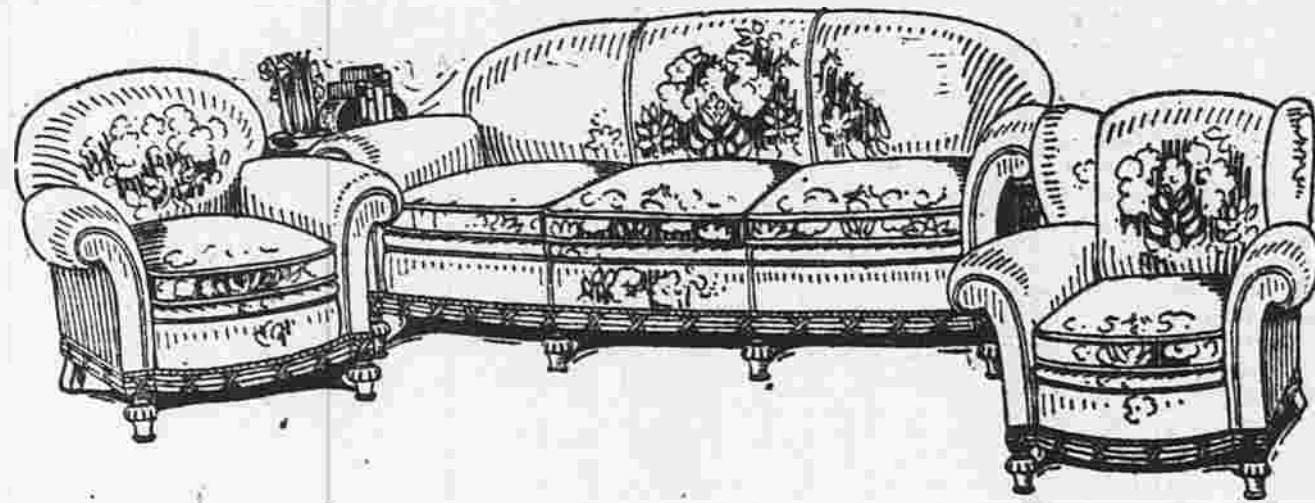

If it's true, it's a challenge to Senator Swanson.

FALL FASHIONS for the HOME

PALE yellow moon. Frost on the pumpkins. A cheery fire crackling on the hearth. Your favorite book and a friendly lamp. That's living! Now, more than ever, one appreciates a good home. Good furniture helps make them. And good furniture—the very newest fashions for fall—need not be costly as a glance below will show. These are typical Watkins values marked at Watkins Brothers usual low prices.

Note the excellent design of this suite. It has a carved, swell front base and is upholstered all around with a distinctive, new Jacquard velour—in two tones of taupe with rose background! Watkins plan of home furnishing makes it possible to buy as many pieces of this suite as you desire. The three pieces sketched, on easy terms $255.

Another popular priced suite, covered with a combination of Jacquard velour and plain velour to match, comes in a steel gray color with rose background. Select as many pieces as you need. Davenport, wing chair and club chair, on easy terms $198.

The season of entertaining—Thanksgiving—Christmas—and all the other special dinner parties—is on. You'll want your dining room furnished in good taste. A new Early English suite we've just unpacked is of heavy, sturdy lines, typical of the period. It is in antique walnut finish over American walnut and gumwood. You may select just as many pieces as your room will accommodate. 66 inch buffet, extension table, semi-closed china, arm chair and 5 side chairs, on easy terms $298.

For the smaller room we would suggest another new suite we have in Huguenot walnut finish over walnut and gumwood. This suite is of light, graceful design, so particularly suited to the smaller home. Extension table, 60 inch buffet, server, arm chair and 5 side chairs, on easy terms $158.

(Or select as many pieces as you need.)

IN NEW YORK

New York, Oct. 19.—Scattered notes from a ramble about Manhattan:

The subway workers at midnight... Like some weird creation of an ultra-modernist painter... Along the streets, a parade of giant cranes moving about like awkward giraffes...

A few night loiterers line along the guard rails and try to fathom the pit below... Now and then a flare reveals a dozen men jostled about by the kicking trip-hammers, moving about on little cars and wading through the water which seeps up through the rocky earth.

On the street taxis fit with theater crowds, all quite oblivious to the gargantuan task that stops them for night nor for day—Block upon block, down a seemingly endless thoroughfare, men are tolling out of sight... Only the clatter and bang of steam-hammers... Only the screaming of the crane as it dips and rises... But below the street, far under the sidewalk, the black shadows move feverishly... Now and then the figure rises from the hole and becomes a man... He opens a lunch pail and nibbles a sandwich, drinks a swig of coffee from a thermos bottle and ducks back again to become a shadow...

The grand opera chorus being whipped into shape on the second floor of the Metropolitan Opera House... Between curtains and glazed windows only the head of the conductor may be seen from the opposite sidewalk...

Fleet foot on the corse, Sage counsel in cumber, Red hand in the foray, How sound is thy slumber! Like the dew on the mountain, Like the foam on the river, Like the bubble on the fountain, Thou art gone, and forever!

girls from Germany... And young men, middle-aged men, aging men... Gathered one night up working, night on night... Until that evening when the lights of the great gold horseshoe flare on again and they can come on stage accustomed... And write home afterward of the thrill of a Metropolitan first night... Even in the chorus. GILBERT SWAN.

OFFERED $500 TO FIND 'KIDNAPERS' Stenographer Swears Mrs. McPherson Offered Fee to Continue Faking Job.

Los Angeles, Oct. 19.—Miss Berice Morris, secretary to R. A. McKinley, a blind attorney, who was alleged to have negotiated with Mrs. Almee Sempie McPherson to find a man and woman to pose as her kidnapers, today emphatically declared that her statements furnished to the district attorney's office were not made under duress.

Miss Morris occupied the witness stand practically all day yesterday. She testified that Mrs. McPherson offered her $500 if she would carry on the plans of McKinley after the latter had been killed in an automobile accident.

The witness also said that Mrs. McPherson had offered $1,500 if McKinley could find a shack similar to the one in which she had said she had been held captive.

BIG COMPANY HELPS OUR MERCHANTS KEEP BUSINESS AT HOME

How one of the largest manufacturing concerns in the country cooperates with their dealers to keep local business in the hands of local concerns, was interestingly brought out in a talk with one of our leading tire merchants last week.

The company to which he pointed particularly for its work in this direction is The United States Rubber Company, which has perhaps gone further along these lines than any other tire concern.

There are several reasons, aside from the very good point of keeping home money at home, why our own local tire stores are the logical place to buy tires rather than the mail order houses.

For instance, an expert tire man can tell whether tires are wearing unduly because of the wheels being out of alignment and can correct the trouble in time.

pense of the dealer's own advertising. Recent improvements in production methods now enable the United States Rubber Company to market, through the local dealers, tires of known quality, bearing the Company's trade mark and full warranty, for as little money or even less than the cost of mail order tires or off-brand tires of uncertain value.

RETAIL FOOD PRICES AGAIN ON UP TREND

September Figures Show Increase of August of One Three-Fourths Per Cent.

Washington, Oct. 19.—The retail cost of food is again on the upgrade. September prices were 1.34 per cent. higher than in August, but there was a decrease of nearly one-third of one per cent. since September, 1925.

Eggs topped the list of food articles that increased in price during September, the increase amounting to fifteen per cent. Potatoes increased eight per cent.

"Where There's Life—There's a Phillips Store"

17 Centuries' Struggle Philippines Background

The Philippine question has been raised again at Washington, following the survey of the islands for the president. This is the second of a series of six articles giving the vital story of Philippine development.

By PAUL HARRISON, NEA Service Writer.

The story of the Philippines is one of seventeen centuries of conflict, a seemingly hopeless struggle marked by difference that were religious, racial, geographical, ignorance and misunderstanding were their heritage, isolation and foreign oppression the handicaps that made real progress virtually impossible.

In seventeen centuries the Philippines were not able to advance beyond a state of savagery. Yet, in the last 25 years, under the control of the United States, these people have advanced more than in the 1700 years previous.

The real vital story of the Philippine struggle in that distant archipelago is little known.

Found by Chinese. Magellan, intrepid Spanish mariner, usually is accredited with the discovery of the Philippines.

It was not, however, until China overthrew its Mongol rulers and established the Ming dynasty, about 1368, that close relations were established.

Charles the Fifth of Spain, in 1519, commissioned Magellan to take a trip down the coast of America in the hope of finding a way to the east by way of the Pacific.

Two thousand warriors appeared, ready to resist the landing of the Spaniards. But everyone was friendly after the captain and the native potentate established the "blood compact."

on each sucked and drank the other's blood. Of course, this made them "blood relations." The Spaniards celebrated mass upon landing and the natives were baptized.

Magellan fell before a Mactan spear and died before he could write his memoirs. His newly acquired blood-brothers and the "Christianized" Cebus, disgusted with such frailty in people whom they thought were gods, set upon Magellan's men, killed 35 and forced the rest from the island.

The Spaniards sailed down to Bornoe and discovered the beautiful Mohammedan city of Brunel. They attended a cock fight, got into a brawl afterward and were forced to leave the city.

Both the supper and decorating committees had worked tirelessly in preparation for the event, the result brought them many compliments.

Guests who were present included District Deputy Miss Mary Smith of Stafford Springs and Mrs. Nellie Hutchison of New Haven.

SUNSET REBEKAH LODGE HOLDS SOCIAL AFFAIR

More Than 150 Members Attend Noble Grands' Night Here.

Past Noble Grands' night with Sunset Rebekah Lodge proved a most successful social affair. More than 150 of the Rebekahs gathered in the banquet hall at 6:30 last evening and did justice to a fine supper arranged for by the supper committee.

The menu included roast fresh ham, baked beans and brown bread, salads, relishes, rolls and dessert. The tables were decorated in true Hallowe'en style, orange and black predominating in the color scheme.

Both the supper and decorating committees had worked tirelessly in preparation for the event, the result brought them many compliments.

Guests who were present included District Deputy Miss Mary Smith of Stafford Springs and Mrs. Nellie Hutchison of New Haven.

Barnstable, Mass., Oct. 19.—Douglas L. McKay, former New York associate police commissioner, today stood acquitted by a jury of a charge of manslaughter in connection with the death on Labor Day of Mrs. Mary K. Stockstrom, of St. Louis. Her automobile was in collision with a car driven by McKay.

The jury, however, found McKay guilty of driving a motor car while under the influence of liquor and of reckless driving. On each of these charges, Judge Keating imposed a fine of $100.

Tanlac Helps Entire Family

Mother of 3 Children Says Family is in Better Health Than Ever Before. Claims Own Case is Without Parallel.

"My oldest son" and myself were the invalids of the family, says Mrs. E. Gilbert, 81 Kingsley St., Springfield, Mass. "When I was 20 years old I developed rheumatism that never left me until I began taking Tanlac. After my last child was born I could not regain my strength. For 8 weeks I could not do a thing. I did not leave the house. My arms and legs swelled and pained me. There wasn't a spot on my body that did not ache. My stomach was always sour and burned like fire. We spent a lot of money in search of relief when a friend recommended Tanlac.

"I began to gain strength. I gained 6 pounds and color returned to my cheeks. Rheumatism vanished. Now I feel 100% better than ever before. No backache, no jumpy nerves or constipation. And what Tanlac did for me it did for my son. It gave him an appetite, strength, vitality and banished the dizziness that caused him so much suffering. He now has robust health."

THE ROMANCE OF AMERICA: Aaron Burr (6)

After the failure of the attempt at Quebec, Burr returned home, where he was informed he had been appointed to the staff of General George Washington, where he served a short while and was transferred to the staff of General Putnam. On Sept. 15, 1776, the British attacked Manhattan Island and the Americans fled to Harlem.

General Knox and his brigade had been stranded. Burr urged the general to retreat for the safety of his men but he refused.

The men followed, with Burr riding in advance and returning at times to reassure the terrified troops. At one point the Americans met a British advance guard and attacked and dispersed them after a short battle. Burr's feat in saving Knox's brigade became the talk of the army. (Continued)

QUEER QUIRKS OF NATURE

By ARTHUR N. PACK.
 President, American Nature Ass'n.

Death in the dark, some call him for he is the most powerful of our owls. In some form or other he ranges from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and throughout North and South America wherever there are trees.

Even where trees are scarce he may be found, sometimes with his nest on the faces of cliffs. Early in the spring Hubo and his mate go about their housekeeping, for the young of all the larger birds of prey are slow in developing, and they must be able to take care of themselves before the winter comes.

The eggs, like those of all owls, are white and nearly round. In the studies of food habits which have been made of the birds of prey, the great horned owl is one which seems most inimical to man's interests. The principal charge against him is on the score of catching chickens, and it should be pointed out that this happens mostly in those sections of the country where fowls are forced to seek their own roosting places in the trees.

Great Horned Owl

Here it is an easy matter for our night-flyer to pick a nice, fat pullet from a branch. Examination of stomach contents, however, and of the pellets which are cast up after each meal, show that many other things are eaten, including a variety of wild birds and mammals, some of the latter very injurious to man's interests, and even fish.

FINE PLAYERS APPEAR IN GOLD RUSH PICTURE

One of the most talked of motion pictures made in many years is "The Flame of the Yukon." This is the remarkable photoplay of gold rush days in the Canadian Northwest which opens its three days' engagement at the Rialto today. It is said by critics to be tremendously dramatic and appealing. Scenes Owen, for many years a popular screen star, has the stellar role and is supported in the leading man's part by Arnold Gray, who is quite unknown to screen fans but who, by reason of his great performance in this picture, is bound to spring into film prominence.

"The Flame of the Yukon" is thrilling to a degree and the story is logical and convincing. There is plenty of action and the interest never wanes. Every role is played by a screen artist and this contributes in no small measure to the success which the photoplay has attained.

A comedy "North of 67-8" a brilliant parody on a well known picture, should furnish some hearty laughs. Two novelty reels, "The Lions Charge" and "The Angelus" as well as a news reel will also be shown.

Thursday evening another amateur contest will be staged, as the last one was quite a success from every point of view.

12 COUPLES ENTERED IN FOX TROT FINALS

Big Crowd Expected at Rain-bow to See Championship Decided; Local Couple Favored.

One of the biggest dance contests that has ever been held in this section will be staged at the Rainbow dance pavilion on Bolton Hill tomorrow night. Twelve couples are entered. These couples have won prizes in the elimination contests that have been held at the Rainbow the past five weeks.

The couples entered are as follows: John Vince and Louise Dickson, both of Manchester; C. W. Clifford and Leona Hotkowsky, both of Manchester; E. C. Hatch and Lena Ostrowsky, both of Manchester; James McIluff and Mary Matyka both of Manchester; John Hildebrand and Mary Griffin, both of Manchester; Al Fontaneli, Stafford Springs, and Marion Millix, Rockville; Tilio Fassanelli and Mildred MacLagan, both of Stafford Springs; Paul Arcaris, Manchester, and Gladys Powell, Williamtic; Mr. and Mrs. Henry Larson, of Manchester; James Duffy and Freda Skonosh, both of Manchester; Elio Fontaneli and Lillian Palshaw, both of Stafford Springs; and Delvin Cini and Florence Fontaneli, both of Stafford Springs.

The couples will dance to Tasilio's orchestra and the contest will be held about the middle of the regular dance program. Judges have been secured from Hartford and Springfield. The winning couple will be presented with silver loving cups which stand 14 inches high. They will be suitably engraved.

The contest will no doubt develop into a fight between Manchester and Stafford Springs. Each couple has entered a large number of backers and they will all be present to cheer on their choice. Mr. and Mrs. Henry Larson, of Manchester, are favored to win according to those who are in close touch with the dancing crowds here.

"Collect-the-Coin" Pyle Is Another Tex Rickard

Former Manager of Small Town Movie House Rapidly Forging Ahead as Sports Promoter.

By ART CARLSON.

Another Tex Rickard? That's what the boys down front are beginning to call Mr. "Collect-the-Coin" Pyle, the talkative fellow whose main business is getting amateur athletes to turn professional in these days when the dollar sign means considerably more than a trunkload of championship banners, medals and what have you.

The astute Mr. Pyle, as you know, has stepped to the front with rapid strides. Moreover, he's increasing his pace as he goes along. Further, there's no telling just where he'll stop.

Less than 12 months ago this Mr. Pyle was only an "everyday" chap tucked away from the world in an obscure Illinois town. His job? He was manager of a little movie house.

Then came the final game of the Western Conference season. It likewise was the last college brush for "Red" Grange, the crimson crack. All season rumors had it Grange would turn pro. It was one of the main topics up for discussion in the big Columbus stadium last November when Illinois and Ohio State made ready to finish the campaign. "Red's" status was to be announced after the contest. It was.

Grange took the leap. His manager was C. C. Pyle. That was the first time the world had ever heard of Mr. Pyle. Since then the one-time boss of the Illinois picture theater has been much in the headlines.

His exploits have kept the gang busy. Following the signing of Grange, Pyle tossed him into the movies. Grange played the hero in one of the best college films produced in a long time.

Pyle then set to work on a real pro football organization, patterned somewhat after that of the major league baseball circuits. It's going big.

Next Pyle started the world by enticing the famous Suzanne Lenglen, premier woman tennis player of the universe, into leaving the amateur ranks. But Mr. Pyle must have more than one pro racket wielder, so he promptly signed Mary K. Browne, former American champion, and still one of the outstanding players in this country.

Pyle still wasn't satisfied, so he busied around a bit more until today he has a real tennis professional troupe composed of Lenglen, Browne, Vincent Richards, Howard Kinsey, Paul Feret and Harvey Snodgrass.

Pyle didn't get Snodgrass from the amateur fold, by the way, Harry having turned pro about a year ago. The others were all simon-pures, however.

This troupe soon will start a tour of the country, making all the principal towns. It should draw well, too. On the opening night in Madison Square Garden some 15,000 fans were on hand. Who would have ventured the prediction six months ago that such a turnout would attend an indoor tennis match?

Nor is that all. Now the far-seeing Mr. Pyle is planning an open net tournament in which players from all over the world can compete for prizes totaling from $35,000 to $50,000, the affair to be staged in New York or Los Angeles some time next February.

Tex Started in 1906.

Another Tex Rickard? Maybe so. Rickard, of course, has a big start on Pyle. Tex first leaped to fame as a promoter in 1906, when he staged the memorable Nelson-Gans 42-round, lightweight championship battle at Goldfield, Nev. Since then he has put on virtually all the bigistic frays, his latest and most successful being the Tanne-Dempsey jamboree at Philly, which drew about 130,000 people.

Pyle is some 20 years behind "Take-a-Chance" Tex. But he's coming fast. From manager of a little picture house to the fellow behind such celebrated stars as Grange, Lenglen, Richards, Browne and so on—not to mention other various programs he has up his sleeve—is no small hop in less than a year's time.

For a while the multitude was inclined to give "Collect-the-Coin" Pyle the merry guffaw in loud, hilarious tones. But Pyle merely let the folks laugh it off and now seems fairly well on his way to a sports promoter de luxe, as they say in social circles.

McKECHNIE DISMISSAL "CAME UNEXPECTEDLY"

Pittsburgh, Pa., Oct. 19.—Bill McKechnie's dismissal as manager of the Pittsburgh Pirates, whom he led to a World Series pennant in 1925, came "very unexpectedly," he asserted today, but further than that he did not care to comment.

McKechnie intimated, however, that he will remain in baseball if he receives a satisfactory offer. There is a possibility that he may be asked to manage one of the three American league clubs, according to reports here.

In commenting upon the release of McKechnie, Barney Dreyfuss, owner of the Pirates, said it was "a most unpleasant duty."

"His character was above reproach," Dreyfuss added, "and I am satisfied he tried his best for the interests of the club, but after careful study I decided to seek a new manager. I believe the public wanted a change."

It was reliably stated that Fred Clarke, assistant manager, will not be considered as a possible successor. Clarke also may not be connected with the Pirates next season, it was reported.

Dreyfuss said the expose of disloyalty in the ranks of the Pirates last season, which resulted in the dismissal of three veteran players, did not influence him in deciding to change managers.

ROSENBERG SUSPENSION GETS ASSOCIATION O. K.

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 19.—The National Boxing Association meeting here today, was on record as upholding the Illinois Commission's indefinite suspension of Charlie Rosenberg, bantamweight champion of the world and recognized Bud Taylor, of Terra Haute, Ind., as the new boss of the division.

The National Boxing Association represents 17 states, Canada and Cuba, not including New York. Since the National Boxing Association has a working agreement with the International Boxing Union, governing body of Europe, Rosenberg's suspension also becomes effective on the other side of the Atlantic. The association also went on record as holding Young Montreal the logical contender for the title and recommends a title bout between Montreal and Taylor.

All boxers entering a professional fight must be registered with the association and pay a fee of one dollar for that privilege. It was decided. A card will be issued to each member, which it is believed will prevent boxers from fighting under assumed names.

LAST NIGHT'S FIGHTS

At New York—Benny Bass, of Philadelphia, won the decision over Frankie Garcia, of the Pacific Coast, ten rounds. Sergeant Sammy Baker, of Mitchell Field, N. Y., won decision over Irish Tommy Jordan, of Brooklyn, ten rounds.

At Philadelphia—Tommy Herman, of Philadelphia, won the decision over George Balduc, of Canada, ten rounds.

At Chicago—Tommy Loughran, of Philadelphia, won decision over Martin Burke, of New Orleans, ten rounds.

At Louisville—Young Stribling, of Atlanta, "knocked out" Soldier Buck of Louisville in the fourth round.

PENN'S TRICK PLAYS DEFEATED CHICAGO

Stagg's Team Had No Defense and Gained But One First Down.

This is the second of a series of articles by Davis J. Walsh on the leading football teams of the east and some of the middle western teams. Other articles will appear at regular intervals.

By DAVIS J. WALSH, Sports Editor.

New York, Oct. 18.—It may be that the time will come when hands will be without clock, eggs without ham and peas without knives. For today A. Alonso-Stagg appears to be without a real center for the Big Ten Conference title and that happens not very often. Stagg always has had a championship or a near championship conference team. This year he has neither.

This was proved during the game with Pennsylvania last Saturday. I saw Borden and Cochran, the tackles, drawn in by Pennsylvania's several veterans back as well as a promising looking bunch of new material. Further, the B's; Green will have the famous Eddie Dooley in the fold again. Dooley was a star quarterback in 1924, but wasn't in school last year. He should do much to offset the loss of Oberlander; in fact, is a better all-around grizzer than the sensational "Swede."

This year's aggregation will be led by "Ace" Horton, famous full-back. Horton is a line plunger of no mean ability and can also skirt the ends. For a big fellow, he's fast and last fall was one of the best ground gainers on the team.

Horton is likewise strong on the defense, being a deadly tackler and a valuable man to have backing up the line. He's clever, too, at breaking up the foe's forward passing attack.

ball than they had any right to expect to play. They were too smart for Stagg's inexperienced linemen and that is the reason K. Rouse and Cochran and Borden and Otwin and Stickey and Hancock and others were chasing the wrong man without the ball most of the time. Chicago was trying to find out who put the fun in fundamentals. The truth of the matter is that while the first string strength was available, Chicago was there or thereabouts. Until they took a thorough-going shelling, the Chicago forwards gave an excellent account of themselves. But a team is no stronger than its secondary strength and the truth here is that Chicago's secondary strength is not altogether strong.

As for Chicago's attacking ability, one can't become unduly exercised over an offense that gains one first down by rushing through a complete game.

1926 Football Captains

N. M. HORTON

Dartmouth
Hanover, N. H., Oct. 18.—Dartmouth's outlook for another winning football eleven this fall is bright. While the great "Swede" Oberlander, the country's premier passer of a year ago, is absent, Coach Hawley has several veterans back as well as a promising looking bunch of new material. Further, the B's; Green will have the famous Eddie Dooley in the fold again. Dooley was a star quarterback in 1924, but wasn't in school last year. He should do much to offset the loss of Oberlander; in fact, is a better all-around grizzer than the sensational "Swede."

This year's aggregation will be led by "Ace" Horton, famous full-back. Horton is a line plunger of no mean ability and can also skirt the ends. For a big fellow, he's fast and last fall was one of the best ground gainers on the team.

Horton is likewise strong on the defense, being a deadly tackler and a valuable man to have backing up the line. He's clever, too, at breaking up the foe's forward passing attack.

Football Notes

New Haven, Oct. 19.—Although Bruce Caldwell, star Yale back, will be out for the entire season because of a broken bone in his foot, half-back Noble and Ryan, tackle, will be in shape by tomorrow. In today's practice for the Brown game on Saturday the coaches endeavored to eradicate the team's fumbling which marred the Dartmouth contest.

Cambridge, Oct. 19.—Harvard's Varsity today will be drilled on defense against the Dartmouth style of running and passing. The coaches are confident of beating the Green on Saturday.

Hanover, N. H., Oct. 19.—Following a day of rest, the Dartmouth regulars will get to work in earnest today in preparation for the Harvard game. The coaches hope to improve the team's aerial attack.

Princeton, Oct. 19.—With crippled regulars returning to the lineup, Princeton is confident of defeating Lehigh on Saturday. Captain Davis is back, Ted Williams will report today, and quarterback Caulkins and Jake Slagle probably will be ready by Saturday.

Syracuse, Oct. 19.—Syracuse was downcast today at the loss of Harlan Carr, star fullback, who will be out for the remainder of the season because of an injured knee.

State College, Pa., Oct. 19.—Although soundly thrashed by Notre Dame, Penn State's Green team believes the experience has taught them valuable pointers which may be used to advantage against Syracuse on Saturday. Except for the ends, the players are in good shape.

Annapolis, Oct. 19.—Shapley, Navy star, will not play against Colgate next Saturday but the coaches are not worrying, in view of the team's fine showing against Princeton.

Hamilton, N. Y., Oct. 19.—A hard workout, featuring defense against the Navy's passing game, is scheduled for the Colgate squad today. Halfback Helwig is out for the season.

Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 19.—Penn is taking it easy this week, as Williams is not expected to furnish much opposition next Saturday.

TAKE-A-CHANCE STYLE BETTER THAN "SAFETY FIRST"—NEVERS

BY ERNIE NEVERS
All-America Fullback, 1925.
(Copyright, 1926, NEA Service, Inc.)

The "take-a-chance" style of play is far more interesting in football than "safety-first" methods.

That is one reason why I am glad the new rule relative to the forward pass will not, in my opinion, curb that style of play.

It would have been a mistake, I think, had the rule-makers worked out some provision that would have curtailed the use of football's most thrilling play.

On the other hand, I feel that the rule which now governs the making of a safety is a distinct improvement over the old provision.

The reason: It will do away with some of the "safety-first" methods that marred several big games last year.

NEVERS

I have in mind the "gift safety," a play often resorted to last year as a time-killer and, incidentally, to keep the opposition from getting the ball, thereby preventing it from starting an offensive.

The intentional pass is one of the most disliked plays in baseball. It is jeered every time it is put on.

The gift safety in football has been in as much disfavor as the intentional pass in baseball. However, I feel that the new wording of the rule relative to a safety has removed the value of such a play as a time-killer.

Well do I recall a game of last fall between two leading teams in the west. Going into the final quarter one of the teams enjoyed a 7-0 lead. The team that was trailing then started an offensive that carried the ball something like 80 yards, only to lose it on a fumble.

The eleven out in front, realizing it was being badly outplayed and there was a chance the opposition might go over for a touchdown at any time, resorted to the gift safety to offset the rival team's last ditch stand.

Getting possession of the ball the team in the lead made three intentional safeties. Under the rules of last year after the making of a safety, the team so doing retained possession of the ball and put it in play from the 20-yard line.

In this manner the team that was ahead retained possession of the ball and used up the few minutes remaining to play. Since the three safeties meant only six points, the game was 7-6.

No doubt there are some who call this smart football. Most football fans will, I am sure, take the opposite view. It hasn't a virtue to commend it with the exception of the protection it offers the lead gained by one of the teams.

The new rule governing the safety has taken all the punch out of the play. It may be called upon once as a safety-first method, but there its value ends temporarily at least.

Instead of giving the team that makes the safety the right to retain possession of the ball, it calls for the ball to be put in play by a kick from the 20-yard line of the team that has scored.

This change I regard as by far the most important one made by the rules committee. It is certain to help the game by retaining this element of uncertainty on which football thrives.

BASS MOVES UP ON HIS DEFEAT OF MEXICAN

New York, Oct. 19.—Benny Bass, of Philadelphia, was one of the leading challengers for the featherweight title today as a result of a ten round decision over Frankie Garcia, of Baltimore, at the Broadway Arena, Brooklyn, last night.

Bass failed to stop the tough Mexican, who lost a title bout to Louis (Kid) Kaplan some months ago, but the Philadelphia man almost every round and was the aggressor throughout. The bell saved Garcia in the fifth when Bass floored him for a short count with a right to the head.

SEVEN TO THREE GIVEN DARTMOUTH VS. HARVARD

Cambridge, Oct. 19.—Dartmouth is quoted as a seven to three favorite over Harvard, according to many favors posted this morning. These odds may shift, to five to three in favor of the Green before the game in the stadium Saturday.

Here's my smoke-platform

A JIMMY-PIPE with an ample bowl. A tobacco that is mild and mellow, yet not "mollycoddle," if you get me—and you do. You know what I mean... mild, yet with plenty of body to let you know you are smoking. A tobacco that smokes cool.

There's only one tobacco in the whole wide world that I know of which meets this platform. Its name is "Prince Albert" and I claim it really is the prince of smokes. More men smoke this tobacco than any other brand, which is important and likewise true.

A tobacco that is fragrant in the package, to whet the appetite, and equally fragrant as you smoke it. A tobacco that does not bite the tongue or parch the throat. A tobacco so wonderfully satisfying that you are kept busy smoking and reloading, all day long.

If you are still outside the fold of contented jimmy-pipers, buy a tidy tin of P. A. today. No matter how satisfied you appear to be with your present brand, try Prince Albert. I promise you a smoke-experience that will be new and delightfully different.

P. A. is sold everywhere in tidy red tins, pound and half-pound tin humidors, and pound crystal-glass humidors with sponge-moistener top. And always with every bit of bite and punch removed by the Prince Albert process.

PRINCE ALBERT

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

JUDITH MARTIN, new teacher at Pendleton University, makes friends with ERIC WATERS, sophisticated senior, MYRA ALDRICH, spoiled beauty, who is in love with Eric, and DR. PETER DORN, earnest young astronomy professor.

Myra turns against Judith when she learns that Eric has kissed Judith on a bet, before he was introduced to her.

Eric and Judith dine at a road-house which is raided. They escape in a rainstorm to a cabin where Judith finds a night's shelter, while Eric walks back to town.

Next morning Eric returns, with his car, bringing fresh clothing for Judith, which he has asked Myra to pack for him. She reproaches him for telling Myra of the escape.

The following night, when Judith returns from the movies with Will Wetherell, Will warns her to be careful of Myra.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XII

"WHAT do you mean?" asked Judith in a voice that attempted to be casual but shook, in spite of her. "I don't know what I have to fear from Myra."

Wetherell peered at her in the shadow of the campus trees. "She's fighting mad at you for snatching Eric, and she doesn't fight fair—in a case like this, any more than any other woman does."

Judith was silent. Wetherell rattled on. He had dropped the subject of Myra and returned to his favorite topic, himself.

"Who's that on your front steps?" he asked, as they turned in at the Stedway walk. A man and a girl were sitting on the porch steps. "Just us," called Myra's shrilly sweet voice. "And this is Dr. Dorn. I think you both know him. We've had the most gorgeous session at the observatory."

Judith had no chance to reply. Myra spoke a little too glibly. "Yes, Judith, you'd have loved it." She turned to the professor. "But you must excuse her. She must be very young. You see, she didn't come home last night."

"For a moment, nobody said anything, but Judith thought she heard Will whistle faintly. "Yes," said Dr. Dorn, "one never sleeps so well away from home." His voice was casual.

Wetherell put his hand on Judith's arm and led her up the steps and into the house.

"Wow!" he exclaimed, when the door had shut behind them. "What'd I tell you about that little fellow? Holy mackerel, that was a hot shot! Before his ribs, the professor, too! She was hitting at the Schommer today, that there were things she could tell, if she would! But I didn't think she'd go so far as that."

Judith spoke so casually. "What do you mean, Will?"

Wetherell was obviously trying to read her face. "Look here, Judy. You can't fool me. I know what she meant when she said you didn't come last night. Anybody but an unworshipful sap like Dorn would have caught it. Lucky for you he didn't."

"All right, Will," said Judith, coldly. "It depends on what kind of mind you have, whether Myra's speech was an insult or if I must prefer the mind of an unworshipful sap to one like yours. Better scrub it up a bit before you go to bed."

Wetherell leaned against the newel post, looking at her. "Now he smiled and held out his hand. "It's all right, Judy. You know I'm for you. But watch Myra Aldrich. This is no simple case of her tactics, with the men campaign to follow. Guess I'll toddle along now. My bedtime. Good night."

"Miss Martin—please—Mr. Mr."

She brushed her hair until it gleamed.

Waters, Ted 311," said a note on the Stedway telephone pad when Judith came home next day. "Eric's here."

She paused by the telephone, and after a moment of indecision called the number.

Eric's voice was debonair. "Hello, Jude. What say dinner at the Sigma Psi house tonight? Clean napkin night. Everybody asking guests."

"Across the hall a wavy mirror in the hallway showed Judith her reflection. Her face was smugged and there were drooping lines about her mouth.

She turned back to the phone. "I'll come, Eric. I've had enough of stress and strife this week, and I'd like to be gay for a little while."

"Right! You'll enjoy the Lover's Leap jump. All sentimental souls do. Better stick some exordia in your pocket for the hike."

Judith went upstairs with a lighter step. Near the top of the flight, she started back against the wall. Myra was standing against the railing above. She tossed her head when she saw Judith. "I'd like my weekend bag, please," she said sullenly.

Judith ushered her into her room. Myra stood stifled by the table while the bag was being dragged out of the closet. "When Eric asked me to pack your clothes, I couldn't find any bag of yours so I had to send mine," she continued.

Judith handed her the bag. "Thank you very much, Myra." She turned away to the dresser. It seemed to her that Myra lingered a moment by the table, on the verge of speaking. Judith heard her door slam.

It had been many days since Judith had had the time for a really elabor-

Eric led her into the living room. The hush that fell upon groups as he blue and copper glory passed was flattering.

A youngster in a flame-colored dress brought her heels abruptly to earth from the transports of a wild dance on the hearthstone. Judith recognized her as a member of her freshman English class. There were other co-eds encoined here and there about the room, in deep chairs and divans. They looked at Judith curiously when the dancer cast an embarrassed glance in her direction.

"Keep it up, Connie," called Eric. "Judy isn't a schoolmarm tonight. She's just a sweetheart of Sigma Psi." Judith blushed under the outpour of approval that went up from the men.

A familiar head seen over the back of a big armchair turned, and Judith saw Dr. Peter Dorn staring at her.

"There's your friend, the professor," said Eric, in a low tone. "He's an alumnus of our frat and faculty patron too. Peter hasn't sense enough to turn down duty invitations to."

"I don't think much of that kind of hospitality," Eric said Judith shortly.

The white-haired Dresden china chairperson of the Sigma Psi house came down the stairs with mincing steps, and the guests were brought one by one to be presented to her.

Judith was standing by the little old lady when the song sounded from the dining room. The president of the chapter gave the chairperson his arm and Judith followed with Eric to the larger of two long tables shining with silver and white linen.

The pale, miserable freshman who held Judith's chair pushed it against her knees too soon, so that she sat down suddenly, before the fraternity grace had been sung.

She giggled spontaneously and everyone else laughed with her, save Eric and the luckless freshman, whose glance looked for a long moment before the poor wretch escaped to answer a jangling telephone.

"Shame, Eric," whispered Judith. "He didn't mean to do it."

"Awkward fool!" rejoined Eric. "It's time he got some manners." Dr. Dorn, across the table, was listening, his eyes bent on Judith. She seemed almost visibly to avoid him. But Connie, the dancing freshman, was making up for Judith's neglect by embarrassing him with attentions.

"Connie's trying to vamp a passing grade in astronomy out of old Dorn," said Eric.

The chairperson's thin voice broke in. "Do tell us about the dean's plans, Professor Dorn. Isn't he going to follow up his coup of last night and clear out all the other unsavory places on campus?"

Judith looked up quickly, her breath catching in her throat. "The old woman went on. 'I have always felt that that roadhouse was the best of the greatest blots on the town. I am sure none of my boys ever I am sure. What a relief to know that the place is to be closed at last!' Her white head nodded uncautiously."

"The place did no good, I dare say," he began, when Will Wetherell came through the folding doors and made for a vacant place at the other table.

"Well, you're to welcome to our board. Hear you're going hiking with us after while." His voice carried to the corners of the room.

"Eve's sore as thunder, Old Brown close up the Moon, just when she was planning to bring her party there tonight with a feed."

(To Be Continued)

Wetherell has a habit of putting his foot in it. High adventure is in store for Judith on the moonlight hike.

Trip To Niagara Falls Thrills Local Tourists

(BY MARY TAYLOR)

Early October is one of the most delightful times in the whole year for a motor tour through the country. The writer returned Sunday night from a sight-seeing trip of more than a week, with Niagara Falls as the objective, and as our managing editor has asked her to touch on the high spots, she will endeavor to do so. Doubtless many Manchester people have been over the same route and others will look forward to making a similar trip.

We decided to go into New York state by way of the Bear Mountain road, going through Waterbury, Danbury and the beautiful southwestern portion of Connecticut to West Point, N. Y., where we passed over the Bear Mountain bridge and the scenic route connecting with the Storm King highway. This is a trip well worth making even if one plans to go on further. The scenery at this point of the Hudson river is unsurpassed. Proceeding toward the town of West Point, a fine view of the buildings and grounds at West Point, Albany was the only city we touched twice on our travels. It seemed to be the preference of each one of our party to make the cities before nightfall, and although other houses along the route to "drive in" we chose the hotel accommodations of the large centers.

Harvest Time The foliage of the trees was a beautiful sight and frost had not touched the flowers in many places. We motored through the great fruit producing country of New York, acres and acres of grape vines laden with the different varieties of grapes spread out on every side. In many vineyards they were busy harvesting the fruit. Apple orchards were almost as numerous and the trees were burdened down with the weight of red or green apples. Thrifty farmers seemed to be growing rows of strawberries or other berries between the rows of grapevines. Now and then we saw great fields of celery or cabbages being harvested.

The road for miles at one time followed the foothills of the Catskill Mountains. We passed through the town of Catskill and the scenery in this region as well as the Finger Lakes was beautiful.

We passed through Canajoharie where the Beechnut products are prepared, noticed WGY station at methods of road-building are not as good. For instance, between Toronto and Ganouque we encountered four detours. At the last point the road was practically impassable and at the hotel they told us the mayor felt so remorseful at the inconvenience of tourists, he pitched in and helped himself to an effort to improve conditions. They evidently attempt too long stretches of road construction and do not build them half the width at a time as is the custom here.

At the Falls Buffalo is a very large, flourishing city. We did not go over the Erie but plainly heard the whistles of the boats on its waters. We tarried longer at Niagara Falls naturally than at any other place. The city is growing rapidly but it is not particularly interesting, and it also is not so modern as the Americans are not so modern as the Canadians. The great natural attractions of the falls as our Canadian neighbors, who have erected wonderful administration buildings, pavilions and power stations in Victoria Park and Queenstown Heights, which is just over the bridge from the town of Niagara Falls.

I will not attempt a description of the Falls. No one can have any conception of the grandeur of this sight—until they have seen it for themselves, and even looking at them from above one can hardly realize their height and width. Fortunately we were able to cruise around at the foot of the falls in the little steamer, "Maid of the Mist" or make the trip to the "Cave of the Winds." An elevator takes us now to the board walk leading to the latter, and although it was nearly the middle of October and cold we donned the suits provided and made the trip. We were shown pictures of the queen of the Belgians and other world celebrities who had taken it.

They very much enjoyed Queen Marie would visit the Falls and take the trip to the Cave of the Winds. Well, it might be all right on an August day, but we doubt very much if Marie, good sport for herself, will risk her health just to be able to say she did it.

The great sight by day is to see the rainbow over the falls when the sun is shining and by night the power illumination. Only within the last year or two have visitors to the falls been able to see them illuminated by night, and nearly everybody going there remains over night to see this gorgeous spectacle. It is accomplished by many colored, high-powered lights turned on from the Canadian power house. The installation of these tremendous searchlights of different colors on both the American and Horseshoe Falls is a magnificent sight and one no tourist should miss. For several hours each evening, summer and winter, the power of Niagara itself makes this possible. The colors are vivid and varied, ranging from the pure white light to deep violet and cerise. Very beautiful indeed, one time was secured by all green and white. It baffles description. Nothing like it is attempted anywhere.

In Canada. Crossing over from the American side we found little difference

The WOMAN'S DAY by Allene Sumner

The average college girl is 26 before she has her first baby, we are told. This in startling contrast to the average non-college girl's age of 21 when she has her first baby. Deans of coeds explain that after preparing herself for a "career," most college girls are reluctant to enter matrimony until "the career bug" has run its course.

The alumnae secretary of a large mid-western university says that less than 5 per cent of her graduates of the past 10 years have married within a year of graduation. Most of them go two, three and four years. Many of course, but not the majority, never marry at all.

Few statistics released in recent years carry so much food for thought as these. Dozens of old social questions blend herin. The old question of a mother's youth. Both men of medicine and social science once said that a young mother was best for a child, and that many years between a mother's and child's ages were to be deplored.

Today we do not swallow this old edict at our gulp, but stop to ask whether a mother's youth, "career" may not mean more to a child born to her at 26 than a mother married at 20 or so, unacquainted with the working world, constantly comparing its joys with the lot to the disadvantage of the latter, and wishing that "I was out of it all."

"If I had married at 22, the minute I stepped out of school," a married friend said to me not long ago, "I would have made a miserable wife and mother. I would have known its lacks and faults, and some folks who think their lot is drab and stifling compared to life 'outside the home.' I would have grown bitter at Bill for keeping me from my art work."

"Now that I'm 28 and have tasted this 'career business' to the full, I know its lacks and faults, and I have some basis of comparison for my home life. I may be 29 before I am a mother, but I know I'll be a better mother than the whining dissatisfied one I would have been at 23."

There's another question, too, in these interesting figures. It means the natural supremacy in numbers of the younger and untrained woman's child. With this non-college mother's five year start on her college sister, she will probably raise four children to the other's one. Some folks prate about the college girl falling down on the job, not contributing fully to the race, etc. The question is, of course, whether or not her output will be one of equality rather than quantity, or vice versa. Maybe so, maybe not!

What are girls doing in these "career" years, is a pertinent query answered by a questionnaire submitted to girls of this same mid-western college. Teaching comes first, then liberal art work in some form, social work library, home economics, business, medicine and law.

Not wasted years in wifehood and motherhood preparation, surely, though many men in picking wives still insist that "the less they know, the better wives they make," and who ignore the capable "career woman" for a weak-pated gold digger!

Nightingales Or Sparrows? By Olive Roberts Barton

Mr. Edward Bok, former editor of the "Ladies Home Journal," writes that he has been trying to propagate the English nightingale in America.

His efforts to obtain specimens of this rare little singer met with little enthusiasm at first in England, probably because the title looked so impossible—the nightingale have a decided mind of their own about living quarters and refusing to dwell in any but select counties of its own native land. No doubt the bird-lovers of England, and all Englishmen are bird-lovers, felt the futility of Mr. Bok's attempt, the nightingale being so single minded about its habitation.

But finally, through perseverance and untold patience, he succeeded in obtaining and he found himself bound with eight beautiful specimens of the birds on board. Up until the time of their arrival in this country the tiny visitors might have been royalty. To quote Mr. Bok, "tenderly and lovingly the four crates were carried to the dock by the captain, purser, head-steward, engineer, and butcher of the boat." The birds had a cabin to themselves on an English liner.

The nightingales were to be sent by express to Florida where special quarters had been provided for them. They were taken to the express office, everything promised for their comfort and safety on the trip south—the express official guaranteed attention and care. The crates arrived after four days and nights on the road, upside down, five birds dead of hunger and thirst, and three dying.

The second attempt was more successful—this time the two specimens co-operating. Six specimens were secured and the Seaboard Air Line placed the birds in a private dining room and had them in the Flamingo State in thirty hours, where they are now happily thriving.

The nightingale is a plain little brown bird with no pretense to style. The men on the express car may have thought them sparrows, but even so, it is a revelation. The attitude of at least some of our American citizens toward birds.

I believe it starts with the toy gun and "gun-sling." School aviarists, that depend on the children for attention and care, might foster a feeling of love and respect for birds that seems not to be born in us.

It's not so very many years ago when, if a girl had a best dress, a neat everyday dress, a nice coat, a hat or so, everyday shoes, some dressier shoes, a couple of pairs of silk stockings, a pair of gloves, and a nice handbag, well, maybe a string or so of beads, she was all set to illustrate an ad called "The well-dressed woman."

Once upon a time, maybe, bat-to-day—well, I went shopping today on my noon hour. Choppers full of bracelets and earrings and necklaces and pins and rings of grotto blue, powder amethyst, vermillion, carnelian, jade, and saffers as well as a pair of diamond earrings, one that she just couldn't think of being well-dressed without a complete set including ring, necklace, earrings, bracelet and brooch to harmonize or contrast with every costume. I watched a dozen girls who weekly wages averaged $32.50 buy their set at least $11.50, poor!

Good Nature and Good Health

OBSERVE CHILD FOR MENTAL SIGNS THAT SPELL DANGER

BY DR. MORRIS FISHEIN

Editor Journal of the American Medical Association and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

Children are not advanced these days that it is rather difficult even for an intelligent parent to tell whether his own child is conducting itself in the manner which has previously been described as normal.

The child of parents of substantial means is so fully cultured from the musical, literary and social points of view that its behavior may be largely artificial.

Psychoanalysts, particularly the amateurs in this field, have tried to read into every childish action some concealed or subconscious control, sometimes of a sexual nature.

Indeed, as Dr. Edward A. Strecker, professor of nervous and mental diseases in Jefferson medical college, points out, a noted specialist in diseases of the mind compared the behavior at play of a group of children who were in a mental hospital because of behavior disorders with the conduct of children of Philadelphia elite who played in Rittenhouse Square and awarded the more favorable opinion to those in the mental hospital.

Factors in Mental Health Dr. Strecker has analyzed the factors that constitute the mental health of a child. The environment pass through the questioning phase, and apparently cannot be stimulated to want to know, is probably not well balanced in his mind.

Curiosity about sex, and even a study of the sex organs, is not an abnormal phenomenon. The absence of any sex interest is a dangerous sign, particularly so, because of the fundamental character of sex in relation to life, may become excessive and concentrated and thus pass out of the bounds of reason. This, however, is most often due not to the child but to its environment.

Love of Power Among other factors on which Dr. Strecker lays special emphasis is the love of power, which normal children exercise, showing that they like to hold the center of the stage.

There are, of course, times when the child cannot have its own way, and the adjustment between the child and his parents in this matter is sometimes responsible for anti-social conduct in later life.

Savagery, romancing and the telling of fantastic stories are normal stages in childhood development. Dr. Strecker regards romancing as evidence that the imagination is beginning to grow and that it must not be regarded as proof of mental ill health unless it persists long beyond the usual period.

Finally, the capacity to learn must be considered important. Absolute mental defect is hopeless and is evidence of a failure of the brain to grow.

The life of the child, like that of the adult, has constantly become more complex and more subject to all sorts of features in its surroundings that are difficult to control.

The fact that it is able to adjust itself to these exceedingly complicated demands is in itself evidence of the child's normality.

THE TINYMITES BY HAL COCHRAN

(READ THE STORY, THEN COLOR THE PICTURE)

Once more the night was drawing near, so Coppy shouted, "Have no fear. There are no rabbits in this cave. I've chased the lone one out." And then the Tinymites all cried, "Oh gee, the cave is dark inside." It sure made Coppy pretty mad to hear them fuss and pout. "Why, dark won't hurt you," he replied. "I've looked around the whole inside, and nothing's there but grass and weeds with which we'll make our beds." So, thus assured, each Tinymite forgot about his foolish fright. In fact they all were glad to have a place to rest their heads. They all crawled in and moved around on hands and knees upon the ground. Then Scouty stopped and made a fuss. "Say Coppy, you are fooling us. When you were here before I'll bet you must have had a light."

COUNTRY CLUB MEMBERS PLAN HARVEST SUPPER

Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. Osgury Head Committee of Arrangements.

Country Club members are looking forward to the next monthly supper and dance which will take place at the clubhouse, Thursday evening, October 28. Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. Osgury will head the committee making arrangements for the evening. At this time of the year a harvest supper seems particularly appropriate and they have therefore engaged Caterer Osgury to provide such a meal, to include such substantial dishes as baked ham, baked beans—a regular harvest menu, which for variety will be served in cafeteria style.

The supper will be ready at 7 o'clock and it is suggested that members who do not care to remain for the dancing, come and enjoy the meal. To enable Mr. Osgury to make plans, it is essential that cards be returned and reservations made as promptly as possible.

Dancing will begin at 8 p. m. and continue until midnight. Ed. Smith's Hartford orchestra will provide the music as on previous occasions.

RADIO RECEPTION ON CENTER ST. BAD NOW

Somewhere in the vicinity of Center street, between Pine street and Lilac street there is a regenerative radio set that is practically killing reception for enthusiasts in the immediate neighborhood.

Several owners of sets who live in that section say that the trouble is so bad that all reception is spoiled. They have asked everyone in the nearby houses to help remedy the trouble but it is keeping up. They explain that the noise sounds like someone continually turning the dials.

They will gladly help any newcomers in the radio family to tune in for stations if they will only say the word.

LAUREL CLUB PLANS TO HOLD A DANCE

Manchester's Junior Basketball Champs Trying to Raise Funds.

The Laurel A. C., Manchester's junior basketball champion combination, will conduct its first annual public dance in Cheney hall, on Thursday evening. The attraction will be the famous Worthy Hills orchestra of Hartford which has been keeping engagements at various shore resorts in Massachusetts this past summer.

The Laurels have been organized several years as an amateur organization, playing preliminary games to the major teams in Manchester. They have been forced to travel to other towns for return games at their own expense many times and their guarantees from other teams have been hardly sufficient to pay even the costs of travel.

The purpose of this dance will be to raise money with which to carry on their season during the winter. New uniforms will be bought and the remainder will be turned into the treasury to apply on expenses incurred by traveling.

Tickets have been sent out to Hartford, Willimantic and Rockville and a good sale has been reported in those cities. The members of the club have been selling tickets energetically for the past week and expect a good crowd.

PROCRASTINATION

Isn't it peculiar why people will put off ordering coal until the last minute when they could just as well have their bins filled before the cold weather arrives?

It's human nature to put off until tomorrow what can be done today, but every sudden cold snap keeps us busy writing orders, each order stating "must be delivered at once."

All of which leads us to ask, have you ordered your winter supply of coal?

BATTLE NOT A WAR.
 The appearance of advertisements slashing prices on shoe repairing led to the assumption that there was a war on among local cobblers but inquiries developed the fact that it is only a battle between cobblers of one nationality.

"The rest of us are just sitting on the sidelines watching which side will win," one local cobbler said. "We will keep up the prices that is, most of us will, because we must make some kind of a profit so as to make a living."
