

QUISH TO SEEK DEPUTY JOB IF GEO. GABB WINS

Former Policeman Working Hard for Democrat Sheriff Nominee; Said to Have Promise of Bissell's Job.

Frank J. Quish, former local policeman, and now a plumbing contractor, is making a personal canvass in the interests of George H. Gabb, Democratic nominee for the office of High Sheriff of Hartford county. This does not seem irregular since Quish was recently made chairman of the Democratic town committee.

But, upon investigation there seems to be more behind Quish's work than his mere interest in his party.

Gabb, through reasons outside politics, is popular in Manchester, and has always run ahead of his ticket here. In the last election for the sheriff's office, Gabb was a little over 500 votes behind Sheriff Edward Dewey, the present incumbent. Manchester helped out down Dewey's lead.

Wants to Be Deputy.

Knowing Gabb's popularity here, the local Democrats led by their new chairman, Frank J. Quish, are planning on making Gabb's vote here even bigger this year. Quish himself wants to be Deputy Sheriff for this town. He feels that by getting out a big vote in Manchester for Gabb, he has a chance that Dewey can be beaten.

It was understood by many Manchester Republicans, who are favorable to Gabb, that the office of Deputy Sheriff here would remain as it is at present if the Democrat won over Sheriff Dewey. The Republican town committee will work, however, on Tuesday to get out a big vote for the straight Republican ticket. If Deputy Sheriff Herbert M. Bissell's head is to be cut off if Gabb wins, the vote here will change election day. That much is certain.

Spoke Here Friday.

Last Friday night Candidate Gabb addressed a Democratic rally here. He did not attack Republican candidates or policies. He merely played the good game of politics considering the fact that he was in a strong Republican town. Quish and some of the younger members of the new Democratic town committee are said to have secured a promise from George Gabb that Quish will be the Deputy Sheriff if the Democrat wins.

Quish hasn't said so in so many words, but he's out working, and it doesn't seem probable that he is working for the love of the party alone. Gabb, knowing his politics pretty well down here, has had here Friday, just hasn't anything to say on the question. He doesn't believe in crossing bridges until he reaches them, perhaps. But, most anyone who has been solicited by Quish in this campaign has a pretty strong hunch that Gabb has had the local Democrats what he'll do if he does get across the bridge.

May Bring 'Em Out.

Perhaps a bigger vote will be polled on Tuesday as a result of this effort to put George Gabb across in Manchester. At any rate it's the first thing that's happened so far to give any spirit to the election as far as Manchester is concerned. The Republican town committee is threatening to get out a big vote whether there is interest or not, and if the Democrats induce enough to become interested in the Gabb-Dewey contest that record vote that is talked about may be cast after all.

FINE CLOTHES AND BEAUTY

A fashion model's own story of her work and play in the great New York women's clothing market will appear in an exclusive series beginning in this paper soon. It is an intimate story of personal experience, written by Marian Hale, feature writer for NEA Service and The Herald. The author made sure of her facts by two weeks' actual work as a model.

In these stories you will meet Dolly, ex-chorus girl, who advises:

"Be broadminded, dearie. Don't slap 'em until you have to."

You will meet Salesman Harry, sleek sheik who carries on a dozen little love affairs simultaneously.

You will meet the O. T. B. (out of town buyer) who takes his favorite model on a party and thereafter buys every gown she wears.

Cleanest City, Says New York Mayor Jimmy

New York, Oct. 26.—New York wicked?
No! It's the finest, cleanest city in the world and if there is any wickedness it's brought here by "visiting firemen."
Nearly three thousand Methodists, in convention here, had the word of Mayor "Jimmy" Walker for this today.
"This city has not been treated fairly by the visiting firemen," said the mayor, addressing the convention. "They gather here and, returning home with palmed hands and blood-shot eyes, tell everyone what a filthy hole it is."

SLACKER VOTER HERE ATTACKED

Prominent Men and Women Citizens Dodge Responsibility, Charge.

For the past three years Willard B. Rogers, local police commissioner, and former selectman and representative, has been studying the checked voting lists after every primary and election. He has kept a very accurate accounting of men and women, prominent in the social and industrial life of Manchester, who do NOT vote.

The following letter from Mr. Rogers aptly voices his opinions. Editor, The Herald:

Last night, the Republican town committee met to make plans to get the vote out on election day, November 2. And on November 2, Mrs. Henry Nettleton, Mrs. Robert J. Smith, Mrs. James Shearer, Miss Hazel Trotter and a number of other loyal workers will be on the job from morning until late at night—doing what's called "checking voters" to extend the light of franchise.

And this brings me to another phase of our social life. In Manchester, we have a Chamber of Commerce, a Manchester Educational club, the Kiwanis club, the Manchester Community club, the League of Women Voters, the Manchester Improvement association, the Mothers' club, and many other organizations all of which are supposed to have as their reason for existence the betterment of social conditions and particularly the education of those who are to govern the boys and girls of today or the citizens of tomorrow.

And then we have the business men, many of whom have urged "Bob" Treat and his associates on the board of selectmen to accept an independent term—the town needs just such men as you."

Some of these business men are quite free with suggestions as to how the town should be run. And some of them are free with criticisms, generally about matters about which they know nothing.

How many of these so-called "good citizens" were at the recent annual town meeting to back up the officials of the town? There was a stake at that meeting the school appropriation, the Child Welfare appropriation, the Board of Health appropriation, the police appropriation and the parks appropriation, each of which is a most important factor in the social life of any town.

But, these leading merchants were absent, the women of the Educational club were absent, many of the Kiwanians were absent, most

FIND BOGEY IN SUPREME COURT OUSTER RULING

Politicians Talk of Constitu- tion Change to Keep Presi- dent from Kicking Out Office Holders.

Washington, Oct. 26.—Far-reaching powers to remove federal officials at will, and without cause, if he desires, were lodged with the President as a result of the Supreme Court's decision in the Myers case.

The court held that the President could remove appointees without consent of the Senate, even though the Senate had previously consented to the appointment.

Some Washington constitutional lawyers said that the decision opened the way for re-establishment of a widespread "spoils system" under which appointees of political faith opposite from the President could be removed at will.

There was talk in Washington today of a move to wipe out this power through a constitutional amendment.

In practice, at least, the President has had the power in the matter of removal, that is, a White House request for a resignation usually has been accepted as an ultimatum and hurriedly complied with. But there have been notable exceptions.

The most recent was that of William B. Hanes, now Democratic senatorial candidate in Oregon. For months, Hanes refused to heed President Coolidge's demand for a resignation.

House-Cleaning Invitations.

Justice McReynolds, who with Justices Brandeis and Holmes, dissented, intimated in his opinion that the decision virtually constituted an invitation to an incoming President to clean house. He indicated that the President would have absolute power over the personnel to be selected to head the various commissions, such as the Interstate Commerce Commission, Federal Trade Commission, Shipping Board, Tariff Commission, Federal Farm Loan Board, Comptroller-General, etc. The same would apply to a cabinet.

Reluctance by Congress to create new boards and commissions with broad powers was seen as a possible result of the court's construction of the constitution.

His Bureaucracy.

The court's view was received with satisfaction by many who declare it will answer the criticism that the independent boards and commissions have constituted a bureaucracy with no direct responsibility to the people.

The court's power now secured to the President is regarded in other quarters as making possible the building up of the greatest political machine in the history of the country, and of crushing all independence of thought and action of the tribunals affected.

Eastman at 73 Realizes Dream of His Boyhood

Made Millions, Did Every- thing Else But Never Hunt- ed Big Game Till He Was Old—Tells About It.

Rochester, N. Y., Oct. 26.—"When I sailed for Africa last March, my friends called me an old fool. Look at me now."

As a study in rejuvenation, George Eastman, 73-year-old millionaire camera manufacturer just back from eight months of stalking big game, certainly is worth inspection.

"I haven't had a sick day since I left. I've slept like a baby, eaten like a safari porter, and kept up with the rest as long as they wanted to keep going."

"I've lost 28 pounds—from the right places—and I'm just as steady with a gun as I've ever had need to be. (Eastman has the record of killing two antelope with one shot.) While our husky porters were dying of malaria, I was speculating on how healthy I could be in a really good climate."

"No, I don't unconditionally recommend a hunting trip into British East Africa as a cure-all for the ailments of the average 70-year-old physique. Those Secret Longings."

"But what I do recommend is that a man, when he gets to the point where his business can run itself, should do the things that he always has longed to do."

Sixty years ago, Eastman was an errand boy, and dreamed of distant lands.

G. O. P. HERE PLANS TO GET OUT VOTES Thorough Canvass of Town to Be Made, Election Day Next Tuesday.

At the meeting of the Republican Town Committee held last night at the School Street Recreation Center plans were made for a thorough canvass of the voters of the town in an effort to get out a large vote at the state election next Tuesday.

Sub-committees were named to carry out the plans of the committee. Workers will be at the polls from the time they open until closing. At the state election polls are open from six o'clock in the morning until six in the evening.

SIMPSON FIRED OUT OF GRAND JURY SESSION

'Peace' Deal Blows Up When Hall-Mills Prosecutor In- trudes Into Secret Meet- ing of Jurors.

Somerville, N. J., Oct. 26.—The breach between Senator Alexander Simpson, special prosecutor in the Hall-Mills murder case, and the Somerset County grand jury, widened today when Simpson was ordered out of the jury room at the session had been going on less than twenty minutes.

He left, accompanied by Irving Schwed, clerk of the grand jury, and County Prosecutor Francis L. Bergen. In telling reporters of the incident, he gathered during his short stay with the jurors, Simpson said:

"I think they might try to indict me. I told them that with me they could indict Governor Moore, who appointed me, the attorney-general, whom I represent, and Supreme Court Justice Charles W. Parker."

After Peace Talk.

The sudden departure of Simpson came as a surprise, since only last night Foreman W. Percival Snyder of the grand jury issued a statement which indicated that the differences between the prosecutor and the jurors had been smoothed over.

The trouble first started when at the last session Simpson announced that he would not present further evidence until Thursday, as certain witnesses would not be available until then. The foreman threatened to continue the investigation whether Simpson appeared with witnesses or not.

The special prosecutor replied with a suggestion that he might be forced to take the case to the grand jury of some other county. There the matter stood, until last night, when Snyder stated that the jury today would consider whatever case was offered.

The evidence which Simpson hopes to present is in connection with alleged accessories to the murders of the grand jury members of the grand jury were present at today's session.

"They thought they would meet to embarrass me and consider the case without any evidence," Simpson told reporters. "I went in there and left them in an embarrassing position."

"I have been asked to inform you that you are not wanted any more," he said to the special prosecutor.

"Fine," said Simpson, "I'll take the next train."

Two of those against whom Simpson is seeking indictment as accessories are Felix Di Martino, private detective, and Mrs. Marna Clark. Di Martino conducted an investigation for Mrs. Frances Stevens Hall, widow of the murdered Rev. Edward W. Hall, who is under indictment charged with the murder of her husband and Mrs. Eleanor Mills.

Mrs. Hall and her brothers go on trial next week.

Washington Is All Set for a Hard Winter

Washington, Oct. 26.—White House caretakers today began taking in the bay trees, which, through the spring, summer and early fall, have decorated the east and west wings of the Executive Mansion. They are to be replaced by small cedars which, planted in tubs, will stand guard like sentinels through the cold, gray weeks of winter.

At the same time janitors of the State, War and Navy buildings were collecting truckloads of electric fans from the offices in that structure for storage until they are needed again next spring.

The steam heat already has been turned on at the State, War and Navy power plant which also serves the White House. It is expected that cracking in the offices of those officials who rank high enough to rate open fireplaces.

FOURTH OF STATE FREE FROM MOTHS

Gypsy Pest Cleared Out of One County and Many Towns in Others.

New Haven, Oct. 26.—The Gypsy moth situation in Connecticut is so relieved that Salisbury, Canaan, North Canaan, Norfolk, Cornwall, Cheshire and Wallingford are freed from quarantine for the first time since July 20, 1924, according to an "immediate information" bulletin issued here today by the State Agricultural Experiment Station through Dr. W. E. Britton, state entomologist.

About one-fourth the state is now free of Gypsy moths, according to the bulletin, which shows that all of Fairfield county and more than half of Litchfield and New Haven counties have been relieved of the pest.

The area generally infested by the moth is the entire district of Windham county, ten northern towns in Tolland county, and five towns east of the Connecticut river in Hartford county.

Slightly infested sections are the entire areas of New London, Middlesex counties and seven towns in New Haven, three in Tolland, twenty-four in Hartford and ten in Litchfield counties.

Even stone and quarry products from these towns must be inspected before it can be shipped to another district for use. The other banned products being Christmas greens and decorations, nursery stock and forest products of all sorts except lumber that has not been piled or stored outdoors after it has been worked up from the original state.

STATE LINE MARKER BLOCKS GAS STATION

So Owner of Land Must Get O. K. of Two Governors to Pull It Down.

Hartford, Oct. 26.—The growth of the gasoline filling station business now threatens to disturb the boundaries between Connecticut and Massachusetts. Peter O'Galey of Enfield, owns a piece of land, half of which is in this state and half in Massachusetts, in the town of Enfield and Longmeadow. He desires to erect a gas station on the land, but the site he has chosen is now occupied by a boundary division marker. He appealed today to Frank W. Burr, state general commissioner for permission to move the monument or to level it to the ground. Mr. Burr advised that the consent of the governors of both states must be received before the markers can be removed. The matter has been put before Gov. Trumbull.

PLAN TO STOP FLOW OF CONNECTICUT BEER

U. S. Sleuths, Now in Water- bury, to Visit Every Town in the State.

Waterbury, Oct. 26.—A complete investigation of every brewery, bottling plant and place of business where beer is sold is to be made throughout Connecticut. It was learned here today, by a huge squad of out-of-state federal forces who are now centered on the former Heilmann Brewery Company's plant here. Plans for the general round-up were revealed here today when some of the federal men, who had been working here and left town, returned with new orders.

MARIE'S TOUR IS LIKELY TO BE CUT SHORT

Queen's Recall Probable If Not Already Sent; Health Worry Is by Way of an Alibi.

New York, Oct. 26.—A new and unhappy problem hovered over the courtesy special ten-car train, "Royal Rumanian," of the Balkan Queen Marie, as it sped northward, reaching Buffalo last night.

Has she been ordered to return to Rumania by her elderly husband, King Ferdinand? If she has been will she obey? And in either case, what is the reason? Will her visit be cut off altogether, or, simplified and shortened?

An apparent authoritative despatch from Bucharest yesterday said her visit would be curtailed and her return to the country of which she is Queen, but not, incidentally, by machinery. A subsequent bulletin said the reason for the abrupt ending of her visit to this country would be on the "advice of Her Majesty's physicians, who had pronounced her suffering from grip, and she reported that the information was from an official communique.

Not Surprising.

One newspaper's special correspondent on the Continent had no knowledge of such a communique, but inclined to believe that some such thing is to be expected.

By some in this city, who appeared to speak with authority, however, it was said the dispatch did not cause great surprise. They stated the belief that the Queen will not finish the elaborate tour to and from the Pacific Coast on which she started from this city early yesterday morning, her shaded, silent train bidden farewell in the Grand Central station by a handful of police, Secret Service men and reporters.

Yesterday the London Observer printed a report quoting sources in Bucharest. That despatch gave as the reason for the King's perturbation a fear that the Queen's trip was injuring the dignity of the dynasty.

"Bolshevist Propaganda."

Kadu Djuvara, Charge d'Affaires for Rumania in this country, laughed when he was told of the report. He said he was in personal possession of all cablegrams from Bucharest to the Queen and that none even suggested her return.

"I showed it to the Queen," he said, "and she laughed. 'It is ridiculous; Bolshevist propaganda.'"

From a correspondent aboard the Royal Rumanian, then at Syracuse and bound westward, came last evening a despatch, giving the "spokesman" for the Queen, who said she had no message from King Ferdinand asking her to curtail her trip and refused to believe there had been such a communique.

In this city those who professed to have information on the subject appeared to see in the growing emphasis upon the delicacy of the Queen's health the beginning of a diplomatic structure on which her visit might be terminated without undue embarrassment to either side.

No Basis for 'Grip'

So far as the only physician known to have diagnosed or treated her while she was here is connected, there is no basis for the Bucharest despatch that she had been pronounced to be suffering from the grip."

"Her Majesty," said Dr. Arthur B. Duval, of No. 4 East 56th Street, who treated her a number of times here, "has no symptoms of grip. I saw her last night just before she went to the Metropolitan Opera House. She was much improved. She never had more than a throat irritation and a cough. I have had no communication direct or indirect with King Ferdinand or others in Bucharest. On the contrary, I told Her Majesty last night there was no reason she should not fulfill her program."

In spite of this, there was added to her official entourage aboard the special train, a special nurse, Miss Adeline Young of Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore. And in the face of the apparent anxiety for the Queen's health, she left the train in a drenching rain at Garrison, N. Y., to cross the Hudson, tramp half a mile through wet grass, wearing rubbers, and stood on a blanket reviewing the West Point cadets.

MARINES AT NEW HAVEN AS GUARDS FOR MAILS

New Haven, Oct. 26.—New Haven's quota of Marines to guard the United States mails in transit, arrived here today for an indefinite stay. The Marines are housed in a hotel and have their own car ready for instant call. They will be used to guard valuable consignments from the main post office here, where stamps for all the offices in the state are distributed. Similar details of Marines are expected to be assigned to other cities in the state.

TOLEDO'S MANIC SLAYER AT WORK

Kills School Teacher, Bring- ing Total of Assaults to 10, Three Murders.

Toledo, Oct. 26.—The manic slinger has struck here again, his victim this time being Miss Lily Crox, 28, a school teacher, whose battered and criminally assaulted body was found in an angle of the Washington Public school building at 1:30 this morning.

Every peace officer in Toledo has been put on the trail of the fiend already held responsible for clubbing and attacking seven other women, three of whom he killed.

Miss Crox was attacked upon her return from a hearing at the Toledo University. The left side of her head was crushed, as if from three or four strokes of a club or bar. Her clothing was torn from her body.

Police Officer Hendler declared that the evidence indicated it was the crime of an insane person.

The murder marks the third visitation of the fiend, who first terrorized the community here last November. For two weeks the department continued. His crimes finally were stopped when 1,000 extra police men formed a vigilance committee and patrolled the streets day and night.

In January, this year, the clubber struck again. He swooped from a dark recess upon a lone woman clubbing her into insensibility and assaulting her.

His second visit was apparently ended when police rounded up all persons who had been discharged from insane institutions as having been cured. These were reincarcerated.

HOUDINI IN CRITICAL STATE AFTER SURGERY

Detroit, Oct. 26.—Harry Houdini, the magician, was reported today "resting comfortably," but still in a critical condition in Grace hospital where he was operated upon yesterday following a serious attack of appendicitis.

The physicians said the magician's condition today was much better than they anticipated following the operation yesterday, when they had almost no hope of his recovery.

Houdini is the son of Rev. Dr. Mayer S. Weiss, of Milwaukee. He adopted the name "Houdini" when he first appeared on the stage more than thirty years ago. He is fifty-two years old.

Rome, Oct. 26.—Pope Pius' apparent intention that his niece, the Countess Maria Ratti, who was married in Milan on Saturday to Marquis Persigoglio, shall be a good and efficient wife and mother. The Holy Father today presented to his only four nieces, each containing twenty-five volumes dealing with the duties of a wife and mother.

Radio Doomed to Trouble for Years From Cycle of Sunspots

Washington, Oct. 26.—Unless science can conquer sun spots, the radio public is in for several years of intermittent gloom and misery.

This was the opinion today of Dr. J. H. Dellinger, chief of the radio laboratory of the Bureau of Standards, who has conducted an exhaustive survey into the reception conditions.

"Sun spots go in cycles of eleven years," Dellinger said.

"The sun is now bombarding the earth with electrical discharges as the result of the approach of the maximum spot period. This bombardment is the cause of difficulty experienced by radio listeners in reception from distant stations."

BLAMED FOR DEATH

Unusual Accident at Willimantic Filling Station Responsible.

Considerable local interest has been aroused over the case of Leroy Roberts, of Willimantic, who was in court yesterday charged with a violation of the motor vehicle law in filling the tank of a motorcycle while the motor was running.

Roberts, it will be recalled formerly conducted a garage at Manchester Green and was very well known about town. Only recently Roberts sold out his business at Manchester Green and bought a filling station in Willimantic.

The case against Roberts is unusual and pathetic since a man lost his life. A Willimantic youth drove up to the filling station to have his gas tank filled. He sat on the machine and kept the motor running while Roberts filled the tank.

The tank overflowed and saturated the man's clothing. An explosion followed and the Willimantic man was fatally burned. He was rushed to a hospital but died a few days later.

Case Continued. According to information obtained from Willimantic this morning, the case was indefinitely continued yesterday morning in the Willimantic police court by Judge Foss upon recommendation of Prosecuting Attorney Gaucher.

It is understood the coroner has not yet made known his finding and the case hinges on that. However, a time limit has been set for the hearing for next Monday at the latest, it was stated.

Phill's brothers are helping out with the Herald route until the injured youth will be able to be back on the job again.

BIBLICAL DRAMA TO BE PRESENTED

South Methodist Sunday School to Give "The Dream of Queen Esther."

The workers at the South Manchester Methodist Episcopal Sunday school are now ready to announce a few of the details regarding the very beautiful and unusual Biblical Drama which is to be presented at the church on November 10 and 11. The drama is entitled, "The Dream of Queen Esther," and is written by Walter Ben Hare, the author of more than one hundred plays. The play is very pleasingly written, and is a two hour and a quarter production. It tells the story of the choice of Esther as Queen, and leads up to the great dramatic scene of the saving of the Jewish race because of Esther's bravery.

Pretty Love Story A pretty love story is woven throughout the play, and the king and queen become favorites of the audience at once. Koosh, the comedy character, is the little servant in the palace, and keeps the audience happy with her funny sayings. A group of little children entertain with songs and games as they play about the house. Among the most effective scenes is the one picturing the dream in which the noble women of ancient Bible times appear to Esther and counsel her. An effective rose drill is given by the Persian rose maidens, who seek to win the love of the king by their beautiful songs and dances. Mrs. Arthur Lashinske, as the nightingale of Persia sings during the drill.

Three Acts The play is staged in three acts, including: Act I.—House of Mordecai in the city of Shushan; Act II.—In the Palace of the King; Act III.—Nine years later in the Palace of the King. The cast is as follows: King Ahasuerus of Persia..... Fred Rogers Mordecai, a captive Jew of Shushan..... William E. Keith Regal, the King's Chamberlain..... Eric Crawshaw Esther, a Jewish heroine..... Mrs. Hazel Taylor Anderson Meesha Zabeel, Esther's old nurse..... Miss Pauline Beebe Hanana, a little Jewish maid..... Miss Merle Shortt Koosh, a little Ethiopian slave-girl..... Miss Elsie Harrison Kazma Shimeel, the nightingale of Persia..... Mrs. A. Lashinske The Lady Ozona, a beautiful Shushan maid..... Mrs. E. B. Imman Jakosha, a languid Hly..... Miss Alice Benson The Princess Zuecca, a proud lady.....

He was a territorial commander in this country for the past 18 years, coming to the Eastern Territory from Chicago. He was second ranking officer to Commander Evangelist Booth, head of the work in this country. He had held the control of the work in Japan, New Zealand, Holland and South Africa, and was in the east for six years. Commissioner Estill's last appearance in this town was made on March 21 of this year when Mrs. Estill talked on the Salvation Army Relief work at the South Methodist church.

ELECTION DAY.

One week from today will be election day. A serious and important matter. A matter that will not at all bear evasion or careless dealing with.

Here in Connecticut it happens that there is hardly the possibility of a victory for the opposition—the Democratic party is without spirit, without effective leadership, without hope, while the Republican party is well organized, confident, full of the consciousness of achievement.

But Connecticut is not the whole of the United States, and this is a national election which we are about to take part in, even if there is no choice of a president to be made for two years more.

Connecticut Republicans face, not the comparatively easy and almost certain job of "carrying" the state, but of registering the biggest possible vote in endorsement of the party's achievements during the past two years.

It must be remembered that there are states where many thousands of voters who ought by all rights to be giving the sanction of their ballots to the policies of the Republican party are going to follow a course calculated to diminish quite seriously the numerical strength of the party.

Connecticut ought to turn in every Republican vote within her boundaries next Tuesday, even at the cost of real sacrifice to the voters and the workers. Because the one danger to be feared is not at all any chance of losing this state or any of its congressional districts, but that a diminished Republican majority in the party in the vote of the country as a whole would be bad business with relation to the contest in 1928 and to the conduct of congressional off-horses in the forthcoming sessions.

New England owes it to herself to serve notice of where she stands with respect to the Coolidge kind of Republicanism. Connecticut owes it to herself, to the rest of New England and to the National Republican organization, to produce the biggest vote and the most pronounced possible endorsement of her delegation in Congress that she has ever returned, presidential year or not.

LOOKING UP.

There has been a meeting of minds among the Democrats in this matter of what on earth to do about Bingham. In consequence there of a splendid scheme has been evolved. The idea is to get Jim Reed after him—Reed the Missouri giant-killer, the maker of mudballs for Democrats everywhere to have at Republican candidates for the Senate.

It is a weird tale that the Democrats have manufactured concerning Bingham. It appears that there is in Middletown a person named George H. Bragdon, a lawyer, called for the purposes of the committee a registered Republican, who had a yearning to become a lobbyist. This Bragdon told somebody that somebody told him that he could have the appointment if he would agree to prosecute only those persons whom Senator Bingham and State Central Committee-man W. S. Reynolds wanted prosecuted. Virtuously, the lawyer who would be a liquor spotter rejected this devilish proposition with scorn. And later, presumably despite the desperate opposition of Senator Bingham, he was appointed anyway, so there!

Whether Lawyer Bragdon charged a regular lawyer's fee for it or not is not disclosed, but manifestly at the urge of the Democrats he wrote to a Middletown newspaper setting forth the whole damnable plot of Bingham and the Connecticut bootleggers to keep him off the enforcement unit.

And the Democrats, thus provided with blasting proof of the senator's moral turpitude, have called on the hop-scotching Jim Reed to come to Connecticut and show up Bingham for the creature that he is!

That's the stuff! That's the good old eighteen-seventy-six variety of political slime-slinging! Now the campaign is beginning to look up. Now we're getting down to first principles.

Bingham mixing in with bootleg plots a shade below the grade of those attended to by constables and ward aldermen, is good. Perhaps Jim Reed can do something with it—and incidentally prove that Bingham burns cats alive for amusement, Sunday afternoon, and that he stole five of those sons of his from Gypsies!

EASTMAN.

No one with a drop of blood in his veins—real blood—can help feeling glad that George Eastman had his African hunting trip; and that is whether one knows Eastman as an individual or merely as a name on a camera. To spend a long life doing the thing that has to be done, and forever finding it impracticable if not impossible to do the things one has longed to do ever since childhood—and then at 73 to muster up spunk enough to go and do that long wanted thing, even though it be the hunting of great wild animals in the remote places where great wild animals abide—how splendidly better that belated realization is than to just give it all up without a real try, and go out of life lacking the one big experience, the longing for which has filled that life!

There are a great many people who wouldn't especially care to kill lions and rhinoceri and warthogs and zebras and such things, even though they were to come around into the back yard and insist on being killed, let alone traveling ten thousand miles and roughing it through African jungles and over African veldt to find them. We wouldn't. We should be scared and bored and wouldn't enjoy it at all. But just the same it is our belief that if a man dreams of big game hunting there ought to come a day when he shall go a-hunting big game. And if he dreams of getting a farm and raising white beans for market he ought to sooner or later get him a farm and raise white beans. Even if these things interfere to a quite injurious extent with the things he has been doing all his life—making money, for instance; or perhaps only making a living.

So far as we know we only go this road once. It makes a sad finish to realize, at its end, that we can never go back and pick the flowers that grew all along the way, that we longed to pick, and that we didn't find time to gather.

WITH THE TIMES.

A great deal of water has run under the bridges since Congress, in 1876, passed an act providing in effect that the President could remove from office postmasters of the first, second and third class only by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, thus substantially amending the constitutional provision that appointments should be made with Senate approval.

If the right of Congress to thus restrict the presidential power of removal of executive department officials had been put to the test of a supreme court decision in those days the law would likely enough have been sustained. It has never passed on, however, until now, when by a six to three vote the highest tribunal approves the act of President Wilson in removing a postmaster without the Senate's consent, thus putting at rest a question of conflict that has endured for half a century.

It has become increasingly evident with the passage of time that the Senate of the United States, while utterly resentful of any encroachment on its prerogative by the executive, is more than willing to interfere, in turn, with the prerogative of the executive—and with this the people of the country have been steadily losing patience for a good many years.

The United States supreme court reflects public opinion. That is to say that its views are, and properly, reflective of the trend of the times, in the long run. It was preponderant public opinion that the Senate's wings ought to be clipped in the matter of interference with executive affairs. The Supreme Court has clipped them.

RADIO JAMBORREES.

Whether that Mexican scientist who attributes all these otherwise unaccountable off-season storms to the radio has any sound technical backing for his position or not is for savants to decide. But the layman is impressed by it. All the wind that goes out daily and nightly from scores and scores of broadcasting stations has to go somewhere. And it is of such contradictory and conflicting nature that when its parts meet up, out there in space, what wonder if vortices and tumult result?

IN NEW YORK

New York, Oct. 26.—Even the picturesque push carts which crowd the streets of New York's east side threaten to succumb to big business and efficiency methods.

In times ago a push cart proprietor was a potentia, merchant price getting his start along the curbstones.

Today scores of these colorful business enterprises are owned by a syndicate or a single individual. The peddler is reduced to a salary basis, and the wage is not sufficient to insure any degree of independence. Furthermore, such group ownership makes it difficult for the individual to compete. The large holders can purchase stock in vast quantities and cut prices.

One of the largest owners, who is said to control several hundred pushcarts, seldom sees the east side and maintains big offices in the uptown belt. His real interests are in Broadway and recently he opened a gilded night club on his east side profits.

A notice comes to my desk that the chorus men of one of the big Broadway music shows have formed a football team and challenge any amateur group to winter games.

Don't smile! Maybe a change is overtaking the chorus boys. In three music production this season I have noticed a number of "he-men" types and I am told, the public is demanding such. That they are difficult to get is perhaps due to established beliefs that the chorus was no place for "he-men." A couple of topball victories—if any—would be invaluable propaganda.

The co-author of one of the two biggest box office smashes of the Broadway season, with a cut of 25 per cent. of the profits, continues at his job of stage manager of another theater.

Success does not strip the "backstage" of its lure. Those who have once been in this strangely artificial little world just back of the side-walks do not find it easy to break away and, once breaking away, they seldom stay away.

In the preparation of this play, which deals with night life of Broadway, the producer decided that the original script needed "pepping up" and sprinkling with more Broadway patter.

The playwright called in to do this, and whose work it is held, "saved the show," and never been in a night club. The writer of the original script, on the other hand, had been a night lifer for years and had gone broke spending. And there you are!

An electric sign tells me that "Abie's Irish Rose" soon is to give its 2000th performance. A six-year run! A wag suggests making it a landmark and letting it go at that.

In the company that presents it, four members felt that since they were together all the time anyway they might as well be married. One of the couples has a two-year-old child, Dorothy Grou, who started her stage career in this play as a flower girl, was 12 years old when the run began. Now she is old enough to step out and play parts.

A man who is an "official welcome" for the suit and cloak trade has had to attend 40 times—not through choice, but because visitors demanded a see it. He's equipped to understand every role in the play, he says.

Stewart's WASHINGTON LETTERS

By CHARLES P. STEWART.

Washington, Oct. 26.—Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, the veteran pure food man, is not going to have the public's edibles adulterated if he can help it.

He did help it once, away back in the early '80's, when, as chief chemist for the Department of Agriculture, he raised such a commotion over food adulterants that the country was almost afraid to eat anything, and the present pure food laws were passed in hot haste to prevent wholesale starvation.

He kept up the good work for 29 years, still as chief chemist for the Department of Agriculture, enforcing those laws.

Now, as a private citizen, he is trying to keep his beloved laws from being modified.

The trouble with the public, as Dr. Wiley sees it, is that it's had pure food for so long as to take it as a foregone conclusion, never realizing that it takes laws to keep it pure.

And the doctor foresees an attempt at the next session of Congress to slip through legislation which will weaken his laws. The public, he says, isn't awake to the danger.

Director Walter G. Campbell of the Agriculture Departments' pure food administration agrees with Dr. Wiley.

"The great danger," says Director Campbell, "is that public apathy and a feeling of assurance in the continuing wholesomeness of our foodstuffs may permit interested manufacturers and packers to render the whole structure of pure food enforcement weak and ineffective."

Alum and saccharine also are emphatically included in the doctor's Index Expurgatorius. They're on Campbell's list, too. Saccharine interests, according to the latter, are behind at least one bill to hamstring pure food enforcement, while seven big baking powder companies are campaigning to discredit the finding of Examiner Averill, of the federal trade commission, that alum has not been proved to be harmless as a food ingredient, but that there are "substantial grounds" for believing it harmful.

So, with one voice, Dr. Wiley and Director Campbell cry out that the public needs to be stirred up on the pure food subject, or, before the public knows it, there'll be no laws to keep its food pure.

Heard far over the waters of some northern lake, what wilder voice is there than the wailing call of the loon? It seems the voice of the very spirit of the wilderness proclaiming to all the world its emotion—its protest against the encroachment of man and the independence of his works and wiles.

The common loon lives in northern lands around the world. The Scotch called it the heardsman of the sea, in testimony of its prowess in the water, for it is as much at home there as the fish themselves, and it is upon them that the loon lives.

If you doubt its powers, pursue one by means of a boat. At your approach it dives; you paddle swiftly to the spot. The moment pass and no bird appears; suddenly from some part of the lake you are greeted with its wild laughter. Only to rear its young does the loon come ashore. In some lonely spot, preferably on an islet which promises virtual immunity from predatory animals, at the very edge of the water, the simple nest of rushes is fashioned.

Here are laid the two eggs, long and beautifully mottled with various brown and olive markings. The dusky young are clothed in the warmest of down.

Their stay in the home nest is short, for they are born with a love for the water and with the ability to navigate. Soon they are learning to fish for themselves.

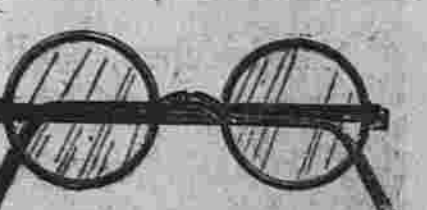

Loon.

Though the loon is so much at home in the water that it seems scarcely to need wings, its preference for northern lands makes their use necessary, for when its home waters freeze it must seek milder climes.

It is able to travel great distances without rest, even crossing high mountain ranges from between its summer home among the northern lakes and the ocean, where most of its kind pass the winter.

DOLL "MISS AMERICA" WILL BE SELECTED

Japanese Custom Inaugurated Here; Contest in Schools for Friendship Dolls.

Washington, Oct. 26.—A "Miss America" Contest among Messengers of Friendship Dolls is under way.

Schools all over the country are competing in the dressing of dolls, the prize doll to represent the United States as "Miss America" at the Japanese Festival of Dolls. The plan has been launched by the Committee on World Friendship Among Children, which was instituted by the Federal Council of Churches.

"The people of Japan have a beautiful family custom called the 'Hina Matsuri' (Festival of Dolls)," said Mrs. Jeannette W. Emrich, secretary of the committee, today in explaining the plan. "It comes each year on the third day of the third month (March).

"On that day each family brings out of its ancestral traditions the dolls of mothers, grandmothers and preceding generations for a renewal of acquaintance. They are placed on a table in serried ranks for inspection and comparison. The little girls, and older ones too, dress in gala costumes, and not only enjoy their own ancestral dolls but also visit and enjoy those of their neighbors. A choice doll may on this day be added to the happy family circle to be passed on to succeeding generations."

Out of this custom grew the idea of Doll Messengers of Friendship and a contest for "Miss America."

Some weeks ago the Committee on World Friendship Among Children proposed that American young people send Doll Messengers of Friendship to Japan to take part in the Hina Matsuri. The project has the approval of the highest educational authorities in this country and the endorsement of leaders of many educational, social and young peoples organizations.

It has seized the popular imagination say those in charge, and though it has been under way only a short time, tickets and passports for several thousand dolls have already been issued by the Doll Travel Bureau, having headquarters at 239 Fourth Avenue, New York City.

Under the plans adopted, the Doll Messenger Project, as it is officially called, each public and private high school which desires to enter the contest is asked to provide for an interclass contest. The pupils of each class shall furnish and dress their own doll or dolls, for they may enter as many as they please. Stuffed dolls cannot compete in this contest.

The entire school will then vote to choose the doll to represent the school in the city contest. The winner will bear the name "Miss Lincoln High," "Miss Jefferson High" or whatever the name of the school may be.

In the city-wide contest, each competing school will be represented on a committee which will select the most attractively dressed doll to bear the name of the City—"Miss Chicago"—"Miss New Orleans"—"Miss Denver"—"Miss Seattle?" as the case may be. A like procedure will take place in each state.

The representatives of the various states will then go to Washington or New York for a final committee which will select the doll to represent the United States as "Miss America."

The contest for the grade schools and elementary schools will be of the same character as the high school contest, but it will be quite distinct. These dolls will be known as "Miss Boston Jr.," "Miss Baltimore, Jr.," "Miss San Francisco, Jr.," and the like.

CODE OF HAND SIGNALS FOR AUTOISTS PLANNED

Incorporation of a specific code of hand signals in the Connecticut motor vehicle law will probably be proposed in the session of the legislature which convenes in January, according to the October bulletin of the state motor vehicle department.

"The hand signal, in its present execution, is 'cautionary,' it is pointed out, 'and so far as reliance can be placed upon it, except in unusual cases, it stops there.' The person for whom a signal is given, does not feel justified in accepting it as an indication of the exact operation that is to follow, but must wait and see what develops. A driver noting a signal by the driver of a car ahead simply takes it as an indication that there is to be some unspecified change in the operation of the car ahead, and governs himself accordingly.

That is the situation today. In almost every part of the country, according to the bulletin, owing largely to the fact that there has not been enough education in hand signaling by motor vehicle operators. But the motor vehicle department opinion is that there is no reason why that should be the situation. It holds that the hand signal is a complement to the correct operation of a motor vehicle.

What might be called a composite code of hand signals, drawn from practices approved and taught by different motor vehicle authorities of Eastern states, is described in the bulletin, for possible inclusion in the Connecticut law, as follows:

"No. 1. Stop or slow—Extend hand and arm horizontally and hold rigid."

"No. 2. Turn left—Pointing motion with index finger."

"No. 3. Turn right—Rotate hand forward from wrist or elbow."

A different code is employed in the West, especially in California, which is explained briefly in the bulletin and compared with the improved Eastern code.

"No. 1. Extend the arm upward means turn right."

"No. 2. Extend the arm horizontally and hold rigid means 'turn left.'"

"No. 3. Extend the arm downward means stop."

The Eastern code, the bulletin says, is unmistakable if the signals are properly given.

VALENTINO'S "SHEIK" RETURNS TO RIALTO

"The Sheik" is being featured for two days at the Rialto, beginning today. There has been a constant demand since Rudolph Valentino's death for pictures in which this star appeared and in this respect Manchester proved to be no different from scores of other towns which have found that his vehicles make a greater hit now than ever before.

The theme of "The Sheik" is familiar to every motion picture fan. It is a vivid story of desert love and its two central characters are a desert chieftan and a gently bred Englishwoman who finds her romance in a desolate waste of sand.

This picture was really Valentino's first chance at a starring role and all his later fame may be traced directly to the brilliant performance he gives in this masterpiece. The backgrounds and settings are truly magnificent and the thrills are without end, with Valentino dealing through breath-taking scenes that literally sweep one off his feet. The supporting cast employed is an exceptionally capable one and contributes in no small measure to the success of the film. Selected shorter subjects including a comedy and a news reel will also be shown.

The usual amateur contest will be staged Thursday as an added attraction.

"Financial Facts" ABOUT CONNECTICUT

1. HISTORY

Since 1918, the debts of the 48 states as a whole increased 182%. The debts of the New England states as a group decreased 3%. Connecticut indebtedness (most of which was Democratic inheritance) decreased 37%, so that today we are out of debt.

When the Baldwin administration came into office in 1911, Connecticut's net debt was $3,800,000. The next four years of Democratic rule added over $7,000,000 to this debt, so that when the Holcomb, Republican, administration came into office in 1915, the net debt was over $10,900,000. No reserve of any kind was provided for the payment of this indebtedness.

War activities (State Council of Defense, Home Guard, Fuel Administration, Soldiers' Relief Fund of $2,500,000, etc.) added slightly over $5,000,000 to this indebtedness, so that in 1921 it was $16,291,000.

Since 1915 Republican administrations have been building up a sinking fund, to retire this indebtedness. In 1921 this fund was slightly over $9,000,000. Then Connecticut's "pay-as-you-go" policies began to show results.

No more bonds were issued. Money was consistently added to the sinking fund and the state's net indebtedness began to disappear. Appropriations for departments and institutions were kept well within the state's income, and yearly surpluses were the rule. In June, 1925, the state went "over the top." The sinking fund totaled over $12,000,000 and cash balances were $4,800,000, more than enough to offset the old indebtedness of $16,291,000.

During the past year the net surplus has grown still healthier so that: Connecticut pays all its bill with current income. No bonds, notes, or loans have been issued. Connecticut's credit is the best of any state in America, because Connecticut doesn't do business on credit. There is no indebtedness. Connecticut stands at the top of the list of states!

2. EXPENDITURES

Connecticut's per capita expenditures (total government costs) increased, since 1918, 62%.

The total cost of government in the 48 states as a whole increased 123%, twice that of Connecticut. (1918-1924.)

3. INCOME

The increase in total income of the 48 states as a whole since 1918 was 92%.

Connecticut's total income increased only 38% in this period. (1918-1924.)

The 48 states as a whole increased their percentage of income twice as much as Connecticut, but it required only half the percentage of increase in expenditures to run Connecticut that the states as a whole expended. Connecticut, in addition, paid all its bills and retired its indebtedness.

4. TAXATION

From 1917 to 1922 (last figures available, Federal Trade Commission) the 48 states as a whole increased taxes for state purposes 101%.

Connecticut's increase was about 15%. This was the lowest increase of any state.

5. TAXATION, 1914-1926

In 1914, the 4th year of Democratic administration, 89% of Connecticut's income was derived from taxation and loans.

In 1926, under Republican administration, only 59% of Connecticut's income is derived from taxation. The state does not need to borrow money, so there are no loans today.

In 1914 the income from departments and institutions of the state from services, fees, licenses, board, tuition, sales of products, etc., comprised but 11% of the state's total income. The balance came from taxes and loans.

In 1926 income from departments and institutions from the sources referred to comprised 41% of the state's total income.

Republican administrations have made many of the state's various departments and institutions as nearly self-sustaining as is consistent with increased efficiency.

No State In The Union Can Show A Better Financial Record Than Connecticut!

This gratifying condition is due to the honest and conscientious labor of the men and women comprising the majorities upon whom the responsibility of government always rests, in the Connecticut legislature, various state departments and institutions, and the state's executives.

THE ROMANCE OF AMERICA: Aaron Burr (12)

Burr's enemies had completely undermined his reputation. When news was borne to him that Hamilton had expressed a "despicable opinion" of him, he demanded a duel. Hamilton refused. The duel finally was arranged for the early morning of July 11, 1804, at Weehawken, New Jersey.

When the word was given, Burr fired. Hamilton wheeled, discharged his pistol and pitched headlong.

In the fresh air of the river, as Hamilton was borne homeward, dying, he revived and disclaimed that he had intended to fire at Burr.

There was great sorrow in the city over Hamilton's death, and July 21, 1804, "Aaron Burr, esquire, vice president of the United States," was indicted for murder. That night he and John Swartwout went by barge to the home of Commodore Truxton at Perth Amboy. Here they procured horses and rode southward. (Continued.)

YOUR LAST CHANCE TO SEE BIG SHOW

"Men of Steel" Still Draws Hundreds to State; "Butcher Shop" a Real Novelty Tomorrow; Vaudeville Thursday.

Milton Sills, star in "Men of Steel" still attracts amusement lovers to the State theater and last night was no exception. The chorus of praise that went up from the patrons at the conclusion of the feature.

For those who have not seen this picture, rightly described as the giant among all big pictures, it might be well to remind them that tonight will be their last opportunity to see it.

For tomorrow the management has arranged a regular novelty. He calls it "Butcher Shop Night." About 1,500 pounds of meat will be given away to the State patrons. But that is only a part of the entertainment. There will also be two features, "Woman Power" and "Whispering Canyon." In the first feature one Johnny Bromley, typical of thousands of youths nowadays, falls under the influence of a woman. This woman almost wrecks him.

Then his regeneration begins and it is again a woman who leads him back into the straight and narrow path. In the other feature Jane Novak stars in a sort of western that is of the higher class of this type.

"Whispering Canyon" is a story of big trees, big men and a lovable, courageous girl in conflict with a ruthless and wealthy lumberman, Red Selby. He seeks to depose the girl, Antonia Lee, of her inheritance, a valuable timber tract known as Whispering Canyon, and to force her lover, Bob Cameron, to abandon the sawmill left to him by his murdered father. He is defeated.

FOR TOMORROW'S NIGHT, FRIDAY, SATURDAY, THE MANAGEMENT HAS SELECTED A WONDERFUL VAUDEVILLE BILL. THE FEATURE ACT WILL BE WILBUR SWEATMAN, THE WORLD'S GREATEST CLARINETIST WITH HIS BAND. HERE WILL BE SOMETHING TO TALK ABOUT FOR WEEKS. THERE WILL ALSO BE FOUR OTHER SELECTED ACTS, A SONG REEL "Sweet Adelaide" known by everybody and a feature picture, Douglas McLean in "Hold That Line."

What Is Fire Insurance and What Is It Good For?

Fire insurance when written properly is the absolute guarantee of a reliable Fire Insurance Company that issues you a written contract (or policy we call it), guaranteeing you against loss by fire, water or smoke damage caused by fire, to any and all of your property covered according to the terms of the policy.

If you own a single or two family dwelling, with a shingle roof, under fire protection, we will insure the building for 50 cents each $100.00 of valuation for a period of three years. If the roof is non-combustible—such as tin, slate or asphalt shingle, it will cost but 45 cents.

Furniture in the same kind of a dwelling can be insured with us at 50 cents and 55 cents, depending on the kind of roof. The cost of Fire Insurance has not increased—it is the same price as it was ten years ago.

Now—can you afford to run the great risk of fire when you can get $1000. worth of protection for less than one-half of one cent a day, or about three cents a week? This is for you to answer.

We are prepared to give you free—without any obligation on your part—expert advice as to the value of your buildings so you may check up your insurance values.

Call, write or telephone. We are at your service.

Every-Day Needs of Every U. S. Family Reflect Importance of Our Ships

Navy Day is Oct. 27. This is the second of a series of articles emphasizing the importance of an adequate navy and merchant marine in time of peace or war.

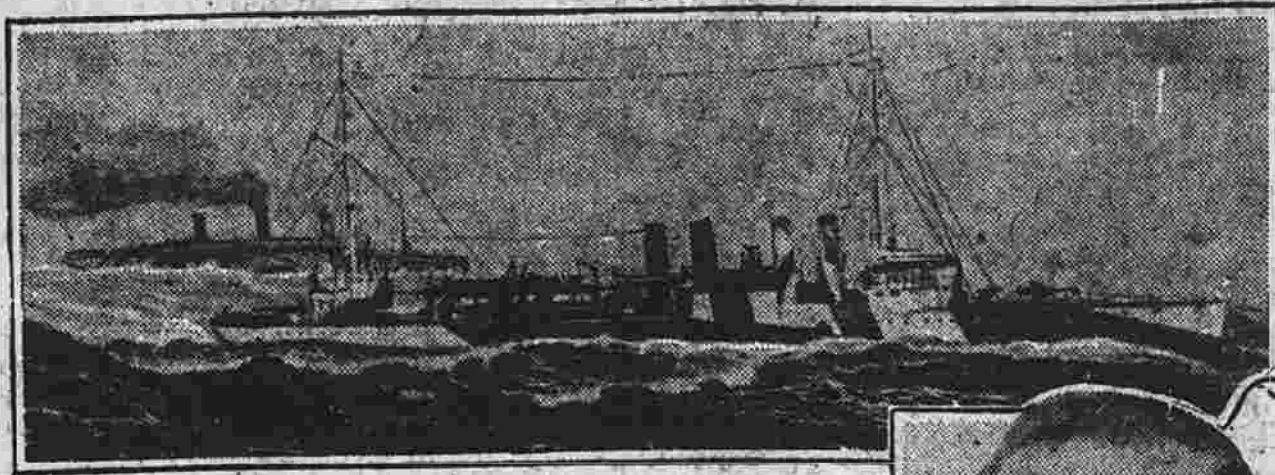

BY WM. C. REDFIELD
Former United States Secretary of Commerce

Among the many reasons for securing and maintaining an adequate American merchant marine is one that rarely occurs to the average man. This is because of the curious persistence among us of the idea that we are free from actual dependence on any other country. When the man in the street says, "We can go along by ourselves; we need no help from others," (thousands among us do) in visible ignorance to say "Amen" and count themselves patriotic.

Our people are hardly to be condemned for such an attitude because writers at home and abroad have joined in preaching the gospel of American economic self-dependence. It is a false gospel. Its teachings are illusory and misleading. They can only lead to a sad awakening on the part of a deceived public.

In my recent book, "Dependent America," I have tried to make the facts about our daily relations with the world so plain that the truth must be accepted and its lessons heeded. It may be well, however, to restate briefly factors which show the dependence of every American home on other lands for ordinary supplies.

Let us then assume to enter a modest farmhouse in our central west—selecting that part of our country because it is farthest away from the sea and presumably, therefore, less open to foreign relations. "How far," let us ask as we look about us, "is this American home so bold dependent—strictly dependent for its necessities—on foreign supplies?"

A painting by Burnell Poole that is reminiscent of wartime is being escorted by the U. S. destroyer Stevens. Both by William C. Redfield, secretary of son's administration, who writes

Let us seek the answer in simple things; carpets or oilcloth, the daily newspaper, the personal clothing of the owner, the table knives, the linens in the kitchen, the phonograph, the telephone, the family shoes and hats. None of these things are, or can be, supplied from the unaided resources of the United States of America.

Some of them could not be supplied at all, others only in part. We do not produce carpet wool in the United States or materials for either men's or women's felt or straw hats. They come from Australia, Asia or Europe.

India sends the jute that is the basis of oilcloth and linoleum and some of the seed from which the oil used to make comes from Argentina.

The tin in our Malaya or the Dutch Indies and, in making our linens, palm oil from Africa is utilized. For newspaper paper, or for pulp or pulpwad for making it, we have become dependent on Canada, though we bring much from northern Europe. The steel in our cutlery requires is reminiscent of wartime is being escorted by the U. S. destroyer Stevens. Both by William C. Redfield, secretary of son's administration, who writes manganese, which we get from the Caucasus. Our clothing wools come from Australia, New Zealand or Argentina, for our native supply is not sufficient either in quantity or quality.

The phonograph records and the telephone mouthpieces depend, as do many other necessities, on shellac, which comes wholly from India. We look to far distant lands for materials for the varnish on our furniture.

From 50 Countries
Skins for shoes and leather generally we take from more than 50 countries, for our native supply is far too small, and, in some respects, is lacking altogether. The same is true of materials for tanning.

No mention has been made of rubber, silk, coffee, tea or linen, for the facts about them are widely known. I have preferred to deal with other things whose origin seems more obscure. There is no household in the United States that is not dependent every day on many lands. This dependence is growing as our prosperity brings greater demands and as life becomes more complex. It will be well to have this lesson come home to us. It will moderate a certain exuberance which passes as patriotism but is ignorance. It will give us saner and kinder conceptions of men of other lands and races of whose toil we all are the beneficiaries. Above all, it will teach us the vital need of keeping in our own hands the necessary means of communication with the lands on which we increasingly depend.

"Phillips Milk of Magnesia" Better than Soda

Instead of soda hereafter take a little "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" in water any time for indigestion or sour, acid, gassy stomach, and relief will come instantly.

For fifty years genuine "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" has been prescribed by physicians because it overcomes three times as much acid in the stomach as a saturated solution of bicarbonate of soda, leaving the stomach sweet and free from all gases. It neutralizes acid fermentations in the bowels and gently urges the souring waste from the system without urging. Besides, it is more pleasant to take than soda. Insist upon "Phillips". Twenty-five cent and fifty cent bottles, any drugstore. "Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. Registered Trade Mark of The Charles H. Phillips Chemical Co. and its predecessor Charles H. Phillips since 1875.—Adv.

Haines Was 31st Shutout Pitcher In World Series

New York Oct. 25.—When Jess Haines majestically unfurled his shutout victory over the New York Yankees in the 1926 world series, he was the thirty-first pitcher to accomplish such a stunt.

A peek at blankings pitched in the post-season series shows that the great Christy Mathewson, with four shutouts, is the master of them all in world series pitching.

"Three-Fingered" Brown of the old Chicago Cubs runs Matty a strong second with three shutout victories to his credit. Then comes little Arlie Nehf of the New York Giants with a pair, both being 1 to 0 affairs over the New York Yankees in 1921 and 1923.

Haines' blanking of the Yankees was the first world series shutout pitched since 1923, when Nehf turned the Yankees back without a run. Haines' shutout also was the fourth time in world series play that the Yankees have been blanked.

The 1905 classic between the Giants and Athletics brought forth perhaps the tightest pitching ever witnessed in world series play, five shutouts being unrolled by Mathewson getting three, Matty's first was a 3 to 0 win; his second 2 to 0 and his third a 2 to 0 victory. In between, Joe McGinnity hurled a 1 to 0 win for the Giants and Chief Bender blanked the Giants, 3 to 0, for the fifth shutout of the memorial series.

Two shutouts happened in 1906, when the Chicago White Sox and Chicago Cubs battled it out. Ed Walsh blanked the Cubs, 3 to 0, then Brown whitewashed the White Sox 1 to 0.

In 1907 it was the Cubs against the Detroit Tigers. Brown hurled another shutout, getting a 2 to 0 win over the Tigers.

In 1908 he again blanked the Tigers, this time 3 to 0, for his third world series shutout. This series brought another shutout pitcher to the fore, Orie Overall blanking Detroit 3 to 0.

The 1909 series found the then young Babe Adams holding Detroit scoreless, 3 to 0, in one of his three wins of 1909. George Mullin returned by shutting out the Pirates, 4 to 0.

It wasn't until 1913 that additional world series shutouts were pitched, Mathewson getting his fourth and last, 4 to 0, against Philadelphia. Incidentally, all four of Matty's October shutouts were against Connie Mack's Athletics.

Bill James hurled the Athletics down 1 to 0, in one of the Boston Braves' four straight over the Mackmen.

Things rocked along until 1917 before more world series scoreless games were hurled. Ernie Barton, for New York, shut out the Chicago White Sox 2 to 0, then Fred Schupp blanked the White Sox 5 to 0 for the second scoreless game of that series.

The 1918 series found Jim Vaughn of the Cubs shutting out the Red Sox 3 to 0, and Babe Ruth blanking the Cubs, 1 to 0.

Three shutouts came in the 1919 series between the White Sox and Cincinnati Reds. Kerr blanked Cincinnati, 2 to 0; Ring goose-egged the White Sox, 2 to 0; then "Hod" Eller shut out the Sox, 5 to 0.

In 1920 Burlington Grimes for Brooklyn, blanked the Cleveland Indians, 3 to 0, and Walter Meila and Coveleskie blanked the Robins, 1 to 0 and 3 to 0, respectively.

The all-Gotham world series started in 1921 with the shutout, Mays and Hoyt each blanking the Giants, 3 to 0, and Nehf the Yankees, 1 to 0.

John Scott hurled the only 1922 world series shutout, defeating the Huguen 3 to 0. In 1923 Art Nehf got his third shutout, 1 to 0, over the Yankees.

Neither Washington nor New York Giant pitchers could apply the whitewash in their 1924 series but in 1925 Johnson of Washington blanked Pittsburgh 4 to 0. In 1926 came Jess Haines to turn the trick for the Cardinals against the Yankees by the same score.

Summed up, National League pitchers have turned in 21 of the 31 world series shutouts. If that means anything.

Princeton figures on surprising both Yale and Harvard. Don't count Princeton out as a result of the way the Navy handled the Tiger in winning by the decisive score of 37-13.

The Sons of old Nassau have a way of fighting back after an early season reverse that is typical of the Princeton spirit.

While the Navy unquestionably was the better team in its meeting with Princeton, there is no doubt that the Tiger eleven played far below the form of which it is capable.

BY BILLY EVANS

"Bo" McMillin continues to be one of football's irrefragable figures. Several years back Centre College threw out one of the gridiron's greatest upsets by defeating Harvard.

"Bo" McMillin, then a member of the Centre College team, played the leading role in vanquishing the Crimson.

A few weeks ago Geneva College, a small Pennsylvania institution of learning, trimmed Harvard. The coach of that eleven is "Bo" McMillin.

When McMillin took the coaching job at Geneva he guaranteed a victory over Harvard and said he would make all kinds of trouble for Cornell.

He certainly made good for Harvard proved rather easy and Cornell was forced to the limit to win by one touchdown.

No one player has been a greater threat to Harvard's football prestige than "Bo" McMillin, first as a player, now as coach.

Penn Eleven Strong Had a chat the other day with a former All-American star, who is now assisting in coaching one of the leading teams in the east.

He had seen Pennsylvania in action a few days prior to my meeting him. If the Penn team is as good as he thinks it is, opposing eleven are going to meet one of the best in the country.

"Penn has a strong line and plenty of good backs, Rogers and Washburn in particular," said my informant.

"It has the most deceptive hiddenball attack I have ever seen. From the sidelines it is almost impossible to discover who is carrying the ball from the antics performed by every member of the backfield."

Cornell, please note. It is certain that professional football will be a big pro and cap at the winter meeting of the two major leagues.

One of the main topics of conversation will be whether big league players should be permitted to engage in the strenuous pastime.

The two are quite a few college stars in the majors who were as much at home on the gridiron as the diamond during their "rah rah" days.

The popularity that professional football is enjoying has opened a new field for these athletes. For "two months" play some of the stars can get as much money as for six months' labor on the ball field.

I understand major league owners are adverse to having these players risk injury on the gridiron. It is rumored that Connie Mack has been playing the hidden Walter French from playing.

It wouldn't surprise me if major league contracts of the future carried a clause putting the ban on football.

Langlen Not Overrated Saw Miss Langlen, me famous of women tennis stars, in her professional debut at Madison Square Garden. It was the first time I had ever seen her play.

The young lady is all her press agents have said in the advance notices. While I pulled strongly for Miss Langlen to beat Langlen when they met abroad, it was easy for me to see the futility of such a hope.

Opposed to Langlen was Mary K. Browne, a really great player, yet the French star won as she pleased.

Over 12,000 watched the innovation of professional tennis. I am inclined to think that C. C. Pyle, promoter, is going to make plenty of money with his troupe, for Langlen is a great card and gives you a run for your money.

At New York—Jack Bernstein, of Yankees, won decision over Charley Rosen of New York, ten rounds. Andre Routa of France won decision over Johnny Leonard of Allentown, Pa., ten rounds.

STANFORD AND SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA CLASH SATURDAY IN CRUCIAL CONTEST

HOWARD JONES

IT WILL BE A BATTLE OF WITS BETWEEN BEST COACHES IN U. S. Glen Warner and Howard Jones, Master Minds, to Try Conclusions in One of the Most Important Games of the Year.

BY BILLY EVANS What part does the coach play in football? We shall see when Stanford meets Southern California.

These two great eleven clash at Los Angeles Saturday and another football epic is sure to result. Regardless of the relative strength of the two eleven, a meeting between Stanford and Southern California always is worth while.

It will be a battle of wits between two master minds when Glen Warner of Stanford pits his strategy against Howard Jones of Southern California.

With California, for years the outstanding eleven on the coast, in eclipse, the Stanford-Southern California game looms up as one of the choice football tidbits of the season.

Southern California boasts one of its greatest teams. The experts on the coast favor it to win over Stanford, but Coach Glenn Warner has a habit of upsetting the dope.

He has been doing it for years. Undoubtedly Warner will miss the outstanding eleven on the coast, in eclipse, the Stanford-Southern California game looms up as one of the choice football tidbits of the season.

This year both Stanford and Southern California have what appear to be outstanding teams on the coast. It is no secret that Southern California has high hopes of winning the Pacific Coast title.

Howard Jones, present holder of the title, thinks otherwise, also Stanford. Undoubtedly Warner will miss the outstanding eleven on the coast, in eclipse, the Stanford-Southern California game looms up as one of the choice football tidbits of the season.

Howard Jones, who won his greatest fame while coaching at the University of Iowa, is not far behind Warner as a strategist.

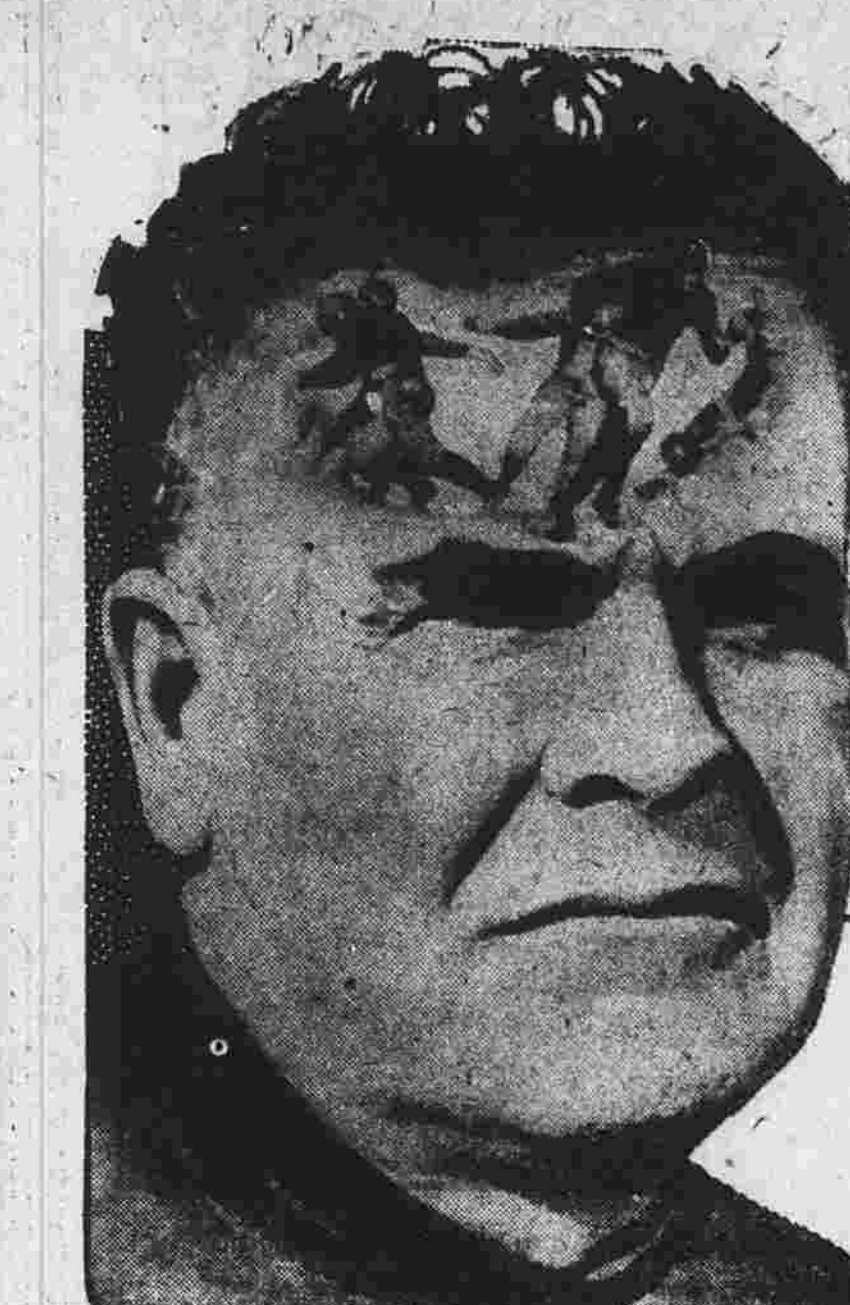

For that reason, the coming battle between Stanford and Southern California promises to be more than a contest between two great rivals. It will be a battle of wits between two of the game's leading coaches. Glen Warner and Howard Jones. Take your choice.

IT WILL BE A BATTLE OF WITS BETWEEN BEST COACHES IN U. S. Glen Warner and Howard Jones, Master Minds, to Try Conclusions in One of the Most Important Games of the Year.

BY BILLY EVANS What part does the coach play in football? We shall see when Stanford meets Southern California.

These two great eleven clash at Los Angeles Saturday and another football epic is sure to result. Regardless of the relative strength of the two eleven, a meeting between Stanford and Southern California always is worth while.

It will be a battle of wits between two master minds when Glen Warner of Stanford pits his strategy against Howard Jones of Southern California.

With California, for years the outstanding eleven on the coast, in eclipse, the Stanford-Southern California game looms up as one of the choice football tidbits of the season.

Southern California boasts one of its greatest teams. The experts on the coast favor it to win over Stanford, but Coach Glenn Warner has a habit of upsetting the dope.

He has been doing it for years. Undoubtedly Warner will miss the outstanding eleven on the coast, in eclipse, the Stanford-Southern California game looms up as one of the choice football tidbits of the season.

KERR'S 38-YARD FIELD GOAL TRIMS WINDSOR LOCKS FOR CUBS

ARMY WITH MEN, FORGETS SYSTEM Straight Football Is West Point Method; May Need Deception, However.

West Point, N. Y., Oct. 26.—The old Army game? Famed for its deathless appeal, this phrase has come down through the ages from the ballyhoo men at the coroner's tent.

Today it is being followed with great faithfulness on the plains of West Point by a veteran Army eleven that has known its effectiveness these many years. In baseball, it stands for conservatism. Conservative is a fault was Army football under Charley Daly.

Ultimately the Army changed coaches but it didn't change systems. Even with Jack McEwan in the saddle, it played the old Army game of hit the tackle, sweep the end, throw a pass, punt. McEwan did borrow a bit of Notre Dame's backfield shift but he preferred power over deception of the last and today it is being used to even Jones, who has the men to carry it out.

Eleven veterans are at his service and some of them played three or four years of college football before they saw the plains of West Point. The system hardly matters in this case. The army has the men.

Some Line! It has a line, reading from left to right, that is absolutely foolproof, the forwards including Born, Saunders, Schmidt, Daly, Seaman, Sprague and Harbord. Born was a near All-American last year. Harbord was one of his running mates. Brentnall and Davidson also have had experience.

Saunders and Sprague veterans both are fine offensive tackles and are extremely aggressive on defense. Fletcher, Muz, Perry and Strayer are excellent substitutes. Schmidt, Daly, and Seaman, Hammarck, forming the center trio, have been around long enough to know West Point's requirements in every particular. Lynch, another guard, has looked good on occasion. There are several All-American possibilities among the forwards.

The backfield, ably directed by Harding, features off tackle stars, wide sweeps around the ends by Harry Wilson and Trappell, an occasional pass just to keep the opposition on its toes and a sound kicking game.

Wilson and Harding are veteran backs. So are Hewitt and Trappell but the latter pair have been allowed to the side lines by Cagle and Murrell, fine pluggers both.

It is a great system when you have the men. However, it may not be enough when West Point plays the big timers and finds that Yale, Notre Dame and the Navy are just a bit inclined to have the men, too. The chance is that "Bill" Jones will see fit to equip the strategic sleeve with some modicum of deception by that time.

Sophs Making Grade This is a big year for sophomore stars in the Big Ten. Virtually every team in the conference boasts at least one new sensation.

At Ohio state, for instance, you'll find Byron Eby ("a second Chick Harley"), they're already forming a team; at Michigan, there's George Rich, a fast, aggressive back; also Paul Cook, Illinois appears to have a future great in "Frosty" Peters. Zuppke is counting considerably on Jake Lanum, a versatile back.

Minnesota offers "Barnie" Barnhart, a mite back who can run, pass and kick. Against Michigan, Barnhart was one of the Gophers' outstanding celebrities. The top outstanding is a wonder ere he winds up his college career.

MURPHY ISSUES DEF TO CONRAN FOR MATCH The bowling season is on again. Howard Murphy today issued a challenge to Tommy Conran of the North End for a top-game home and home match for a purse of $100.

Conran won the undisputed town championship last year but it is the claim at the South End that the title will not stay in its present resting place very much longer.

Difference in Pitching. National League pitchers use twice as many curve balls as do the American Leaguers, according to First Baseman Wally Pipp, who has seen service in both leagues.

Coach Wright's Gridsters Register Victory in Pouring Rain But Manager Angelo Fails to Report Outcome.

Windsor Locks, Oct. 25.—Before a small crowd and in a pouring rain, the local Mohawk football eleven met a tartar here Sunday in the crack Cubs of South Manchester.

The visitors won by means of a beautiful 38-yard drop kick in the first period. It came from the toe of Herbie Kerr, speedy right end on the Cubs. During the remainder of the game both teams fought on practically an even basis.

Although Manager Nick Angelo of the Cubs did not make any return of his game at The Herald office, it was learned last night that the Cubs played the game and won as the above Windsor Locks dispatch states. It looks as though Coach Earl Wright had welded together a great combination this year, possibly one that will lower the colors of haughty Cloverleaves when the two teams mingle in the annual championship battle. The Cubs practice again tonight.

Annapolis, Oct. 26.—Under the supervision of scouts who have watched the Wolverines in action, the Navy eleven today worked to perfect a defense against Michigan's aerial game in preparation for Saturday's inter-sectional classic.

New Haven, Oct. 26.—With Larry Noble and Dwight Fishwick recovered from injuries, Yale's prospects of defeating Army on Saturday were brighter today. Bill Hickock, son of a Yale gridiron star of thirty years ago, may replace Starhahn at left guard.

West Point, Oct. 26.—Development of a good kicker is one of Army's chief problems in preparing for the Yale game. Trappell, star back and punter, is out of the game.

Hanover, N. H., Oct. 26.—Captain Horton, back, and Phillips, left guard, will be out of the Dartmouth line-up against Brown on Saturday and nine others are on the injured list. Although in bad shape the squad will be put through a stiff scrimmage today.

Providence, Oct. 26.—A dummy scrimmage session with the Brown variety was today.

Hamilton, N. Y., Oct. 26.—After a complete rest yesterday, the Colgate eleven got down to real work today in preparation for the Michigan State game.

Philadelphia, Oct. 26.—Although Illinois objects to the elbow pads worn by the Penn players, claiming the pads resemble a football and helps Penn's ball players, the Penn coaches declared today that their players would wear the pads in Saturday's clash.

Princeton, Oct. 26.—Tiger cripples are returning to active duty and Princeton will be able to present its full strength against Swarthmore on Saturday.

A YEAR BEFORE TUNNEY AND DEMPSEY CLASH New York, Oct. 26.—Tex Rickard and Jack Dempsey were scheduled to confer today over plans for the former heavyweight champion's proposed come back, which he hopes will lead toward a return bout with Gene Tunney next season. The promoter said the bout would not take place before next fall.

"However," he added, "Dempsey wants to prove to the public and to himself that he is ready for a return bout. I plan to send him against a good opponent or two in the spring and early summer and these opponents will be determined by a series of elimination matches this winter."

Jack Sharkey, Jim Maloney, Harry Persson, Franz Diener and Mote Munn will take part in these contests.

Badger Eleven Has Star Kicker in "Butch" Leitt Madison, Wis., Oct. 26.—In "Butch" Leitt Wisconsin looks to have one of the best field goal kickers it has had in several seasons.

Leitt stepped to the front in the recent game with the strong Kansas aggregation, booting two placement goals at crucial moments. He also kicked goal after touchdown, making good on all three attempts against the Jayhawkers.

Leitt is one of Coach Little's veterans. He plays tackle and is one of the big cops in the Badger's front-line trenches. His expert toe is certain to cause opposing teams more than a little worry whenever the Badgers get inside the 40-yard stripe.

Star of Yankees Herb Pennock's big year and his two victories in the world series put him in line for a fat contract for 1927. He deserves it, for the slim sopthaw is the most consistent winner among the left handers of either league.

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

JUDITH MARTIN, teaching at Peniston University, in a life of friends among the radical student set, including ERIC WATERS, WILL WETHEREL and EVE GERHART, popular town widow.

Dr. PETER DORN, admiring her, is distressed at her student friendships, because DEAN TIMOTHY BROWN, his superior on the discipline committee, disapproves of them.

MYRA ALDRICH is jealous of Judith, because Eric shows her attention. Judith runs off to the city for a week end of relaxation. There she sees the wife of Dean Timothy Brown, escorted by a handsome young man. Returning to Peniston, she finds Eric on the same train, and the dean sees them alight at the station together.

Mrs. Brown senses Judith. Judith promises not to speak of seeing her in town and a friendship begins between them. The dean, coming home during this conversation, hints that he thinks Judith and Eric went away together.

Judith leaves the house in anger. On the way home she is accosted by "KITTY" SHEA, a town ruffian, who threatens to tell of seeing her dining at a roadhouse with Eric some time before, just before the place was raided. Shea is frightened away by two men students.

Judith is awakened by a noise on the porch that night and, opening the front door, catches Myra in her arms.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XVIII

JUDITH bent over the unconscious girl, "Myra," she whispered, but there was no answer. Only a stertorous breathing came from between the parted lips, and the fumes of alcohol hung heavily about her.

Judith shifted Myra's weight and began the laborious ascent. Near the top of the stairs, the light from above fell on the closed eyelids. Myra stirred and clenched one hand over her chest. "Fire!" she murmured and began to cry weakly.

The struggle seemed interminable, but at last Judith staggered into Myra's room and laid her burden on the bed. She began to pull off her outer clothing, stopping now and then to chafe her wrists and temples. Judith left her with her head buried in the pillows, feebly sobbing. She came back with her electric percolator in a moment. She was pouring out a cup of steaming black coffee when Myra began to pry.

"Please God, don't let me die, with this fire in my stomach. What'll Eric do if I die? Oh, I forgot. Eric doesn't care." Her muttering trailed off in a long wail.

Judith forced her to take the coffee, supporting her with one hand and holding the cup in the other.

Myra looked at her curiously, and Judith smiled faintly. Myra caught the smile and began to cry brokenheartedly. "You're laughing at me. Everybody's laughing at me. And I'm going to die."

Judith began running through the pages of the University directory, looking for the medical division. "What are you doing?" called Myra. "You can't find anything. I'll be licked out of school if you do. D'you hear?"

Judith left the room and crept down the stairs. In the lower hall she pulled the telephone on its cord into the cloak closet under the stairs and gave the Sigma Psi number in a muffled voice.

A sleepy voice answered. "No-m," it said. "Mistah, Watahs ain't in. Been gone all night. Myra lay sleeping quietly enough to be left alone. Judith turned out the electric lights. In another hour, the Stedway house would be a-strir. Already, sparrows were twittering in the trees near the window pane.

"You're good, Judith. Too good. I haven't any right to touch you."

It will do you good. Now you rest while I bring some water." She brought a basin and towels and bathed Myra's flushed face and hands. Then she brought powder and rouge from the dressing table. "You shan't see yourself till I've finished with you," she said gaily, and Myra conjured up a watery smile.

"There," she said, handing Myra a mirror. "You don't look sick now." Myra looked at herself gravely. Then she held out her hand to Judith. "You're good, Judith. Too good. I haven't any right to touch you. I'm so ashamed."

There was just time for a half-hour nap before she must dress for the day's work.

It was a small voice that called to Judith as she wearily climbed the stairs late that afternoon. She went into Myra's room, and found the girl sitting up against the pillows, her face like a mask of tragedy.

"I've been waiting for you for hours," she said tremulously. "Why didn't you come?"

Judith smiled. "I had to meet my classes. I couldn't come any sooner. How do you feel?"

Myra covered her face and began to cry hysterically. "I wish I were dead," she sobbed, over and over.

"Hush," she said, "don't want the others to know there's anything wrong. I told them you had a sick headache. Did anybody come in during the day?"

Myra shook her head. "I don't care who comes in. I tell you nothing matters from now on."

Judith rose decisively. "Have you had anything to eat?"

The girl looked at her reproachfully. "Do you think I could touch food now? I'm too miserable even to think about it."

"Nonsense," said Judith, as she left the room. She came back with a box of bouillon cubes and some hot water. "We won't do any talking, till you've drunk this," she said, peremptorily.

Myra's jaw set firmly. "I don't want anything but water. I've drunk cubes of it today."

"M-m-m," said Judith, "and each time you drink it, you get sicker, I suppose."

Myra nodded. When Judith professed the bouillon, she took it meekly. "Ugh! It hasn't any taste," she said, ungratefully. Judith grinned. "Just the same, it will do you good. Now you rest while I bring some water."

"No," Judith answered, "of course not." "But will you be my friend again, Jude? I'm awfully ashamed to have you do so much for me, when I've been a regular devil to you. If I'd been in your place last night, I'd have let little fool Myra die."

"I WAS frightened," said Judith, "lest you should die. But I dared not call a doctor. Let's forget it. Shall we?"

Myra shook her head dolefully. "I doubt if I ever can. But I won't talk about it any more."

Judith was on her way to the library just before dinner when Will Wetherel overtook her near the president's house.

"Jude," he said earnestly, "do you know where Eric Waters is?" She shook her head.

"Well, he was out all night, and in the wee small hours, a woman called for him on the phone. The houseman said she seemed worried. It's all very mysterious, and I can't tell you the chapter doesn't like it much."

"I'm sorry," said Judith, curiously, "but that isn't of paramount importance to me." She turned off toward the library.

A few steps farther on, she met Dr. Dorn going toward the administration building.

"I suppose you are on your way to Dean Brown's conference, as I am," he said.

"Conference?" she queried. "Why, yes, all the bulletin boards are placarded. I don't know what the emergency is."

Judith fell in step with him. "It's a bore," she complained. "But I suppose I'll have to go."

The conference room was almost filled when they entered. Dean Brown was hurrying in after them, carrying a newspaper over his arm.

There was a banner headline in letters three inches high. Judith spelled out the words as he passed, though they were upside down: "EXTRA! TWO STUDENTS DIE OF POISON BOOZE!"

Dean Brown and Eric clash dramatically in the next chapter, and Judith's position is endangered when she stands up for the young man.

"But will you be my friend again, Jude? I'm awfully ashamed to have you do so much for me, when I've been a regular devil to you. If I'd been in your place last night, I'd have let little fool Myra die."

This And That In Feminine Lore

Did you know that you could buy cotton, silk and embroidery threads, as well as have hemstitching done at Mrs. Elliott's Rug and Gift Shop, 75 Henry street. Phone 1406.

The affiliated wall paper manufacturers and interior decorators tell us that we must have color; not only that but it must be of "affinity color." The tan oatmeal put on the living room last year will never do for the housewife who is a brunette. Instead, she should live in rooms decorated in blues with touches of yellow and rose, and if you are one of those whom gentlemen prefer—a blonde—apple greens with gold and pink touches are the wall decoration for you.

Gift choosing is a pleasure at The Old Wood Shop, Pitkin street at East Center, because everything there has been personally selected by Mr. Hughes himself for his discriminating trade. His stock of copper and brass goods, china, glassware, pictures and art objects imported from abroad is a revelation to those visiting his shop for the first time.

Cheese Custard Slices of stals bread. Salt. Pepper. Mustard. 1-3 cup Supreme cheese. 1 egg. 1 cup milk. Have slices of bread about one inch thick, removing all crust. Put layer of bread in buttered dish. Add layer of cheese sliced thin, sprinkle with salt and pepper and a little mustard. Continue until dish is almost full. Top layer should be bread. Add beaten egg to milk and pour over. If egg and milk is not sufficient to cover layers of bread and cheese, use more egg and milk in the same proportions. Let stand for ten minutes. Bake in a moderate oven 350 degrees F. until firm and a delicious brown.

Suzanne Lenglen boasts nothing in her extensive wardrobe but sport and evening clothes and calls afternoon things utterly unnecessary. The dresses in the shops show little difference between morning and afternoon, and in contrast to the dressy afternoon gowns of last season.

Don't be in too much of a hurry to wear your fur coat. It is safer to wear the cloth coat till mid-winter almost than it is to change too early from fur to cloth in the springtime. Some women wore their fur coats nearly seven months last season and it is too long. The in-between coat of cloth trimmed with fur should be worn until really severe weather sets in.

Pansy purple makes its bow as a favored winter color. Purples with a dash of red, something like old fushia or patunia are very good in frocks and wraps.

The ways of cooking apples are numberless and at Applecroft, 302 West Center street, you will find your favorites for eating or cooking, priced most reasonably. Phone 574-2 for particulars, or better still, drive over and make your own selections.

Dr. Harvey W. Noticing my reference to the deliciousness of raisin bread when toasted, one of our readers phoned me that she makes it up very economically into a tasty bread pudding when it becomes stale. The raisins are already there, it doesn't take much additional sugar, a little baking is required and with any preferred sauce you have a good, wholesome dessert.

The same housewife offers another suggestion. She says when she has beefsteak left over, there is pie to be made, she puts the meat through the food chopper, uses two cups apple to one cup of meat, adds other seasonings and has an excellent mince pie. Now these ideas are worth "sewing buttons on."

"Autumn," a lovely new open stock pattern in Lenox china would make a charming setting for the Halloween or other social festivities. It shows touches of the autumn colors, with a border of clear blue on a creamy white background.

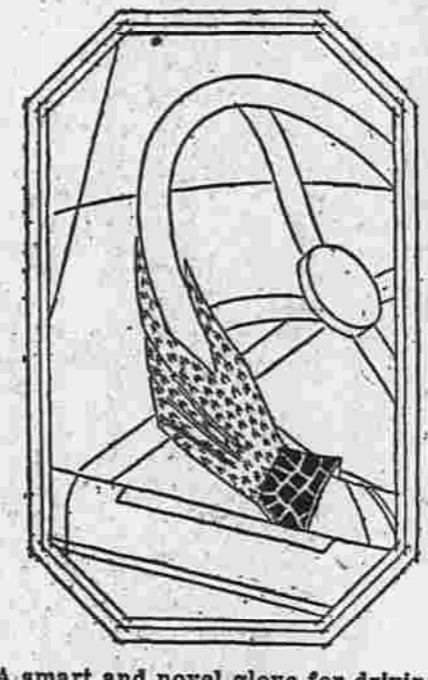

Serve your fruit salad for the Halloween table in oranges, first cutting off the tops and removing the pulp. With a sharp knife cut eyes, nose and mouth to make Jack o' lanterns. Fill with the salad top with whipped cream and replace "lids."

In some of the shops they are showing Harlequin and other patterns and colorings especially for making up into Halloween masquerade costumes.

Here is a collection of sandwiches that may be new to some of you: Toasted bread with a filling of chopped cooked bacon; toasted bread with a filling of fried oysters sprinkled with lemon juice and a lettuce leaf placed between the bread slices; toast rusks bread on one side, place slices of Swiss cheese between, then toast outside of bread. Two sweet sandwiches: Cocoa mixed with a little vanilla and powdered sugar, ground nuts if you have them, and another of mashed bananas mixed with lemon juice, cream and powdered sugar.

Games and Decorations For A Hallowe'en Party

Fifeful shadows, mysterious rappings, flickering candles, nuts and apples, the hilarious spirit of youth—these are the "makings" of a successful Hallowe'en party.

If the Hallowe'en hostess keeps in mind the almost incredible power of suggestion, she can by her decorations create any atmosphere she desires for her party. Dim lights and occasional driffts will suggest spooks and spirits—the occult and shuddery side of Hallowe'en. Vivid orange, glistening jack o' lanterns, scarlet apples and nuts to crack, suggest the prankish goblins who sallied forth on All Saints' eve for their annual frolic.

Here's a sad-faced carrot that also serves as a novelty in the jack o' lantern line.

Decorations Easily Made. For small children the jolly, happy side of Hallowe'en should be stressed; for large children the mystic, spectral-voiced, phantom side of Hallowe'en will afford the most pleasure.

In this day when silhouettes are so popular what could be smarter for party decorations than orange colored shades with broom-stick in black at every light. The frames for the shades will be found in five and ten cent stores with stiff orange paper, black paper, a tube of paste and scissors you can make them at home at little cost.

Feathered sprays of bitersweet scattered over the table always are lovely, whether the centerpiece be of fruit or flowers. The feathery grasses found along any country roadside make charming decorations that can be had for the picking. Or these same grasses can be used effectively in a doorway to just brush the guests' faces in a spookish fashion.

For Table or Mantlepiece Vegetables scrubbed clean make delightful candle "sticks," or hollowed out with clever faces cut in them from cunning and unusual jack o' lanterns. The little lanterns can be perched a-top corn husks on different length sticks. Then these little figures formed by the vegetable jack o' lantern and corn husk might be arranged in miniature rows made with branches from oak and maple. This could be used as the centerpiece for a large table, or as the mantle decoration.

Care should be taken that the sticks are strong and firmly fastened to the table. The little lanterns, sturdy but made with branches from oak and maple. This could be used as the centerpiece for a large table, or as the mantle decoration.

Can't you just see a long-faced, droopy-mouthed carrot face gazing from the leaves, with a jolly round-faced, smiley-mouthed turnip face peering beside him? Beets and potatoes also are used.

If you do not have the time to make your own decorations a trip through the shops with your color scheme in mind is worth while. If you have decided on an orange and black party, keep all the decorations in these colors. Black and white, gray and white, or gray and green are excellent combinations. Ovals and bats as well as witches and "cats" are quite as alluring in gray as in black. The snake and rabbit foot are symbols of sorcery that add to the "atmosphere" of the decorations.

If the diversion of the evening is cards, the decorations must be confined to the dining room to a large extent. If the party is an old-fashioned frolic, the whole house can be dressed up with leaves and berries and jack o' lanterns.

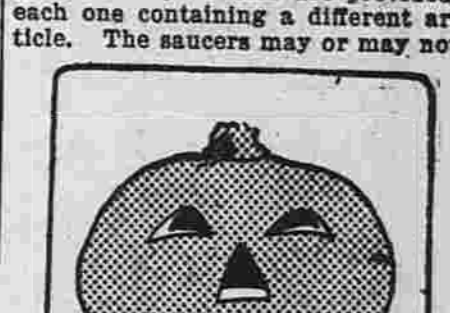

Of course every maiden expects to learn her fate on All Saints' eve, so the time-honored games of apple bobbing, apple paring and snapping are in order. Besides these you may want to try some that are even older, but not often used.

After the apple bobbing, to determine the name of one's future spouse, it bespeaks wisdom to learn the chances for happiness. A barrel hoop, stick candles, slices of bread, red peppers, burned candle-ends and strong cords are needed. Cut the string different lengths and tie each article firmly to one end of a string. Fasten the other end securely to the barrel hoop. Suspend the hoop from the ceiling and whirl around merry-go-round fashion.

The Bites Tell. Each guest, in turn, grasps at these objects with the teeth. If the "bite" is candy, sweet and rosy is the future. Bread portends plenty to eat, but an even, hum-drum existence. The red pepper foretells trouble and a "hot-time" generally. The burn out candle-ends point to a brief honeymoon. Another unusual and interesting game is that of the saucers.

Seven tiny saucers are provided, each one containing a different article. The saucers may or may not be presided over by a person dressed as a gypsy. In any event the person who seeks his fortune touches one of the saucers. The contents of this saucer, interpreted, tell his or her fate.

Hollow out a turnip, mount a short candle inside, and presto! You have a jack o' lantern that's different.

The Interpreter. The contents and interpretations are as follows: Moss—A life of luxury. Money and worldly goods. Thorn or scrap of brier—Unhappy love. Disappointment. Red cloth—military profession, military husband or army man as a rival. Blue cloth—Navy for profession or husband whose profession is the navy.

Forked stick—Widow or widower. Clear water—Single blessedness. Double knot—Marriage in the near future. Another test for the future is known as the "test of the three usgles." Three dishes are placed in a row. One contains clear water, one muddy water and the third is empty. Each person who seeks his fate is blindfolded and led to the dishes, so that he may dip his finger in one of the "uggles." If he dips into the clear water a happy, untroubled life is assured. The muddy water foretells an unhappy, turbulent wedded life, while the empty dish is the symbol of single blessedness.

Good Nature and Good Health

FAT—AN INDICATOR

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEN Editor Journal of the American Medical Association and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

Just how much fat under the skin is normal has been a question to which physicians have given considerable attention, particularly in recent years.

There is no doubt that a superabundance in a liability, causing great demands upon the body metabolism and interfering to some extent with the physical functions of the heart and the lungs, particularly when these organs are crowded by fatty tissue.

On the other hand, a lack of fat beneath the skin is associated with the development of wrinkles. In a child, when the skin hangs loosely upon the bones or muscles or when it can be raised in folds between the fingers, there is some fat deficiency.

Too Much Emphasis. Recently, too much attention unquestionably has been placed on body weight as the one important factor in child health. Weight must be considered in relation to height, age, and the general condition of the tissues.

The bones may vary in size so that a child who is of correct weight according to the height-age-weight tables may still be poorly nourished. He may have large bones and fully developed muscles, or small bones and an abundance of fat.

Home Page Editorials To Bob Or Not To Bob

By Olive Roberts Barton

Why is it so important a matter, to bob or not to bob?

Every day in every way we are told that hair is getting longer and longer again, only to discover that royalty has had its famous tresses shorn, waved, and golden glistened in the most approved French fashion.

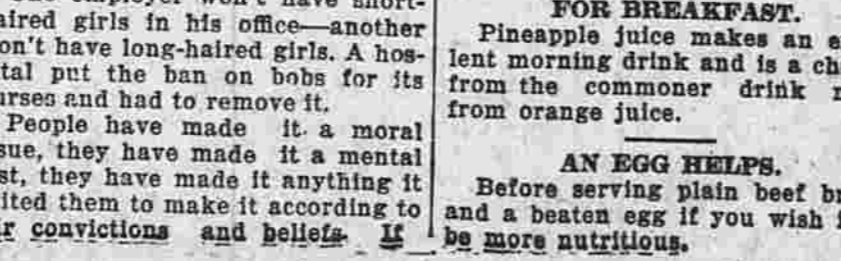

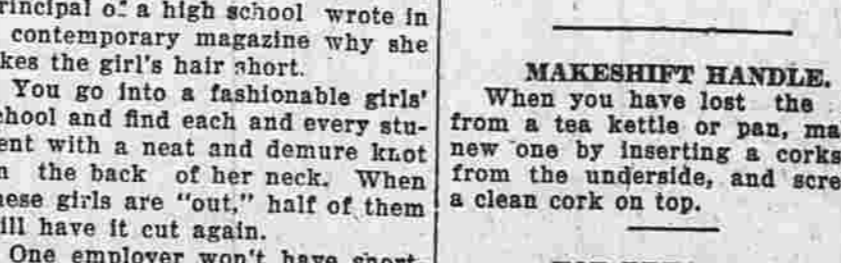

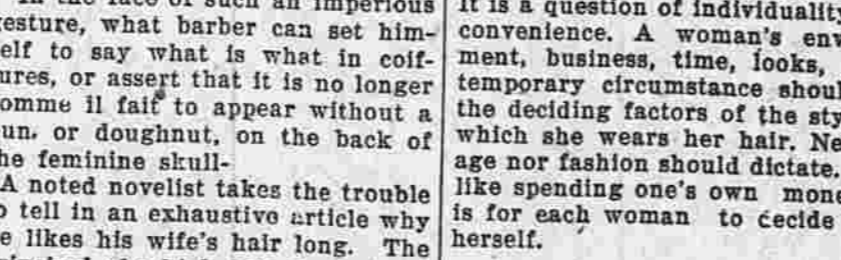

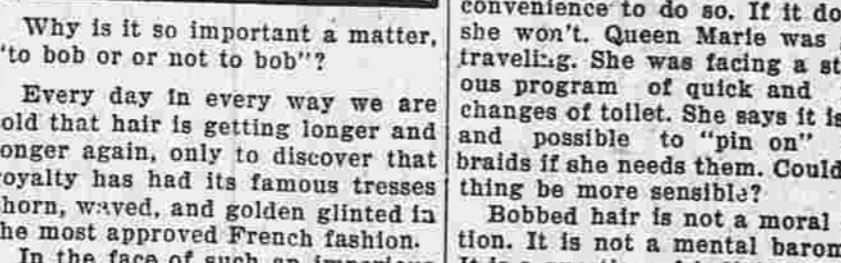

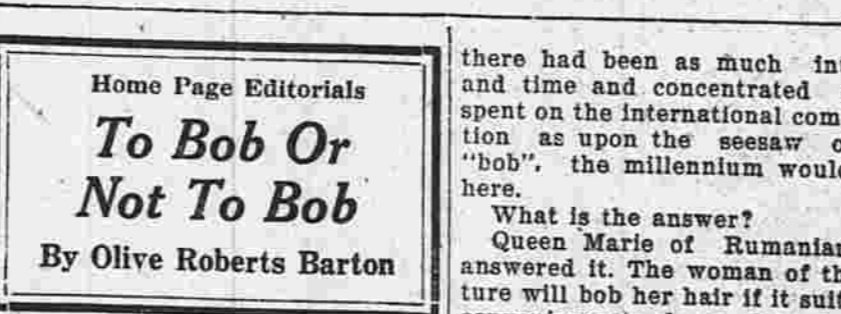

In the face of such an imperious gesture, what barber can set himself to say what is what in coiffures, or assert that it is no longer a burr or doughnut, on the back of the feminine skull.

A noted novelist takes the trouble to tell in an exhaustive article who he likes his wife's hair long. The principal of a high school wrote in a contemporary magazine why she likes the girl's hair short.

You go into a fashionable girl's school and find each and every student with a neat and demure knot on the back of her neck. When these girls are "out," half of them will have it cut again.

One employer won't have short-haired girls in his office—another won't have long-haired girls. A hospital put the ban on bobs for its nurses and had to remove it.

People have made it a moral issue, they have made it a mental test, they have made it anything but their convictions and beliefs. If there had been as much interest and time and concentrated effort spent on the international complications as upon the seasaw of the "bob," the millennium would be here.

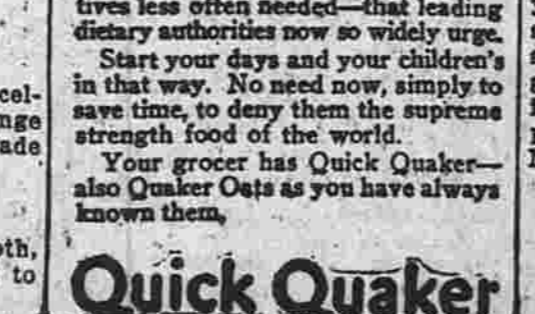

What is the answer? Queen Marie of Rumanian has answered it. The woman of the future will bob her hair if it suits her convenience to do so. If it doesn't, she won't. Queen Marie was going traveling. She was facing a strenuous program of quick and many changes of toilet. She says it is easy and possible to "pin on" extra braids if she needs them. Could anything be more sensible?

Bobbed hair is not a moral question. It is not a mental barometer. It is a question of individuality and convenience. A woman's environment, business, time, looks, and temporary circumstance should be the deciding factors of the style in which she wears her hair. Neither age nor fashion should dictate. It is like spending one's own money. It is for each woman to decide for herself.

MAKESHIFT HANDLE. When you have lost the knob from a tea kettle or pan, make a new one by inserting a corkscrew from the underside, and screwing a clean cork on top.

FOR BREAKFAST. Pineapple juice makes an excellent morning drink and is a change from the commoner drink made from orange juice.

AN EGG HELPS. Before serving plain beef broth, and a beaten egg if you wish it to be more nutritious.

FLAPPER FANNY

A bride's first biscuits are usually made out of a cook book—and they often taste like it.

Two colored gentlemen who had just reduced the population in a farmer's henroost were making a get-away. "Laws, Mose," gasped Sam, "why you s'pose them files follows us so close?"

HUNTERS AND FISHERS TO MEET THURSDAY

First Meeting of Manchester's Game Club Will Be Held at Tinker Hall.

The Manchester Fish and Game club will hold its first meeting of the fall Thursday evening in Tinker hall. The session is scheduled to start promptly at eight o'clock. The club was organized about a year ago and already has made a wonderful record, the membership now includes about 500 hunters and fishermen. At the coming meeting the work of the past year will be reviewed and a report of the secretary and treasurer will be made.

Through the influence of the club 100 young pheasants were secured from the state and released in the woods and a large number of young trout were placed in the streams in the immediate vicinity of Manchester.

As many of the members as can possibly do so, are urged to attend the meeting Thursday evening.

COUNTRY CLUB'S HARVEST SUPPER

Country Club members who have not already made reservations for the harvest supper and dance at the clubhouse Thursday evening should do so at once as it is essential that Caterer Ocaso, who is to serve the meal at seven o'clock, know tomorrow for how many he shall provide.

Barrett & Robbins have agreed to install a radio, set to furnish supper music as Ed Smith's orchestra will not arrive at the clubhouse before eight o'clock. Mr. and Mrs. Charles Osgoby, who head the committee of arrangements, will be glad to have members call them up at their home as there is hardly time now to send acceptances by mail. Their ring is 1427.

If there are those who would like to attend the supper and afterwards play cards instead of dance, they will have that privilege.

HALLOWE'EN WHIST.

Mrs. W. H. Nevers and her sister, Miss Edith Smith, entertained with a Hallowe'en whist at their home, 174 Main street, Saturday evening. The party was given in honor of their father, George A. Guests were present from Wapping, where Mr. Smith formerly lived.

The home was tastefully decorated in keeping with the Hallowe'en season. The refreshments and favors were also appropriate to the occasion, and a radio concert added to the enjoyment of the evening.
