CHENEY ANSWERS ON CHILD LABOR

Tells Manufacturers' Opinions of Age Child Should Start Work.

Howell Cheney as chairman of the Committee on Junior Education and Employment, National Association of Manufacturers, today issued a reply to the attack of the National Child Labor Committee which declared that the association had advocated that "children be allowed to leave school and go to work at the age of fourteen."

"We have made a comprehensive study of this problem," said Mr. Cheney, "and that study embraces many statements made by Mrs. Woolley and other professional educators. At our recent convention part of the study was quoted and I made this comment: His Statement.

"I believe that any unprejudiced judge would say unhesitatingly that beyond the age of fourteen the predominance of evidence is against compulsory education and in favor of the rule of individual education, with perhaps some legal measures of encouragement like scholarships, rather than exclusion from work."

Manchester Evening Herald

PUBLISHED BY THE HERALD PRINTING CO. Founded by Elwood S. Eia Oct. 1, 1887. Every Evening Except Sundays and Holidays. Entered at the Post Office at Manchester as Second Class Mail Matter.

WEDNESDAY, OCT. 27, 1926.

past elections have appeared at the polling places in the "rush hours," subjecting themselves to the discomfort of standing in line and imposing delay on other voters who must vote when they can.

LEARN THE MACHINE.

New voters and those who have transferred to Manchester from towns and cities where the voting machine is not in use should by no means fail to attend one of the series of demonstrations of the machine being held at the Municipal building today, tomorrow and Friday, from 2 in the afternoon until 9 in the evening.

Nothing is more disconcerting, nor more to the prejudice of intelligent expression of the voter's will, than for the elector to find himself in the presence of a voting machine with no previous idea as to how to operate it.

To the practical politician "straight" voting is a thing to be desired. But it is entirely beyond debate that the voter should not only have the right to split his ticket and vote for precisely such candidates as he pleases, but that he should be given entire facility in the exercise of that right.

The voting machine of course gives him that privilege as completely as does the paper ballot—provided that he is sufficiently familiar with its operation not to go into a panic in the voting booth, falling under the temptation to pull the "straight" lever and let it go at that.

If there is a single voter in Manchester who is without experience of voting machines and yet fails to take advantage of this opportunity to familiarize himself with their workings, he will have only himself to blame if he comes out of the booth next Tuesday feeling that he has made a fizzle of the exercise of his franchise.

HALL-MILLS.

The row between Special Prosecutor Simpson and the foreman and some other members of the Somerset County grand jury, over the Hall-Mills murder case, is just one more indication of the state of mind of a considerable part of the population of that corner of New Jersey where the notorious tragedy was staged.

What has occurred is that Prosecutor Simpson, several weeks ago, investigated the leanings and proclivities of the members of the present grand jury panel, and, entirely dissatisfied with what he found there, recalled the hold-over April grand jury and laid before it his evidence against Mrs. Hall, her two brothers and her cousin.

Birth day anniversary of Theodore Roosevelt and Secretary James J. Davis.

Every Englishwoman is a law-breaker unless she wears flannel. Ancient laws regulating wearing apparel never having been repealed. Under a decree of Henry VIII, wives who disobey their husbands may be whipped.

PREVENT POLLS JAM. Because Connecticut voters understand the importance of next Tuesday's state and congressional election, as bearing on the political future quite as much as on the immediate outcome of the present contest, it is to be anticipated that a very heavy vote will be polled.

WHY? The gathering of four hundred thousand tribesmen from all over North Africa to attend the simultaneous weddings of the three sons of the Sultan of Morocco seems a strange proceeding indeed to people of western standards.

Though industry is on a very different basis in the Barbary states from that of America or Europe, the vast bulk of these folk must be appearing themselves from their every day activities, in order to participate in this event, to an extent actually alarming from the economic viewpoint.

Practically all of them are Mohammedans. Practically all of them are being held in political subjugation by Christian nations.

Practically all of them, in greater or less degree, resent this condition. It would not be at all surprising if it should presently develop that there is something more than holiday making to this tremendous assemblage.

KLAN STIGMA.

The support of the Ku Klux Klan may have been at one time and perhaps still may be much desired by some politicians, but it is startling how quickly almost any candidate, anywhere, will cut and run if he thinks somebody is trying to pin the label of that organization on him.

The very earnestness of the disclaimers of Senators Watson and Robinson of Indiana concerning any affiliation whatsoever with the Klan are a case in point. When these gentlemen declare that they had nothing to do with the Klan, they of course tell the truth.

The thing is rapidly approaching a stage where it recalls those crazes for denunciation which in times past brought about the burning of witches and stoning to death of people accredited with possessing the evil eye.

"He's a Klan candidate!" is a charge which may be brought against anybody, by any person, however irresponsible; and immediately the object of the denunciation is put in peril of his political life—and knows it.

Old Masters

Does the road wind uphill all the way? Yes, to the very end.

Will the day's journey take the whole long day? From morn to night, my friend.

But is there for the night a resting-place? A roof for when the slow dark hours begin.

May not the darkness hide it from my face? You cannot miss that inn.

Shall I meet other wayfarers at night? Those who have gone before.

Then must I knock, or call—when just in sight? They will not keep you standing at that door.

Shall I find comfort, travel-sore and weak? Of labor you shall find the sum.

Will there be beds for me and all who seek? Yea, beds for all who come.

Stewart's WASHINGTON LETTERS NEW YORK

BY CHARLES P. STEWART.

Washington, Oct. 27.—If Queen Marie of Rumania comes to your town, or far son, Prince Nicholas, or Princess Ileana, or all three, or any combination of them, and you see them, don't forget the rules laid down by Assistant Secretary of State J. B. Egan in the presence of royalty.

Wright is the government's super-authority on all such problems, its social court of last resort, its final arbiter on questions of etiquette, national and international.

You won't be slammed in jail if you make any bad breaks, short of bomb throwing, as you might be in Europe, but you don't want to be considered a roughneck, do you?

While royalty's in sight nobody should turn his or her back on it. Keep your face always turned toward royalty. After royalty has turned the corner or faded over the horizon or made its exit otherwise, then you can go about your business headfirst, as a newfangled person would do.

Royalty can leave you as royalty pleases, but when you leave royalty you must do it backward, bowing, or edgewise, with your head turned over your shoulder, facing royalty—or somehow so that you don't turn your back on it and walk off, as if royalty were of no consequence.

As for raiment, wear the fullest kind of full dress, depending on the hour.

In the daytime—for a man—so-called morning clothes—cutaway, gray striped, pants, spats, patent leathers, high silk hat, gloves and a walking stick, preferably.

For a woman, afternoon dress—whatever that is for a woman.

For a man, take your hat off, of course, even if you're bald and a cold wind's blowing. For a woman, keep your hat on, though it's indoors and you'd like to get rid of it.

In the evening—for a man—wear a spike tail. A dinner jacket doesn't do in royalty's presence after 6 p. m., no matter how informal the occasion.

For a woman—swellest evening outfit she can muster.

Say "Your Majesty" to the queen when you're introduced.

Similarly say "Your Royal Highness" to the prince and princess, upon introduction.

After that drop the "Majesty" and "Highness" business.

Say "Madame" to the queen at frequent intervals, "Sir" to the prince and "Mademoiselle" to the princess.

This shouldn't be overlooked. Too much "Majesty-ing" and "Highness-ing" are vulgar. At the start they're essential—subsequently, too sweet, to be wholesome.

Otherwise, don't chew tobacco in the royal presence—for tobacco isn't chewed in Rumania—or eat with your knife at official banquets, and you'll hold your own with royalty as well as the next one.

Assistant Secretary of State Wright didn't specifically ban tobacco chewing and sword swallowing at the table, but they're taboo in Rumanian high society, according to dispatches from Bucharest.

PRACTICE IS FINE. FIRST DOCTOR—How is your practice getting on? SECOND DOCTOR—Excellent! It's got to the place where I can tell some of my patients there is nothing wrong with them.—Flegende Blaetter, Munich.

New York, Oct. 27.—It is one of the many paradoxes of the city that New York, which bears down its landmarks and erases without hesitation its historic spots, also celebrates, upon the slightest provocation, the birthdates of its many traditions.

Thus, passing along one street I note the historic "Spanish flats" surrendering to the wrecking crew, while Broadway makes ready for a pageant and the waterfront flies banners in celebration of the completion of the Erie Canal by which the Hudson and the Buffalo became linked and water commerce to the west was opened to the port of Manhattan.

In their time, the "Spanish flats" were the last word in American luxury. New York always has set the luxury pace, even back in New York erected the first fashionable flat dwellings America had seen.

Just back of Greenwich village a little city of 20,000 persons or more is thrust upward into the streets, while business places and dwelling places are torn down to make way for a subway extension.

Whole blocks will vanish within a few weeks and one of the most colorful sectors of "Little Italy" will over your shoulder, facing royalty or somehow so that you don't turn your back on it and walk off, as if royalty were of no consequence.

For weeks the streets have been alive with chatter as the former children of Naples and Sicily protested and frantically went about in search of new elements.

The activities have been communal. Family groups unite to help another group get moved. During the night families are moved during the night. Giuseppe has finished his day's toil. None can afford a mover's van.

Merchants go about with foreboding looks upon their faces. Businesses that have taken them years to build are wiped out as though by fire. There's nothing to do about it but wring their hands and look about for a spot to start all over.

But Manhattan is too big, too busy to think about such things. The cry for speed and service is heard above all other sounds of the city.

Twenty thousand people—a very comfortably sized little city—must start life anew, just as though a hurricane had swept across their path and, by some miracle, left lives and possessions intact.

THE ROMANCE OF AMERICA: Aaron Burr (13)

Burr was indicted for murder in New York and New Jersey. He kept away from those two states and the following winter resumed his duties as vice president at Washington. After his term ended, Burr was penniless. His estate, Richmond Hill, was sold for debts, and an exile from New York, he turned westward.

Burr was received with great honor in the west where the Republican party was strongest and freer notions of dueling prevailed.

His design of an empire in Mexico, it is believed, came to him at about the year 1805. The west was then unfriendly toward Spain.

Rumors of Burr's plans sped swiftly over the west, and as the former vice president traveled down the Ohio river, recruits flocked to him. Boats and supplies were contracted for. But at Frankfort, Ky., Burr was arrested on a charge of conspiring to injure a foreign power at peace with the United States. (Continued).

CASH FROM U. S. BACKS RUM MEN ACROSS BORDER

Canadian Whiskey Trust Is Financed by Capital in States, Say Officials; Smuggling Liquor Big Business.

Washington.—Run running has been developed to its highest pitch of efficiency on the Detroit river section of the Canadian border, ac-ording to federal dry officials. This "sector" of the rum war front is regarded as the government's most serious problem in stopping up the inward flow of foreign liquors. The Canadian Rum trust, backed probably by American capital and manned chiefly by Americans, has developed a distribution machine in that district comparable to that of the big industries. On the Canadian side are numerous liquor warehouses connected to the river by canals. Leading to the warehouses are railroad spur tracks furnishing direct communication from the Canadian liquor centers. The "trust" has erected a number of boat houses on the American side of the river to house liquor smuggled over the border. The dash from Canada to United States requires three to five minutes, according to the speed of the boat. Liquor Stores Safe The liquor stores thus placed on American soil are safe from molestation by the government, excepting through the use of search warrants, extremely difficult to obtain unless evidence of sale is furnished. Liquor is never sold from boat houses, but taken to Detroit or other markets by automobile. "Government agents have the best opportunity to grab the smugglers on the river, but even that chance is extremely thin," a prohibition official said. "The Detroit river district is the scene of probably the greatest activity of rum runners for an area of the size. Just how much whiskey and beer goes through this section nobody can guess but the volume is extremely heavy." The Detroit river sector was first handled by the prohibition unit or the land army of the government in the rum war. Later it was transferred to the control of the customs service, but subsequently sent back to the dry unit. Responsibility for enforcement is now in the hands of the prohibition administrator for Ohio and Michigan. Billed to "Mexico" Officials explained that liquor is shipped to the Canadian border on freight cars billed "for Mexico." These shipments are entirely legal under the Canadian law and even operations of the liquor treaty between Canada and the United States cannot improve the situation. Another danger zone on the Canadian border is in the vicinity of Niagara Falls. A considerable volume of liquor crosses Lake Ontario in fast motor boats. Smuggling is fairly general on the northern New York border where the runners concentrate on furnishing a supply of beer and ale to the American trade. Thousands of automobiles have been captured by the customs service in Northern New York in the last few months. Most of them are employed by the customs and prohibition authorities in the battle against smugglers. The Florida district is still giving the government considerable trouble. M. O. Dunning, collector of customs at Savannah, Ga., and prohibition czar of the Southeast is making a good record having captured a greater number of motor boats and schooners.

Winter Operations

During the winter smugglers operating with the Bahama Islands and Cuba as bases rushed liquor to the American shore almost daily. Probably fifty per cent of the smugglers got by the coast patrol owing to lack of facilities for guarding the coast. Smugglers, officials explained, had the "whole east Coast to shoot at," and in addition they sent many of their liquor ships around to the West Coast of Florida, where big bases hidden in the swamps formed a refuge for the rum runners and their wares until it could be delivered to the markets. Smugglers are continuing their liquor running on the Northeastern Coast of United States, where a scattered rum row has lurked for several years. A heavy concentration of Coast Guard cutters, ever, has held smuggling in this district to a minimum. A mummified horse, the first known to history, was unearthed recently in Egypt. It is more than about 3500 years old.

IRELAND STUDYING GAELIC LANGUAGE WITH NEW VIGOR

Dublin.—The Irish Free State government has succeeded in making it a paying proposition to speak Irish; with the result that even the most indifferent are hurrying forth to line up with the Gaelic League and reap some of the benefits of this new revolution which is permeating the Free State. For the future non-Irish speaking inhabitants will not get the big jobs in the Civil Service, or as teachers, in fact, they will not get any job so readily if they have not the additional usefulness of knowing Irish. The Gaelic Commission appointed some months back is about ready to report, and as a result several more interesting steps are about to be taken by the government to drive Irish into the hearts of the people. One proposal that will probably be adopted is to try and prevent native speakers from emigrating to the United States or anywhere else. Irish speaking policemen will probably be offered special advantages if they can work in Irish-speaking districts, while it is reported that special grants will be given to Irish speaking districts, including funds to promote agitation for preventing native speakers from emigrating. Special facilities will also be granted for officials of all kinds to qualify as Irish speakers for service in such districts. In a word national and commercial advantages of every practical kind are scheduled for Irish speakers. Irish will remain with English the joint official language, with the exception that for the first time it will pay better to speak Irish. Out of a total of 5,636 National schools of the Free State only about twelve have applied for permission not to teach Irish. These

HE'S SPOOFING!

London.—A bird fancier was in the act of releasing some carrier pigeons recently when he was accosted by a passerby. "Excuse me, sir," the stranger said, "but how far do pigeons fly on a rule?" "Oh, thousands of miles, sometimes." "And don't they ever get lost?" "Well, I used to lose one now and then, but I've had all my birds crossed with parrots, and when they get lost they can ask their way home." THAT'S THE ONE. "You say you're looking for a cashier. I thought you hired one just last week." "I did. That's the one I'm looking for."—St. John, N. B., Globe.

How times have changed! Look stock, and barrel no longer refer to a gun. What's become of the old fashioned preacher who believed that a sermon to be big had to be long? THE TINYMITES

(READ THE STORY, THEN COLOR THE PICTURE) The hills rang out with voices clear. The sort of shouts that bring good cheer. The cart the Tinymites had built was sure a great success. As Mister Squirrel jumped through space, a smile broke out on every face, and Scout loudly shouted, "This is great, I must confess." It seemed that they were going fast, for trees and things went whizzing past. Each Tinykite was hanging on as tight as he could hold. They hit the bumpy spots and then flew in the air and back again. Then Carpy said, "We're heading north. The air is getting cold." Perhaps the strangest sort of stunt was Scout riding in front. He sat upon the squirrel's back with legs dangling down. He'd sway to this side; then to that, and nearly lost his Boy Scout hat. In fact the others thought him quite as funny as a clown. The trip to him was rather rough. He shouted, "Say, I've had enough. Does someone want to come up here, and let me in the cart?" "Course not a Tinykite agreed. "Why, gee," they said, "at such a speed, we surely would be bumped until it shook us all apart." And then, what happened? Mercy, me. The squirrel started up a tree. When Scout saw this coming he was much too scared to peep. The rest were taken by surprise, and when they came to realize that they were going to have a fall, 'twas far too late to leap. Of all the falls that ever came, Well, this one surely was a shame. The cart went topsy-turvy, and the squirrel got away. The Tinymites fell in a heap, but still there was no cause to weep. 'Twas just a queer and sudden way to end a perfect day. (To be Continued) (The Tinymites continue on their journey in the next story.)

TEN COMMANDMENTS MEAN NOTHING HERE

"Thou shalt not steal!" Thus reads one of the Ten Commandments being shown in the movie film of the same title at the Circle theatre. Last night, Joe LaForge, a young boy from Tolland Turnpike went to the Circle on his bicycle.

The Biblical picturization made a deep impression on Joe who is employed as a printer's "devil" at the Manchester Evening Herald. He was sure he had profited greatly by seeing the film.
