DEMOCRATS TO START CAMPAIGN TO UNSEAT VARE

With the Aid of the Republi- can Insurgents They Hope To Gain Control of the U. S. Senate.

Washington, Nov. 9.—A militant campaign to seat William B. Wilson, Democrat, as "the legally elected" Senator from Pennsylvania in the Seventieth Congress has been agreed upon by a group of national Democratic leaders. It was learned here today.

The Democrats expect, and will get, the support of a majority of the Republican-insurgents in all probability. The Democrats and insurgents can control the Seventieth Congress whenever they get together.

Democrats' Plan.
A week ago the Democrats were talking only of denying a seat to William S. Vare, or of expelling him after being seated, because of his expenditures in the Republican primary. If successful, this would create a vacancy which would ostensibly be filled by the appointment of another Republican. But now, after reviewing the election, they plan to go after bigger game—the seating of Wilson.

The change in Democratic tactics is due in large measure to the controversy provoked over the constitutional aspects of the question. The constitution provides a Senator may be denied his seat by a majority vote, but to expel him requires a two-thirds vote. Authority on the constitution differs widely as to the proper procedure to be invoked against Vare.

Question Legality.
The Democrats, aided by the counsel of some of the Republican insurgents, have decided to walk right around this controversy and make a fight on the legality of Vare's election on November 2, which would bring the question before the Senate as an ordinary contest and thus within the scope of the majority vote.

The city of Philadelphia, which Vare controls politically, will be the focal point of the opposition attack. In the congested wards of the city, it will be alleged, there were thousands of votes illegally cast for Vare, and, similarly, thousands of votes uncounted on Wilson.

Carried the State.
Wilson carried the state of Pennsylvania, outside of Philadelphia. He came to the Philadelphia county line with a majority of approximately 250,000.

Because of the tremendous majority of Vare, the Democrats themselves do not believe they can prove that 200,000 votes were illegally cast. But their strategy is to get the question before the Senate on such a basis. They believe they have the votes to lose Vare his seat on such grounds, and they believe also they can hold those same votes for the seating of Wilson. Without Vare's vote in the Seventieth Senate, there will be 47 Republicans, 47 Democrats and one Ex-Convict.

It was indicated today, however, there will be at least one defection in the Democratic ranks. Senator Cole Blaise of South Carolina, said he intended to vote for the seating of Vare because of his adherence to the general principle of "state's rights," particularly the right of a state to say who shall represent it in the Senate.

UNCLE JOE CANNON IS SINKING STEADILY

Danville Ill., Nov. 9.—The condition of "Uncle Joe" Cannon is causing some concern among his relatives and friends. The aged statesman is gradually failing. He sleeps and does sixteen to eighteen hours a day. He is not suffering from any ailment, according to the attending physician, Dr. Charles E. Wilkinson, who says "he is just wearing out like a piece of old machinery. It is doubtful if he will live another month."

HERMINE IS REAL RULER OF KAISER

Wilhelm's Wife Is a Diplomat And Plays the Leading Part at the "Imperial Court" at Doorn.

Doorn, Nov. 9. (United Press)—Hermine, wife of the ex-Kaiser of Germany, is a dark-haired, dark-eyed, lively little woman of 38, and in appearance rather of the Southern Belgian or certain French type, than she is of the German type.

Mother of five healthy children, she is the soul and real governor of the "Imperial Court" at Doorn. She still loves to hold at his exiled residence here. She looks much more like an efficient mother, than a loving wife whose aim is to soothe and charm a man of the disposition of Wilhelm II, whose nervousness and irritability, always pronounced when he was Kaiser, has been increased by his exile and his feeling that he has been badly abused by a great part of his countrymen.

Yet when Hermine first came to Doorn she knew full well the task that was ahead of her. Chosen by a family council of the Hohenzollerns with the full consent of the German Junker Party, she knew that her task would be entirely different from the work of a good mother and good wife such as Wilhelm's first wife had been through-out her life.

Is a Politician
Hermine, who had always taken a great interest in diplomatic affairs as well as in politics and newspaper work, knew that the lonely exiled ex-Kaiser at Doorn would look to her for love and obedience as is expected from every good German housewife; but she also knew that if she knew how to deal with the involved and complicated temperament of the Wilhelm she would soon be able to play an important part in the activities of the "Court" at Doorn.

She soon found that Wilhelm while still believing himself the ruler of the world, was constantly seeking advice and guidance from those around him, and that mostly he was willing to form his own opinion through the opinions of others around him, particularly his marshals and generals.

When, consequently, after his first year of exile Wilhelm created an imperial court in miniature at Doorn and then later married Hermine, Hermine saw at once that she could best master the situation by giving love and complete devotion to Wilhelm and by making his work easier by taking on her own shoulders a considerable part of it.

He never realized that this was Wilhelm, adoring his young and clever wife with the blind devotion of a much older man, appears never to have noticed how Hermine has slowly but surely

KILLS WOMAN WITH AXE TRIES TO BURN BODY

New York, Nov. 9.—Declaring that she "annoyed him and that he had to get rid of her," Patrick McClaflerty, assistant superintendent of a fashionable apartment house in Flushing, early today admitted that he had killed Miss Robina Lytle, 50, a nurse, according to the police.

McClaflerty, police said, declared that he struck the woman with a hatchet during an argument in the basement apartment in which they lived together. The blow killed her instantly. McClaflerty said he had been drinking and wasn't altogether responsible for what he did. Police said McClaflerty told of dismembering the body and burning all except the torso in the apartment house furnace. The torso, he said, was too big to go in the furnace and he buried it under a pile of coal, where it was found yesterday.

CRISIS IN CABINET AVERTED IN BERLIN

Berlin, Nov. 9.—While a Cabinet crisis which loomed as a result of the government's defeat in the Reichstag last night on the question of unemployment relief has been temporarily averted, there are indications a plenty today that the Nationalists do not propose to discontinue their opposition tactics.

The McAdoo—Unworried

If William G. McAdoo and his family are worrying over the prominence of Governors Al Smith, Vic Donahey and Al Ritchie in after-the-election presidential talk, there's no evidence of it here. This new picture of the McAdoo shows them on the steps of their Los Angeles home. The children are Ellen Wilson, 11 (left), and Mary Faith, 6.

BRITISH COAL STRIKE COST NATION A BILLION

London, Nov. 9.—The British coal strike, which has been in progress since May 1, has cost Great Britain far in excess of $1,500,000,000, according to estimates presented to the House of Commons this afternoon by Sir Philip Cunliffe-Lister, chairman of the Board of Trade.

Sir Philip estimated that reduced activity and increased unemployment had alone cost the nation between 250,000,000 and 300,000,000 pounds sterling.

COOLIDGE GOING WEST

Washington, Nov. 9.—President Coolidge tonight starts upon what apparently has become his annual pilgrimage into the West. Chicago and Omaha have claimed him in past years. This time he goes to Kansas City, where, on Armistice Day, he will dedicate the $2,000,000 Liberty Memorial, cornerstone of which he laid five years ago in company with General Pershing, Marshal Foch, General Diaz, and the other great allied war leaders.

WAX EFFIGY OF MRS. MILLS TO BE USED AS AN EXHIBIT

Prosecutor Simpson Springs Another Surprise—Figure Of Dead Woman's Head Will Be Shown to Jury in Glass Case—Will Test Nerves of Defendants— Fingerprint Experts on Stand Today

Court House, Somerville, N. J., Nov. 9.—A wax effigy of the late Mrs. Eleanor Mills will be dragged into the court room of the Hall-Mills murder trial this afternoon or tomorrow—before the eyes of the defendants, Mrs. Frances Stevens Hall, and her two brothers, Henry and Willie Stevens, it was learned today as the defense lawyers were centering; a savage cross examination on two fingerprint experts.

It is to be the ever-spectacular Prosecutor Alexander Simpson's newest "surprise move."

The effigy purports to show how the choir singer's throat was cut. In a glass case, the throat of the dead woman will be exhibited to the jury in wax form.

It will be one of the strangest exhibits ever shown at a murder trial.

Test Of Nerves
It is expected to afford a severe test to the nerves of the defendants, particularly Mrs. Hall, whose view was blocked by her lawyers the other day when they brought in the effects of her slain husband and his paramour.

The defense centered all its guns this morning on two fingerprint experts.

Joseph A. Faurot of the New York Police Department, one of the outstanding fingerprint experts of the country, and Edward F. Schwartz, a fingerprint expert of Newark, N. J., were called to the witness stand and subjected to a heavy barrage of questions concerning their previous testimony. Both Faurot and Schwartz had testified that the fingerprint on "exhibit S 17," the professional card found near the bodies of the slain Mrs. Edward W. Hall and Mrs. Mills, bore the fingerprints of Willie Stevens.

STICK TO STORY

Schwartz did not deviate from his previous statement that the fingerprint on exhibit S 17 was that of Willie Stevens. Faurot, who had been asked by the defense to identify the fingerprints taken of Willie Stevens the day of his arrest, as of the "arch" type. Faurot replied affirmatively. About five per cent of those arrested have "arch-type" fingerprints. It has been tentatively enlarged photographs of the left index fingerprint taken from Willie Stevens and the print on Dr. Hall's card were passed to the jury. They examined them with interest.

At one juncture McCarter laughed aloud and referred to the enlarged transparency of Willie's fingerprint as "The Great Pooch Bah." Faurot cut in with this remark: "It is very convincing."

Court adjourned at 12:28 until 1:30 with Faurot still on the stand.

Aboard Queen Marie's Special Train (in Wyoming) Nov. 9.—Dissension still held sway today aboard the royal Rumanian flir, while Queen Marie, outwardly unaware of the mess of misunderstandings and controversy around her, conversed gaily with Governor Nellie Ross, another striking feminine personality.

Loi Fuller, one-time dancing star and close friend of her majesty, together with May Birkhead, her press agent, were both ill today and under care of the queen's nurse, following what has been given out as the determination of Queen Marie that it would be better for the peace of the entourage if both were to leave the train, perhaps at Chicago, perhaps at Denver, where the flir will arrive today.

WHAT'LL THE SURPRISE BE AT STATE TOMORROW

The Management, Even at Last Moment Will Not Tell What It Will Be.

If someone should tell you that if you go to a certain place you would there get a big surprise when you would arrive there, that you would have a lot of fun, and see this picture, as it presents something unique in this type. The story revolves around a woman of culture and refinement, who has her only child torn from her when he is only a baby. For fifteen years, clad in rags, she trades the streets selling matches in search of the man responsible. Her dramatic meeting with the arch villain and her son forms one of the most surprising and thrilling climaxes. A strong cast, including Mickey McBain and Kathryn McGuire, appear in support of the star.

The second feature balances the bill admirably as it is a fast moving Western drama adapted from one of the best sellers. It is called "The Grey Devil," and advance report speaks of it as the film with a thrill in every foot. Rough riding, straight shooting and hard hitting, punctuated by screamingly funny comedy describes "The Grey Devil."

STOPS ANY COLD IN A FEW HOURS

"Pape's Cold Compound" opens clogged nose and head—ends grippe

Relief comes instantly. A dose taken every two hours until three doses are taken will end grippe misery and break up a severe cold either in the head, chest, body or limbs. It promptly opens clogged-up nostrils and air passages in the head, stops nasty discharge or nose running, relieves sick headache, dullness, feverishness, sore throat, sneezing, soreness and stiffness. Don't stay stuffed-up! Quit blowing and snuffling! Ease your throbbing head! Nothing else in the world gives such prompt relief as "Pape's Cold Compound," which costs only thirty-five cents at any drug store. It acts without assistance, tastes nice, causes no inconvenience. Be sure you get the genuine.—Adv.

TWO BIG FEATURES AT RIALTO THEATER

The two feature pictures being offered at the Rialto today and tomorrow make up one of the most attractive programs offered in this town in a long while. "Somebody's Mother" is one of the attractions holding forth on these two days and it stars the screen's most popular mother, Mary Carr. Those who believe that they have seen everything in mother roles are invited to see this picture, as it presents something unique in this type. The story revolves around a woman of culture and refinement, who has her only child torn from her when he is only a baby. BUS CROWDING
 It develops, after a fatal collision in Rhode Island, in which a number of lives were lost, that a motorbus which figured in the disaster was overcrowded to the extent of having passengers seated in camp chairs in the aisles. Several state agencies are investigating, with a view, possibly, to punishment of those persons guilty of the overcrowding, certainly in hope of preventing any further instances of such criminal disregard for safety.
 So far Connecticut has escaped this particular class of transportation casualties. But many of its citizens who have had occasion to travel in interurban buses, and who have seen those deadly little iron campchairs either brought into use or tucked away in a corner behind the driver, quite obviously awaiting demand, have wondered how long it would be before the disaster to which they are an invitation should arrive.
 Even the most luxurious motorbus is nicely figured out to carry the maximum number of passengers which it is capable of accommodating—and there is not, in any of them, a single square foot of space that can be devoted safely to the carriage of standees, to say nothing of persons in chairs. To fill up the aisle space with seated patrons, fitted into the passage with the accuracy of parts in a Chinese puzzle, is to solidly imprison every passenger in the car as effectively as though shackled, handcuffed and bolted to the floor. Egress is hopelessly blocked.
 This is bad enough under any conditions, for it is a strain on the nerves of imaginative passengers which the bus people have no earthly right to impose. In case of accident it puts a premium on the wildest of panic and practically insures death and maiming to some, at least, of the victims.
 The presence of folding chairs in a motorbus is prima facie evidence of intention to overload. If there were no such intention the chairs would not be there.
 If the state of Connecticut does not put a peremptory end to the carrying of make-shift seats in motorbuses, patently intended as they must be to make possible the unsafe loading of the vehicles, then the state authorities will be as guilty as the bus company when, on the inevitable first occasion, a load of passengers is hurried to death in a wriggling, helpless, trapped mass.

TOO DANGEROUS.
 If there were any truth whatever to the allegations made by Senator Norris of Nebraska that Senator-elect Vare of Pennsylvania obtained his election through frauds at the polls, there would be a glimmer of reason to the plan of Senate Democrats and off-horse Republicans to refuse to permit the new Pennsylvania member to be seated. But those who are familiar with the utterances of Norris know perfectly well that he is extremely liable to make a direct, flat statement on even the most important of subjects, and wait until after he has spoken to verify his facts. And in default of the knowledge of frightful political corruption in Philadelphia anywhere but in the mind of the senator from the Platte river country there is extremely small likelihood that anything is going to develop which would rightfully invalidate Vare's election.
 Lacking any evidence of a crooked election, then, in either the case of Vare or the case of Smith of Illinois, it is probable that most of the noise over the proposed unseating of these two men is being made right now—that by the time the hour arrives for throwing either or both of them out of the offices to which the people of their states have elected them, there will be a decided reaction from the present threatening attitude of their political enemies.
 If the Senate of the United States can set itself up to judge of the righteousness of primary election methods, then there is no limit to the extent to which it can intrude into the political lives of the states. It can declare a candidate unfit for a senate seat because somebody spent a lot of money in a pre-primary campaign, then it can with equal right investigate every move on the political checkboard of every state organization with reference to every town chairman, every precinct captain, every city job given in reward for political service, every list of voters handed to a ward worker—because all these things have their bearing on the results of primaries at which Senate candidates are named—and all of them are outrageous if you care to consider them so.

There is not a Senator sitting in the American Holy of Holies who would be there if nobody had spent a dollar to put him there. There is not one of these purists, howling for the scalp of Vare and Smith, who got his job without cash being expended in his interest. It simply cannot be done. Nobody expects it to be done. The law does not require it to be done. Neither Norris nor Pat Harrison nor any other of the virtuous ones who deary Vare and Smith are in any better case than these people except through the fact that they live in states where a dollar goes infinitely further in politics than in Pennsylvania or Illinois, because there are so many fewer dollars around.

And nobody knows any better than these same noise makers that if they swung an axe at Vare or Smith it would sooner or later turn out to be a double bitted one, capable of cutting two ways and as liable as not to chop them away from their own jobs.
 Election frauds are one thing. Primary fights are another. And full well does every United States Senator know that if you started booting out successful candidates because of these affairs, no senator in the lot would be safe.
 They are not going to start anything like that.
 The Vare-Smith rumpus is a thing of the moment. There will be nothing to it next March.

JAIL BREAKS.
 It is probable that there have been more jail deliveries, participated in by far more prisoners, in the last year than ever occurred before in the United States in ten times that period. We have not the figures, but from an extraordinarily rare event, escape of prisoners on a large scale has come in recent months to be a common enough sort of news. Within twenty-four hours we are told of the getaway of four criminals from a prison for the insane in New York state—three of them being murderers—and of a dash for freedom successfully carried out in the Ohio State Penitentiary by ten convicts. And these things occur within a week of the fatal break at the Tombs in New York city. In Tennessee, prison deliveries have become so common that they must have difficulty in keeping the cells reasonably filled.
 To what extent this comparatively new threat against law and order is due to relaxed discipline in conformity with the coddling policy so thoroughly touted throughout the country for several years, it would be impossible to guess; but there is sound reason to believe that the "new" policy in many prisons is to some extent responsible.
 Another thing that figures in many of these breaks unquestionably is a lessening in the sense of moral responsibility on the part of keepers and other attendants. These people are not highly paid, for they hold jobs requiring no particular skill, only a certain amount of courage and a sturdy dependability. And nowadays people who are not highly paid are much prone to resenting their position, regardless of anything but the knowledge that they cannot live like their neighbors.
 Bribery finds easy work to do with such men. The price of a new set of tires for his flivver will make more than one prison attack look the other way.

GARIBALDI.
 The mystery of Ricciotti Garibaldi is intriguing. So completely has the name of Garibaldi come to be identified with genuine patriotism and the cause of the Italian people that it seems impossible that this grandson of the great Emancipator could be engaged in the business of betraying anti-Fascist nationalists into the hands of the Mussolini group while pretending to be one of them.
 Yet on the surface this seems to be the case. It is inconceivable that the French authorities would have manufactured the alleged confessions which he is said to have made, for there is complete lack of incentive.
 Garibaldi himself prays that judgment be withheld. He half intimates that he did, indeed, take Mussolini money ostensibly for betraying his anti-Fascist comrades, but that he used that money to further the cause to which he was committed.
 Dangerous business, that—the triple cross, it has been called. But point of those who have held his family name to be synonymous with love of the Italian people, than servile submission to the Mussolini madness and betrayal of the thing for which all Garibaldis have stood.

WASHINGTON LETTER

Washington, Nov. 9.—With election out of the way, Washington will be filling up with national legislators pretty fast. It always does right after every election. Congress doesn't meet for nearly a month after an election date—it's a little more than a month this year—but there always is considerable preliminary work to be done.
 Besides, a great many congressmen are very much infatuated with Washington.

Perhaps it isn't surprising that a man from some jerkwater little town in the sticks should prefer the capital. Perish the thought that he should admit it to the home folks, but it's noteworthy that he makes for here the minute he's sure he's safely re-elected.
 According to early arrivals it's been an unusually grueling campaign for an off presidential year, except in parts of the country which always go the same way, regardless of issues or candidates or anything else.
 The individuals who have been doing the spellbinding are pretty well fagged out. Never were there so many states and congressional districts which classed as doubtful up to the last minute. Seldom in recent times has so much mud been sling. That's what the returning politicians say.

Secretary Mellon was the only cabinet member not drafted into the service by the Republican speakers' committee.
 Several others weren't at all keen about taking the stump, saying they were too busy here, but the committee dragged them all onto it on election day draw near—all who hadn't been there from the very beginning of the fight.
 Mellon wasn't very strongly urged. An old man and unaccustomed to it, he can't stand the wear and tear of personal contact with the electorate. He hasn't recovered yet from the agony he suffered during his attempt to make the only speech of his life during the Pennsylvania Republican primaries. As an orator, politicians don't consider him much of an asset, anyway.

An affair between men like Secretary Davis, Senator Jim Reed and Harry Hawes is a heavyweight encounter, which is exactly what this was, from all accounts.
 As soon as the tired campaigners have had time to rest up, plans will begin to shape themselves for Congress. Committee meetings already are beginning to be called.
 Lame ducks are being counted. Other political places must be conjured up for those who have earned their rewards. If they can't be elected to Congress they must be appointed to something else.
 The election debris is being swept up and the politicians are anxious to see that a good job is made of it. That's why they're flocking in to Washington again.

A THOUGHT
 A merry heart doeth good like a medicine, but a broken spirit drieth the bones.—Prov. 17:22.
 I had rather have a fool to make me merry than experience to make me sad.—Shakespeare.

IN NEW YORK
 New York, Nov. 9.—Manhattan constantly is being referred to as a terrible place in which to bring up children. Visitors are continuously throwing up their heads and wondering how wealthy young men and women can possibly be produced.
 Yet, somehow or other, those very districts about which so much is said and written continue year on year to produce young athletes of high caliber.
 An east side grammar school, famous for the number of tongues to be heard within its walls, wins most of the loving cups in athletics and scholarships alike. Its track teams win, its baseball teams win, its debaters, orators, essayists win—and yet it is that section of the ghetto where tenements pile one upon the other in dirty monstrosity. And the children who represent it come from every kingdom upon the earth.
 Going up a notch—the universities within the city turn out football teams which prove a match for the he-men of the great open spaces. Did not New York University recently vanquish the worthy southerners from Tulane?
 Did not a New York girl swim the channel? And another New Yorker, the mother of two, repeat the deed? And a third New Yorker make a most valiant struggle?

THEN THEY RUN
 "I bought a radio set to try to keep my children indoors."
 "Was it a success?"
 "Not altogether. They now stop indoors until the announcer calls: 'Good night, everybody.'"
 —Pele Mele, Paris.

QUEER QUIRKS OF NATURE
 BY ARTHUR N. PACK
 President, American Nature Ass'n.
 When our forefathers first possessed and settled our eastern country, they found in the forests a large bird the like of which they had never seen, save perhaps as a rare exotic.

Wild Turkeys
 When the custom of giving thanks for the harvest was inaugurated, the finest and most delicious product of the country was selected for the Thanksgiving feast. The custom has persisted, so that native Americans, wherever situated, feel less homesick if permitted to celebrate Thanksgiving with the traditional bird. Turkey falling, they make the best of some substitute.
 Though the wild turkey was originally a common denizen of our eastern woodlands, the tame counterpart of our barnyards is not its descendant.
 Goes Traveling
 Long before our eastern seacoast was settled, the Spaniards had found in Mexico a southern race of the same widespread species, and had taken breeding stock to the old world. There it prospered, and in due time reached England. Being supposed to be a product of Turkey, it was so named, and turkey it has ever since remained.
 Though readily distinguishable, the two races freely intermingle.

when chance brings them in contact, and thus it comes about that many flocks of tame turkeys, now ranging the forest-bordered farms of our mountain sections, show the markings of wings an dail peculiar to our wild bird.
Toll of the Gunner
 With the ruthless wastefulness which has characterized our conquest of the forest, we have well-nigh driven from our forests this beautiful and once abundant bird. Turkeys have been plucked in certain areas, and have met with a measure of success, but the fruits of such introductions are seldom equal in vigor to the native stock, and rarely do more than furnish to later gunners a taste of sport, and then follow their predecessors to oblivion.
 Power generated by a 50,000 kilowatt turbine constructed by an eastern company will do the work of 4,000,000 men.

Mrs. McCormick Reveals Secret of Good Health
 Victim of Heart Trouble, Nervousness and Weak Stomach, Mother of 7 Children Finds Relief. Strength Restored. Praises Tanlac

"Words cannot express the agony I went through," says Mrs. John McCormick, a popular matron whose seven beautiful children are the pride of Taft Avenue, Portland, Me.
 "My strength had vanished. I was afraid to go out on the street alone, my heart caused me so much trouble. It would skip a beat and palpitate. And my stomach was so upset that the sight of food nauseated me. And when I managed to force down a little food I would suffer for hours.
 "My plight shattered my nerves. And many nights I would hear the clock strike every hour, counting the minutes that seemed like years, tossing and turning, waiting for dawn to come. Then I would be so weary and worn that I could hardly drag one foot after the other. Life and the care of my children was a burden. In vain I sought relief.
 "Then a neighbor told me about Tanlac. And three bottles of this tonic relieved me of all my troubles. Quickly my old strength returned. I began to have an appetite for food. And now I can eat everything without a sign of indigestion. My heart never bothers me. And even the noise of seven children playing does not ruffle my nerves. Tanlac was a god-send."
 Tanlac relieves pain that ravages health. It often conquers serious troubles and builds up strength in famished bodies. It is Nature's own remedy made from roots, barks and herbs. Enjoy good health and strength. Begin taking Tanlac. The first bottle brings amazing results. Ask your druggist for Tanlac—today. Over 40 million bottles sold.

OPEN FORUM

"ANNIE OAKLEYS"

Editor The Herald:
You are all wrong on the origin of the term "Annie Oakleys" for free tickets. As an old New York newspaper man I remember when the term originated. There was a sporting writer on "The Mail and Express" who signed his name "Francis." I knew him well. He came around one afternoon to Lipson's Cafe at Park Row and Broadway. I don't know how many years ago, but I remember that he said that day to a crowd of newspapermen, "I used a new word this afternoon. I called free passes 'Annie Oakleys.'" That was the first time it ever was used in print and it had nothing to do with a baseball game. It was the occasion of a prize fight at the old Madison Square Garden. Before that time they used to tear off a corner of the ticket to show that it was a complimentary one so as to keep the books right. The ticket takers saw that this was an easy scheme to beat the management so the management got a street car conductor's punch and punched the press tickets full of holes to beat the game. Annie Oakley that week was playing in Brooklyn and "Francis" who saw her shooting playing cards full of holes, doped out the term. "Francis" by the way, was his last name. Five years ago he was living when I visited New York.

THE ROMANCE OF AMERICA: Sam Houston (6)

For his attack on Stanberry Houston was brought before the bar of the House, reprimanded and fined. The poet, Francis Scott Key, was his counsel. President Jackson remitted the fine. Houston left Washington for Texas, that romantic, unbounded world of the seething southwest, where he was to play the role of hero and avenger.

Houston rode into a land aflame against Mexican rule. Santa Anna was in power, and had established a cruel dictatorship.

Austin's father and 300 families had come into the state in 1820, bearing Spanish land grants given to create a barrier against Indian depredations. Traveling by ox-cart these pioneers had braved the wilds, tamed the Indians and cultivated the soil. Stephen Austin's arrest was like oil poured on the flame of revolt. (Continued.)

DREAM OF ESTHER INTERESTING DRAMA

Story of The Biblical Play to Be at South Methodist Church This Week.

The great Biblical drama, "The Dream of Queen Esther" will be presented at the South Methodist Episcopal church, Wednesday and Thursday evenings of this week will find the stage of the church banquet hall transformed into the household of an Old Testament Jewish home. Mordecai, a captive Jew at Shushan, is lamenting the fall of Jerusalem. He is a noble man, loved by all, and dwells with his slave Meesha Zabeel and his adopted daughter, Esther, in the midst of his mourning. He is the chamberlain to the Persian King, and informs him that the king is about to choose a wife from among the maidens of the kingdom and that Esther has been selected to present herself for the contest. The thought of losing Esther brings even greater sadness to Mordecai. While he is still deeply concerned about the condition of the Jewish people, a group of Jewish children come to the house-top for fun and frolic hoping to find Esther there to play with them. The children are singing and making merry when Mordecai enters heavily and in a state of grief. He checks with their presence. He conducts the evening devotions after which all are made very happy by the appearance of Esther.

'STRONGMAN STORY' TRUE, SAYS SCRIBE

Starts Separate Investigation And Obtains Names of Witnesses to Feats.

The Herald today secured what it considers further proof of the accuracy of its special article in Saturday night's edition about the super-human strength of Elmer G. Bitgood. Two of the highlights in the story were that Bitgood once lifted a steam boiler weighing 4,200 pounds and that as an illustration of his strength he lifted a wind-up reporter weighing 207 pounds with one finger.

The writer of this article is not the author of the feature story in Saturday's Herald. However, he had been assigned to attempt to secure further proof regarding the validity of the matter he lifted. He was vindicated of the author of the Bitgood story.

Paul Chartier, of 43 Church street, when questioned, said the story was absolutely true. "Every word was correct," said Mr. Chartier. "As a matter of fact, I was a conservative. There is plenty more that could be said in Mr. Bitgood's favor. Anyone who lives in Voluntown will corroborate those statements."

Mr. Chartier is well known in Manchester. He has conducted a blacksmith shop on Blaisell street for many years. Formerly he resided in Voluntown, where he was engaged in the blacksmith trade for nearly 15 years. He said the feats Bitgood executed were a matter of history in the little Connecticut town and that everyone there is acquainted with the facts.

"As far as lifting the steam boiler is concerned," remarked Mr. Chartier, "I know for a fact that the particular feat is true. In fact, I was standing on top of the boiler when he lifted it and there were six other men on top of it with me. There was no fake about it. Mr. Bitgood put a heavy plank in the bottom door of the furnace as a lever. He then got down on his hands and knees, crawled under the plank and lifted the boiler. The first time he did the stunt, the on-lookers were standing by looking on amazed. Then Mr. Bitgood told us to climb up on the boiler. We did and he repeated the stunt."

Wife White as Too.

In conclusion, Mr. Chartier said: "Anyone who says that story about Bitgood is a lot of 'bunk' does not know what he is talking about. Send them to me. I will tell them."

Mr. Chartier's wife also witnessed the feats.

Richard Bryan, proprietor of the Pinehurst Soda Shop, is another Manchester man who is well aware of many of the great feats performed by Bitgood. When questioned last night, Mr. Bryan said he knew the facts were true but referred the writer to Mr. Chartier whom he said was there when the stunts were performed.

As far as the statement regarding Bitgood lifting a 207-pound wind-up reporter with one finger is concerned, the writer can swear to that for he was the one who got the "free ride." That's that.

It's our Community Club. Let's help support it.—Adv.

MARRIAGE LICENSE IS CIRCLE'S FEATURE

Two-Day Attraction Should Appeal to All Playlovers.

"Marriage License," which opens a two days' engagement at the Circle theater tonight, is a picture you are bound to like. You are bound to like it, because you always like something that is unusual, well done, with drama and plenty of good comedy combined. There is plenty of all those in "Marriage License," so it is a picture you've got to see. See it either tonight or tomorrow afternoon or evening. It doesn't make any difference at which of these times you view this picture—as long as you do see it.

The story is that of a lovely Canadian girl who marries into an aristocratic English family. They refuse to accept her and have their son sent to India on military duty.

While he is gone a son is born. His mother convinces him that the baby is not his. A divorce follows, the family refuses to accept the child and the mother disappears with her baby.

Sixteen years later, in France, the boy comes home on a vacation to ask that he be sent to a military school in England. He brings with him his chum's father, the Heriot's lawyer. A reception follows. The lawyer finally convinces the mother she should give the boy his chance.

In England the doddery old grandfather recognizes the boy. His father comes with him to France to try for a reconciliation. His mother in the meantime has perfected her plans to marry Frenchman, the only man she has really loved.

But in the end—ah, there's the rub.

HERMINE IS REAL RULER OF KAISER

taken the reins in her hands and secured a power over the ex-Kaiser that his first wife never possessed. Wilhelm has never been the man with women, that Napoleon, for instance, was. Both dreamed of conquering Europe. Both suffered in exile. But in their handling of women their ways were entirely different. Napoleon dealt with women as Cyrano de Bergerac dalled with his opponents before delivering the fatal thrust: cruelly playing with them, making them believe they should win in the end, joking with them until finally ending all with a final thrust of cold steel, a more human procedure perhaps than Napoleon's heartless discarding of his erstwhile favorites.

But Wilhelm's attitude toward women has never been that of Napoleon. His ideas of "German faithfulness," his belief in large happy families, his religion and also his belief that women are inferior to men, has made his attitude toward them entirely different.

Knew What She Wanted.

When Hermine entered Wilhelm's castle at Doorn in 1922 as a

Keep Eliminative System Active

Good Health Requires Good Elimination.

ONE can't feel well when there is a retention of poisonous waste in the blood. This is called a toxic condition, and is apt to make one tired, dull and languid. Other symptoms are sometimes toxic backaches and headaches. That the kidneys are not functioning properly is often shown by scanty or burning passage of secretions. Many people have learned the value of Doan's Pills, a stimulant diuretic, when the kidneys seem functionally inactive. Everywhere one finds enthusiastic Doan's users. Ask your neighbor!

happy submissive bride she had clearly in mind what she wanted to accomplish—and she has succeeded. She is today the real soul of the Imperial Court and everybody knows that when Hermine frowns at somebody in the morning Wilhelm will frown at the same person in the afternoon, or at the latest on the following morning.

Everybody who has any opportunity to study Wilhelm's court must admit that the ex-Kaiser is of a remarkably strong and active type, especially for a man of his age. He keeps his staff busy with the same well regulated order that prevailed at the old court at Berlin. Generally dressed by seven in the morning—or earlier—he starts the day with a short walk before breakfast and then enjoys a hearty meal surrounded by Hermine and two or three of her five children and a few select of the staff. Both before and after breakfast the ex-Kaiser says prayers, unless the court pastor happens to be present in which event the saying of prayers is delegated to the pastor.

After breakfast Wilhelm goes first through those "state-affairs" his court-marshal, Count von Finkenberg, thinks important enough to refer to Wilhelm. Thereafter the whole staff are gathered in one of the halls to devote half an hour to general conversation and attentive listening to the words of wisdom of "His Imperial Majesty."

Wilhelm usually takes the lead in these gatherings and speaks on some subject or other—very often a religious one—and speaks with fervor and conviction. People in touch with these courts say it is remarkable how Wilhelm's religious sentiments have been developing of recent years and that he has become a deeply religious man who devotes no small part of his time to religion and prayer.

This returning over the ex-Kaiser either returns to important state affairs, or goes out to saw wood, or joins Hermine and one or two of the children for a walk. Those who have seen Wilhelm drive through the wide streets of Berlin in the splendor of his pre-war days find it difficult to believe that the simply dressed grey-bearded man who bows and raises his hat most politely at Doorn was the once all-powerful German Kaiser. Meeting acquaintances he is almost invariably the first to raise his hat, and usually adds a cheerful "Guten Tag" or "Guten Morgen."

The balance of the day after luncheon is devoted to work both for the ex-Kaiser and for Hermine, who devotes herself mostly during these hours to the publicity end of Wilhelm's exile. She reads the newspapers, clips out interesting items and sorts them for presentation to Wilhelm. The court-marshal also reads the newspapers and makes clippings but must submit them to Hermine before giving them to the ex-Kaiser. Hermine censors the clippings eliminating anything that she feels would prove either personally or politically offensive to her husband, though

Wilhelm is given everything pertaining to international politics. The number of Germans who have been visiting Wilhelm's Doorn residence lately has been amazing. Practically all of them are adherents of the royalist part of the German nation. At regular intervals representatives of the Junker Party report at Doorn and advise with Wilhelm for it is understood he dares do nothing that is not thoroughly approved by the majority of the Prussian noblemen.

On the Jumps

Couriers, telephone calls, and telegrams as well as letters keep the castle constantly in touch with everything important that is happening in Germany, but Wilhelm is more and more leaving it to Hermine and the court-marshal to inform him as to what is going on in the world. Her word as to what he shall or shall not read is final; but she is careful not to give the impression to Wilhelm that she is in any way influencing his decisions.

The result is that the ex-Kaiser thinks the wife the most clever being in the world and a casual remark on her part may secure the removal even of the court-marshal. This has already happened three times!

Magnell Says Pleasant to Take, Elixir Must Help Poor Distressed Stomachs or Money Gladly Refunded.

You can be so distressed with gas and fullness that you think your heart is going to stop beating. Your stomach may be so distended that your breathing is short and gaspy. You are dizzy and pray for quick relief—what's to be done. Just one tablespoonful of Dare's Mentha Pepsin and in ten minutes the gas disappears, the pressing on the heart ceases and you can breathe deep and naturally. Oh! What blessed relief; but why not get rid of such attacks altogether? Why have chronic indigestion at all? Especially when Magnell Drug Co., or any druggist anywhere guarantees Dare's Mentha Pepsin, a pleasant elixir, to end indigestion, acute or chronic, or money back.—Adv.

Sour Stomach

"Phillips Milk of Magnesia"
Better than Soda

Instead of soda hereafter take a little "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" in water any time for indigestion or sour, acid, gassy stomach, and relief will come instantly.

For fifty years genuine "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" has been prescribed by physicians because it overcomes three times as much acid in the stomach as a saturated solution of bicarbonate of soda, leaving the stomach sweet and free from all gases. It neutralizes acid fermentations in the bowels and gently urges the souring waste from the system without purging. Besides, it is more pleasant to take than soda. Insist upon "Phillips." Twenty-five cent and fifty cent bottles, any druggist.

"Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. Registered Trade Mark of The Charles H. Phillips Chemical Co. and its predecessor Charles H. Phillips since 1875.—Adv.

Miss Christine McCray, daughter of J. Henry McCray of North Park street, Rockville and Nelson Charles Mead, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Meade of Rockville were married yesterday by the Rev. George S. Brookes of the Union Congregational church in the presence of the immediate families. They were attended by Miss Esther Mead, a sister of the bridegroom and Stanley McCray, brother of the bride.
The bride's gown was of brown georgette. She wore a gold lace hat and carried a bouquet of orchids and gardenias.
On their return from a wedding trip to Atlantic City and the Sesqui-centennial, Mr. and Mrs. Mead will live in Rockville.
The bride is well known here, having been a teacher in the Eighth district school.

Crooks, Club Soloist, Another McCormack

Richard Crooks, young American tenor, who is to be the soloist at the first concert of the Manchester Men's Choral club this season on November 23, is sure to be one of the most popular singers Manchester audiences have yet heard. Mr. Crooks comes to Manchester acclaimed by musicians and critics all over the country, and many parts of Europe. He has been hailed by some as possessing a voice fully as sweet, and of as great a range as John McCormack possessed at Crook's age.
On the choral club's concert program Mrs. Hazel Theodorowicz, cellist, wife of J. Theodorowicz, conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra, and Mildred Godfrey Hall, harpist, of Meriden, will appear. Archibald Sessions will be director and accompanist.
The club will sing eight numbers and one of them, the finale, is a new composition by Stevenson. The club members marvel at the beauty of this number and it promises to be the club's greatest effort. Rehearsals for this concert have been in progress weekly for the past two months.
This will be the most costly program that has ever been presented in Manchester. Richard Crooks is the most expensive soloist who has ever appeared here. For this reason the choral club members are striving to sell a many tickets in advance as possible so that there will be little if any deficit. At present the associate members are buying tickets rapidly and there is every indication that there will be a big seat sale. Tickets will be placed on sale at Watkins Brothers and Kemp's Saturday. They will also be on sale at Watkins Brothers' Hartford store. Those who are desirous of attending the concert are urged to get their tickets early as the capacity of the hall is limited.

Rub Gently and Upward To-ward the Heart as Blood in Veins Flows That Way.

If you or any relative or friend is worried because of varicose veins or bunions, the best advice that anyone in this world can give you is to ask your druggist for an original two-ounce bottle of Moone's

Emerald Oil (full strength) and apply as directed night and morning to the swollen, enlarged veins. Soon you will notice that they are growing smaller and the treatment should be continued until the veins are of normal size. So penetrating and powerful is Emerald Oil that even Piles are quickly relieved. North End Pharmacy, So. Manchester Agents, Magnell Drug Co., sells lots of it.—Adv.

Campaign Starts in Earnest Friday

What the Community Club Does

The Manchester Community Club maintains a commodious club house and acres of ground in the heart of the town for the benefit of all the people—the young folks and the grown-ups.

From November 11 to May 25 last, 3,000 men, women and children enjoyed the club's various diversions, consisting of bridge whists, pool, checkers, cards, reading room, suppers, cooking classes, health talks, and millinery classes.

The Community Club afforded a convenient meeting place for several organizations, including Kiwanis, Progressive Club, Manchester Improvement Club, County Y. M. C. A., D. A. R. and King's Daughters.

Club's Many Activities

The club's annual Lawn Fete last June drew 3,000 people nightly on two consecutive nights. Delightful programs of music and games on the beautifully illuminated grounds were enjoyed by ours townspeople.

ATHLETICS—Girls' Basketball Team played match games all winter and had fine record. Boxing, baseball and other out-of-door games were enjoyed.

COMMUNITY CHRISTMAS CAROLS—Chorus of seventy-five children edified Christmas Eve with Yuletide songs. Later, Old Folks' Concert, Skating Carnival, Entertainments, Dances.

COMMUNITY CENTER—Where thousands meet for recreation and sociability—Girl Scouts, Brownies, Boy Rangers and other organizations hold regular meetings at the Club.

Let's Back It Up Financially

No business or club can continue without adequate financial support. The Manchester Community Club is in the business of Citizen-Building, and it needs your financial help.

A committee of North End manufacturers and business men held two meetings last week and voted to give substantial backing financially to the Manchester Community Club Campaign. They have subscribed generous sums.

Now the public at large is asked to contribute to the Community Club Campaign. A committee worker will visit you during the next few days. So "Have a Heart!" Give him or her a welcome and contribute as generously to the Campaign Fund as you can.

They Are Our Children

REMEMBER: The Manchester Community Club is devoted wholeheartedly to the welfare of the boys and girls of the town. The club is helping to build character as well as to provide recreation.

When does the boy or girl, man or woman, hatch mischief? It is during their leisure time, not when the mind is occupied with the daily tasks. The Community Club proposes to employ the leisure time to make all of our citizens cheerful human assets for the community—its aim is better citizenship—better physically, mentally and spiritually.

Ty Cobb Was to Baseball What Whiskers Are to Smith Brothers, Says Joe Williams

BY JOE WILLIAMS

The One and Only has stripped off the monkey suit, handed it to the club-house valet, and bought a one-way ticket back to Augusta, Ga.

Cobb is through. They say there will never be another one. They said that when Shakespeare laid down the quill, Rembrandt turned from the easel and Napoleon sheathed the sword.

This time they are right, like five-deuce coming out.

Cobb was to baseball what Wagner was to music, Carter was to pills and whiskers are to the Smith brothers. . . . in a word, practically every man who has been on a threat than most of the other boys did on a swat.

He was the greatest base runner that ever ripped a second baseman's shiny leg. When he wasn't stealing second he was stealing third or home or all three.

Cobb belonged to a baseball so-called. He wore the black shirt of radicalism. He sounded the challenging note of revolution.

He did all this when he began playing baseball with brains. . . . Until Cobb sponsored this innovation in baseball were merely something that went with eggs at breakfast.

Cobb always came to the plate swinging three bats. . . . And before the game was over the opposing pitcher was willing to testify he swung a dozen.

The old-timers called him a flash when he broke in 21 years ago. . . . He remained to become a raging forest fire that was just as hard to put out at 33 as he had been at 19.

He broke more records than a rampant five-year-old in a music conservatory.

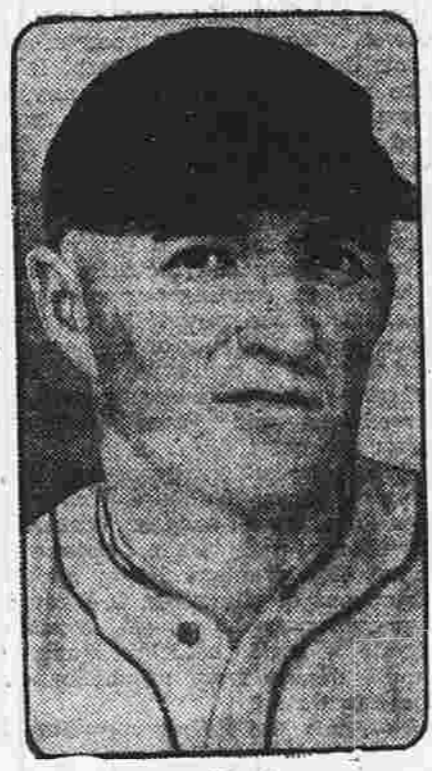

Yes, there was only one Cobb, and you can name 8,567 pitchers who are darned glad of it.

HALTING BALTIMORE GOT "HOWLING DAN" HIS BIG PROMOTION

Jack Dunn's Tribe Had Won International League Pennant Seven Years In Succession.

Dan Howley, who succeeds George Sisler as manager of the St. Louis Browns, was much sought after by several major league clubs. He could have taken charge of the Boston Red Sox but declined on St. Louis, because he believed the material to work with was considerably stronger. He is known as "Howling Dan" because of the penultimate of his voice.

Howley, who has managed successfully several minor league clubs and who for several years was first lieutenant to Ty Cobb at Detroit, however, Notre Dame has its path blocked by Drake, Carnegie and Southern California. The Navy is all set for its big game with the Army which comes shortly.

Dan Howley.

His team won the pennant in that organization, which for seven successive years had been dominated by the Baltimore club, managed by Jack Dunn.

He added further to his laurels by winning the little world series, a best five out of nine affair with Louisville, pennant winner in the American Association. Howley's club took five straight.

As a player, Howley was a catcher of more than ordinary ability. He has shown unusual aptitude in developing young pitchers. St. Louis is almost a certainty that Howley will make a trade for George Sisler, the man he succeeds.

CUSTER AND JOHNSON LEADING IN SETBACK

C. Custer and R. Johnson are leading the point scoring at the end of the fourth sitting of the first setback tournament being conducted by Cheney Brothers' Athletic Association. They have made 587 points. Two more sittings remain in this tournament, the next occurring on Thursday night at the School street Rec at 7:30.

Custer and Johnson copped the high prize for the evening in last week's sitting with a score of 167 while S. Lester and S. Wiganowake were second with 151. Here is the standing: C. Custer 587, R. Johnson 587, Pitt 528, Peterson 523, Moseley 523, Dietz 519, Carlson 519, Campbell 514, Lane 514, Mallon 513 and Kerr 513. These are the eleven leaders.

SPORT CHATTER

The Cloverleaves came through their game with the Rambler-tigers in pretty good shape. Scrutiny of the injury list today reveals nothing alarming. Johnny Ambrose suffered a badly wrenched knee but expects to be back in the lineup again shortly. It was an old injury which again met with misfortune. Billy Skoneski received a gash on the inside of his lower lip which caused his mouth to swell but he will be back in the lineup again Sunday. Lippincott received a bruised shoulder. Bill McLaughlin suffered an ugly cut over his left eye. All the injuries are more or less trivial.

The Frog Hollow Senators of Hartford, considered on a par with the Rambler-tigers, will come here Sunday to engage the South End Cubs at the Four Acres Lot.

Kaute Rocks will lead his Thundering Herd from Notre Dame to New York Saturday for its crucial game with the Army. Both teams are undefeated and the result of the game will be eagerly awaited here. It will go a long way toward deciding the college championship of the country for 1926. However, Notre Dame has its path blocked by Drake, Carnegie and Southern California. The Navy is all set for its big game with the Army which comes shortly.

Toney Ambukewicz, rangy guard on the Cubs eleven, has the earmarks of a real find. He played a fine game Sunday against the Hartford Catholic Club and should be up well in the coming Cloverleaf game for the town title.

Louis Dellenschneider, former trolleyman, and now conductor of a restaurant at the North End, is one of the most faithful Cloverleaf rooters in town. Sunday afternoon, he closed his place of business and went to the game. The business he lost is material in comparison to the good he got out of watching the Cloverleaves whip the Hartford team, he said.

Manchester's 1926-27 basketball season gets its debut Thursday night. Cheney Brothers will travel to Meriden to open the season against the Indians.

Wonder how much George Mulligan is "in the hole" with his professional football adventures this season. Mulligan seems to be pursued by a jinx. Not only did he have trouble in which the weather man during prize fights and bicycle racing but prior to Sunday the previous Sabbath were marred by rain. The games were played before a small attendance but with a big guarantee.

Evans Says Star Ball Players Should Not Be Crowned Managers

BY BILLY EVANS

Major league owners are becoming more than ever convinced that the wisdom of making a star player manager when he is at the top of his game, is decidedly questionable.

In like manner, I never could understand why a star player, still in his prime, should want to handicap his game by saddling on himself the added responsibilities of manager.

There is enough work, worry and thought to managing a big league club, that it is a one-man job. Failure of his club to win, is certain to reflect itself in the work of the star player-manager.

It seems much more sensible to get all there is out of the star as a player before considering his possibilities as a manager.

Eddie Collins took charge of the White Sox after he had reached the peak of his game. He has been remarkably successful as manager. Now that he is nearly through as a player, he should be an outstanding non-playing leader for years.

West Point, N. Y., Nov. 9.—A stiff workout was scheduled for the army squad today as the coaches began preparations for the Notre Dame game. Perfecting a defense against the forward pass is the chief worry of the coaches.

Hanover, N. H., Nov. 9.—Eddie Dooley will be on the job against Cornell. The star quarterback has recovered from his injuries and is hurrying passes with his former skill.

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 9.—After a day of rest, the Princeton eleven began preparing today for the Yale game. Many of the regulars are in a crippled condition as a result of the Harvard setback.

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 9.—The Yale eleven, demoralized by recent defeats, is looking forward to the Princeton game with optimism following the return of Scott and other regulars. Jack Faling is being tried at right halfback.

Cambridge, Mass., Nov. 9.—The scrubs, equipped with Brown plays, will hold dummy scrimmage with the Harvard varsity today. No tickets remain for Saturday's game.

COBB DID EVERYTHING BUT STEAL FIRST BASE

Billy Evans, Who Made His Debut at Same Time Cobb Started, Pays Ty Tribute; Says He Leaves Untarnished Record.

BY BILLY EVANS

Ty Cobb, the greatest player of all time, is through as a big leaguer, temporarily at least. He has tendered his resignation as manager of the Detroit club of the American League, to take place immediately.

Fresh Bush Leaguer
I made my debut as an American League umpire at the same time Cobb broke in as a raw recruit. He was a "fresh buster" in those days like myself. At least that is the light in which the veteran players regarded every newcomer who tried to make good in the majors.

At the close of last season, Cobb was the only player in active service, of the several hundred who made up the personnel of the league, when I broke in. He has seen them come and go by the scores. So have I.

There never has been and probably never will be another player just like Ty Cobb. He could do everything, didn't have a single weakness.

His impulsive temperament and aggressive spirit kept him from attaining the popularity achieved by some of the other outstanding stars. However, the fighter is bound to make enemies and Cobb has always been the fighter. He never admitted defeat.

"Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde"
Off the field, after the battle was over, Cobb was quite a different fellow from the fiery Georgian who gave no ground or asked no quarter in the heat of the battle. He has been more or less the Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde of baseball.

Well do I recall an argument that Cobb and I had over my calling him out on an interference play. It happened in a game at Chicago about 15 years ago. The discussion waxed warm and physical challenges flew thick and fast.

Detroit eventually won the game in extra innings. In the dressing room the Detroit players finally convinced Cobb of the correctness of my decision. He later saw it in the same light.

Just as I was getting ready to leave the umpire's dressing room, there was a knock on the door and I said, "Come in." It was Cobb.

"Everybody tells me I was all wrong in my argument this afternoon and I am about ready to agree with them. So I am down here to apologize and call everything off."

I hastened to assure Cobb that the apology was more than sufficient. I had no particular desire for mortal combat.

Always Scrappy Leader
During my 21 years in the majors I have seen Cobb do everything that it is possible for one player to do on the ball field. There is nothing that Cobb hasn't attempted and succeeded in.

I have seen him reach first and in quick succession, steal second, third and home.

I have seen him score from first on a mealy Texas leaguer to the outfield, the very audacity of his maneuver causing everybody to handle the ball in a faulty manner, enabling him to accomplish the seemingly impossible feat.

I have seen him stretch singles into doubles, doubles into triples and triples into home runs.

I have seen him make seemingly impossible catches and then follow them up by throws to the plate that were uncanny in their accuracy. I have seen him win scores of ball games by a timely base hit or a daring piece of baserunning. He was always at his best in a pinch.

I have seen Cobb do everything on the ball field but steal first base. That can't be done.

Some years ago, when Umpire George Hilderbrand broke into the American League with me, he was all exciting over seeing Cobb in action, having heard so much of him.

The season was about a month old before we finally bumped into the Detroit club. I had kept telling Hilderbrand that he probably would see more than enough of Cobb if he was going good.

Hilderbrand was umpiring the bases in the first game he ever saw Cobb play. Ty was at the top of his game and gave one of his greatest performances. Hilderbrand was doing a fadeback all afternoon trying to keep pace with the "Flying Georgian."

Reaching our dressing room after the game, my first words to Hilderbrand were:

"Now that you have seen him, what do you think of him?"

"You don't think when he gets on; you just keep running," was his reply. "Today will last me for the rest of the season."

"Say, he gave me more close decisions in one game than I had all last season in the Coast League." He had umpired in that organization the previous season.

I am glad that Cobb has decided to retire as a player before he began to slip. It would have been a shame for him to have tried to carry on and be unable to maintain the brilliant standard that has been his for nearly a quarter of a century.

ARMY-NOTRE DAME
BIG DRAWING CARD
Over 200,000 Seats Sold
And 100,000 Applications
Turned Down.

By DAVIS J. WALSH

New York, Nov. 9.—Great oaks from tiny acorns grow and probably those who enjoyed comparative isolation at the first Army-Notre Dame football game on the plains of West Point did not rush home to tell the wife and kiddies that the day would come when the event would make Grimm's fairy tales look plausible by contrast with the spectacle of irate citizens garroting one another for the privilege of paying $50 for a pair of tickets worth six.

That day will come on Saturday. Endow the Yankee stadium with rubber walls for the occasion and it is the estimate of club officials that 200,000 addicts would see the ball game. They say they have turned down at least 100,000 applications to date, exclusive of a lot of people who were too smart to ask.

Speculators Busy
However, some of the ticket speculators are very dumb and that is the reason a three-dollar ticket today is worth $12.50 to the stupid bloke who holds it. The ticket is expected to double in value by Saturday.

In brief, the Army-Notre Dame football game, started thirteen years ago for no particular reason, has become the great "public" sport event of the day. St. Louis might have entertained 100,000 at Sportman's park at any single game of the late World Series and the Yankee Stadium ran to its baseball capacity of 60,000 except when ideal weather turned up missing at the final game. You couldn't keep the boys away on Saturday with a machine gun.

Other Big Crowds
The Kentucky Derby annually plays to 10,000 but there is always room for more in the infield. The Dempsey-Tunney fight drew 127,000 but there were seats quite innocent of occupation. The Big Three series, of course, would sell out, no matter what the capacity might be. But this is not a public institution. It is a closed corporation and so is the California-Stanford game.

The fact that neither Notre Dame nor the Army had been beaten partly accounts for great clamor but,

Stunt Sanctioned
It is said that the Penn innovation has been sanctioned by the rules committee, which would put the stamp of legality on the stunt. Without desiring to take a definite stand in the matter, on the theory that the Penn coaches would not resort to unsportsmanlike tactics, it certainly seems as if the scheme as worked would tend to make it far more difficult to locate the ball-carrier.

However, the idea of using certain color pads to make it harder for the opposition to pick out the man actually carrying the ball is not entirely new. It has been done before very successfully.

Carlisle Indians
A number of years ago, when the Carlisle Indians trotted on the field at the Harvard stadium to meet the Crimson eleven, Coach Glenn Warner had pads on the jerseys that closely resembled a football in size and color.

On offense the Indians so carried their arms that an optical illusion resulted. It seemed if Carlisle had eleven men, each with a football tucked under his arm.

The Harvard coach immediately offered strenuous objection, and, I am told, that Coach Warner had the pads removed at once.

It was the same Glenn Warner who years previous had a trick stunt of placing the ball under the back of a player's jersey, then having all the Indians drop their arms to the side and the man with the ball run for a touchdown. Harvard refused to be a sucker for the second time.

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

JUDITH MARTIN, young college teacher, is torn between her friendship for ERIC WATERS, radical senior, and DR. PETER DORN, astronomy professor, who disapproves of her student friends.

Judith defends Eric against the suspicion dealing with "KITTY" SHEA, town bootlegger, in poison liquor.

Shea tries to blackmail Mrs. Brown, and also threatens to tell the dean that Eric and Judith dined at a roadhouse the night that it was raided. Judith appeals to Eric for help.

On Christmas Eve, Judith staying alone in Myra's sorority house for the holidays, is terrified when Shea tries to force an entrance. She shoots in the air, and he goes away.

Next day, Mrs. Brown invites her to Christmas dinner, saying the dean is out of town.

Returning to the sorority house with Dr. Dorn, Judith finds Eric, who has successfully come back from his home town. He has a large bruise over his left eye.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXXX DR. DORN drew back his hand with a jerk.

"Eric," cried Judith, "why, what is the matter?"

Eric smiled, and drew out his pipe. "Why don't you come in?" He spoke directly to Judith, ignoring the professor.

Dr. Dorn straightened his shoulders. "I'll not stop, Miss Martin. It's growing late. He glanced significantly at Eric, but Eric only smiled again.

Dr. Dorn cleared his throat. "Good night," he said.

Eric stood back to let Judith pass through the door. In the hall they found the houseman loitering, and Judith refrained from speaking until they were in the living room alone.

Then she sat looking at him with an anxious frown between her eyes. "What has happened, Eric?"

He was smoking quietly. "Nothing much, Jude. That bump looks worse than it is. I simply went home late, and in the dark bumped into an open door."

Judith's eyes were so incredulous that he burst out laughing. "It's true. I know it sounds pretty thin. But it's correct."

"But what are you doing here to-day?" demanded Judith.

Eric became grave. "I suppose I'm a damn fool, Jude, but I came back because of you."

"Because of me?"

Eric nodded. "Knight errantry isn't in my line, but I find myself forced into it. The long and short of the matter is—I don't want to leave you alone in this town through the holidays, because of Shea."

Judith frowned. "But you told me just before you left that you believed he was 'fixed' for a while."

"Yes—just because I didn't want to scare you silly. You remember I warned you to lock the house carefully."

Judith nodded, and sat looking into the fire.

Eric took her hand. "Don't worry too much about Shea. I can handle him. But I didn't have much luck with him in my efforts to shut him up the other day. He's a hard one to bluff—has the goods on so many important people that he can get by with murder."

Judith looked up at him quickly. "And if he refused to be bluffed, what else could you do to stop him from making trouble?"

Eric frowned, and his fingers curled tightly. "I could do plenty," he said. "If he ever makes an open move against you—" Eric jumped up and began to pace the hearth rug. "He hasn't tried anything, has he?"

He sat down beside her again. "Judith, are you in love with that astronomy professor?"

Judith was silent a moment. Then she shook her head. "Let's not talk about him any longer. How did you get away from your family?"

Eric stopped walking and laughed down at her. "Simplest thing in the world. Just had a little row with them and then packed up and came away."

He sat down beside her again. "Judith, are you in love with that astronomy professor?"

Judith smiled at him. "Mind your manners and don't pry," she said lightly.

Eric shrugged. "But if you are, I imagine it doesn't do you any good to be with me so much. I suppose you noticed that he wasn't exactly delighted to see me here tonight."

"Well," said Judith, "that doesn't much interest me. The grandfather's clock was striking midnight."

Eric took his overcoat and hat from a chair. Judith held the coat for him, and when he had slipped into it, he whirled about, holding her by the arms. "Jude, what is it? There's trouble written all over your face. What has happened?"

Judith collapsed against him, her hands over her face, and her shoulders shaking, as all the pent up anxieties and terrors of the night before found vent in tears.

Eric held her quietly, without asking questions. At least she raised her head and smiled through her tears. "Don't ask me anything, Eric. I haven't anything to tell. But if I need you, I will call on you."

Eric leaned over and kissed her forehead.

Eve Gerhart laid her hand on Judith's and smiled. They were sitting on the davenport in front of the Sigma Psi fireplace, while Wetherel and a tow-headed sophomore crouched at their feet, superintending the roasting of chestnuts. It was the second day after the close of the holidays.

"Why are you so wretched?" asked Eve softly.

Judith laughed. "Why, I don't go in for the tragedy queen stuff. You just imagine it."

Eve rose, drawing Judith also to her feet. They wandered into a sun parlor somewhat secluded from the big living room. As Eve leaned against the window frame, Judith looked admiringly at her supple figure, swathed in dull yellow crepe.

Eve hesitated. "I'm worried about Eric," she watched Judith sharply.

"What?"

"You see, he's in love with you."

Eve leaned back and waited for her bombshell to explode. But Judith only sat quite still, waiting for her to go on.

With a smile, Eve began again. "Eric's running in the face of vested authority. He's at odds with the university, with his family, with society itself. And it means ruin."

A glint in Judith's eyes brought an ironic smile to Eve's face. "I know I'm a queer one to be urging the cause of orthodoxy. But it's because I know what lies on the other side that I'm anxious about Eric—and about you too."

Judith smiled, and Eve laughed without malice. "Oh, I shouldn't be worrying about you, I suppose, if Eric weren't involved. But I'd like to see both of you pull out of this mess."

"What mess?" asked Judith.

"Eve leaned forward. "Eric is definitely under suspicion for bootlegging, and Dean Brown means to finish you too, because you have been sticking to Eric. These things drift about on the wind, and sooner or later, they always come to my ears."

Judith frowned. "And what do you propose that I should do about it?"

Eve fingered a bracelet, and spoke slowly. "You can make Eric see what a hopeless fight it is to buck society. And perhaps you can save yourself by—cutting loose from him for a while."

Judith's smile was unpleasant. "I see."

Eve shook her head. "No, you don't see. If you did, you wouldn't be thinking this a clumsy attempt of mine to take Eric away from you. But very well—it's the normal thing for you to think. In your shoes, I should be thinking it myself. She had risen and was holding out her hand.

"I'm sorry I interfered, but I can see so far ahead. It's terrible to be a seer. It makes you meddlesome. Let's go back to the other room."

A roar of laughter from the fireplace announced that the group of chestnut roasters had grown larger.

"And just when he had stripped me of my watch and ring and pocket-book, he caught the glimmer of the light on my Sigma Psi pin." Will Wetherel leaned back against the davenport, and waited a tantalizing moment, while his audience gaped at the door of the sun parlor.

"Go on," squealed a tiny freshman girl, curled up on the couch. She gave Wetherel a little kick with her high-heeled slipper. "Go on. Did he take that too?"

"Go on," squealed a tiny freshman girl, curled up on the couch. She gave Wetherel a little kick with her high-heeled slipper. "Go on. Did he take that too?"

Wetherel pulled his coat open. The pin was shining over his heart. "He did not. He broke down and cried, and grasped my hand. 'Buddy' he said through his tears, and he gave me the Sig Psi grip."

"When I raised my head he was gone, and my watch and purse were in my hand."

The girl on the couch began to weep to the door of the sun parlor, where Eve and Judith were standing. He reached a hand to each of them. "I'm glad you two are friends," he said, "you're two of the finest people I know. And no catty feminine nonsense about either of you."

Eve lowered demure eyelashes and laughed at Judith beneath them.

"Met Myra coming across the campus just now," said Eric to Judith. "And she told me to tell you that a note came from Dean Brown by special messenger."

The WOMAN'S DAY by Allene Sumner

Well, well, well, some more spoutings from the anti-smoking girls. This particular spout gushes from the Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals of the M. E. church. Perhaps it was not girls but boys who said it. Anyway, say they did that "only prostitutes, high society women and flappers with holes in their stockings are smoking today!"

Now get me straight! I have no quarrel with those of cigar smoking in the past of women. But I do have a peeve against those who refuse to meet issues by facing facts, but continue to ladle out such stuff as the above. Figures from our federal department of commerce prove conclusively that women are smoking their full share of all cigarettes smoked.

I happen to know the kind of women who are doing it—not the three graces mentioned above, but cultivated, educated, refined, graceful, charming, urbane women who have something to do besides call the gossip fire department squad everytime they see a blue-white puff.

Twin sisters, aged 74, died within two hours of one another in their home in Colorado a day or so ago. The sister who died last died of a broken heart, physicians say. One wonders if, even when 14, they never quarreled. Remember your sister and you? Of course you loved each other, but she used your perfume that Aunt Betsy gave you for Christmas, and she wouldn't wipe the dishes when it was her turn, and wouldn't give you St. Nicholas first, and—Most normal sisters do fight. One would worry more over the twin than those who pull hair and "tell mama" at 14.

For 25 years, one-quarter of a century, Mrs. Anna Obinger scrubbed floors.

Night and day she scrubbed office buildings, her skirts pinned up around her waist, her rough, red arms dipping into the lukewarm dirty suds. Now the scrubber is retiring. She has $25,000—money made from her scrubbing in real estate and stock tips given her by her office bosses.

One could comment several things. One could say that there's a lesson to be learned from the cloud of scrubbing. Or one could wonder: how Mrs. Obinger will enjoy her $25,000. Or—well, what's the use? Let's just congratulate her and hope she has a peaceful, nice time!

It would seem that a girl can marry a king in his own right, and become so much a queen in her own right that the king can't make her mind. I, for one, believe that King Ferdinand has ordered his queen's home. There seems no good reason for disbelieving it. And I for one do not believe that the queen will go.

And how "we girls" at bridge clubs will giggle at that one, and how "we husbands" won't like it at all! These unmanageable women!

Now, according to the story books, the king should be wild about his Marie—the more women flout men, the more they're loved, say the story writers! In this case, one wonders. The Rumanian court is strangely quiet on the subject of deep affection twixt Ferd and Marie.

By the way, now we know just what it is that all Queen Marie. A woman writer says that Marie has "it." "It" is the old-fashioned, yesteryear word for what nowadays we call S. A. A woman may be maddeningly beautiful, but unless she has "it," never get a loan from bankers, says this writer. I must tell you, it is both beautiful and blessed with "it" she can get anything, as she does.

America's flapper of today makes a much better mother than her "petticoated" and corseted grandmother." So says Dr. William Marriott, head of the child's hospital in St. Louis.

GERMAINE REVELS IN DOMESTICITY

Finds Men Not So Difficult to Manage And Fares Forth to Buy New Finery.

Dear Cousin: Obviously, virtue is its own reward. Since mother departed in a haze of glory for the Riviera, I have conscientiously devoted myself to my father's happiness and well-being—and am getting results.

Our establishment for two has been highly successful. I have humored all father's whims—he has many—and have ordered daily all the foods he likes best, and sought his opinion regarding the theater and opera.

Last evening, I assure you, I had no ulterior motive in mind, when I admired the very lovely wrap worn by my friend Eloise, but father said, "Perhaps you, too, need a new wrap—why don't you order one?"

With that encouragement, I farred forth and within two hours had seen one which completely satisfied my sense of beauty and loveliness—a periwinkle blue affair in velvet, with a monk's hood in the back lined with silver cloth. It is like moonlight, sunrise, or any of those lovely blends of blue, rose and silver, and I will own it in five days.

It strikes me, men would never be so difficult to manage, even husbands of fathers, if you just go about it easily and tactfully. Since I have been running our manage, I have visualized myself in my own home instead of that of my parents, and I fancy I could play the role of wife quite glamorously, and interestingly—and how I should dress the part!

What perfect negligees and soft clinging robes I should have for home use, what snappy costumes for sport, and what visions of beauty for evening! Never should I step out of character, if I found it necessary to be myself, or allow myself a good healthy slump. I should depart from my husband's home to do so.

Not only did father compliment me on my housewifely virtues, but M. Perrons is fascinated by my interpretation of my role. He told father he had no idea. I had so much poise. No wonder he never noticed it—Aunt Louise and mother have treated me like an infant.

They are richly furred, white fox being as often used as any other variety. A distinctive feature in the new wraps is the sleeve with the elbow then fits into a fitted cuff. In a cosy apartment on Fifth avenue lives Mary Lord Harrison, widow of the 23d president of the United States, Benjamin Harrison, and whom he married in 1836, three years after the death of the first Mrs. Harrison, who was an aunt of Mary Lord Harrison. The cream of course can be omitted but it makes a delicious pie.

THE difference in breakfast oats is in their flavor. The price mostly is the same.

Millions demand the Quaker brand because of its tasty, wonderful flavor. For a better reason the important point in food.

Some 50 years were spent perfecting that famous Quaker flavor. Once you taste it, you are spoiled for ordinary oats.

Quaker milling, too, retains much of the "bulk" of oats. And that makes laxatives less often needed. Protein, carbohydrates and vitamins and "bulk" are thus combined to make Quaker Oats an excellently balanced ration.

TOLL OF REAPER TRAFFIC BECOMES TREMENDOUS BY DR. MORRIS FISHEBIN

Editorial Journal of the American Medical Association and of Hygiene, The Health Magazine

Four-wheel brakes have perhaps helped to lessen the severity of many accidents, though they do not seem to have greatly decreased their number.

A. A. Mowbray of the National Safety Council has pointed out a perfect system of traffic signals, with police officers at every busy corner, which will do much for safety. But these things have no advantage if an automobile with a drunk driver speeds through the warning signal section.

20000 Hit Daily There is evidence that more than 2000 persons are injured by automobiles every day in the United States, and that at least one-third of these are under 15 years of age. In most instances, the pedestrian is injured, rather than the driver.

Statistics show that most of the traffic accidents occur between 5 and 7 p. m., that more than half of them take place at street corners, but that more than 60 per cent of pedestrians are injured while crossing in the middle of the block.

The most dangerous driver is the one who contests the right of way, who tries to pass the street car on the opposite track, who drives on the wrong side and who disregards safety zones.

Child and Adult The child who dashes out into the street to recover some plaything, the timid woman who goes half way across and then changes her mind, the absent-minded citizen who reads his paper in the middle of a busy street are special types who constantly tease the fool-killer.

Engineers who have studied this problem have found that the most important factors in preventing street accidents are engineering revision of streets, to make vision clear and room sufficient, regulation of the traffic and enforcement of the traffic laws, so that both the motorist and the pedestrian may know what to expect when moving about. The education of motorists and pedestrians to dangers and how to avoid them.

Principal C. P. Quimby of the local High school has been invited by the principal of Bristol High school to speak at the final football assembly at Bristol next Monday and to award the letters to the players on the Bristol team.

Word was received today of the death of Miss Marion L. Holmes' father in Auburn, Maine. Miss Holmes is stenography and shorthand teacher at the local High school and left some time ago to go to her father's bedside. Mrs. A. A. Warren, wife of Director A. A. Warren of the local State Trade school, is substituting for Miss Holmes during her absence.

In observance of National Educational Week at the local High school, efforts are being made to stress the value of education. The topic has been given as a project in the civics classes. Students have prepared essays on the subject. Among the students whose essays were selected as having a special merit were those written by Frances Strickland, Anna Pitkin, Frances Machesney, Agnes Jordt, Vera Hotchkiss and Anna Yulys.

Word has been received here of the death of Miss Catherine B. Cheney of Brookline, Mass. Death which was due to heart trouble, followed a short illness. She is survived by one sister residing in Brookline and a brother, Charles H. Cheney of this town. It is expected the body will be brought here for burial in the East cemetery.

William Siamonds, of Oak street, a member of the Cubs football eleven, suffered a cut over the eye in the game with the Catholic Club of Hartford and was treated at the Memorial hospital.

It was announced this afternoon that the scheduled game between the Cubs and the Frog Hollow Senators of Hartford for next Sunday has been cancelled. Efforts are being made, it is understood, to bring the Rambler-Tigers to Manchester again. This team was defeated by the Cloverleaves twice, 6-0 and 7-0.

J. Fradin is in New York arranging for an exhibition and sale of fur coats to be held at Fradin's store shortly.
