

UNCLE JOE CANNON, "KIND CZAR," DEAD

Veteran Dean of American Politics, Passes Away at Illinois Home, Aged Ninety.

Danville, Ill., Nov. 12.—"Uncle Joe" Cannon is dead.

The veteran American statesman who for 46 years was a member of the House of Representatives, passed away at his home here today at the age of 90.

Death came quietly with members of his family by his bed. With him were his two daughters, Mrs. Ernest Le Scure and Miss Helen Cannon.

For the past several days "Uncle Joe" had been failing. He experienced great difficulty in swallowing and while his pulse continued comparatively strong, his general condition was such that members of his family were hurriedly summoned by Dr. Charles E. Wilkinson.

A genial autocrat who retired from public life for a few final years of leisure after stamping his name and his philosophy on the politics of his country and turning the bitter antagonism of his foes into the respect and love of friends—that was Joseph G. Cannon of Illinois, the "Uncle Joe" of the last half century.

For 46 years a member of Congress, serving under 11 presidents and linking in his own career personal contacts with Abraham Lincoln and Charles Coolidge, "Uncle Joe" enjoyed to the last the happy faculty of making his antagonists forget their enmities.

During the years that he was speaker of the House of Representatives—from 1903 to 1911—Cannon was probably as bitterly attacked as any man in public life; yet long before his retirement from Congress the men who had attacked him were vying with one another to show him their friendship and respect.

For while Cannon's long career was marked by many constructive and public spirited acts, his fame rested rather on what he was than on what he did.

The average man cannot list many of Cannon's acts—save perhaps that he remembers Cannon as the embodiment of automatic leadership; but what he does remember is the genial smile, the ever ready wit, the tilted cigar and the homely, human sympathy and kindness that stamped Cannon's unique personality.

Cannon, in a manner of speaking, came in with Lincoln, and in his personal characteristics he was not unlike him.

It was in 1859 that Cannon first tried his hand in politics. And Lincoln was the cause of it.

On Ballot With Lincoln.

Cannon's people had only recently moved to Illinois from Cincinnati, where Joseph had studied law while clerking in a store for $6 a week. Lincoln's name was in his mind, and they fired Cannon with enthusiasm.

When Illinois Republicans held a convention to launch Lincoln's boom for the presidency, Cannon attended as a delegate. And in 1860, when Lincoln's name appeared on the ballot, Cannon's name was on the same ballot as a candidate for county prosecutor.

Through all the years that were to come, Cannon never forgot his personal contacts with Lincoln and the wholehearted admiration that grew out of them.

Cannon died at the age of 90, and in the span of his life is compressed the history of America's growth from sprawling infancy to full manhood.

He was born in North Carolina. In 1836, 12 years before Texas and California became parts of the United States and nearly a quarter of a century before the Civil War, Abraham Lincoln was then an indigent young Illinois storekeeper. An incredible time ago, measured by the events that have happened since!

By Covered Wagon.

At the age of 4 Cannon's parents moved west to Indiana, then a frontier country, by covered wagon. Impressions gained in his early years in what was then little better than wilderness stayed with Cannon throughout his life, and he could not pass the famous painting "Westward the Star of Empire Takes Its Way", on the wall of the corridor in the capitol without stopping to look at it with deep emotion.

Cannon picked up what schooling he could get. Like Lincoln, he hardly saw the inside of a school room. His intermittent studies of law at Cincinnati typify his self-training. In later life he admitted that the punctuation of anything he wrote was good, although he commanded a good literary style, due chiefly to his omnivorous reading.

In 1858 the family went to Illinois, settling in Tuscola, a tiny cluster of shacks in a great rolling prairie. Later came the removal to Danville, which was Cannon's "home town" from then until his death.

TOWN GETS BIG GUN AS MEMORIAL

Armistice Day Celebration Brings Out Large Crowd —Dr. Ogilby Speaks at Hospital Service.

Official Manchester today possesses its first memorial to the boys who did their bit in the World conflict eight years ago.

A big howitzer captured by American troops from Germans was presented to the town last night by Dilworth-Cornell Post, American Legion. Commandant Harry Malmgren gave the field piece to Manchester and Robert V. Treat, chairman of the Selectmen, received it.

Parade.

The presentation followed a parade of about 300 veterans of both the Spanish and World wars and of Manchester's present enrolled soldiers. The big gun sat at the Center point westward.

An air of solemnity prevailed from the start of the parade until the sound of "Taps" by a Salvation Army trumpeter rang clear and sweet in the cold air. Then, the tribute to the dead heroes over, the crowd went to the State Armory on Main street where open house was held.

Dr. Ogilby Speaker.

Dr. Remsen B. Ogilby, head of Trinity college, and a chaplain in France during the World War, was the speaker at the memorial services at the hospital. Dr. Ogilby said that although the war had been over eight years, the fight was still going on, the fight between right and wrong. His talk, which was concise, struck a responsive cord in the hearts of his hearers. He was introduced by Michael J. McDonald, president of the Army and Navy club.

Dr. Ogilby's complete address follows:

Once more we are gathered to pay tribute to those whose services is beyond all tribute, to praise the lives of those who thought the lives of others were of such tremendous worth that they gladly threw away their own. All men are called upon to give some measure of devotion to family, church, community, country and we respond, some with more and some with less. These men gave all. Their devotion was absolute. It does not lie in the power of human words to pay tribute to the memory of the best, perhaps, the honor of a gesture, of a wreath of flowers, of this hospital, the highest honor of silence, deep and vibrant silence, the tribute of the bowed head, and the heart too full for words.

Day's Meaning.

But on this day of the year we must think not only of our soldier dead but also of the meaning of this day, which they did not live to see. They had longed for it. In the veiling carnage of the trenches, in the toll and strain of the service of supply, and in the long drawn out agony of war we hoped for peace. Then it came.

Do not forget the kind of peace it was. It was not the peace of isolation, of the Sunday afternoon in the country, with the hum of bees and the white clouds drowsy in the blue sky. It was not the coward's peace, gained by escape from conflict to hide in the woods. It was the peace of retirement, a comfortable chair by the fire on winter night with door bolted against the storm. It was not the dreamer's peace, a world of woolly lambs lying down with many lumps, surrounded by impossibly colorless people with impossibly lukewarm virtues. It was the peace of weariness after successful conflict, the peace of victory.

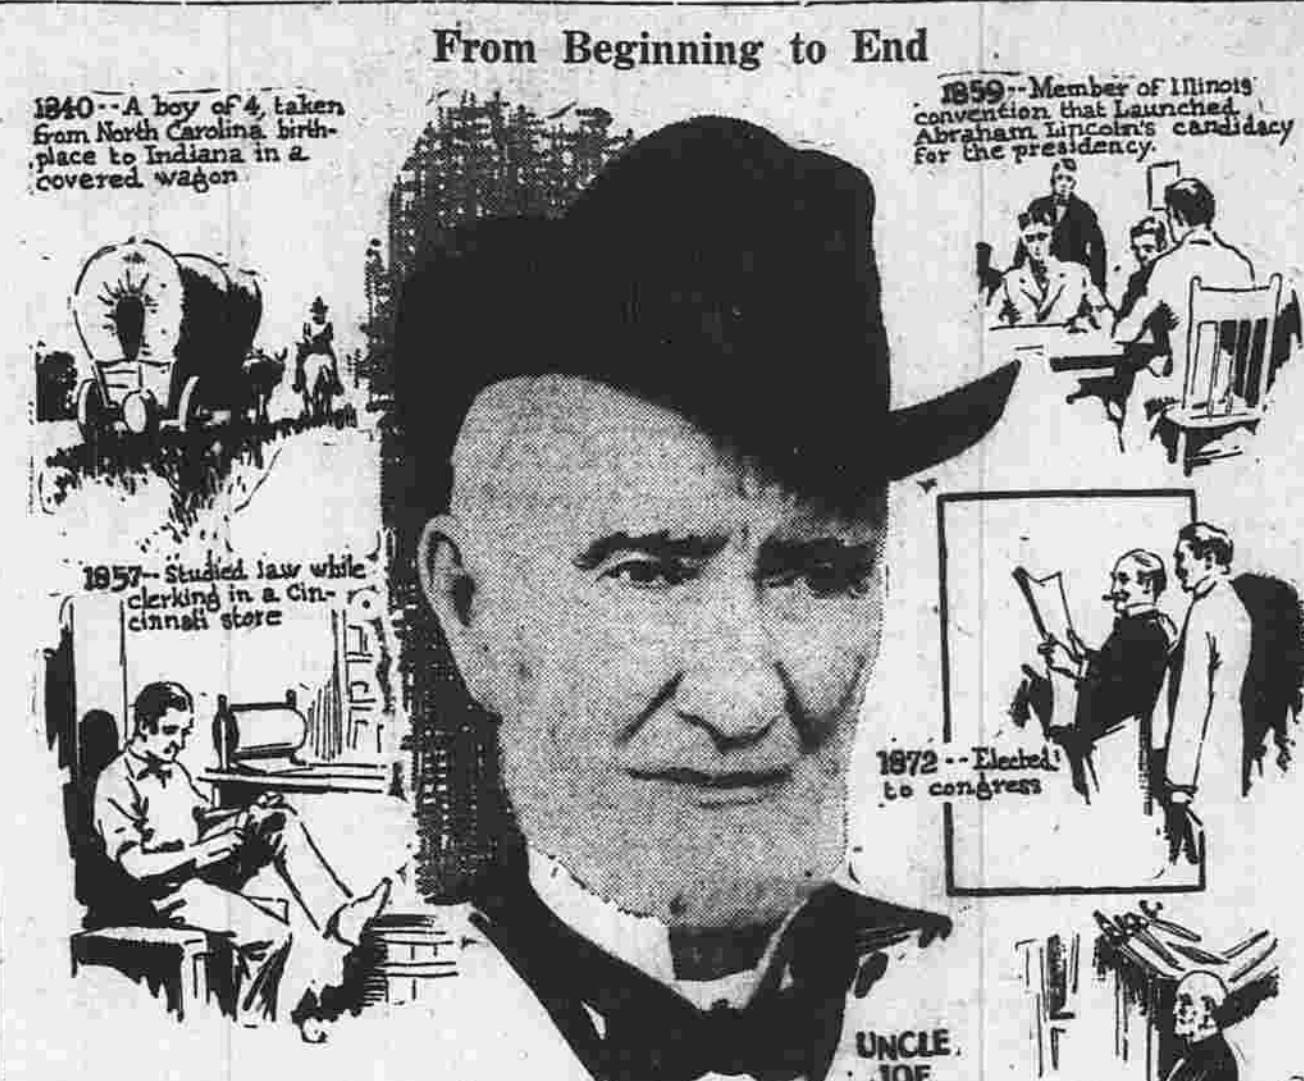

Not Over Yet.

We have not been true to the spirit of that peace. We thought the conflict was over too soon, and we are still involved in hatreds at war as bitter as the hatreds of the war. God grant that we may never find ourselves trying again to solve our petty disputes by blood.

The piece cost us too dear. But may God grant the eyes to see that the conflict against wrong is not over; we must continue to mobilize our forces and draft every true man into that perpetual struggle.

In the name of your comrades who died in uniform, I ask you to have an instinctive respect for every uniform you see, as a sign that its wearer is combining his individual powers with many others like him, so that the battle may be won. Do not mean just the uniform of our country which you and I are proud to wear. I mean every kind of uniform; the white dress of the nurse on her errand of mercy, the black bag of the doctor at the door with his message of health, the collar of the priest who

North End to Be Canvassed By Community Fund Workers—Six Teams in Campaign.

Total Today $2,085

For the first time today the North End had a view of the army of workers engaged in the Manchester Community Club campaign. The entire force took the field this afternoon, and there was a lively scurrying around of automobiles. Previous solicitations had been made by the executive committee only.

Eight teams set out this morning to visit practically all North End residents. It was not long before the white buttons with the bright red heart in the center began to glitter on the coat lapels of scores of people, each button proclaiming that the wearer had contributed to the Community club campaign.

Score Board to Aid
A "score board" will be erected on the park at Depot Square, and the result of the canvass each day will be inscribed in large figures.

Arrangements have already been made for a large sign on the grass plot near the post office announcing the fact that the campaign is on.

It has been decided that each captain and the team workers attending the following teams took the Community club headquarters at "The White House" at the close of each day, giving a record of the sums collected.

Each contributor to the campaign will receive a receipt card, and a button to assure him freedom from further solicitation by the workers.

The teams are planning to do effective work tomorrow and Sunday, as there will be time for additional visits and many people who are inaccessible on other days can be seen then.

COOLIDGE BLOW TO COURT ISSUE FINAL, BELIEF

Even Democrats Who Favor Adherence Back Up President on His Thursday Speech.

Washington, Nov. 12.—President Coolidge's ultimatum to Europe that the United States will enter the World Court on its own terms or not at all was accepted here today as sounding an official death knell to the project, and signifying the removal of the issue, for the time being at least, from the realm of politics.

The principal powers of Europe already have agreed that the Senate's reservations are not acceptable. The President has said these reservations will not be changed. There the matter rests. There, apparently, it will continue to rest unless the powers change their attitude.

May Foretell Recall

One effect of the President's speech may be to forestall the introduction in the Senate next month of a resolution to recall the favorable vote of last session, although anti-Court opinion is not unanimous on it. Some of them believe that such a resolution should be introduced and passed, while the temper of the Senate and of the White House is aroused over the matter. Others believe that Mr. Coolidge gave a coup de grace to the whole project in Kansas City yesterday, and that no good purpose would be served in stirring up the issue again.

Few of Mr. Coolidge's speeches have been received with such general Senate approbation as that of yesterday. Even Democrats, who assisted in passing the adherence resolution, praised the President's stand.

Senator Walsh, Democrat of Montana, who was one of the Court leaders in the fight last winter, said the President had "accurately reflected the attitude of the Senate."

Only Handful Opposed

Senator Johnson, Republican of California, an original irreconcilable, said "apparently with a sigh of relief the President has kissed the League of Nations goodbye."

Senator William E. Borah, chairman of the foreign relations committee, said the speech "was fine as far as it went," meaning he thought Mr. Coolidge should have gone even further and recommended the recall of last January's action.

Only a handful of the ardent pro-League and pro-Court senators found fault with Mr. Coolidge's expressed attitude. Senator Bruce, Democrat of Maryland, said the Court "will outlive the President's valedictory."

WITH $5,000 A YEAR SHE GETS $80 WEEK ALIMONY

Bridgeport, Nov. 12.—Mrs. Gladys C. Terry, of New York, and Darlyn, today received a divorce from Charles E. Terry, of New York, on a plea of habitual intemperance. Mrs. Terry will get a weekly sum of $80 and custody of her young daughter. Mrs. Terry has a $5,000 a year job in New York, while her husband gets $7,000 a year there.

BLOOD "SHOT" GIVEN TO SAVE "PIG WOMAN"

EUROPE STARTS WAR ON FILMS FROM AMERICA

U. S. Supremacy Threatened As Governments See Cultural Injury in Hollywood Stuff.

London, Nov. 12 (United Press)—War has been declared against Hollywood. The United States supremacy in moving pictures, never before seriously challenged, is threatened in several countries.

Briefly, these nations do not like the kind of movies Hollywood sends them. Germany has just complained about the "Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" because German soldiers are the villains of the piece. Japan and Mexico recently protested against certain pictures for the same reason. England protests because the pictures of white races in social excesses and orgies are bad for British prestige in India.

More Than Protests

All together, these foreign nations think that the Hollywood style of society drama is not all that it ought to be.

They have done more than make protests. English studios in the past few months have turned out some pictures in opposition to Hollywood. The German films have and worth-while performances. Even Soviet Russia has produced a director whose ability attracted Douglas Fairbanks' attention on his summer excursion to Moscow.

Disgusted Public

It is a movie war in real fact. Hollywood must look to its ammunition. There is plenty of money and brain behind the foreign onslaught and it is backed by a disgusted public opinion. The prize of the struggle is the power of movie productions, with the tremendous force of their influence on thousands of screens.

The fact is that the moving picture has outgrown the stage of simple entertainment and become forces of government. With their millions of devotees, the movies have come into the field of diplomacy. Governments are interested now in the movies.

Transfusion Resorted to for State's Witness

Barbara Tough Names Gossipers Only When Compelled—Editor Tells Name Card Story.

Jersey City, N. J., Nov. 12.—Mrs. Jane Gibson underwent a blood transfusion operation this morning in the Jersey City hospital.

The star witness for the prosecution in the Hall-Mills murder case was placed on an operating table beside Fireman Thomas Kent, from whom the blood was drawn.

Dr. Charles B. Kelley, one of the attending physicians, denied reports that Mrs. Gibson had suffered a collapse.

"A blood transfusion was made to correct the condition of moderately severe secondary anaemia," he stated.

Today's Session.

Somerville, N. J., Nov. 12.—Completion of the testimony of Barbara Tough, for many years Mrs. Hall's personal maid, and the evidence of a New York newspaper editor concerning the card found with the bodies of the murdered couple were the features of today's session in the Hall-Mills murder trial.

Watching the proceedings for the first time was "Danny" Mills, 16-year-old son of James Mills, who sat next to his sister, Charlotte.

Mrs. Hall sat pale and quiet and garbed in black in the prisoners' dock. Henry Stevens looked fresher than on other days in a new blue suit. Willie was dressed as usual in a gray suit.

Pearl Bahmer in Court.

Pearl Bahmer, who had been subpoenaed by the defense to appear in court today, was not among the early arrivals. The defense plans, it is said, to use the girl to batter down the state's theory of the crime.

Miss Bahmer was in De Russey's lane with a male companion, Raymond Schneider, on Saturday morning, September 15, when he found the bodies of Dr. Hall and Mrs. Mills. Schneider went to jail for saying, four years ago during the first investigation, that a comrade named Clifford Hayes had admitted shooting the couple to death. Schneider, who lives at the home of his father, has since then been in the hands of his attorneys to Pearl Bahmer's story was that Hayes told him he had killed the couple because he thought they were Schneider and Pearl Trysting in the lane.

Schneider is now a truck driver in New Jersey where he lives with his mother. He refused to discuss Miss Bahmer's new story.

"Gossip" Ruled Out.

Barbara Tough was recalled to the witness stand when the trial was resumed. She had previously told in her drawing room that Mrs. Hall was out of the Hall home at 10 o'clock on the night of the murder. The time of the crime has been fixed at 10:20 p. m.

Mrs. Tough looked directly at Prosecutor Alexander Simpson as he began to shoot questions at her. Simpson asked her the name of the "gossip girls" who were gossiping about Dr. Hall and Mrs. Mills in the Church of St. John the Evangelist of New Brunswick.

The defense objected to testimony regarding gossip.

"I saw nothing unusual," Simpson withdrew the question saying: "I will get the information else where—that's all."

Senator Clarence Case, of defense counsel, then took the witness over for cross-examination.

Case walked to the witness stand and put his hand on the railing as he cross-examined Miss Tough.

"Did you see anything unusual in the Hall home on the night of the murder?" Case asked.

"In going upstairs that night at 10 o'clock, you didn't go anywhere near the bedroom of Dr. and Mrs. Hall?"

"No," replied the maid.

"They occupied the same bedroom?"

"Yes."

"They slept in the same bed?"

"Yes."

"At two a. m. you heard Mrs. Hall going back and forth in the bathroom?"

"Yes."

"What did Willie Stevens say to you the next morning?"

"He didn't say anything to me."

"Were you a member of St. John's church?"

"No."

BITGOOD DEMONSTRATES FOR CHURCH PASTORS

The revival services being conducted at the Church of the Nazarene are proving a decided success. Each night, there is a large attendance. Rev. C. C. Rineberger, noted evangelist, who is preaching the sermons, is a most interesting and inspiring speaker. Those who have heard him preach, praise Rev. Rineberger highly. Again last night the little church was crowded. Rev. Rineberger took his text from the fifth chapter of St. John. He spoke on "The Impotent Man at the Pool." "There are no hard cases with Christ," said Rev. Rineberger. "Whosoever may come to Him will be made whole. Rev. Rineberger's sermon was most inspiring. But the singing was a great help. There was a large chorus of young people. Tonight, Rev. Rineberger will speak on a subject which is expected to fill the little church to its utmost capacity. His sermon will be "Could Mr. Bitgood lift 4200 pounds if God told him to? God's power is unlimited." Mr. Bitgood, Manchester's strong man, whose feats have caused much discussion since the feature story in Saturday's edition of The Herald, was present at the meeting last night and will be present again this evening. Mr. Bitgood, who attributes his strength to the will of God, lent a great inspiration to the service. Mr. Bitgood himself was impressed with the service. He said in part: "The power of God did unlimited good last night and I hope it will do even more this evening. The singing, too, was wonderful. It must have come from the power of God." Asked why he had postponed his intended trip, Mr. Bitgood said he was convinced the power of God needed him here now more than ever. Tonight's sermon will be most interesting. Rev. Rineberger said this morning he will go more into detail in the personal life of Mr. Bitgood. He will discuss the clean life and early training Mr. Bitgood had and will tell how the power of God came into Mr. Bitgood's life. In regard to the strength of Mr. Bitgood, Rev. Rineberger has not the least doubt. If he previously had any, it has been wiped out, for today Mr. Bitgood substantiated the reports when he picked up Rev. Rineberger with one finger and then did the same with Rev. Austin, the church pastor.

ABOUT TOWN

William J. Wheaton of Main street and his son Gordon have returned from a visit with relatives in Boston, Mass. Swedish Lutheran church members are reminded of the Thanksgiving offering which each one is asked to enclose in the envelopes sent for the purpose. This is in place of the Thanksgiving bazaar which the church has been accustomed to hold annually at the Thanksgiving season. The Manchester soccer team will travel to Waterbury on Sunday for a State League game. Cars will leave the British American club at 10 o'clock and the kickoff in Waterbury will come at 2:30. The same lineup that was used last week will face the Waterbury team. John Digney, of 209 Center street, was driving a Ford truck on Maple street yesterday and figured in a collision with a Ford coupe operated by Mrs. Ila Hart, of 1009 Main street. There was slight damage. No one was injured. There will be a rehearsal of the Bethoven Glee club this evening. First tenors and first basses will meet at 7 o'clock and second tenors and basses at 8:30. Sherwood Martin, Walter Mahoney, Leo Menzer of Hartford, John Waddell and Folger Gustafson will motor to Princeton, N. J., tomorrow where they will see the Yale-Princeton football game. One whole section of the new pavement on Center street will have to be torn up because the surface over the big manhole opposite Linden street has settled somewhat. The manhole is probably 12 feet square and is directly under the trolley car tracks. The concrete has already broken away from the rails. Rev. Frederick Allen of the Second Congregational church spoke to about 300 school children of the upper grades at the 8th district school this morning at 9 o'clock at the regular assembly. The subject of his talk was "The Best Way." It was interesting and the children enjoyed it very much. His advice was to choose the best in life and use it in the best way. The fibre of milkweed is often used to produce the nap on silk hats.

QUEEN ESTHER DRAWS THROUG

Biblical Drama Pleases Audiences at South Methodist Church.

Mrs. Mabel G. Pollard, educational director of the South Methodist church received many congratulations last night on the success of the Biblical drama, "A Dream of Queen Esther," two performances of which were successfully given Wednesday and Thursday evenings in the banquet hall of the church. Miss Pollard has been coaching the competent cast for several weeks past and the production, while one of the most ambitious of its kind ever undertaken at the church, reflected credit on the director and the participants, the work of several of which approached that of professionals. The drama was thoroughly enjoyed by the audiences which filled every seat in the hall both evenings. The stage settings were truly magnificent and carried out with minute attention to detail. The various episodes were further enhanced by the play of colored lights at the rear of the hall in charge of Leon Holmes. The costumes were all in keeping with Biblical times. The outline of the play has already been given in these columns. Every one of the actors played their parts well. William Keith as Mordecai, the captive Jew, and Mrs. Hazel Anderson as Queen Esther, had the leading roles, and their work received unstinted praise. Fred Rogers as the King did good work. Miss Elsie Harrison as the little Ethiopian slave kept the audience laughing with her funny speeches and gestures. The songs of the Jewish children and the Persian rose maiden with their garlands, made a pleasing number. Mrs. Arthur Lashinske sang several solo parts with good effect. The work of the orchestra under the direction of Mrs. Katherine Howard, with Mrs. C. Ely Rogers at the piano, added much to the enjoyment of the program. The members of the cast presented Miss Pollard with a basket of beautiful yellow chrysanthemums in appreciation of her untiring work in coaching them.

BLOOD SHOT GIVEN TO SAVE PIG WOMAN

UNCLE JOE CANNON, "KIND CZAR," DEAD

(Continued from page one) Cannon lived the life of a country attorney. Then, in 1872, he won his first election to Congress and began a stretch of service that kept him in that body longer than any other man in America's history. From 1872 he served continuously until 1890, when he was defeated at the polls—"given a leave of absence without request," as he expressed it. But two years later he proved that this was only a temporary setback by winning again, and he repeated regularly thereafter. It was in 1903 that Cannon became speaker of the house. "The house states of those days placed tremendous power in the hands of the speaker, and Cannon made the most of it. Like 'Czar' Reed, he knew how to use power, and he won many an enemy during his nine years as presiding officer. So strong a speaker was he, in fact, that in the times of political unrest just preceding the election of Woodrow Wilson liberal politicians and journals fairly rent the heavens with cries against "Cannonism." But it is noteworthy that even the who opposed him most bitterly in politics were his warm personal friends. Second "Leave of Absence" In 1912 he got his second leave of absence without request, the wave of Democratic votes that swept Wilson into the White House rising high enough to submerge Cannon. He was believed that the old warhorse was through, but in 1914 he came back triumphantly, and stayed in Congress until he retired voluntarily in 1923, at the age of 81. A good sized book could be made up of anecdotes about Cannon. He possessed of a comfortable fortune in his later years and generous to an extreme, Cannon was nevertheless extremely parsimonious as far as personal expenditures were concerned. The tale is told in Washington of how he persisted in wearing an overcoat until it became a three-day's disgrace and his daughter insisted on his going to a store for a new one. He went, but returned empty-handed, saying that the new coats were priced at $85 and that he would not spend more than $30. His daughter had to go to the store and surreptitiously pay $57 of the purchase price in order to get him to buy a new coat. From Stogie to Havana Cannon was seldom seen without a cigar. In his earlier days it was, to be more exact, a stogie; but later he developed a taste for mild Havanas. He probably was given more cigars, by admirers throughout the country, than any man that ever lived. And each gift always won a personal letter of appreciation from its recipient. "Uncle Joe" was also fond of a nip of whiskey—it was said his doctor had prescribed it. One of the stormiest scenes the capitol building ever witnessed occurred shortly before he retired from Congress when he discovered that someone had stolen his silver flask from his overcoat pocket while he was in a committee room. Another of his favorite diversions was the ancient game of draw poker. Incidentally, he never spoke of it by that name. Instead he would say that he and some friends were "going to have a little discussion of the rights of property." Uncle Joe was an excellent player, too. When he retired three years ago.

CHENEYS TRANSFER BISSEL TO NEW YORK

Local Man to Work in Silk Company's Metropolitan Office. Cheney Brothers announced today that Clarence E. Bissell, formerly superintendent of the manufacturing office of the Dyeing and Finishing department, has been transferred to the New York office. The change will be effective Monday. Harry Benson, well known local young man, and head of the Time Study office of the same department, will succeed Bissell. Bissell has been with Cheney Brothers since his return from overseas service during the World War. He was at first employed as a time-study man. He then took charge of that office and three years ago was promoted to the office he is now leaving. Benson has been with Cheney Brothers since leaving High school.

Foch Jarred by Claim of Gen. Pershing

Paris, Nov. 12.—The statement of General Pershing made in an Armistice Day speech at Chicago that America's entry into the war saved the Allied cause, attracted almost as much attention here as did the speech of President Coolidge. "I have always had the most friendly relations with General Pershing and I can't believe that he made the bald statement attributed to him that America won the war," said Marshal Foch today. "Nevertheless, although it is difficult to judge events of eight years ago, I am convinced that if a half million well-trained Americans had been on French soil in 1917 the war would have ended sooner than it did." The French newspapers printed President Coolidge's Armistice Day speech at length, but in the main refrained from any comment on its interpretation.

UNITED STATES OUT IN LEAGUE OPINION

Geneva, Nov. 12.—In authoritative League of Nations circles here President Coolidge's Armistice Day speech at Kansas City yesterday is interpreted as definitely barring the United States from membership in the World court. It was declared that the present members of the World court can not successfully make more concessions to the United States than those made at the Geneva signatory conference in September.

WEIGHT REDUCING CLASS One of the most popular classes conducted during the past year at the School Street Recreation Center has been a class for women interested in weight reducing. This class was conducted every Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock. The class was conducted by Majorie Geary. Because of her absence from town for several weeks it was necessary temporarily to discontinue the class. The class however will be reorganized to meet next Monday afternoon. At this time new members will be admitted. Weight reducing by exercise is a proven fact and of the 35 women who joined the class last term 25 reported a loss of weight.

QUEER QUIRKS OF NATURE

Red Shouldered Hawk

By ARTHUR N. PACK President, American Nature Ass'n. It is the present custom to regard all hawks as destructive, and birds to be destroyed whenever possible. This practice is founded mainly on prejudice, based on the fact that a few of the species live mainly on smaller birds.

General condemnation of hawks is unjust. A few hawks are destructive; some have habits that are mainly beneficial; and some are entirely friendly to man from their constant destruction of man's rodent enemies. All species are interesting in many ways. Among the more interesting and beneficial species, the red shouldered hawk stands high in the list. He should be called the singing hawk, especially in the nesting season, for singing is then his most characteristic attribute.

GIRLS TO EXHIBIT
"FRIENDSHIP" DOLL

Center Church Reserves to Give First Entertainment—Ancient Japanese Custom.

Girl Reserves of the Center church will give their initial public entertainment at the church Saturday afternoon at 3:30. The corps was organized in October and numbers about twenty-five girls between the ages of 12 and 18.

It is the earnest wish of the girls that everyone come and visit their "friendship" doll before she sails for Japan. Tea will be served by the girls in real Japanese costume. One of the costumes bears the crest of one of Japan's royal families. Drills and Japanese songs will also be given.

There will be another friendship doll dressed by the intermediate department of Center church Sunday school to be sent to Japan. It should be explained that children in homes schools and churches of America have been invited to send doll representatives to Japan for Hina Matsuri, the festival of dolls which comes once a year, on March the 3rd. These representatives will carry messages of good will from the donors to those who receive the dolls. The Japanese government will supervise the distribution of the dolls to children in the public schools of Japan, and it is expected that they will come from all parts of the United States.

At Hina Matsuri in Japan all the ancestral dolls are brought out for the renewing of acquaintance and the girls and their mothers dress in gala costume. They not only enjoy their own dolls but they visit those of their friends. Tea and cakes are served to the dolls as well as to guests. It is a time for instruction in social graces, family virtue, housekeeping and in ancestral history.

Those interested in promoting good will and understanding between America and Japan have been invited to take part in this doll project.

The dolls will need a passport, a railroad and steamship ticket and as it starts on its journey each class or group sending a doll will give a farewell party or reception.

The Girl Reserves of Center church have contributed a doll which is unbreakable, is sixteen inches high, goes to sleep and says "mamma." They have made sets of dainty underclothes and several complete costumes including a blue taffeta cape ensemble.

YALE'S HOPES RISING FOR PRINCETON GAME

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 12.—Yale seemed a deserted village today as the much-slammed varsity football team entrained at ten o'clock this morning for the trip to the Princeton jungle where tomorrow afternoon Yale and Princeton lock in combat. An augmented band led a procession of cheering graduates through the tangled traffic of the central district to the railroad station where the student body swarmed onto a platform to give the team the final send-off. Railroad officials had passed the word along in advance so that students had access to the platform and there was not a hitch to mar the performance.

Confidence was rising among Yale supporters today. Yale athletic authorities announced that the line probably would include Scott and Fishwick at ends, Benton and Richards tackles, Sturbahn and Webster, guards; Harvey, center and Captain Bunnell, Holabird, Failing and Wadsworth behind the line. The only thing that darkened today was the probability that Kline would not play tomorrow.

Get a 10-cent box now. You men and women who can't get feeling right—who have headache, coated tongue, bad taste and foul breath, dizziness, can't sleep, are bilious, nervous and upset, bothered with a sick, gassy, disordered stomach, or have a bad cold.

Are you keeping your bowels clean with Cascarets, or merely forcing a passageway every few days with salts, cathartic pills or castor oil?

Cascarets work while you sleep; cleanse the stomach, remove the sour, undigested, fermenting food and gas; take the excess bile from the liver and carry out of the system all the constipated waste matter and poison in the bowels.

A Cascaret tonight will straighten you out by morning—a 10-cent box from any drug store will keep your stomach sweet; liver and bowels regular, and head clear for months. Don't forget the children. They love Cascarets because they taste good—never gripe or sicken.—Adv.

You men and women who can't get feeling right—who have headache, coated tongue, bad taste and foul breath, dizziness, can't sleep, are bilious, nervous and upset, bothered with a sick, gassy, disordered stomach, or have a bad cold. Are you keeping your bowels clean with Cascarets, or merely forcing a passageway every few days with salts, cathartic pills or castor oil?

Cascarets work while you sleep; cleanse the stomach, remove the sour, undigested, fermenting food and foul gases; take the excess bile from the liver and carry out of the system all the constipated waste matter and poison in the bowels. A Cascaret tonight will straighten you out by morning—a 10-cent box from any drug store will keep your stomach sweet; liver and bowels regular, and head clear for months. Don't forget the children. They love Cascarets because they taste good—never gripe or sicken.—Adv.

82, LEADS BAND

Honolulu—Making his first public appearance in years, Henri Berger, 82, former leader of the Royal Hawaiian Band, swayed the baton for the present day musical organization when it dedicated a new bandstand in Kapiolani Park here recently. Berger served as bandmaster under Hawaiian royalty before the islands were annexed to the United States. He is the composer of many Hawaiian musical numbers.

FIND OLD CANNON

Honolulu—Two ancient cannons, said to have been thrown overboard from a Russian man-of-war when she went aground in the year 1808, have been discovered in Hales Bay near Honolulu. The guns which were discovered lying in 15 feet of water are deeply encrusted with barnacles and other sea growth. The discovery was made by an army officer from Fort Kamehameha.

INTENTIONAL DUPE

Of the new books of the week we particularly recommend:
 "Galahad: Enough of His Life to Account For His Reputation" (Bobbs-Merrill) by John Erskine—We rest our case on behalf of this defendant upon the title.
 "The Orphan Angel" (Knopf) by Elinor Wylie—If witchcraft were still believed in, this amazing young writer would have long since been burned at the stake.
 "The Fiddler in Barly" (McBride) by Robert Nathan—No young writer has a finer gift of fancy nor a more delicate prose style. They'll shout him from the house tops one of these days.

It's a far cry from Tennyson to John Erskine.

And when one has finished Erskine's latest, "Galahad: Enough of His Life to Account for His Reputation", one looks back a bit wryly on Tennyson's Galahad, "wearing the white flour of a blameless life." For Erskine sets out to show "how he got that way." And HOW?

It seems to us that the title of Erskine's new book is sufficient to tantalize quite as many readers as put "The Private Life of Helen of Troy" into the best-seller list. And this Survey thought it a vastly better volume, though "Helen" was most amusing.

The handling is similar: Erskine presents his people clothed in modern vernacular and chatting in a highly sophisticated and civilized manner. One by one he punctures the legendary illusions and, somehow or other, we would not be surprised if things happened some such way. There are variations, of course, to agree with the time and place and manner of speech. Guinevere we are shown, was what the speech of today would call "a slick worker." She knew her men, how to get them and how to hold them, knights or no knights. She had tenaciously feminine desire to build the lives of the men who interested her. She tried it on King Arthur. But he measured just so far. Lancelot allowed himself to become Arthur's "yes man" and, while fairly satisfactory as a lover, was a disappointment as an achiever of those idealistic goals for which she aimed.

It would seem that Guinevere was willing to share her man only with an ideal. Then along came Galahad—offspring of an evening between Elaine and Lancelot. Elaine, we gather, was a very modern young woman, perhaps one of the first of the independent, young thinkers. She loved Lancelot, she wanted him, she seduced him, but she couldn't win him. For Guinevere was much shrewder.

What worked on Lancelot, worked on Galahad. And King Arthur seized the opportunity to bring the "good old days of quest and tournaments" back to a realm that was suffering from feminine influence over the males. Further, Galahad was quite disillusioned at his father's falling to marry Elaine, and the precepts of Guinevere had had their effect.

Erskine doubtless is trying to tell the world that it doesn't change; that knights or Trojans had impulses quite the same as our own and differed only in the circumstances of life and conditions.

Elinor Wylie, whose witchery of words and theme make her an outstanding figure in American literature, has provided the most daring and original idea of a decade in her "The Orphan Angel."

Suppose, says she, that Shelley was not drowned a century ago; suppose a passing ship picked him up, carried him to America and the great bard wandered these shores—let us say under the name of Shiloh.

An inspired idea! Quite true and one that only the most skillful would dare attempt. Yet, after "Jennifer Lorn" and "The Venetian Glass Nephew" who would attempt to argue Miss Wylie's ability?

Unhesitatingly we give this book a place among the two or three finest products of the season.

Not the least delightful quality of Miss Wylie is that, like Willa Cather, she builds her novels completely according to her own lights and without bowing to anyone's opinions on the matter. There are many pseudo-individualists; a few real ones.

The story, briefly, is of the poet's quest—playfully treated—for a lovely, unknown girl. That gives no suggestion of the playety, imagination, richness of American background and of viewpoint; nor of an ironic anti-climax at the finish when the poet's spirit is caught and held. This is a book to turn on many a night.

Nothing is more difficult than to try and chart the course of a book, the charm of which lies largely in the telling. To outline its plot seems an ineffectual and futile task. And so it is with most of the writings of rare young Robert Nathan, whose latest effort is "The Fiddler in Barly."

The fiddler symbolizes a frustrated troubador, who is cast in the role of choreman. There is the child, captured by the fiddler's tunes; the amazing dog, who carries on philosophical conversations with the baryard animals; there is the spell of the fiddle; itself, and so many more fanciful and tender touches.

Nathan is an American writer, who, bit by bit, builds himself a following of discriminating readers. The parade should be swelled considerably.

THE ROMANCE OF AMERICA: Sam Houston (9)

Troubles piled up swiftly. Santa Anna was marching on the Alamo to avenge General Cos' surrender. Houston rushed reinforcements to the Alamo but advised evacuation. The fort was manned by such men as Davy Crockett, Colonel Bowie, William B. Travis and Bonham, the daring South Carolinian.

Houston's warning was disregarded. Only 180 men, they faced a Mexican army of five or six thousand men and refused to budge.

Santa Anna attacked the Alamo at four in the morning, March 6, 1836. The Americans leered at his demand for surrender.

Mexicans scaled the walls. The Americans fought every inch of the way, but gradually were forced back by numbers. Crockett met death at the door of the church, his long rifle, "Betsy," held like a club. Bowie fought to the death from the cot on which he had been placed after a fall. It was slaughter, the Thermopylae of Texas. (Continued)

Blonde, But Doesn't Want To Be Preferred

Hollywood. — Gentlemen may prefer blondes—and again they may not, this being a point of controversy among experts.

But do blondes want to be preferred?

If Sally Rand, pretty blonde maiden of cinema fame, is the girl in question, the answer is "no."

Sally gladly would exchange her golden tresses for those of a darker hue.

"There are plenty of reasons why I would rather be a brunette," she exclaimed. "First of all, I believe I am better looking with dark hair. It suits my features better."

Now Sally isn't hard to look at regardless of mere man's personal taste, as is proved by her picture.

"Then too," she continued, "it is much more fun to be a brunette. Men have blonde labels as all being alike, and all men treat all blondes just the same. They think we are frivolous and unthinking. It is difficult for a blonde not to show her thoughts and emotions in her eyes. That's another disadvantage."

"But brunettes—oh, they're all so different! You never can tell what a brunette will do and men know it. That is what makes it possible for dark-haired girls to enjoy themselves more. They can kid a man along and he never knows how to treat them. When a brunette goes anywhere she has the feeling of an adventure because she doesn't know what may happen. Her eyes don't reveal her thoughts."

So there you are—the blonde vs. brunette argument from a new viewpoint.

Sally has played in several pictures as a brunette. She likes herself better that way, and always begs for such roles. And it is not an uncommon sight to see her on the Boulevard or at the Montmartre wearing a dark wig.

Sally Rand, blonde or brunette?

Country Gives City 10 Lessons On Life

Portland, Me., Nov. 10.—Ten lessons, at least, can the smart city dweller learn from his country cousin.

So believes Miss Florence M. Hale of Augusta, Me., state supervisor of rural schools. She declares with pride that she is "rural minded."

That means, fundamentally, she says, "to be interested in the small affairs of your neighbors, and to be pleased—not resentful—when they show a friendly curiosity in your own private affairs."

Born in Factory Town

Miss Hale is not a country woman in origin. She was born and reared in a Massachusetts manufacturing town. For more than 20 years, however, she has been teaching and directing rural schools, and she now is recognized as a national authority on the subject. She can see life from both the city and the country points of view.

will stop on the road to help a stranger repair his fliwver. They often put in longer hours—from dawn to sunset—but they don't let time escape them.

"Fourth, respect for physical toil. City schools particularly are training their pupils for white collar jobs. But a Lincoln or an Edison comes along only once in millions of men. Most of us have to be soldiers in the ranks and sweat and take orders, and there should be any concession to hard work."

The Country Reads

"Fifth, attention to public affairs. The country knows what the state legislature and Congress are doing. City people often lack pride in not knowing. The country reads the newspapers for the news, while the city looks at them to fill in moments of idle time.

"Sixth, thinking. I don't mean introspection, but turning over in your mind the ideas that come up. Part of this is the attentive reading of books. I believe that people who live in a whirl of work and entertainment, without thinking things over, come to lose the power of productive mental activity.

"Seventh, tolerance. This may sound peculiar, because the cities are given to criticism of rural intolerance and narrowness of outlook. But they are just as harsh on the things they aren't used to. Between the two, I believe country folk have the wider interests.

"Eighth, money. People everywhere overemphasize it. But I think there is a larger proportion of country people who rate money below happiness and other important things. City people handle more money and depend upon it for nearly every necessary thing, so it is natural if they are blinded by it.

"Ninth, the city may learn—from some country people, at least—to stay at home and pay attention to raising the children.

"Last of all, and just as important as any, is the human touch. It is so difficult in the city. It is so easy and natural in the country. In the country and the villages we get together for gossip. We know all about our neighbors' finances and their children's love affairs and the new school teacher's clothes. But if anybody gets sick, the whole neighborhood is on hand to help. In such surroundings, we learn human nature. Knowing the world is nothing compared to knowing people.

"The country can learn from the city, too. It can improve a great deal by imitating city ways. But that's another question."

Big and Little Things

"Second, the city may learn that the important things are not the sensational and glittering and big, the simple things. Your own heart will tell many of these things to you if you listen.

"Third, the lesson of taking your time. Even in the busy season, farmers will stop for an hour or two for a big family dinner. They

FOOTBALL DOPE

By "SWEDE" OBERLANDER
Dartmouth All-American Halfback, 1925

(Copyright, 1926, NEA Service, Inc.) Just as sufficient confidence is necessary for the success of any championship team, an overdose of it is an undermining influence. Once it has taken hold it is difficult to remove.

There are those old sayings which are repeated to a team that are indeed, true. One of them is, "you can't be licked if you won't be licked."

The proper mental attitude of a team entering upon a big game is an important deciding factor. A team never should start with the feeling of inferiority. Yet a team never should be allowed to get the idea that no matter what brand of football it presents, it can win regardless.

Dartmouth was particularly impressed with that fact during last season. We were playing Brown in their new stadium in Providence. On the preceding Saturday we had taken over Harvard to the merry tune of 23 to 9.

We thought nothing in the world could stop us. We were champions already in our own opinions. In this frame of mind we entered the game which almost dashed to pieces our fondest hopes. We could trim Brown with only half exerting ourselves.

The game began with Brown taking the offensive. Our plays were not working. Our passes were being hurried. Few were completed. All the while we had the attitude that we were playing winning football.

The first half ended with the score 7 to 0 in our favor, the touchdown resulting from the recovery of a blocked kick and not by any flash of offensive play.

The game was listless. The line was not getting the jump on the defense. The backs were running at half speed. All had the thought that that half-hearted exhibition was sufficient to win.

Even after the coaches had tried their best to knock this cockiness out of us, the second half was no better played. Another blocked kick in the second half indirectly resulted in our only other score.

The team looks back upon that game as the only dark spot upon our schedule. We simply realized that we hadn't given our all because we thought we were too good to be beaten.

ALL-BURNSIDE CLUB BOOKED BY ANGELLO

Manager Nick Angello announced today that he has booked the All-Burnside eleven to play here against the Cubs Sunday afternoon.

Efforts to book the Colored Stars and the Ramble-Tigers fell by the wayside. However, the Burnside team is bringing to town a first class team with some of the Lander boys in its lineup.

Wins $750 With New Flag Creed

Robert Lobser

Cleveland, O., Nov. 10.—Robert Lobser, 17, son of Latvian parents, is the winner of first prize—a $750 scholarship—in a national contest conducted by the American Legion for the best "Patriotic Flag Creed."

Lobser, whose home is in Cleveland, wrote:

"I believe that the Stars and Stripes symbolize the noble aspirations and high resolutions of our great American democracy; that it is the banner of a nation which protects the sacred and inalienable right of man in his pursuit of life, liberty and happiness; that it is the standard of a republic which upholds justice and faith among men, and peace and harmony among nations; that it is the insignia of a country which promotes education, peace and prosperity; that it is an emblem of a nation which dispels ignorance, religious prejudice and racial antipathy; that it is the symbol of our freedom, our unity and our power; the flag of a great and glorious yesterday, the promise of a greater and more glorious tomorrow."

CARSON-CERVINI WINNERS
Dave Carson and Paul Cervini captured high honors in the fifth sitting of the C. B. A. A. setback tournament at the School street Rec last evening. Their score was 449. Bill Brock and Paul Gustafson were second with 148. There remains but one sitting in this tournament. It will take place next Thursday night. The team leaders will be announced prior to the sitting.

ANTI-FREEZE MUST NOT BE FAULTY

Annual Winter Puzzle Bobs Up Again; Alcohol Best Solution.

BY ISRAEL KLEIN

Science Editor, NEA Service
What to add to the cooling system to keep the water from freezing in cold weather is just as great a puzzle this year as last.

Liquids of all kinds are suggested, canned anti-freeze solutions advertised, yet advantages and disadvantages of each make it a problem for the motorist to know what to use. The best way to solve this is to consider all types of anti-freeze liquids and to apply that which is most appropriate for the conditions under which each driver finds himself.

Winter conditions in the south are much different from winter in the north, so that each territory must have individual attention even in the matter of filling the radiator.

For example, trouble from alcohol evaporation is more likely in the south, where the days are comparatively warm and the nights cold. Sudden changes may leave an unprotected cooling system and may cause freezing and bursting of the cylinder jackets.

In the south, therefore, a liquid like glycerine would be more practicable. In the north, the alcohol solution would be cheaper.

Make Suitable Choice
For each case, however, the advantages and disadvantages of all types of anti-freezes should be weighed. And when one is finally chosen, measures should be taken to cope with its failings.

Glycerine, for instance, does not evaporate, but its cost is high and it has a tendency to open up the joints of the cooling system by thinning the gaskets and hose, and thus leaking through.

To avoid this, two antidotes may be used. Either pour in a can of radiator fluid with the glycerine solution, to avoid leakage, or pour a pint of cylinder oil on top of the radiator water before draining the radiator.

As the water is drained the oil will form a film over the whole interior surface of the radiator and its connections, which will prevent the glycerine to penetrate the joints. Then the water and glycerine solution may be poured into the cooling system.

After running the engine a while with the glycerine in it, tighten the cylinder head bolts and the hose clamps.

Alcohol Needs Refilling
There is nothing to do for alcohol, except refill regularly as it evaporates. Its cheapness makes up for the waste.

Many other liquids and anti-freezes have been suggested from time to time, but none to compare with glycerine and alcohol. Glycol is merely a compound form of the pure glycerine, and is just as good, as well as costly.

A combination of alcohol and glycerine is used at times, but their faults remain.

Even lubricating oils have been tried as anti-freezing material. But they can't retain as much heat as water, and begin to harden at the least drop of the thermometer. Starting in cold weather would be almost impossible.

Kerosene is suggested, but its heat capacity is low also. Even common table salt has been used, but it would corrode every bit of metal with which it came into contact.

Other Liquids Faulty
Other solutions are honey, which is even higher in viscosity or congealing quality than oil; various sugar solutions which have the same disadvantage; magnesium of calcium chloride, whose faults are those of common salt solutions; and methanol, a form of alcohol with highly poisonous fumes.

The choice resolves itself, therefore, to denatured alcohol for territories where the cold weather is even through day and night, and glycerine or glycol for other parts.

This choice is based on a list of requirements engineers have set out for anti-freeze solutions. These are:

The liquid must have a low freezing point, must cause no harm to the cooling system through solvent action or corrosion, circulate freely at the lowest operating temperature, boil without decomposition near the boiling point of water, have high heat capacity, be readily obtainable at a reasonable price and be non-inflammable.

Right Proportions

The following table shows what parts of either glycerine or denatured alcohol should be used with the water in your car's cooling system to keep it from freezing at designated temperatures:

"GAUNTLET."

We fail to see, even on a second reading of President Coolidge's Kansas City address, where there is any justification for headlining that speech as "flinging down the gauntlet to Europe."

Nor is there anything particularly startling in the assertion that it is America's duty to look out for America first.

It was not a very remarkable speech that the President made at Kansas City. It served to convey the information that he was through fighting for American adherence to the World Court and to let the European peoples know that the United States government was not found of being referred to as "Uncle Shylock."

Just a little bit more suave speaker than the President could have said everything he did, and nothing else, and made it sound as much like a pat on the back to Europe as a threat.

ABOUT MARS.

When the United States Bureau of Standards gives out a scientific statement it is likely to be accepted, by the average citizen at least, with a good deal of consideration, for it is known that, in any event, the statement is seriously meant—which is far from being the case with a good deal of the "scientific" sensationalism that is being fed to the public, these days, from a variety of sources and for a variety of reasons, usually profit.

So that when Dr. W. W. Coblentz, astronomer of the Bureau, comes forward with the statement that he has discovered that "Martian temperatures are, in zones and for part of the time, comparable to those of this earth, and that there is every reason to believe that animal life may exist on Mars, it brings a certain sort of conviction that his statements are true.

Dr. Coblentz has succeeded in measuring the temperature of Mars with an instrument so delicate that it has registered the heat from the North star and will measure that radiated from a candle at a distance of a hundred miles. He finds that conditions are much more favorable to the maintenance of life on the Martian planet than had been supposed.

"Apparently," he says, "life in the equatorial region of Mars, if it exists, is a continuous process of thawing out and hibernating up in the forenoon and a reversal in the afternoon. In the polar regions, however, variations are not so extreme during the long summer days and the cycle of reproduction, development and death of living cells would not be subject to the hazards that occur on the equator."

All this may not make any of us any happier or any richer, but it gives us the satisfaction of having a glimmer of responsible information on a most intriguing subject, just the same.

BULLYRAGGING.

The end of all attempts to bullyrag the insurgent wing of the Republican party into coming to heel and staying there is indicated in the determination of the wisest heads in the United States Senate not to permit Senator Norris of Nebraska to be deprived of his chairmanship on the judiciary committee at the forthcoming short session. Better systems of selecting Senate committee chairman than the seniority method are easier to invent than new kinds of tack hammers, but the fact remains that on the seniority basis, and under that rule Norris is entitled to succeed the late Senator Cummins at the head of the judiciary.

Because Norris went off the reservation and made speeches for the Democratic senatorial candidate in Pennsylvania Senator Reed of that state, more of a fighter than a diplomat, declared that the Nebraska man should be kept out of his committee promotion.

There was potential trouble in this situation. Norris is a recalcitrant crab and mischief maker. If he were booted off his committee job he would be almost certain to go on a rampage of revenge—and wreck the organization of the next Senate by voting with the enemy.

Wise leadership has stilled the Reed outbreak and has provided that Norris shall have his job. That keeps him in the Republican party—and, insurgent as he is, the party needs him.

A deal of this sort of thing will have to be done this winter. The day of bullying is gone.

T. A. D. JONES.

American college football is, theoretically, a concern of the colleges. Actually it is a matter of general interest. It has been made so by the newspapers. If there is anyone who believes that sixty or seventy thousand persons would travel scores or hundreds of miles and pay heavy admission fees to witness a college football game, if there were no touting of the sport in the newspapers, he must have a very great faith indeed in the "old college spirit."

So that when sports writers fall upon T. A. D. Jones and his work as head football coach of Yale, their presumptuousness is perhaps not quite so great as Mr. Jones assumes. It is possible that criticism of a football coach by a sports specialist in a newspaper is not quite so completely an intrusion as that gentleman seems to imagine.

Perhaps the sporting pages of the newspapers do, indeed, confuse their relations toward college games with their relations toward professional sports, to some degree. Yet it is not our observation that this confusion has ever disturbed any college athletic board so long as it contributed to a widespread interest in inter-college contests and brought in huge gates at Bowl or Stadium for the support of university athletics.

Wherefore the blighting scorn of Mr. Jones in his reference to all sports writers, whomsoever, who have had the temerity to describe him as a more or less rotten coach seems to us to be a bit strained. And when he declares that "this criticism is coming from shyster lawyers, poor doctors and dentists and eighteen dollar-a-week clerks," he lets in a brand new light on what is the matter with Yale's football. Mr. Jones is quite obviously a very impossible snob.

SHAW.

Literary critics seem to be, with relation to the award of the Nobel prize to George Bernard Shaw, in somewhat the same condition as the cross-eyed man in the movies just after he has been hit with a particularly heavy pie. They have nothing to say and do not know how to say it.

Mr. Shaw himself says that the reason he was awarded the prize for 1925 was probably because he wrote nothing at all that year. But those at all familiar with the lengths to which the Irish dramatist will go in order to score a point of witticism will insist on a verification of that year's non-productiveness by an expert librarian or a book reviewer's records.

At all events there has heretofore been every evidence of a broad and liberal and very wise construction of their responsibilities by those highly cultured Stockholm persons who have the awarding of the Nobel prizes. Perhaps they merely came to the conclusion that George Bernard Shaw's enormously clever impishness, the sting and lash and grin of his satire, even as expressed in the most casual of newspaper utterances, constitute by themselves a contribution to twentieth century thought that is entitled to recognition as amongst the most valuable things in literature.

A letter, a jibe in the daily prints, may perhaps be literature, as well as a bound book or a staged play.

THE ROUGH THINGS!

The Harvard idea of what football ought to be, to be really nice, is conveyed in a dispatch emanating from Crimson sources at Cambridge, which declares that slow motion pictures of the game with Princeton show that the Tiger resorted to unnecessarily rough tactics.

Especially as it pointed out that Miller, a Harvard backfield man, was "tackled with such force by an Orange and Black defender that he was unable to use the muscles of his legs for some minutes."

Obviously the way to play football with Harvard, and still avoid reputation for rowdy brutality is to slap the ball carrier on the wrist, gently, and scream "Checkmate!" just as loud as anything.

IN NEW YORK

New York, Nov. 12.—I don't pretend to understand the geographic psychology of styles.

New York shops love to announce that such-and-such a hat comes from Paris; such-and-such a garment comes from London.

Get 20 miles out of New York, one way or another, and the stores about that such-and-such is in the latest New York manner.

On a recent trip to Montreal I walked through the French business section, thinking that at last I could probably pick up a hat or so, minus duty, which I might feel certain had come direct from Paris or way points.

Going up to a window I was bowled over by a great display of wide-brimmed hats from the great open spaces of Montana, while a huge window card advertised: "Chapeau au Tom Mix."

Therewith I quit!

Many months will pass before the tales concerning Queen Marie die on Broadway.

The latest links a portion of her entertainment with the financial success of that historic veteran, "Abie's Irish Rose," Anne Nichols, who wrote it, and has retired on her income, was able to supply the queenly bed upon which Marie slept. Also a $3500 tablecloth came out of Abie's profits.

One of the large New York hotels now slips a liquor price list under the doors of its guests each morning. It is printed daily and quotes the day's prices in Scotch, gin, champagne, rye and liquors. Delivery is guaranteed and the card reads, "Goods guaranteed or money refunded. Confidential—Caterer."

Broadway at last is learning to recognize the sound of the curfew. And there is much wailing and gnashing of teeth. Broadway is not a highway easily harnessed to restraint.

During the winter months, so says the new city edict, the naughty night clubs and cabarets must close at 3 o'clock. The prophets continue to insist that it will be a good trick if they do it.

Already various methods of evasion are planned. New clubs blossom out in the guise of private clubs with memberships. "Members" must hand cards at the door, but once the places begin operation, these cards will doubtless be as easy to obtain as Scotch highballs. This, of course, will add to the expense of the average visitor since an entrance card will have considerable cash value.

Curfew or no curfew Broadway will find a way to dance 'til dawn if it has to dance in the street. GILBERT SWAN.

Manchester's basketball debut was a rather inauspicious affair. Playing before a well-sized gathering of fans in Meriden last night, George Hunt's C. B. A. outfit met a team that proved to be its master every stage of the game. Although the Manchester boys fought gamely, it must be said, they were outclassed from start to finish. The score was 41 to 23.

Outstanding Star

The most outstanding feature of the game was the sensational playing of Irving Mendell, flashy Insilco luminary. This short and stocky lad, who scintillated as a variety performer for Syracuse University for three years, was too much for the silk workers. Mendell caused seven field goals and three fouls and missed a few other hard luck shots. He was all over the floor, breaking up Manchester passes and starting Insilco offensive attacks. It is doubtful whether Meriden would have won without this player. He surely was the whole works.

Visitors Try Hard

It is a well known fact that seldom a team looks impressive in defeat. This was the case last night. The whirlwind attack of the Insilco boys with their snappy as-work camouflaged the efforts of visitors who would stage a fight but at no time after the first five minutes of play, was the ultimate verdict in doubt. The Manchester team did not seem to be able to get started. There was a tendency to dribble too much, stand and stare. There were times, however, when the individual efforts of the Manchester players stood out. Johnny Boyle, for instance, was a tower of strength on the defense. He smeared under way Carroll Barrett, playing half of a game at guard, held Teagle and Gallagher scoreless while he faced them. Tommy Faulkner was brilliant at times but was handicapped by the inability of Joe Pentland to hang onto the ball. It was an off night for Pentland who, in reality, is a good player. Cervini, Wiley, Macdonald and Anderson did their utmost to stop the Insilco offense but were unsuccessful.

SIX MORE HUSBANDS FEEL ROLLING PINS

Six more victories were chalked up by the wives at the expense of their husbands last night in the weekly season of the Married Peoples' Bowling League. Ed Montie, who after starting off defeat for two years, fell off the precipice, got back into true form defeating his wife three straight games by 7, 28 and 20 pins. The winners in the female ranks were Mrs. Elliott 2, Mrs. Krause 2, Mrs. Lutz 1 and Mrs. Bantly 1. The scores:

Score Again for 'Sugar' And 'Private Hawkshaw'

BY W. M. BRÄUCHER

Canton, Ohio, Nov. 12.—They said the Canton underworld was too tough for Detective Ora Slater. It is "private Hawkshaw."

His critics couldn't see how a country sort of fellow who seemed to have nothing more than a fund of funny stories could capture the slayers of Don Mellett, the crusading Canton editor.

Slater's "sugar catches more crooks than vinegar" gave the hard-boiled police department of the big city a hearty laugh—even a gut-faw.
As Fiction Would Have It
But working on a cold trail, Detective Ora Slater captured the "key man" in the murder, Pat McDermott, the former convict who had been hunted over the nation for three months after Mellett was shot down at his garage door one July night.
It was a bloodless capture. Slater hadn't even a gun when he went to bring McDermott back to the scene of the crime. He simply walked up to McDermott and said:

"Pat, I'm very glad to meet you."
Pat, without a word, went right along. From Twin Rocks, Pa., to Canton the unarmed Slater and McDermott rode quietly back to Canton. It was like leading McDermott back by the hand.
Wagging Tongue Is a Winner
On the way back Slater entertained. His humorous stories, his quiet wit, his "sugar"—these made an immediate friend of the man police of the nation had hunted as a desperate criminal.
It was not the first big murder case into which the stocky little Hawkshaw from Cincinnati had stepped—nor the first that Slater's quiet way had worked out.
A few months before, at Troy, Ohio, he won a confession from Jake Nesbitt, noted wife murderer. Here, too, "sugar" did the work. He won Nesbitt by the faded talking of the weather and the crops.
Slater's methods have worked out many other crimes, but his quiet, eccentric ways were too much for the newspaper men covering the Canton murder.

They had been on the job hardly 24 hours when funny stories about "Hawkshaw" Slater began to trickle out. Slater was too good a subject for banter to pass up.
He seemed to be wasting his time. He dawdled around Canton, talking to this one and that. To cap the climax, after he had been at work on the case for two months, Slater announced he thought he ought to take a ten-day vacation.
"After that," he said, "I'm coming back and get McDermott."
Curses, Jack Dalton, I'll go and take a nap and when I awaken, beware, for I shall camp upon your trail! That was the way it sounded to the visiting humorists of the press.
Slater was hurt when the stories were printed. His price rankled. Fifteen Years a Crook Chaser
For 15 years he had camped on crime's trail. When he was a sheriff out in Indiana, back in 1907, he jailed 38 men who had attempted to wreck a train. But perhaps the humorists had forgotten that.
Perhaps they forgot, also, that in 1922 Slater put five men behind the bars in a big Cincinnati hold-up.
He trailed and caught "Red" Holt after Holt had killed a Cleveland policeman.
His "sugar" coaxed a confession from a prominent official of a Michigan concern that he had swindled the company out of more than a quarter of a million dollars.
Then the famous Nesbitt case. Then this—these stories about the Hawkshaw who probably knew more funny stories than Chauncey Depew, but who was just a bit out of his line at detecting criminals.
Vacation Ends—Back to Work.
But after his ten day vacation Slater came back. He quietly resumed work.
"If they'll only let old 'Ory' alone a while maybe he'll show 'em yet," he confided to a friend in Canton.
They let him alone. Slater began sewing his net.
It was on the members of Pat McDermott's family at Nanty Glo, Pa., that his "sugar" was used. He won their aid.
It's history now how this message went out to Pat over "grapevine" lines of communication:
"Your mother is very ill, and isn't long to live. Send the family some signal as to your whereabouts."
It worked. Pat went to Twin Rocks. Soon McDermott and Slater were face to face.
"Pat, I'm very glad to meet you," Slater said.

WAITERS LEARN FRENCH FOR COMPOSING MENUS

Stockholm (United Press).—Polite manners, everyday English, slight feeling geography, foreign money, the liquor laws of Sweden, and menu card French are to be the things to be taught at the new school for waiters opened in Stockholm.
A former restaurant has been turned into a training school and cooks as well as waiters, are drilled in the art of properly serving the public, especially foreign visitors.
The special course in French is limited to the writing of menus but conversational English is being taught, first, because a tolerable use of it can be learned by Swedes more quickly than any other tongue, and, second, because the managers feel that English is to be the world language of the future.

PLATFORM ON TROLLEYS USED TO HAUL FREIGHT

Buenos Aires, Nov. 6. (United Press)—Passengers who make the mistake of trying to board a street car through the front door in Buenos Aires may have to do battle with the motorman.
The front door is for exit only, as far as the passengers are concerned, and the front platform is given over to a little private enterprise of the motorman's part. If a passenger wishes to take a package or bundle of considerable size aboard the car, he hands it to the motorman, and then walks to the rear to board the car.
The motorman takes care of the package and receives his tip when the passenger leaves the car.

GOOD ROADS AID FARM MARKETING

Chicago—Good roads have opened up a new avenue of marketing to the farmer and have given him quick and inexpensive means for selling his products.
Roadside markets in the rural districts of the United States sell produce to the value of more than $2,118,000 a month direct to motorists, according to the American Road Builders' Association.
This $25,000,000 annual business for the farmer includes only the produce purchased direct from the small stands operated along the highways, usually by the small truck farmer.
The sale of fresh eggs, milk and butter to urban residents who drive to the farm to buy their fresh foods would easily bring the figure to more than $50,000,000 annually, according to the estimate.
The use that farmers make of highways to bring their products direct to city markets by means of their own trucks is so extensive that actual figures on the value of crops marketed in this way are difficult to ascertain.

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE JUDITH MARTIN is a teacher in Pendleton State University. Her two chief admirers are ERIC WATERS, rebel senior, and DR. PETER DORN, astronomy professor.

DEAN TIMOTHY BROWN is resolved to make Judith drop her student friends and come into the faculty fold. She refuses to give up Eric.

MYRA ALDRICH, in love with Eric, is jealous of Judith. Judith befriends Mrs. Brown, when "KITTY" SHEA, town bootlegger, blackmails her with a story of her trip to the city to meet her lover.

Judith appeals to Eric to shut Shea up.

Spending the Christmas holidays alone in Myra's sorority house, Judith is terrified when Shea tries to force an entrance. She shoots in the air and drives him away.

A few days later, the body of Shea is found under his car in a creek just out of town. His pockets are full of letters.

Judith, remembering her shot, asks Eric whether there were any bullet holes in Shea's body.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXXIII

ERIC looked at her strangely. "No," he said. "There weren't any bullet wounds. Why do you ask?"

Judith pulled herself together. "Someone said there was talk of his being wounded before the crash."

"Well," said Eric, "Manners thinks something happened to make him go over the bank—something violent. I mean, he might have had a fight and in the scuffle turned the wheel suddenly."

"When do they think he died?" asked Judith.

"Manners said it had been at least as long ago as Christmas. That's a funny thing. They've had emergency gangs working on that road day and night, ever since Christmas morning, so it couldn't have happened since then. And Shea was seen in town the day before."

Judith looked up at him. "Then that narrows it down to Christmas Eve, doesn't it?"

Eric nodded. "Apparently. But why worry your head about it?" He took her arm. "Judith, you're letting this get you down. I've never seen you so nervous. Come on out with me and take a walk—or have a cup of coffee."

They went out of the building by the door nearest the Prairie Schooner. In a booth Judith relaxed for the first time in many hours. The waiter brought them steaming coffee and waffles.

Eric sat quietly watching her from across the little table. She saw that he was pale and unshaven. Under the overhead light the bruised spot on his forehead, still faintly visible.

He stretched a hand across to her. "Listen, Jude. If there's anything worrying you, won't you tell me? You look as though you could scarce bear up another minute."

Judith squeezed his hand. "No," she said, "I'm all right now. What

He stretched a hand across to her. "Listen, Jude. If there's anything worrying you, won't you tell me?"

was worrying me has been cleared up. But it's dear of you to want to help me, Eric. The others have only harassed me."

His fingers tightened on hers. "I'd do anything for you, Judith. You know that. I'd lie, steal, kill or rob—or even change my style of collar if you wanted me to."

Judith laughed. "There it is—the old Eric, tempering, every compliment with irony. But your colfers are all right. I don't want you to change them. All I want is understanding. You and I talk in the same language. We're both of us incorrigibles."

"Yes, thank God!" said Eric, at tacking his waffle.

"There's only one thing that would do me any good," said Judith, sipping her coffee.

Eric looked up. "That's for somebody to knock down Dean Timothy Brown and sit on him." She grinned at Eric.

"Nothing would give me more pleasure," remarked Eric. "I have a few scores of my own to settle with him. And even if I hadn't, I should like to knock him down and sit on him—for the good of his soul."

Judith smiled. "I'm not concerned with his soul. But if for no other reason than his treatment of his wife, he needs it."

Eric nodded. "Not all the martyrs were burnt in Rome or racked to death in Spain," he said. "How men like that escape aren't in their coffee but in their hearts."

"If I were his wife, he wouldn't have," answered Judith. "But I think there was optimism in this coffee. I am so sleepy I can't hold my head up."

Eric rose to go. "Emotional strain," he said, "is almost as stuporous and beautiful as that of Niagara to disappear from the face of the earth, is another matter. I speak of the Cumberland Falls in Kentucky."

There are dams, such as the Roosevelt Dam in Arizona that are a Godsend to the country. It irrigates several dry states and has quickened the territory from a dry unproductive waste to fertile producing soil.

But water power dams are different. Their only recommendation is the lower cost of the production afraid their wives will divorce them if certain letters are found among Shea's prize collections.

Judith shivered. "What a monster he must have been."

"Drove a thriving trade in other people's sins, while enjoying his own," said Will. "An ideal existence."

"Stop being Oscar Wildeish and take me to the picture show," said Judith.

A man came out of the newspaper office and began to chalk a new bulletin. "Dead man's letters may be destroyed, says expert working on mid-stained documents."

"Come on, then," Will said, taking Judith's arm. "I've never written to the old boy, at any rate."

The movie house was crowded and Judith and Will had to take seats in the last row. Judith settled down in the comforting darkness and leaned her head back to listen to the music.

Wetherel relapsed into silence. When the lights flashed on, she jumped.

"Well," exclaimed Will, "that's the first time a young lady ever went to sleep on me."

They went down the main street toward the College Inn. It was dark, and a black wreath hung on the door.

Wetherel laughed. "More people are mourning that crook than ever mourn a good man. And how the numbers will increase when they begin to dive into Shea's blue books!"

"Feel that I should send him a wreath myself, I'm so damn sorry he died without destroying his records."

Wetherel looked at her white face and said no more. They walked toward the campus. It was dark and quiet, with its embracing rows of shadowy buildings.

"Will," said Judith, "were you ever in love?"

"My God!" exclaimed her companion. "Was I ever in love? The lady asks me that! As a matter of fact, they cut my heart open when I die they'll find nothing but scars."

"All of which means that you have never been in love at all," commented Judith. "So I guess you can't help me."

"What would you do for me?" "I wanted advice. But no man with a heart full of scars is qualified to give it. Just one big scar now—that would be different."

"Well, now," said Wetherel, obligingly. "If you throw me over, there'll be just one big scar, blotting out all the others."

Judith laughed. "I'm too tired to be coy, Will. And I think I'm a little crazy. Or living in a nightmare. Let's hurry."

"You were probably going to ask me—'Is Eric in love with you?'" said Will, judiciously. "And to be perfectly frank, I don't know. I don't know if he's ever been in love with you."

"They could hear me anywhere on the streets beyond the confines of the quadrangle, crying something unbecomingly."

The WOMAN'S DAY by Allene Sumner

Ethel Barrymore whose picture once hung on the bedroom wall of every American girl back in the 1890s when Gibson girl pompadours and pink boxes of candy flourished, and who even today at a ripe age is a matinee girl idolized by sweet young things who go into raptures over the thrifty Barrymore voice, has just opened the new play by W. Somerset Maugham called "The Constant Wife."

On the first night Ethel didn't know her lines at all, and if any star of the Podium Circuit, high school play fumbled her lines as the one and only Ethel did, the local papers would spank her soundly and bear testimony to the blot put upon the town's family scintillation. It is not, however, the intention of this much-quoted and widely-read "collyum" to assail Ethel Barrymore for not "knowing the words."

Too bad, of course, but she'll learn them in time and, after all, anyone can poll-parrot-wise memorize words, if that's what you want, but only THE Ethel can make those words glowing jewels of vocal beauty.

What I did want to speak about was the flesh taffeta afternoon frock in which Ethel is garbed when she sweeps into the room at the beginning of the second act. The dress is not only pink, which most of "us girls" don't wear in the daytime any more, this color being reserved for crepe de chine robe de nuits, or crepe pajamas, but it is long. It almost hits Ethel's comely ankles.

Not only that. It has a tiered skirt, the mezzanine layer hits Ethel sort of over the knee-caps, and the pit portion of the tier arrangement descends to almost the ankles. To be perfectly frank, the dress looked like about a 1914 model. And to be equally frank, Ethel looked like a million dollars in it.

The color was just right for her blondeness and the violet-blue velvet toque which she wore with it. The length was just right for her rather Junoesque figure.

Modern trends in lighting are toward greater simplicity. Many modern homes have no ceiling lights or wall brackets at all, but are lighted with an even glow from a number of soft-colored table, floor and bridge lamps.

Ethel's dress may have been old-fashioned, but the lines which she "threw" after the indefatigable promoter were "anything but."

In its final essence, "The Constant Wife" is perhaps merely another version of the single standard of morality theme, what's sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander, the parasitic qualities of the modern wealthy wife and her husband when a woman gets economically independent of her husband and can pay him out of her own hard-earned wages $5000 for her year's board and lodging.

Not so new a theme, perhaps. But there is a bit of modernity in an nth degree to some of the lines which Miss Ethel "throats."

Flappers who ask loveless column advisers how I can really build up my sex life, I would be interested in the mother's definition of supreme affliction: "There is only one rule, one test: could you use his toothbrush?"

And the keen satire of the managing sister who always "thinks you should know, dear," or "I think it my duty, hard as it is, to tell you, dear"—then proceeding to roll over juicy bits of gossip, the tattling which gives her a thrill but wounds the other savagely. You all know the I-think-you-should-know-dear kind of a woman.

The play, like most of Maugham's is refreshing to the average modern thinking woman because of its lack of emphasis on sex as the one and only thing in life; the breaking of conventional sex laws as the one and only immorality known. Neither the author nor modern women are errant morality fanatics, but they do resent the age-old tradition that the only thing asked of them in life is adherence to the conventional sex code which they may be as easily irritable, lying and deceiving and mentally faithful as can be, and still be classed as "good women."

Nov. 11, 1926. My dear Sister: Just a short note this afternoon to tell you the news. On Saturday morning I am opening "The Mary Ellen Gift and Craft Shop" at 905 Main Street, Manchester. This little shop deals only in hand-made articles, original embroidery, hand-colored Christmas cards, basketry and paper flowers.

But best of all is the specialty which I have taken up. I feel sure that it will be welcomed by the people of Manchester, that is wearing back runs in stockings. It is such a wasteful thing to discard hosiery for a little run which can easily be repaired. President Coolidge preaches economy—let us practice it.

The next time you are in town do come in and see all the lovely things I have and bring your stockings that have runs. Hastily and affectionately MARY ELLEN.

Those Important Final Touches

Wise choice of ornamental objects lightens and adds charm to this W. and J. Sloane living room. The chintz lamp shade repeats the colors of the draperies, and the mantel mirror brightens a dark wall space.

Ornaments Make or Mar Beauty of Home

By JAMES BLAUVELT.

The ornaments you choose for your home will tell the world a long story about you—what your background is, whether you have inherent taste, whether you merely want to splurge with costly articles you do not really care for.

The choosing of the little things about the house requires as much care as the selection of the big ones. For a single bad floor lamp or an overloaded mantel many ruin the entire room on which you have spent so much energy and money. Here is a cluster of random suggestions about a variety of these smaller items.

Modern trends in lighting are toward greater simplicity. Many modern homes have no ceiling lights or wall brackets at all, but are lighted with an even glow from a number of soft-colored table, floor and bridge lamps.

Use Candelabra Where Possible. You may wish a ceiling plowheel cluster in the dining room, but you will want to use candlelight for the table, wherever possible. If you can light your dining room with table candles and a great sideboard candelabra, you will get an effect of charm never to be equalled by electricity.

The hall is sometimes a rather empty room, and will benefit by a hanging lantern of quiet design. If you must have fixtures built into the building, get very good ones, for the cheap fixtures common in America are so bad in line and material as to wreck the whole scheme of decoration.

If you are building, install a great number of base plugs and spend your money on lamps of different kinds.

Lamp shades are another problem that call for caution. English and early American homes may be suitably decorated with shades of parchment paper, old maps, music scores, old Godey prints and hunting prints.

Painted silk, taffeta, tulle de jony and chintz make charming shades of the American type. Bridge lamps should be adjustable. Dull colonial brass is a good material for these small lamps, in which simplicity of line is essential.

Luckily, American women are learning that heavy marble lamps, with twining flowers and cupid and much ribbon and folderol are not the height of luxury in a home, but an evidence of extremely bad taste.

Wrought Iron Effective. If you can afford a wrought iron banister on the staircase, wrought iron flower stands and radiator boxes and light fixtures you will find it most effective.

Place the harp or curved end of your piano toward the room, and drape it with some rich fabric, or ornament it with a lamp or a bowl of flowers. To conserve space, push its side against the wall.

Keep your mantels clear of all but the ornaments that really belong on it. A pair of candlesticks or vase with a painting, or fabric or mirror hung above the mantel, furnish all the decoration any fireplace needs.

Round pillows are most in favor now, and the usual size for use on a six-foot davenport is between 16 and 18 inches. The covers should repeat colors notes of the room, and should be harmonized with one another, as well as with the davenport covering.

A black couch with rather vivid, variegated pillows gives a smart effect. The tendency now is to make city houses as much like country houses as possible, and to use in the winter the same bright slip covers used in summer.

I prefer slip covers pleated and hung within a half inch of the floor. Glazed chintz is too slippery and limp for slip covers. But you may have the piece upholstered in it, and then tack on the frounce to stimulate a slip cover. Screens are extremely useful to break an awkward line, to soften a corner, to give privacy or intimacy to a nook, or to shield a bed from draughts.

Mirrors Multiply Beauty. If you cannot afford tooled leather or screens, there are chintz and toile and scenic paper screens that are almost as beautiful. A scenic screen or a landscape painting lends perspective to a small room. Chinese screens are especially pretty in English rooms.

Mirrors are also useful to give perspective, and to lighten dark spaces. Plan so that each mirror reflects something beautiful, and catches light where light is needed. A crystal candelabra placed in front of a mirror is multiplied in beauty.

A home should not be "decorated" and then left to stand complete, immobile, and uninteresting, till the next renovation. It should be a growing, changing work of art on which you may work forever without finishing or growing tired.

FINDS FAVOR The evening frock which combines a pleated gold or silver lame skirt with a sleeveless jumper of velvet is very much liked by the deb.

Good Nature and Good Health

MONOTONY OF MACHINES IS HEALTH PROBLEM

BY DR. MORRIS FISHBEN Editor Journal of the American Medical Association and of Hygeia, the Health Magazine

The development of great manufacturing plants in America has given rise to specialists in manufacturing processes whose tasks are seldom varied.

The mechanic or carpenter of an early day was likely to vary his work many times in the course of a week. In modern industry, one man may spend all of his time performing a process as simple as the inserting of a bolt and the fastening on to it of a nut.

This process repeated thousands of times day after day seems to have a special effect on the nervous system of the person concerned, and thereby to bring about unsatisfactory results eventually in the work itself.

An Egg Smeller There was for instance in one British bakery a girl whose duty it was to smell each egg that was opened before it was used. After one hour of this employment, the girl found it impossible to continue the work.

Home Page Editorials Scenic Beauty Being Changed

By Olive Roberts Barton

Another state has joined the procession in fighting the great power scheme that is slowly and surely acquiring some of the finest scenic properties in the country. Little by little our waterfalls are being harnessed to turn the turbines of electric generators, and little by little we are losing our birthright of scenery.

The business of using water power for fuel is not new. Our picturesque old mills on every creek in the land attest to this. But the miller did little harm with his dam and millrace. Certainly he added rather than detracted from the landscape. But the idea of using water power on a scale that dams up rivers and spreads water over hundreds of square miles of our most beautiful mountain valleys, or that diverts an entire river from its course through huge tubes causing a falls almost as stuporous and beautiful as that of Niagara to disappear from the face of the earth, is another matter. I speak of the Cumberland Falls in Kentucky.

There are dams, such as the Roosevelt Dam in Arizona that are a Godsend to the country. It irrigates several dry states and has quickened the territory from a dry unproductive waste to fertile producing soil.

But water power dams are different. Their only recommendation is the lower cost of the production of electricity and the saving of fuel. But we are skeptical about the saving reaching so far as the pockets of the people who are the ultimate consumers. Even so, would it compensate the nation for the irremediable loss?

Fuel is still abundant. We are not yet driven to the wall for coal. And there is still oil in plenty. And how about the possibility of artificial gas? Germany has recently utilized with such success for power production? When these things have failed and if there is then no new fuel to take their place, then I suppose we must use the jewelled settings of our land. But I should say that is time enough.

CONTRASTING SHADES

Velvet and jersey are very successfully combined this year, usually in contrasting rather than matching shades. Light and dark shades of the same color are preferred.

HELP YOURSELF TO HEALTH

Lagging feet and longing hearts THE third dance... and tired, utterly tired... sinking into the first chair—there perhaps to spend the rest of the evening. This was not the vivacious girl she had been a few years ago. Then thirty dances would have been her portion. What tragedy was this, that she, so young, should seem so old.

What tragedy indeed is constipation—one of the worst diseases to afflict the human race. It saps strength. It thieves beauty. It poisons. It ages its victims long before their time. But the hopeful part of it is—constipation can be safely and permanently relieved without the use of habit-forming pills and drugs. Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is the answer.

No matter if constipation has become chronic, Kellogg's ALL-BRAN will bring permanent relief. This is why: Bran—ALL-BRAN—goes completely through the system without changing fiber. It is what doctors call a bulk food, a necessary aid to regular elimination.

Eat at least two tablespoonfuls of Kellogg's ALL-BRAN every day—in chronic cases, with every meal. If eaten regularly, it is guaranteed to bring permanent relief, or your grocer returns the purchase price. Its delightful nutty flavor makes it good as a cereal. Serve with milk or cream alone or with fresh or preserved fruit; with other cereals or cook in hot cereals; use in soups, or in the recipes given on every package.

Don't take chances. Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is ALL-BRAN—100% bran. That's why doctors recommend it. Sold by all grocers and served in hotels and restaurants. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek, Michigan.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN The original ALL-BRAN—ready-to-eat

Finds Photographic Justice

Because she had a picture which did her justice and not "snapshots or monstrosities" showing her as "a terrible, ugly, scheming woman," Mrs. Frances Evelyn Hall had a Princeton photographer make this portrait. It is the first of its kind taken since before 1922 when the slaying of her husband, the Rev. Edward Wheeler Hall, and Mrs. Eleanor R. Mills, his choir singer light-o'-love, brought her national prominence.

Prince Faces Difficult Season; To Ride In Many Steeplechases

London (United Press).—The Prince of Wales is "all set" for the hunting season and all England is worried. It is not too much to say that all England will sigh with relief when the season is ended—if the Prince is still hale and sound. His propensity for falling off horses is world-famous. He has usually escaped unscathed, but at other times he has broken his bones and sustained slight concussions of the brain, all serious when they happen to an heir of a throne. His intimate friends say that he undertakes too much. His prominent social position makes him feel that he ought to excel at everything he undertakes, and that he cannot hold back when others have a go at a fence or a hedge. He pits himself against most expert jockeys and steeplechase riders, men who have concentrated at this one sport. What they jump, the Prince of Wales tries to jump. His horses are too big for him. It is well known that he prefers large mounts. But experts point out that the Prince only tips the scale at a little over 125 pounds and that, with his slight weight thrown against a hunting snaffle but, he cannot control the powerful horses he chooses. The question of the Prince's seat in the saddle is one of the most hotly discussed problems now before the public. Some say he rides by balance more than by grip of the knees and that his seat is "prevarious over jumps, though safe enough for riding on the flat. Others insist that his jumping-seat is excellent and that the trouble is that the horses fall down under him. That is the Prince's own contention. "Do you expect me to stay in the air if the horse falls down?" he asked a friend who was discussing the matter with him not long ago. Englishmen, in whose hearts the Prince has won a very warm place, know that for whatever reason, the Prince keeps falling off of his horses. That fact interests them more than the cause of it. They admire his courage and high spirit but they wish he would be a little more careful. The Prince is sure to ride in many difficult point-to-point races this season, and the British nation is watching anxiously, in dread of a serious accident. It's our Community Club. Let's help support it.—Adv.

Indians Gather From All Parts;
Not For Pow-Wow But Football Game

Lawrence, Kans., Nov. 12. (United Press).—The building of the biggest Indian village in the history of the west will get underway in earnest here today as Haskell Institute welcomes one of the largest gatherings of Indians in a single encampment that the race has ever known. For Haskell is getting ready for the dedication of a $200,000 football stadium next Wednesday and the staging of the first Indian homecoming. The celebration will culminate Saturday, October 30, with a football game between Haskell's Indians and Bucknell College of Lewisburg, Pa. All the atmosphere of the old-time Indian village is being carried out. The ancient dances of the tribes will be gone through to the throbbing of the tom-tom. The war cry of Sioux, Pawnee, Comanche and the other tribes of the plains will again resound through the Kaw Valley. The piece de resistance on the menu for the day will be buffalo-meat. But a different picture will present itself to the gaze of the on-time rulers of the plains. The assemblage of the tribes will not be for the purpose of receiving belts of peace from the hands of their brother tribes; it will not be a council to decide whether to mass against the advancing pale-face, as once it was. The lure this time is the very modern lure of football. And it is not quite the same village which some years ago would have greeted the Redmen as they assembled. The campfire light by which the council was held will give way to electricity; those who thirst will drink not, not from the waters of the Wakarusa River, but from a tap from the city water mains. While the "squaws"—not the squaws of yesterday, but very modern bob-haired squaws with very modern ideas as their positions in the tribe—work away under a shed preparing the meat for their lords as they did a few years ago, the "braves" will assemble in a modern clubroom to smoke meerschaum and briar pipes in lieu of the peace pipe. Perhaps it will be the tales of King Phillip's war, Custer's massacre or other bloody battles which will be retold, but more probably it will be the grid battles of the '90's and the days "back in '92, when Tubby was center rush." Haskell is staging the first Indian homecoming, against the year of "homeleaving," when the "Vanishing American" was step by step retreating before the rush of the paleface.

HEALY FOR STATE LAW DEPARTMENT

Declares Attorney-General Is Handicapped By Lack Of Legal Assistance.

Hartford, Nov. 12.—Immediate need for additional legal aid in the attorney general's department is necessary, Frank E. Healy, attorney-general, said today. Formal recommendation to the governor on the matter will not be made, however, until he also has conferred with his successor, Benjamin W. Alling, of New Britain, attorney-general-elect, who takes office in January.

The state could save itself more than $50,000 a year by the establishment of a legal department, similar to those in operation in many other states, the salary expense of which would not exceed $20,000 a year, Mr. Healy said.

Only $4,000 Allowed

Pointing out that only $4,000 a year is allowed in running the department and securing additional legal help, he said that many embarrassing situations arise for the attorney-general. It is often necessary, he said, to call in the legal experts in various phases of the legal work of the department, such as tax matters, at the same time making it known that these services must, to a large extent be given to the state without cost or at merely nominal fees.

Healy recounted the case of special legal aid employed for one department, the fees amounting to more than half the amount allowed by the Legislature for the hiring of such help during the whole year.

The services of an expert in tax matters are essential to the department if the tax business of the state is to be conducted efficiently, he said.

Points To Savings

The money saved to the state by such service in the matter of estate taxes, questions arising between New York and Connecticut, would save to the state a large amount of money each year, more than offsetting, in his opinion, the entire cost of the legal department's operations.

Mr. Healy said he would lay all these matters before Mr. Alling in detail and discussion with him would precede any recommendations made to Governor John H. Trumbull in the annual report of the department now being prepared.

BOOM IN GEMS

London.—An extraordinary boom has started in the emerald market. As much as 1200 pounds a carat has been paid recently for the best specimens. The best diamonds bring about 500 pounds per carat. There is a wide disparity of opinion on the judgment of emerald's value, dealers setting many different prizes on any one gem.

"CHIC CHIC REVUE" PLEASURES AT STATE

George Rubin, Comedian, Has Audience in Roar of Laughter—"Kid Boots" On Same Bill.

(By Member of Herald Staff)

Last evening the much heralded Lew Williams' Chic-Chic Revue opened at the State theater. As a whole, the show was good. What was best, however, was George (Wise Guy) Rubin who is unusually clever. He is a comedian of the first water, and he kept the audience in a continuous uproar. The other comedians in the company are also very good and got many laughs from last night's audience.

As for the rest of the show, it was exceptionally good at times, and just about ordinary at other times. A number of old time dances was one feature of the program that was well received, as were most of the solo song numbers. Several clever sketches were well done, and were likewise well received. The chorus numbers, however, were of just the usual turn, no better, and no worse; not bad, nor strikingly good.

The scenery and costumes were, as had been announced, new, and were quite pretty.

The last number of the revue got the most applause. It was what might be called an impromptu jazz band, directed by Signor (it's impossible to spell his name). Eddie Cantor, that comedian who has delighted millions with his performances on the stage, is now a screen celebrity. If he was funny on the stage, he is just about a thousand times as funny on the screen. "Kid Boots" is as comical a picture as can be imagined. It's one grand roar from beginning to end.

PRIZES FOR KIDDIES AT RIALTO TOMORROW

An event of more than ordinary interest will take place at the Rialto theater tomorrow afternoon when five pairs of ballbearing roller skates will be given away to as many children. This affair is only one of many innovations which the present management of this popular theater has brought about in their endeavor to make this playhouse Manchester's own. The skates are of the approved type and were manufactured by the Union Hardware Co., a concern noted for the quality of their merchandise.

The five lucky children who hold the numbers which correspond with those called from the stage, won't have to wait for Santa Claus to make his annual visit; they will have their present at hand and will undoubtedly have the skates thoroughly tried out by the time Saint Nick puts in an appearance. Every child entering the theater during the day tomorrow will be given a coupon entitling him or her to participate in the affair and so the prize should cost nothing and the fact that five pairs are to be given away increases one's chances and, of course, makes it all the more interesting.

A corking good program of motion pictures will also be shown, there will be two features as well as the usual variety subjects, the program being changed completely. The two feature pictures which will be shown are "The Girl from Oklahoma," a fast moving western drama, which stars Ruth Mizr. It has everything calculated to thrill the most blasé film fan and unfolds a splendid plot. The second feature will be "The Handicap" called the ace of race track stories. There are some really remarkable races pictured in the story and the cast employed is an excellent one composed of Derek Gynne, Virginia Warwick and Spottiswood Aik-en.

Another chapter of "The Fighting Marine," which features Gene Tunney, World's heavyweight champ, a laugh provoking comedy and a news reel will also be shown.

The two features being shown for the last times today are "The Northern Code," a powerful drama of the frozen North, which stars Eva Novak and Robert Ellis, and "The High Flyer," an air thriller with Reed Howes in the major role.

TITLED, AND POOR

London.—Sir John Echlin, a sergeant in the Royal Ulster Constabulary, has inherited a title without a fortune. Three other impoverished baronets have figured recently in the news—one earning a living by taking care of horses, another dying shortly after being threatened with objection because of inability to pay the rent for his tiny room, and a third rescued from a poorhouse.

FRED THOMPSON STAR ON COSY CIRCLE BILL

Appears in One of Two Features Tomorrow—"Night Watch" Too.

If you like double feature bills of real quality, be sure to see the one that is showing tomorrow only at the Circle. It's cold outside, but it's comfortable and warm in the cozy Circle. There's an excellent double feature in a pretty, cozy little theater, all waiting for you to step inside.

The "invisible draw" which Fred Thompson uses in his character of Dean Randall in "The Two-Gun Man", now showing at the Circle Theater, is mentioned in several Stewart Edward White stories, notably in "Arizona Nights", and it is interesting to note that Mr. Thompson learned it himself in the country of its origin—Goldfield, Nevada. Not that the star ever used it, save for his own amusement; for at the time he was shooting Scripture as pastor of the Presbyterian church in that rugged mining camp—not shooting bad men. But Fred's interest in anything athletic and his association with the Boy Scouts led him to practice this "mask" draw until his speed was such that it is almost impossible to see his hands move.

For those theatergoers who delight in a mixture of fast-moving thrills and colorful romance, Truett's latest production, "The Night Watch" will most certainly appeal.

An intimate knowledge of entertainment values gained by years of experience enables Truett officials to present all of the necessary qualities of audience appeal in the pictures released under their banner. And "The Night Watch" is no exception to the rule. There is a romance of particular charm combined in a fast-moving and thrilling melodrama laid in the mountains of Tennessee, where family feuds of long standing and ever-alert revenue agents abound.

For the last time tonight Viola Dana in "Wild Oats Lane" and "Going the Limit" with George O'Hara will be shown. Here are two features you should not miss seeing tonight.

Wasn't that a dandy start yesterday! Over $2,000 for the Manchester Community Club fund. When everybody takes hold, the total rolls up. That's team work. Let every North End resident resolve to give a donation, whether large or small. All gifts count, whether dollar or hundreds.

Every gift to the Community Club fund helps continue the recreation work of the club. Each gift helps maintain a Community Center where young folks and grown-ups may enjoy themselves the year around.

Your Recreation Center helps our young folks along the right road, besides entertaining and amusing them. Dollars spent in character-building are well spent. It is a real Christian work. The Manchester Community Club is distinctly non-sectarian and non-political. All are welcome—it's the Community Center for all the people.

Help Keep a Recreation Center at the North End

Remember this: There is more impetus back of the Recreation movement at the North End than has yet been disclosed. The Recreation workers are fully mindful of the great possibilities under the $100,000 bequest for recreation purposes in the Willie T. Morton will. This large fund will be available soon.

A way will be found whereby this $100,000 fund will go where its owner intended—for recreation purposes at the North End. The Manchester Community Club is keeping the recreation workers united and intact, in readiness for the larger work ahead. Help the working organization carry out its program.

How Community Club Helps Mother of Five Children

A North End woman called yesterday upon President Mark Holmes and gave a dollar to the Community Club Fund. She gave him this information.

"I am the mother of five children. My husband is in the hospital. I must work to help pay our bills. I do washings, and must work some evenings.

"I cannot watch all of my growing children evenings. So I send them to the Community Club. There they will find games and recreation. A director and his wife see to it that they don't get into mischief. They are amused, and learn much that is good for them there.

"The Community Club is a big help for a home with growing children. It is a fine thing for the north end. It is welcome to my dollar."

CRITIC PICKS "BABY STARS" WHO BID FOR '27 FILM FAME

BY DAN THOMAS.

Hollywood, Nov. 5.—Along about this time every year the Wampas—Hollywood organization of motion picture publicity men—selects thirteen girls to present at its annual ball as the Wampas Baby Stars.

The girls selected are the young actresses whom the Wampas believes will take the greatest cinematic strides during the coming twelve months.

Particular significance is attached to this selection by the Wampas because in past years it has been 80 per cent right.

Hazards a Guess.
On Nov. 15 the Wampas will convene to name its Baby Stars for 1927. They will be presented officially to the general public at the annual Wampas ball next February. I have taken the risk of choosing the following thirteen girls as those who will be named by the Wampas:

Gladys McConnell, now under contract to Fox, and is assured her future on the screen. She has played the lead in 25 two-reelers, six feature productions and five of Fox's O. Henry stories.

Mary McAllister, who gave a remarkable performance as "Red" Grange's leading lady in "One Minute to Play."

Iris Stuart, who was gobbled up by the movies through her prominence as a model for many magazine covers.

Martha Sleeper, who has played leads in 40 two-reel comedies and is now under contract to Hal Roach.

Dorothy Gulliver, whose performance in the leading roles in Universal's college series has attracted Ann Rork, whose first picture was "The Blind Sinner" in which she played the second lead.

Myrna Loy, who has been featured in a number of Warner Brothers pictures during the last year.

Promising Corner.
Helena Costello, sister of Dolores Costello, and one of the most promising "comers" in the industry.

Sally Rand, who for the last year has been growing more and more popular on the Cecil B. DeMille lot.

Barbara Kent, another Universal

Here are the 13 Wampas Stars of 1927. They are (top to bottom): Figure 1—Dorothy Gulliver, Myrna Loy, Sally Rand, Martha Sleeper and Mary McAllister; figure 2—Helena Costello, Barbara Kent, Alice White, Majel Coleman, Iris Stuart, Ann Rork, Patricia Avery and Gladys McConnell.

Alice White, who until a few months ago was a script girl.
Majel Coleman, another DeMille girl who is rapidly traversing the road to fame.

Patricia Avery, who is rapidly coming to the fore on the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer lot.

DRINK TOAST (OF WATER) TO MR. HOEHNTHAL

Editor, The Herald: An item of news in connection with the meeting of the Men's Friendship Club of the South Methodist church last Monday night was omitted by the one who reported that meeting. I know there are many of your readers who will be interested and so I am going to ask you to please insert it in Friday's paper.

Very sincerely,
WILLIAM B. KEITH.

The resolution follows: At the meeting of the Men's Friendship Club of the South Methodist church last Monday evening the following toast was proposed by one of the members to the guest of the evening, Mr. Hoehnthal:

Pioneer in the cause for National Prohibition, would travel in the cause for world prohibition. A foe to unrighteousness, whether in high places or low places.

A man of faith, who believed that it was possible with the help of Almighty God to put the prohibition amendment in the Federal Constitution.

A man of works, who, like one of the early disciples of our Master, believes that faith and works coupled together can accomplish their objective.

FAVORS READING'S NEW ENGLAND END

I. C. C. Examiners Advise Permitting Control of Lehigh & N. E.

Washington, Nov. 12.—The reading system will be permitted to acquire control by lease of the Lehigh and New England railroad if the Interstate Commerce Commission adopts recommendations made today by Examiner C. V. Burnside. It is this system is approved by the Commission it should be conditioned upon the maintenance of the Lehigh and New England as an open route.

The predominant question of public interest in this case concerns the provision and maintenance of efficient short-line all-rail routes between New England and the territory southwest of New York harbor. Burnside's report said.

Car Floats Displaced Burns de pointed out that until 1918 the traffic was handled by car floats between Jersey City and the Harlem river, connecting up the latter point with the New Haven. In 1918 the New York connecting railroad, known as the Hell Gate route, was opened for traffic. This line was financed and built jointly by the New Haven and the Pennsylvania.

The combined capacity of these routes is insufficient at times and the routes over the rail line north of New York harbor are becoming of increasing importance.

To Establish Rates If the lease is approved, it is the announced purpose of the reading to establish rates via the Lehigh and New England between its own territory and northern and eastern New York.

The proposed lease will be for a term of 99 years. The reading assume all charges for taxes and interest on the leased property, maintain the property and in addition will pay a net cash rental of $1,069,000 per year.

Government experts attributed the steady decline in the past few weeks to heavy receipts and the seasonal decline.

Safest - Smoothest - Simplest 4 Wheel Brakes

This brake system is exclusive to Nash and was engineered to embody the finest features developed by foreign and American 4-wheel brake authorities as well as the superiorities worked out by Nash over an extended period of 4-wheel brake experience. Among its chief advantages is the fact that the smoothly powerful performance of these brakes is never impaired by climatic changes. And being of the mechanical type they operate with invariable regularity at all temperatures. They possess perfect automatic equalization, right to left, front and rear. Thus Nash eliminates the possibility of the side-sway or skidding on wet or icy roads under rapid brake application which occurs with rear wheel brakes or partially-equalized 4-wheel brakes.

TOWN GETS BIG

GUN AS MEMORIAL

eyes as God's abolition—even the button of the conductor on the car when our day's work is done, and the cap of the porter with his mop and pail, declaring an obscure but ceaseless war against dirt. They are all in the Big Army, they are all servants of the King.

Courage to Fight

And the war is not yet over. Children are still dying of preventable disease, hired gunmen are still shooting uniformed postmen and policemen, ignorance is still defeating the priceless liberties of our Constitution. Occasionally an Armistice Day gives us chance to breathe, time to hope, courage to fight on, and a vision of the true peace laid up as a reward for those who win. But it is not yet. Close up the ranks and let the fight go on.

Wreaths On Trees

The roll of the war dead of Manchester was read by John Hartnett and the Salvation Army band played softly. "The Vacant Chair." Wreaths were placed on the trees planted in memory of the local soldiers who were killed or who died in the service. Prayer was offered by Rev. James Stuart Neill of St. Mary's Episcopal church.

On the Hospital Steps with Dr. Ogilby and the members of Dilworth-Cornell Post, American Legion, were members of the Board of Selectmen.

The captured German howitzer, which was given to Manchester by Dilworth-Cornell post was formally delivered to Mayor Treat by Commander Harry Maidment of the Legion. A short talk by Supt. F. A. Verplanck of the Ninth district preceded the acceptance of the trophy. Supt. Verplanck said in part:

"We have been given this trophy because of the efforts of Dilworth-Cornell post. We have placed it here in the most prominent spot in the town where the school children may see it and remember; where the adults may see it and recall those dark days, and where the public on its way through Manchester may also see it.

The American Indian took the scalps of those whom he vanquished in battle. He wore them at his belt or hung them in his wigwam. He gloated in his victories and the scalp locks always reminded him of them. But we do not place this gun here in that spirit.

"If we did it would be an affront to many who have become loyal and useful citizens of the United States. Rather, we place it here as a reminder of two things. First, lest we forget that the United States sent 2,000,000 men to France and that 50,000 were killed in action and 50,000 more died of disease in training camps; second, that we were not prepared many months before the war and it was not until a year passed that we were on even terms with our enemies.

"It will remind us that we must be prepared. This country kept out of the struggle for two years because it has been the habit of America to pursue peace. "And it will remind us of the necessity of this nation to show its preparedness and love of peace."

Commander Maidment in a short talk presented the field piece to Mayor Treat, who in an equally short acceptance, received it in the name of the Town of Manchester. The parade started from the Army and Navy club, headed by a platoon of police in charge of Captain Herman Schendel. The Salvation Army band followed and the units in the parade were Company G, the Howitzer company, Army and Navy club and Dilworth-Cornell post.

THANKS FROM THE MARSHALL The marshal of the Armistice Day Parade, Victor Bronkie, wishes to express his thanks to the various organizations and individuals who participated in the parade, which, from all reports has been acclaimed a success.

It's our Community Club. Let's help support it.—Adv.

If You Want to Know How Long You're Going to Live, Read This

BY MARK L. EMERSON, M. D. Member Gorges Memorial Institute

Chicago, Nov. 12.—(United Press)—Toss a coin in the air eighty thousand times and it will land heads forty thousand times; at least this was the result of an experiment by a class at the University of California, June 28 of this year. The experiment was simply to verify what had been demonstrated many times before, namely the law of average. Just keep tossing the coins long enough and it will break even many times before you reach eighty thousand.

So it is with the expectancy of life. The life insurance companies base their investments on the law of average of human life, for your age and generation.

Beat It If You Can Their statistics are derived from life statistics of the United States, Great Britain, France and Germany.

It is, therefore, up to you to prolong your average if you can. In the first place, don't believe the wag who said, "Married men don't live any longer than single men, it only seems longer."

The statistics for the city of Chicago—for 1925—show that out of 1,000 men from 25 to 34 years, those who die included 15 who were single, 5 who were married, and only 4 who were married. The ratio is even more favorable as they get older.

Women as an average live three years longer than men. The average life is now 58 years; you should live 8 years longer than your parents and 12 years longer than your grand-parents; and some of our grand-parents lived to be pretty old people.

Gen. in Enumeration However, the average life of people in your grand-parents' generation was 46 years, and the average life of those of your parents' generation was 50 years.

OPEN FORUM

Editor The Herald: Having read the articles which recently appeared in your valuable paper, regarding prayer, I ask for the privilege to express the sentiments of my soul. I too, know the Lord and have prayed unto Him, but up to date my humble petitions are unanswered.

I have prayed that God in His infinite wisdom may awaken the people of Manchester that they may see and observe the beautifulness of Manchester's Garden of Eden—Center Springs Park, and that He may inspire our Board of Selectmen and Park Commissioners, so that they may reveal and instill into the hearts of the people, the love of nature which would result in the development of this beautiful park.

May I ask those that now pray for Herculean strength and for the conversion of Chinese and other heathens, to pause just long enough and join me in my prayer and daily excursions to "God's Temple" where the feathered choir sings melodious hymns to their Creator and where God's wild creatures, in silent eloquence acclaim His glory. I ask all to come to this hallowed garden and walk with me over fern-fringed paths that lead through sacred groves which God's own wisdom planted. Let me lead you to the gushing

HARVARD STICKS TO "YALE ONLY" IDEA

"There has been no mention of a game with Harvard since the break between the two eastern universities," Fielding H. Yost, Michigan director of athletics, said.

Harvard, according to a report, was angling for a Michigan game some weeks ago.

Roper's Hands Off Princeton, N. J., Nov. 12.—"Bill" Roper, coach of the Princeton football team, along with many others at Princeton, regrets the breaking up of the Big Three alliance.

"I am sorry to see the Big Three broken up, but I never meddle with what the board of control does," Roper said. "It's not up to me."

The undergraduates believe that the board took the only acceptable course, in view of the jibes at Princeton's expense which the Harvard Lampton published on the eve of the Princeton-Harvard game last Saturday.

Princeton alumni here do not favor the proposal to create an eastern conference to include Princeton, Yale, Harvard, Columbia, Cornell, Pennsylvania, Dartmouth, Army and possibly Navy and Brown.

CROKER CHILDREN LOSE AGAIN IN WILL FIGHT

Jacksonville, Fla., Nov. 12.—The decision of the district federal court dismissing the attempt of three children on the late Richard Croker, Sr., former Tammany chieftain, to break their father's will, which was made in favor of their step-mother, Mrs. Bulger, has been upheld by the circuit court of appeals at New Orleans.

DIVORCED FROM MAN WHO HELD GIRL BEAT HER

Hartford, Nov. 12.—A divorce was granted to Anna Miller O'Brien of 122 High street, New Britain, today by Judge John R. Booth in Superior Court. After Mrs. O'Brien testified to cruel treatment from her husband, George J. O'Brien who she said is now somewhere in the middle west, the judge rendered his decision.

RACING ON ROAD, 2 OF 3 ARE UNHURT

Two Cars Wrecked, However, and One Speeder Is in Serious Condition.

Stamford, Nov. 12.—Russell Gladwin, of 153 Winfield avenue, Norwalk, is in serious condition in Stamford hospital while Philip T. Cahill, of Stamford, is under arrest on a technical charge pending the outcome of Gladwin's injuries. Police say that Gladwin and Cahill were racing along Shipyards avenue today and their cars collided. Gladwin's car went down a 75-foot embankment and pinned him beneath. His scalp was nearly torn off.

Cahill had Edward Stockwell, of Stamford, in his car. The Cahill car was wrecked on a pole but neither was hurt. Cahill left the wreckage and went home, where police arrested him. Have you tried Quinn's hot Mint? At our fountain. Quinn's.—Adv.

ABOUT TOWN

The concrete on Center street was completed today. The road builders have had favorable weather and it is now certain that Center street will be completed within the next two weeks. The force of men laying the asphalt are making good headway.

The chemical-truck of the North End fire department was run to Strickland street last night on a still alarm, by Chief Coleman and Harold Keeney. They found the fire, which was in the pit of a chimney, had been extinguished by the use of a few pails of water and it was not necessary to use the chemical.

Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Allen of East Center street are planning to start for Florida next Monday, where they will make their winter home, as they have for several winters past. Judge Alexander Arnott and Mrs. Arnott will also start for St. Petersburg next Monday. Harold Fitzpatrick will drive Mr. Arnott's car and they will keep within halting distance of Mr. Allen's car all the way down.

An 8 1/2 pound son was born at the Memorial hospital yesterday to Mr. and Mrs. Albert Duncan of 224 Hartford road. Mrs. Duncan prior to her marriage was Miss May Hollister of Hollister street.

Mrs. John A. Anderson and small daughter, Sylvia, have returned from a two weeks' visit with Mrs. Anderson's sisters, Mrs. Allen and Mrs. Raymond in Mt. Vernon and White Plains, N. Y. Miss Edna Skinner returned with them for a visit here.

The Pythian Sisters held a largely attended whist in Orange hall last night. The first prizes were chickens and were won by Mrs. Bailey and Don Hattin, second prizes were won by Mrs. Winfield Chase and F. Young; consolation, Mennie Dickinson. The next regular meeting will be held by special dispensation on Monday, November 22d, instead of Thanksgiving evening. Officers will be nominated at that meeting and the Grand Chief will have a roll-call. Every member is expected to attend the meeting on Monday the 22d.

The Sunshine club of the Swedish Congregational church will meet this evening with Mrs. Carlsson of 192 Woodbridge street.

The annual chicken pie supper served last night in the vestry of the North Methodist church by the Ladies' Aid Society attracted a large number of people from all parts of Manchester. The tables were attractively decorated with red and white berries and red candles. The ladies served their usual bountiful meal, hot from the kitchen just before six, and it was necessary to reset the tables to accommodate the late-comers.

Rev. Russell Waitt and Mrs. Waitt of Providence, formerly of this town, have been visiting their friends here this week.

The second sitting of the Army and Navy Club pinochle tournament will be held at the clubhouse tonight at 7:30.

A son was born last night to Mr. and Mrs. Henry Connolly of 112 Eldridge street at the Memorial hospital.

Overcoats For Men of Moderate Means

We say so much about quality that some men have the idea we mean "high prices." We don't. We handle overcoats as high as $65—because some men want them—BUT—our biggest variety is at $30 to $40. The backbone of our business is the man of moderate means.

Come in. Tell us what you want to spend. We'll show you what we can do for you. And you'll be very agreeably surprised.

$22.50, $25, $30, $35, $40 to $65

Does Your Son Need An Overcoat?

Today's idea is right. Your Boy should have clothes that he likes. Boys like style in their clothes. We see that he gets it; at no greater cost than clothes less pleasing. Wear? They have to uphold our guarantee of satisfactory service. These new Overcoats—
