HARDING KNEW OF OIL POLICY, FALL DEFENSE

Message of Late President Cited by Counsel For Former Secretary of Interior in Fraud Trial.

Washington, Dec. 1.—President Harding was full advised of the reasons for making the Pearl Harbor, Hawaii, oil storage contract with the Pan-American Petroleum and Transport Co., and so informed the Senate in a formal message in which he gave his endorsement to the transaction.

This fact was brought out today in the conspiracy trial of former Secretary of the Interior Albert B. Fall and E. L. Dohney, millionaire oil operator, by Frank Hogan, chief defense counsel, who introduced into evidence a report to Harding from the interior department, under date of June 3, 1922, and Harding's message to the Senate under date of June 7, 1922.

FINNEY ON STAND

Assistant Secretary of the Interior E. C. Finney, who was on the witness stand at the time, testified that he had collaborated in the drafting of the report on the oil contract.

Hogan did not read the interior department memorandum to the jury, stating he would do that later when the defense began its case, but he did touch on Harding's message to the Senate, in which the former president said he knew all of the details of the contract and approved it.

"I think it is only fair to say in this connection that the policy which has been adopted by the secretary of the navy and the secretary of the interior in dealing with these matters was submitted to me prior to the adoption thereof, and the policy decided upon and the subsequent acts have at all times had my entire approval," wrote Harding.

HELPFUL EXPLANATION

"I am sure I am correct in construing the impelling purpose of the secretary of the interior in making me this report. It is not to be construed as a defense of either specific acts or the general policies followed in dealing with the problems incident to the handling of the naval reserves, but is designed to afford that explanation to which the Senate is entitled and which will prove helpful to the country generally and in appraising the administration of these matters of great public concern."

MISTRIAL IS REFUSED IN HALL-MILLS CASE

was learned, will be that the affidavits were taken in the last two days, yet pertain to incidents taking place some time ago. They will argue that the prosecution played this card only when it saw that the trial was going against the state.

"Pretty Bad"

But the weight of the affidavits did not escape the defense.

"Pretty bad," murmured Senator Case, aside to his co-workers. "You're right, its pretty bad," responded Simpson, who overheard Case's remarks.

Simpson presented affidavits from newspaper reporters covering the trial. They declared that John W. Young (No. 2) and Edward S. Tillman (No. 5) slept. Charlotte Mills made an affidavit that McCarter held conversations with Tillman in company with August Sturdivant of the defense.

Frank Barnhardt, Mrs. Mills' brother-in-law, made an affidavit supporting Charlotte Mills.

Mrs. Simpson, housekeeper of the Colonial Hotel, where the jury stays, swore that certain members of the jury had called over the telephone when not in the company of guards.

Telephone Used Regularly

She alleged five different members of the jury used the telephone occasionally and that two used it every day, unaccompanied.

After Judge Parker had announced that he would take Simpson's motion for a mistrial under advisement, the regular order of business proceeded and the jury came back to their seats.

W. Pledge Brown, New York newspaper man, was called. He was asked if he was in an elevator in Brooklyn several months ago with Felix Di Martini, private detective for Mrs. Hall four years ago, and Mrs. Marie Demarest.

Mrs. Demarest testified that Di Martini tried to bribe her for $2,500 if she would "forget that she saw Henry Stevens" in New Brunswick the morning after the murders. Di Martini denied he ever saw or knew Mrs. Demarest.

"Hello, Mrs. Demarest."

"What did Di Martini say," Brown was asked.

"Hello, Mrs. Demarest."

Brown was cross-examined by defense counsel Clarence Case.

"Are you another New York Mirror man?"

"I am."

Brown was excused.

Captain Harry Walsh was called. He testified, too, that he was in the elevator and that Di Martini said "Hello, Mrs. Demarest."

Lieutenant Walter Cleuch was called and testified to the same effect.

The state ended its rebuttal testimony at 11:08 a. m.

Ray Crim, a Philadelphia newspaper man, testified he was present at Tom's River when Arthur Applegate, a fisherman, made a statement to Simpson to the effect that Applegate could not remember what date Henry Stevens caught the big blue fish.

At this point the state ended its rebuttal testimony.

Sur-Rebuttal.

The first sur-rebuttal witness for the defense was then called. He was Eldridge W. Stain, of Montclair, N. J., a handwriting expert. He was shown the defense's enlarged photograph of the card "S-17" which he had examined. He was asked if the enlarged photograph was distorted. Simpson objected that the line of questioning was not proper sur-rebuttal and the court sustained the prosecutor's objection.

Herbert J. Taylor, fingerprint expert, was then questioned concerning alleged super-impositions on the defense's enlarged photographic exhibits.

Taylor said there were super-impositions at two points on the enlarged card.

The defense then rested at 12:02 P. m.

This concluded the presentation of testimony.

Immediately the evidence was in, Justice Parker ordered that the jury be excused until 1:30 this afternoon. Simpson then read an affidavit from Gilbert Van Doren, owner of the Colonial Hotel, where the jury is quartered, to the effect that the jury had been openly discussing the case, that some members of the jury indicated they did not believe the testimony of Mrs. Jane Gibson and that in Van Doren's opinion, they had a preconceived opinion regarding the verdict.

Van Doren said that he heard a juror say that he will not allow Hudson County to come down to Somerville and run things.

The affidavit also quoted Van Doren as saying that one of the jurors remarked to him "that the jury would not be in the jury room on the verdict" more than twenty minutes.

More Fatness in Trees

Simpson spoke at length on his motion for a mistrial. "There will be more chance of a fair verdict before twelve men than before three men," he said, "because in the course of the trial the trees would blossom forth, but the minds of the twelve men here never will."

After Simpson concluded his appeal for a mistrial, Judge Parker turned to the defense lawyers and told them there would be no time limitation placed on them in supplying their case.

Attorney McCarter on the defense replied that he would file his summation today. Attorney Case, also on the defense, said he would finish in two hours tomorrow morning "or perhaps a little longer."

Unique, Says Case

Case took occasion to make a few remarks concerning the conduct of the trial. "There never was a homicide case in history that was conducted in the manner that this case has been conducted," he said, adding that "it had been snickered at and evidence that had been presented."

The court then allowed the de-

CHINA.

The average American knows no more about what is going on in China than about what is going on in Mars...

There are Americans who know something—a good deal—about China. But they are either over there or they are not in a position to clearly explain the situation...

It is evident enough that there are serious matters pending. For two years the haphazard geographical unit we call China has been war-torn...

There is this to be borne in mind. China has never in any single instance gained anything from the presence of western foreigners within her borders...

Perhaps it is only fair to except the missionaries. Presumably they go to China only for China's good...

Intentionally or unintentionally too the usual attitude of the foreigner in China is one of insult.

It is perhaps no great wonder that foreigners are not greatly admired or deeply loved.

And now that the masses of the Chinese are being played on by the agents of Russian Bolshevism, it would be far from surprising if the long smoldering resentment against outsiders were to find expression in violence.

Bad for China; very bad. Because, as in the Boxer uprising, it is quite certain that League or no League, treaties or no treaties, there will be a rush of western military power to seize and bind and hostile China, the moment that foreign blood is spilt.

But whatever happens over there will be the fruit of several hundred years of unfairness, of heartless exploitation, of greed and legalized looting by the whole of the Occident.

SUGGESTION.

While the subject is fresh, and with no purpose whatever of intruding on the management of the Men's Choral club, the Herald feels a prompting to offer a suggestion born of Monday night's concert.

Recognizing that the primary purpose of this whole movement is to promote an interest in and love of the best in music in this community, it would seem to us a matter of the very first importance that the enthusiasm and enterprise of the choral singers themselves be not dampened in the slightest degree...

And there would seem to us to be just a little question as to whether that enthusiasm can be permanently maintained at quite its existing pitch, if there is to be ever so little of subordination of the Choral club, in all these affairs of ours, to the more spectacular attraction of outside talent.

high level, under a continuation of a system which might make of the club chorus a mere background, however valuable, may be a matter to guess at.

What we are driving at is the thought that conceivably it might be an excellent thing for the Choral club's concert—once in a while—to be entirely a Choral club affair in rendition as well as in interest. Whether or not it would not be a better thing, now and then, for the club to sing its program without the assistance of an outside star.

Maybe we should make a mess of it, but if the say-so were up to us we'd give it a try, anyhow.

A SLUM.

At this writing it appears probable that after the many weeks of preparation and after an enormously expensive period in court, the notorious Hall-Mills murder case will go to a mis-trial.

It is difficult to doubt the truth of the allegations brought against the jury by the Somerville hotel keeper—that its members from the start have been cynically indifferent to their citizen's obligations, that they had determined their verdict in advance and that they at all times ignored the evidence in the case—and bragged about their attitude, not only among themselves but to outsiders.

Such proceedings would be only in keeping with the exhibited frame of mind in Somerset and Middlesex counties, New Jersey, where practically the entire public seems to think that murder may be a strictly family affair and one in which intrusion by the authorities is an outrage.

It would seem to be a rather useless proceeding to attempt to carry this case further—and an unnecessary one. The position taken by the inhabitants of that section toward this crime will inevitably bring its own reward. It is not a part of the country toward which decent people will hereafter gravitate. Having earned the reputation of a slum section of the state of New Jersey—a place where criminals are defended by the spirit of the inhabitants—it will have to live under that reputation, and pay for the privilege.

CANNY.

Extraordinary brilliance is being developed in certain quarters by this business of hunting rum smugglers. A Boston dispatch says that Assistant United States District Attorney Elihu D. Stone intimates darkly, mysteriously and portentously that the trail of the alcohol found aboard the Cretan—in which affair several bankers are accused—may be found to lead to "British distillers, seeking an outlet for their product."

There's a cunning mind for you! When a ship brings in $3,000 gallons of alcohol masquerading as cement, any ordinary person would naturally take it for granted that the fluid had distilled itself in midocean—in the Saragossa sea, perhaps, out of seaweed, and climbed aboard and hidden itself; or that it had been manufactured in the woods of West Virginia and taken to sea for a sail; or that it had rained down, or been dug out of the Cornwall tin mines, or been whittled out of old chair rounds at the Sailor's Snug Harbor, or been wept in tears by the angels over this Hartford county commissioner's report of neglected families. To think out the probability that distiller overseas had something to do with providing the Cretan's cargo of white mule requires a noble mentality.

We look to see Assistant District Attorney Elihu D. Stone, whoever he may be, put the once noted Mr. Einstein in his place as a second rate thinker.

RANK.

Someone having started anew the once conspicuous but lately forgotten discussion as to whether the United States army "ranks" the navy or the navy "ranks" the army, no less busy a controversialist than Rear Admiral Bradley A. Fiske, U. S. N., retired, comes forward with a long argument in which he seeks to prove that it is all wrong for people to mention the army first and the navy last when the two are substantially bracketed.

Admiral Fiske points out, truly enough, that the various ranks in the two military branches are exactly equal. And then, to spoil it, he declares that while the army is the navy's senior by a few months, the latter is really first because it is the "first line of defense."

Aside from the fact that both the army and the navy, in point of seniority, ought to be compelled to take off their hats—or at least stand in salute—in the presence of the Coast Guard, which is older than either of them, it would do no great harm for both army and navy officers now and then to recognize that Mister Plain American Citizen, who has no gold lace on his hat and no title at all, is the chap they are working for, who sent them to school and paid the bills, and who signs their pay checks.

AKELEY.

In the death of Carl Akeley in Africa, America loses an artist—the value of whose work, unfortunately, is appreciated by only a small proportion of his compatriots.

It was Akeley's passion to bring the wild life of the far places to the doorstep of the town dweller and show him what those other forms of life are like, in their own environment. He was America's outstanding taxidermist; had developed that useful and always interesting handicraft to an artistic rank equal to the highest in pigments or in marble.

Physically intrepid, jungle-wise from many a grueling expedition, he succumbed at last to the hardships of his chosen work.

His place will be as hard to fill as that of any man.

Here rests his head upon the lap of earth A youth, to fortune and to fame unknown; Fair science frown'd not on his humble birth, And melancholy mark'd him for her own.

No farther seek his merits to disclose, Or draw his frailties from their dread abode, (There they alike in trembling hope repose,) The bosom of his Father and his God.

Air-cooled engines will gradually displace the water-cooled type, and the fuel will gradually change from gasoline to heavy oil, reducing tire hazards.

WASHINGTON LETTER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

Washington, Dec. 1.—Brer Andrews, he don't say nothin'. He just lay low.

You may have missed the customary ballyhoo this year about what the prohibition enforcers were going to do to make the holidays bone dry. It used to be a good annual story for all the newspapers. The fact is that General Lincoln C. Andrews and his subordinates will eat their Christmas dinners serenely confident that while there may be much liquor available, hardly any of it is fit to drink.

Here are their figures: Not more than five or six rum ships off the North Atlantic coast this year.

Probably 60 at this time last year.

More than 200 the year before. About 385 three years ago.

Thus, smuggling has been cut to a minimum in the New York sector, once a great alcoholic sluceway. The Florida coastline now is the principal objective of the rum-runner and it generally is achieved as it is poorly guarded. Any rum-runner would not mind to operate off those sunny shores, with the approach of winter, rather than those of the North Atlantic, doubtless is stupid enough to be very easily caught, anyway.

For a time, the assistant secretary of the treasury in charge of prohibition was badly discouraged. He seemed to be on the verge of resigning every two or three weeks.

But lately those at the Treasury have noticed that his seeming pessimism has changed to a pronounced optimism.

The latest "dope" is that Andrews will resign on April 1, after two years in office. Afterward, he is expected to write the story of his big job, and his final judgment of prohibition after two years of enforcing it will be awaited with considerable interest.

Few ever have thought that Andrews was happy in his enforcing job. Before he took it, he never was any bosom pal of Wayne B. Wheeler or William H. Anderson. There is no evidence that he believes in the law he is trying to enforce, any more than to believe that his salary should be enforced.

His salary is $7500 a year. He doubtless could earn $50,000 a year in civil life. Andrews set out in the beginning to take prohibition out of politics. But senators and congressmen still wear a path to his office, seeking appointments and other favors for their men.

Oh, how lonesome it is for the paragraphers now that Marie's on her way home!

A student committee in Boston has decided that public riots are wrong. Hereafter the classmen will have to be content with mayhem on their own premises.

An American is reported to have paid $5,000 for the car's baby rattle. Well, let us all amuse ourselves in our own way.

IN NEW YORK

New York, Dec. 1.—If you would see any fraction of the New York that was—then hasten!

Now it is Gramercy Park, last stand of an old dignity, that passes.

For generations Gramercy Park shared this dignity with Washington Square, but kept itself a bit more aloof, thanks to a fenced-in park to which admission might be gained only by those with private keys.

Washington Square, with the rest of Greenwich Village, surrendered to the skyscraper apartments long ago this—as chronicled sadly some time ago in this department.

So I wandered over to Gramercy Park to seek consolation in its unspoiled beauty.

Alas, the hand of the wrecker has laid it low. Progress is fast wiping out the leisurely, drowsy atmosphere that made it distinctive, although it rubbed shoulders with the hectic heart of the city.

Half torn buildings rise, like bad teeth and, here and there, steel begins to rise above the old brownstone rooftops. The old Stanford White mansion is gone; the old Ingersoll home is gone and the wreckers are now upon the Luther Clark brownstone, built back in the eighties; two clubs are being razed—but the Players Club remains.

Soon, I am told, a half dozen apartment buildings will add their monotonous lines to this fine old district. And then it will be no more. Something will be lost that can never be recovered.

Bayard Taylor once lived in these quiet streets and Horace Greeley's and Washington Irving's house is huddled in the forest of brick and steel. Old memories walk the park at night. They, too, will grow faint as progress tears down ancient walls.

Manhattan sights you won't find in the guide books: The Old Abolition Adams house. . . . Almost lost between the gas tanks of 51st street. . . . Once it was on a Dutch estate and was sold to John Adams. . . . As time passed it became a tavern and now is owned by the Colonial Dames of America.

As lovely a remnant of the "days that were" as you will find in all New York.

ENGINEER FINED

Tokio.—An engineer of a Japanese train which struck a dead and dumb girl on the tracks recently, was fined 20 yen. Seeing the girl ahead of him he slowed down and pulled the whistle. The girl was killed. The court held that "when a whistle is blown to clear the tracks, the crew of the engine must prepare immediately to stop."

SOMETHING NEW ON RIALTO'S BILL

An attractive double feature program is scheduled for a two-day showing at the Rialto theater beginning tomorrow. The program has everything that the average fan desires in the way of screen entertainment. "The Silent Guardian," one of the features has one of the cleverest cast members in pictures today, in one of the most important roles. He is Rex and has been described as the wonder dog, a title that but poorly describes his almost human achievements in front of the camera. The picture is interesting and exciting from the very beginning until the last fadeout. It tells the story of the love of two men for the same girl, the latter part portrayed by Louise Lorraine. The dog's sagacity is revealed when the hero is on the verge of being lynched for a murder he didn't commit. The rescue effected by Rex is decidedly novel and his acquisition fits the real guilt on the villain, which is as it should be. In addition to the dog there is Black Beauty, a marvelous equine performer who goes through his paces in a manner that stamps him as a natural born actor. His horse laugh at the antics of his love-sick master is in itself worthwhile entertainment. The second feature to be shown is "The Unfair Sex," a timely picture of ultra modern life. It is an engrossing plot capably acted by a cast which includes Holbrook Blinn, Hope Hampton and Nita Naldi. A select program of shorter subjects will also be shown.

The two features being offered for the last times today are "The Rat," a thrilling story of love and life in the Paris underworld and "The King of the Saddle," a western drama replete with horse riding and fast shooting. In "The Rat" some novel screen fare is offered and the cast is headed by Iver Novello and Mae Marsh. "The King of the Saddle" stars Buffalo Bill Jr., one of the leading dilettantes of western characters. There will be an added attraction tomorrow evening when another five tube Atwater Kent radio set will be given away to the lucky person who holds the numbers on his lap upon which correspond to those called.

QUEER QUIRKS OF NATURE

By ARTHUR N. PACK

Nearly all woodpeckers have some red on the head, at least a small spot. Fable says this is a drop of blood which gushed from a wound caused by the blow of a wand suffered at the hand of some ancient goddess as a punishment for a breach of conduct.

The woodpecker has figured widely in the legends of ancient peoples. He summons the thunder; he blazes a path for the wandering hunter; he reveals the secret places of hidden treasures.

Well Regarded. In our own days, the woodpecker is well thought of by the forester.

and the horticulturist. Usually resident, he spends the year in the never-ending search and discovery of insects which injure our forests. It is well to leave here and there a decayed limb, for he loves to fashion the cavity in which his brood shall be raised, and while all this is going on, the family lives on the borers which are endangering the very lives of the otherwise healthy denizens of the forest and orchard.

One species loves nothing so much as ants, and with us they stand between us and yearly plagues of these prolific insects. The Wrong Tree. All these good offices are forgotten, however, if by any chance our friend the woodpecker hews out his nursery in a telegraph pole, for he loves to survey the world from the summit of such ideal watchtowers.

Really the woodpeckers are almost as important as the words which slip noiselessly along the wires, for they shall bring joy to human hearts when men no longer stretch wires or poles.

So let us be tolerant. The woodpecker has ministered greatly to our aesthetic and material natures, and deserves to live long on the earth.

Send a stamped addressed envelope and questions of fact having to do with nature will be answered by the consulting staff of Nature Magazine of Washington, D. C., through arrangements made by this paper.

British Power Plan To Stir Parliament

By MILTON BRONNER

London, Dec. 1.—A wholesale system of generating electric power, to be directed and controlled by the government, is the proposal around which will center one of the greatest of British parliamentary battles of the coming winter.

Premier Baldwin, head of the conservative party, is back of the bill, yet the bitterest of the Tories in his own ranks denounce it. They see in it a long step toward nationalization.

The laborites, on the other hand, oppose it because the step is too short. It does not provide for actual national ownership of the electric industry, for which they have been agitating.

Premier Baldwin and his pipe

European trade competitors of England are among the most alert watchers of the bill's progress. If it is enacted, they believe, it will strengthen England enormously in the fight for world markets. Germany in particular is interested.

Strike Hit Industry Heavily

The prolonged, grim and disastrous strike was a heavy blow to British industry. It represented a direct cash loss to capital and labor of more than three-quarters of a billion dollars. It lost market, crippled industrial production and lowered the standard of living. A first class co-ordinated power system would work wonders, it is contended, in making up for the damage.

What Americans designate as "super-power" is the real object of the proposal. The bill would reduce present high costs of power by linking up the most efficient generating plants in a network, eliminating wasteful stations, and reducing overhead.

The bill provides for the appointment by the Minister of Transport of a central chairman board consisting of a chairman and seven other members, to have charge of the whole enterprise. Working in conjunction with them there is to be a commission of electrical experts.

The efficient ones will be chosen as the stations at which electricity shall be generated under the direction of the board. These efficient stations are to be interconnected at once by cables.

The idea is to get a peak load with as little requirement as possible for more or less expensive stations. This cross-crossing of cables is known as "the grid." In time it is expected that all Great Britain will be divided into such areas and thus grid-ironed.

Provisions are made whereby the board secures directive control of these selected stations. The board sets such quantities of electricity at such rates and at such periods as are needed. The plants are to sell all electricity thus produced at a figure which includes a fixed kilowatt charge component and a running charge component.

Distribution Problem Solved

The problem of distribution is solved by selling the electricity to authorized companies within the designated area, who in turn will supply it to the individual consumers.

The board has full power to order the owners of the selected stations to make alterations and extensions in their plants. The capital expenditure involved has to be borne by the owners, but the board will pay the interest and sinking fund charges on all such expenditures.

The bill safeguards the interests of the owners of the selected stations by giving them the right of appeal wherever they feel that they are being asked to do something that will cause a loss. All money needed by the board will be supplied by the national treasury, but there will be careful parliamentary supervision.

The essence of the bill itself is that the board is not primarily to own the generating stations for the nation. It is to direct them and sell the power. But it difficulties are encountered in doing this, then the Minister of Transport may authorize the board itself to buy the stations and operate them.

17 AUTO DRIVERS LOSE LICENSES

The weekly list of operators whose licenses to drive automobiles in Connecticut have been suspended for one year for driving while under the influence of liquor was given out today at the state motor vehicle department as a part of the effort to reduce this highway menace. BEERY AND HATTON AT STATE NEXT WEEK

"We're in the Navy Now" Is Farce of American Tar's Life.

"Ship ahoy, there! Outta the way, there, here we come! We're Beery and Hatton, and you'll all see us in our latest farce, 'We're in the Navy Now' at the State theater next Sunday, Monday and Tuesday."

Eclipsing their superb performance in "Behind the Front," Wallace Beery and Raymond Hatton march to smashing victory in their latest Paramount co-starring comedy, "We're in the Navy Now."

"We're in the Navy Now" is the most truthful, excruciatingly funny tale of the war yet portrayed on any screen and the enjoyment evidenced by opening night moviegoers established new laugh records.

Nary a naval comedy situation has been left out of this picture. Big battle scenes showing all manner of ships, hydroplanes and submarines lend a spectacular force.

Portrayed by an unusual cast, the laughable side of the Navy has been played to the limit under Edward Sutherland's direction. The story deals with the adventures of a pugilist, Beery, and his manager, Hatton. Literally, knocked out of the prize ring, they land in a whirlpool provided by the World War.

And never was there such a pair of green gobs! Chester Conklin scores a personal triumph as the transport captain, while Tom Kennedy, the chief petty officer, adds to the fun.

A love theme involving beautiful Lorraine Eaton and Donald Keith, runs right through the hectic experiences encountered by Beery and Hatton.

China is a growing market for junked horseshoes. The natives use the chilled iron for making knives.

MORE FINE PRESENTS AT "COUNTRY STORE"

Surprises, Presents and Double Feature Tonight. More Vaudeville Coming.

There's one place in town where you just must go tonight. That's the State theater. Why? Well, this is "Country Store Nite" for one thing, it's "Surprise Nite" for another, and there are two top notch double features at the State for a third reason. Three in one will be the rule, however, for all three will be combined into one grand evening of entertainment. Presents, presents, and still presents will be what you will see being given away tonight. Maybe you will get one of them yourself; they're all valuable, and well worth carrying home.

Then there will be a big surprise, and an excellent double feature program. Some bargain bill, isn't it? "His Jazz Bride" is a screen version of Beatrice Burton's novel, "The Flapper Wife," directed by Herman Raymaker. A sparkling cast includes Marie Prevost, Matt Moore, John Patrick, Mabel Julienne Scott, George Irving, Don Alvarado, Margaret Seddon, Helen Dunbar and Gayne Whitman.

In "You'd Be Surprised," Raymond Griffith plays the role of a coroner but—what a coroner!

You see, it's his business to establish the identity of a person who killed the district attorney. And—when Ray starts discovering who did all the shooting at a houseboat party, there are a hundred thrills and a thousand laughs.

On Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week there will be another one of those "work" vaudeville bills at the State. The one which was presented last week is still the talk of the town, and this week's will be another of the big hit-type. Just take a look at the names of the acts: Marty and Nancy in "Songs and Steps," Al H. Wilson's "Now I'll Tell One," the Six Anderson Sisters presenting "A Musical Revue," "Amazon and Nile in 'In the Swamplands' and One in a Hundred, or 'See This One.'"

There will also be a classy feature picture, "Ladies At Play" featuring Doris Kenyon and Lloyd Hughes, is a high stepping, jazz tingling, breath taking production adapted from the world famous "Flapper Wife."

On Saturday afternoon old Santa Claus will be at the State to distribute toys to the kiddies.

USES "DE RUSSEY" TO KEEP TRYSTERS FROM LANE

East Hampton, Nov. 30.—Anxious eyes today were cast at a sign that Earl Barton placed today at the entrance to a lane leading to his apple orchard here. The sign reads: "De Russey's lane. No trespassing."

Mr. Barton explained that he was so annoyed at the use of his lane as a trysting place he put up the sign as a warning.

Ashley Sick, Doesn't Know He's Nominee

Mayor Ashley's joviality cheering the patients in a children's hospital

New Bedford, Mass. Dec. 1.—Flat on his back in a hospital desiring nothing so little as public office, not even aware that he is a candidate, is New Bedford's probable next mayor, Charley Ashley.

White-haired and 70, Ashley already has served 23 terms as mayor. Six years ago he quit—refusing to run any more for the office the city had come to regard as his. During the past six years, the taxpayers have complained that things were not what they used to be. Their rates went up and their enthusiasm went down. They clamored for the good old days.

Ashley was too ill to campaign, and it was thought he could not recover. Even now he is too weak to be told that he is a candidate. But he is improving and with this cheering news his friends have instituted a "sticker" campaign to put his name on the ballot. Victory seems to smile.

Ashley, in his younger days, even gave political lessons to Tammany Hall. That astute organization sent its lieutenants here to study his methods. It was under his administration that the city was guided through the difficult transition from a superannated whaling port to the nations leading cotton manufacturing center. His associates amassed fortunes in textiles, while Mayor Ashley stayed poor. He has been associated with nearly every civic improvement of the present generation.

And he's due for the surprise of his life when he is led from the hospital back to the mayor's office.

It won't be long now—as the old saying goes—before this Cleveland-Cub football wrangle is definitely settled...

Such insignificance! Readers will probably think even less of the mental ability of both teams when they learn the breach which separates the two teams...

Can you imagine two teams so stubborn they cannot agree over such a meaningless argument? Why the amount of money taken at a maximum, would hardly buy lemons for the two teams to suck between the halves...

Early last evening representatives of the Cubs went over north and consulted with the Cleveland officials. The efforts of both were fruitless...

The Clevelanders, formerly holding for a 75-25 split, reduced their terms to 70-30 while the Cubs jumped from 60-40 to 65 2-3-33-1-3.

Case School of Cleveland played three tie games during the 1926 football season. Two were scoreless affairs with Baldwin-Wallace and Western Reserve. The other was a 14-14 tussle with Akron.

OPEN SEASON FOR ALL-AMERICAN EXPERTS

NOW TEX TELLS WHAT HE THINKS

Comes Out in Open to Deny "Fixed Fight" Insinuations of Managers.

BY DAVIS J. WALSH I. N. S. Sports Editor

New York, Dec. 1.—Breaking a silence that had been preserved these several months in the face of backstairs implication and innuendo, Tex Rickard today gave the Dempsey-Tunney fight...

Bob O'Farrell is the greatest catcher in the National League and a demon for work but Hornsby needs a good second string catcher for an emergency.

The pitching staff naturally can be improved upon—any team in the two leagues can always find room for a good pitcher or two. It is not certain that Alexander will have another good season although he should be a useful citizen on the bench for several more years.

The Yankees also, with the exception of pitching, are fairly well fixed to stand pat. The team showed a weakness at shortstop during the world's series but Miller Huggins seems confident that Mark Koenig will find himself and he did not criticize him for his ragged playing in the series as Hornsby criticized Hafey.

Bob Messersmith covered himself with glory in left field during the series but Huggins blamed it upon the broken leg that laid him up for many weeks during the regular playing season.

With a new manager, the Pittsburgh Pirates ought to be back in the National League race next season and the Cincinnati Reds also should be a big factor. Chicago, also seems to be coming.

The Cleveland Indians and the Philadelphia Athletics are sure to be formidable rivals for the Yankees in the American League. The chances of the Indians depend largely upon George Uhle. If he has another season like the one recently finished the Yankees will have to work even harder than they did this year to win the pennant.

It is hard to figure the Athletics. They have the class but the ball players say they haven't the heart and you can't put heart into a ball club that doesn't come by it naturally.

WANTS WAGNER AS SCOUT FOR BOSTON RED SOX

YOST SPURNED OFFER TO QUIT MICHIGAN

No one individual has been a more important figure in the development of college football than Fielding H. Yost.

At Michigan, Fielding H. Yost is a part of the institution. For 25 years he has directed the destinies of its football teams. His success has brought him many offers to leave Michigan. All of them he has spurned.

Michigan teams coached by Yost have played their part in popularizing the gridiron sport. In the old days, Michigan's point-a-minute eleven were among the most colorful in the country.

Only Few Alterations In Basketball Rules

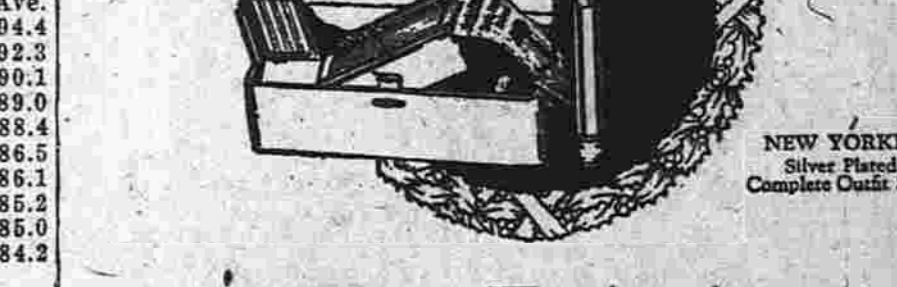

By The Sports Editor Only minor changes have been made in the basketball rules for the 1926-27 season which has just opened in Manchester. There have been no drastic alterations over the rules as they were last season.

The tremendous growth of basketball during the period since the formation of the Joint Basketball Rules Committee has increased correspondingly with the responsibility of those who write and revise the code by which the game is played. The committee does not claim the honor of making basketball a headline in the field of competitive athletics.

Many suggestions came to the committee each year in the annual questionnaire from coaches, officials and others. Much time is spent in considering these and their effect on the game if adopted. Among the many changes discussed at the last annual session were: 'Time out' on all fouls; forbidding center and other jumping players to tap and catch the ball; awarding a player fouled in the act of shooting only one free throw if he makes his field goal; returning to the old hand-behind-the-back rule in jump balls.

Also Favor S'winging. The critics against swinging is subsidizing. Stalling is dangerous for the team that employs it because it requires much skill and often proves a boomerang for the team which uses it.

CHAPTER XLVIII
WITH dazed, unbelieving eyes, Judith looked down from the table at the sprawling body of the dean. He lay triumphantly against the table leg, feebly striking out with arms and feet. Incoherent cries filled the room, and the girl standing over him was the man who had knocked him down. He was just straightening gray tweed shoulders from the blow.

not sorry—but sometimes I've been afraid, and when Eric Waters was accused—I nearly went mad. That's why I got him out of jail. He needed killing, and I'm glad I did it, though I didn't really mean to. He'd forced me into his car and was threatening to go to the dean if I didn't find more money for him.

"Great gods, the professor!" yelled Will Wethered from his corner by the door. Dr. Dorn paid no heed. With a long arm, he swept Judith off the table, so that she lay against his shoulder as limply as a child. Then, avoiding the body of the dean, he strode with her in his arms toward the door. The crowd fell back before him, and Judith caught a glimpse of Eric's bewildered face before they passed through the door into the darkness of the portico.

"Do you s'pose," she said, with a slow smile, "do you s'pose I could dust off the telescopes for you, or polish the stars?"

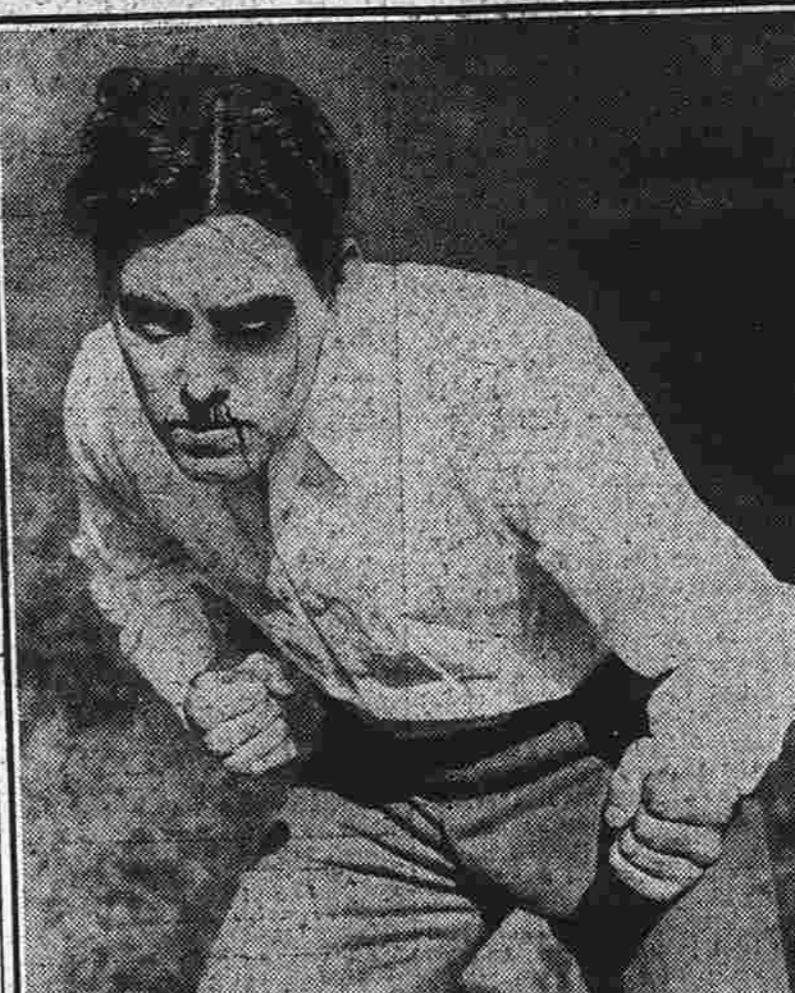

Eric looked at her in blank amazement. But someone else was coming up on the porch. They had left the door open, and Dr. Dorn walked in, unannounced. He looked at Eric blankly, as though he did not recognize him, then turned to Judith as if they two had been alone. "I've come—to say goodbye, and ask your pardon, Judith. I'm sorry I intruded upon your affairs—it seems as though I've only tangled them."

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE
To the home of PROF and MOLLIE ELWELL, in Camden Hill, comes MARTHA DALTON, a nurse, bearing with her a woman who had fainted on the Chicago-Indianapolis train, on which Prof Elwell is an artist. He has a son, JIM, aged 5. Prof and Mollie take the stranger in and late that night twin girls are born to the woman, who dies without revealing her identity. Her husband indicated her to be a person of refinement and wealth.

twins suggested, as if they had been waited for at a Chicago packing house. Betty, he said, might help him out a bit. "Look here, you go up to my room and sneak a clean shirt, another collar and a pair of my blue serge pants. And don't, for the love of Mike, let Prof or Mollie catch you. They'd kid me for the next six months if they found out about this. I'll be gettin' washed up in the meantime."

RUSTY and Betty, standing together, looked at each other and their eyes grew bigger. "Little girls!" gasped Betty. "Now WHAT do you think of that? He's settin' worse every day!"

Within a minute his eye closed and a red stream was pouring from his nose. He glimped as it flashed through the air. It was a white-striped croquet ball. He looked up and around and across the fence.

Jim bowed, grinning. "You're a marvel, Rusty." He took the steak and with the ax carved it to suit his fancy. The girls looked on, fascinated. "Mollie was keeping that steak for tomorrow's breakfast."

THE TINYMITES

(READ THE STORY THEN COLOR THE PICTURE).
The Tinymites enjoyed the heat the furnace gave. It dried their feet and made them feel much better since their plunging in the tub. Then Cobby said, "Well, goodness knows, we've simply got to wash our clothes. Let's fill the washbasin and then give them all a rub."
So, to the wash tubs they all went. About a half an hour was spent in putting in the bluing and the water and the soap. Then all their clothes were piled up high, and Scouty shouted, "Let me try to do the work of scrubbing. I can do it fine, I hope."
He jumped upon a little stool that's by a wash tub, as a rule, and then he took the washboard, quickly putting it in place. "Bring on the clothes," he shouted loud. "I'll clean them till you'll all feel proud. When I get through this washing job, of dirt there'll be no trace."
He scrubbed until his arms were sore, and then he'd rest, and scrub some more. But, even so the spots didn't seem to leave the clothes. "I don't know how," at last he said. "If someone does, go right ahead." Then Scrubby laughed and said, "Why, I'm the only one who knows."
Then Scrubby soon rose right to fame. That's why they called him such a name. He soon had all the clothes quite clear of every trace of black. And then he turned, threw out his chest and said, "It's up to all the rest of you to hang the nice clean clothes upon the old clothes rack."
The wringer handle swung about. That's how they squeezed the water out of all the clothes that Scrubby washed. And then there came a sigh. The crowd was tired. The job was done, but they all had heaps of fun. The clothes were now all hanging in the cellarway to dry.
The Tinymites enjoy the furnace fire in the next story!

OUR "HOTEL DE GINK" PASSES INTO HISTORY

Manchester's Hotel De Gink is passing. Its history covers a period of almost 10 years although it was only used for its original purpose for a short time.

The Hotel De Gink is a little concrete box in the rear of the old town hall. One window and one door, the window grilles with bars like a prison and the door of steel, were the only openings to it and it was originally used for the reception of hoboes who stopped over in this town for a night.

Hoboes used to make Manchester one of their regular stopping places for the police station was warm in the School street Rec at 7 o'clock. The most important business will be choosing the committee for the play "Dulcy" which will be given next Thursday evening at the Circle theater.

Accordingly, the Hotel De Gink was built for the word soon went out that Manchester was a poor stopping place for bums.

After about two months the hoboes began to be seen here less often and some time later the town was not bothered with them at all.

There being no need for the hotel, it was closed up. It cost a little money and while it defeated its original purpose, it rid Manchester of unwelcome hoboes and tramps.

"They are eating other valuable animals and should be shot, on sight because they are useless. I stuffed one that was caught by Stephen Lester, of 30 Cooper street, while in the act of eating a full sized live rabbit."

POLICE COURT

Joseph O. Maynard of Ellington was in the Manchester police court this morning on the charge of parking his car for more than an hour on the east side of Main street last night. Judge Johnson imposed the same fine as in previous cases of a similar character, that is, $2.00 without costs.

Within the past month there have been possibly 25 or 30 cases before the local court for this offense. It seems as if by this time people should be familiar with the parking laws and read the signs on the poles all along the line on each side of Main street from the Odd Fellows' building to School street, but for some reason or other every Tuesday and Saturday evening a number of people fail to obey the law and are brought into court.

Who will have the lucky key? Watch for Particulars in The Herald of Saturday, December 4th.
