

BOARD REJECTS PROTECTION OF ROAD COASTERS

Rescinds Previous Action, Declares No Streets Available — Near Accidents Cause of Decision.

Manchester officially frowned on coasting on the public highways when the Board of Selectmen last night rescinded previous action in setting aside certain streets for sliding. Near accidents brought about the reversal of opinion. Added to the fact that these near fatalities would have made the Selectmen morally responsible, the board learned through investigation that the children had not taken advantage of the highways designated as protected sliding places.

In rescinding the action the board merely puts the coasting-on-the-streets problem back to its former status. An appeal by the highways must be settled with regard to blame on the part of one or both parties involved. There is, however, a state law forbidding coasting on public highways. Parents should see that their children do not violate the law for coasting when the final decision.

Near Fatal Accident
The near accident which was brought to the attention of the board last night happened last Saturday morning on Woodland street railroad. Two youngsters coasted in front of the South Manchester Railroad engine and narrowly escaped being struck. Quick thinking on the part of the engineer averted the accident.

C. Herman Cheney, president of the railroad, informed the Selectmen that should such an accident occur, especially on a street designated as a coasting area, the railroad would look to the town for settlement.

Four hearings on proposals for street acceptances by the town were held by the board last night. These hearings were held in the large rooms for that purpose in the new Municipal building and were the first to be held there.

The proposal for the acceptance of Stone street from Center street to St. John street was first brought before the board. The grade on this street is nearly correct at present and there were no objections to the town's acceptance. Those who appeared in the interests of their holdings on the street were Eugene Ronson, Henry F. Smith, William Jay, Emma Merkle, and Charles Olson. The board voted to ask the town to accept the street at the next town meeting.

Dougherty street next brought up for a proposal for acceptance hearing. This street runs from Center to West Center streets just east of McKee. The street is at a proper grade and no objections were offered. Only two owners, however, appeared. They were Mark Hewitt and Herman J. Miller. This street will also be before the next town meeting for final acceptance.

The third hearing was on the proposal for the acceptance of Trumbull street. Trumbull street runs from Griswold to Lilac street on property on which the Manchester Lumber Company plant formerly stood. N. B. Richards who opened the road was present to approve of the town's proposal to accept it. Adolph E. Heberg felt that he had been left on a hill and that either the town or N. B. Richards should terrace the property or build a wall. The board explained to Mr. Heberg that the town had no interest in the matter, and Mr. Richards told Mr. Heberg that his property

Just a Word To Teacher

HOW well informed are your pupils on what Manchester and other American communities are doing day after day to meet current problems of industry, zoning, traffic, and a score of other phases of modern city growth?

Don't you think the series of articles on American cities now running in The Herald would be very valuable material for classroom study?

The articles are short. It wouldn't take long to read and discuss one every day while they are running. They give a very definite picture of American cities today, what the community organizations are doing to push them ahead and why civic pride is one of the most essential virtues a citizen can have.

The articles are constructive, modern pieces of history. More, they constitute interesting lessons in civics. They will interest pupils.

This suggestion is well worth your consideration. Today's article is on Page Four.

OUR MAYOR TO WIELD AN HISTORIC GAVEL

When the Board of Selectmen filed into the public hearings room of the new Municipal building last night for their meeting they found a new piece of furniture.

Placed in front of Mayor Robert V. Treat's chair was a beautiful fumed oak gavel and block. Not that the board expected a disturbing meeting last night, but it is customary to have a gavel in all public meetings.

Town Treasurer Waddell explained that the gavel and block had been fashioned from the silis of the old Town Hall and had been presented to the town. Now when the Mayor raps for order, echoes of all the turbulent and oftentimes eloquent meetings of olden days should ring through the fine new Municipal building.

GAS STATION FOR EAST CENTER ST.

Earl Campbell Dickering For Foster Street Corner; No Permit Given.

Earl Campbell, proprietor of Campbell's Filling Station at Middle Turnpike and also at Love Lane, has bargained for the property at the corner of Foster and East Center streets, which was for years owned by Hiram Grant and later by Elman & Rolston. He is planning to erect one of the most up-to-date filling stations in town there.

Morris Elman & Rolston told The Herald this morning that there was such a deal in the works but that no papers had yet passed.

Seek States Approval
At Campbell's Filling Station it was stated that the deal would go through if the state put its stamp of approval on the application for a filling station there. A representative of the highway commission came out to Manchester yesterday and looked over the ground, and as far as can be learned found no objections.

Mr. Campbell has been very successful at the Middle Turnpike location. It is considered one of the best stations in town. If this deal goes through he plans to have in addition to a filling station an automobile showroom. He owned a piece of land on Main street opposite the state armory and had planned to build a filling station there, but is to deed the land to Elman & Rolston in part payment for the Center street property.

H. WALES LINES DEAD AT MERIDEN, AGED 88

Widely Known Builder Passes Away After Illness of Two Months.

Meriden, Jan. 11.—H. Wales Lines died at his home here just before noon today after an illness that confined him to his bed approximately two months. He was in his eighty-ninth year.

Mr. Lines, who was a native of Naugatuck, was an outstanding figure in many state and national relationships. He achieved a wide reputation as a building contractor and entered actively in political and social affairs.

Mr. Lines served three terms as mayor of Meriden. He represented Meriden in the Legislature in 1872 and went to the state Senate for the term in 1875-80. He was a delegate to the Connecticut Constitutional convention in 1902. He was chairman of the commission appointed to erect the state library and supreme court building and to complete the state capitol.

Mr. Lines attained the distinction of being a 33rd Degree Mason and was a member of the Supreme Council, Northern Masonic Jurisdiction. He was also for many years grand treasurer, Grand Encampment, Knights Templar, U. S. A.

For forty-three years he was treasurer of St. Elmo Commandery, No. 9, Knights Templar, Meriden. He was one of the founders and always actively interested in the Masonic Home at Wallingford. He was a member also of the Odd Fellows and Elks.

He was a member of the Young Men's Republican Club, of New Haven; Union League, of New Haven; and the Colonial and Highland Country Clubs, of Meriden.

Mr. Lines in 1881 married Miss Sarah Congdon, of Waterford, who died just before Mr. Lines took to his bed two months ago.

BREATH TAKING PROFITS EARNED BY THE FORDS

Suit Shows $100 Invested In 1903 Gained $52,174 in Ten Years; Capital Grew By Leaps.

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 11.—Staggering profits of the Ford Motor Company were revealed today in the government's suit to collect $34,000,000 from Senator James Couzens of Michigan and other former stockholders of the company.

The government claims the money is in income and profits tax from the sale of the stock to Henry Ford.

One hundred dollars invested in the Ford company at the time of its organization in 1903 earned $52,174 in ten years, Joseph E. Davies, former chairman of the Federal Trade Commission revealed when he opened America's greatest tax appeal case before three members of the United States Board of Tax Appeals.

Invested Only $48,000
"In ten years, with an initial investment of but $48,000 in actual cash, the Ford company had paid $23,000,000 in dividends and had amassed $22,000,000 in property," Davies declared. "In 1904 the company made $200,000. By 1907, those earnings had increased five-fold and were $1,011,000. Within two years these earnings had been doubled and were $2,600,000. Within three years these earnings were again multiplied five times and were $13,000,000 for the year. In another year, they were again doubled and amounted to $20,000,000."

"The growth of the company's surplus was no less remarkable. Starting with a surplus of $133,000 in 1904, in three years its surplus had reached $1,377,000. Three years later it had reached $3,366,000. Within two more years, or in 1912, the surplus was $14,745,000. On March 1, 1913, it had increased to $22,000,000."

The startling earnings were revealed by Davies in outlining the position taken by the former stockholders. Senator Couzens and his co-defendants dispute claims of the government that the $9,489 value per share set by the Bureau of Internal Revenue as the value of the stock as of March 1, 1913, was too high. In fixing the amount of tax due it was necessary to fix the 1913 value, as the difference between this figure and the price at which the stockholders sold their shares to Henry Ford represents the amount on which the taxes were computed.

Basis of Suit
The figure set in 1913 was declared unfair by a subsequent regime in the Bureau of Internal Revenue, almost five years later.

Should the government's contention be sustained, that a commissioner of internal revenue can set aside the acts of his predecessors and levy additional assessments, Mr. Davies declared "there would be no security in either business or property rights of the citizens of this government."

The political feud between Senator Couzens and Andrew Mellon, secretary of the treasury, also is expected to be touched upon. Couzens has charged that Mellon, smarting under criticism of his aluminum interests, caused the suit to be instituted.

For Threatened to Bolt
Henry Ford threatened in 1919 to leave the Ford Motor Company, start a new factory and build a new car to undersell his own product, Davies declared today in opening his case.

Davies, in outlining his case, said Ford made this statement in Los Angeles. It was made at the time Ford was having trouble with the stockholders, shortly before they sold out to him, Davies declared.

SAYS MUCH MEDICINE WHISKEY IS IMPURE

"Cut" at the Warehouses, General Andrews Tells a House Committee.

Washington, Jan. 11.—Much of the medicinal whiskey sold throughout the country is impure, Lincoln C. Andrews, dry chief, told the House Ways and Means Committee today. He urged enactment of the bill creating a quasi-governmental medicinal whiskey corporation.

The attractions of the bootleg trade have become so great that medicinal liquor is "cut" at the warehouses, Andrews said. Only a few druggists, he added, are involved in diluting the whiskey.

FATAL STAIRWAY

It was on this landing on stairs leading down from the balcony of the Lamson Palace movie theater in Montreal that scores of the 77 young victims of the fire pined their lives. Five steps below was the street and safety. So tightly were the bodies of the dead wedged in the passageway that firemen had to cut through the walls on either side to extricate them.

CHAPLIN DIVORCE SUIT IS ENTERED

Lita Grey Alleges Cruelty But Specifications Only Charge Wordy Assaults.

Los Angeles, Jan. 11.—Charging extreme cruelty, Mrs. Lita Grey Chaplin, wife of Charles Chaplin, famous film comedian, today has a divorce suit on file against her husband.

The Chaplins were married at Empalme, Sonora, Mexico, on November 25, 1924. They separated about two years later, on November 30, 1926.

The separation of Nov. 30 was precipitated by a "party" which Mrs. Chaplin gave to her friends at her home. At that time Mrs. Chaplin asserted that her husband had insulted her guests and the next day she took her two children and went to the home of her grandparents. Chaplin denied that such was the case. He did say, however, that when his wife's guests became noisy, he requested her to ask them to leave.

Make Five Requests
Under five major headings, Mrs. Chaplin asked the court to grant her the following awards in connection with her suit for a divorce: A "reasonable" amount of temporary alimony; a division of community property; attorneys' fees; that Chaplin be restrained from disposing of his property; that he be forbidden to visit his children or annoy her.

Other individuals and companies were made defendants, in addition to Chaplin, because of their connection with his business interests. They are: The Chaplin Studio, the Chaplin Film Corporation, T. K. Kohn, Chaplin's secretary; Alfred Reeves, his studio manager; the United Artists, several banks and a number of other corporations.

Mrs. Chaplin's charges of assault and battery constituted a formidable document of forty-two pages. That her husband said he would "make her so sick of him that she

FOREIGNERS IN SHANGHAI ACT TO BAR RIOTERS

Throw Up Wire Tangles, Erect Barricades, Search Natives in District For Hidden Arms.

Shanghai, Jan. 11.—More than a hundred Chinese were under arrest for questioning today, following a night of feverish activity during which the members of the Shanghai Volunteer Corps, police reserves and the regular police made a thorough search throughout the city for unlicensed arms and for agitators.

The police search included all the thickly populated districts, in which shops and dwellings were entered and searched. Rickshaws, automobiles and pedestrians were likewise searched and all persons questioned.

The international city authorities, spurred to activity by reports of a possible attack on Shanghai by the Nationalist forces now in control of Hankow and other Yangtze River cities, announced their determination to avert any disorder.

Settlements Barred
Barbed wire entanglements and barricades are being erected at all the entrances to the foreign settlements. The municipal council issued a proclamation forbidding all meetings and demonstrations of any kind.

There was an unconfirmed report today that American regular

DISASTROUS FIRE SWEEPS NEWBURG

Flames Rage in Business Section of Hudson Town After Long Battle.

Newburg, N. Y., Jan. 11.—Fire which started at one o'clock this morning swept through the heart of the business section here today, wiping out twenty buildings, made sixteen families homeless, and is still raging, with the damage so far estimated at $500,000.

The firemen made many spectacular rescues, carrying tenants out from flame-swept houses. A temperature hovering in the zero region made the work a torture for the firemen. The streets are blocked with ice a foot in thickness.

One fireman, Reed King, driver of a truck, was frozen to his seat. His companions were forced to chop him out with hatchets.

The fire started in Shapiro's confectionery store, one block from the waterfront. It gained rapid headway and swept through the row of six adjoining buildings, which housed stores and families.

Fire apparatus was gathered from points in Orange county, and from places across the Hudson river. Apparatus was rushed from Beacon, N. Y., by ferry and from Poughkeepsie.

The damage thus far is estimated by property owners at $500,000. Power service for several surrounding towns was completely cut out when the blaze attacked conduits of the Central Hudson Gas and Electric system.

JURY PICKING FOR THE NORRIS TRIAL STARTS

Defense Surprises State By Readiness to Begin "Without Reservations."

Austin, Texas, Jan. 11.—Examination of prospective jurors to try Rev. J. Frank Norris in a charge of killing D. E. Chippie, Fort Worth lumberman, was started in District Court here today.

Surprising the prosecution, the defense announced, "Ready without reservations" when court was convened this morning.

A. P. Brodowski, a foundry worker, was the first venireman called for examination.

BRITISH COLUMBIA TO COMPETE WITH BOOTLEGGERS

Victoria, B. C., Jan. 11.—Even Government sale of liquor doesn't do away with bootleggers in British Columbia. The provincial legislature officially recognized the existence of the illicit trade today when a measure was introduced to provide for "the opening of liquor stores in Vancouver and Victoria after eight in the evening to compete with bootleggers." The action will be taken on approval of the liquor board.

HOLD ONE REQUIEM OVER 35 COFFINS

Tragic Scene Enacted at Montreal Church in Fire Victims' Funeral.

Montreal, Jan. 11.—The muffled pealing of the bell of the Church of the Nativity called Montreal to pay respect today at the collective funeral of the victims of the Laurier Palace theatre fire of Sunday.

Thirty-five white coffins, laid row on row on catafalques, in the nave of the church bore mute evidence of the great tragedy.

Thousands who came to pay their respect could not gain admission of the church, which was filled with priests and relatives whose afflicted sobs came in tragic accompaniment to the intonations of the priests and altar boys as the requiem mass was celebrated.

Constables patrolled the surroundings of the church to keep the crowds back.

Mourners From All Ranks
Mourners came from every rank of life, the governor-general being represented by Brigadier General E. de B. Panet. The mayor of Montreal and representatives of the Board of Aldermen were also present.

This afternoon a second service—a service more tragic perhaps, was held for those tiny victims under seven years of age, who had not received their first communion.

Meanwhile the forces of the law moved forward formally today in their investigation of the causes of the disastrous fire at the theatre.

Owner on Ball
The coroner's inquest, which apparently will be held in the violation of the law which prohibits the admission of children under sixteen into a theatre unless accompanied by an adult, was adjourned until Thursday.

Ameen Lawand, proprietor of the picture theatre is at the $10,000 bail, and three employees were released in $100 bail each.

The Theatre Managers' Association appropriated $10,000 to aid the families of the victims. In addition, all the charitable organizations have pledged assistance.

THREE ACCUSED OF SWINDLING A BANK

Trio at New London Charged With Getting $21,000 on False Statements.

New London, Jan. 11.—Carroll N. Spaulding, of Norwich, was today charged with getting $21,000 for trial in the superior court on charges of making false statements to obtain money on notes and to obtain credit. Louis Kosakow and Louis Scher, both of New London, arrested last night on the same charges, were placed under bail of $10,000 for city court hearings a week from today.

The three men once operated A. Scher & Co., produce dealers. They went into bankruptcy recently, saying they had no assets. The New London City National Bank swore out warrants for the men's arrest, declaring they had obtained $21,000 from the bank on the strength of their business statements.

Counsel for Spaulding today filed a demurrer for him and when it was overruled, Spaulding refused to plead and was ordered bound over. He had not obtained bail early this afternoon, though Kosakow and Scher did.

REPUBLICANS IN CONGRESS BACK COOLIDGE MOVE

Message on Nicaragua Dispute Solidifies Party, Calles' Reply Expected to Be Vigorous.

Washington, Jan. 11.—President Coolidge's special message to Congress was accepted on all sides today as constituting a blunt warning to Mexico to keep "hands off" in Nicaragua—and a warning, too, that is backed up by the presence of 15 American warships and 5000 marines and bluejackets in waters adjacent to Mexico.

All Washington today was looking to Mexico City for the expected "come-back" of President Calles. No hint of the President's note, in which he virtually charged the Calles regime with promoting the Sacasa revolution, had been permitted to leak to Mexico City prior to its delivery to Congress. In fact, it was so carefully guarded that most members of Congress were as surprised as Calles must have been.

Calles' Reply Expected
It is anticipated here that Calles will make a vigorous reply, setting up the contention that Mexico is a sovereign power, and that she has as much right to recognize Sacasa and encourage him as the United States has to recognize Diaz and encourage him. It is expected, too, that Calles will challenge the moral right of the United States to interfere with Mexican vessels in Nicaraguan waters.

If Calles stands stiffly on his prerogatives that Mexico is a sovereign power, as it is expected, he will, then an extremely delicate situation is automatically created—and one that may easily lead to an armed clash, or Admiral J. Latorre, in charge of American forces in Nicaragua, is under orders to prevent Mexican arms reaching the revolutionaries.

Meanwhile, the President's message had the effect in Congress of solidifying administrative ranks behind the Coolidge-Kellogg policy, but it failed utterly to break the strong opposition to it on the part of the Democrats and insurgent Republicans. This opposition if anything, was stronger than ever today, and it threatens to break out in a storm of no inconsiderable proportions.

Waiting For Kellogg
By common consent, opponents of the President's stand will withhold their criticism generally until after the appearance of Secretary of State Kellogg before the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations tomorrow. Thereafter, however, it is expected to break forth violently.

The Democrats generally are out of sympathy with the Coolidge policy. Moreover, some of their leaders are distinctly angry over the events of the past week.

The president invited Senator Robinson, Democrat of Arkansas, the minority leader in the Senate, and Senator J. W. Bailey, Democrat of Virginia, the ranking Democrat on the foreign relations committee, to the White House last week and explained to them the major features of the administration's policy. He asked them to prevail upon their Democratic colleagues to withhold criticism until after the appearance before the Foreign Relations Committee, Robinson and Swanson consented. Then came the message of yesterday, which was not expected. The Democrats are represented as feeling that they were misled by the action of the White House, and their choler is correspondingly strong.

Was Name of One American
The Democrats in the House, however, held themselves under no such restraint as to their utterances. Amid Democratic applause, Rep. Garrett, Democrat of Tennessee, the minority leader, caustically criticized the President's message. He demanded to know the name of one American who has been endangered in the Nicaraguan civil war.

He called particular attention to that part of the message in which President Coolidge referred to American holders of Nicaraguan bonds, and inquired sarcastically if the President considers it his duty to "protect" buyers of Central American bonds, when they know the conditions and histories of those countries.

Congress to Inquire
Tomorrow the foreign affairs committees of both Senate and House will discuss the situation and there were signs today of fireworks.

Secretary of State Kellogg is due to appear before the Senate committee to defend his acts, and the House committee likewise swang into action today by adopting a resolution to meet tomorrow for a "full discussion" of the administration's policy, together with simultaneous consideration of all the resolutions that have been introduced concerning it. Included in these are several which demand the

ROAD ON HIS LAND, SENDS TOWN BILL

Harry F. Hills Claims $200 For Strip At Love Lane, Selectmen Smile.

Harry F. Hills of Manchester Green, and a lumber dealer in Wethersfield, sent a bill for $200 to the Board of Selectmen last night he claims is due the estate of Zopher F. Hills for a strip of land now being used as highway at Love Lane.

In settling the estate of his father, Mr. Hills discovered that the town owed his father for this piece of land. Mr. Hills bases his claim on the present location of the trolley tracks and the concrete road at the foot of Twin Hills. His letter was as follows:

"Town of Manchester,
"Board of Selectmen,
"I am inclosing a bill for $200 for land at Love Lane. In Spring of 1925 (evidently meaning 1895) my father deeded to the town through efforts of M. S. Chapman, a strip of land at Love Lane, 40 ft wide for the trolley and new road you are now occupying.

"If you include from the foot of the fill south of the south trolley track to the line of poles on north of concrete road more than 60 ft, the south trolley tracks only take 5 ft, you can readily see that you are using at least 15 ft, that does not belong to the town. Yet Mr. Stevens of the state highway shows a map made by the town engineer which Mr. Stevens claims show him to be within his rights.

"Kindly send communication to me at Manchester Green so that we can adjust this matter right.
"Yours very truly,
Harry F. Hills.

The bill renders reads: "Town of Manchester, Deed to Estate of Z. F. Hills, Strip of land approximately 500 ft. long and 15 ft. wide, situated on north side of concrete road at Love Lane—$200.00."

Both Town Treasurer Waddell and Town Engineer Bowen have signed to the matter and find no basis for the Hills claim. The matter was tabled, and the Selectmen simply smiled at the bill.

FLOWER ENTHUSIASTS HEAR ABOUT GARDENS

In Absence of Scheduled Speaker Club Members Discuss Different Model Gardens.

The Manchester Garden Club held its January meeting at the School street Recreation Center last evening. The president, Miss Mary Chapman, announced that owing to illness the speaker, H. A. Beal of Rockville was unable to be present, and that the meeting would be largely given over to informal discussion and interchange of ideas.

Miss Chapman reported a New Year's gift to the club of a new book on gardening received from the speaker at the December meeting. Mrs. Mary H. Kennedy of the Oakwood Gardens, East Hartford, is entitled "1001 Garden Questions Answered" and is by Alfred Carl Hottes, professor of agriculture at the Ohio State University.

The vice president of the club, J. W. Galavin of Rockville has also contributed to the club book on violet culture. The books are to form the nucleus of a garden library which the local club hopes in time to accumulate, and will be available to members on application to the secretary, Mrs. R. K. Anderson.

Various other matters of routine business were transacted, including the appointment of a program committee as follows: Charles Murphey, James A. Irvine, Mrs. E. A. Lettney and Mrs. H. B. House.

Chief Samuel G. Gordon gave an interesting account of a visit he made early in November to the greenhouses at the Jones estate near New Bedford, Mass., which are open to visitors and well worth going a long distance to see. One of the immense greenhouses was given over to the culture of begonias and Mr. Gordon said he never before saw such magnificent specimens.

The temperature there was about 93 while in the violet greenhouse it was 33. Another house was filled with exquisite carnations. Still others contained palms, also fruit trees, such as peach, plum and apple. The bearing season was over but the interesting feature was the fan shapes in which these trees were grown.

Mrs. Clifford Cheney told of a delightful garden near the Pequot House, New London, which is open once a year to visitors, at a moderate admission which is devoted to charity. There are four divisions each in charge of a separate gardener. They include the rose garden, perennial garden, blue and white and picking gardens.

Miss Chapman called attention to the Dupont and Jennings gardens. The last named, which are situated near Bridgeport, not only raise flowers but vegetables of all kinds in great quantities. It is their custom each summer to invite a number of boys and girls from the congested districts in New York to spend a vacation there and enjoy the surroundings and the fine vegetables raised.

An interesting discussion followed on the proper pronunciation of floral terms, and it is probable one of the first books to be added to the garden library will be a volume of this kind.

The next meeting of the Garden Club will be held at the Manchester Community clubhouse, the meetings alternating for the present at both ends of the town.

would not want to live with him for long.
"That he accused her of "trying to hold him up."
"That he charged her with being a "gold-digger."
"That she was charged with trying to "ruin his career."
"That he told her marriage suited against continued success in his profession."

"That her husband did not appear in public with her more than four or five times during the first two months of their marriage.
"That she moved out of their home early in their married life upon being advised to do so by her physician.

Alleges Neglect
Mrs. Chaplin said her husband's actions worried her and her doctor recommended that she leave their home. She also recited incidents of alleged neglect, saying her husband would not visit her at Catalina or Coronado while she and her mother were there in 1926.

Chaplin's fortune is estimated in the suit at $6,000,000. His salary is said to be $250,000 a year and his income from other sources is said to bring that amount to $550,000.

Bitter Fight Over Tots
A bitter contest for custody of two Chaplin babies loomed in connection with the divorce complaint.

Chaplin, it was learned, would agree to a "reasonable" property settlement, but he wanted his children where he could see them at all times.

Mrs. Chaplin, however, immediately countered with the statement that she desired to undertake the responsibility of raising her children and that she is "fit person to do it."

Chaplin is on his way to New York today on what his attorney, Loyd Wright, described as "very important business." What its nature was Wright would not say.

Charges in Mrs. Chaplin's complaint is that Chaplin, exclaimed on the train, when the wedding party was returning from Mexico: "Well boys, this is better than the penitentiary, but it won't last long."

possibility of a general revolution. Reports from Durango indicate that there are heavy troop movements there, where bands of fanatical Indians have had some successes against the government troops.

These bands of Indians are reported to be receiving reinforcements from other tribes. According to reports received here the Indians are fighting under banners which indicate that theirs is a religious uprising.

Government forces have been in pursuit of rebels bands in Jalisco for several days and strong reinforcements have been sent to guard the International railway, which has been repeatedly under attack.

Diaz's Whereabouts a Mystery.
The whereabouts of Bishop Diaz is wrapped in mystery.

The press has been informed by a Catholic leader that he saw the bishop placed on a train, presumably for deportation.

Mexican newspapers state that the bishop has been taken to Vera Cruz.

Official statements, however, continue to state that the bishop is "at absolute liberty" and is restricted only by promise to remain within jurisdiction, awaiting the outcome of charges against him of violation of the religious regulations.

REGISTRARS SEEK SALARY INCREASE

Republican Registrar of Voters Robert N. Veitch appeared before the Board of Selectmen last night to seek an increase in salary. Mr. Veitch told the board that the work of registrar has increased greatly and his expenses had mounted considerably this past year.

A check for $350 for his year's work was paid to Registrar Veitch as well as Democratic Registrar Louis Breen just before Christmas. Mr. Veitch feels, however, that the job is worth $100 more.

Mayor Treason suggested that the Democratic registrar and the Republican registrar appear before the board together, and that an itemized expense account be offered so that the board can study the question.

was greatly increased in value when the street was cut through, offsetting any damages. Others who appeared and offered no objections were Stewart Vennart and Ralph Jones.

The fourth hearing was on the acceptance of Academy street from Holl to Parker streets. This street is at proper grade at present and no objections were offered by property owners. Those who were present to inspect the maps and voice their opinion were Carl W. Peterson, William G. Crawford, Paul J. Carter, and Charles S. Roberts.

Both Academy and Trumbull streets will be offered to the next town meeting for acceptance.

Wants New Building Line
Karl Marks, of Summer street, who owns property on the McKee street and Hartford Road corner asked that the building line there be changed so that the 10 foot line can be extended 24 more feet. He desires to build there. Cheney Brothers are the only other interested property owners and a hearing will be called on Mr. Marks's request.

Members of the Selectmen who are on the Joint school board will meet with the Ninth district committee today to study the contract which has been drawn up between the state and the town relative to the local Trade school. Various agreements regarding the rental of the building and the payment of janitors' wages must be made.

Claim Not Allowed
A claim for $11 resulting from an auto accident last November was entered by Arthur Gardner whose Ford was somewhat damaged. Others involved were Dr. John Allison and John Boland. Dense smoke from burning leaves was given as the cause of the mixup. Boland's claim had been previously disallowed and the board last night rejected that of Arthur Gardner.

Raymond A. Johnson, examiner of public records for the town, entered his report and noted certain errors. These were ordered corrected in accordance with Judge Johnson's findings.

It was noted that the board had about $8,600 of its storm water sewer appropriation left. The highway committee was instructed to bring in recommendations for new sewer work.

No Legal Rights
A legal opinion was rendered by Judge H. O. Bowers, town counsel, clarifying the storm water sewer question on the Proctor estate, recently purchased by Edward J. Holli. Judge Bowers told the town it had no legal rights through the property.

It was brought to the attention of the board that the Pine Forest Realty Company was building houses on street layouts which had not been officially approved.

The board was informed that if the development continued there as planned the back yards of some of the proposed homes would open on Adams street, an old highway of the town. A map was presented to Town Clerk Harrington by the company but that does not legally approve the layout. The company will be asked to appear before the board and ask for an approval.

Budget's Condition
Town Treasurer George H. Waddell presented the standing of the appropriations of the town budget as of December 15. This standing of appropriations will be found in full in other columns of today's Herald. Town Treasurer Waddell told the Selectmen that they were just about keeping space with the amount of money they were allowed to spend. They have done well inside the appropriation for the construction and furnishing of the new Municipal building.

The Public Safety committee recommended new lights on St. John and Bridge streets. These were voted. Upon recommendation of this committee changes were voted on Summer and Horan streets and it was voted to take over lights on Lancaster street and Wellington Road in the Hollywood tract.

Parking Prohibited
It was voted to prohibit automobile parking on the west side of Spruce street from a point just north of Blissell street to a point just south of the Nathan Hale school.

Selectman Thomas J. Rogers was named a trustee of the Police Mutual Aid Association.

troops were being sent from Manila with the naval contingent which is bringing Admiral C. S. Williams, commander of the American Asiatic fleet, who is expected to arrive here tonight.

Vice Admiral Tyrhrit of the British Asiatic squadron arrived yesterday. It is understood that he will proceed up the Yangtze.

The arrival here of vessels bringing refugees from the upper Yangtze has heightened the general alarm. Many foreign residents are preparing to leave Shanghai, and business is generally seriously affected.

The situation at Hankow appears unchanged.

From Ichang it was reported that General Yang Sen attacked two steamers bearing enemy troops, disarming them. Several passengers were wounded.

ABOUT TOWN

The Highland Park Sewing Club meeting, which was to have been held tomorrow afternoon, will be postponed until the 9th of February, which will be the annual meeting.

The millinery classes conducted by the Trade school will be discontinued after this week until about March 1. This is due to the unusual amount of sickness which has caused a decreased attendance. It is expected the classes will start about March 1 under the same instructor, Mrs. Stoেকে.

The officers of Gibbons Assembly, Catholic Ladies of Columbus, met at the home of Mrs. Cain Mahoney last evening. The books were audited and a social time enjoyed. The next regular meeting will be Friday evening in K. of C. hall and after the meeting whist will be played.

Charles L. Balch who has just returned from New York City where he attended the annual poultry show, brought home, as usual, a string of blue ribbons. Mr. Balch has been raising light Brahmans for 23 years and has exhibited his birds at the New York show for more than 30 years. At the show this year he had 8 singles and one pen. Among the winners were two birds, second and third cockerels owned by other people but sold to them by Mr. Balch.

District Deputy Nelson Smith of Elm Lodge, Knights of Pythias of East Hartford will install the officers of Memorial Lodge No. 38 K. of P. at the meeting in the Balch & Brown hall tomorrow night.

MARRIAGE LICENSES

A marriage license was issued at the Municipal building yesterday afternoon to James P. Duffy of Strickland street and Miss Freda Skoneskie of Kerry street. Duffy gave his age as 21 and his occupation as carpenter. Miss Skoneskie gave her age as 21 and her occupation as silk winder. Assistant Town Clerk Strickland issued the license and in checking with their birth certificates it was found that neither of the couple was 21. Their parents did not disapprove however, and the license was allowed.

Local friends of Allan I. Balch of Hartford, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles I. Balch of North Main street, will be pleased to learn of his promotion in the City Bank and Trust company of Hartford. Mr. Balch has been connected with this organization since before the war and has been in the banking business since leaving Trinity college. At the election of officers yesterday Mr. Balch was named as trust officer and assistant cashier. He has been acting trust officer for the past year.

A Word With the Old Folks

Elderly People Are Learning Importance of Good Elimination.
IN the later years of life there is apt to be a slowing up of the bodily functions. Good elimination, however, is just as essential to the old as to the young. Many old folks have learned the value of Doan's Pills when a stimulant diuretic to the kidneys is required. Scanty or burning passages of kidney secretions are often signs of improper kidney function. In most every community are scores of users and endorsers who acclaim the merit of Doan's. Ask your neighbor!

from 1889 to 1893. A revolt overthrew Dr. Roberto in 1893 and he was exiled to the United States, where he died.

Juan was studying medicine at Columbia when the revolt came. He returned to Leon in 1898 to enter practice. His skill and his personality made him one of the most prominent and successful physicians there and he was made a professor of anatomy at the University of Leon.

A few years later he was chosen dean of the medical school at the University of Leon and became known as one of the country's leading citizens. He mixed neither in politics nor social questions.

Nominated for President in 1924 some of his friends nominated him for president in opposition to Dr. Leonardo Arguello, Nicaraguan vice president's duties are virtually non-existent. Then Chamorro engineered his coup. On Oct. 25 Chamorro seized the all-important La Loma fortress at Nicaragua and Sacasa is said to have been offered $25,000 if he would resign as Solorzano had. He wouldn't and Chamorro sent troops to take him "dead or alive." Sacasa fled into Salvador.

There he promptly issued a manifesto of protest to all Central American republics and our State Department and this was at least partially responsible for this government's refusal to recognize Chamorro, who was forced to resign in favor of his friend Adolfo Diaz.

Exiled Meanwhile Chamorro had put some of his party men into the Congress and that body—which Sacasa says was illegitimate—exiled Sacasa for two years.

In May, Sacasa went to Guatemala, staying there until November, still asserting his claims to the presidency.

Meanwhile an army had formed the other liberal candidate, and he defeated Arguello in the primaries.

With the elections approaching, the progressive wing of the conservative party came into the liberal camp. After some negotiating Sacasa gracefully stepped aside and agreed to be content with the vice-presidency—which means much less in Nicaraguan affairs than the job of Charles G. Dawes—while Carlos Solorzano took the big plum.

The Solorzano-Sacasa ticket beat Emiliano Chamorro by two to one. The two men were inaugurated in 1925 and Sacasa went on practicing medicine and "deaning" for the on the Nicaraguan Atlantic coast under General Moncada, to represent the Liberals and return Sacasa to the presidential chair in Nicaragua.

In order to organize a government that would be constitutional Sacasa had to return to Nicaraguan soil. So he sailed to Puerto Cabezas in November with other exiled leaders and established the government.

Mrs. Sacasa, who until this time had stayed at her husband's side, remained in Guatemala. She is a famous Nicaraguan beauty of semi-blonde type and a daughter of the Arguello family.

QUARTET'S CONCERT PLEASURES OVER 200

Manchester Singers Delight Audience at Swedish Church For Organ Fund.

An appreciative audience of more than 200 listened to the concert given by the Manchester Male Quartet and Miss Beatrice Johnson, reader, in the Swedish Lutheran church last night. The affair was given under the auspices of Team 1 of the Luther league as a part of that organization's effort to raise money to pay off the debt on the church organ.

The quartet never appeared to better advantage than last night. A well balanced program was given by this purely Manchester combination and Burdette Hawley, accompanist, was in a measure responsible for the success of the concert. Mr. Hawley, who is a Hartford church organist, played a solo on the church organ.

Selections ranged from heavy classical quartet numbers and solos to the lighter music in which were included two or three Negro spirituals. Edward Taylor, tenor, and Jarle Johnson, bass, appeared in solo numbers, the latter in the ever-popular "Schubert's 'The Wanderer.'" Mr. Taylor's solos were "The Vale" by Russell and Buck's famous "Ave Maria."

Miss Beatrice Johnson's readings were especially good. She gave "The Highwayman" and two in light-vein, "Little Boy Blue" and "Over the Phone."

Arrangements for the concert were carried out by Team No. 1 which includes about 25 members of the Luther League. Miss Eva Johnson, captain of the team, was chairman of the committees.

We have been reading about child psychology today, and wonder how much time Nancy Hanks put in with a book of it.

DRIVES CAR IN TRAFFIC WITH EYES BLINDFOLDED

Rajah Rabold, Famous Mentalist, Agrees to Perform Stunt For Herald.

Rajah Rabold, famous Oriental Master Mind, who is to appear at the State theatre as the feature attraction all next week, has just been engaged by The Manchester Evening Herald to give a most unusual performance next Tuesday noon for the public of Manchester. Everybody knows how hard it is to drive a motor car in traffic at the noon hour rush and to do it with both eyes open.

Rajah Rabold, however, with his eyes sealed with many strips of adhesive tape and so bound up that not a trace of light can enter, will drive a car through traffic in the business section of South Manchester, stop for all lights and pedestrians, or other obstructions, back up, turn around, strictly obeying all traffic regulations.

How he is able to perform such a daring feat has baffled the best minds in the country. He will make stops at many of the leading stores on his daring drive, enter the store while blindfolded and publicly describe many articles of merchandise as to quality, material, price and value.

For the drive Rajah Rabold uses America's most popular and easily operated car for traffic. The car is widely known for its utter dependability and ease of operation. The name of the car is to be published in The Herald Wednesday.

Rajah Rabold, the sensational mentalist who will appear the entire week of January 17th as an added attraction extraordinary at the State theatre, will answer all questions pertaining to the past, present and future of business and domestic affairs without the aid of the inquirer asking or writing his or her question.

Watch the Herald every day for further details of the drive and stores to be visited. Don't miss the thrill of seeing this seemingly uncanny feat a week from today at noon. The starting point is to be in front of the State theatre.

MERCHANTS PLAN INDUSTRY SURVEY

To Ask Chamber Directors To Find What Plants Should Be Sought.

The annual meeting and election of officers of the Merchants' Division of the Chamber of Commerce was held at the School Street "Ree" at 6:30 Monday evening. A chicken pie supper was served by the Phone-a-pie Shop and the speaker from the National Retail Dry Goods Association held the attention of the members until 10:30 p. m.

Robert J. Dewey, chairman of the committee on nominations, presented the names of Fred T. Blish for chairman, Earl G. Seaman for treasurer and George E. Rix for clerk, and the recommendations were accepted and candidates elected.

R. K. Anderson, as chairman of the committee on advertising, reported for his committee, and it was voted to hold six regular meetings a year, one of which was to be a banquet at which both merchants and their store employees would be present.

It was voted to recommend to the directors of the chamber that a committee be appointed to investigate the possibilities of having an industry survey of Manchester made to determine what character of industry the town was best suited to go out after.

John B. Guernsey of the National Retail Dry Goods Association of New York, spoke for more than an hour of the problems of merchandising and his talk was followed by another hour of questions and discussion.

Mr. Guernsey's criticisms and recommendations were along the line of fundamentals. It is his claim that the same principles in merchandising apply in Manchester as in any other similar community, that merchandising is the means by which we supply the customer's wants, and it was his contention that merchants cannot only create a desire on the part of the public for merchandise, but they can supply wants and desires which the public themselves were unconscious of entertaining.

Some of the practical suggestions discussed were window display, including window construction and lighting effects, advertising, both newspaper and direct mail, sales organization, inventories and cost accounting, co-operative agreements among merchants for the correction of bad practices, charge accounts, a shopping bureau, etc.

He made direct recommendation that Manchester have a retail trade survey or stock taking, to determine broadly where she stood in the merchandising field in relation to Hartford, and in relation to the surrounding communities.

Mr. Guernsey told the merchants present that his association would gladly send to Manchester, men or women qualified to make such a survey or to assist the merchants in making it, and to advise them on any of the fundamental subjects which he had touched upon.

A rising vote of thanks was given to Mr. Guernsey at the conclusion of his talk and the interest of those present was attested by the fact that even the lateness of the hour did not prevent their gathering in groups for an additional half-hour discussion.

COOLIDGE'S JUSTIFICATION.

There is a very simple thesis, following which every word of President Coolidge's special message to Congress on the Nicaragua situation is justified. It is this:

The United States is the mentor of the Western Hemisphere, or at least all portions of it not sufficiently strong to resist the mentorship. It is the right of the United States to exercise a certain measure of political control on all parts of the hemisphere below the Rio Grande.

Perhaps this business will pay. Perhaps not. Our goods or anything but deadly enemies of all things American.

LONG LANE FARM. On the surface of things it would appear that the protest of the management of Long Lane Farm, Middletown, against the commitment of mentally defective girls to that institution, is well founded.

WELCHING? The $34,000,000 suit brought by the government to recover income tax from the minority stockholders in the Ford Motor Company on the profits of their sale of the stock to the Fords in 1913 is bound to attract a great deal of attention.

Cities Need Zoning GARAGES CAN'T SPRING UP NEXT TO MANSIONS—ZONING LAWS GUARD PROPERTY.

This is the second of a series of articles on the problems of American cities and what is being done to meet them.

BY DON E. MOWRY Secretary American Community Advertising Association.

CITIES, in the good old days, followed Topsy's famous formula: they "just grew."

As a result, a lot of them found themselves badly muddled and cramped after a while, and some of them lost a lot of opportunities because of their haphazard alignment.

Zoning laws, in consequence, are getting the attention of every forward-looking city.

Zoning Laws Copied. Springfield, Ill., and Madison, Wis., are two cities with widely-known zoning laws.

Here is a case in point: In a certain Connecticut city a man owned a fine old colonial residence on an elm-shaded street.

That's the sort of thing zoning prevents. It insures the value of property, keeps good neighborhoods from being spoiled by shoddy commercial ventures.

Insures Property Value. An organized fight for nation-wide zoning laws is being conducted by the National Municipal League of New York.

chester and every other settled community might be overlooking a bet in this matter. It is all a matter of economics, says the Bay State engineer-educator.

MELTING OF SNOW NOT PRACTICABLE

Too Much Radiation of Heat Makes Cost Prohibitive, Says Mass. Tech. Expert.

Some days ago The Herald sent an inquiry to Prof. William A. Bassett, head of the new Division of Municipal and Civic Research at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Cambridge, asking whether the subject of snow disposal through the application of heat had ever received serious consideration at the hands of engineers.

The following letter from Prof. Bassett is conclusively informative: The Reply Editor Manchester Herald, Manchester, Conn.:

I have your interesting letter of December 30 with reference to the practicability of employing some form of concentrated heat for snow removal purposes.

This matter has received the attention and considerable study on the part of engineers and others, and various attempts have been made to develop some practical method of accomplishing this. Some years ago in New York City, pipes were laid along the curb line over a limited section and live, high pressure steam was conveyed through these.

The use of this arrangement had some local effect in melting the snow within the gutters, but beyond a very limited zone the effect was not appreciable. More recently there has been developed a portable oil burning furnace and hopper into which snow is shoveled, the resulting water being conveyed to the nearest sewer.

This portable unit, I believe, is being used by one or two of the larger retail stores in New York for the purpose of augmenting the work of the city forces in clearing the streets in areas immediately adjacent to their respective establishments.

Another device which has a limited application for use, for example, in railroad yards for removing snow and ice from switches and interlocking, is a modification of a flame thrower which is used during the war. The hazard involved in the use of this device, however, is such as to preclude its operation on public streets.

Question of Economies The problem really resolves itself into a question of economizing the fact is that it requires a certain amount of heat to melt each cubic foot of snow, and this heat must be developed by the use of some sort of fuel or power.

The cost of developing the heat is so entirely out of proportion to effectiveness in the melting of snow as to make its use absolutely uneconomical. Perhaps the greatest obstacle to applying heat for such purposes is the tremendous opportunity for the loss of heat by radiation, which makes any such device extremely inefficient.

Meanwhile, the snow removal problem is with us and of increasing importance each year. In general it can be met, however, by suitable organization of forces and prompt attention to removal methods as soon as the storm starts.

There are on the markets today some very practical devices for keeping gutters clean, which is of the first importance in snow removal work, and this, accompanied by the use of sewers for the disposal of snow from the streets, has proven a thoroughly practical method when applied under suitable control. For larger cities there have also been developed two or three kinds of snow loaders that can be used with advantage and with economy.

In my judgment most small cities can meet the problem of snow removal by the use of plows, supplemented by some clearing of congested districts with trucks. You are quite right in thinking that problems such as snow removal are among those with which the institute contemplates dealing.

I trust that this more or less sketchy comment has cleared up the matter for you. If I can be of further service, please be sure to call on me.

Sincerely yours, Wm. A. BASSETT, Consulting Engineer. Jan. 10, 1927.

STAGE and SCREEN

What's What and When and How at the Local Playhouses.

TO GIVE AWAY HENS AT STATE

Regular Chicken Coop on Stage Tomorrow Evening—Splendid Bill Also.

The State Theater will sound like the annual poultry show tomorrow evening. The stage will be a big chicken coop and twenty live birds will be given away. Those who win the chickens will be required to take them home themselves. On the same bill with the farmyard will be two big features.

The chicken farm is another of the special attractions which Manager Jack Sanson has been giving his patrons this winter. First it was a poultry store, then a butcher shop, and now it is a real chicken coop, of the kind dear to the colored man's heart.

Plenty of clean fun will be on tap tomorrow night. An impromptu entertainment consisting of vocal and instrumental music has been arranged and everybody will have a good time. Several old Manchester favorites in the entertaining line have been secured for the occasion.

The ever-popular Colleen Moore will be seen for the last time tonight in her latest offering, "Twinkletoes," a story of the Limehouse district, London's Bowery. The First National star is more piquant than ever in her blonde wig and the part she plays gives her opportunity to appear at her best.

In "Twinkletoes" Colleen is a winsome dancer, the daughter of a loveable ne'er do well, Tully Marshall, as her father, has an opportunity to show some good acting and he is at his best in the role.

Gladys Brockwell, an old favorite, shows up well as the drunken wife of the fighter, Kenneth Harlan. Her part calls for a bit of nice acting, especially in the scenes where she shows up at Twinkletoes' door under the influence of a quart of gin.

She is realistic and plays her part as well as any other in the supporting cast. The leading woman, who never fails to please, has done some of her best work in this vehicle. Colleen Moore has adaptability and can live her part whether she is a girl from the slums. It is in the latter role that she appears in this picture and her performance is better here than in any other she has been starred in so far.

PAULINE FREDERICK AT RIALTO THEATER

Pauline Frederick has the stellar role in "Devil's Island" which heads a double feature program at the Rialto theatre today and tomorrow. The story concerns the struggle of Jeanette, wife of a convict on "Devil's Island", a French penal colony, to win freedom and fame for the boy of hers who is born to live and die a prisoner on the pestilence isle.

The dauntless courage of the mother in the face of apparently unsurmountable obstacles is a revelation of mother-love that finds its outlet in a manner new to the screen. Historically "Devil's Island" presents an accurate and interesting picture of the little known French convict isle, that has been before the public eye since the sensational conviction of Captain Dreyfuss more than a generation ago.

It tells in a graphic manner a story so pregnant with drama that one cannot afford to miss it no matter what his or her preference may be in regard to screen entertainment. George Lewis as a sure blue chaser as well as new events will also be shown.

The Past Matron's association of Temple Chapter, Order of the Eastern Star, will hold its regular meeting Thursday afternoon at 2:30 at the home of Mrs. Julia B. Hutt of Hackmatack street. It is important that every member be present.

PAZ OINTMENT is Applied, because it is Positive in Action. It begins immediately to take out the inflammation and reduce all Swelling. The first application brings Great Relief.

QUEER QUIRKS OF NATURE

"LOVE HAND SAUNDERS" AT CIRCLE GREAT FILM

Fred Thomson With Silver King Pleases Many at Oak Street Playhouse—Ends Run Tomorrow.

Fred Thomson, the great Western actor and his wonder-horse, Silver King continue their engagement in "Love Hand Saunders" at the Circle theatre tonight and tomorrow. The picture is one of FBO's newest releases and is considered among the best that will be shown this year.

For real action, hard riding, clever shooting, with a gripping love story and plenty of heart interest, "Love Hand Saunders" cannot be beaten. Thomson is cast in one of those roles that only he can do justice to. His intelligent horse also plays a stellar part and is one of the important individuals in the wide open spaces away from the city and its poignant memories.

When this has been made sufficiently high and thick and wide, and sharp, a bit of thorny cactus is dropped on top of the snake, which upon suddenly awakening, and tortured with pain thrashes around, becomes entangled with the dreadful spines, and soon becomes the prey of the wily bird.

Acclaimed the greatest Western actor of the day, Thomson is given every opportunity of showing his versatility and skill. He is cast in the role of a disillusioned surgeon who has fled to the wide open spaces away from the city and its poignant memories. He has made a vow never to use his right hand again because his only sister died a few hours before he was to have operated on her.

A man of mystery, this owner of the "Bar Nothing" ranch, whose past is shrouded in wild tales which circulate around the campfire. Two rascally cowboys decide to take advantage of Saunders' peculiarity and the latter finds himself charged with highway robbery and murder, the deeds having been committed by a man who kept his right hand in his pocket.

An excellent supporting cast features the child actor, Billy Butts, and beautiful Bess Flowers, the latter appearing as Alice Mills, matron of the orphanage where the crippled boy has been placed. Miss Flowers is a worthy co-star to Thomson and in this picture she takes well the part of the girl who is in love with the tactful ranch-owner and who finally wins him in the end. Billy Butts is the crippled boy.

"Love Hand Saunders" will be shown tonight and tomorrow at the Circle. On the same bill will be a comedy and several specialties.

Acid Stomach

"Phillips Milk of Magnesia" Better than Soda

Here after, instead of soda take a little "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" in water any time for indigestion or sour, acid, gassy stomach, and relief will come instantly.

For fifty years genuine "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" has been prescribed by physicians because it overcomes three times as much acid in the stomach as a saturated solution of bicarbonate of soda, leaving the stomach sweet and free from all gases.

It neutralizes acid fermentations in the bowels and gently urges the souring waste from the system without purging. Besides, it is more pleasant to take than soda. Insist upon "Phillips".

Twenty-five cent and fifty cent bottles, any drugstore. "Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. Registered Trade Mark of The Charles I. Phillips Chemical Co. and its predecessor Charles H. Phillips since 1875.

Windsor Locks Noses Out Victory in Second Half—Scoring Honors Even.

Several things tended to hold the C. B. A. A. team in check last night in its game with Windsor Locks with the result that the home team nosed out a nip-and-tuck verdict by the score of 27 to 23. The first half of the score, 15 to 9 in favor of the river team did not indicate the type of game it was for both teams went at top speed.

The three forward men on the Cheney team, Faulkner, Boyle and Pentland, evidently were playing for averages as their box scores show that each had scored two field goals and two fouls for six points. On the Windsor Locks team Dowd and Snelgrove did most of the scoring. Waterman, former Dixie star, played with the Advertisers, but went out on personal fouls during the first half game. Referee Johnson of Springfield called a total of 13 personal and 26 technical fouls on the local team. This slowed up Manager Hunt's charges and had them at a disadvantage all through the game. Tonight the Cheneys will play Taftville.

THE ROMANCE OF AMERICA: Kit Carson (2)

Reaching Santa Fe, New Mexico, Carson left his party and started back. Meeting another band of traders, he joined them as a guide for the journey to Santa Fe. He spent the winter of 1826-27 with a retired mountaineer from whom he learned Spanish. Soon after he joined an expedition to the Taos copper mines, serving as teamster.

At Taos a party of trappers had been beaten off their grounds by the Indians. Carson joined a party of 40 men to chastise the Indians.

The trappers defeated the Indians, killing 15 braves. Carson spent the winter trapping along the streams of the Taos country.

Nomads brought stories of the California rivers "black with beaver" and Carson joined a party proceeding westward. He found California an Eden of gardens and vineyards, with thousands of Indians working in the fields of the missions of San Gabriel and San Fernando. But, restless, he pushed on, up the San Joaquin valley. (Continued.)

CONGRESS REPUBLICANS BACK COOLIDGE MOVE

 Immediate withdrawal of American marines from Nicaragua. Regrets Root and Hughes. Congressional attacks on the Coolidge-Kellogg Mexican and Nicaraguan policies flared up again today. Representative Huddleston, Democrat of Alabama, declared that the President's message yesterday was "a deliberate affront to Mexico."
 "This message confirms the charge I made that the administration is deliberately and consciously bound upon war with Mexico," said Huddleston.
 He called Secretary of State Kellogg "a bull in a diplomatic China shop."
 Huddleston said he felt sorry for Mr. Coolidge because he had "not a Root or a Hughes, or even a Knox, to lean on."
 "They might have said the same thing, but they would have done it more tactfully," he declared.
 Whole Coast "Neutral"
 Bluefields, Nicaragua, Jan. 11.—The entire Atlantic coast of Nicaragua has now been declared a neutral zone by Admiral Latimer, U. S. N. in command of the American fleet here.
 Two hundred United States Marines were landed from the Transport Argonne today and occupied Rama and took positions along the mouth of the Escondido River, and at Pinza Polca, all of which were declared to be neutral zones.
 Denties Plea for Peace
 Puerto Cabezas, Nic., Jan. 11.—The president of Costa Rica is attempting mediation of the Nicaraguan difficulties and pending the outcome of his negotiations. The Liberals will consider no other proposals, Dr. Juan Sacasa, leader of the Liberals, declared today in an exclusive statement.
 Dr. Sacasa stated that while the in response to an inquiry concerning reports that were circulated in the United States that the Liberals had sued for peace and that negotiations were already in progress with Admiral Latimer, U. S. N., acting as mediator.
 Dr. Sacasa stated that while the Liberal party has never refused honorable efforts to re-establish peace, the only negotiations for settlement which it now recognizes are those being directed by the President of Costa Rica.
 "I am pleased at the interest the American people are displaying regarding the Nicaraguan problem," Dr. Sacasa said in his statement.
 Nicaraguan Killed
 Bluefields, Nic., Jan. 11.—The first death of a Nicaraguan, caused by American forces, was reported today. A native youth was accidentally killed by a guard from the U. S. S. Denver. An inquiry is in progress. The supply transport Argonne has arrived here with 400 men. Rumors are current here of an impending battle between the Dis-

Olsen Says Dribble Opens Up The Play

BY G. H. OLSEN, Ohio State Coach. The dribble in basketball is perhaps comparable to the forward pass in football in that it is a feature of the game which opens up the play, a valuable offensive weapon, and a spectacular and thrilling phase of the game.

Properly used, the dribble may be very effective. When used too much, it may prove to be a "hoop-stra" and have a very detrimental effect on team play.

In general, long winding dribbles in defensive territory are not advisable, while the short, fast dribble which carries the dribbler into the basket for a short shot is very valuable.

When dribbling, the player should have his body well under control. The ball should be kept well out ahead of the dribbler, so as to avoid running over the ball, kicking it, etc.

On the other hand, the dribbler must guard against the ball getting away from him because it is too far ahead. To find the happy medium requires good co-ordination and careful persistent practice.

The shoulder should be held pretty much in place, the dribble being made with the forearm primarily. The flexible use of the forearm and wrist gives the velvet touch, which is so important in dribbling, as opposed to the hard, pounding dribble which results when players use the stiff arm method, with the motion mostly in the shoulder, raising the shoulder up and down each time the ball is tapped.

The ball, during the course of the dribble, must, above all, be kept under control; and the big factor in this matter is keeping the ball low, not pounding it to the floor, with the high bounce resulting, but rather tapping it lightly so that the ball never bounces higher than waist high.

If the ball is handled in this way, the dribble kept low, the result is more hand contact during the course of the dribble.

Since the dribbler can control the ball only when the hand is in contact with the ball, it is very apparent that the more times his hand comes in contact with the ball during the course of a dribble, the better he is able to control it and the less the chance of interception by the opposition.

Constant practice results in less and less close attention being necessary to control the ball, leaving the dribbler free to devote more of his attention to avoiding opponents.

Note that in the illustration, the ball is at its topmost point, which, in this case, is perhaps less than waist height.

Keeping Tabs On Fisticuffs. Latest Wire Results. Last Night's Fights. At New York—Sergeant Sammy Baker of Mitchell Field knocked out Henry Goldberg of New York in the third round.

At Rochester—Louis (Kid) Kaplan, retired featherweight champion, knocked out Paris Cagnoy of Newcastle, Pa., in the fourth round. At Philadelphia—Tommy Loughran of Philadelphia won decision over Tony Marullo of New Orleans, ten rounds. At Toronto—Tommy Mitchell of Toronto lost Canadian lightweight championship by technical knockout to Cliff Graham when unable to answer the bell for the ninth round, due to a broken jaw.

Northwestern Grid Star Also Shines in Basketball

Football and basketball have much in common as far as Waldo Fisher, star end of Northwestern's champion eleven, is concerned. He is the outstanding member of the cage squad at the Evanston institution and is certain to again shine at center or forward for the Purple. Two other members of last year's squad expected to make the team are Bobby Busch, forward, and Foster, guard.

BENNIE SCHUBERT AND CHAMBERS COP SETBACK TOURNEY

Second Mill Tournament Ended; Another Starts Thursday Night.

Play will start Thursday night in the third setback tournament which Chensy Brothers Athletic Association is sponsoring. It will begin at 7:30 in the school street Rec auditorium.

The second tournament which was concluded last week was won by Schubert and Chambers. Wiganowski and Loams were next. Frey, Gardner, Farr and Olson were the winners of the consolation tournament.

Scoreboard for the second tournament. Columns include names and scores. Total score: 787.

When a manager wins a pennant and follows it with a world series, he is regarded as having clinched his job for a couple of years at least. Instead, we have Rogers Hornsby, manager of the St. Louis Cardinals, traded to the New York Giants for 1927. It is a case without parallel in baseball.

In the American League, we have Tris Speaker, manager of the Cleveland club that forced the Yankees to admit, not only deposed as manager but involved in an alleged betting scandal.

Then there is Ty Cobb, greatest player of all time, in exactly the same boat as Speaker.

What Will Fans Do? All of which gives rise to the query, what will be the attitude of the fans toward these men starting changes when the bell rings? It all depends upon what the successors of the deposed men are able to do. Fandom will be guided by the success or failure of the new leaders.

Eagerly Await Fans' Attitude Following Baseball Showdown

Evans Intimates Attendance Receipts Next Season Will Tell Story in Nutshell.

Many unusual things have happened in the world of baseball during the past year and, strangely enough, most of them after the close of the season.

When a manager wins a pennant and follows it with a world series, he is regarded as having clinched his job for a couple of years at least.

Instead, we have Rogers Hornsby, manager of the St. Louis Cardinals, traded to the New York Giants for 1927. It is a case without parallel in baseball.

In the American League, we have Tris Speaker, manager of the Cleveland club that forced the Yankees to admit, not only deposed as manager but involved in an alleged betting scandal.

To thousands of sports lovers throughout the country, baseball is still and always will be the greatest game of all.

After being established for more than half a century, it will take far more than the fan's of a few individuals to destroy so great a sport. The fans at times may be suspicious of certain individuals, but not of the sport as a whole.

It doesn't take much to make the baseball fans forget the unpleasant things and enthusiasm over the worthwhile.

It was Babe Ruth who put baseball on a firm footing again after the scandal of 1919. While the White Sox scandal was still being discussed, Ruth was traded by Boston to New York.

Playing as a regular for the Yankees, Ruth began to startle fans with his ability to hit the ball farther than any other human being ever did. He literally knocked the 1919 expose over the fence, out of baseball.

Babe Does His Stuff. In his first season in New York, he broke the major league record for home runs that had stood since 1884. The fans could talk of nothing but Ruth; the scandal was soon shelved and forgotten.

HORNSBY, MCGRAW BOTH PLAY HORSES

Walsh Thinks There's Danger Ahead—Rogers Is Usually His Own Boss.

By DAVIS J. WALSH, I. N. S. Sports Editor. New York, Jan. 11.—If you give me a second guess on the thing that I say that John McGraw was smart like dumb water when he signed Rogers Hornsby on a two-year basis to the alleged amount of eighty thousand dollars and thereupon invited the young man to be his guest this winter at Miami and Havana. The proposal is tantamount to waving a mop at a scrubman.

World Bet on Anything. Hornsby's trouble, if any, is that he will bet you the status of Liberty is really a wooden Indian, provided you make the odds right. As I understand it, the master, he simply bet his way out of St. Louis.

Of course, a contributing cause was Sam Bredon's distaste for conversing in round numbers with any of his employees but they say that if Hornsby hadn't been so crazy over horses, horses, horses last season, Bredon would have been more inclined to take the hap of the strong box.

Anyhow, the story is that Bredon was looking about for another manager even while the Cardinals were riding home from their World Series victory. This unique decision having been reached simultaneously with the conclusion that Hornsby was a success in managing other men but a failure in managing himself.

Poor Judgment. Therefore, McGraw's invitation to see the world with him through a halter at the winter tracks does not seem to be the height of sound judgment. He hardly can ask Hornsby to do what he doesn't do himself and yet the time may not be too far distant when McGraw will be forced to make that request for the benefit of Hornsby's ball playing.

As a matter of fact, two men of the Hornsby-McGraw type do not figure to pull too well together, anyhow, neither is at all negative in character nor are they tolerant of the views of others.

McGraw is a martinet of the diamond, demanding absolute obedience at all times. It is to be hoped he gets it when he tells Hornsby to do something that fails to meet with the latter's approval. It seems that this young man stopped playing follow-the-leader in early childhood.

The more I think of this situation, being carried through two years, the less I think of New York's end of the receipt deal.

11 PLAYERS MOVE IN MCGRAW DEAL

Four Clubs Participate in Shuffle—Quartet of N. L. Stars Involved.

New York, Jan. 11.—Four national league stars—Eugene Grimes, Walter Henline, George Harper and Jack Scott—will swap in new pastures next season as the result of a deal engineered by John McGraw, manager of the New York Giants.

The deal involves eleven players and four clubs, the Giants, the Philadelphia Nationals, the Brooklyn Dodgers and the Buffalo Club of the International League.

The Giants get G. M., a pitcher, from Brooklyn, and Harper, an outfielder, from the Phillies.

Brooklyn gets Henline, a catcher, from the Phillies. In addition the Giants will send a pitcher and outfielder to Buffalo on option, while Brooklyn will send a pitcher to Buffalo on option.

Critics today expressed the belief that the trade, which has been hanging fire for months, would prove beneficial to all four clubs involved.

Further trades were in the offing today. It was reported that the Boston Braves would trade Pitcher Larry Benton for Bill Terry, first baseman of the Giants.

Because of the illness of Ross Young, outfielder, McGraw has made an offer to Zach Wheat, outfielder released by Brooklyn. McGraw expects to hear from Wheat today before he leaves for Havana on a vacation trip.

W. L. G. A. SENIOR LEAGUE. Last night's games in the C. B. A. A. bowling league furnished no changes in the league standing. The fastest mile was run by Mary D., a three-year-old, at Lincoln Field, Chicago. The stop watches all caught her at 1:38 flat, which is some galloping.

Esposito, with 124 pounds up, ran the fastest 1/4 mile when he copied the Lawrence Realization in 2/42 seconds.

Helen's Babe steamed over the fastest 1 1/2 miles in 1:45 seconds.

Willie Hoppe, who is not quite 40, is the oldest of the balking stars. Edouard Horemans, the Belgian, is 38; Young Jake Schaefer, 31; Roger Conti, 25; and Walker Cochran in his middle twenties.

Jack Lapp, Dead Seven Years, Summoned by Judge Landis

Philadelphia, Jan. 10.—When Judge Landis, commissioner of baseball, summoned Jack Lapp to appear before him in the present baseball scandal, he definitely qualified as a sport expert. He died at his home Feb. 20, 1920.

The error made by the eminent judge in summoning a man to appear before him who has been dead nearly seven years is in keeping with a mistake once made by the late Walter Camp in picking his All-America eleven.

Through some error in his gridiron data, Camp named a player who had been out of college for two years as an athlete worthy of honorable mention.

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

To the home of PROF and MOLLE ELWELL in Cambridge, Ind., one night in October, 1926, is brought a woman who had fallen on a train. That night two girls are born to her and she dies without revealing her name.

The story then moves forward its years. The twins, now growing to beautiful womanhood, have been adopted and named MARGARET and ELIZABETH. They are called RUSTY and BETTY.

JIM ELWELL, the son, enlists in the World War. He then discovers that one of the twins loves him.

He is shell-shocked at the battle of Sedan and at first is reported dead. Later he is identified in a New York hospital and his mother and father hasten to him to find his memory and speech gone.

Specialists despair of his recovery. The day before his parents are to take him home, Jim wanders away from his nurse, NELLIE DOWLING.

A frantic search is begun. Late that night he is found in Bellevue hospital, unconscious, his skull fractured, expected to die. He was hit by a truck.

The twins are in Indianapolis at the home of their uncle, JOHN CLAYTON, the mystery of their identity having been cleared up while Jim was in France. They make preparations for his homecoming, not knowing of the accident, but when the train pulls in the Elwells are not aboard.

NOW BEGIN THE STORY

CHAPTER XXXVII

"Why, they didn't come!"

Both Rusty and Betty uttered the dismal cry in the same words. Nobody questioned or supplemented their statement.

"What could have happened?" Again they spoke in concert and no one answered. The crowd began to disintegrate and the band silently packed its pieces and shuffled off.

Harvey Weir arose and found himself a pleasant spot to sit in the park. To have gone out and got so expensively illuminated for an occasion that failed to materialize was something of a disappointment to Harvey. He had wasted something.

Martha Dalton allowed her way up to the two girls.

"Something must have happened," it seemed the obvious thing to say, so she said it. There was very little else to say.

The girls nodded their heads. Words had failed them for the moment.

The old nurse slipped an arm around the waist of each of them and escorted them back to the Elwell cottage. Once inside and away from the sympathetic looks of their fellow acquaintances the two girls vented to their disappointment according to the prescribed form. They cried.

Martha Dalton began probing among the multitude of possibilities for the most likely one.

"They might have missed their connection in Chicago; they might have missed their train in New York; they might have— or else they didn't start. Why, a hundred and one things might have happened."

"Yes," Betty said miserably, "a hundred and one things— a thousand and one things. Among them is the possibility that something has happened to Jim."

"Oh, nurse," cried Margaret, "do you suppose you think—"

"Now, to quit your dear anything might have happened, of course, but don't you suppose they'd have telegraphed if it had been something serious? They knew you'd be here expecting them on the seven o'clock train."

Margaret twisted her fingers nervously and sighed and Betty sighed with her.

She cried out in agony of spirit and crumpled slowly to the floor.

"That's it, I'm afraid, Dally dear," said Margaret with an odd little smile that was wanly pathetic. "We have no reason for thinking that Mollie and Prof really expected us to be here to meet them. In her letter, written more than a week ago, she just named the day they would leave New York and the train they would arrive home on."

Mollie, she added, hadn't asked them to meet the train—hadn't even suggested it. "We waited for her to write again but she didn't, so yesterday we decided— of rather, Uncle John told us—that is, he—"

Rusty had fondered around until she had finally got into a crowd current. She was between the devil and the deep blue sea. She must either lie now, back up or go ahead.

Like the game little girl she was she went ahead and told their old friend the truth as it had been pointed out to them by their uncle. The truth was the more difficult to tell for the very fact that neither Betty nor she had realized it was the truth until Uncle John had shown them.

"And he didn't think we should wait for Mollie to suggest it. He thought we should have seen instantly that Mollie felt delicately about the situation. I'm afraid Mollie will think we've neglected her terribly. So you see, Dally dear," she went on finally, bravely trying to keep from crying again, "that probably is the reason why, as dear old Jim would have put it, we're up a tree now."

"Well, the thing for us to do," declared Martha Dalton with her customary promptness in reaching decisions, "is to telegraph them at the States Island hospital. If something happened to Jim or either of them to make them change their plans, the hospital people probably will know about it."

Dalton went with them. Grief and suspense now gripped the hearts of them and for days the home of John Clayton lay under a pall of dread.

Twenty-four hours after they had received the first telegram they got another one, signed by Nellie Dowling. This stated that Jim was still alive, though unconscious, and informed them of Mollie's danger of brain fever. Prof, the telegram said, was keeping up through sheer force of will power.

Two days after Mollie Elwell had collapsed at her son's bedside and while Prof was sitting beside her, his eyes fixed anxiously on her pale, drawn face, a nurse lifted into the room and said she had something to tell her.

She lifted up a warning finger. "Now, be quiet. No noise, please, on account of her," and she indicated the bed where Mollie Elwell lay.

Prof stared at her out of tired eyes and nodded. His face was fixed and haggard, through sleeplessness and worry. He had not shaved for two days.

The nurse said, "Your son has regained consciousness."

Prof slowly got to his feet. "You mean," he began eagerly, "you mean he will live?"

"That I can't say. It is something that he is conscious once more."

Prof looked at his sleeping wife, and then at the nurse. "I want her to know as soon as she wakes," he said. "Meanwhile, please send for Dr. Lawson at once. He left instructions, you know, to be notified in case of a new development."

The nurse tipped out. Prof followed her.

Late that afternoon Dr. Lawson went into Mollie Elwell's room and told her the news.

"Your son," he said, "has more than a high chance of living. Now, be a good lady and let's see how fast you can get well, so we can take you to see him."

Mollie's face was puffed to see. It worked convulsively for a while and then two large tears began to course down from her eyes.

"Can't I see my boy now?"

But Dr. Lawson was adamant. "No. Not until you prove to me that you'll behave yourself. We can't risk any setbacks for him now. He's too nearly all in for that."

But when the doctor left a new hope was shining in the eyes of Mollie Elwell and Prof came in to find her cheerful and eager.

"I'm going," she said to him, "to get well real soon now."

Jim, Prof told her, was going to live. "He's sleeping soundly now and Dr. Lawson is watching him."

"We'll never be able to thank Dr. Lawson enough, Prof."

Shortly afterward, Prof sent another telegram to the girls and John Clayton. "This carried the information that Jim had regained consciousness and had a chance to pull through. He was, however, in the same condition mentally as previous to the accident, as he had not talked."

Mollie was recovering rapidly, thanks to the promise held out to her of Jim's life being spared. Prof was beginning to hope again himself.

"Never is my life," remarked John Clayton in talk with Martha Dalton that day, "have I ever known of two persons being subjected to a greater strain on their nerves and minds than Prof and Mollie have undergone in the last year. There are few things in my opinion, which would come through such a scourging and retain their belief in the mercy and justice of a supreme power, as I'm sure both of them have."

Martha Dalton opened her lips to speak and the twins bounced into the room and interrupted her.

(To Be Continued)

In the next chapter the twins develop a jealousy of Nellie Dowling.

The WOMAN'S DAY

by Allene Sumner

Fairy Tale Vell!

A certain young lady was recently married in a $50,000 lace wedding veil and her twelve bridesmaids wore pretty dresses which cost, respectively, a few dozen thousand. We hope that the happy bridegroom will be able to continue to support his bride in the style to which she has been accustomed.

Which means that we don't hope any such thing, but quite the reverse. Funny, but nothing to rile "us girls" who must go forth in the cold gray dawn to labor for the wherewithal for a $29.50 marked-down dress as the tale of a lovely young thing handed by her papa or rich uncle a more-little bauble costing several million.

Wear Red Hat

Speaking of "us girls" who labor for our hire, comes along a certain lady secretary of Amalgamated Doughnut Holes, Inc., or something or other, to give business women advice. First for all, sex she, we are not liked. We are merely tolerated by our male colleagues and must work to make 'em like us, force 'em into it, as it were. And she says the best way to do it is to be very feminine, wear fluffy-ruffy clothes, be sweet and remind them that though we are just a Tillie the Toller, we're good women at heart, bless us. She thinks red dresses are swell for inspiring this toleration in the male bosom. She scorns the old rule of "tailored, sensible clothes," and "dark blue suits and low-heeled shoes and high collars."

She says when you have a hard job to pull, wear a red, washbuckling, knock-em-for-a-loop dress. You will feel confident and be fit! Well, it makes a good story, and like most things that sound so foolish, is largely true—only, well, just only—!

Six Fair Pallbearers

Here's romance for you to the bitter end! Isaac Smith of the ripe old age of 78, expects to die some day, and he was a small he can be proud of. So Isaac has asked six old sweethearts to act as his pallbearers. The dispatch doesn't say, but we are sure they will sing "When You and I Were Young, Maggie," and "Silver Threads Among the Gold." And how the six will sing at one another, each one believing she was the first and only one!

The "Forgotten Women"

There are half a million "forgotten women," mothers of families, mixed in illiteracy and ignorance, according to federal statistics on illiteracy. Ellen Glasgow, the novelist, says in one of her novels—"A woman and a dog are about the only creatures as would put up with this life, and they're the biggest pair of fools the Lord ever made."

Time was when practically all women slaved from morning to night for their families and never questioned the why or nor whither.

Mencken broke into the rhapsody: "My God, why don't you marry the girl!"

"But I haven't saved a cent," said Pollock.

"Humph!" said that acid critic. Then he blew off the foam and retreated into his shell.

"All right," cried Pollock, resentfully, "I'll marry her."

He sent a wire to Miss Marbie in Toronto that night. Her answer came back, "Here am I, waiting at the church."

He took the first train for Toronto. The friends whom she had been visiting arranged the wedding.

And when he said he had no money left, they assured him that the hotel which served the wedding breakfast would cash his check.

It did, and that was lovely, except that young Pollock started off on his honeymoon up the St. Lawrence expecting the officers of the law to seize him at any stopping place. For the check was bad.

Finally, when he had stood his uneasiness as long as possible, he telegraphed the Schuberts, for whom he worked, beseeching them to deposit money to cover the check. They nobly responded and the married life of Channing and Anna was launched.

When they returned to New York both kept their jobs, and Pollock wrote plays on the side. They longed for a house on the sea and leisure. But they might as well have cried for the moon.

Though they were having hard work to make ends meet, Pollock decided that he could not be both press agent and playwright. So he gave up the job and threw all his energies into writing.

Among the plays of this period were "Clothes," "Such a Little Queen" and "The Traitor."

When his first musical comedy, "The Red Widow," succeeded in 1911, the Pollocks took the money and went to Europe for a year.

Coming back to America, he was soon to win a career of successful, skillfully-built plays.

Perhaps the most sensationally popular of his plays was "The Sign on the Door," a mystery play which was played in nearly every country in the world.

"The Fool" in 1921 created a sensation, by its ideal of a church that would "preach Christ instead of Christianity," "The Enemy," one of last season's successes, pleads for world peace.

To Winter in Egypt

The house by the sea came true some years ago. It is a seaside cottage looking over a white, sunny beach at Shoreham, Long Island.

Here Channing Pollock writes and reads and smokes and swims through the summer months, and Mrs. Pollock, her strenuous newspaper life far in the distance, completes her rare collections of preserves and pickles.

"We don't want any more fame," they say, "or any more public life. The penalties of success are loss of privacy and loss of leisure."

Henceforth they plan to spend seven months of the year at the Shoreham cottage and the rest of the time in Egypt.

WHEN H. L. MENCKEN PLAYED CUPID

Channing Pollock Spent Honeymoon Feasting "Gig" Finance.

BY VIRGINIA SWAIN

New York—Once in his life, at least, H. L. Mencken played the sentimental role of Cupid.

He it was who, sans wings, sans arrows and sans cherubic figure, promoted the wedding of Channing Pollock and Anna Marbie.

For four years, Pollock and Miss Marbie had been waiting to get married, handicapped by their small press agents' salaries, and the number of their dependent relatives.

Mencken was Pollock's confidant. He might have gone on forever patiently listening to the young man's lyric admiration, had not Pollock laid it out on a bit thickly one August night in 1926. The two of them were leaning on the bar of the old Harlem Pabst.

"Humph," said Mencken. Mencken broke into the rhapsody: "My God, why don't you marry the girl!"

"But I haven't saved a cent," said Pollock.

"Humph!" said that acid critic. Then he blew off the foam and retreated into his shell.

Good Nature and Good Health

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEN

Editor Journal of the American Medical Association and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

Among gas heaters sold on the open market, many are inadequate for the purpose for which they are sold. In other words, the gas is not completely burned and proper means are not provided for taking care of the incomplete combustion.

As a result every winter hundreds of persons in the United States die from suffocation in rooms that are heated by imperfect gas heaters. The imperfect combustion results either from a lack of air to the flame or by cooling the flame through letting it play on a cold surface.

Artificial coal gas requires about five times as much air as ordinary illuminating gas for perfect combustion. Even natural gas requires twice as much air.

For this reason a burner sold for artificial gas will not do for use with natural gas. The only means of safety with such heaters is a flue which will carry off the fumes of incomplete combustion.

The suffocating gas in these cases is the same as occur in the exhaust pipe of gasoline motors—deadly carbon monoxide. Death may be almost instantaneous if the dose is large.

If one has spent years of training for a special work, and then he is forced by some capricious fling of misfortune to earn a living in a manner a hundred times removed from that special preparation, it is a mistake to think those years wasted.

Half the value of any training is not in the knowledge gained, but in the systematized, high-powered brain made alert and responsive to study.

I talked today with a business man who lamented that his son who had been trained for medicine had turned out to be a boiler salesman. I suppose I looked puzzled, for no matter how I stretched my imagination I could not see how any three-quarter fledgling medical student could be put into one end of the sausage machine of worldly affairs and come out a boiler salesman at the other.

The father explained that it was the war. That accounted for it—guns, tanks, airplanes, boilers! An easy transition, quite understandable.

"I'd spent several thousand dollars making a doctor out of him; the young fellow," said the disappointed parent, "and it all went for nothing. I looked puzzled, for no matter how I stretched my imagination I could not see how any three-quarter fledgling medical student could be put into one end of the sausage machine of worldly affairs and come out a boiler salesman at the other."

As soon as you have taken the time to get a doctor out of him, you got as badly as an Arkansas mule, though, after the war and we couldn't do a thing with him.

(Read the Story, Then Color the Picture)

The fur-clad man and Clowny sat and had a very friendly chat. So let's find out where all the other Tines are by now. They found the man, up in his shack, who loaned them skates. They gave them back, and, in return he asked them if they'd kindly use his plough. "You see," he said, "the snow is deep. Ah, much too deep for me to sweep, so will you kindly clear a space around the house for me?" "You bet we will!" wee Scouty said and then they all went right ahead. The old man laughed to see the Tines busy as could be. The interest that they took was seen and pretty soon the space was clean. Of course the job was pretty hard and not at all like play. So when the old man said, "Let's eat. I'll pay you with a lovely treat." and all the Tines filled up, ere they started on their way. Then, as they looked up at the skies, the Tines shouted shrill good-byes. It seemed that snow was soon to fall, and they must hurry back to where they'd left their little friend—wee Clowny at the long trail's end. So down went all the Tines, through a winding snowy track. In 'bout an hour a voice broke out. 'Twas Clowny whom they all heard shout. "Come on you little Tines, I have found a friend worth while." The man in fur beamed at the bunch and said, "I have a happy bunch. I'll let you see my dogs and sled." This made the Tines smile. The man continued, "I am through with these two dogs and sled, so you can all hop on and drive away. I'll walk back to my home." They thanked the man with all their might, and as he disappeared from sight, wee Copy said, "Oh, gee, what fun, for now we all can roam."

(The Tynmites start off on a trip in the next story.)

Contest Just Closed Discloses Over 4,000 Customers of Institution.

Elsewhere in the advertisement today of The Home Bank and Trust company is the result of the "learn about your bank" contest which this bank has been conducting in connection with its Christmas club and upon which plan it has received many congratulations from both bankers and advertising men all over the state.

It is very doubtful that anyone outside of the official family of the Home Bank and Trust company has the remotest conception of the progress this institution has made or its importance in the every-day life of this community.

Many of the answers filed by men and women who might be expected to have a fair idea of the business this bank does indicate to what extent its service, its number of active accounts, its assets and such have been under-estimated.

For example, the Home Bank and Trust company has 4,023 customers. Newspaper and magazine statisticians base their circulation figures upon the assumption that there are five to every family.

Lewis H. Sipe, treasurer of the Home Bank and Trust company, and originator of the universally approved plan to increase the Christmas club and at the same time pay the bank's customers for learning about the institution, in commenting upon the success of the Home Bank and Trust company, said:

"The fact that we have been able to establish banking relationships with more than 4,000 people in this community speaks worlds for the circulation of the drawing power of The Herald. From the first, that has been our medium and while some of our directors have at times questioned the advisability of continuing to increase our advertising budget the results more than justify the expenditure and certainly prove to us that in using 'Herald space in The Herald we made no mistake."
