

EVERYDAY LIFE, TRUE RELIGION, SAID BUSHNELL

Build Up Extremes of Types to Higher Plane, Basis of Theory, Howell Cheney Says in Lecture.

Take both extremes in religious thought. Build them up to a higher plane. Do not build up religion from a word or group of words. Some one else will build up another structure on the same word or group and tumble down your house of cards. There was a lot of good in emotional religion. There was a lot of good in the stern, simple brand of religion.

Modern thought in religion means to build up a mode of living out of your own religious experiences. Horace Bushnell, leader of so-called liberals and at one time threatened with being tried on a charge of heresy, was more orthodox than any of his critics. These critics when once they started, began tearing each other to pieces and forgot entirely that they planned to attack Bushnell.

Don't force yourself to overcome doubt. Hang your doubt on a peg for a while. Look at it from a different angle. Then come back to it when you have a positive belief and you will find that the doubt has disappeared.

Theologians tackle religion as if it were a mathematical problem. That's why so many of them fail.

Those were some of the thoughts left with the members of the Men's League at a meeting held at the Center Congregational church at noon yesterday. Howell Cheney, a grandson of Horace Bushnell, the subject of the address, was the speaker.

Has Severe Cold

Up until the last moment it was not certain that Mr. Cheney would make his address as he is suffering from a severe cold. As a result he shortened his talk and gave but the highlights.

The subject of the talk was "What Modern Religious Thought Owes to Horace Bushnell." Dr. Bushnell was the leader of the liberals in the Congregational churches of New England from 1835 until his retirement in 1865. After a prayer by Rev. Watson Woodruff, G. S. Bohlin, president of the Men's League, introduced the speaker.

Plunges Into Subject

Mr. Cheney plunged immediately into his subject. He said Dr. Bushnell was considered the prophet of his period in New England at a time when religion was running the gamut, from the sheerest emotionalism to the sternest Calvinistic views. In talking of the religious emotionalism of the period, Mr. Cheney read the account of a Connecticut farmer who told how he and his wife went to hear the preacher. All of the roads were filled with farmers gathering for the revival. They took religion seriously those days and it was a common sight for women and even men to faint at these revivals.

The speaker sketched rapidly the life of Dr. Bushnell from his birth to his death. Dr. Bushnell was a farmer born in Litchfield county. He started as a farmer but from his 16th to his 21st year he worked as a craftsman. He was brought up in a democratic atmosphere with his mother's influence the dominating factor of his life. It was she who decided for him when he was 23 years of age that he should go to college. He was not all books, by any means, the speaker explained. He was the champion broad jumper of his day at Yale and at one time went on strike with 33 other students against studying calculus. The students who went on strike were dismissed but came back after making a signed confession of their guilt.

Lived Christian Life

Dr. Bushnell, then said Mr. Cheney, always lived a Christian life and in his early years was of a retiring disposition, but, goaded by his critics he finally came out of his shell in his writings which caused a furor at the time they were published and which still are con-

NO BROWNING TRIAL FOR SEMINARY GIRLS

Carmel, N. Y., Jan. 24.—Among those who will not be present at the trial of "Daddy" Browning's separation suit are members of a girls' seminary located at Carmel. There are 125 girls in the school and some of them planned to attend the trial. It was reported today, however, that strict orders have been issued that none of the girls leave the seminary grounds until further notice.

DAVIS OPTIMISTIC IN HIS TALK HERE

Working Conditions In U. S. Favorable, Declares Sec- retary of Labor.

Working conditions throughout the United States are somewhat better than they were but still they are only fair and far from excellent. So said Secretary of Labor James J. Davis preceding his talk before the Hartford Legion on organization of second degree workers at the K. of C. hall yesterday afternoon.

Regarding the five-day working week, Mr. Davis declined to make any statement other than that he had given his word to newspapermen and his colleagues in Washington to hold his opinion off for a while.

Mr. Davis came to Manchester by automobile and was interviewed by a Herald representative before he gave his talk to the Legion. He is a man of average height, powerfully built, and his actions are quick and decisive. Democratic, he mixed in with the Legion members as though he had known them all his life and few of them went without a hearty word of greeting from him.

Mr. Davis had about a minute and an half to give to the reporter. He said plenty in that short space of time, however.

The textile industry, in his opinion, is in the worst shape of all just now. He mentioned the mills in the south and also those in this section of the country. Unemployment is on the increase and he said that he expected a general pickup all around.

400 Present

About 400 members of the Legion were present at the hall and a dinner was served. Secretary Davis talked in a Mooshaug hall, the children's home of which he was the founder. This institution, peopled by the children of deceased members of the Order of Moose, is a school where young people are prepared for the life of life, being given instruction in school and the trades for which they are best fitted.

Old Folks Home

Secretary Davis said that there are now 1,400 children at the home and that it is in a flourishing condition. He talked in Mooshaug hall, a home for older Moose, and their wives. This home is in Jacksonville, Fla.

David Dickson of this town presided at the meeting and the following officers were elected: North Moore, Murray of New Britain; south Moore, Edward Murray, of Livingstone; east Moore, George Wood of Hartford; west Moore, Walter Bingham of Hartford; guiding Moose, David Law of Rockville; August, Elmer Dickson of Hartford; custodian, John Newell, of Rockville; secretary, John Limerick of this town. Committee in Charge

Secretary Davis came to Manchester in the charge of a committee consisting of John Limerick, Charles Murray of New Britain, Louis Boggan of Hartford and P. J. Fitzgerald and Samuel Johnson, district deputies.

THREE DRIVERS FINED FOR TRUCK OVERLOADS

Winsted, Jan. 24.—August Abraham and Joseph De Ben, both of Torrington, were fined $50 and costs each and Joseph Maloney, of Winsted, was fined $20 and costs when they were convicted by Judge Hood in town court of driving overloaded trucks. State police made the arrests. Abraham and De Ben were employees of the John Leland Lumber company, of Torrington. Their trucks had about 25 per cent more than the legal loads.

"DADDY" GETS ALL THE HAND IN THRILL TRIAL

And Really There's No Kick to First Day; Browning Show Will Move to White Plains.

Carmel, N. Y., Jan. 24.—Edward (Daddy) Browning, the big summons-and-subpoena man from Broadway, and his blonde bride of sixteen, "Peaches" Browning, faced each other in court here today—and, my, what a snappy time was expected by all!

No less than fifty reporters are massed behind their typewriters to give the public the palpitating details. It's "Daddy's" celebrated suit for separation.

Such damages and counter-charges! "Daddy" claims that even though he was a faithful and devoted husband, "Peaches" quit him cold last October. Six months after they were suddenly married by a justice of the peace, his flapper-bride packed up at their honeymoon apartment in Kew Gardens Inn and left him flat.

Such a Good Daddy

Not a word since from Peaches! And he was such a good "daddy" to her; gave her motor cars, sable coats, diamonds, expensive lingerie, flowers and goodness knows what else. He just paid, and paid, and paid. Why, she must have cost him $30,000 in those brief six months. And for all that she was cruel to him. She "taunted" and "abused" him and so did her "mama," Mrs. Carolyn Heenan, Browning's charges.

So today the grey-haired, 52-year-old millionaire dropping for the moment his other suits started by young girls, such as Mary Louise Spas, who demands $500,000 for an alleged attack upon her, and Rene Shapiro who asks for $100,000 on the same charge, came to court here to have it out with the pretty, pert and brown "Peaches."

Gold Digger? The Ideal!

"Peaches" says all these charges by "Daddy" aren't true. Positively not.

She was driven from her home by Daddy's cruelty, she claims. He was a dreadfully strange husband, she alleges. He wanted to "run around," take her up in airplanes, do things she didn't want to do, and he wasn't at all domesticated. She didn't quit him, she says, until she was on the verge of a nervous breakdown as a result of his actions.

"Daddy" was opposed to motherhood while she is fond of babies, she said. On their honeymoon he gave her foreign magazines with suggestive stories and pictures, she claims, and once when she repulsed him he threw a telephone book at her head.

And how mad she does get at that charge she is a "gold-digger!" She really fell for "Daddy"—he

In an effort to obtain better trolley service for Manchester people members of the Board of Selectmen, Town Treasurer C. H. Waddell and General Manager Nathaniel J. Since the abandonment of the local car barns of the Connecticut Company service on the Manchester division has been poor.

PROBE ORDERED OF "SALE" OF OFFICES IN SOUTH

Washington, Jan. 24.—A sweeping investigation of charges that federal offices have been sold to the highest bidder in southern states, was ordered today by the Senate judiciary committee by a vote of nine to three.

The committee took this action by adopting the Norris resolution, proposing an unlimited inquiry into charges that offices were sold by "officers of political party organizations."

How China Is Divided Up

How China has been checker-boarded into territorial strongholds of contending war lords is depicted by the map below. The key identifies the military leaders who dominate the various sections of the country. The two provinces shown in white are subject only to their own local governors.

How the War Lords Have Tangled China

Country a Crazy-Quilt of Clashing Military Powers Ever Since Overthrow of the Manchu Dynasty 14 Years Ago.

An over-abundance of war lords leadership now are contending in China. They are:

Marshall Chang Tso-lin, ruler of north China, and his followers. The Cantonese or "Nationalists" comprising followers of the youth-ful Chang Kai-shek in south China and the Yangtze river valley and Feng Yuhsiang in the Chinese northwest.

Popular opinion among Chinese heavily favors the Cantonese faction. European nations, seeking first of all to preserve their investments in China, are said to support the rival Chang Tso-lin or Peking government.

Division of Chinese sentiment and military control extends considerably beyond the south China-north China split, however. In some of the Chinese provinces

Washington, Jan. 24.—"Not guilty," was Harry F. Sinclair's reply to the indictment charging him with contempt of the United States Senate when the millionaire oil operator was arraigned in District Supreme Court. Trial was set for March 7.

The conspiracy trial of Albert B. Fall and Sinclair, charged with defrauding the government in the Teapot dome oil lease, was postponed today from February 2 to April 25, on the representations of Fall's lawyers that he is so ill he will be unable to appear.

Poor "Billy" Is Dead; All Manchester Mourns

"Billy" is dead. The best known dog in Manchester died last night at midnight while his friends mourned. He was twelve years and three months old. "Billy" for the past six years the inseparable companion of Tom Raby of the Waranoke hotel, was a famous character in Manchester. Owned first by Henderson Chambers of the Waranoke, he was given to Raby when Mr. Chambers went out of the hotel business.

Great Traveler

Billyboy had traveled more than a thousand miles on Raby's motorcycle. Tom hardly ever went anywhere without taking the dog and "Billy" enjoyed the rides in the sidecar as much as his master.

Every day he waited for his master at the hotel and when Mr. Raby came home from work "Billy" went with him and received his two lamb chops, his daily ration for many years. A few days ago the dog became ill and although Dr. Bushnell tried to pull him through his illness, he became gradually worse. Tom Raby was desolate and while the dog was stuck Tom ate practically nothing. Yesterday the dog became worse and when it was found that he could not live much longer without suffering terribly, it was decided to chloroform him. He died at 12 o'clock.

U. S. LIKELY TO ACT ALONE ON TREATY WITH CHINESE

CALLS CALLES "RED RAT OF CHAPULTEPEC"

Bay State Democrat Charges State Department Leak and Demands Probe of "Pro-Mex Propaganda."

Washington, Jan. 24.—Striking back at those who have opposed the Coolidge-Kellogg Mexican policy, Rep. Gallivan, Democrat of Massachusetts, introduced a resolution in the House today excoriating President Calles, hinting at "paid spies," "leaks in the State Department" and calling upon the department for information "concerning the famous emerald necklace said to have been presented by President Calles to the arbitrator on the Special Claims Commission."

Calls Calles "Red Rat"

In a statement accompanying his resolution, Rep. Gallivan characterized President Calles as "the red rat of Chapultepec," and predicted that "we will be compelled to take him by the neck and shake him out of the community of nations."

At least one member of the staff of the State Department has been discharged, the resolution says, following a complaint by Ambassador Sheffield that there existed a leak in the department to the Mexican embassy.

Secretary of State Kellogg was called on to lay before the House all information concerning the source of pro-Calles propaganda, who is paying the bills for its dissemination; what American citizens are on the payroll of the Mexican government; the secret reports of one Haberman and other so-called American citizens who came on for arbitration—all this in addition to the apparent pro-Chinese propaganda of the Foreign Relations Committee favorably reporting the Robinson resolution by thirteen votes to three.

"Red Fires Burning"

"We cannot much longer sit stately by while the red fires burning up Mexico are creeping closer and closer to our borders," said Gallivan, "and while noisy ignoramus allow Ambassador Telles and other Calles propaganda-dealers to use them as Bernstorff used them a few years ago."

LETTERS TO A JUDGE SPOIL DIVORCE PLAN

"Deserting" Wife Put in Hospital by Husband, They State; Gets No Decree.

Bridgeport, Jan. 24.—Adam Smith, of Stamford, failed to secure a divorce from Florence Norton Smith before Judge Alfred C. Baldwin in Superior Court here today. Smith told Judge Baldwin his wife left him in May, 1922, and he had no idea of where she is. Judge Baldwin then read letters he had received from friends of Mrs. Smith which declared Smith had caused her to be placed in a hospital at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., with instructions to keep her there.

Under questions by Judge Baldwin, Smith consistently denied knowing anything about his wife and declared he had not seen her nor heard from her for nearly five years. He told the judge she left because he refused to "live a high life." Judge Baldwin denied the petition for divorce and dismissed the case.

BRIDGEPORT WILL ASK $3,140,000 BOND ISSUE

Wants to Lay Sewers, Build Schools and Do Many Other Things With Money.

Bridgeport, Jan. 24.—Bridgeport is seeking the right to issue bonds enough to realize $3,140,000 for public improvements and local legislators will submit bills tomorrow at Hartford. The bonds sought are as follows: schools $1,500,000; parks $150,000; sewers $900,000; isolation hospital and nurses home, addition to city almshouse and new fire engine house to replace one on Crescent avenue $240,000; new Yellow mill bridge, $850,000.

MEX MESSAGE BY COOLIDGE LIKELY Tremendous Pressure For Arbitration Expected to Call Forth Statement.

Washington, Jan. 24.—President Coolidge may send a special message to Congress shortly, dealing with the Mexican situation, it was reported today in administration circles.

So enormous has become the pressure on the White House for arbitration of the land-law controversy that some such step is necessary, his advisers believe, if the country is to "understand" Mr. Coolidge's unwillingness to submit the questions between the two countries to the settlement of an arbitration tribunal.

The President has explained, through the medium afforded by the White House "spokesman," his aversion to arbitration of what he considers a vital principle at stake in the controversy with Calles. This principle, as announced by Mr. Coolidge, is: "shall American property in Mexico be confiscated without being paid for."

Public Does Not Realize

His advisers, however, believe, and have so told him, that the public generally does not realize or appreciate this position—as exemplified by the constantly increasing pressure upon Washington for arbitration.

Over the week-end the demand for arbitration became more pronounced. The Federal Council of Churches, claiming to speak for many millions of Protestants, petitioned the government to settle the Mexican question without resort to an open break; a memorial signed by 101 college professors, representing 43 institutions, made a similar plea. The American Federation of Labor came on for arbitration—all this in addition to the apparent pro-Chinese propaganda of the Foreign Relations Committee favorably reporting the Robinson resolution by thirteen votes to three.

The Robinson resolution, declaring it to be the sense of the Senate that the dispute should be arbitrated, may afford the President the opportunity to present his case in a special message. The Senate probably will adopt the resolution this week. Mr. Coolidge could then take cognizance of the situation by sending a "reply" to this resolution.

NORRIS TRIAL NEAR TO THE JURY STAGE

Judge Begins Charge With De- fense Still Privileged to Add Evidence.

Austin, Tex., Jan. 24.—With an agreement by both sides that additional evidence may be presented later, the defense in the trial of Rev. J. Frank Norris, pastor of the First Baptist church at Fort Worth, today closed its case. Judge J. R. Hamilton started delivering his charge to the jury which will decide the fate of Norris who has been on trial in district court here for two weeks charged with the murder of D. E. Chippis. Norris seeks acquittal on the Texas law of self defense.

Minister MacMurray, Who Favors Action With Other Powers May Be Recalled; Shanghai Near Fall as Cantonese Army Wins New Victories; Admiral Williams' Statement With- held; Britain Hurrying Many Troops.

Washington, Jan. 24.—The movement to have the United States take independent action in dealing with China received added impetus today with the announcement by Eugene Chen, Nationalist foreign minister, that full protection would be afforded nationals of governments which would take steps to negotiate new and more equitable treaties.

To Override MacMurray

Secretary of State Kellogg has been delaying his promised "re-statement" of the American policy because of the desire of the American minister at Peking, John Van A. MacMurray, to have the United States act in union with the other powers.

It is now believed certain, however, that the government will override the wishes of MacMurray by issuing a memorandum within a few days setting forth the conditions under which it will agree to a consideration of a new treaty. Kellogg has already made it clear that this memorandum should not be taken as a reply to the recent British circular note in which concerted action was suggested.

There is no disposition on the part of the State Department to replace MacMurray at this time, though such a step may come if the government decides upon independent action.

Williams' Cable Withheld

Much importance is attached to a lengthy cablegram received Saturday night from Rear Admiral Williams, commander of the American naval forces in Chinese waters. The contents of this message have not yet been made public, but it is reported to set forth elaborate plans for the wholesale evacuation of China by Americans if such an extreme step becomes necessary.

Admiral Williams has already been empowered to take whatever he believes necessary for the protection of American interests. He has not, however, the State Department asserts, been authorized to take part in any joint movement with the troops of other powers of other powers for the suppression of mob violence or anti-foreign outbreaks.

Britain Hurries Troops

London, Jan. 24.—Scenes reminiscent of real war days were enacted in England today as a thousand royal marines were prepared for service in Hongkong, five crack battalions were being assembled at Caterick camp, Yorkshire, for service in China.

The liner Minnesota, which was due at Portsmouth today to take on the machines, was reported delayed in the Scheldt by fog, which would probably make embarkation today impossible.

Hundreds of reservists have been called to the colors, and are joining up. In addition to the five English battalions ordered to China, preparations were going on at Malta and India to send forces from those places. Two English battalions at Malta were under orders to proceed to China and two British and two Indian battalions are going from India.

The brigade from Britain will include an armored car section. It is understood that the whole of the Thirteenth Infantry brigade has been placed under orders to proceed nearer today, as reports continue to come in of repeated reverses of the forces of Sun Chuan Fang at the hands of the Cantonese under General Yen.

Fall of Shanghai Near

Shanghai, Jan. 24.—Cantonese occupation of Shanghai has been placed under orders to proceed nearer today, as reports continue to come in of repeated reverses of the forces of Sun Chuan Fang at the hands of the Cantonese under General Yen.

The Chuan Fang forces, which have been heretofore keeping the Cantonese back from Shanghai, are now reported to be hard pressed, having suffered thousands of casualties. There is great apprehension here as to what may happen if Shanghai is occupied, in view of the events that followed the Cantonese occupation of Hankow.

Foreign consuls revealed today that an understanding has been reached whereby the British, American, Japanese and French governments will send military detachments to defend the foreign concessions here. The British quota of this guard is expected on Wednesday from Shanghai.

The boundaries of Shanghai have been barricaded with barbed wire and bomb screens.

The authority of Food taken a survey of the food supplies and the water system. They state there should be no difficulties even in the gravest emergency.

Shanghai is quiet today but the rumor mongers are active and keeping the tension at a high pitch. American residents in all the important centers of China were being registered today as part of plans for speedy concentration of American citizens in each town.

All Americans have already been evacuated from Fukien province, except those resident in Fochow city. The majority were sent to Manila because all available accommodations in Shanghai had already been taken up by other refugees.

Stirred by Troops Report. Trams service in Shanghai was resumed this morning despite some agitation and some attempts to intimidate the operators.

Members of the foreign police today tried to operate the omnibuses whose operators are on strike, but abandoned the attempt when they were bombarded by a hail of stones and missiles.

The Chinese press is very much agitated as a result of reports from London announcing that four battalions of troops have been ordered to China. One paper declared, "It seems that a violation of treaties is imminent," and deprecated the display of "imperialistic force."

Chen's Statement to U. S. Peking, Jan. 24.—Assailing England as the "mother of imperialism in China," Eugene Chen, nationalist foreign minister, today delivered to the American legation an impassioned statement which was regarded as practically a declaration of war against England by the Nationalist regime.

Chen declared that "foreigners can no longer be protected by foreign bayonets in China since China can fight back with the economic boycott."

He asserted the Nationalists now control all China south of the Yangtze river, and that the people in North China would favor the southerners if a plebiscite were taken.

The Nationalist foreign minister offered full protection for foreigners if the foreign nations would negotiate equal treaties with the Nationalists, and promised a government radically different from that of "Chang Tsung-Chang's barbarism, Chang Tso-Lin's feudalism and the marauderie of Peking."

LIQUOR THE CAUSE OF 5 COURT CASES

Two Continued Until Tomorrow—Others Pay Fines For Misconduct.

Five cases were brought before Judge Johnson in the Manchester police court this morning, and all of the five had to do with liquor.

Joseph Lombardo, charged with keeping liquor with intent to sell, had his case continued until tomorrow. He was represented by Attorney William S. Hyde. A bond was fixed for his appearance tomorrow.

Leonard Finn, charged with intoxication, was allowed to go on payment of a fine of $10 and costs. He was defended by Attorney Hyde.

Thomas Egan for intoxication, was given a suspended jail sentence of 30 days and placed on probation for one year. In his case the cost and fine amounted to $9.32. Egan has been before the court several times in the last few years.

Charles Westmore, who lives in the Manchester Green district was brought in by Sergeant William Barron Sunday afternoon. The charge against him was intoxication and breach of the peace. The man attracted a lot of attention on Depot Square because of his condition. He insisted on removing his clothes and attempting to embrace all the young girls he could get hold of. In court this morning his mind was not yet clear and the judge continued his case until tomorrow morning.

Joseph Chapulis, a transient, who was charged on the road to Wapping yesterday afternoon intoxicated by Patrolman McGlenn, was given a fine of $10 and costs. He had no money and was sent to jail.

"DADDY" GETS HAND IN THE THRILL TRIAL

made such wonderful love. It wasn't his money at all. And as for her doing the proposing, that's "ridiculous." "Daddy" was with about her from the first night they met.

Hooray, Here's Daddy! "Daddy" motored up to the courthouse at 10:20 a. m., his entrance created a furore. He came in a big green limousine.

"Here comes Browning—here comes Daddy!" the crowd assembled outside the court house—many of them girls and young men—cried as the benevolent millionaire whirled up.

Browning was serene and smiling. He wore one of his famous blue ties with a good stripe. As he stepped from his machine a battery of cameras were turned full upon him.

"There's going to be no reconciliation as far as I am concerned," he said here for a fight to the "lab," he said suddenly becoming serious.

"Peaches" arrived at the court house at 10:45 a. m. She was wrapped in a magnificent sable coat. She was accompanied by her mother, Mrs. Carolyn Heenan and a young man named Peaches.

Daddy Gets the Hand. Browning's entrance to the court room, like that of a leading man at a play, was the signal for a wild outburst of handclapping from the women in the audience.

Supreme Court Justice Albert Seagar, presiding, frowned at the unexpected outburst.

As "Daddy" turned and bowed and smiled to his women admirers, the judge rapped his gavel on the bench and announced: "Such demonstrations as these will have to stop. If anything else of the kind happens I will be forced to clear the courtroom."

"Peaches" had preceded "Daddy" into the courtroom by ten minutes. She and her mother were sitting at counsel table conversing in whispered tones to her lawyer, Henry Epstein, a young bespectacled man, when "Daddy" made his dramatic entry.

"Daddy" glared at "Peaches." It was the first time he has seen her since she packed up and left him last October after their six months honeymoon.

Peaches Seeks Privacy. "Peaches" in luxurious sable coat had a flower on it. She wore a blue cloche hat. Her court demeanor was subdued, in contrast to the confident pose assumed by her 52-year-old husband.

Immediately court was opened, Epstein, counsel for "Peaches," made a motion that the trial be held secret and that the press be excluded.

"It is not proper that the private life of the defendant and the plaintiff be made to the public," said Attorney John E. Mack of Brown-son's legal staff. "A matter of this kind should not be made public."

Testimony of the character that might be brought out should in all decency, Mack said, be withheld from the public.

Not Pleased So Far. "It seems to me," said Judge Seagar, "that up to the present time neither party to this action has exhibited any desire for secrecy."

The judge said he would reserve decision and that he would rule on this point tomorrow. Meantime attorneys for both sides agreed that no testimony of a startling nature would be presented today.

There was some commotion in the courtroom and the judge ordered women with babies in arms—the babies were crying—to leave.

Not So Snappy. The court session was short and not very snappy—which was a big disappointment—but the home folks got a good close up of the two famous lovers, and they were happy.

It was the biggest thing that happened in Carmel since the first house was built down near the railroad depot.

Only two witnesses—"Daddy's" witnesses were heard. "They were put on the stand to show that "Peaches" left "Daddy" flat last October after six months honeymoon, and that the elderly millionaire's mother-in-law, Mrs. Carolyn Heenan, wasn't nice to "Daddy."

Court was then adjourned until tomorrow to White Plains when "Peaches" side of the case will be heard.

Just a Departure. Edward P. Kearney, a chauffeur, was the first witness. Kearney testified that he drove Mr. and Mrs. Browning and her mother from Kew Gardens Inn early last October to Browning's office in New York, where Browning got out.

"After Mr. Browning left the car," Kearney testified, "Mrs. Browning ordered me to drive through the park. "Peaches" and her mother talked a great deal. Then I was ordered by Mrs. Heenan to drive back to Kew Gardens. When they got home they packed up everything that belonged to them in the house—dresses and all that kind of stuff. "Peaches" remarked: "I'm sick and tired of all this, and I'm through." They then ordered him to drive to the apartment of Mrs. Heenan, he said.

Over 250 Present at Temple Chapter's Birthday Party, Elaborate Program.

Temple Chapter, Order of the Eastern Star, observed its twenty-fifth anniversary in Odd Fellows hall Saturday evening with an elaborate program beginning with a supper in the banquet hall at 6:45.

Mrs. Ethel Davis was general chairman of the celebration which proved to be one of the most brilliant events in the history of the chapter. Sub-chairmen under her direction were the following: Past Matron Ora Porter who was third Worthy Matron of Temple Chapter, as head of the supper committee; Past Matron, Mrs. Anna Barber, chairman decorations; Past Matrons, Mrs. Edith Husband and Miss Mary Miller, souvenirs, and Past Matrons, Mrs. Nellie Packard in charge of the program following the supper.

History of the chapter since its organization. The Entertainment. The Merrifield Entertainers, under the direction of Mrs. Ada N. Merrifield of Willimantic and this town, gave a varied program of musical numbers on stringed instruments, assisted by Miss Lillian Grant of this town, elocutionist, and Miss Eugenia Maslem of Hartford, soprano. Miss Maslem has a pure, sweet voice and her numbers were heartily applauded, as were the recitations of Miss Grant. The latter also acted as piano accompanist in some of the ensemble numbers by the plectral players, which were rendered in a finished manner. The entertainers provided a generous program, giving a variety of jazzy, popular airs, as well as classical selections.

Tibet and Mongolia are dependencies of China in theory. In fact, Tibet is independent and Mongolia is subject to Russian influence.

Dozens of other war lords have risen and fallen since China first foresook the Manchu monarchy. One of these was Wu Pei-fu, who fought with Chang Tso-lin in 1920 against him in 1922-24, and with him again in 1926. Wu Pei-fu is in virtual retirement.

Up Today, Down Tomorrow. Sun Chang-fang arose from governor of Chekiang to military control of this and four other provinces. He proclaimed their independence. Now the Cantonese, invading the Yangtze valley, have reduced his territory to the one province of Kiangsu in which the city of Shanghai is located. Sun Chang-fang is an ally of Chang Tso-lin.

Feng Yu-shiang once was a corporal. He won the friendship of Wu Pei-fu, and came to dominate the Peking government. Later he withdrew to the northwestern provinces he now rules.

The Master of the North. Chang Tso-lin, rugged master of north China, started out in Chinese public life as a bandit chief, fought for Japan in the Russo-Japanese war, and after the Chinese republic was proclaimed, achieved supreme power in Manchuria.

The Cantonese or "Nationalist" movement has been accompanied by China's nearest approach to formation of a political party called the "Kuomintang."

This party is the outgrowth of the patriotism of Sun Yat-sen, who fomented the overthrow of the Manchus. Its political program calls for unification of China territorially and modernizing of its governmental institutions, along with the abolition of all treaties not based on the equality of both contracting parties.

The last provision, affecting "extraterritoriality" and foreign control of customs duties, is of vital concern to the great western powers.

(Copyright, 1927.) THE BOXER UPRISING. Four Hundred Caucasians Were Killed in 1900 Trouble.

The Boxer uprising of 1900 brought on the last armed clash between the United States and China. Boxers, religious fanatics, maddened by blood and plunder, and with the war cry of "Death to every foreigner!" swept the eastern cities.

Scores of "white devils" were tortured and killed; scores of homes and churches were pillaged and burned.

The German ambassador was assassinated in the streets of Peking. Foreigners barricaded themselves in the British legation and for two months resisted siege and starvation.

It took an army of 18,000 men furnished by six powers to put sidered masterpieces of theological thought. At the start of his studies, Dr. Bushnell said that he could not say there was a God but he said there was a principle of right and justice that permeated his very being that little by little influenced him until he came to the conclusion that there was a God.

After he was graduated from Yale, Dr. Bushnell taught school but gave it up as he considered himself a failure at it. Then he tried the newspaper business, acting for a time as assistant editor of the New York Commercial. This he also gave up when he found it was not in his line. He tutored for a time at Yale and then began the study of law and was ready to take the bar examination when he started to study theology and became a minister in college. He was unusually proficient in the classics and especially liked Latin and Greek philosophy.

His Influence Felt. In the church, Dr. Bushnell found himself and from that moment his influence was felt in New England. In his time, Dr. Bushnell found religion working in extremes from the mental hysterical type to the stern Calvinistic type. He started from the premise that Christianity was a part of everyday life. He was branded as a heretic.

Crisis were running amuck those days. They took his book, now a standard at Yale, and tore it to shreds. Indeed they got so that they fought among themselves so bitterly that they forgot all about Bushnell. They built religions like mathematicians build up a theory with a word or a group of words; a base.

Houses of Cards. These turned out to be houses of cards that were tumbled down by other theorists who used the same methods. Recently in Tennessee three interpretations were given to the words of the Bible in three different organizations. That was the case in Dr. Bushnell's time. He took the Scriptures and interpreted them through the everyday life of man. Man's life is not a mathematical formula, he asserted.

Religion, said Dr. Bushnell, is something taken out of man's own experiences which can be worked for his own salvation. You cannot mechanicalize religion.

At the conclusion of his talk, Mr. Cheney was given a rising vote of thanks.

400 GRANGERS MEET IN EAST HARTFORD

Manchester Among 42 Grangers Represented—50 Local Members Present.

Mrs. A. E. Loomis of Keeney street, secretary of Pomona Grange No. 3, was in charge of arrangements for the mass meeting of Grangers held in Odd Fellows hall, East Hartford Friday. The gathering included representatives from three New England states as well as from all parts of Connecticut. Over 500 local Grangers were in attendance and 42 different Granges represented. The occasion was the joint installation by the High Priest of Demeter, Charles M. Gardner, of the following four Granges: Hills-town, Wapping, Manchester and East Hartford. A remarkable thing was the presence of 52 officers from the above four Granges. The four marshals in the unique ceremony were state officers and the four aides were all past officers in their respective Granges. Andover, Ellington, Wethersfield and Hazardville. Sandwiches, cake and coffee was served to every one of the four hundred Grangers in attendance by the four Granges who figured in the installation ceremony.

CHADWICK'S "NOEL" FINELY PRESENTED

Choir and Soloists Do Beautiful Pastoral in Creditable Manner.

"Noel," the Christmas pastoral of George W. Chadwick, was given last evening in the South Methodist Episcopal church by a choir of 30 voices, with Eleanor Willard, Mrs. Berthelina Lashinske, Fred Reichard and Robert Gordon as soloists. The text consists of twelve inspiring stanzas, beginning with three from our own poets, after which follow translated verses from the Danish, Dutch, German, Italian and Latin. These stanzas of adoration come to us, down the ages, even from the 6th century. Miss Willard's clear, voice is well known, as well as her high interpretive ability and her magnetic personality. Mrs. Lashinske excelled in diction, and her colorful voice shows marked improvement in breath-support. Mr. Reichard, always popular in Manchester, interpreted his solo beautifully, having caught the spirit of both words and music. Mr. Gordon again displayed a baritone voice of unusual beauty and possesses a fine discrimination of tonal values. The choir deserves great credit in the production of so difficult a modern work as "Noel." The women's chorus in Latin attained a fine ensemble almost ethereal. The choir as a whole fully maintained the high standard of excellence, that was shown in the "Creation" and in "Gloria Domini."

MERCHANTS GATHER TO DISCUSS RATES

Local Electric Light Co. Official Says Our Rates Are as Low as in Hartford.

A large group of Manchester merchants assembled in the Chamber of Commerce rooms recently for a conference with Royal D. Webster, of the Manchester Electric Company, regarding electric rates and service.

Several of the merchants have thought for some time that there ought to be a more general lighting of store windows between the hours of 8:30 and 10 p. m., and the purpose of the meeting was to determine what volume of current, or what number of hours' use would be necessary to bring about a reduction in rates.

Wrong Report

It is commonly reported and rather generally accepted that Hartford has enjoyed a more favorable lighting rate than Manchester. Mr. Webster, however, had both Hartford and Manchester schedules and was able to show conclusively that Manchester rates are lower for the average, medium-sized store. As a matter of fact, he showed that only the very largest consumers in Hartford were able to take advantage of the reduction for quantity consumption, so that Manchester merchants' lighting bills were actually less at the Manchester rate than they would be for the same quantity of current in Hartford.

Mr. Webster called attention to various services which the company was prepared to render, and told of a survey which was now being made to determine how the service and rate schedule might be changed for the benefit of the consumer.

Can You Find The Twins?

On your toes, EVERYBODY. Here's the greatest puzzle of all—the biggest rewards, and the most fun. Get out your "specs," sharpen up your pencil—and FIND THE TWINS. To be sure they all look alike, but examine them closer. TWO, and only two of them are exact duplicates. Can you find them?

THERE are 20 pictures of this beautiful lady printed on this page. TWO are just alike in every way and are the TWINS you are asked to find. No, it isn't as easy as it looks. Examine them carefully. AT FIRST glance all of the pictures look alike, but upon closer examination you will see that almost everyone differs in some way from all the others. In some the difference may be in the bow or ribbon bands on the hat, or light or dark braid on the collar. Or, some may wear earrings, necklaces, or both. Remember, only TWO are exactly alike. It is not as easy as it looks. Search carefully.

STATES' RIGHTS.

"We have a republic in name, but a bureaucracy in fact—the most wasteful, the most extravagant, the most demoralizing and deadly form of government which God has ever permitted to torture the human family." This from Senator Borah, in a magazine article intended to warn the country against centralization of all authority and responsibility in the federal organization. With all Senator Borah's reputation for brilliance—and it is not to be doubted that he has come by such a reputation—it will hardly be denied that he is sadly given to overstatement, even when more or less on the right side of a subject, which he sometimes is. This government is neither the most wasteful, the most extravagant, the most demoralizing or the most "deadly"—whatever that may mean—that the world has ever seen. One's knowledge of history does not have to run very far to be quite thoroughly convinced of that. And so many people know that statement to be untrue that it is doubtful if very many of them will continue with a reading of the Borah article after being slapped in the face with such silly exaggeration.

Nevertheless the thing which Senator Borah tries to do—and spills his work as he so often does by wild flourishes of his verbal flail—is a worthwhile thing. It is worth the while of Borah or of any other senator or American statesman who has the ear of the public to warn and warn again against the abandonment of the state idea in favor of the nation idea—the abandonment of the idea of the individual in favor of the idea of a paternal government. "In this irresponsible vandalism the disciples of Hamilton and the apostles of Jefferson join hands. No political party in Washington seems willing to stand against this subtle revolution—against this un-American, undemocratic program," says Mr. Borah.

If he had written this article a little later—subsequently, say, to the Senate vote on the seating of Colonel Smith—he might have pointed his argument better by calling attention to the fact that no less than thirty-two of those advocates of "Jeffersonian Democracy," the Democratic party of 1927, voted to deny the state of Illinois its constitutional right to choose its own senators, and only four Democrats voted to recognize that right, while of 44 Republicans voting on the question twenty-nine stood for the constitutional right of the state while only fifteen voted with the "centralists."

If there is any remnant of the states-rights theory left in this country it evidently is championed, not by the party which for generation predicated its existence on that principle, but by the Republican party.

REACTION TO TYPE.

The Montreal theatre manager who, according to several witnesses, held and barred the doorway by which the many victims of the Laurier Palace theatre fire might have escaped, thus causing the death of scores of children, obeyed, doubtless, the most primitive of instincts of his kind. Not self preservation but the preservation of one's money is the first law of a certain type of almost-human being.

That the theatre manager had the slightest idea that he was imperiling the lives of the children by holding them trapped in that deadly stairway, is not to be supposed. Beyond question he was incapable of thinking of such things as life and death at all, because every element in his being was centered on the pecuniary side of things. He saw, in a flash, the damage to his business that would result from a fire-panic. He knew that if that mass of excited children went bolting out of his place into the streets, public attention would be called to the danger to which his patrons had been exposed. That, at all costs, must be prevented. The scare must be hushed up. It must not become known that he had a houseful of under-age children within his walls, in violation of the law. If it did, the authorities might close the place—and he was making money. Or at best he would be fined—and fines take money.

So he acted as any money-mad animal of his kind would act. He barred the door and prevented the expensive outpouring.

Actually we cannot see that all the blame for the tragedy rests on this creature. He simply reacted to type, as was inevitable.

The responsibility in such matters does not rest on such people, for they are incapable of carrying it. It rests on the communities which make no provision for keeping them out of positions where normality is necessary for the safety and well being of the public.

CHINESE MUSSOLINI.

Too many Mussolinis is the trouble with China. If the Italian Duce had had the problem of a country eight times as large as his own peninsula, practically without railroads or other means of intercommunication, and ten times as many people, speaking languages and dialects of many varieties, he might not have found it as easy a matter to place his country under a dictatorship in a great crisis as he did.

A number of very enterprising politicians in China happened to hit upon practically the same idea as Mussolini did, only earlier. Their system of getting control was the same as his—to use force. If there had been only one of them things might have worked out much the same in China as they have in Italy, and we should have had battalions of American writers scotching over to China for a few days or weeks and rushing back to prepare "inside" articles on the uncanny cleverness and strength of Wu Peifu, or Chang Tso-lin or Sun Chuang-fang or whichever of the intending dictators might have been the great Chinese "It."

But China is so big and has so many big fellows that too many of them popped up with the same idea at the same time.

There is a habit here of calling these people "war lords." But the probabilities are that none of them is devoted to the making of war as the full of his ambition. China, if it can be reduced to order and to a system of economic effort commensurate to its resources, can be one of the chief if not quite the chief nation in the world. Probably every one of these "war lords" recognizes that and each wants to be the chap to live forever in history as the founder of a tremendous successful China which shall have made good on its possibilities.

Just like Mussolini. Meantime the situation over there is involved by the circumstance that there are a good many scores of Chinese who do not want any Mussolini at all. They have a notion that China can be a successful democracy if the dictator idea can be gotten rid of. So, after the Chinese Mussolinis had fought among themselves for several years without any one Duce coming permanently to the top, the Cantonese democrats started in to lick the whole lot of them and establish a Duceless China.

Incidental to all this is the theory of these Cantonese that four hundred million Chinese are extremely foolish to let a handful of white men from overseas boss all the profitable end of their country and the idea that while they are chasing Chinese Mussolinis out of existence they might as well devote a few minutes to kicking out the foreigners.

This is crude, but it is natural. When the excitement of a Mussolini chasing is over with, it is highly probable that the Cantonese will quickly realize that there are ways and ways of adjusting their affairs with the foreigners, especially since Britain in theory, and the United States both in theory and practice, are for recognizing that China has as good a right to herself, to her territory and to self government as any other first-class nation.

TAXIS.

There is one claim to distinction which Manchester possesses on which point it is doubtful if any community of similar size in the United States will dispute its solitary pre-eminence. It is probably the only town of twenty thousand or more people in the United States which has no cruising taxi service of nights.

Greenwich, Manchester's nearest comparative as to size as a town, has taxis by the dozens and scores and we would not dare deny by the hundreds. But Greenwich's problem, as a residential and commuting town, is of course not to be compared to Manchester's. Still, with the Connecticut Company apparently abandoning all idea of transporting the people of Manchester save at such occasional moments as it happens to, it would seem to be a matter to think about whether a small fleet of cruising taxis could not operate to some advantage even in this highly motorized community, in the even-

Advertising a City

If It's Done by Films, the Picture Must Be Made Interesting to Other Communities.

This is one of a series of 20 articles on modern American cities and how they are meeting the day's problems of growth and advancement. Tomorrow: The Tourist—a Gold Mine.

BY DON E. MOWRY

Secretary American Community Advertising Association.

Many communities are taking to the movies to advertise themselves across the nation. But in doing this it is necessary to use great skill and exactitude.

A film must be interesting of itself, or people of another city will not bother with it. The people of Bay City, Mich., for example, would not be interested in a reel showing the factories of Albany, N. Y.

Putting Romance In It.

New Bedford, Mass., struck the note in fine fashion with the film, "Down to the Sea in Ships." This movie, based on New Bedford's old whaling industry, was shown in every state in the union and more than paid for itself.

Longview, Wash., put out a four-reeler on the lumber industry, showing all phases of logging. San Jose, Calif., put out "The Valley of Heart's Delight," dealing with the pictorial and agricultural excellencies of the Santa Clara Valley.

A City's Features.

A city is fortunate when it has within its borders some feature that produces interesting pictures. Peru, Ind., for instance, has the American Circus Corporation's winter quarters, and a number of interesting films have been made there.

Sioux City, Ia., developed the motion picture into an excellent trade expansion agency. Dallas, Tex., used the movies to educate its own citizens to buy made-at-home goods.

"Motoring Through Western Maryland" was a film put out by the Maryland cities of Frostburg, Hagerstown, Frederickburg, Cumberland and Oakland.

WASHINGTON LETTER

By RODNEY DUTCHER

Washington, Jan. 24.—Some day you really must come over to Washington to see the smile on the Hon. Smith Wildman Brookhart, senator-elect from Iowa.

The Hon. Smith Wildman Brookhart's smile was on display at the meeting of the Interstate Commerce Committee before which he defended himself from the charges of the Hon. Daniel F. Steck.

Brookhart was senator from Iowa before Steck, will be senator from Iowa after Steck and would be senator from Iowa instead of Steck right now had not Steck been given the decision in a long hours election contest. Steck was a Democrat, over his seat to the fact that many thousands of Republicans failed the then insurgent Brookhart.

Between the feeling of brotherly love between these gentlemen, apparently resembling that of a couple of strange bullies that of a start, was not at all sweetened when Steck arose on the Senate floor to accuse Brookhart of being a paid lobbyist for Cyrus Woods as Interstate Commerce Commission alleged to be paying his expenses. Steck withdrew the charge regarding Wood and Brookhart made him look silly when Steck sought to defend himself for raising the other. It was too bad.

The second hearing on the charges was unofficially announced as "the final message of Steck." And so it was. Brookhart pounded the table and bathed Steck in his scorn and Steck's comeback was feeble.

The Brookhart smile was to be seen as Steck presented his flimsy case. In repose, the map of the Hon. Smith Wildman Brookhart makes New Hampshire's Great Stone Face seem to be laughing out loud. But when Brookhart looked at the unhappy Steck across the committee table and smiled, he appeared for the moment like a vengeful Cuban watching his daughter's murderer die slowly in the garrote.

The most humorous angle of all was the erstwhile wild-eyed radical from the woolly west, on the same side as Senator Dave Reed of Pennsylvania, who is probably the most "reactionary" man in the Senate. Reed was actually defending Brookhart. Reed was Woods' principal champion and he absolved Brookhart of being in any way associated with the Woods propaganda.

There is room for puzzlement in the congressional directory which gives the home addresses of senators and congressmen. An asterisk is explained as denoting members who are accompanied by their wives and a dagger as denoting members who are accompanied by ladies other than their wives. Of course the nice way to figure it out is that a congressman might be accompanied by his Aunt Tillie or his grandpa, but the directory doesn't go out of its way to forestall any wrong impressions.

The wife of one of the three or four most prominent officials in Washington was talking to the wife of a prominent senator. "I'm reading the 'Private Life of Helen of Troy,'" remarked the senator's wife. "Oh! I just adore biography," sushed the wife of the official.

CAUSE OF THE CRASH

"I wish, Matilda," said her husband, "you would agree not to talk when I am driving in traffic." "We can discuss that as we go along, Adolphus."—Gailty, London.

NEW YORK. New York, Jan. 24.—More and more the famous New York East Side mimics the manners of Broadway. The new theaters that open all follow the "bigger and better" standards and storekeepers dress their windows with an eye to Fifth Avenue methods. It was one of the very colorful eating places in the Jewish district. Here one was certain of hearing the favorite Yiddish ballads sung in native tongue by those who had somehow escaped going Broadway. Here the real old, dyed-in-the-wool "sob songs" were rendered by performers who used eyes, arms and voice to get appeal. From all over the neighborhood the East Side folk would come to demand "Fosel!" that favorite among the Yiddish folk songs. GILBERT SWAN. DAILY ALMANAC. Samuel F. B. Freddy Cannon, the Waldorf-Astoria bellboy who is known about the world, came into fame through opening the automobile door of the king of England. "He's getting into the best circles," commented the actorine. "Circles! Blah!" snapped back the flapper. "You mean he's getting into the best triangle."

THE ROMANCE OF AMERICA: Nathan Forrest (1)

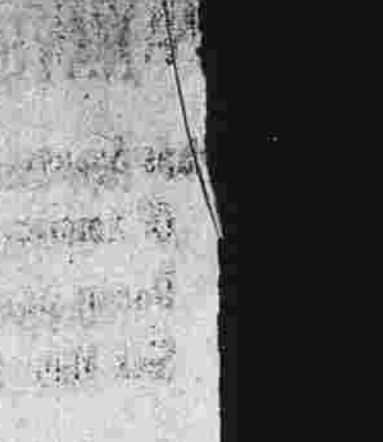

Nathan Bedford Forrest, called by General Sherman "the most remarkable man the Civil War produced," was born July 13, 1821, near Chapel Hill, Tenn. His father was a blacksmith. Nathan worked on the farm, going to school not more than six months. The family moved to Tippah county, Miss., when Nathan was 13.

When his father died in 1837, Nathan became the sole support of the family—his mother and ten brothers and sisters.

Young Forrest worked in the fields all day and toiled late at night making deerskin coats and coonskin caps.

Before the war broke out Forrest had accumulated a fortune, first in the horse-trading business, then by turns as a slave-trader and cotton-grower. He at first opposed the Rebellion, but when it began, supported it with his whole heart, enlisting as a private in June, 1861. The deeds of this uneducated soldier were to become among the greatest of the war.

Story of Foreign Legion Latest Role of Popular Player; Here For Two Days.

Milton Sills is a dashing soldier of the French Foreign Legion in his latest, "The Silent Lover," which opens at the Circle theater tomorrow night for a run of two days. Sheik, dark-eyed Arabian beauties and a fight between the French garrison and hundreds of desert tribesmen make the picture highly interesting and thrilling. That great picture, "Sin Cargo," which started at this theater last night, will be seen tonight for the last time. "Sin Cargo," starring Shirley Mason and Robert Frazer, has plenty of the wild night life of high society about it. The plot of the story revolves around a ship on which a number of the sailors terms a "sin cargo." The cargo is a group of men and women, among whom are two people who are revolved at the thought of the whole affair. A mutiny and the resultant battle give the picture most of its excitement.

Shirley Mason is the winsome heroine in this production and her part is supported by Robert Frazer, Gertrude Astor, and Edward Davidson. Frazer is shown as the sea captain who has been reduced to the rank of seaman because of the scheming of smugglers.

"The Silent Lover," which will be seen on Tuesday and Wednesday, Milton Sills is given a powerful role, that of a French Foreign Legionnaire on duty in Algeria.

This is a role far different from any which he has played in his previous work at home in the red trousers of the soldier.

The story, adapted by Carey Wilson from the European success by Laos Biro, entitled "The Legionnaire," is described as a thrilling one, dealing with the skirmishes between the Foreign Legion units stationed on the edge of the Sahara and the marauding Riff tribesmen, who constantly harry European travelers and residents in those sections.

Sills is cast as a dissolute young diplomat, who loses his honor in Paris, only to regain it—and win the girl he loves—on the burning sands of southern Morocco.

Supporting him is a notable cast of screen favorites, including Viola Dana and Natalie Kingston, Montagu Love, Arthur Carew, Charlie Murray, Arthur Stone, William V. Mong, Alma Bennett, Claude Kings, William Humphrey and others.

ANNUAL POULTRY SHOW AT THE STATE ARMORY

Opens Wednesday For Three Days—Admission Free This Year.

The annual show of the Manchester Poultry Club will open at the new State Armory, Wednesday evening and continue three days. The hall will be open for visitors on Thursday and Friday from 10 a. m. to 10 p. m.

The club promises an excellent exhibit of quality birds. The entry list, which closes tomorrow evening, already has over 200 entries of chickens, ducks, turkeys, pigeons and rabbits.

An innovation at this year's show will be free admission to all. The show committee see their way clear to cover expenses without charging admission fee and have decided to throw the show open and invite everybody to come.

The show will be in charge of the executive committee of the Poultry Club, consisting of Edward P. Stein, Ray Charter, Daniel P. Atkin, William A. Risley and John H. May.

BEETHOVEN GLEE CLUB MEMBERS AT BANQUET

The Beethoven Glee club of which Helge Pearson is the director held a banquet at the Hotel Sheridan Friday night.

The banquet was dispersed with songs and stories. A prophecy was read by Albert Pearson on "The Club's Tenth Annual Tour."

A contest was then held in which seven quartets of the Glee club took part. Each quartet sang "O' Gray Robe" by Huntley; also a song of their own choice.

First prize was awarded the quartet composed of Elmer Johnson, first tenor, Arthur Carlson, second tenor, Sherwood Anderson, first bass and Evan Nyquist, second bass.

LON CHANEY IS HERE FOR TWO MORE DAYS

In "Tell It to the Marines" at State—Shows Tonight and Tomorrow.

Lon Chaney is better than ever in his latest picture, "Tell It to the Marines," which opened at the State theater last night for a three day run. It will be seen here today and tomorrow.

Chaney has a new role this time, that of a sergeant of the Devil Dogs, those soldiers of the sea who are first to fight in any war. The scene of the picture is laid in China and the South Sea Islands and the story deals with the hard-boiled Sergeant O'Hara, who takes on himself the job of making a man out of Skeets, a fellow of the track, who has got himself in wrong in San Francisco.

The scene shifts to China where the Marines battle with hundreds of slant-eyed Orientals and the gambler falls in love with a pretty nurse. Then to the Philippines where there is more trouble. Boxing bouts in which Skeets take part, help to make the picture all the more exciting.

Everything is true to life and the picture was taken with the sanction and help of the United States government and the Navy. Chaney is in fact a regular officer of the Marine Corps, having passed the necessary examinations while making this picture.

A terrific tropical storm with wind approaching tornado proportions and rain in cloudbursts, was filmed in the midst of a tropical jungle, in which with dogged determination the Marine Corps pitches its camp in one of the most vivid scenes ever photographed.

Regular Marines pitched the camp, with Lon Chaney, William Haines, Eddie Gribbon and Maurice Kains, film actors working shoulder to shoulder with the government men. The picture was filmed with the sanction and co-operation of the government, the actors accompanying the Marines on battleships in fleet maneuvers, in action in the field, and in a gigantic sham battle, staged partly for the picture and partly as a practice maneuver, in which the Marines capture a Chinese village from bandits and rescue a mission.

Lon Chaney plays a veteran sergeant in the new picture, with William Haines in the leading romantic male role as a recruit in the service and Eleanor Boardman as the heroine. The cast includes Carmel Myers, Eddie Gribbon, Frank Currier, Mitchell Lewis, Maurice Kains and other well-known players.

While the background is the Marine Corps in service and the government added in the production, the picture is not a propaganda picture, but a vivid romance designed for entertainment only. Like "The Big Parade," it seeks to show the intimate life of a branch of the government service in terms of entertainment and adventure of "The soldiers of the sea."

On Wednesday night there will be a dancing contest at the State. Names should be entered at the box office. Three prizes will be offered and the contestants can dance a fox trot, waltz or Black Bottom.

GILEAD

The annual installation of officers of Hebron Grange, No. 111, was held at the local hall Tuesday evening with Harold Hanson, of Coventry Grange, as the installing officer, assisted by three young men from the same Grange.

The following officers were installed: Master, Mrs. Mary Z. Foote. Overseer, William O. Seyms. Chaplain, Mrs. Winifred W. Ellis.

Steward, Hurbert Porter. Asst. Steward, Kenneth W. Ellis. Treasurer, Mrs. Carrie J. Jones. Secretary, Mrs. Elizabeth Cummings. Pomona, Miss Eunice Seyms.

Ceren, Mrs. Glover Rockwell. Gate Keeper, Jesse A. Hilla. Lady Asst. Steward, Miss Laura Hills.

The lecturer, Rev. J. W. Deeter and Flora, Miss Clarissa Lord were present. Following the installation supper was served. Mrs. Doris P. Fish has had charge of the suppers during the past year.

Traveling over John Tom mountain is very dangerous on account of the icy condition of the road.

Mrs. Robert E. Foote and son Robert spent Thursday in Hartford.

J. B. Jones and Mrs. Charles Fish and daughter, Barbara, were visitors in Willimantic Tuesday.

Due to some misunderstanding Columbia Grange did not visit the local Grange Tuesday evening and present on the traveling festival with ceremony as was expected.

At this writing Hart E. Buell is somewhat better, as he is able to sit up a few minutes each day.

JACK LOCKWILL AT ROCKLAKE

by Gilbert Patten

Almost frantic with anxiety and grief, Jack's mother waited further news, hoping and praying that her husband would be among the survivors of the disaster. But when the news came it stated that there were no survivors, either of passengers or crew. If an attempt had been made to launch the steamer's boats, evidently they had been swamped or smashed. Jack did his best to comfort his woe-stricken mother.

A month later, Mrs. Lockwill, in widow's weeds, received a husky-looking stranger of about her lost husband's age. He was Robert Lockwill's college chum, Calvert Judge. "Bob sent me this before he sailed," said Brick Judge, producing the agreement Mrs. Lockwill had signed.

Mrs. Lockwill clasped Jack in her arms. "You have come to take my boy away from me!" she cried. "I have no intention of doing so, madam," reassured Judge, "but I hope to carry out the wishes of his father about developing him into a real man. He'll need his mother for some time."

It was difficult to reassure and calm Mrs. Lockwill, who couldn't rid herself of the feeling that she was going to lose her boy. Judge was compelled to use all his persuasive powers. Finally she decided to leave it to Jack, who had been listening to their talk. "What do you want to do, my dear?" she asked. "I want to do what my father wanted me to do," answered Jack, "for he was the best man in the world."

JOHNSON OUSTED FROM CZAR JOB; NAVIN, OF DETROIT, SUCCESSOR

Taps Sounded Over Leader Of American League—His Doctor Says He Is Very Sick Man.

Chicago, Jan. 23.—Taps echoed today over Ben Johnson as leader of the American League.

The gray and grizzled veteran of 27 years of stirring duels on the battlefields of ballroom has become the victim of a complication of illnesses which his friends and his physicians fear may be speedily fatal.

The club owners in his league have deemed it sufficient to incapacitate him as executive of their organization and today Johnson is only a "leave of absence" president without a vestige of official power.

A Broken Man Those men in his own league who came here yesterday with the thought of rebuking him and of dealing out punishment to him because of his criticisms of Kenesaw Landis, took their homeward trails today with flickers of tears in their eyes and sorrow in their hearts because they found the once stalwart warrior of ballroom, the doubly aggressive and sturdy creator of the American League, a broken man.

They came to back him into a corner and take the fight out of him "for the good of baseball. But only an hour after the meeting convinced them that a tremendously tragic physical change had come in him even in the last month.

And so they voted to give him a leave of absence, based upon their own conviction backed up by the statement of Johnson's personal physician; they shared him, while on such "leave of absence" of power to act in league affairs and named Frank J. Navin, owner of the Tigers to act as president during his absence.

Is Very Sick If Johnson recovers, the old job again in his—perhaps. But the likelihood of recovery is most remote. There are many persons who feel that he will not live through the year. For he is suffering from diabetes, symptoms of Bright's disease, hardening of the arteries and his blood stream has been poisoned by an infected foot which nearly cost his life during the past summer.

After the morning meeting, Colonel Jacob Ruppert, owner of the Yankees, sought out Landis and explained to him the physical condition of Johnson. He asked Landis to meet in conjunction with the American League club owners. Johnson was invited to attend but he declined. At the meeting Dr. Robert B. Durry, physician for Johnson, told of his diagnosis of Johnson's condition.

Leaguers quickly resolved that the only possible move to make was to grant Johnson an indefinite leave of absence as the only possible chance for him to regain his health.

Navin, vice president of the league, was acting president. After which Landis announced that the meeting scheduled for today, at which time it was expected Landis and Johnson would clash on Landis' method of handling the Cobb-Speaker case, was "indefinitely postponed" and to the reporters he stated:

"No action was taken on the Cobb and Speaker case—that is, as regards their status, but I will do something on that very soon."

Landis refused to make a statement concerning Johnson.

Bristling Battles of Bare Fist Days

MY LIFE STORY by Jack McAlliffe CHAPTER TWENTY-FOUR

I started out practically broke to go from New York to San Francisco to fight Jim Carroll, the man who invented the pivot punch. I wanted to gain revenge for Jack Dempsey, who was beaten by La Blanche, protégé of Carroll's.

Friends helped me along the way. The day I landed in Frisco it was foggy. The first thing I found walking along the wet streets was a playing card—a ten of hearts.

I was strangely pursued by cards. I never failed before a big fight to find a playing card, generally a "heart."

I was the freak of the town with my fashions in San Francisco. I had a long cape with a velvet collar and cutaway shoulders. I wore a high hat and although I was walking on the sidewalk I had my shoes continually shining like a looking glass. My fashions were new.

Dick Roche, well-known New York gambler, arrived in town. There was plenty of talk about the fight. Carroll was very popular with the coast fans and they were backing him heavily, showing their confidence. Roche met an additional $5000 side bet asked by Carroll's backers. I had been drinking a bit with my Irish friends and was about 15 pounds over weight. Roche raised hell when he saw me and insisted on my going into heavy training right away.

I went over to Jack Dempsey's camp. He was training for a bout with Australian Jack McCarty. I was very much impressed with the pivot punch because I realized its potentialities and expected Carroll would use it whenever possible.

I made the biggest mistake of my career at this time—that of underestimating an opponent. I figured Carroll was yellow. He had the courage of a bulldog.

Big work was a dirty deal from the club authorities. They refused to let Dempsey act as my second and would not let my friends from the east into their exclusive clubhouse for the match.

"You and your burglars cannot come out here and run this club," William Vice, then presiding chairman of the club, said to me in refusing me my assistants and insisting on picking his own referee.

Then Dick Roche calmly took command of the situation. He was a regular guy and a great sport. "We forget, gentlemen," he said very, very quietly and all voices hushed as he stood up still and dramatically. He stressed the word "gentlemen."

"You mean you'll forfeit your $5000 cash?" Vice gasped in amazement.

"Yes," replied Roche, "rather than go through with a crooked fight." And we all left the room.

Editor's Note—In the next chapter McAlliffe tells of his fight with Carroll in Frisco.

Local Sport Chatter

New Haven Normal School of Gymnastics has cancelled its scheduled game with the local High school for the first part of next month but Faculty Manager Miss M. Bailey announced he has secured Norwich Free Academy in its place. The Elm City school cancelled because of sickness, many players being ill and unable to play.

Fully 50 Manchester persons were at the game in New Britain Saturday afternoon expecting to see much more excitement than occurred. In fact the game might almost be termed mild considering the rivalry which exists and the controversy which has taken place in regard to ineligible players.

There were not outbreaks in the game at all. Neither was there any of the so-called dirty work exhibited by the players. Also, there was practically no razzing from the fans except one small group of New Britain intelligents.

Elmo Mantell and Marlon Zaleski, suspended New Britain captain, had a verbal argument before and after the game but it amounted to nothing. Zaleski was under the impression that Mantell was the cause of his being suspended.

Coch Cassidy of New Britain High recently labeled Zaleski as the best high school basketball player in the country barring none. (He should have said "including none"). At any rate, the lineup of the New Britain National Guards will be watched with interest to see whether or not Zaleski's name appears. It is as good as he is cracked up to be, surely the Guards will not overlook him. That's that.

Manager Clarence Lamplier has stated through a New Britain newspaper that the Guards will refuse to play against any team that carries the name of Elmo Mantell in its lineup. Local school authorities term this an injustice to Elmo as he is innocent of the charges made against him of "sneaking" on the New Britain High players.

A rumor was circulated about the Rec Friday night that Dick Dillon, Connecticut's premier referee, is 71 years old. Dick says abstract thirty and it would be nearer the truth for he says he is 42. Dillon has handled 119 games so far this season. Last season, he refereed 220.

RODEOS IN HAWAII Lihue, Kauai.—Such names as "Palm Tree Pete," "Surfing Sam," "Lava Lawrence," and "Thin Pin Teddy" may come into being in place of the similarly descriptive nicknames of the Old West, if interest in rodeos and round-ups in the Hawaiian Islands continues at its present pace. Roping and bulldozing the wild mountain steers is becoming a popular attraction at island celebrations. A new record for roping was recently hung up here by a Hawaiian cowboy, who caught, threw and tied an animal in 32 seconds.

Maitais dogs, the little white-haired animals so popular as pets in Victorian days, are no longer to be found on their native island. They were all exported for breeding.

TOO MUCH CHICKEN NEARLY BEATS THE C. B. A. A. QUINTET

Big Feast Before Game Slows Up Mill Five But Crompton-Knowles Loses, 36-34.

There's a time and place for everything. That's why a hearty roast chicken dinner and a basketball game don't belong within the same hour's recreation. And had Faulkner not pulled the bigger half of one, the game between George Hart's C. B. A. A. quintet and Cheney Brothers, a related victory over Crompton-Knowles of Worcester, Mass., at the School street Rec Saturday evening after the Bay Staters had led for 35 of the 40 minutes playing. The game was very close but, as fast became both teams stuffed themselves full of roast chicken, Italian spaghetti, mashed potatoes, pumpkin pie, ice cream and a lot of other "trash."

Judging from the way the game went, Cheney Brothers devoured more than its share of the feast. The players seemed unable to swing into their usual gallop. The caliber of play they exhibited was much slower than that they flashed against Elmwood. Crompton-Knowles jumped into the lead and continued to set the pace with Poland, Smiley and Tisdell showing the way. At half time, Worcester was ahead 17 to 12. The visitors managed to keep in the lead until about five minutes remained to be played. The deficit exists not only in scholastic basketball but also in semi-pro and professional as well.

What We Think In Sports

By SPORT EDITOR

TEAM SPIRIT There is one inexcusable fault to be found with many of the basketball players nowadays, and one that should not be tolerated by the coaches or whoever may be in charge of the team. It is the habit of a player who is not in the game, leaving for the showers and dressing room before the contest is finished.

For the past few years, this practice has been noticeable and it is those who have continually observed it, has become more and more obnoxious. It seems inconceivable that a player can have such a small amount of interest in his team's welfare that he can willingly go to the dressing room and not know until the other players come down, which team was. For often the score is very close, when he departs.

Perhaps sometimes when a team is having a real walk-away, it is all right for the bench-warmers to leave early, but even so, it isn't the right thing in our opinion. A player should be so wrapped up in the interest of his own team that he could not be induced to leave the floor until the final whistle.

In a game played at the Rec the other day, two substitutions were made with about five minutes to play and the substitute team leading by three points. It was anybody's game. The players who were taken out of the game, departed to the showers. In this case, they had the coach's permission. It was an error on the part of both. In the first place the players should not have wanted to leave and second the coach should have refused the request point-blank. Later, another player went down stairs. All three did not know how their team fared until informed later.

AERIAL GOLF London.—The course may be rough, but most golfers never find it too rough even if it's the ball. That's the case, however, with many of the air pilots at Roehampton who play aerial golf. On windy days it is impossible to tee up the balls, but when the weather's fair, it's a wall. The golf course, to be sure, is laid out on the ground and four bags are dropped by the flyers.

PRINCETON-HARVARD FIGHT STARTS ANEW Tigers Give Out Official Answer to "Dirty Football" Charges Made Last Fall.

New York, Jan. 24.—The fire of Princeton-Harvard antipathy continued to blaze today with the publication of the Tiger's official answer to Wynant D. Hubbard's magazine article, which declared that athletic relations between the two schools had been severed because Princeton played "dirty football." Hubbard was a star lineman on the 1919 and 1920 Harvard teams.

Princeton's answer came through Professor Charles W. Kennedy, chairman of the board of athletic control, and took the form of three letters from football officials who disclaimed all knowledge of the unethical tactics said to have been employed by Princeton men in games since 1918. The officials were Fred W. Murphy, of Brown; W. R. Okeson, of Lehigh, and Wilmer G. Crowell, of Swarthmore.

These men, as Prof. Kennedy's statement pointed out, served as officials in many of the games in question; Murphy officiating six times and Okeson and Crowell four times each.

Hubbard's article, the statement declared, "is unworthy of an answer from Princeton other than by the statement that his attack upon the sportsmanship of Princeton football teams for 1919 to the present is directly contrary to facts and the testimony of football officials."

The Daily Princetonian, student organ, published today an editorial entitled "Harvard Once More," in which the statement was made that "it was unfortunate, but natural, that one of the thousands of Harvard alumni holding various opinions at least one was to be found who would stoop to capitalizing on rumors."

The NUT CRACKER by JOE WILLIAMS

Mr. O'Goofy says there is practically no difference between a winter vacation and a summer vacation. "It's just as hard starting back to work in January as it is in July," he comments.

The gentleman spent much of his time fishing through the ice in Lake Erie hoping, as he explained, to catch some cold herring.

Winter weather being what it is in the north Mr. O'Goofy was unable to attach himself to anything resembling a coat of tan. The truth is, he did not even get a vest.

This is one of the horrible drawbacks about a winter vacation in the ice country. You have nothing to show for it— Unless you are allowed to include chilblains, Mr. O'Goofy did come back to the office with as lovely a set of chilblains as you'd ever care to see but the problem of what to do with them is disturbing.

There is a marked difference between a set of frozen toes and a sun-burned neck, and if you don't think so write your congressman now.

You can't, for instance, stop in the street, remove your shoes, reveal an assortment of blistered toes, and sigh proudly: "Look at 'em! Ain't they pipe! I got 'em on my vacation six miles off the Canadian border."

There is something about a man taking his shoes and socks off in public and wiggling his toes in full view of strangers that is not wholly in accord with the principles of Democracy.

And yet, chilblains as a memento of a vacation deserve equal ranking with sunburns. It is certainly just as much of a trick to get sunburn in January in the north as chilblains in July in the south.

Mr. O'Goofy says he was away on a roughing expedition that would have warmed the cockles of the old '49 era. "Say, I didn't even have my shoes shined for two weeks," he boasts.

This, of course, is not hard to believe. It has always been our suspicion that Mr. O'Goofy lacked a certain polish.

Holland, Dowd and Farr Shine as Rough Game Goes to Local Students; Hardware City Regulars Fail to Star.

New Britain High offered rough but ineffective opposition to the Manchester High school basketball team in New Britain Saturday afternoon and lost by the score of 19 to 17. Manchester stepped into the lead in the first few minutes and held it throughout. Holland and Boggini played best for Manchester while the second team men New Britain was forced to get outdone the two regulars who played.

Local basketball followers expected fireworks because of the recent expose of the 16 New Britain men who were suspended for violating the rules of the Headmasters' Association in playing with outside teams. The fact that the expose came out through Principal Quimby heightened the feeling against Manchester and the local team was prepared for a hot session.

Rough Games It was a hot session in one respect. The home team played a hard, rough game but Manchester confined its efforts to basketball and came through with a decisive victory. At no time was New Britain dangerous and the local kept pling up points at all stages of the game. New Britain was held scoreless during the third quarter.

Captain Holland led his team well Saturday. He was in every play and his defensive work was just as good as his work on the offense. Manchester put up a defense that New Britain found difficulty in penetrating and most of the scores made by the home team were from well past the free throw line. Once in a while a New Britain man got loose but this was seldom.

Holland Stars Holland's eye was with him Saturday and he dropped in three of his well known plops from the side court and the middle of the floor. Farr to Gorman and Farr was a combination responsible for many scores while Nino Boggini at the guard position came up time and again for his shots.

Dowd and Gorman continued most of their efforts to the defense and did not figure in the field goal total. Nino Boggini got away from his forward several times and made three of his attempts good.

Manchester's guarding game was so good that only six field goals were made by New Britain, three of them by Zaleski on long shots. Landino, who scored two from the floor, figured heavily in the free throw column, making good five out of six tries.

N. B. Regulars Mediocore Sowka and Matulis, the two regular men left on the squad, might have been on the sidelines for all the good they accomplished. Sowka played not wisely but too well and was sent to the showers in the second half with four personal fouls. In all New Britain had ten personal fouls called on its men while Manchester escaped with three. Dick Dillon refereed.

Manchester led at the first quarter 8 to 4, at the half, 14 to 9 and at the third quarter, 19 to 9. The summary: Manchester B. F. T. Holland, rf 0 0 8 Gorman, lf 3 3 3 Farr, c 2 12 12 N. Boggins, rg 3 0 6 Dowd, lg 0 0 0 Totals 12 5 29

CHAPTER XLVIII

BEGAN to realize for the first time, Jim Elwell continued, "that I had acted the part of a selfish, thoughtless cad to marry you the way I did, Betty, and asking you to keep it secret. It wasn't fair to you, even if you hadn't come into a fortune, for neither of you girls had ever gone around with any fellow except Dick Canfield and me—and I had no right to tie you up the way I did. Dick did the honorable thing. Dick naturally would.

"The upshot of the matter was that I told Mollie and Frot the whole truth—that I had acted the part of a selfish, thoughtless cad to marry you the way I did, Betty, and asking you to keep it secret. It wasn't fair to you, even if you hadn't come into a fortune, for neither of you girls had ever gone around with any fellow except Dick Canfield and me—and I had no right to tie you up the way I did. Dick did the honorable thing. Dick naturally would.

"He paused a moment while he patted Betty's arm. So we decided to let you go on believing me because you were so sure that you wouldn't take the chance if it was offered to you in the ordinary way—that is, to give you a divorce."

"But—I fooled you, didn't I, Mister Elwell? Now you've got to go to Europe with your state and if she's a nurse—war nurse, I mean—well, it won't be very healthy for you."

Jim leaned back and smiled contentedly, blissfully unaware of the fact that during a certain period of his "living death" his actions had really given his mother cause for great anxiety and would have worried his wife considerably if she had known more about them.

"Just the same, Jim," Martha Dalton spoke reprovingly, "I think it was a mean trick to play on the girl. If you had seen your wife at night when they were waiting for you to get home—honestly, I think they would be nervous wrecks, both of them."

"And then, too," she added, "keeping this good news away from them for all these weeks, when they are so well and have known and been happy instead of heartbroken, Jim, I think you've been cruel."

Martha Dalton spoke as if she was mad. Jim "took it" smilingly. When she had finished he said, "Can't help it, old doc, but that's just the way it went. I had no business tying Betty up with a marriage and then going away to war and expecting her to shut her eyes every time she saw another man. And now since she's become an heiress she has to use a guard to keep the men away."

"All I need," remarked Betty humorously, "is Rusty's slipper. Eh, Margaret?"

"I didn't get that," said Jim, "but I'll find out later. I hope you girls

"I didn't get that, but I'll find out later."

forgive me for playing this little trick. Do you?"

"And you, Martha?"

"Well, just this once, Jim. But please don't ever—honestly, you almost broke my poor old heart."

"That wasn't the only nubbin thing he did," remarked Mollie Elwell. "Imagine going away to war and asking me not to try to find out which of the girls he was in love with. He was afraid, mind you, that if I knew which one it was I would favor her at the expense of the other in case he died overseas. Now, can you imagine any boy of mine being as misguided as all that?"

"And can you imagine him being as misguided as to think that I would desert him?" demanded Betty.

"I got the boy alone," said Prof. "I won't have you women picking on him like that. There are a few things about us men they'll never understand—eh, Jim?"

"That was true, Jim smiled.

"You mustn't blame Mollie," he said to Martha. "For what she said in her letter. If you'll remember, what she said was this: that there wasn't one chance in a thousand that I'd ever be any better mentally. Well, the chances are I won't. So there weren't any lies in the letter. I thought I could play possum until the twins had gone to Europe, and then if Betty hadn't found a man by the time she came back I could try all over again with her myself."

And so, said Jim, there they were.

Rusty, about Dick Canfield. Rusty blushing admitted that Dick was coming all the way from California, where he had a good job, on the strength of some answers she had given to his questions in a letter. "And while you folks are so good you let me remark that I know a nurse and a newspaperman up in New York who are not so miserable," spoke up Frot Elwell. "The last word was that Jack Nevin and Nellie Downing were considering a certain matter very seriously."

Betty giggled. Martha Dalton's arm. "Hear that, Dady? Your romance with the capital R was all right, but it got its characters mixed."

The evening before, in New York, Jack Nevin met Nellie Downing and, true to her word, she gave him a story that was good for two columns and a four-column "art layout" on the front page of the Planet the next morning.

There were pictures of Jim, the twins, Frot, Mollie and, after considerable persuasion on Jack's part, of Nellie Downing.

Nellie had to go down town with him and wait in a hotel lobby while he wrote the story.

To his city editor he said: "Boss, remember the night I threw you down on this Jim Elwell story and you wouldn't fire me?"

"Well, if I came to you, with the same story, only twice as good, and wrote it on my night off, would that square things with you?"

It certainly would, the city editor admitted. "It's real hot, Jack. I might be induced to put through a memorandum for a raise for you. I've been thinking of it for some time, but I wanted something to hang it on—make it look good to the front office, you know."

That was how Jack Nevin came to write the story of his life for the Planet—the best "human interest" story, the editor remarked the next day, that he had ever seen in his paper, and a scoop, too. "Whoever wrote it, send him in to me, I have something to tell him."

"You see," Jack told Nellie Downing when he had returned in his story to the city desk and the city editor had leaped nearly two feet in the air and shouted madly to the night editor to make a big front page "hole," "the yarn seems to have made a bit. It's all your fault, too, and I'm beginning to think that if I stick pretty close to you I'll get along in the newspaper game yet."

Nellie Downing gazed pensively at her hands. "I hate," Nevin told her, "to ask you to take a man who's only got one leg, but how could a cripple like me do better than to get a nurse for a wife?"

Well, Nellie admitted, there certainly was something in that.

Thus had the ends of the broken threads in the lives of the Elwells and their friends been caught up and tied together again.

Mother Destiny, beginning with that stormy night in October of 1898, had laid their lines in devious and baffling ways but had straightened them out at last.

THE END.

New York—Bumping an airplane ride around the world. That is the plan of a New York couple, a quiet, unassuming pair of seasoned fliers who have made cloud-skimming their hobby. Major and Mrs. Lester D. Gardner will leave New York City's bright lights behind them at midnight the first auspicious night next April, and using only established airlines, will encircle the globe, listing their progress according to pre-arranged schedule. They hope to hang up a new record of 24 days.

Blind-Baggage While they intend to pick up rides more or less blind-baggage from friendly pilots en route, they are going to keep an itemized account of all expenses.

They want to prove that the average American man and wife in moderate circumstances can take a three-week vacation and tour the world together.

Major Gardner is 51. There is a faint tinge of gray at his temples. He has a neatly trimmed mustache and wears horn-rimmed glasses through which his eyes peer blue and piercing. They have helped him pick his way through the enveloping mists of the Caribbean, Atlantic and Mediterranean. They have hovered over sandy wastes of the Sahara, guided him over the snow-capped Alps, seen the Russian steppes in the moonlight, the Ganges at dawn and have ferreted out a landing place for him in the green jungle land of the Congo.

Private to Major Major Gardner during the war ended up organizing air squadrons at Kelly Field, Tex., a full-fledged major.

At his publishing-office here, he paced the room as he outlined his schedule. He can't beat the established round-the-world record of 23 days 14 hours and 36 minutes. This plan, he says, he is going to pick up rides from pilot cronies scattered all over the globe.

Invitations "I have been invited by Soviet Russia and the German Luftwaffe combine to use their ships," he says. "And here are two cables inviting me to make the opening ride on the new Pekin-to-Moscow line. The Korea-to-Pekin line will be opened soon and in the spring I will be all set to pioneer the first regular journey around the world on the established chain."

"I tell you,"—and here he emphasized—pounded his desk in emphasis—"the day of commercial aviation has arrived. Flights are safe, reliable, convenient and inexpensive. It makes me bold to hear aviation duffers say they will jokingly remark that 'the ground is good enough for me.' That impedes progress and the Lord knows American aviation can brook little interference."

"Here is our schedule," and he handed out his maps and listed the major jumps. "We leave on the night plane from New York to Seattle. Take a steamer from Seattle to Yokohama. Fly from Yokohama to Saseo. Shoot across the Korea Strait to Fusan, Korea, then to Mukden in Manchuria. Then mine, I could make a wonder out of her."

The secret was out! And did I make a mental obituary to Mrs. X? No! To her old mother back in the little town. I broadcast silently my congratulations.

I've about decided that it doesn't matter what you look like if you have charm. And charm can get you anywhere. "Quod erat demonstrandum," as they say in "geodistry."

BANANA CROQUETTES Croquettes made of sliced banana strips, rolled in egg and crumbs and fried in deep fat make an excellent garnish for the meat course.

SOFT BRUSH Chandeliers and wall fixtures should be cleaned with a soft brush.

TOMATO SOUP Put a pinch of salt in the milk or cream for tomato soup, before adding tomatoes, and it will not curdle.

GREASE SPOTS Remove grease spots from the wall paper by spreading blotting paper over them and then pressing with a warm iron.

In the Winter you need the vital elements found in milk; need them even more than in the summer, when fresh vegetables are to be had.

Use more milk—more good milk from the Straightened Dairy.

THE WOMAN'S DAY BY ALLENE SUMNER

Molly's Problems "I love housework, but I can't afford to do it." This line rings in my ears as the high-spot of the gabfest which my school-day friend Molly and I had on the car this morning as we commuted to the city. Molly and I had a talk for work. Molly is a home economics expert. She holds degrees from a school of universities. Her teachers call her a whiz. So do I, for I have been a guest at Molly's table and moaned at a cruel world which sets before a poor girl trying to diet such heavenly treats as Molly makes and such "bitterscotch meringues."

But Molly's friends agree that Molly has "never really had a chance." Molly's mother died when Molly was getting her last degree. Molly's two younger sisters were undergraduates, and there was Molly's father, who must have his home. So Molly took a picnicy teaching job in her small town high school, managed the cafeteria, feeding some 300 students a day, and got up special banquets for the various organizations of the town, and "kept house on the side."

She "Broke Down" Molly did double duty thus for about five years, then her health broke down, and it was one job or the other. Molly of the many degrees gave up her teaching, and tried to return to normalcy via the route of "teaching hours" only. By this time the two sisters were also teaching in the environs and living at home, so there was a household of four adults to care for—hypersensitive adults, too, who not only ate but demanded attractive foods and an attractive home. Socially adults who entertained much, and earned reputations as the town's best hostesses, thanks to a Sister Molly always on tap with chilled punch and lady-fingers that melted in the mouth. And Molly bloomed again like the wild rose type she is, with fairy tale princess hair of corn gold and cool jade green eyes.

Enough of It But Molly has been home two years and she's hunting a school again. Someone else has the one at home, so Molly must teach away from home, "and let them get along somehow," she said, referring to the family.

"You see," said Molly, trying to explain her state of mind, "I've got to the end of making over my clothes. Remember this dress? You know I had it when we were in school. I put in this new vest and pleated the skirt and shortened it, and I've done that in every dress I've owned in the last two years. You see, two years ago each little month there was a nice $200 check all my own. For two years I've been going on momentum with what I saved the five years I was working. Then Molly laughed and so did I. The absurdity of the assumption that for two years Molly had not been working!

No Work For Her? I happened to know some of the odd jobs she had done the past few weeks. There had been Sarah's old beige sport suit which Molly had dyed the most heavenly dull blue, and the hat she had made to match touched up with flecks of orange and copper. And Molly had yanked off about all the wall paper in the house and stained and stippled and kalsomined and stenciled those old rooms into places of rarest charm. And the silver she had cleaned, and the linen she had herself laundered, and the bridge teas and luncheons had given, and the preserving she had done, and the glassware she had painted, and the—

"Can't Afford It" "I love it, but I can't afford it. I have to make my living like the rest of them," summarized Molly, making it very plain that her two years of labor had been merely "labor of love."

Now, regardless of what my own actions would be to this life which Molly finds sweet, I would like to see one to have the niche they want! And it seems to me that there is no earthly reason why Molly of the many degrees and the true fair for home-making shouldn't have this job she wants on an economic basis which would permit her to have it! The Solution The two sisters earn about $150 each a month. The father has an average income. And not on of the three works as hard and turns out such a perfect output, as Molly. Molly gets her "keen," that's all. That's tradition. The "women folks" never did get more than that. To be sure, wives get their clothes and other necessities, but it seems different with a sister and daughter somehow! Molly wants and needs a wage, and she should have it!

They'll Find Out The sisters are amply righteous about the fact that they "pay board." They pay their share of the actual running expenses of the house, but "services of Molly" are never an item in that budget! If the home is broken up and they try "boarding," they'll find what "services" mean in others' budgets.

YOUR SICK CHILD IS CONSTIPATED! LOOK AT TONGUE

Hurry, Mother! Remove poisons from little stomach, liver, bowels

Give "California Fig Syrup" if cross, bilious or feverish

No matter what ails your child, a gentle, thorough laxative should always be the first treatment given. If your little one is out-of-sorts, half-sick, isn't resting, eating and acting naturally—look, Mother! see if tongue is coated. This is a sure sign that the little stomach, liver and bowels are clogged with waste. When cross, irritable, feverish, stomach sour, breath bad or has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, sore throat, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Fig Syrup," and in a few hours all the constipated poison, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of the little bowels without gripping, and you have a well, playful child again.

Mother can rest easy after giving this harmless, "fruity laxative" because it never fails to cleanse the little one's liver and bowels and sweeten the stomach, and they dearly love its pleasant taste. Full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups printed on each bottle.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Fig Syrup." Then see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company."—adv.

Good Nature and Good Health

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN In 1827 a London physician, Richard Bright, described a disease of the kidneys that is now known as Bright's disease, also as chronic interstitial nephritis, which means a long continued inflammation of the tissues of the kidneys.

These organs are charged primarily with separating waste substances from the blood. When they become diseased they permit some of the material from the blood to leak through and a physician, by simple laboratory tests, is able to detect the presence of such leakage.

Tonsils and Teeth It has been found that in many instances these inflammations come from infections of the blood in other parts of the body, particularly from the tonsils or teeth.

In some diseases, particularly scarlet fever, there seems to be a special tendency toward involvement of the kidneys so that it is customary in scarlet fever to give a simple diet and to place as little burden upon the kidneys as possible.

STOP BAD BREATH People afflicted with bad breath find quick relief through Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. The pleasant, sugar-coated tablets are taken for bad breath by all who know them.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets act gently but firmly on the bowels and liver, stimulating them to natural action, clearing the blood and gently purifying the entire system. They do that which dangerous calomel does without any of the bad after effects.

Olive Tablets bring no griping, pain or any disagreeable effects. Dr. F. M. Edwards discovered the formula after 20 years of practice among patients afflicted with bowel and liver complaint, with heart and bad breath.

Olive Tablets are purely a vegetable compound mixed with olive oil; you will know them by their olive color. Take nightly for a week and note the effect. 5c, 20c, 50c. All Druggists.

The woman had always been a mystery to me. She was so completely without beauty that all her money and the combined efforts of Parisian dress-makers and milliners to bring her under the next classification called "type" had failed. No "nobody could ever say that Mrs. X had "type" or even taste.

I knew that she had had neither social prestige nor money before her marriage. Brains she had, and an excellent education. But brains have never been considered a gilt-edged security in the marriage market, and education—"not listed."

Yet she had married, right on the train (for she came from a small town), the most eligible bachelor of the realm. He was a bit older than she, traveled, an alumnus in the school of culture, and a connoisseur in the world of women. Today, as his wife, she is a social leader and head of a dozen different objective organizations that fill her time in an admirably ideal manner. Absolute success!

How had she done it? One day at a tea I found myself alone with her in a alcove where it was quiet—as quiet as it could be in such a gabbie. I had time to observe before she turned to me, that the olive green hat and matching blue dress she wore gave her the color of a cooked artichoke. I fairly gasped.

She gave me a friendly smile, over her tea-cup, then tilted her head slightly toward the crowded room. "I've been watching 'Gloria Green,'" she said as though she'd known me forever. "She's that plain little girl by the door. Just came out, you know, last week. I'd like to punch her mother."

"Why?" I smiled.

"The poor child's so homely," she said, "and her mother hasn't enough sense to tell her that nothing makes up for a plain face but personality and charm. She'll never get anywhere. I wish she was

WHAT'S WRONG?

This is a child's test, but it may stick many an adult. The correct answers appear on the comic page. 1-What is unnatural in the running position of the man in the illustration? 2-What states border directly south of Michigan? 3-Is Rhode Island larger than the District of Columbia? 4-What early colonial governor was called "Old Silverleg"? 5-What is the feminine of comedian? 6-What heavenly body is the closest to the earth? 7-Is the bed of an ocean level? 8-What is the capital of Maine? 9-What is the abbreviation for professor? 10-In what state is the Royal Gorge?

When asked how he made out on his day on the links, the beginner replied that he made it in 80. "Eighty!" ejaculated his friend, "that's really remarkable. Most old-timers would envy you on that score. You'll surely be an enthusiast from now on." "Yes," said the novice, condescendingly, "I'm going back tomorrow and try the second hole."

THE TINYMITES BY HAL COCHRAN

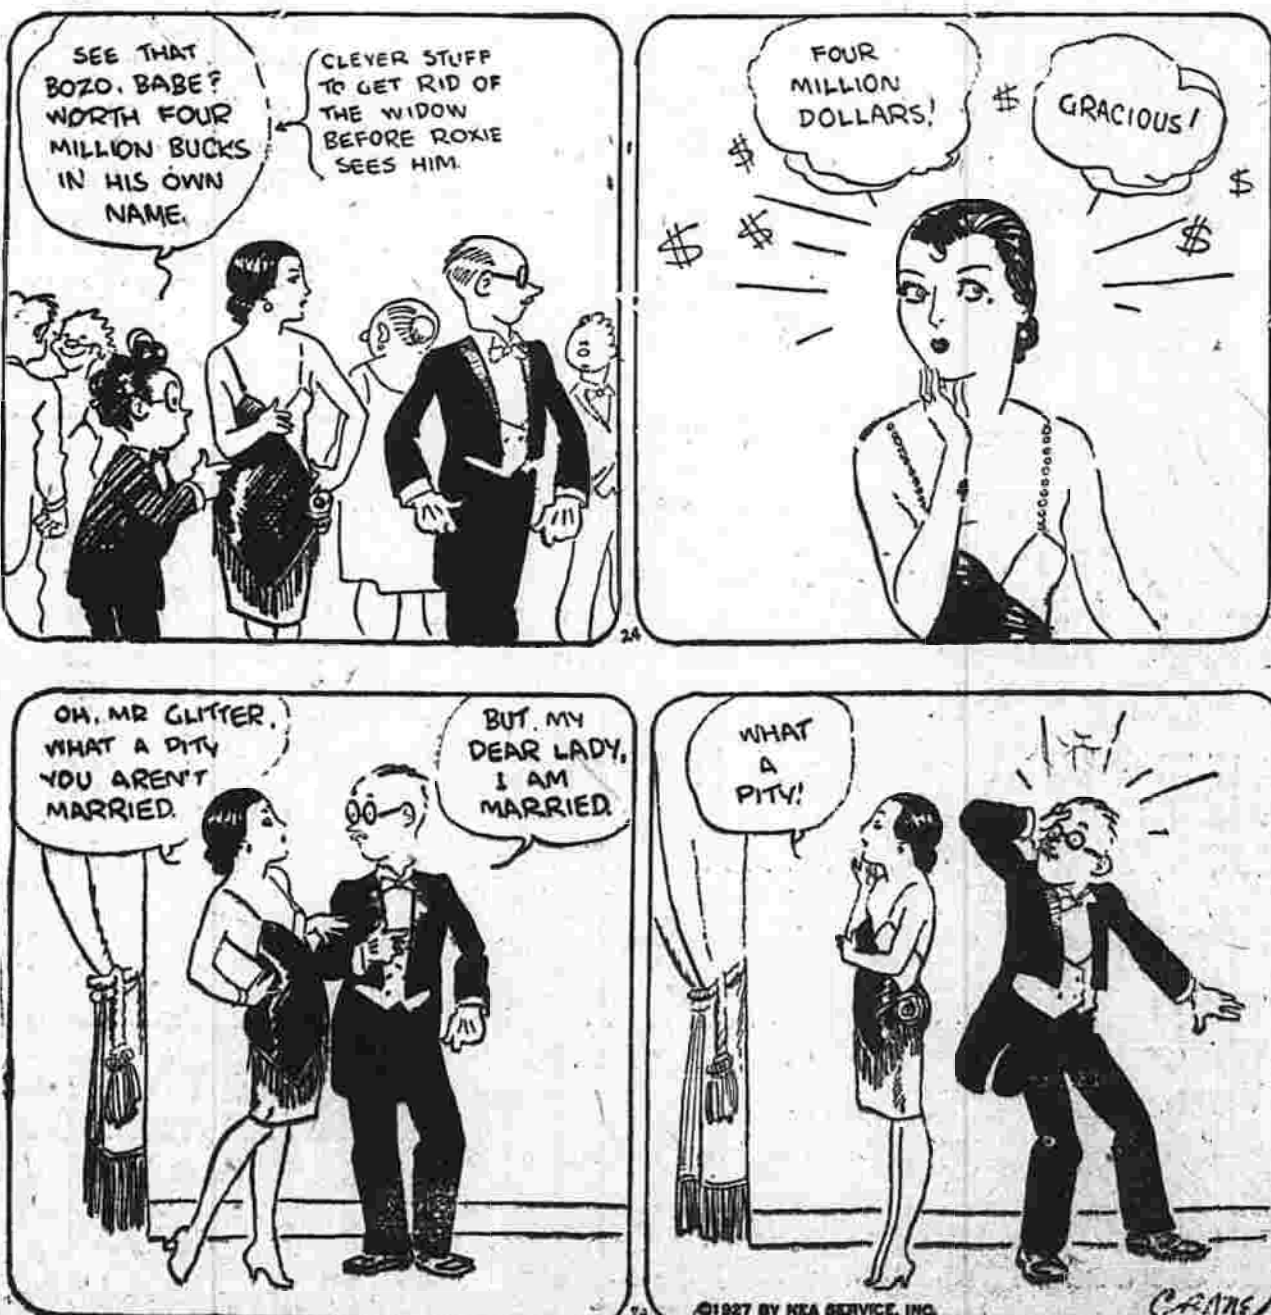

(Read the Story, Then Color the Picture)

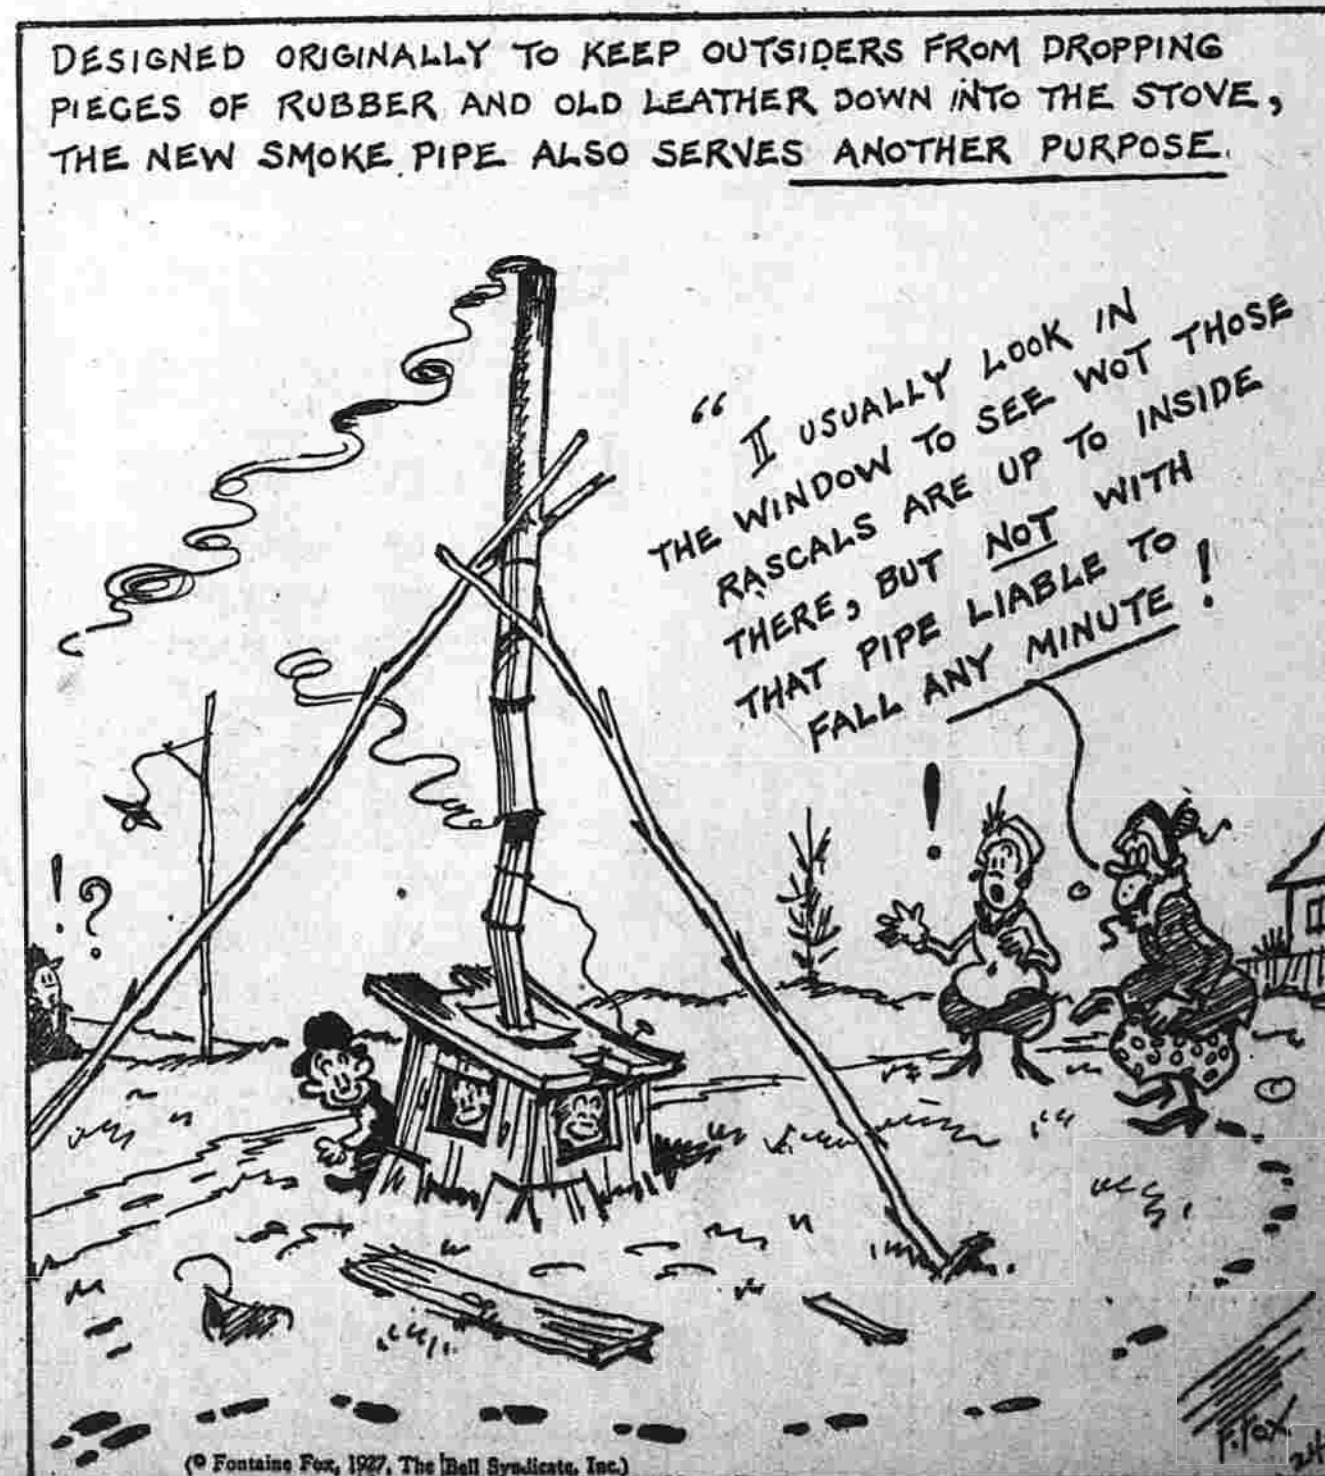

Some other seals crawled to the ice. No doubt, they, too, thought fish were nice. The Tinies had a lot of fun until the fish were gone. Then Scouty said, "Let's catch some more." And then the Eskimo replied, "They only bite at dawn." He then ran off without a word and not a thing from him was heard until he came rushing back and said, "I'll grant your wish. Just stand right still, and turn about, and then hold both your hands right out. If you're a real good catcher, you will catch a bunch of fish." The Eskimo has brought some more of fish that he had had in store. When Scouty did as he was told, the fish came flying fast. Although this way to fish was poor, that's how he caught them, to be sure. And very shortly he was holding quite enough to last. The seals stayed around an hour or so, but when filled up began to go. They'd slide down in the water and then disappear from sight. Just one big seal remained behind. I guess he thought the Tinies kind. Then Clowny let a holler out that almost brought on fright. "I'll tell you what we'll do," said he, "to fill us up with pep and glee. We'll get the seal to carry us around upon his neck." "Oh, no," said Coppy, in reply. "That's something I don't care to try. I'm sure that I would fall right off and be a total wreck." But Clowny wished to have the thrill, so as the friendly seal stood still, he climbed right up and sat right down, and then said, "Hey, let's go." The seal, at first, seemed quite surprised, but then, I guess, he realized what Clowny wished so he began to move along real slow. (Clowny gets a ducking in the next story.)
