PLAN REMAPPING STATE BY PLANE Many Errors Found In Old Maps; Would Cost $250,000 Is Estimate.

Hartford, Feb. 9.—A bill introduced in the General Assembly providing for a remapping of the state by aeroplane, with an appropriation of $30,000, annually, for five years therefor, was studied at a meeting of the Forestry and State Parks Committee of the Connecticut Chamber of Commerce held here today.

The total cost of the remapping would be $250,000, which would be shared by the U. S. Geological Survey. Experience in other states has demonstrated that most of the older maps are seriously in error. More careful surveys, together with a better knowledge of conditions existing in various localities, make possible a map of much greater accuracy.

The committee voted to refer the bill to the Legislative Committee of the State Chamber, with the recommendation that it receive support. After a careful consideration of appropriation bills for forestry and state parks maintenance, Mr. Billard of Meriden was authorized to represent the State Chamber at the hearing before the Finance Committee.

Among other matters which the committee considered was that of the need for town forest organizations in Connecticut. Through Commissioner Platt, the committee's attention was called to the fact that there are at present only two such organizations in the state, owning about 200 acres. In other states, such organizations exist and are of considerable benefit. In Massachusetts, there are 42 associations owning about 3,000 acres; in Vermont, there are 24 associations owning 5,000 acres. The committee voted to take this matter up for further consideration at a future meeting.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES

This year the various clubs and student organizations at the local high school have been most successful. There have been a larger number of such organizations than ever before. Many of the clubs are for honorary scholarship, and with this purpose in view encourage students to attain marks of honor where they otherwise would not do so.

Among the Freshmen there are three such clubs. There is the Carpe Diem Socialists' Latin club, under the direction of Miss Hopkins. This is the third year for this club. It was organized by Miss Hopkins three years ago, and some of the charter members are still enrolled as honorary members. The purpose of this club is the encouragement of honorary scholarship in Latin. None but students with marks of honor may be members.

The other two clubs are English clubs under the direction of the Misses Burke and Tripp. Both are likewise honorary scholarship clubs.

There is for the first time in the school's history, this year a French club. It is called "Le Cercle Français." The Misses Nolan and Kelley are the faculty directors. All Senior French students are enrolled as charter members, while all the members from the Junior and Sophomore classes are honorary scholarship members. At the meetings of this club everyone is required to speak French. If anyone is caught speaking English he is fined for doing so. "To speak French is to learn French."

There is also a German club under the direction of Miss Kelley. This is the first organization of its kind since the revival of the teaching of this tongue in the local school. Honorary scholarship is also the purpose of this club.

Miss Gist has charge of the only English club in the main building. It is the Sophomore English club. All its members must have marks of honor in English each marking period.

The debating club has for its purpose, of course, the encouragement of public speaking. Since its re-organization by Mr. Quimby four years ago, Manchester has taken two legs on the Danaher Debating trophy and hopes to get it for permanent possession this year.

The Writer's club is the first organization of its kind in the history of the school. It was just recently organized by Miss Viets, Senior English teacher. It has for its purpose the encouragement of writing a most worthy purpose. Only Seniors are members at present, but later on it is expected that a number of under classmen will be admitted.

The Soc and Buskin club, the dramatic club, had a most successful year under Mrs. Somers last year, and this year, bids fair to outdo its successes of last year. One play has already been given, and two more will be presented shortly at the Senior class carnival.

Both the Boys' and the Girls' Glee clubs, in their second year of existence, are doing excellent work. Both are under the direction of Miss Doward, and have rendered several numbers in public this year.

Last year the Boys' Glee club won the interscholastic glee club championship. Both clubs will be again entered this year in this contest.

There will be a meeting on Friday afternoon of the representatives of the various clubs and student organizations for the purpose of completing plans for the Senior class carnival.

The band will rehearse tomorrow afternoon in room 2. Bandmaster Harold Turkington requests a full and prompt attendance.

The Writer's club held its weekly meeting this afternoon in room 23. Miss Viets assigned the work for the coming week. It is expected to have some interesting contributions from this club shortly.

There is no home basketball game scheduled for this week. This fact will give everyone a chance to store up a whole lot of lung power for the Bristol game which will take place the following week. If Manchester can't beat Bristol next week—but next week isn't here yet.

The orchestra rehearsed today in the assembly hall. As usual, the orchestra will play for assembly tomorrow, so each member should remember to bring his instrument.

Members of Miss Nolan's Senior French class have entered a French translation contest which is being conducted all over the country in high schools and colleges. The subject for translation is a speech made recently by the French Minister Briand.

Points which will count in this contest is the exact reflection of the French thought in the English translation, the use of smooth flowing English in the translation of the French, and neatness. It is a different task to get an exact translation of the French thought in the English sentence. The French idioms must be matched with precision with the English expression, while not the same words as the French idiom, express the French thought exactly in English.

A considerable sum of money is to be given away in prizes for the best translations. It will be permissible to use French dictionaries, grammars, or any other such source of information. However, the contestant must not receive any help from any French teacher or any other person. The work must be the result of his own efforts.

"CONNEY-CUT-UT" BOYS WELCOME IN FRANCE

Paris.—Grand-mère Brindelet in La Ferté-sous-Jouarre hopes that James Duff of "Conney-Cut-ut" will be amongst the American Legionnaires of the second A. E. F. All up through the battlefields which knew American hob nails a similar sentiment is being expressed by the French people of the towns in those regions.

These people have all read in their newspapers and in the organs of their veterans' societies about the coming of The American Legion to France next summer, but their first reaction, on being told some of the details of the pilgrimage is one of wonder that so many people could, or should desire to come so far from their homes. The second reaction is a personal one of wondering if some American soldier of their acquaintance will be coming back with the Legionnaires.

Was a Good Boy James Duff, who was with the 26th Division is remembered by Grand-mère Brindelet because he was "such a good boy and used to sing so well." This kind old lady sits in her photograph shop at La Ferté-sous-Jouarre and tells how a dozen Yankee Division soldiers at a time, would perch on the wooden stairs which wind to the upper story of her shop, and sing "Home Sweet Home," and other songs which she cannot remember.

La Ferté-sous-Jouarre will always be remembered also as the jumping off place of the "Yankee" Division, which hit into the second battle of the Marne on the right flank of the western face of the Soissons Chateau-Thierry salient after it had been dug deep by the terrific advance of the German troops. This town is also proud of having served as a temporary resting place of the 42nd Division when it was withdrawn from the lines on July 18th after three days fighting under General Gouraud in which the division lost 450 officers and 1350 men killed and wounded.

Another Grandmother. Another grandmother in La Ferté-sous-Jouarre spends most of her time displaying a husky babe in arms to the customers of her little grocery store while the mother of the child is attending to their needs. To the occasional American who visits the store this Grandmother proudly explains that the baby might have been an American child if her daughter had only yielded to the pleadings of the 42nd Division soldier who wanted to marry her and take her to the states in 1919. "He came clear back from the Army of Occupation in Germany to try and get my little girl!" she says proudly.

She tells how her daughter and this young soldier corresponded in a peculiar mixture of French and English until about two years ago when he sent the announcement of his marriage to a girl in his home town in California. "Perhaps he'll be over next year," she said almost gaily. It was suggested to her that perhaps the wife might not agree to the visit to La Ferté-sous-Jouarre.

Would Welcome Wife "Pourquoi pas?" demanded the Grandmother, "surely his wife will be glad to meet all of the good friends whom he knew during those terrible days. Surely we shall be glad to greet her and tell her nice things about her man—that is if she can understand French."

Grandmother Brindelet has many snapshots of American soldiers, on films which were left with her by men who never came back for them. "They went hurriedly in the lines from here—" she explains, with a war-wise shake of the head and shrug of the shoulders which speaks volumes in any language. "If they come in 1927, I shall have the pictures waiting."

said. "I base my opinion on the same reasons given by Dr. Butler and upon other fundamental reasons not stated by him. I do not, however, assume to speak for the President."

"A complete and impenetrable silence prevailed at the White House concerning Dr. Butler's comments on the third term and upon prohibition. Mr. Coolidge has ignored all questions put to him concerning these matters.

"His pronouncements on the 18th Amendment are eagerly quoted by every lawbreaker who seeks to cover his misdeeds with a cloak of borrowed respectability. "If any party should be so foolish as to follow his advice and nominate a wet presidential candidate the voters will not leave a greasy spot of that party, Dr. Butler, or Dr. Butler's candidate."

Borah's suggestion that both parties fight out the wet-and-dry question in the elections of delegates to the national conventions apparently found little favor with either Republicans or Democrats.

Against Fighting "I don't use any occasion to fight over the subject in the primaries," said Senator Bruce, Democrat of Maryland, "although I believe the Democrats can win if they nominate a wet. Fights in primaries only accentuate differences, create ill feeling and split the party. It is up to Democratic leaders in the convention to learn what the masses of the party desire."

The keenness of the wet-and-dry controversy somewhat overshadowed today the other bold prediction of Dr. Butler—that President Coolidge's "common sense" would prevent his attempting to buck the third-term tradition. A good many Republicans in Congress agreed with his prediction, though most of them did so privately.

Moses the Exception Senator George H. Moses, Republican of New Hampshire, was an exception to the rule of those who would only comment privately. "I do not think President Coolidge will run for a third term," he

GOLD RUSH FEATURES STATE'S PROGRAM

$50 in Prizes Tonight—Eight Vaudeville Acts For Thursday.

Fifty dollars in gold and two smashing features! That is the menu to be served up to State theater patrons this evening as just another in the long series of special Wednesday night programs. Bargain Night comes again tomorrow evening at the State also when eight superior acts of vaudeville will appear on the same bill with Richard Dix in "Paradise for Two."

The State management is presenting the gold pieces tonight, in denominations of $5 and $2.50 prizes. There will be five of the former and ten of the latter, fourteen in all, so there will be fifteen fortunate ones in the audience tonight. Refreshments will not be needed to tell the winners for they will be announced from the stage.

To top off the evening the State presents Pauline Frederick, the great emotional actress, in "Josselyn's Wife," suggested by the human interest story by Kathleen Norris, famed writer of tales of home life. With this feature the fans will enjoy as another entree Buck Jones, the ideal cowboy in "Desert Valley" a tale of the wastelands.

"Josselyn's Wife" is a highly dramatic story telling in graphic pictures the story of a woman's ideals shattered by a philandering society man who, after jilting her, returns with his younger wife only to continue his now unwelcome attentions upon the woman who has married his very best friend. Throughout this highly entertaining film, Miss Frederick, who plays the title role, gives one of her greatest performances, and in the scene where she is trapped in the artist's studio and there is confronted by her husband, the star reaches the greatest heights of her histrionic ability. "Carnival Capers" a pretentious revue containing six people who sing, dance and play all kinds of musical instruments with the skill of masters, feature the State vaudeville program for Bargain Night, tomorrow evening. This revue is considered one of the most colorful and brilliant traveling the East today. But that's enough for that. There are seven others, each as good if not better than the average run of State vaudeville, acts that stand out as distinctive and unique in their power to entertain.

The movie program is just as good as the vaudeville show and the whole is a well balanced bill that all will enjoy. Other acts on the same bill will include "Dover and Soltau" in a novelty dancing act, Goetz and Dully in uproarious comedy; Hibbert and Hartman, a male and female team of unusual versatility and the Four Gaertners in a unique juggling act in which they use each other as the objects they juggle.

So there are two crackerjack programs to pick from. It is safe to say that most of the Manchester people who desire good entertainment will attend them both.

WEDNESDAY, FEB. 9, 1927.

FEDERAL BUILDING.

Manchester's chance of having a federal building at the Center, if any, are growing no worse at all events. The House has approved expenditures of $125,000,000 for public buildings in addition to the $165,000,000 voted at the last session.

The total sum available for buildings, under this provision, would be $290,000,000. Of this $15,000,000 would have to go to complete buildings authorized in 1913.

Congress, it will be remembered, has made no allocations of structures in these measures, the bills, under which the authorization has been made or may be made, providing that the entire fund shall be expended under direction of the Treasury Department.

While the Treasury Department will, of course, endeavor to serve the best interests of the country as a whole in the allocation of the buildings, it would be too much to expect that, other things being substantially equal, the buildings will not go to towns and cities which have the advantage of active and influential advocates in Washington.

SENT-ON-APPROVAL JUNK. The unsolicited "sent-on-approval" system of merchandising which is made possible only by the Post Office Department's delay in putting an end to it, is a system of business for which there is no justification and which the people, in their own interest, ought not to support.

It is based on a psychological quirk; it takes advantage of the fact that a novel approach is certain to attract a certain proportion of the persons solicited, without regard to the merits of the article offered or the price asked.

Still others, quite determined not to permit themselves to be "sold" by any such method, neglect the return until there comes a dun from the vendor. Then, because they do not feel sure of their ground, they settle as demanded.

The recipient of such unsolicited shipments by mail should understand that the shipper has no rights in the case whatever. To be sure, if the person who receives the goods actually accepts them and uses them he is party to a sale and the bill is collectable.

It is the duty of the citizen to discourage this kind of merchandising because, if it is not discouraged, it will increase. Presently we shall daily or perhaps several times daily receive packages of stuff for which we have no earthly use, and shall continually be put to the trouble and inconvenience of either returning it or giving it storage room. Also the expense of conducting the Post Office Department will increase so greatly that an increasing deficit will have to be met out of the money that, directly or indirectly, every citizen contributes to the business of government.

This entirely aside from the fact that it is unfair and injurious to the business people of one's own community, who pay rent, hire clerks and aid in the development of the town or city, and who invariably sell better goods at lower prices than these cheap-jack mail operators.

BOGEYS. One of the most attractive things about Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, President of Columbia university, is the whole souled enthusiasm of the man for any determination at which he arrives.

Having come to the conclusion that President Coolidge is not the best choice of the Republican party for its 1928 Presidential nominee, because of the country's antipathy to the third term idea, President Butler does not content himself with the mild warning which would content most persons entertaining the same conviction, but in clarion tones asserts that certain defeat would be invited by the party if it were to make Coolidge its nominee for a succeeding term.

That is Butler's way. He never offers a suggestion as a possibility, always as a certainty and with cartoon effects.

It may be true, as Butler declares, that there are members of the party all over the country who share his view, to the extent of holding that the Coolidge candidacy would be a debatable matter, as to expediency, if there were any certainty that the President intends to be a candidate.

Senator Shortridge, in his comment on Butler's assertion, seems to us to cover the whole matter when he says: "The Republican party can elect President Coolidge or any other nominee in 1928. As to the President's intentions toward the nomination nobody knows the slightest thing about them save the President himself."

At first thought there was something so bizarre, so extraordinarily incompatible about the wallings of the cart wheels of the Mikado's funeral, echo of thousands of years of tradition, plucked up by the startlingly new radio microphone and hung over the whole island empire for worshipping millions to hear, that one said involuntarily, "Such things could be nowhere but Japan."

and Italian coalition in a probably disastrous "defense of Shanghai." While the history of the past year is not such as to lead to the belief that the Cantonese tide has been permanently turned through this one reverse, it is probable that it will be some weeks, may be some months, before the National army is able to resume an important offensive movement toward Shanghai. And in the meanwhile there will be time for a readjustment of any policies in Italy or in the United States which may have been adopted under stress of excitement and which, if carried out, would be only too likely to be calamitous in results.

There are very few Americans who will not sincerely hope that, if Shanghai is again imperiled, our government will be in a frame of mind to keep its Marines on board ship and to protect American nationals by removing them rather than making a hopeless war over them.

BUTLER ON 1928. The high improbability of the Republican candidate in 1928, whoever he may be, running the slightest risk of defeat is due to the fact that the Democratic party, the only conceivable opposition, will most certainly split squarely in two on the idea of McAdooism vs. Smithism, whether the actual candidates of McAdoo and Smith are sidetracked or not. That one time party is now two parties, and one of the two will vote against the other at the polls no matter what is done at their joint convention.

That is Butler's way. He never offers a suggestion as a possibility, always as a certainty and with cartoon effects. It may be true, as Butler declares, that there are members of the party all over the country who share his view, to the extent of holding that the Coolidge candidacy would be a debatable matter, as to expediency, if there were any certainty that the President intends to be a candidate.

WASHINGTON LETTER

By RDONEY DUTCHER

Washington, Feb. 8.—"Ain't there no Justice?" a melodrama in one act, presented at the Capitol by the Senate Stock Company: The cast: Squire Hardacre, the village mortgage-holder, hated yet feared by farmers for miles around. . . . Irvine K. Lenroot.

Deacon Simpkins, a good old gent dominated by the wicked squire. . . . Read Smoot. Sally Surplus, his beautiful ward, worth $350,000,000, whom he has promised to Hardacre. . . . The Treasury Surplus. Jack Strongbone, poor but honest lad, returned home from the city dead broke, but hoping to win Sally and pay off the mortgage. . . . James A. Reed.

Pa and Ma Strongbone, simple old folk who must sit helpless, hoping with anxious hearts to save the old home. . . . Mr. and Mrs. Allis Tassanyara. Zeb Perkins, comical hick supervisor of the Strongbone farm, who knows the heart of Sally. . . . Carter Glass.

Farmhands, plotting to keep the farm for the Strongbones. . . . Pat Harrison, Royal S. Copeland, Walter F. George, M. M. Neely and others. Hon. Samuel Blackburn, the county judge, who is in league with Hardacre and finally forces an unhappy ending on a legal technicality. . . . Charles G. Dawes.

That's no attempt to analyze a situation and make it simple. If its have been needed for them to keep right on going and produce a good old rural melodrama. Hardly a senator who couldn't get himself a job as a movie type and on this particular afternoon the galleries must have thought a rehearsal for "Way Down East" was in progress. "If you know these senators, you'll promptly get the picture."

There was good old, capable Smoot, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, explaining why surplus mustn't be given back, looking down at the floor for all the world like a Christian Endeavor superintendent stammering an explanation of a moral lapse. Growing jumpy and excited, and stuttering under Reed's liquid fire and bayonet attack—seemingly, because he is a poor fellow, to get all tangled up in his own barbed wire. Smoot's oratorical gestures are almost as unconvincing as William G. McAdoo's, though he knows what he is talking about whether he appears to or not.

Lenroot, the hard-headed, lame duck from Wisconsin, took on the burden of the heavy villain's part—Smoot not making a really good villain. He was superb in his efforts to discredit Strongbone Reed, although he could not match the Missouri man's master thrusts of wit and sarcasm. Of course, Lenroot is playing numerous heavy parts for the administration in these parlous days, the theory being that he is working for promotion into Grand Opera as an ambassador or something.

Our hero, Jim Reed, dominated the situation all the way, until Dawes ruled out his refund amendment to the deficiency bill on a point of order. Lenroot and Smoot were but foils for his effective lines; so was Jim Watson of Indiana, who finally moved over alongside them late in the procedure, and tried to help.

The sense of the plot seemed to be that all the Democratic actors were allowing the best lines and situations to go to Reed because he was planning yet to save the day by running for district attorney or something in 1928.

City Government Invests Spare Cash In Churches

The First Presbyterian Church of McAlester, which borrowed $35,000 from the city. Inset, Mayor J. B. McAlester, who says such loans bring the city a new prosperity.

McAlester, Okla.—Investments of city funds in church property pays a city in dollars and cents.

Such is the reasoning of city officials of McAlester.

For proof they point to the growth of the city and the resulting increase in property values and taxable wealth.

That growth, they say, has been due largely to the fact that prospective residents choose McAlester over other places because they find here such handsome church structures.

City Loans Money
A policy of investing city money, especially funds from the sinking fund, in loans to churches was begun during the administration of W. E. Beatty, former mayor, and is being continued under Mayor J. B. McAlester, a member of the family for which the city was named.

Although city funds could have been lent to others at 8 per cent, the city authorities have found it paid to lend to the churches at 6 per cent.

By use of the loans new churches have been built or additions have been made to existing church properties until McAlester is known as a city of churches.

The city gets interest on its money, the churches get a low rate and funds to make extensions which could not otherwise be made for years, and in the meantime the city's income from taxation grows as the city grows.

Where the Money Went

The first Christian Church of McAlester which cost $75,000, was lent $35,000. The Episcopal church, which had just finished a splendid Gothic style church of native stone, borrowed $10,000 on its $20,000 investment. The First Presbyterian church, completed a year ago at a cost of $98,000, has a loan of $35,000.

The Grand Avenue Methodist church, which recently took over the First Methodist Episcopal church, has a loan of $40,000 on its $100,000 property. Other loans include $24,000 to the First Baptist church to enable it to complete its new Sunday school building, and $2400 to smaller churches.

When the city went to the aid of the different denominations, which have a total membership of over 4000 and property valued at approximately $700,000, it made possible the carrying out of a building program long contemplated, and eliminated the necessity of waiting many months, perhaps years, before the churches would be in shape financially to improve their properties without outside help.

The Value of Religion
The city commissioners of McAlester in considering investment of the city's sinking fund in church loans decided favorably because they believed the building of church would not only improve the appearance of the city, but would emphasize the value placed upon religious work and education.

"Making loans for the construction of churches is an investment which returns many times over the favor done by the city," says Mayor McAlester. "Churches are the very foundation of good government and so the city should be given every reasonable financial encouragement."

QUEER QUIRKS OF NATURE

DISCARDED ANTLERS ARE DEVOURED

By ARTHUR N. PACK

Once each year the members of the deer family shed their antlers. Old woodmen frequently deny this, declaring they have never found a discarded antler in the woods, despite the fact they have

A CLEAR COMPLEXION

Ruddy cheeks—sparkling eyes—most women can have. Dr. F. M. Edwards for 20 years treated scores of women for liver and bowel ailments. During these years he gave his patients a substitute for calomel made of a few well-known vegetable ingredients mixed with olive oil, naming them Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. Know them by their olive color. These tablets are wonder-workers on the liver and bowels, which cause a normal action, carrying off the waste and poisonous matter in one's system.

If you have a pale face, sallow look, dull eyes, pimples, coated tongue, headaches, a listless, no-good feeling, all out of sorts, inactive bowels, you take one of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets nightly for a time and note the pleasing results. Thousands of women and men take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—now and then to keep fit. 15c, 30c and 60c.

roamed moose or deer country all their lives.

There are two reasons why the antlers are not found more frequently, and this picture explains one of them very well. Mice and porcupines, especially the latter, are fond of these horns, gnawing them whenever they get the chance. By the time the snow is melted, exposing the antlers that were shed during the winter, these rodents have left but little of them to find.

The second reason why so few antlers are picked up in the woods is that they are shed while the animals are in their winter yards, usually in some remote, inaccessible spot, and frequently in a swamp, where in spring the antlers are quickly trampled out of sight.

The growth of the new antlers begins about time vegetation starts in spring and they develop very rapidly. During the time of their growth they are covered and nourished by a sensitive skin, known as velvet, that bleeds readily if wounded.

In early autumn the antler hardens and the animal rubs this velvet away, by scraping the horns against brush and trees. The antlers are then hard polished weapons, ready for the love-mad battles of the rutting or mating season.

Once that trying time is past, the antlers are no longer needed, so they are shed.

How to read Percentages

Were Dodge Brothers to sell 100 motor cars one year and 200 motor cars the next, they could truthfully announce that their sales had increased 100% in a single year. Yet they would only have sold 300 motor cars in all.

In other words, PERCENTAGE of annual gain is not conclusive. The NUMBER of cars sold is the true test.

That Dodge Brothers sales in 1926 showed an increase of 27.6% over 1925 is not the MAJOR fact to consider—striking as it is.

But that Dodge Brothers sold 259,967 cars in 1925, and then in 1926 sold 331,764—a gain of 71,797 sales in twelve months—tells a story of growth that stands out like a tower on the skyline of the industry.

Three hundred and thirty-one thousand buyers LAST year! Many more vital improvements added THIS year! No increase in price! Three powerful arguments for earnestly investigating this smart and sturdy product before deciding what to buy!

Your Income Tax

Deductions for depreciation form an important item in the returns of many taxpayers, and are the subject of frequent inquiries. The word "depreciation" is not used by the revenue act of 1926, which provides for a "reasonable allowance for the exhaustion, wear, and tear of property used in the trade or business, including a reasonable allowance of obsolescence." For convenience, such allowance usually is referred to by regulations relating to the income tax as depreciation.
 In claiming a deduction for depreciation several fundamental principles must be observed. The deduction must be confined to property actually used in the trade, business, profession, or vocation. In general, it applies to the taxpayer's capital assets—buildings, machinery, etc.—the cost of which cannot be deducted as a business expense. A building or machine gradually becomes old and worn out. On account of this depreciation the value is thereby sustained, for which the taxpayer is entitled to recognition in making his return of income.
 Depreciation may be claimed on all business property, which includes not only buildings and machinery of a permanent character, but automobiles, farm tractors, mine and mill equipment, office furniture, and books. A lawyer, doctor, or other professional man may not charge off as a current expense the cost of a library used wholly in his profession, this being a capital expenditure and the library a capital asset. But he may deduct an allowance for depreciation, based upon the useful life of the library.

WEARS NO MAN'S TIE

Laclede, Me.—An already-tied bow on an elastic band was the only kind of necktie that E. N. Rawlinson would consent to wear. When his wife was dressing for a party, she hung one of her fancy garters over her husband's dresser. He, supposing it was one of the new-fashioned ties he had received for Christmas, wore it to the party. During the card games, Mrs. Rawlinson discovered her husband, center of a giggling circle, with a blue elastic garter filled with pink soap on his Adam's apple.

THE SPIANS TO GATHER.

New Haven, Feb. 9.—Three hundred persons interested in the theater as amateurs will gather here Friday and Saturday to discuss the problems affecting "Little Theaters" and amateur dramatics throughout the country. Yale University is to be host to the gathering which will have delegates from every state in the Union. The convention is to have only four general addresses, most of the time being devoted to round table conferences. Sessions will be held in the Yale theater.

HANNA APPOINTED

Toronto, Feb. 9.—David Blythe Hanna, former chairman of the Canadian National railway, has been appointed chairman of the new Ontario liquor commission. It was announced today.

THE ROMANCE OF AMERICA: Lewis and Clark (3)

Mandans and Minnetarees saw the three craft toiling up the Missouri river. Sacajawea, from a high bluff, watched the strange men's boats and vaguely wondered. The tribes offered the explorers the hand of friendship and Lewis and Clark decided to winter. They built their huts near what is now Bismarck, N. D., and the Indians visited them.

Charbonneau, Sacajawea's mate, was hired as interpreter. He told them Sacajawea had come, as captive, over part of the way they must traverse.

It was agreed that Sacajawea accompany the expedition when it set out in the spring of 1805 in a blind journey through the wilderness to the Missouri's source.

It was not long before the woman with the papoose was leading the expedition. The men passed fork after fork, and it was largely due to Sacajawea's wisdom that the explorers held true to the Missouri river, instead of wandering up some tributary. In a land the boldest trappers had never reached, the bird woman proved the one sure guide.

JACK LOCKWILL AT ROCKLAKE

by Gilbert Patten

But either the captain didn't believe Jack or he thought the feeling against him was so strong the players wouldn't back him up. "We'll have to use 'Link' Truworthy, and do the best we can," he said. When Jack told Darling about it, Willie laughed. "You old team's no good anyhow," said Willie, "and with Truworthy pitching you'll have just as good a chance as a steer in the Chicago stockyards."

The following day it appeared as though every freshman and sophomore had turned out to watch the game. Members of the two classes waved pennants and gave cheers of encouragement. Jack discovered Betty Darling in the throng.

The sophs began to clout the ball wickedly. They had made three runs and the bases were full when McNally came up. He slugged the first ball for what seemed to be a home run. Jack Lockwill leaped into the air and made a marvelous catch.

Jack's great catch prevented four runs as two were out at the time. McNally raged at Jack under his breath. The first time Jack faced McNally from the batter's box, the soph pitcher burned the air with a whistler that Jack couldn't dodge. Hit in the head, he dropped.

LITTLE JOE

New York, Feb. 9.—What strange and exciting things one stumbles upon casually in this town! . . . For instance: Chopin's piano! . . . To all intents and purposes just another piano on the platform in the Town Hall concert room. . . . Dozens cross the platform without knowing . . . while others stand before it as before a shrine. . . . Just another grand piano with steel wires catching the sun and electric lights when the top is lifted. . . . The legs are simply carved and there are half a dozen simply designed gold clusters about its body. . . . One can see better looking pianos almost anywhere. . . . But these are the keys from which a master's fingers sounded the first somber chords of the Funeral March. . . . The swish, swish of the Nocturne in G minor, the Fantasia in A minor. . . . New York roars just outside the door. . . . Sirens and auto horns and the endless swish of feet as the millions rush through the mid-Forties. . . . The swish, swish of feet muted by walls and like the booming of some far away surf. . . . Here in a wooden case is the bathing ground of a man's soul. . . . Once it stood in the Chopin salon, in the house in the Rue de Vendome, where Chopin died. . . . Mme. Sandeau would come and play. . . . One wonders just what compositions she inspired. . . . And Meyerbeer and Liszt. . . . The great names of the time. . . . They have all played it. . . . A wooden body, with legs as awkward as a toddling baby, and But it knew Chopin's love, sorrows, sickness, happiness. . . . The glistering wire strings alone hold the secret. . . . There was that day when Chopin lay chalk white, wasted to a pack of bones. . . . His friends came to the bedside. . . . He smiled, with effort, as they came. . . . Death, he knew, was just around the corner. . . . Feebly he motioned toward the piano. . . . And one who was there, the Countess Delphina Potocka, went to the keys and began to play. . . . This was the fitting curtain for the master. . . . Peacefully he fell into the final sleep. . . . And so, for many years the piano stood in the Chopin salon. . . . It was brought to America not long ago by one who has been made its guardian. M. Dumesnil, by the Maison Pleyel of Paris. . . . It is understood that only he may touch its keys, and most reverent is this handsome young man of his heritage and most proud. . . . Out of the Hall and into the street again. . . . This is the music of industry and teeming life. . . . Rattle and voices and honking horns and the swish of feet. . . . And when one's brain swims from the chaos, there are in soothing strains of Chopin. . . . And there is a mausoleum of yellowed keys and strings that never surrendered the master's soul. . . . GILBERT SWAN.

NEW YORK

Tonight will be the last opportunity for Manchester theatergoers to see Olive Borden in the titularization of James Oliver Curwood's famous novel, "The Country Beyond" which has played to capacity houses wherever shown. Miss Borden has established a new record in her cinema career in the role of Valencia, the colorful and talented French-Canadian of the primitive forests who goes to New York, enters a music box revue and becomes a sensation overnight. It is the best performance she has ever given and the supporting cast headed by J. Farrell MacDonald also measures up to the high standard set by the star. The second feature being offered is "Border Women," a thrilling story of frontier life in Texas which stars as William Fairbanks and Dorothy Revier. Selected shorter subjects round out the bill. The double feature program which opens a two day's run at this theater tomorrow is headed by the hilarious farce-comedy "Oh What a Night" which boasts an all-comedy cast, including Raymond McKee and Edna Murphy. It's all about a young playwright who has to complete the last act of a play by the time a stipulated hour rolls around. He is accused of theft on his way home. From there on matters take a turn that should evoke gales of merriment from Rialto patrons. "Oh What a Night" can honestly be described as one of the highest stepping and funniest farces ever exhibited in this town. The second feature tomorrow and Friday is a regular rip-snorter when it comes to thrills. Buffalo Bill Jr., has the stellar role in this western which has been aptly dubbed "Rawhides." There are no dull moments and the plot is an exceptionally good one. Selected shorter subjects will include a comedy and current news events.

GANGSTER SURRENDERS.

Benton, Ill., Feb. 9.—Charlie Birger, Southern Illinois gang chieftain who for several weeks has defied the authorities to arrest him, has submitted peacefully to arrest and is held behind the bars of the Franklin county jail here today. A warrant, charging him with complicity in the murder of Mayor Joe Adams of West City, who was shot down at the door of his house December 12, was served at the gang leader's home in Harrisburg.

WAPPING

The Community club second team defeated the Y. M. C. A. senior team by a score of 23 to 21 at the Parish house last Saturday evening. The last three minutes of the game the Y. M. C. A. held them scoreless with four men against their five. The Y. M. C. A. manager protested the game. Next Saturday evening the senior Y. M. C. A. will play the Hi-Y of Manchester at the Wapping parish house. The Junior Y. M. C. A. of Highland Park will play the preliminary game with the Wapping Junior Y. M. C. A. Saturday evening. Mrs. Wilbur C. Hills entertained the Harmony Bridge club at her home on Monday afternoon. A large touring car, driven by a young man accompanied by two young ladies, ran off from the bank opposite the home of Raymond H. Burnham last night. No great damage was done. A wrecker was called from East Hartford and towed the car to safety. Arthur Cheatham, a brother of Mrs. Frank S. Stoughton spent the week-end at her home here. Out of a carload of twenty-nine mules, twenty escaped from their enclosure on the Griffin plantation at Rye street and made merry during the wee small hours of yesterday morning around the center of the town, but were finally rescued by help from the plantation. George W. Hills who is employed by the Southern New England Telephone company, is spending a week at the home office of the company at New Haven. The annual meeting of the Sunday school board which was postponed until this week will be held with Rev. Truman H. Woodward at the parsonage next Thursday evening at 8 o'clock. All the officers and teachers and substitute teachers are earnestly requested to be present.

Wapping's Undeclared Five Meets Superior Team and Is Outclassed

Brilliant Passwork Enables Knights of Lithuania to Register Well-Earned 48 to 27 Victory; Mazotas Features.

(By Staff Correspondent)

Wapping's string of eight consecutive basketball victories came to a dramatic conclusion last night, when, just as was predicted, the speedy Knights of Lithuania scored a well-deserved 48 to 27 triumph. The game was not as one-sided as the score might indicate at first glance. Nevertheless the Knights' margin was both impressive and convincing. The better team won and there wasn't one of the little army of Wapping roster in the St. Joseph Hall on Farmington Avenue in Hartford who was unwilling to admit it. A crowd estimated at over 300 saw the fray. About 150 were from Wapping.

Beautiful Passwork

The writer has seen many a basketball team but very few that have given such a pretty exhibition of passwork. It made one think of the Dixies and the Crescents when those famous teams were in their prime. The Knights had the knack of getting rid of the ball almost before they received it, thus making it extra hard for the Wapping five-man defense to keep its men under cover. The passes were of the short and snappy variety. Few long ones were tried. Also few long shots were attempted. The tempo of the game was a revelation to watch. One could not help but get a thrill out of it whether he was a Wapping favorite or not.

Clean Game

Wapping fought hard and gave the Knights strong opposition. At one time in the second half, only four points separated the teams. Wapping found it difficult to penetrate the defense of the Knights and consequently resorted to many long range shots. The Knights started with a foul shot and were never headed thereafter. Mantelli scored for Wapping a few moments later from midfloor. Both teams fought furiously as the battle raged. Although it was a spirited tussle with plenty of personal contact, the game was remarkably free of any rough play. It was a clean, hard-fought struggle and was handled well by Red McCormick, a central board referee.

Here is how the lead of the Knights varied: First quarter, Knights 13, Wapping 5; halftime, Knights 24, Wapping 13; third quarter, Knights 36, Wapping 21; final score, Knights 48, Wapping 27. Twenty personal fouls were called on the two teams, ten on each. No players were ejected by this route. Wapping registered six field goals in each half, the Knights ten in the first and eleven in the second.

Mazotas the Kingpin

"Red" Mazotas, Captain of the Knights, was the chief cog in that team. Pitted against Mantelli, the luminary of the Wapping five, Red acquitted himself in splendid style, scoring nine field goals against five for his rival. Walker Glatius and "Shorty" Malnowski also played well for the Knights, while Boyle and Boyce gave the best exhibition for the losers.

In the preliminary game, the Knights of Lithuania second team registered a 19 to 13 victory over the Wapping Community Club seconds. The losing team did not tally a field goal until the middle of the third quarter. It was a rough game and there was little scientific basketball. Franky Kupchunas and Nicholson were best for the losers and Romers starred for the Knights.

Local Schoolboys Must Win Here Feb. 18; Play In Willimantic Friday Night.

LEAGUE STANDING

	P	W	L	Pts
Bristol	5	5	0	15
So. Manchester	5	5	1	15
Meriden	5	3	2	9
W. Hartford	5	2	4	6
Middletown	5	1	4	3
E. Hartford	5	0	5	0

There will be no high school basketball game in town this week, S. H. S. being slated for a 40-minute tussle in Willimantic, but a week from Friday night, indications are that there will be a capacity crowd at the School street Rec because the league-leading Bristol High quintet is coming to town. Manchester, perched in second place and has lost but one game that to Bristol. If the local team can win this game, it will have a fine opportunity to cop the Central Connecticut Interscholastic league bunting. Manchester has four more league games to play, two with West Hartford, one with Middletown and one with Bristol. The game Friday night against Windham High in the Thread City should prove no easy one. The Willimantic team is hard to defeat on its own floor. A large number of Manchesterites are planning to go to the game.

BENTON TIGERS PLAY AT WAPPING TONIGHT

Undismayed by its expected defeat last night, Wapping will attempt to swing back into the win column again tonight when the fast Benton Tigers, leaders of the Court and Senior basketball league in Hartford, come to Wapping to show their stuff. Captain Mantelli said today several changes would be made in the starting lineup this evening. Mistretta, Boyle and himself, will not be in the starting lineup. The noted Taute brothers will be with the visitors. It should be a good game. Dancing will follow.

FEDERAL PRISONS FULL

Washington.—The number of inmates of federal prisons has doubled since 1919, according to a report of the Department of Justice. Of 8750 prisoners last June, 1837 were held for violations of the Volstead act. About 6500 prisoners are also held in county jails in different parts of the country, awaiting trial or accommodations at the federal institutions.

Atlanta, Ga., Feb. 4.—Bobby Jones, who holds so many golf championships that he needs a secretary to keep track of them, intends to play considerable golf in Florida during the next two months. Jones is all set to win back the amateur crown, which he regards with more affection than any of the titles that have come his way.

He said she would arrive this afternoon at 3:46.

Many Manchester fans are planning to attend.

EXPECT A PROTEST BEFORE WIDE RUNS

Swedish Athlete to Make American Debut Tonight in Newark, N. J.

New York, Feb. 9.—Edwin Wide, of Sweden, concerning whose competition in this country at least one protest has been lodged from the New England district, will make his American debut tonight at the annual games of the A. A. U. in the 134th Regiment armory, Newark. Wide will run in a special event of 2,500 yards, conceding handicaps to various rivals. Meantime, the reported protest of the New England A. A. U. against Geiger's track appearance, said to be based on the fear that he would be exploited after the manner of Nurm and Hoff, had not appeared at national headquarters here this morning. However, an individual complaint was registered by Albert Geiger, of Boston, a member of the board of governors of the A. A. U. He protested against Wide's running in a special event at the indoor championships here February 28, at a non-championship distance. Mr. Geiger evidently misunderstands the nature of the race when he refers to it as an exhibition. Secretary Frederick W. Rubien said today: "It would be obviously unfair to insist that Wide run in one of the championship events when he had so little experience indoors. But it will be a real race, just the same, against our rivals at a distance suitable to Wide's convenience."

BOSTON'S MERCURY IN FEAR OF JINX

Every Time Lermont Starts, Clocks Stop or Officials Forget to Count Laps.

Boston, Feb. 9.—Leo Lermont, of Nahant, peevish runner of the Boston Athletic association, said today he feared the "jinx" was after him, that he would stop running unless he gets a better break.

At the Millrose games in New York officials missed a lap on him in the two mile run at the B. A. A. games officials announced he had beaten Willie Ritola's record in the three-mile only to discover that the clocking had been wrong. He said he would break the three mile record yet.

Contrary to the general belief the young man who gives promise of outrunning Paavo, never ran until last August. He trained on the bridge path between Lynn and Nahant.

Three-Time Champ Seeks Fourth Horseshoe Title

St. Petersburg, Fla., Feb. 9.—Three times Mrs. Mayme Francisco of Columbus, O., has won and lost the women's horseshoe pitching championship of the world. She wants to win number four and is in training at St. Petersburg, Fla., where the annual titular contests will be held during the week of Feb. 14.

In 1922, at St. Petersburg, Mrs. Francisco was returned the winner in a field of 11 contestants for the world championship. She lost it at Des Moines the following summer, regained it again at St. Petersburg, later to lose it at Lake Worth, Fla. The Ohio woman won the title a third time in the Cleveland tournament and lost it last winter at St. Petersburg.

Kremer's Work Makes Scouts Look Cheap

New York, Jan. 70.—Ray Kremer, star pitcher of the Pittsburgh Pirates, by his fine showing last season, proved that the major league baseball scouts can make mistakes.

He was the most effective pitcher in the league last year. In the 1925 world series with the Washington club, it was Kremer's superb pitching that eventually returned "Tittsburgh the winner.

For eight years Kremer toiled with much success in the Pacific Coast League as a member of the Oakland, Calif. club but the scouts couldn't see him.

After winning 25 games in 1923, Pittsburgh made a deal for him and during the past three years he has been one of the pitching mainstays of the club.

Kremer was ripe for the big show long before given the opportunity. He was 28 years old when he made his debut with the Pirates.

COBB-SPEAKER CASE

Here is a peculiar angle to the Cobb-Speaker case that has never been considered.

The Cleveland and Detroit clubs have given up their rights to two of the game's greatest stars as a result of the much ado-about-nothing scandal that "Dutch" Leonard created.

When these two players resigned as players and managers, their resignations were accepted and men were appointed to take charge of their respective clubs.

Now, the two players, cleared of the charges as it seemed certain they would be, have been turned loose by the clubs which they formerly managed.

It is a most unusual situation in many ways.

Trading Material

Had the Cleveland club, prior to the breaking of the scandal charges, placed Speaker on the market, he would have been a most desirable man in a trade.

In all probability, the Cleveland ball club could have secured players and money to the amount of perhaps $75,000 for Speaker. A very conservative estimate would be $50,000.

Cobb would have brought a somewhat similar amount had the Detroit club decided to dispense with his services by making a deal with some other club.

While both players have passed the peak of their game, Cobb, possibly having retrograded more than Speaker, they have a few hundred good games left in their systems.

Speaker, in particular, is still just about the most valuable center fielder in the American, if not the majors.

Clubs Suffer

Yet the finish of the entire affair finds the two clubs relinquishing all claims to the two players without deriving any profit in money or players.

The attitude taken by both clubs, that it would be unwise to employ either of the stars as mere players on a club which they had managed for years, is no doubt the correct one.

While such a plan might work out all right, precedent falls to forecast such a happening. As a rule, such action has simply upset the morale of the club.

When the Detroit and Cleveland clubs appointed leaders to succeed Cobb and Speaker, they figured both men had severed for all time their connection with the American League.

Now that they are back in good standing, the two clubs really were forced to part with Cobb and Speaker, permitting them to make any deal they desired for their services.

Double Handicap

Not only does the Cleveland club lose a star player but also a mighty capable manager.

Many of the experts figured Cleveland the best team in the American League at the close of last season. The Indians were regarded as a strong contender for pennant honors in 1927.

The absence of Speaker is going to leave a void in center field that will be hard to fill. Men, possessing like managerial ability, are the exception.

Thus, the Cleveland club suffers not only the monetary loss that Speaker would have brought if placed on the market, but a bigger loss that is impossible to compute should the Indians disappoint this year.

It was a tough break for both clubs that simply had to be accepted in a sportsmanlike manner.

COBB DISCLOSES HIS AMBITIONS

Joins Athletics Because He Thinks He Will Have Fling At Series.

By DAVIS J. WALSH

New York, Feb. 9.—One more fling at a World's Series and at least a year in the National League as manager was the dual ambition that prompted Ty Cobb to team up with Connie Mack in Philadelphia. It was declared today by Dan Howley, the man who loved and lost, so to speak. Howley almost ruptured a rib trying to line Cobb up with the St. Louis Browns for 1927 and, during the general excitement, it seems Ty broke down and confessed all.

His Confession

He wants, first of all, to redeem his rather indifferent World Series record of 1907, 1908 and 1909 and thinks the Athletics will prove the necessary vehicle. This accomplished, his sole remaining ambition is to manage a club in the National League, he informed Howley, who is by way of being his best friend, and severest critic.

"It wasn't a question of money between Ty and myself," Howley declared today. "We offered him $50,000 flat but when he told me what was in his mind, I saw that we had little chance of getting him at any price."

Great Combination

Cobb, in a Philadelphia uniform with Eddie Collins and Zach Wheat, calls for a combination of punch and color that simply can't miss at the box office, even if it does in the standing of the clubs. However, it isn't likely that there will be great loss of life in the rush to bet against the Athletics' chances.

The unsteadiness that militated against the chances during recent years hardly can be looked for with all the veteran campaigners Mack has lined up behind him. If ever that gentleman is to come back to the renouva he knew previous to 1915, this will be the year.

Meantime, Mr. Howley, having muffed one deal, thinks he has retired the side on another—the trade of Durst and Glard to the Yankees for Sam Jones. Daniel Speaker, permitting them to make any deal they desired for their services.

Not only does the Cleveland club lose a star player but also a mighty capable manager.

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE
Death strikes GARRETT FOLSON while bathing with a party at Ocean Town, N. J. At the Hotel Majanasa, where they had been guests, an inquiry is begun, after a doctor, perfunctorily examining him on the beach, pronounces him dead.

Folsom's companions had been ROGER NEVILLE, MRS. HELEN BARSBAY and CARMELITA VALDON. It is established that Folsom, just before his death, had been standing next to NED BARREN, known as the copper king.

Folsom's sister, ANASTASIA, is sent for in New York. Then the startling announcement is made that Folsom had been stabbed to death in the water. ROSS, his valet, is questioned, as are Barron and his wife, but no light is shed on the mystery.

Anastasia Folsom, eccentric and masterful, takes command. An inquest is ordered and many attend. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

The coroner held out to him a long sharp knife.

CHAPTER XV

THE first witness called was, of course, Doctor Manning.

He testified that he was in the ocean for his daily salt-water bath. That he heard a commotion near him.

"Just what was the commotion?" the coroner asked. "Describe it, please."

"It's not easy to describe," Doctor Manning said, thinking deeply. "For the roar of the surf drowned most other noises or distorted them beyond discernment. But, as nearly as I can recollect, I heard two or three people scream in what seemed to me a different way from the hilarious shouts of the bathers. Then, as I looked toward the noise I heard, I saw two of the life guards swimming vigorously that way. They seemed to be intent on some errand, so I watched them. They went directly toward the rope and diving beneath the surf came up immediately, bearing what seemed to be the unconscious body of a man. Though naturally somewhat interested, I paid little attention to it. But a moment later one of the guards came down to the edge of the water and called out:

"Doctor—is there a doctor here?"

"Realizing the need for immediate medical service, I hurried to the beach and found the man who had been carried there wrapped in a blanket and lying on the sand. I saw at a glance that he was dead. I felt his heart and his pulse and then, assured that life was entirely extinct, I told them so, and, as there was no further request for my services, I went back into the ocean. Then, after my bath, as I had a luncheon engagement, I went away and did not return until late in the afternoon.

"Then the management of the hotel asked me for a certificate of death. This, of course, necessitated a more thorough examination, and then I discovered that death had followed a stab in the abdomen of the deceased man."

"With what sort of a weapon, Doctor Manning?" asked the coroner.

"So far as I can judge it was a long sharp-bladed knife or dagger. I should say a knife because the incision that it made is wider at one end than at the other. This incision is rather more than an inch, proving a sharp instrument, whose blade was a little over an inch wide. The incision is a clean, straight cut, but one end of it is perhaps an eighth of an inch and the other of no width at all. This shows, apparently, a blade like a knife blade, with only one cutting edge. Not like a dagger blade, which has two sharp sides."

"Could this have been the instrument of death, Doctor Manning?"

The coroner held out to him a long sharp knife, much the size and shape of a carving knife, a small one, such as is known as a steak carver.

Doctor Manning took the weapon in his hand and examined it closely. "So far as I can judge," he said, "that is precisely the kind of knife that would make the incision I discovered on the dead man."

A breathless silence fell on the audience.

"This knife," the coroner proceeded, "was brought to me a few moments before this inquest was opened. It was given me by a man who is now before me. Mr. Tracy, will you tell of finding this knife?"

A little embarrassed, Stephen Tracy stepped forward. He was the man to whom Miss Folsom had talked that morning, but who then had said nothing of the knife.

"I stood near Mr. Folsom when he went under yesterday," Tracy said, "and not long after that I felt something on the sand under my feet. I stooped down and picked it up, and it was that "Certainly," returned the man who had produced the scabbard. "I am Erverard Meeker, of Portland, Me. I am staying at the Victoria Hotel, in Ocean Town. I have been here a fortnight or so."

"And where did you get the scabbard you have just handed me?"

"I found it in the ocean yesterday soon after Mr. Folsom had been carried ashore."

"Near where Mr. Folsom had been standing by the rope?"

"Not very near that spot. Perhaps a hundred feet away."

Mr. Meeker was a tall, portly gentleman, with the general effect of a prosperous business man. He had a pleasant address and a genial twinkle in his eyes. Although he seemed to realize the gravity of the situation, he also seemed to enjoy the mild sensation he was creating. His interested gaze swept the crowd of attentive faces as he stood with one hand on the corner's table.

"You found this in the ocean?"

"Yes. I chanced to step on it in much the same way, I suppose, as Mr. Tracy stepped on the knife that belongs to it. As has been said, Mr. Coroner, that knife or dagger is the weapon known as a pichaq and is of Oriental manufacture. Now, personally, I can tell you no more of the matter than that, except that I can tell you where that dagger came from."

"Please do so, Mr. Meeker."

A hush fell over the assembly as they awaited the first real information regarding the weapon that, in all probability, was the one that had killed Garrett Folsom.

Miss Folsom stared at the witness, until it almost seemed her eyes would bore into his very soul. She looked like an avenging fate as her strong, stern face set itself into an expression of accusation.

Yet it was obvious that the man, Meeker, could not have been implicated in the crime, or he would not have offered the scabbard of the weapon as evidence.

"It came," Erverard Meeker stated, "from a shop on the boardwalk. It was sold there Thursday evening, at an auction of Oriental curios. I was at the auction as I am, in a small way, a collector of rare objects of art, and especially interested in Oriental metal work."

"And you know this dagger and its scabbard, together, were sold there that night?" Hubbard eagerly inquired.

"I know it was in the collection that was sold that night. I examined the whole collection before the sale, and I remember perfectly well that pichaq, with its carved ivory hilt and its worn violet velvet scabbard. A pichaq, as you may or may not know, is a weapon shaped almost exactly like a small carving knife. It has a straight blade, not curved, and is a type made in India, Persia or Turkey in the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries. Any collector of arms would recognize it at once, but to the layman it looks astonishingly like a steak carver."

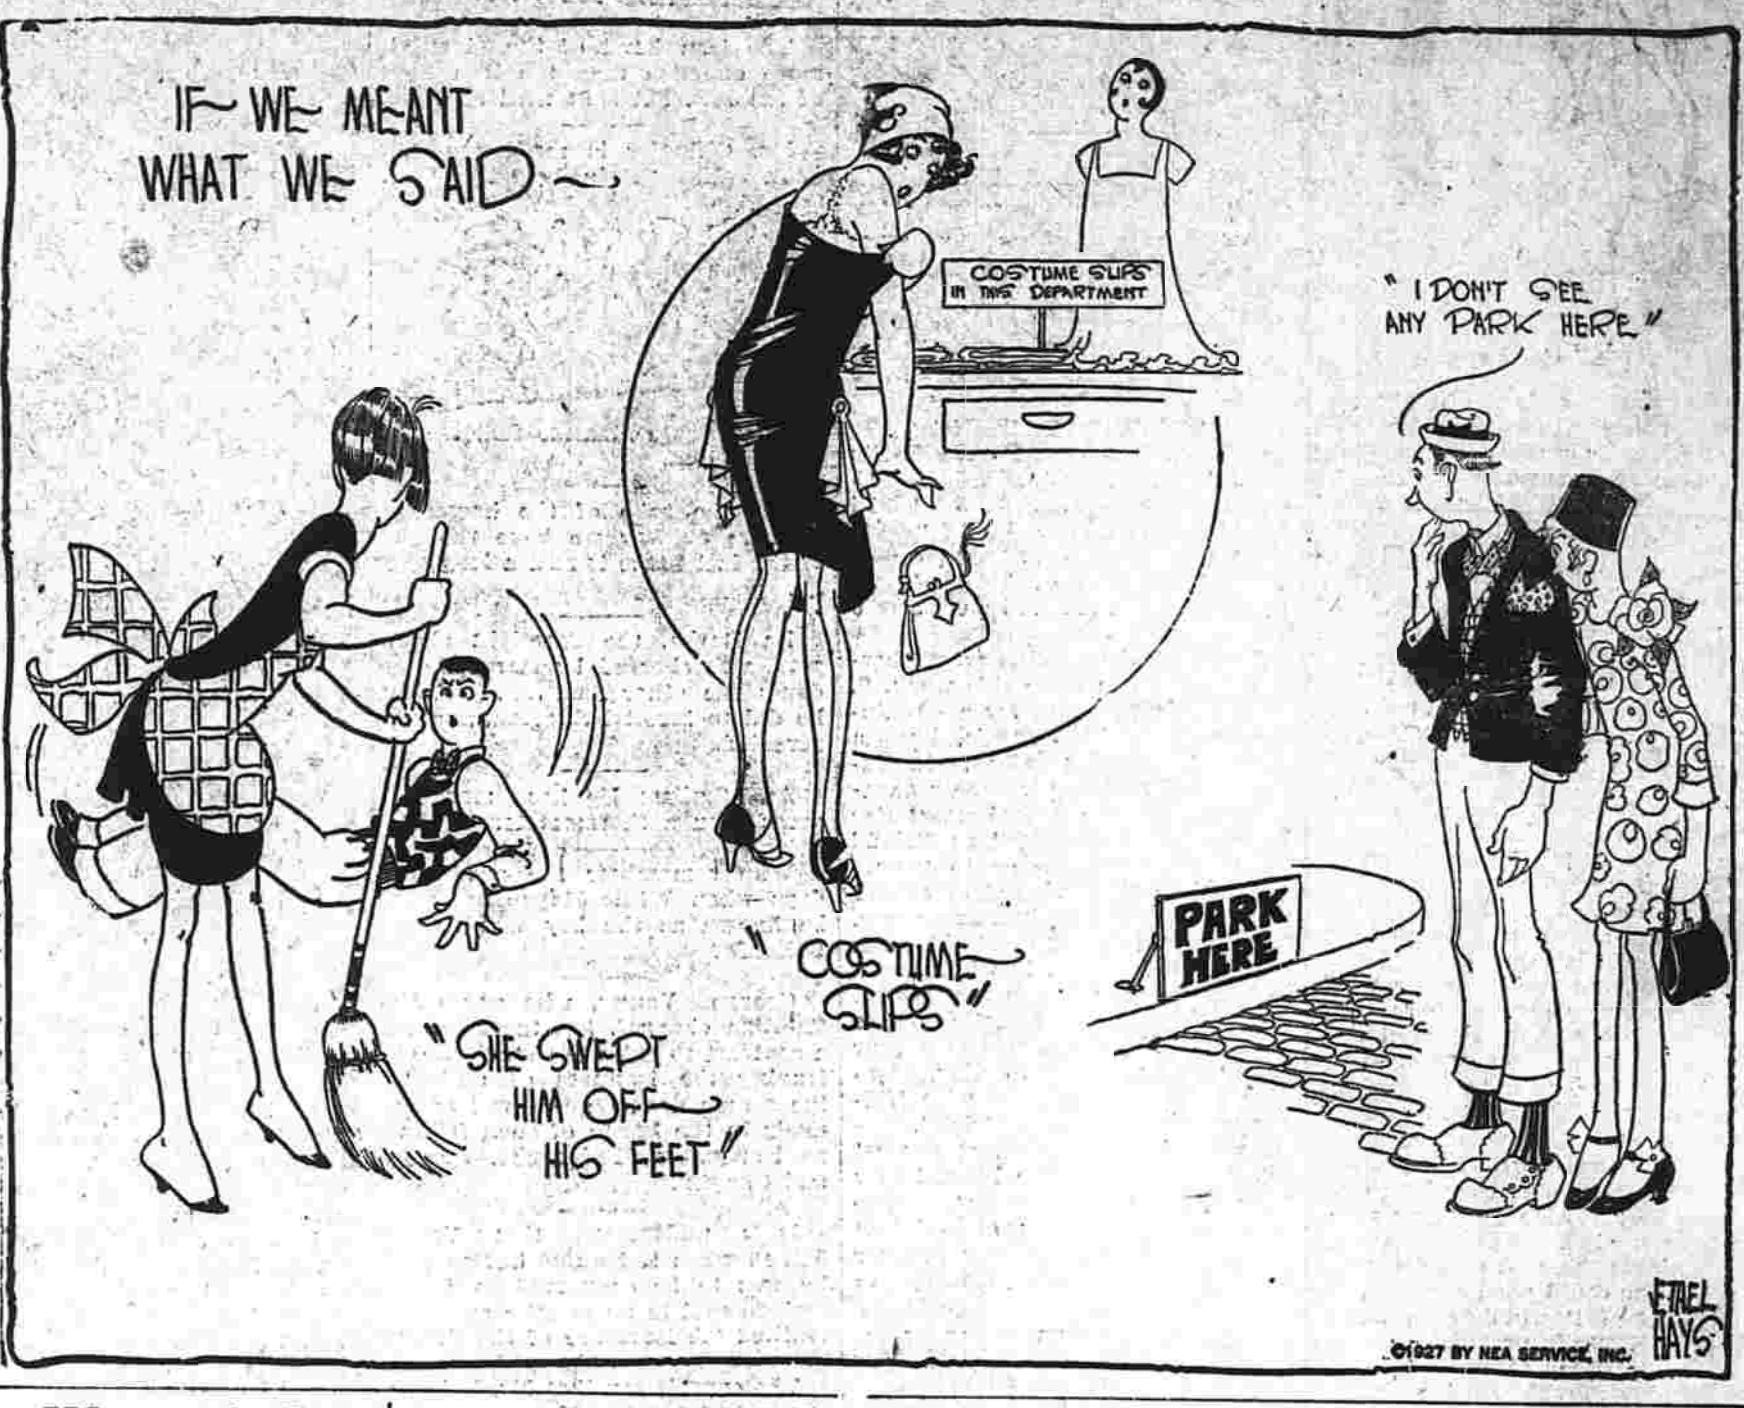

"Your information, Mr. Meeker, is of the greatest importance. Have you any idea who bought this—pichaq?"

"No, it was sold after I left the auction room. I went there for the express purpose of acquiring an Indian parade dagger, that I desired. I bought it within the price I had set as my limit, and greatly pleased with my purchase, I went home."

More developments are brought to the inquest. Read them in the next chapter.

ETHEL

The Woman's Day

The girls do it like this in the land of the steppes. They take their pens in hand and write to their chosen swains, "I am married to you!" and the law proclaims that lo, he is indeed a benedict, willy-nilly! If the man says something to the effect of "how do you get that way?" or, "I'm married to you," the lady who took her pen in hand can collect alimony with the fullest approval of the court. And American women with their few advantages think that they are sittin' atop the world!

Blame Old Maids

Now they're blaming the old maids for the modern "sex novels." At least one Cecil Roberts, an English novelist, is. He says that "all the disappointed, unloved old maids are writing sex novels as an antidote for their barren lives." Which is a cute way of calling all the writing boys "old women," for anyone knows that the most flagrant examples of over-sentimental tomes are authored by boys.

The Holy Estate

Being on the subject of the holy estate of matrimony, just as we expected, fearless Judge Ben B. Lindsey, who came right out in public and asked for an entirely new code of morality, has gotten himself into trouble. They're trying to make him lose his job. Trouble always comes to the thinker, the man who tries to think things through. The strain on his neck makes the mob think a little too and thus upset the even tenor of their ways!

The Kink and the Bob

Cats may look at kings, but a king, positively refuses to look at bobbed hair! None less than King George of the Britains refuses to let the girls of his court wear abbreviated locks. Many of the court maids and matrons had had their hair shorn before the edict. Now they wear switches around their pates. Serve the king right if his most swanky' fell off at some of his most swanky' moments. And one simply cannot resist remarking that if one or two women of his immediate family circle bobbed the hair, their hats might less resemble the well-known toad sitting upon a toadstool.

Another Viewpoint

Talking out another side of the mouth is another Britisher, Beatrice Forbes-Robertson-Hale, who says that Catherine de Medici committed a worse crime than when she decreed the bloody massacre of St. Bartholomew's Day, and that about hair was the world's greatest glory to the Lord. Theoretically, we should listen to a woman on this subject rather than to a man, for the woman knows her stuff. She has to endure the long hair, et al. But so it is and ever has been that the boys say makes a great deal more difference, whether they know the subject or the reverse.

Stupid Tummies

Stomachs are the most stupid organs of the human anatomy, says a professor of physiology. He explains that if a stomach is fed a rubber ball or a tin can or a pickle jar it will set to work to devour it with as much gusto as though it were beefsteak smothered in onions. Ask any boy, however, if this story will do her an amount when the Lord and Master demands porterbouse with mushrooms.

"We have long heard of pie-faces. Now science tells us that there can be cabbage faces, burr-worm faces, monkey-wrench faces and coal-dust faces, beside a myriad others. Faces make noises. Transmission of photographs of faces are received as sounds. Some faces make the same sounds as pictures of match-boxes, cabbages or monkey-wrenches. The sole reason for inclusion of this much in this famous column is to help furnish ammunition for the family quarrels. The suggestion that you might classify an erring spouse's face and tell him all about it, is given gratis.

In the background is the new kasha in a shadowy block pattern which is quite the latest thing for sport coats in Parisian shops. These coats are made up in these attractive new materials with absolutely no fur trimming of any kind.

SMOKING "RELATIVELY HARMLESS" SAYS SCIENCE

This is the third of a series of four articles by Dr. Morris Fishbein, nationally known medical authority, on the effects of the tobacco as a poison. In the final article he will treat of the psychological effects of tobacco.

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN
Editor Journal of the American Medical Association and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

The opponents of the use of tobacco, even in moderation, are inclined to list it with morphine, cocaine, alcohol and other habit-forming drugs.

There are indeed some who constantly oppose the use of coffee, believing that such artificial stimulation of the brain as it may arouse is undesirable even in adults. Professor W. E. Dixon of the department of pharmacology of the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge asserts that the irritation of the throat which occurs following the use of tobacco in some instances is due to pyridine, a poison especially irritating to the tissues lining the mouth and throat.

Sensitive Persons Harmed

The smoking of tobacco also produces a certain amount of carbon monoxide which produces symptoms in sensitive persons, but it is doubtful whether the amount of this gas taken in ordinary smoking is sufficient to cause serious effects.

The most important constituent of tobacco from the standpoint of poisoning is nicotine, which varies of course in all types of tobacco and in the manner in which the material may be smoked.

Immediately behind the lighted end of a cigar is a moist area. The hot gases pass over this, volatilize the nicotine—the larger and hotter this area, the larger the amount of nicotine in the smoke. The latter the cigar, the hotter this moist area and the greater the amount of nicotine in the smoke.

The cigaret has very little moist area, so a much larger percentage of nicotine is destroyed. Damp tobacco yields more nicotine than that which is dry.

Tests of tobacco smoking on mental power are contradictory. One group of observers shows that smoking lowers mental efficiency, especially in perception and in the association of ideas in from 10 to 23 per cent of persons studied. Another investigator, however, found that the person who studied when smoking was able to do more rapidly and correct problems in arithmetic.

Doesn't Hurt Work

An extensive study made of smoking as it affected the workers in the bottle-making industry indicated that it had but little, if any, effect on the output of work, whereas chewing tobacco markedly diminished the output of work.

Prof. Dixon is convinced that smoking does not lead to addiction comparable with that for some of the narcotic drugs that have been mentioned. The addict to morphine or cocaine is constantly in fear of the withdrawal of his drug and the symptoms that are associated with withdrawal. The person who smokes does not have such symptoms. The loss of tobacco will be an annoyance to him, but certainly not a tragedy.

Like Sir Robert Armstrong-Jones, Prof. Dixon is convinced that the ordinary man under the strain of conditions in modern existence finds tobacco smoking a soothing, beneficial and relatively harmless habit.

The key to a man is his thought; to a woman her tongue.

DEEP DECOLETE

Bathing suits have an extremely low neckline in back, but fit rather closely about the shoulders and neck in front.

HEAD LETTUCE

Separate the leaves of head lettuce without spilling their shape, by letting cold water run through them from the faucet. Then dry and use in salads or sandwiches.

Leniency Best Policy
By Olive Roberts Barton

A parent often displays a peculiar attitude toward son or daughter in college whose education is costing a good bit of money. If the boy or girl happens to be working—his way through or has secured a "scholarship," which provides for free education, I am inclined to believe that the average parent views the matter less personally and therefore less critically.

In other words, it is a decidedly human trait to want "our money's worth," and "getting our money's worth" in a college investment means passing marks.

There is of course more to it than that. I am not discounting the element of pride, but I have noticed less pressure put upon the child by parents as long as he is in high school than is brought to bear upon him after his education becomes a personal matter of dollars and cents.

I believe that parents don't know exactly how hard it is to get through college nowadays, or what credit attaches itself to the young man or woman who succeeds. Education, like everything else, has changed. It has become highly specialized and requires a concentration and endurance that older minds and constitutions could never stand.

I have read of six suicides of college students during the recent "mid-years." No doubt there were others of whom I did not hear. I

THE TINYMITES BY HAL COCHRAN

(Read the Story, Then Color the Picture) The Tinymites looked at the man and shouted, "Tell us, if you can, what is this place we've landed on? We don't know where we are. We drifted on the ocean wide and to escape we took a rifle upon a ship up in the air and traveled wide and far." The fisherman was quite surprised to hear their tale. He realized that they were very, very small to be lost out at sea. And then he shook each little hand and said, "Don't fret. You're on safe land. I think you ought to feel that you're as lucky as can be." And then the bunch all said, "You bet. We're glad you caught us in your net, but, can we look around a bit, is what we'd like to know." The old man answered, "Course you can." And off the bunch of Tinymites ran, just as they heard the old man warn, "Be careful where you go." CHURCH SCHOOL HEAD HONORED WITH PARTY

Alfred C. Anderson Given Birthday Surprise at Swedish Church.

Alfred C. Anderson of Hartford road was the honored guest at a surprise party given last night at the Swedish Lutheran church by about 150 of the church members. The occasion was Mr. Anderson's birthday, and the celebration was arranged by his friends to show their appreciation of his faithful services to the church and the Sunday school.

Mr. Anderson is the present superintendent of the school, a position he has held for the past five years, and his interest and activities in the work of the Sunday school cover a period of 23 years. He is at present a deacon of the church and for 14 years has served alternately as trustee or deacon.

Mr. Anderson came to the church for the purpose of attending a business meeting and was surprised to find so many of his friends present. Mrs. Anderson and her daughter Alva had been apprised of the nature of the gathering and arrived later.

Rev. P. J. O. Cornell, pastor of the church, in a short speech warmly expressed his appreciation and that of the church people for the wonderful work Mr. Anderson had performed for the church and Sunday school.

Charles F. Johnson of Holl street, in behalf of the assembled guests and the families they represented, presented to Superintendent Anderson one hundred dollars in gold and a fine fountain pen. Mr. Johnson also referred to Mr. Anderson's efficient help in the work of the church, and Miss Pearl Johnson, in behalf of those present, gave to Mrs. Anderson a basket of roses. During the evening Miss Elsie Berggren sang two solos. The ladies of the church served sandwiches, cake and coffee.

LIKE CALIFORNIA.

Mr. and Mrs. O. L. Ludke of Lily street who are spending the winter in San Diego, Cal., are apparently enjoying that beautiful climate to the full. This is not their first winter in Southern California, and they seem to think it far ahead of Florida where they have also spent several seasons.

Mrs. Ludke in a letter dated February 3 speaks of picking beautiful roses the day before and having a wonderful time touring the country thereabouts. Early this month they motored to San Juan, Mexico, Chula Vista and National City, where acres and acres of celery are grown and there are extensive lemon and orange groves. She also refers to the great number of U. S. war ships at present in San Diego harbor and mentions seeing the "Chaumont" leave for China with twelve hundred marines on board.

FIFTH DISTRICT SOCIAL.

The Good Will club, the Parent-Teacher association of the Fifth district held a meeting last night and made plans for a social and whist to be given at the Keeneey street schoolhouse Friday evening of this week, also for the celebration of the organization of the Parent-Teacher movement which falls on the 17th but which will be observed by the Good Will club on the 23rd. AMERICANS SAFE.

Washington, Feb. 9.—All Americans and the legation staff in Portugal are safe, American Minister Fred M. Dearing reported to the State Department today.

He said that heavy fighting and constant sniping continue between the government and revolutionary forces, with the government apparently victorious in Oporto and slowly winning in Lisbon.

The State Department has not determined whether to send warships to Portugal to aid Americans. An earlier message said: "Situation at Lisbon very serious and probably will continue so for several days. The minister has been obliged to abandon the legation which was repeatedly struck by rifle and machine gun fire."

TO TEACH BOXING AT REC CENTERS

Franky Bush, Light-Heavy Pro. Engaged as Instructor in Fistic Art.

Director Earl H. Chaney of the Recreation Centers announced today that Franky Bush, professional boxer has been engaged as boxing instructor at the Rec gym. Bush, a former Norwich man, has had a lot of experience. He has fought a number of the leading light-heavyweights including young Stribling. He was also a sparring partner in Jack Dempsey's and Tiger Flower's training camps.

Bush has been giving boxing instructions at the School Street Recreation Center for several weeks and the Recreation Committee, which includes Philip Chaney, Miss Mary Chaney, Miss Elizabeth Bennett, John S. Hyde and Edward F. Taylor, has been considering the proposition of employing him as a regular instructor. Last night a special meeting of the committee was held and it was decided to do so.

Has Largest Interest
While interest in other indoor sports in Manchester has been too keen for several years, amateur boxing has recently been revived with marked success. The amateur tournaments at Chaney Hall have drawn attendances as large as 700.

At the School Street Rec, already a large number of boxers have taken advantage of the opportunity to learn more about the art of self defense. This week classes of about thirty have reported at the gym and it is expected that this number will greatly increase.

New Equipment
Director Chaney states that new equipment, a sand bag, punching bag and boxing gloves have been ordered. The boxing classes will be held in conjunction with gymnastics classes. The schedule will start next week and classes will be held on the following nights from 5 o'clock on: Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday. It is possible that some of the classes will be held at the West Side Rec.

Large gloves will be used, avoiding liability to injury of pupils.

GIRL SCOUT DIRECTOR TALKS TO KIWANIS

Mrs. Clifford D. Perkins Guest at Today's Club Luncheon at Hotel Sheridan.

Mrs. Clifford D. Perkins of Hartford, representative from New England on the National Girl Scout Board of Directors, also chairman of the state of Connecticut, was the speaker at the Manchester Kiwanis club luncheon today at the Hotel Sheridan. Miss Marguerite Bengt, deputy commissioner for the Manchester organization was also present, also Captain Grace Shaw.

Miss Emily Smith, Miss Dorothy McCollum and Miss Jessie Forbes, Girl Scout buglers played the mess call as the Kiwanians took their places in the dining room, and during the change of courses, Girl Scouts from the different troops of the city acted as waitresses under Genevieve Eddy, Jessie Morgan, Charlotte Rubinow, Lucille Murphy, Margaret Waterman and Mary Wilcox. The Scouts all appeared in the regulation uniform.

Mrs. Perkins in her position of national director stands ready to go to any place in any of the United States where her services are desired. She is a very fluent speaker and gave an interesting account of the early history of the Girl Scout movement in this country, the idea being derived from the Boy Scout organization, then already well established, although the work among the girls originated in England where they were called Girl Guides. The Kiwanians listened with close attention to Mrs. Perkins' talk, which lasted about 15 minutes. She was presented with a dress pattern of Cheney silk as a gift from the Kiwanis club.

Girl Scouts who were present gave the Allegiance to the Flag and repeated their Scout laws. Forty members were present at the luncheon and the attendance prize donated by Dr. Barry was won by Elmore Watkins.

MISS BEULAH SMITH THE BEST GUESSER

Wins Hale's Birthday Cake Contest—Large Number of Entrants.

Miss Beulah Smith of 125 Center street evidently has counted the number of raisins in a cake before. Out of over one thousand contestants she guessed closest to the number of raisins in Hale's Self Serve grocery birthday cake.

The actual number of raisins in the cake was 1673. Miss Smith guessed that there were 1654, missing the right number by only 19. Three guessed 1700 and there were several in the 1500's and 1800's.

Many contestants were disappointed because of the large number of raisins in the cake because it was Hale's Self Serve grocery department's seventh birthday.

Miss Smith wins the $5 worth of groceries offered as the prize for the best guess. She should see Thomas McCann manager of the Self Serve to claim her prize.

JUDGE REVERSES P. U. C. DECISION

First Case Of Its Kind In State Involves Hearing On Motor Bus Lines.

Hartford, Feb. 9.—What is said to be the first reversal of a Public Utilities Commission decision in the state has just been handed down here by Judge Newell S. Jennings, of the Superior court, who today ordered the commission to re-hear the applications of the New England Transportation Company and the Manchester Trolley Transportation Company for the right to operate buses from Waterbury to Hartford, via Southington and Farmington.

The New England Transportation company was granted a franchise to operate trolley buses from Danbury to Hartford via Southington and Farmington, using a part of the Waterbury-Middleale line's proposed route, while the Waterbury concern was denied the same right.

Appealed Decision
L. L. Lewis, state's attorney for Waterbury, filed a writ of certiorari to the Superior court for the decision of the commission.

He made three points: that the commission had failed to notify the residents along the route of the hearing; that the New England Transportation company had originally asked for a charter to operate from Danbury to Hartford via Bristol and at the last moment had changed its request to operate via Middleale and Southington, and that both companies were heard at the same time, without notice of the change in the application of the New England company having been given.

Judge Jennings' decision declares that no violation of either state or federal constitution is involved, but that the Public Utilities commission should have issued complete notice of its proposed hearing. Therefore he ordered a re-hearing in the case, with suspension of the proposed New England company service in the meanwhile.

CHANGED REQUEST
Mr. Lewis declared that the New England Transportation company originally asked for a charter to operate from Danbury to Hartford via Bristol and at the last moment had changed its request to operate via Middleale and Southington, and that both companies were heard at the same time, without notice of the change in the application of the New England company having been given.

Prepared to Guide Patrons in Understanding of Art and Its History.

There is now available at the South Manchester Library the recently published course, "Pleasures from Pictures," prepared by Henry Turner Bailey, director of the Cleveland School of Art as a guide for those who would steer between the "Scylla of science and the Charybdis of gush" in their attitude toward pictures. He recommends six books and one series of art reproductions as a guide toward an intelligent appreciation of painting.

Among the books recommended are a readable history of painting, a discussion of modern painting and books on the Italian and American schools. The books as well as the reading course are to be had at the library.

This is the twentieth course in the "Reading with a Purpose" series published by the American Library association. Others in the series deal with architecture, music, physical science, modern essays, English and American literature.
