Former State Treasurer Succumbs to Hemorrhage of the Brain—Was Serving 15 Year Term For Embezzlement—Tried to Kill Self When Shortage at Bank Was Discovered.

Atlanta, Ga., Feb. 16.—G. Harold Gilpatric, forty-seven, former state treasurer of Connecticut, who was serving a fifteen year term for violation of the National Banking Act, died in Atlanta Federal penitentiary today.

Cause of Death. Gilpatric died as the result of a hemorrhage of the brain. He shot himself when a bank with which he was connected in Putnam failed, and he has never been in good health since.

Gilpatric was an inmate of the Atlanta penitentiary since October, 1924. A brother is enroute here to take the body back to Putnam, Connecticut, his birthplace, for burial.

EXPERTS STUDYING FRANCE'S REFUSAL

However, Government Will Continue Its Efforts to Limit Naval Craft.

Washington, Feb. 16.—The American government will continue its efforts to obtain an agreement with the great powers limiting auxiliary naval craft, notwithstanding that such efforts now appear almost futile in the light of France's refusal to make Geneva the place of definite action next month.

Studying Note. France's note of rejection was being studied today. It seemed to afford but little hope of any concrete success in the near future toward further naval disarmament.

Indeed, Secretary of State Kellogg characterized it indirectly as "striking a serious blow at the whole cause of disarmament." Future moves on the part of this government, if any, will, however, await the receipt of replies from Great Britain, Italy and Japan, the other powers interested last week.

No Hope of Success. In no official quarter in Washington is there any hope of the Geneva conference accomplishing anything real in the way of disarmament, despite the expression of lofty hopes in the french note and that the Geneva gathering is working toward the same goal as President Coolidge proposed.

The Geneva conference, it was pointed out today, has been "discussing" disarmament for almost a year now without making any progress discernible to the naked eye.

France and her small continental allies, most of which have no navies, constitute a majority in the conference.

"In other words," ironically observed one high official today, "France refuses to join with other powers in disarming, and she might interfere with the talk of disarming. All the Geneva conference has done to date is talk, and that is all it will ever do, in all probability."

BIG OIL STILL AFIRE DOES $40,000 DAMAGE

Firemen Use Chemicals to Fight Flames—Whole City Threatened.

East Braintree, Mass., Feb. 16.—Fire which consumed the contents of a huge oil still and threatened to ignite a score of others containing the same quantity of crude oil did damage estimated at $40,000 to the City Service Refining company plant here today.

Firemen resorted to chemicals in fighting the fire because of the flow of oil. The earth in the vicinity of the burning still was a virtual field of flame.

PEDESTRIANS WILL NOT USE TAIL LIGHTS

State Legislature Votes Against Measure Introduced By Member From Hebron—Other Business.

Hartford, Feb. 16.—Pedestrians should not be compelled to wear tail lights on Connecticut highways, the Lower Legislative House here decided today in defeating a measure which would make all pedestrians carry such lights. The bill was introduced by Robert E. Foote, of Hebron, who failed to oppose an unfavorable report brought in by the motor vehicle committee today.

House Chairman Eddy said the bill had been found "not practicable."

Unfavorable Reports. Other unfavorable reports reaching the House today were: Requiring pedestrians to walk on the left side of highways; exempting motorists from liability for injuries to persons receiving gratuitous rides; establishing a branch motor vehicle office at Danielson; allowing George Aherm, of Salisbury, $72.50 for damage to his automobile by deer on the highway; incorporating the Community Trust Co. of Waterbury, the bill having been withdrawn by its sponsors; reducing the Middletown City Court officials' salaries.

STOP-GO LIGHTS HINDER TRAFFIC

State Highway Commissioner Criticizes Automatic Signals in Address.

Atlantic City, Feb. 16.—Criticism of the present use of automatic traffic signals and the recommendation that municipalities using those lights return to the use of traffic policemen were the outstanding points emphasized by John A. Macdonald, Connecticut State Highway Commissioner, in an address on traffic regulation delivered here today before the third annual convention of the Association of Highway Officials of the North Atlantic States, of which he is president.

In discussing the "Stop" and "Go" lights, the Connecticut commissioner said: "It is my opinion that the automatic traffic signal, under its present impediment to traffic that highway engineers have to deal with and traffic congestion is growing continually worse as the remedy is administered in its present form."

He said that the use of the traffic light had grown because of the fact that municipalities had been reluctant to advance funds for enlarging their police forces to meet the needs of traffic regulation, and he urged that steps be taken to remedy this situation.

Wastes Gasoline. Commissioner Macdonald said that the "Stop" and "Go" lights not only resulted in loss of time and wasted gasoline, but were also unfair inasmuch as the lights often held back long lines of traffic while few vehicles or none at all were passing the intersection in the other direction. He pointed out that this difficulty could be overcome only by the use of traffic policemen, since the lights being automatic could not be adapted to meet the requirements of traffic. He also said that the traffic light tended to make the motorists race to beat the signal thus increasing the chance of accident.

Among other recommendations made by Commissioner Macdonald for the relief of traffic congestion was the infliction of heavier penalties for violators of the motor code, and fewer regulations for the average driver who never resorts to recklessness to make time. He advised municipalities making traffic surveys to cover as much territory as possible in order to learn the exact needs of traffic, and not to be satisfied with a limited survey which might suffice to meet present needs, but which would be inadequate for future regulation.

Direct Traffic. The Connecticut Commissioner recommended particularly the use of the "cut off" system by which through traffic is diverted by other routes and away from the most congested streets. He advised this method especially for streets upon which trolley cars were operated. He expressed the opinion that this was the only solution for speeding up traffic on such streets, for in his belief trolley cars would neither be replaced by buses nor would absolute restriction of parking ever take place. He urged the highway engineers present to continue their work of eliminating bad curves and grades in order to speed up traffic without increasing the hazard to safety.

Commissioner Macdonald will preside over tomorrow afternoon's session which will take up the subject of concrete pavement.

The engine of the express due here from the east at 12:09 noon became disabled at Vernon today and was delayed nearly an hour. Another engine was brought from Hartford to take the train through.

JUDGE BOWERS'S CONDITION

Judge H. O. Bowers's condition remains the same, it was announced at the Manchester Memorial hospital at 2:30 this afternoon. Mr. Bowers has been in a coma for several days. He takes nourishment, and, although in a very serious condition, this is a sign of encouragement to his attendants.

Thrills? Bunk! Says Kid Murderer; Mike At 11, Finds Disillusionment

New York, Feb. 16.—Preservation of illusions is impossible in this life, so the gray beards tell us. Illusions are due to imperfect interpretation of experience. Sooner or later, in the lives of all men, they turn to disillusionment. Which brings us to Michael. Michael is 11 years old and he has murdered a man.

This sunny-haired lad with cheeks like two ripe apples ran away to roam the broad highway of romance. He came home with tears in his blue eyes, panic in his childish brain, blood on his fingers.

Early Tragedy. The tragedy of Michael is disillusionment. It came early. Michael Ponkrashov is in the 8th grade, three years ahead of the average. He reads books avidly, attended "thriller" movies regularly, and fed that funny little appetite called imagination that all boys know more or less intimately.

He is chubby, broad of shoulder, sturdy of leg. He wears bright colored golf stockings and bright colored lumber-jack shirts. His eyes are open, ingenious eyes and aside from an unusual poise of mind and body, he is a typical schoolboy.

One day his friend Otto gave him a gun. It was of gleaming nickel, .38 calibre. That fired him anew. He was Captain Kidd, and he belated orders-across vacant lots at other sons of Russian immigrants like himself. He was a detective like "the man from headquarters" on the screen at the Rialto; he scorned to be Buffalo Bill and Diamond Dick—his heroes were never ones—he was the Boy Bandit King.

PROSPERITY AHEAD 3 MONTHS' JAIL FOR ASSAILANTS

Washington, Feb. 16.—Business panics are a thing of the past—the motor industry never will reach the saturation point—1927 will be as prosperous as the record 1926.

That's how N. A. Hawkins of Detroit, "world champion salesman" and former sales manager of the Ford Motor Co., summed up America's business situation today.

Is a Witness. Hawkins, who testified in the $30,000,000 Couzens tax appeal case that General Motors paid him $150,000 a year salary, was particularly optimistic as to the automobile industry, although he anticipated vital changes in its structure.

"I expect three or four big consolidations among automobile manufacturers within the next six months," Hawkins said. "Some companies are now preparing their merger plans."

CUT WAGES OR GO HOME SAY MINE OWNERS

Ultimatum Is Delivered Today By Operators at Conference—Union Leaders Still Hopeful.

Miami, Fla., Feb. 16.—"Cut wages or go home." This ultimatum was delivered to the miners today by the operators assembled here for the joint wage conference of the central bituminous fields.

It was the owners' answer to the miners' refusal to accept a wage cut, or substitute a sliding scale for the existing arbitrary rate of $7.50 a day for the union mines in Illinois, Indiana, Ohio and Pennsylvania.

Operators' Views. The operators have adopted a take-it-or-leave-it attitude on their plan to set up a joint wage arbitration commission to restrict pay to meet the lower scale in the non-union districts of West Virginia, Kentucky and Tennessee. In effect the plan probably would result in an immediate increase as the West Virginia average scale is about $2.50 a day lower than the union schedule. In the long run, operators declared, the pay probably would go up, even higher than today; the central fields were given temporary relief to meet the non-union competition.

Union Leaders' Forces. Union leaders registered full force to defeat the operators' plan. With an unqualified rejection of the proposition, the Miami negotiations are almost certain to fail, and it is almost as certain that if the operators withdraw, the sessions will be resumed in the north far enough in advance of March 31, when the present contract expires, to give an opportunity to reconcile differences and prevent a strike.

There is a growing feeling of optimism in union ranks that a general breakdown in the industry can be avoided by signing agreements with separate districts or with individual coal companies. Union officials declare that if some of the operators sign for a renewal of the present contract others can be whipped into line before March 31. Even if an agreement is reached, there may be a temporary suspension in April to allow American industry to absorb the surplus stocks on hand, variously estimated between 60,000,000 and 85,000,000 tons or at least a two months' supply.

READY FOR HOP-OFF ACROSS THE ATLANTIC

Commander De Pinedo to Fly Tonight From Africa to South America.

Rome, Feb. 16.—The great aerial adventure of Commander De Pinedo, eclipsed all else in public interest today, as reports were awaited of the commander's hop-off on the most trying stage of his attempted trans-Atlantic flight.

Commander De Pinedo has taken on fuel and supplies at Bloama, Portuguese New Guinea, on the western coast of Africa, and at eight o'clock tonight will start a moonlight flight for the eastern coast of South America.

Port Natal, Brazil, is the ultimate goal of Commander De Pinedo but if he finds himself running short of fuel or with engine troubles he will make for Fernando De Noronha.

The distance from Bloama to Port Natal is nearly 1,800 miles, while the distance to Fernando De Noronha is some 300 miles less. Since Sunday, when he made his start from Sardinia, Commander De Pinedo has covered some 2,000 miles at an average speed of 125 miles an hour, and if he can maintain this speed during his flight over the ocean he will be in South America by daybreak tomorrow.

ITALY TO REFUSE.

Rome, Feb. 16.—Italy's reply to President Coolidge's disarmament proposals, which will be a refusal, will be handed to the American ambassador shortly, according to the Staffal semi-official agency.

CONN. AUTO CRASHES LESS THAN YEAR AGO

January Totals Drop Although List Had Been Increasing Year by Year.

Hartford, Feb. 16.—Automobile accident totals for Connecticut in January were below those of the corresponding month a year ago, a somewhat new situation, according to the records of the Motor Vehicle department which have steadily listed rising totals for a number of years.

There were 1,417 accidents, twelve less than in January, 1926. Victims of fatal accidents numbered eighteen, a total also below that of a year ago, when twenty-four persons were killed. Three of the victims were children. The injured list included the names of 238 persons, ninety-one of whom were children.

Registration of cars last month increased over the same month of 1926. The total was 166,094 as compared with 158,814 a year ago. Hartford again led the other cities of the state in the number of accidents. Reports from eighteen cities showed the following totals: Hartford, 216; New Haven, 180; Bridgeport, 158; Waterbury, 105; New Britain, 74; Stamford, 50; Meriden, 45; Greenwich, 28; Danbury, 22; Norwalk, 20; Middletown, 18; New London, 17; Naugatuck, 15; Norwich, 14; Willimantic, 8; Manchester, 6; Windsted, 5; and Putnam, 4.

Tons of Snow Drop on Men In Mountains—11 Dead, 21 Injured, 3 Missing; Buildings Crushed Like Eggshells—Five Bodies Recovered.

TOLL IN CALIFORNIA

Heavy rains, miniature cyclones, slight earthquakes and snowslides have visited various sections of California during the past 24 hours.

At least 22 persons have been killed as the direct result of the rains and snowslides. Seven persons have been killed in Los Angeles in traffic accidents, the result of heavy rains.

Two members of the crew of a Union Pacific train were killed last night when the train plunged into a swollen creek about 15 miles from Los Angeles. Twenty passengers were injured, some of them critically. A boulder that tumbled through a bridge weakened by the rains of the past three days.

Another accident took the toll of two lives near Congress, Arizona, when a Santa Fe train crashed into a boulder that had been washed down on the track. The engineer and fireman were killed.

Snowslide at the construction camp on the Deep Creek tunnel project of the Southern California Edison Co., 73 miles northeast of Fresno, exacted another heavy toll. Eleven men are known to have been killed and others are thought to have met the same fate.

Yesterday a high wind ripped through the city of Toft, stripping buildings of roofs and injuring several persons. A slight earthquake was registered at Salinas yesterday but caused no damage.

SNOWSLIDE KILLS 11.

Fresno, Cal., Feb. 16.—Eleven persons, including one woman, were killed, 21 were injured and three are missing following a snowslide which thundered down the Sierra Nevada mountains and engulfed a construction camp of the Southern California Edison Company according to word received here today.

The construction camp is located about 75 miles northeast of here, at an altitude of 7,000 feet.

The snow loosened by recent heavy rains cascaded down the mountain side and killed ten persons outright and injured eleven others. While a rescue party was attempting to aid the stricken, a second slide came hurtling down and killed one more and injured ten others.

While the morning crew was at work yesterday, the heavy fall of snow on the mountains suddenly gave away and hurtled down the mountains, uprooting trees and carrying huge boulders down on the camp.

Warned by the roar of the avalanche, a few of the workers were able to run to safety. The others were trapped by the tons of slush and debris that crushed the camp buildings like egg shells. It was in one of these camp buildings that Mrs. C. J. Pattison, wife of the camp electrician foreman, lost her life.

Second Slide. While the rescue parties were working to recover the bodies of the dead and to administer to the injured, a second slide occurred. It followed in the path of the first one, although of not such great proportions. Most of the rescue party managed to scramble from the path of the second avalanche. One man, however, was killed and ten others were injured.

Five Bodies Found. Five bodies had been recovered at midnight. Five others were known to be dead, and three others were missing. Those missing, it is feared, are also buried beneath the huge slide.

The known dead are: W. P. Harvey, electrician; Fred Albert, tunnel pumpman; William P. Lutes, truckman; C. B. Holik, truck tender; G. Valero, truckman.

Others known to be dead but whose bodies are still buried are: Mrs. J. C. Pattison, camp barber; P. S. Bandy, camp powderman; William P. Nelson, powderman; F. Finn, caretaker; R. B. Arnt, mucker.

INDUSTRIAL SURVEY WOULD HELP TOWN

Kiwanians Hear Boston Expert Today—Meets With Chamber.

The Manchester Kiwanis club meeting this noon at the Hotel Sheridan was exceptionally well attended when Arthur Hadden, industrial engineer of Boston gave a twenty minute talk on "Industrial Survey and What It Will Do for Manchester." Mr. Hadden came here on invitation of the directors of the Chamber of Commerce and he met with them at the close of the Kiwanis meeting.

Mr. Hadden is an enthusiastic New Englander and he believes that New England has a bright prospect. He said we were fortunate in having in New England men of ingenuity, persistence and stick-to-it-iveness. There is no reason why New England should "take a back seat" to any part of the United States.

He told about his work as an engineer and explained the purposes of an industrial survey which will determine just what industrial conditions he gave illustrations that had come within his experience. He said the time has passed when concerns must be established in a certain locality to succeed. They can succeed where they can obtain the best help, where there are good schools and living conditions as well as other advantages.

The attendance prize, a box of oranges, sent by Dr. Moore while he was in Florida, was won by Thomas Ferguson, two names were drawn, Harlowe Willis and Thomas Ferguson. They were each required to stand up before the audience, eat a cracker and whistle "Yankee Doodle." The one who did the trick first got the oranges. Tom won.

DAUGHERTY ON STAND IN BROTHER'S BEHALF

New York, Feb. 16.—Mal Daugherty, head of the Midland National Bank of Washington Courthouse, Ohio, resumed the witness stand today at the conspiracy trial of his brother, Harry M. Daugherty, former attorney general of the United States, and Thomas W. Miller, former alien property custodian.

The defendants are charged with sharing in a $391,000 bribe to authorize the return of $7,000,000 in German war-seized assets. Direct examination of the Ohio banker was completed by the government yesterday, and today the witness was taken over for cross-examination by Harold Corbin, of defense counsel.

Referring to irregularities in the accounts of the Midland bank, Daugherty testified that both he and his brother Harry had repeatedly asked Jess Smith, Harry's confidential aide, to straighten out the famous "Jess Smith Extra" account, but Jess kept putting it off, and had not done it when he committed suicide in 1923.

Political Account.

Mal said the account was of a political nature, Jess being secretary of the Harding for President committee. He denied that Harry had ever drawn checks on the account, and said this was done by Smith.

"Did Harry keep track of this account?" Corbin asked.

"No," replied Mal Daugherty.

"Did he and Smith ever discuss it?"

"Yes in December, 1922, in Washington, Harry asked Jess to straighten the account out. I want to know how things stand," he said.

Harry asked Smith the same thing again when Smith was in the hospital in 1923, the witness testified, and also in St. Augustine, Florida, and in Asheville, North Carolina. Mal said he also asked him to fix the account up, himself.

"Did Jess ever report on this account?"

"He did not."

Mal told the court that he was 65, two years younger than Harry, that his father died when he was two years old, and that at the age of 19 he started in as janitor of the bank of which he is now president.

RAIN AND SNOWSLIDE KILL 22 IN CALIFORNIA

Terrific Rainstorms Los Angeles, Calif., Feb. 16.

Southern California and Arizona continued to be deluged today by the unprecedented rainstorm that has been raging over the entire west practically without let up since last Friday night.

Along the coast roared a gale that at times attained fifty miles an hour, according to reports received by the local weather bureau. Shipping is virtually paralyzed. Death and property damage rode on the wings of the storm inland.

Scores of bridges have been washed out, highways have been flooded and many communities prepared to evacuate their neighborhoods as rising waters threatened to flood their homes.

Traffic Stalled

Train, street car and automobile traffic was practically at a standstill throughout the southwest because of the storm. Railroads report many landslides and washouts along their roadbeds.

Considerable fear was felt that the flood control embankments along San Antonio creek, near Whittier, east of Los Angeles, had been badly weakened by the torrential downpour and that they might go out any minute.

Call For Workers

A rush call for workers was sent out today and hundreds of men were attempting frantically to re-join the embankments.

Los Angeles was virtually flooded by the record-breaking storm. Scores of streets throughout the city were flooded from curb to curb and in many instances the water overflowed into basements. Residences in various parts of the city also were flooded and thousands of automobiles were stalled in the streets.

Scores of families in the San Fernando Valley in the Van Nuys district, east of Los Angeles, were reported to have abandoned their homes as raging flood waters swept down upon them and swamped their belongings. Squads of policemen and firemen were dispatched to aid the fugitives of the storm.

The angry sea waters carried away more than four feet of beach in Venice and Santa Monica, undermining ocean front walks and buildings.

Radio officials at the government station at Point Pinos, near San Pedro, reported the storm at that point the worst in many years the gale-like wind splashed ocean spray over the station, which is built 97 feet above sea level.

LANDING OF BRITISH STARTS HECKLING BEE

London, Feb. 16.—Oswald Mosely, newly elected Laborite member of the House of Commons, husband of Lady Cynthia Mosely, and son of a wealthy English family, caused an uproar in Commons today when he scolded Sir Austen Chamberlain, foreign minister, over the British government's action in sending troops to China.

"Under what treaty rights are British troops being landed on Chinese soil?" queried Mosely.

"The right of a state to protect the lives of its nationals abroad," answered Sir Austen. "This right does not depend on any treaty."

There were ministerial cheers, but Mosely continued:

"Are we to understand that British troops will be landed in violation of international law?"

"Certainly not," responded the foreign minister.

"Even when there is no treaty?" pursued Mosely.

At this juncture there was a general uproar with shouts of "Order!" and "Sit down Mosely!"

"If there are no treaty rights will not the landing of these troops be in violation of international law?" Mosely asked.

"No," was the curt response of Sir Austen.

BUTLER WILL DEBATE WITH SENATOR BORAH

Boston, Mass., Feb. 16.—President Nicholas Murray Butler, of Columbia university and exponent of "wet" principles in the Republican party has accepted an invitation to speak before the Roosevelt Club of this city.

He expressed thanks "for the compliment of the invitation."

Though no date for the discussion, which would have Senator Borah of Idaho as the supporter of the dry issue, has been set, Mr. Washburn said that it might be arranged to take place during the month of April.

Dickstein accepted the challenge. They might not have waited for darkness had not other members of Congress intervened and one, Rep. Beedy, Republican of Maine, denounced the whole proceeding to be "disgraceful."

TOBACCO GROWERS IN OPEN REBELLION

Valley Association May Be Dissolved—Members to Vote on Question.

The Connecticut Valley Tobacco Growers' Association has asked its 4,000 members to participate in a referendum vote on the question of cancellation of existing five-year contracts, which eventually will decide whether the association will be reorganized or abandoned.

Strife in action by open rebellion of grower members in several of the 22 districts, directors of the association, meeting in Hartford yesterday, voted to recommend cancellation of the 1927-1931 contracts as a step considered "inevitable" during the past year.

Unanimous Support Lacking. In a statement to members which accompanied the questionnaire, the directors explained that success of the co-operative tobacco marketing organization depends chiefly upon unanimous support of members and their willingness to live up to sales agreements.

Blames "Loose Talk". President J. W. Alsop also sent a personal statement to the 4,000 members of the association in which he gave a background for the directors' action, declaring primarily it was due to "loose talk and disorderly conduct on the part of a few."

Ample Time to Liquidate. Concerning possible abandonment of the co-operative association, President Alsop, in his statement, told members that officers and directors will continue to conduct business as usual, continuing to discharge the obligations under the 1922 and 1926 contract, until all of the tobacco has been sold and accounts with members wound up.

Newberry Revolt Leader. The center of the present rebellion against administration of the Connecticut Valley Tobacco Association's administration and policies has been in the heart of the broad-leaf growing belt, especially in East Hartford, Manchester and Windsor.

MAY TAX AUTOS BY WEIGHT, NOT VALUE

Proposed Bill Would Help Towns Collect Taxes On Vehicles.

Radical changes in automobile taxation in this state are seen in a proposed bill, a copy of which has been received by the local board of assessors. According to the proposed measure, automobile owners would be compelled to pay the taxes before applying for registration to the State Motor Vehicle Department.

The bill is the result of consideration by a committee appointed by Tax Commissioner Blodgett to find a way whereby the tax in Connecticut will be protector against the loss in taxation of thousands of automobiles. In Manchester alone, it is said, nearly 100 automobiles go untaxed every year because owners of machines move out before their taxes can be collected.

whose pictures smiled so debonairly in the papers. He decided to run away from home and leave the sparkling life he knew was around the corner. He roamed the streets, dodging in and out of doorways in the accepted detective fashion. He passed a big bank, teeming with clerks, cashiers, customers, and two big guards in blue uniforms.

"Hello," said Michael haltingly. "I'd like to see a ball." "All right, son," and the fat, genial proprietor walked into the store with his diminutive customer. It was Michael's moment of scarlet, throbbing action.

"I wanted a thrill and I wanted to see life," said Michael there. "But it's all the bunk," he added wearily thrusting his hands into little corduroy knickers.

MORE STUDENT SUICIDES.

Three student suicides in one day bring this new and growing problem startlingly into general notice.

Perhaps the case of Thomas O'Donnell, senior of the Hampstead, L. I. High school is as good as any of the many recent ones for a moment's study.

On the whole we wonder if Mr. Blanton could be any more reprehensible a creature drunk than he is sober.

One answer to this boy's problem will instantly suggest itself to old fashioned folks everywhere—why on earth, if he felt that way about it, didn't he quit school and go get a job?

But, that fails to take account of certain things. It fails to synchronize with the times. It is the point of view of thirty, twenty, a dozen years ago.

There are 80,000,000 people living below the Rio Grande. A good many of them are of very low purchasing power.

Whether or not it is the part of wisdom for America to coddle these nations a bit, or on the other hand to irritate them so that they will perform capers like this tariff barrier of Mexico's is a question it should not be difficult to determine.

LOOK FOR VOODOO. Michigan police are having a hard time to get anything out of James Coyner, a huge Negro serving a term in state prison for grave robbery.

It is strongly to be suspected that the Michigananders are overlooking a bet in not putting to work on this subject somebody who understands something of the workings of voodooism.

It is the rare temperament that is fitted for sheer scholasticism. We are filling our colleges with tens of thousands of boys who could be infinitely happy driving trucks and nailing on clappboards.

HOPPING ON FRANCE. Many Americans are quick to jump on France, blaming her alone for the apparent failure of President Coolidge's naval disarmament proposal.

HOLY ROWDIES. Representative Thomas L. Blanton of Texas is a dry and a Ku Kluxer. The presumption is that he believes that being dry and hating Negroes, Jews and Catholics are attributes of better people than such as are wet and do not hate anybody. Yesterday Mr. Blanton, in the course of an argument in a committee room of the Congress of the United States, and during the progress of a hearing, pounded Representative Sol Bloom of New York, a Jew, thereby expressing militantly his Kluxism, and knocked down another Jew named Schloss, an amusement park proprietor, thereby expressing not only his Kluxism but his dryness and sabbatarianism.

Incidentally, Harvey L. Bowiby, secretary of the Lord's Day Alliance, punched on the jaw the official reporter who was trying to keep Representative Blanton from quite killing Representative Bloom.

We know any number of people who will take a drink any and every time they can get one, who would not beat and choke or knock down anybody either for being a Jew or for holding an opposite opinion, even when sozzled.

We know quite disreputable people who would not pass a government official on the jaw for trying to stop a mucker fight in a committee room, as did the good Mr. Bowiby.

On the whole we wonder if Mr. Blanton could be any more reprehensible a creature drunk than he is sober.

One answer to this boy's problem will instantly suggest itself to old fashioned folks everywhere—why on earth, if he felt that way about it, didn't he quit school and go get a job?

NEW YORK

New York, Feb. 16.—The Broadway of the imagination and of the golden glow is quite another street from the Broadway of 4 o'clock in the morning.

With the lights gone and the streets surrendered to a half dozen fitting taxicabs, it becomes reduced to its least common denominator and has a clumsy, sprawling look about it; it is even "small town" from the New York viewpoint.

Broadway, on the other hand, reveals itself in the darkness as a welter of small, cheap shops, ticket brokers and catch-penny shops, interwoven with flashy men's furnishing emporiums and theaters, the great signs of which seem completely meaningless once the lights are off.

Peculiarly enough, few outside Manhattan stop to consider that other phase of Broadway—the Broadway that slips suddenly out of the theater belt at Herald Square and makes an unexpectacular march down toward the waterfront where suddenly it scatters into a shower of skyscrapers, like a skyrocket.

And then, again, that upper end of Broadway where again it dilverces from the theater at Columbus Circle and becomes a lane of delicatessens, small stores and acts as drum major, for to the Bronx.

Here is a Broadway that has nothing in common with the lower Broadway. Here the mothers of all the interlocking streets bring their babies for a sunning.

At mid-afternoon the streets are cluttered with shouting, galloping youngsters of all ages.

In the two blocks between 102d and 104th streets upon a recent sunny morning I counted 200 children and then quit counting. Two hundred of these just 50 blocks downtown would stop traffic.

And perhaps, because of this many-sidedness, Broadway is Broadway and hence the most amazing thoroughfare in this nation.

Starting in great wealth and in offices of the captains of industry, it runs every gamut, ending in those solid residential and child-bearing blocks that populate the city.

GILBERT SWAN. I loafe and invite my soul; I lean and loafe at my ease, observing a spear of summer grass.

A child said, What is the grass? fetching it to me with full hands; How could I answer the child? I do not know what it is, any more than he.

I guess it must be the flag of my disposition, out of hopeful green stuff woven.

Or I guess it is the handkerchief of the Lord, A scented gift and remembrancer, designedly dropped.

Bearing the owner's name some way in the corners, that we may see and remark, and say, "Whose?"

—Walt Whitman: From "Song of Myself."

Washington, Feb. 16.—Governor Angus Wilson McLean of North Carolina is potential presidential timber.

He probably can have the endorsement of his state for the Democratic nomination in 1928 if he wants it.

But McLean is a supporter of W. G. McAdoo.

That is why McLean, who thinks McAdoo has a better chance for nomination than any governor below the Mason-Dixon line no matter what his capabilities, is unlikely to come to the next convention as North Carolina's favorite son.

The same thing holds true for Senator Furnifold M. Simmons, leader of the state Democratic organization, who has had North Carolina's endorsement and whose friends would be glad to give it to him again.

The purpose of this story is not to cast aspersions at the presidential boom said to have been set for the McLean.

It concerns a deep, dark and diabolical plot which certain good Democrats find evolving from the bitter warfare of submarine attacks and poison gas which is raging between our old friends McAdoo and Al Smith.

It is already evident that the Smith legions, with the enthusiastic support of all political wets, are doing everything in their power to foster a widespread belief that McAdoo, as a candidate for nomination, is a dead duck.

And there are many other states which have their McLeans. There is talk of McLean as a vice presidential candidate on the theory that the south must at last be accorded a place on the ticket, in which case competition would probably be severe.

McLean, planter, banker, lawyer, manufacturer and railroad builder, is much better known here than most governors. He is 58 years old, with a great record of service to the party, nationally and statewide.

He is a tall, magnificently built Scotchman, described as clean, able and loyal, and with a genius for plain, meaty, convincing yet unadorned oratory.

So McLean, who was appointed assistant secretary of the treasury and director of the War

Finance corporation under McAdoo might be merely playing the Smith game should he accept the graceful tribute which North Carolina doubtless would give him.

Washington, Feb. 16.—Governor Angus Wilson McLean of North Carolina is potential presidential timber.

QUEER QUIRKS OF NATURE. WHAT ABOUT CORK? BY ARTHUR N. PACK. President, American Nature Ass'n. Of all the three hundred varieties of oak, there is only one suitable for providing man with what has come to be considered a household necessity. The next time you are vainly striving to pick an unusually light cork out of the neck of a bottle, instead of wracking your imagination for appropriate phrases, think of the smiling slices of the Mediterranean and a forest of gnarled old trees. Then you will have a picture of the cork oak that yields its bark to serve us in innumerable ways. These picturesque trees are evergreens and resemble the evergreen oak of our California valleys. They are rather wide-spreading, but rarely reach a height of more than 50 feet. It is in July and August that the bark is peeled; from the average tree a coat about 15 feet long is taken, but often the limbs of the larger trees are stripped as well as the bark. The cork tree immediately begins to grow another coat which it will prefer to mankind after seven or eight years. In the days of ancient Greece, fishermen used the cork to buoy up their nets, and as stoppers for their earthenware jugs. With the advance of the glass production the demand for stoppers increased, and at the present time we find the bark of this great old tree made into floors, bath mats, fishing-rod handles, refrigerator cars, penholders, cigaret tips, life belts, and an endless chain of articles of equal variety. Send a stamped, addressed envelope and questions of fact having to do with Nature will be answered by the consulting staff of Nature Magazine of Washington through arrangements made by this paper.

CHRIST, THE DOOR TO HEAVEN

Sometimes there is much argument
And feeling along the religious line,
But most of us know we should repent
And for God's salvation be in time.

The Saviour He did make it plain
That if heaven we would win,
He said, "Ye must be born again
Or ye never can enter in."

And if a man is born again,
A new creature he doth become,
He taketh not God's name in vain
For he hath the bridle on his tongue.

The old desires are passed away
And so are the old affections, too;
No matter what the people may say
For he knows the thing is true.

Heaven born and heaven bound
Is the language of his heart,
Since he hath the road way found
And hath chosen the better part.

This must be the old-time religion
Which maketh a man all new,
And fills him with joy through believing
Such as nothing else can do.

Sometimes there is a lot of contention
As to what we really must do,
If we would obtain salvation,
And to what church we should go.

The way it is very plainly made
That a man he never need to err,
If today he would be saved
He may find an open door.

"I am the door," Christ Jesus said,
"By Me if any man do enter in
Through faith he shall be saved
And kept from the power of sin."

What is the use of contention
Except for the faith that saves
Which brings us a new creation,
It was for this His life Jesus gave.

It is not the Church that saves
For salvation is of the Lord,
It is He who set free the sin slaves
Not our name on the church record.

It is helpful some church to attend
If in heart we worship the Lord,
But on this we must not depend
But on Christ the living word.

UNSOLVED

We come into this world unknown
And when, where or how we leave
It, we go alone;
And what of where we go, whether
For ill or well,
None have ever returned, the mystery to tell.

Never has mortal that dwelt upon this Earth
Been known to solve the mystery of rebirth;
We live upon this earth perhaps for many years
And some are full of joy and some are full of tears.

Then flickers out the tiny spark that lit the flame
Unknown to solve the mystery as we came;
Those that have gone have kept
their silence well;
Not one has returned the future
life to tell.

PONZI TO WRITE BOOK WHILE IN PRISON.

Boston, Mass., Feb. 16.—Charles Ponzi, ex-financial wizard, today was serving the first day of his seven to nine year sentence as a thief in solitary confinement in state's prison.
During his spare time in prison, Ponzi said he plans to write and sell his life story, the proceeds to go to the benefit of his wife, who, he said, has lost the sight of one eye and is going blind in the other—"blind from sorrow, from crying." Ponzi put it. Mrs. Ponzi is in Italy with the swindler's 77-year-old mother.

LONDON BUILDS $12,500,000 IN PICTURE HOUSES

Movie Theatres To Have Dance Halls Attached; a New Feature.

London.—More than $12,500,000 will be spent in constructing new motion picture houses in London and reconstructing one or two old ones.

Additional 52,890 seats for movie fans will be provided before the end of the summer.

Some of these new houses will have dance halls attached. The majority will be provided with full facilities for the presentation of variety shows as well as pictures; most will have luxurious tea lounges and cafes.

The old type of motion picture house is out of business in London nowadays. Bankers and powerful syndicates have now taken this place. One big group of Stock Exchange men has just negotiated for the sale in block of 80 picture theaters scattered over the country. A London firm of merchant bankers, Ostrer Brothers, has just bought fifteen theaters belonging to the Biocolor circuit for $3,500,000.

Bankers Interested
The same firm of banker brothers have also, it is reported, been negotiating for the purchase of the Capitol Theater, owned by Sir Walter Gibbons, who asked a price of $3,000,000. Famous Players-Lasky Company, which owns the wonderful new Plaza Theater at Piccadilly Circus are also said to have been making a bid for this beautiful new building.

The day of the big motion picture theater, seating 3,000 to 4,000 people has now definitely arrived in London. The best confirmation of this is that the London City Council, in issuing yearly licenses, have made it clear that the small movie show must go.

This governing body of London looks kindly on the big cinema in the suburbs, which, in its language, is becoming an "important communal rendezvous." In the big houses every modern requirement for safety can be carried out; many of the small older ones are incapable of being altered to modern conditions.

Moreover with the increased cost of films, no house providing adequate pictures and decent music can be made to pay with a seating capacity of under 2,000.

The most interesting of the new building schemes is that of the New Empire Cinema, which is to be erected on the site of the famous old Empire Theater in Leicester square. It will be financed by British and American money for the exploitation, chiefly of the films made by the American Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Corporation, which already controls the magnificent Tivoli theater in the Strand.

The New Empire will be ready next Christmas and will accommodate 3,000 persons at a cost of $1,000,000.

"DON JUAN" MAKING ATTENDANCE RECORDS

The public of Hartford and neighboring Connecticut is indebted to the State theater for bringing to the screen such a perfect entertainment, production as "Don Juan" which is the attraction until and including Saturday night.

"Don Juan" has to date established new records—capacity crowds filling the 4000 seats at the State theater at all performances. It is entertainment of such rare quality—so artistically beautiful and delightful—that it is doubtful whether there ever will be another picture that will be able to even approach "Don Juan." So much praise has already been given John Barrymore that it is an impossible task to add to the honors of that celebrated for his performance on the leading role. Suffice it is to say, that Mr. Barrymore portrays the character "Don Juan" with such fire, such realism, such finesse—that the figure becomes living, breathing figure. The versatility of Mr. Barrymore is almost unbelievable. Lover, swordsman, horseman,—he enacts each with equal ease and to perfection.

Mary Astor, by her characterization, too, becomes an outstanding screen star. As the innocent, virtuous maiden, she enslaves the unbridled "Don Juan" she moves about with a celestial dignity. Her face, expressions, and animation are almost divine. Estelle Taylor fits as the cynical, considering, lustful, revengeful Borgols of the story. Everyone in the long and celebrated cast wins lasting laurels. Every scene, every episode of "Don Juan" is interwoven with much skill—the continuity is so flawless—that the narrative of this powerful romance—the greatest love dream the world has ever known—moves along with lightning speed and holds the spectator with breathless suspense.

A new lens, composed of a liquid container of concave shape, absorbs heat rays and is declared to be admirably suited to the projection of motion pictures and treatment for tuberculosis.

WHEN THE FAR NORTH HONORS ITS HEROINE

Nome, Alaska—Here in the locked heart of Alaska is a little spot that the sun of human sympathy has made warm.

If you look at the map of Alaska you will see a thin, wavering line, somewhere midway between Nome and Teller. The line is marked Mary's River.

But it is not merely a river. Grizzled survivors of the days of the gold rush will tell you that it is a monument. The river is a memorial to mother love.

How It Got Name
More than a quarter of a century ago an Eskimo woman lived in an igloo on the river's bank. She had a husband and two bright-eyed Eskimo children of her own. Nearby, in other igloos, lived a few families. In the little settlement were 14 children.

That spring there was an epidemic of illness—akin to our modern "flu"—about the same time the long lines of miners went marching from Nome on the two-day hike to the hills beyond Teller where new riches had been discovered.

When the disease left the Eskimo woman was childless and husbandless. The 14 children of the settlement were left without parents.

The Eskimo woman adopted them all. In her mother love for the orphans she buried her own heart-break.

The seekers for gold, staying overnight at the river village, were fed and housed by the foster-mother of the children. They learned her story.

Council of the North
In the council of the north, around the crude stove of the igloo, they sat and considered her story. Her name was hard for them to say.

"Call her Mary—it's a grand old name!" one suggested.
The council debated the question of a monument. Erection of a shaft in the mining country seemed an impossible task. Besides, miners do not build monuments. They thought of the river. That was the answer a perpetual monument to her, in winter an icy highway for sleds.

They called it Mary's River, and Mary's River it has remained.

Teachers came years later to found a school at the river village under the auspices of the United States bureau of education. The teachers heard the story. They named the settlement Mary's Igloo.

So they are on the maps today. Around the village are Mary's trees and Mary's reindeer. It is Mary's land. And over it all still presides the woman who gave a little corner of Alaska a name that will last. She is hale and hearty. The 14 children have become 14 men and women of the world, some with children of their own.

Mary has another husband now.

Indicative of the esteem in which she is held in the northland, this venerable man goes by one name only—
Mary's Husband!

Sweeping Price Reductions

The Commander, Studebaker's Big Six Brougham, reduced $200

Today—February 16, 1927—Studebaker celebrates its seventy-fifth birthday with price reductions which reflect the aggressive spirit of this Company. Studebaker has lived and grown for seventy-five years because of its consistent policy of keeping ahead of the procession. Studebaker Custom Cars, introduced recently, exemplify this policy. They have been the most widely imitated cars ever produced. In less than six months no less than a dozen manufacturers have introduced what they call "custom models" . . . but a custom name doesn't make a custom car! As Studebaker leads in design, so does it also lead in value. The new prices quoted below represent a supreme triumph of One-Price manufacture.

THE ROMANCE OF AMERICA: Lewis and Clark (9)

After a winter on the Pacific coast in which every resource was put to the task of providing food, in March, 1806, the return journey over the 4134 weary miles was begun. Their second journey on the Columbia upstream was even more wretched than the first. Obtaining food was a constant struggle.

Clark often performed with a magnifying glass and in return for the show the Indians would give the explorers edible roots.

It was summer when they came again to the camp of the Nez Percés. Here they were given horses by the friendly tribe.

Against the Indians' advice they marched toward the Bitterroot mountains again. The narrow paths were blocked with snow. They floundered and finally were forced to return. A second dash took them across the range and down into Montana's plains.

STUDEBAKER ANNOUNCES BIG PRICE REDUCTIONS

South Bend, Feb. 16.—Sweeping price reductions ranging up to $200 were announced today by The Studebaker Corporation in celebration of its seventy-fifth birthday. The new prices, which go into effect immediately, reflect the aggressive spirit of the Corporation and the confidence with which it looks forward to what, in the opinion of its president, A. R. Erskine, will be the greatest year in its history.

The success of the recently introduced Custom Cars, and the remarkable economies effected by Studebaker's unique facilities for One-Plant manufacture make possible reductions that bring Studebaker cars to a new level of value. The new prices represent savings appropriately passed on to the public on the occasion of the Corporation's Diamond Jubilee anniversary.

The price reductions affect the Sport Roadster, the Custom Victoria, the Custom Sedan and four models mounted on the Big Six chassis—The Chancellor, The Commander, The Sheriff, and the Big Six Sport Roadster.

The new prices bring the Custom Sedan from $1385 to $1335, the Custom Victoria from $1335 to $1325, and the Sport Roadster from $1250 to $1195.

Brougham Reduced $200.

The largest price reduction was made on the Commander, Studebaker's Big Six Brougham, which was reduced from $1785 to $1585—a cut of $200. The Chancellor—the Big Six Custom Victoria, was reduced from $1735 to $1645. The Sheriff (Big Six Phaeton) was reduced from $1610 to $1445, and the Big Six Sport Roadster from $1680 to $1495.

Reductions were made without changes in equipment, all the models being equipped with bumpers front and rear, disc wheels, and four wheel brakes in addition to the unusually complete list of fittings that characterize Studebaker Custom Cars.

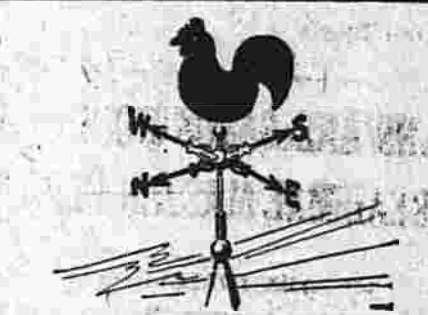

A motor-driven hand plane has just been invented.

Billy Evans Says

COBB TO PHILLY

By Cobb is to finish his career as a member of the Philadelphia Athletics.

That is more than interesting when you recall the fact that Cobb, after playing hard against all comers, seemed to exert himself even more than usual against Philadelphia.

For years there has existed a keen rivalry between the two clubs. Perhaps the spirited play of Cobb was in a measure responsible for it. Anyway, any series between the two teams that failed to provide plenty of thrills, was considered a failure.

Never Gave Ground

Ty Cobb always figured the base-lines were as much his as the infielder. He never gave ground. When he slid into a base he did so with everything he had.

There never was a baserunner with a more deceptive slide than Cobb. An infielder who was not an expert in touching a runner, was always in danger when trying to put the ball on Ty.

One season, I recall, he spiked both Jack Barry and Frank Baker. In the case of Barry's injury, Jack himself was largely responsible. In an important game he took a daring chance to retire Cobb, succeeding, but suffering a bad spike wound.

In the case of Frank Baker, Cobb did go into the base rather high. No doubt he hoped to intimidate Baker. The latter, never a good man at touching the runner, played the ball awkwardly and was badly spiked.

Roar of Crowd

When a player is injured, a home player in particular, the crowd gives no consideration as to who was responsible, the visiting player is always accused of dirty work.

Naturally, the Philadelphia crowds took Cobb severely to task for his part in the spiking of Baker and Barry and he was the target for much verbal abuse and some threats of physical violence.

I happened to give the decision in the Barry case and I recall that while he was sitting on the ground, getting first aid, Barry absolved Cobb from any blame in the happening.

Recently, in chatting with Cobb over the possibility of his going to Philadelphia, these two incidents were brought up and Cobb said the day following the Barry incident was the most unpleasant of his entire career.

Threat of Violence

"The following morning," said Cobb, by way of explanation, "I received a special delivery letter written on the feet of stationery in a very fine hand. It was from a man of intelligence.

"The letter informed me that if I played the game after that, it was a most important game, I would be shot from a window in one of the houses that overlook the right field wall at Shibe Park in Philadelphia.

"The fan also informed me that he would use a silencer on the gun, that I would never know I was shot until the bullet pierced my back. Feeling ran so high against me at the time, that I was urged not to play, but I insisted on doing so.

"However, I am frank to say I was a happy man when that ball game was over. Every time I start after a fly ball or grounder, I expected to be picked off."

These same fans who once came out to cheer Cobb, because he was an opponent, will not cheer him because he is one of the homeboys.

Fickle fandom.

ARREST RUNNERS

Albany, N. Y., Feb. 16.—Two prohibition agents early today arrested four men out of a crowd of thirty who were unloading alleged "good beer" from a freight car in the Green Island yards. The agents seized three motor trucks and 120 half-barrels of alleged beer. The prisoners said they were Morris Trackiner, Frank Moreno and Edward Valiant of Albany and Charles Wachter of Troy.

OLD MAN MISSING

Stamford, Conn., Feb. 16.—Frederick Wiedner, 67, of Beacon, N. Y., who came here to visit his son, Arthur, in Springfield, is missing and Stamford police have been requested to search for the aged man. The elder Wiedner left his son's home yesterday noon to visit friends in Stamford since which time no trace of him has been found. The police were notified when relatives were unable to locate him.

JACK LOCKWILL AT ROCKLAKE

by Gilbert Patten

After that Jack ceased to be disdainful. Still keeping his head, he got at his opponent and punished him properly. But McNally was a hog for that sort of thing, and he kept boring in. Twice more he smashed Jack and nearly put him to the boards. The fight went on round after round, until the spectators began to think it would never end. Jack showed marks, and his enemy was frightfully battered.

At last Jack's superior skill began to count. McNally went down again and again, but kept getting up, more slowly each time. "Say when you've got enough," said Jack. "I'll give you enough!" panted the Bad Egg, hitting low and foul.

Then Jack broke through McNally's guard, and swung right and left to the body and the point of the jaw. As Jack's enemy crashed again to the ground, a girl cried: "Oh, stop!" Jack looked around and saw Betty. "You're wonderful, Jack!" she murmured. "And you're the most wonderful girl in the world!" he replied.

"I heard you were fighting here, and I ran to stop it, for I thought he'd whip you, Jack," said Betty, as they were walking away together. The others had remained behind to take care of the defeated bully. "I had to fight him, Betty," said Jack. "An old debt had to be settled. I'm satisfied now." "You're wonderful, Jack!" she murmured. "And you're the most wonderful girl in the world!" he replied.

ALBERTA VAUGHN TOPS DOUBLE FEATURE BILL

In "Collegiate" at Circle Tomorrow and Friday—"Obey the Law" Other Feature.

The college atmosphere is one of the main things in Alberta Vaughn's new starring vehicle, "Collegiate," which opens at the Circle tomorrow for two days as a companion feature to "Obey the Law," which stars Cullen Landis. Tonight will be the last time to see Laura La Plante and Lewis Stone in "The Blonde Saint."

Miss Vaughn's popularity is on the rise and has been since she started that famous series for F. B. O., "The Telephone Girl," dramatized from H. G. Wither's Collier's magazine stories. She is of the vivacious, active type and keeps a picture moving at a fast rate of speed from beginning to end.

Bert Lytell scores another hit in his feature, "Obey the Law," which is the companion to "Collegiate" for tomorrow and Friday. Lytell is immense in this picture and it represents some of the best acting he has done in some time.

"Obey the Law" is a story of high life and lawless practices which are conducted under the guise of big business. The commandments are disregarded by the wealthy society butterflies and lounge lizards in this picture until the awakening comes to them all.

Lytell's portrayal of the young society rouser is true to life and convincing.

Tonight for the last time will be seen Laura La Plante and Lewis Stone in "The Blonde Saint."

This is a story of Sicily with Stone in the role of a humble fisherman who is torn between two loves. The story is a delightful one of rural Italy and contains humor and pathos in the right proportions.

With these two stars are a group of actors just a little bit less widely known.

STATE GIVING GOLD AGAIN THIS EVENING

Ten Gold Pieces Offered—Two Features—Eight Acts Tomorrow Night.

The American eagle will scream tonight at the State theater and from his beak will fall 15 gold pieces. The management is continuing the Wednesday evening Gold Rush with the presentation of $50 in $5 and $2.50 gold pieces this evening. On the same bill will be the cartwheels two pictures which will be shown one, "The Better Way" and Ralph Ince, and the other, "The Masked Woman" featuring Ann Q. Nilsson and Holbrook Blinn.

The picture is only leading up to the week's main attraction which will be offered tomorrow evening in the form of eight acts of vaudeville and Rin Tin Tin in "White London Sleeps," a story of London's Limehouse district. Rin Tin Tin's mate is to be at the State for the last three days of the week while this picture is showing and every patron of the theater will receive a coupon entitling him to a chance on a genuine full-blooded German police puppy which will be given away next week.

Tonight's features are both first-run affairs. That much can be seen from the stars who are acting in them and everybody is familiar with the work of Ralph Ince, Miss Nilsson and Holbrook Blinn. "The Masked Woman" is a First National feature, only recently released and has been seen in but a few places to date.

A symphony in celluloid is this swift moving tale of Paris and Monte Carlo.

The picture presents the problem of whether or not a woman is ever justified in risking her reputation for any cause—no matter how worthy—and solves it with a novel twist.

Trade School Back In Win Column After Long Absence; Score Of 13 to 9; Meriden Game Friday.

The Manchester Trade School last night had an opportunity to know how it feels to win a game for a change, when it won from Stafford Springs High school 13 to 9 in that town. It was the first victory Manchester has recorded in several games. Friday, the mechanics go to Meriden.

Coach Ralph Kingsley used his entire second team for half of the game last night and although the margin was but four points, the Stafford Springs team was outclassed much more than the score indicates. For instance, it scored but two field goals during the entire game, not a single one in the first half which ended 7 to 1 in Manchester's favor.

EVANS CALLS DONOHUE REAL MASTER PITCHER

Pete Donohue of the Cincinnati Reds is what I would call a master pitcher. My definition of a master pitcher is one who combines natural ability and a keen mind, poise, common sense, and the greatest of all pitching assets—control.

"Pete Donohue was a finished big league pitcher the day he made his debut in a Cincinnati uniform direct from college" was a remark the late Pat Moran once made to me when discussing Donohue.

Donohue joined Cincinnati in 1921, coming direct from Texas Christian University, where for three years he was the sensation of college baseball in that section.

In his first year he won 7 games and lost 6. He has shown constant improvement each year and has never fallen below the 500 mark.

Control more than anything else made the name of Mathewson a baseball byword; it is doing the same for Pete Donohue.

Last season, in 47 games Donohue gave but 39 bases on balls. Pete believes in making the batter earn his way on. Less than a base on balls per game is almost an unbelievable performance these days over an entire season of play.

"And don't forget," remarked Manager Jack Hendricks when I discussed this phase of Donohue's work with him, "that I probably ordered Donohue to walk 10 men last year, preferring an intentional pass to giving them a chance to hit."

That would bring Donohue's actual passes as a result of loss of control down to 29 for 47 games. Some record.

Going back over the dope, we find that in the 220 games he has pitched since joining the National League, he has given only 261 bases on balls.

In his first year in the majors, Donohue took part in 21 games and but 26 players got on through passes. Wildness is a fault that handicaps practically every rookie but not Donohue.

That first year exhibition of control best explains why Pat Moran said Donohue was a real big league pitcher the day he made his debut.

DELANEY IS GOOD DECLARES EXPERT

Looks Much Better Than Maloney, He Says, After Visit to Camp.

By DAVIS J. WALSH (I. N. S. Sports Editor)

Bridgport, Conn., Feb. 15.—Bronzed, lean, beautifully muscled and as clear-eyed as a figure in a stained glass window, Jack Delaney today was 100 per cent athlete as he worked out in his training camp here.

The physical Delaney seemed to be fool-proof. Therefore, Friday night's battle of the great indoors might be regarded as a stand-off in some respects. Delaney's condition would seem to be far better than Jimmy Maloney's and that will help in the ten round distance.

Maloney has the edge in weight and strength and that will hurt, unless Delaney can buck and wing his way out of close quarters.

They said Delaney looked twice the man he did on Monday when he was worried about his wife's block. He was offered three movie block. He was offered three movie block.

My greatest ambition? I want to hold both the heavyweight and light heavyweight championships. That's my goal.

If Delaney does get into the ring with Tunney the corners will be occupied by the two handsomest specimens of physical youth that ever exchanged blows in professional fights.

With one Eddie Clark, brother of Jeff the Joplin Ghost, Delaney decided to put in several rounds of mauling and wrestling. Just why this was the procedure I cannot say for Clark doesn't weigh within fifty pounds of the figure Maloney is expected to scale.

There are, in fact, no heavy men in camp, bearing out the general impression that Delaney will show his all on speed. It may be, too, that the light heavyweight champion, being a bit fragile, doesn't care to take any chances on getting softened before the fight.

However, many a good man is beginning to realize that no one knows too much about it. One man has condition and speed; the other weight and strength. Both are alleged to have uncertain chin.

Wapping Tastes First Defeat On Home Floor

DISCUSSING TUNNEY'S OPPONENTS

DELANEY SATS DEMPSEY IS STILL THE KINGPIN

New York, Feb. 15.—"And they say I'm too small to fight Jim Maloney or Gene Tunney!" The indignant voice of Jack Delaney rose above the rat-tat-tat of a punching bag in the gym of the Acorn club at Bridgeport as the picturesque French-Canadian paced up and down in a bright red and black lumberjack's shirt.

"I don't think people realize I'm growing and putting on muscle and filling out to the peak of my strength. It makes me feel like a baby—like a miniature champion—before I get into the ring with Tunney or Maloney, and bottle my chances with him."

"Why Dempsey weighed only 138 when he went in and slaughtered the ponderous Jess Willard. . . . I put on nine pounds between my fight with Berlenbach and Gorman. I weighed 166 for the Berlenbach fight and 175 for Gorman and I want to tell you I worked hard for the Gorman fight, too. I did a lot of grueling road work, the day before I went through seven rounds of fast boxing—otherwise I would have weighed more."

"If the opportunity is mine to be pitted against Tunney, and mark my words, I think I will come through this elimination series O. K. I will weigh at least 178 pounds against his 185 pounds the afternoon of the contest."

So that explodes the weight bugaboo about Mr. Delaney. Tunney, despite an advantage of two inches in height, will not have the best of the scales by ten pounds at the most.

Skill? Punch? Fighting spirit? Delaney has the advantage there. He has worked with the utmost intelligence so his new poundage builds him up naturally to a particularly sturdy fighting machine.

"Show me I have the heart to bear grease paint on my face and spotlights in my eyes. I don't care to earn my money that way, although some mighty fine people are in the profession. I am happy enough now."

Pete Reilly, his manager, woefully informs me Delaney has turned down enough dough to make Mrs. Yifin go y-i-y-i-ying around a city block. He was offered three movie block. He was offered three movie block.

My greatest ambition? I want to hold both the heavyweight and light heavyweight championships. That's my goal.

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE
 Death strikes GARRETT FOLSOM while bathing at Ocean Town, N. J. After being persistently examined by a doctor, the body is brought to the Hotel Majestic, where an inquiry is started.

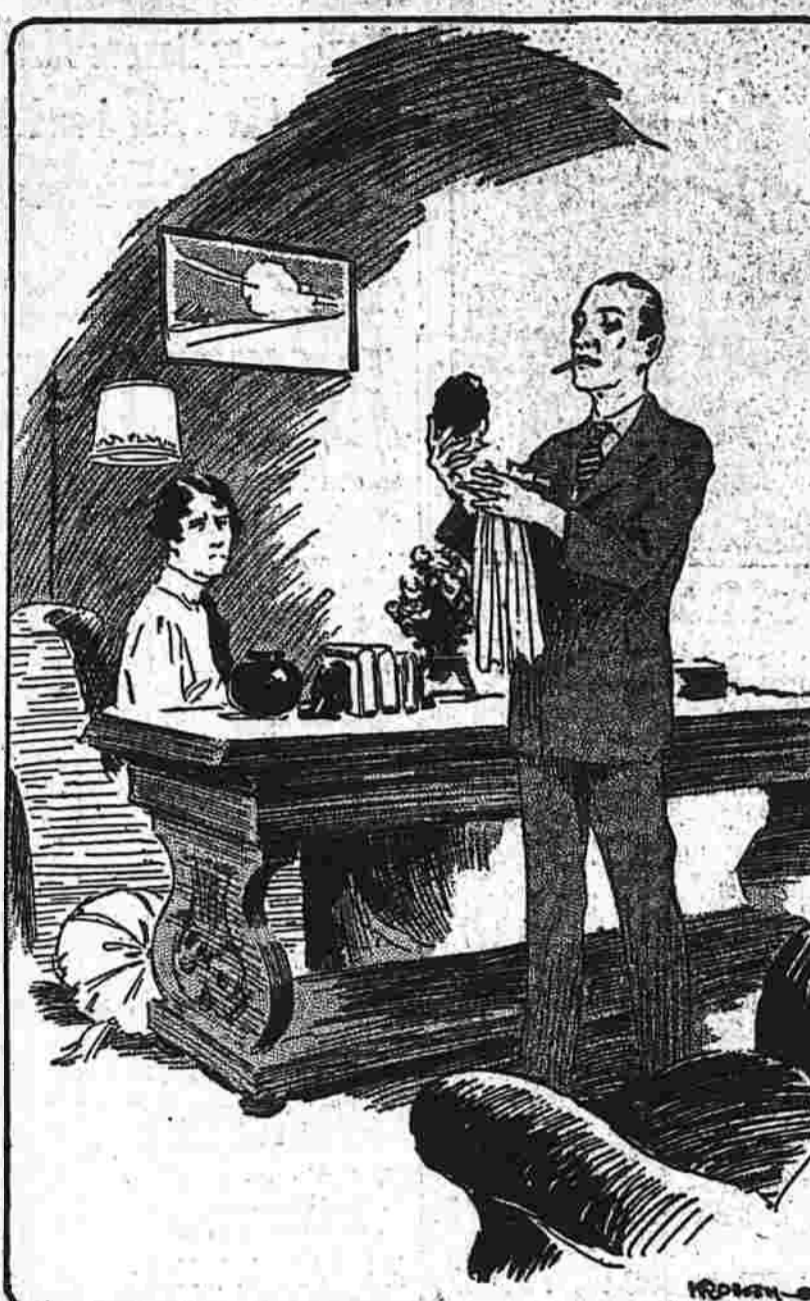

Folsom's bathing companions had been ROGER NEVILLE, MRS. HELEN BARNABY, and CAROLINE WALDON. It is established that Folsom, just before his death, had been standing next to NEED HARRON, known as the copper king.

Then the startling announcement is made that Folsom had been stabbed to death in the water. ROSS, his wife is questioned, as are Barron and his wife, but no light is shed on the mystery.

ANASTASIA FOLSOM, eccentric and masterful sister of the dead man, arrives and takes command. At the request of the coroner, she that the death weapon was a phlegm, an Oriental knife, and that it and its scabbard had been purchased on the boardwalk.

It is also established that one Crocydon Sene is a fancier of curious knives. Anastasia engineers TITUS RIGGS, an architect, to work on the case. He asks permission to go through the dead man's effects.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

"Oh, I pick up news by instinct," Pelton returned. "I suppose I can have these toys, Auntie?"

CHAPTER XXI

"Of course, that's what I want you to do, Mr. Riggs," said Anastasia Folsom. "But I can't feel that you can find anything of evidential value where I have failed. I've hunted all through his belongings, and though I found a lot of things I don't understand, I saw nothing that seemed, in the least, a straw to show which way the wind blows."

"No, I suppose not, or you would have told me. What do you make of these dolls?"

"They surprise me. Of course I know that they are a fad, just now. And I know that the dolls here are of the best and finest French variety. They doubtless came from Paris. But they don't suggest anything to me—do they to you?"

"No, I can't say that they do. But it is a strange taste for a man of Mr. Folsom's type. I can understand his having them in Paris—but to bring them home with him, and then to bring them down here—did he cart them about wherever he went?"

"Yes, some of them. Ross told me that four or five of them were always packed with his luggage when he went away."

"Queer, to say the least," commented Riggs.

Dan Pelton arrived about noon on Sunday.

He went straight to his aunt's apartment and found her there awaiting him. Paxton, the maid, was hovering about, and Miss Folsom dismissed her as she rose to greet her nephew.

"How are you, Dan? Sit over there. Smoke, if you like. Now there's small use in your talking; you're nothing to say of interest. I'll tell you all there is to know."

Whereupon she launched into a full recital of the circumstances of Folsom's death as she knew them. Of the inquest and the verdict, and then proceeded to outline her plans for the future.

"I'm going to find the brute who killed Garrett if it takes my whole lifetime and my whole fortune as well. My brother was the only person on earth I loved or cared for. I don't believe you ward Uncle Garrett, and that is in no way changed by his death. But this talk is useless, aunt, and as I only came down for the funeral, I'll stay for that and then I'll go back to New York."

"You'll stay here as long as I want you to, and no longer. Come, now, Dan, be nice to me. I'm very sad and lonesome and terribly upset."

"I know it, Aunt Stasia, and I really want to help you, but you know uncle and I never hit it off, and you can't expect me to change all at once."

"No, but you can and must help me, if possible, to find and punish his murderer. You are the man of the family now—in fact you and I are the only members of the family left, and we must not quarrel."

"Well, I'll do all I can, I say what are all the dolls for? Are they yours?"

"No, they were Garrett's."

"Where did he cart them around with him? For they don't look like the sort that grow down here."

"They are Parisian, that's clear. But they could have been bought here at that. Few things can be achieved in Ocean Town. However, he did bring these with him. Ross says he usually took them wherever he went."

"Oh, Ross, that first-class man he had. I don't see why I shouldn't fall heir to Ross. Where is he?"

"Here. He's in my employ now."

Carolyn Wells

but if he's willing you can take him over, I've no real use for a man servant, except as a sort of courier to look after my luggage, and that's scarcely necessary. You know, Dan, you will have about a third of Garry's money."

"You bet I know it! And you have a third and old Neville has a third. Aunt, why does Roger Neville get so much?"

"They planned it, Dan. Their wills were made at the same time, and whichever one of them lived longer inherited a third of the other's fortune."

"Then what price Neville as the murderer?"

"Don't be absurd. Well, as I was saying, now that you have a fair fortune if you like to take on Ross do so."

"All right, and I'll take these rooms, aunt. You can get others to suit you. And I suppose I can have Uncle Garry's personal belongings; I mean his manish traps—the ones that you can't use."

Pelton gave a quick, appraising glance at his aunt, realizing suddenly that with her own manish affects, there might well be a few of her brother's things that she could use.

But she gave little heed to the subject and acquiesced in his plans for getting herself another suite.

"But you're to help me, Dan," she said, gravely. "If you don't I shall cut you out of my will, and then the day will come when you'll regret it."

"You bet I would," he exclaimed, fervently. "I don't want you to step off, Aunt Stasia. For I'm really fond of you. But when you do I most certainly expect to be your sole heir."

"You're a cold-blooded brute, Dan, but your prospects depend entirely on your meeting my wishes so long as I am alive to express them."

"Here goes then. What do you want me to do first?"

Dan Pelton was not really the brute he seemed, but he had thoroughly disliked his uncle, while he was friendly with his aunt. Money was his god, and at heart he was glad that circumstances had sent him a windfall. But he also looked forward to the time when his aunt's fortune should be his; too, though not with such greedy anticipation that he desired her immediate death.

He was humbly shocked at his uncle's fate, and more than willing to help his aunt in her efforts, so long as it didn't interfere too much with his own comfort.

"You see, Dan, seriously, 'all Ocean Town has risen as one man in indignation at this outrage. Oh, I don't mean the bathing population, the frivolous beach crowd, but the important people, city fathers, landholders, hotel men and all that, and the police, though up against it are trying to do their best to get at the truth of the matter."

"How do you know all this?" asked his aunt in surprise.

"You've only just arrived."

"Oh, I pick up news by instinct," Pelton returned, lighting another cigarette and walking about the room as he took up and scrutinized one doll after another. "I suppose I can have these toys, Auntie?"

The WOMAN'S DAY

by ALLENE SUMNER

Because women can't see a great deal of fun in war, because they can't quite giggle over a boxful of their son's "remains," and because the idea of gas and liquid fire raining upon mothers and children does not strike them as exorcistically funny, and because, therefore, women's clubs are working with tooth and nail for peace and disarmament and pacifism, they are lambasted by those males who don't know what to do with their time if they don't go to war. These women are called "tools of communism and Bolshevism." They are labeled "traitors" and "slackers."

Pea-Shooters

And the male-of-the-species regards them with a lack of them— pityingly. The male cannot understand the female mind at all. He talks with many words and says peace and disarmament cannot work. The woman, however, knows how simple, simple it is. While the men squabble like silly boys about who will be the first to lay down their gun, the woman knows that if two mothers of two bad boys "git up their dander," and forcible take the pea-shooters and confiscate them there will be no more complaints from the neighbors about peas in the eyes. No nation wants war and no nation would have it if there were some firm "Ma's" to build a big bonfire and burn up all the sling-shits and pea-shooters.

A Baby Not So Much!

"I don't want a child. I want my own work. Most of this talk about the maternal impulse is the bunk. Some of us just don't have it, and I think its just as well for society that some women should produce other things than babies."

So says a certain lady with a "career" which is as relatively unimportant to everyone but herself that I cannot recall her name. Only the remark "stuck in my crop." I think it brave and I think it true and I think, with her, that "women like this" are a good thing.

You see, it goes like this. Most women have babies, and since it is only humanly natural to justify the thing one does and the thing one has, women have sort of banded together to extol child-bearing as the noblest and most commendable of all the sisterhood's work. It works as well and as hard at something else, equally necessary.

Having and rearing children is an art, a worthwhile job, a necessary job, a satisfying job, and all that. It deserves special praise as the only thing that only women can do. But this world needs more tolerance for other women's jobs and pursuits. We need more laudation and more respect for the woman brave enough to admit she is devoid of the maternal instinct, but an equally worthy while job to do, as she sees.

The Come-Back

"But what will become of the world if all women refuse to have babies?" is the eternal come-back of the afraid-to-thinker. One can only shrug, "Rubbish." Nature looks out for that, or every woman born without the maternal instinct, 100 are born with it and Nature who provides the 100 provides the one other just as carefully, knowing she needs her, too."

"I did it for my boy," says Mrs. Myrtle Huddleston, who, dressed and stashed by baracuda, swam from Catalina Island to mainland. Which sums up the ambition, aggressive woman of today very well. Mothers, who swim channels for their children, and even later when society casually assumed that fathers did the ambitious, aggressive stuff for their children, and if they didn't, well, it was too bad, but nothing could be done about it, and mother just waited for better times. Even when there were no fathers, it was about the same thing. Women got along somehow. Baskets from the neighbors, "respectable work with the needle," but nothing that would "make people talk."

A song and a basket of fruit for these changing times!

MODERN SEMI-DRESS

Spring-like — Tiered Skirt — Lavender Trimmed

By HENRI BENDEL

New York, Feb. 15.—The fashionable woman finds many uses for the semi-dress, something not quite so severe as she would wear for shopping or for street, something for matinees, bridge parties, informal teas and relatively unimportant affairs.

For such occasions a new type of frock has been developed that has the ease and casual line of the sport dress, but is interpreted in figured or embroidered fabrics, made more feminine by the large hat, or more conservative by the small model that carries out the main color.

Quick Changes

Women today must be able to make changes in clothes quickly, because the fashionable day may bring many distinct diversions that call for particular costumes. There is little patience with the involved frock that has elaborate closings and requires a maid's attendance.

The jumper and the skirt on the slip foundation have spoiled women for more formal attire. Since they have learned that comfort and style may be reconciled, they demand comfort in every particular.

No fashionable woman will tolerate a hat that is not perfectly fitted and hangs perfectly comfortable, or will wear small shoes for appearance's sake. She will not suffer any longer for style, because her intelligence tells her this is not necessary or desirable.

Public Approval

Illustrated today are three of the semi-dress frocks that the debutantes today sponsor. They have youth, pep and dash, and will stand the somewhat vigorous wear that the modern girl gives her clothes.

Very spring-like is the two-piece costume of white silk crepe, with the blouse embroidered in Chinese medallions outlined with two rows of white china beads, and a skirt of white silk crepe with inverted pleats.

The embroidery combines shades of yellow, red, pink, blue and apple green and hence the hat of yellow Italian straw with tucked crown and slightly rippling brim carries out the color scheme, emphasizing the color that is particularly smart now.

Printed silks are due for an enormous vogue; in spite of their popularity last season and the season before. This year, designs are more artistic than ever before and color treatments more subtle.

The printed frock pictured flaunts yellow, red, green and lavender flowers and then wisely refrains from any trimming except the lavender crepe de chine which edges the blouse and forms a tie at the neck and the soft wide girde carelessly knotted in front. The large hat of lavender straw is wide enough of brim to terrify any but the most slender damsel.

Printed and plain crepes are combined in the model with the skirt of bright red silk crepe with tiered sides and back, with blouse of white crepe embroidered in red, yellow and green. The red crepe used for the skirt forms the tiny vest and the bands that accent the collar and sleeves.

For daytime, the crepe de chine and chiffon frock will lead the mode though there are many alternatives in the newer heavy crepes, crepella, georgette crepe, lace, and the wash silks with stripes and checks that are very desirable for sport wear.

Pastel colors and all black will distribute the honors between themselves. Girdles and belts are featured and sleeves are almost invariably long, though one French designer is trying out the three-quarter length.

PINK LACE

For the debutante, nothing could be more fetching than a dance frock of pink blue flat crepe, trimmed with pink lace in long, free loops about the skirt and surplice neck.

BEBE DANIELS COMING TO RIALTO THEATER

"3 Bad Men," a mighty epic of the old West closes its engagement at the Rialto theater this evening. It has everything to recommend it to the fan who is looking for something different in the way of screen entertainment and has proven its attractiveness by the unusually large audiences it has played to in this town. It tells the graphic story of three bad men, each of whom has a price on their head for some nefarious crime committed. Fate sends an innocent little pioneer girl into their midst and they eventually find themselves called upon to make the supreme sacrifice which they do with a sang froid remarkable to see. The settings and direction leave nothing to be desired and the cast employed reads like a roster of who's who in Hollywood. Among those appearing in "3 Bad Men" are Tom Santschi, Frank Campana, Lou Tellegen, Olive Borden, J. Farrell MacDonald and George O'Brien.

A novelty reel, a short comedy and current news events will also be shown.

The double feature program which opens at two days starting tomorrow is headed by "The Campus Flirt," Bebe Daniels' latest starring vehicle with the irrepressible Bebe in an entirely new role, that of a young co-ed who gets herself heartily teased at school by reason of her overbearing manner. In the support is Charlie Paddock, famed all over the world as "the fastest human."

The second feature is "The Barrier," an unusually thrilling drama. Selected shorter subjects will also be shown.

Good Nature and Good Health

SOFT FOODS OFTEN LEAD TO DECAY OF TEETH.

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEN, Editor Journal of the American Medical Association and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine.

Many factors are involved in decay of the teeth.

When the child is young, the food that it takes is absorbed by the intestinal tract and sent through the blood to take care of the deficiencies in various tissues.

The enamel of the human tooth is a finished product and it is not possible to affect it greatly by the diet after it is once completed. Foods do, however, exert a considerable influence on tooth decay. If some of the lower animals are fed on foods that require little or no chewing, the teeth decay rapidly.

Sugar Causes Decay.

When emigrants come to this country their teeth seem to decay more rapidly than they do abroad, and dietitians are inclined to trace decay to a change of diet, particularly the fact that the American diet contains a far greater amount of sugar than do the diets of foreigners.

Many of our foods are overprepared and predigested. When eaten much of the starchy material remains about the teeth and is changed by the action of the ferment in Home Page Editorials: Adult Ethics?

By Olive Roberts Barton

I sat through 57 varieties of "Blues," winding up with a bygone contest that was gleefully named the "Jackass Blues."

This isn't going to be a preaching editorial. I'm not going to say it was rotten and that good music has kissed itself goodbye and all that. No, I found my feet tapping the floor with all the others. It was a negro orchestra and it was very good.

I don't blame the children for taking out their chewing gum and whistling for encores—except that I found a wad sticking to my sleeve when I got home.

Next, a gentleman came out and politely stretched himself for us to look at. I was charmed. He grew visibly before our amazed eyes quite seven inches taller—and shrank again. Then he grew one long arm and another long arm, and did all sorts of things. He even entertained us by removing his fingers and replacing them in decorative order. How Mr. Barnum came to miss him I don't know.

Then came the movie. It was fine! A bedroom farce—and that always lends itself readily to the screen. A gentleman wasn't quite sure which of his two wives (one divorced) he preferred, and spent his time being rescued in his nightgown and dressing gown from one wife's bedroom, lady in bed, and then the other, lady getting ready for bed.

It was screamingly funny. The children forgot to chew their gum—I guess they swallowed it—and bobbed about and laughed and fussed and chatted. I watched three of them near me. They should have been in bed long hours before. There were many other children there, too, for that's one place where seem to allow their children, and young children, to go alone at night. I suppose every night of life there are hundreds of thousands of children in neighborhood movies.

I watched them as they trudged down the aisle to the door. They seemed to have forgotten the show. But they hadn't. Children never forget anything. Did they class a man with two wives along with the limber and elastic gentlemen and the lyric of the depressed donkey?

Or did they think it was all perfectly natural for a gentleman to have all the wives he chose?

If the "youngest" generation has ethics of its own when it grows up who are we that we should cover our faces?

THREE-PIECE SUITS.

The smartest suits for street and sport consist of black velvet tuxedo jacket, checked black and white wool skirt and exquisitely tailored white crepe de chine blouse.

The Tynymites sat down on the ground, all mighty glad that they had found a man who made the big balloons that all kids like to buy. "Oh, gee," said Scouty, "this is great. FLORENCE SEAVER
VICTIM OF ATTACK
Former Hartford Girl Frequent Visitor Here Assaulted in Alabama Home.

Miss Florence Seaver, sixteen year old daughter of Major Thomas Seaver, late of Hartford and for some time supervisor of Salvation Army affairs for this district, is in a critical condition in Birmingham, Ala., as the result of an attack made on her in her home by a Negro.

Miss Seaver, who has many friends in Manchester, where she frequently visited, recently moved with Major and Mrs. Seaver to Birmingham where her parents are engaged in Salvation Army work.

Details of the attack on Miss Seaver are meagre, being confined to the information contained in several telegrams received by friends in this region. It is understood, however, that the girl was alone in her home on Sunday evening when the Negro forced his way into the house and assaulted her. Miss Seaver's skull was fractured and her jaw broken in what appears to have been a terrific battle with the intruder.

The first telegram received by friends here, held out no hope of recovery. Yesterday, however, new messages from Major Seaver stated that there was some chance of her recovery.

NOTED S. A. MUSICIAN
HERE FOR WEEK-END

The chief attraction at the Salvation Army over the coming week end will be Envoy Erik Leidsen, who is paying a visit to Manchester in the interest of the local band.

This musical combination has been looked upon as one of the strong factors of the local organization, and is known far and wide. Envoy Leidsen, for quite a number of years, was instructor of the New England Staff band located at Boston but has recently moved to New York City where he is engaged in music teaching.

Envoy Leidsen is a native of Stockholm, Sweden, and has been connected with the Salvation Army all his life.

His mother was one of the first English speaking officers sent to Sweden at the opening of the Army's work in that country and has filled the position of Training College principal, both in Sweden and Denmark.

This will be his first visit to Manchester and the music lovers can look forward to musical treat. He will conduct his first service in the local citadel on Saturday night at 8 o'clock, when a variety program of music and song will be given.

Plan to have that work done now. We can offer you an excellent assortment of wall paper.

Only the best materials used. Just call on us and let us figure out the details for you.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE
WILL MOVE TOMORROW

To Occupy New Quarters in Dewey-Richman Building Tomorrow.

"All packed up and ready to go," summed up conditions at the offices of the Manchester Chamber of Commerce today, but removal to the new quarters in the Dewey-Richman building at 769 Main street, close to Birch, had been postponed 'till tomorrow morning, because finishing touches were being put on the new offices.

The new quarters are bright and cheerful besides being more spacious than the ones being evacuated. The suite has both eastern and western exposures and ample room for large committee meetings.

A large front office more than twenty feet square has four windows on Main street, with four ceiling lights of the latest type and ample outlets for desk lights. The room adjoining is also well lighted and spacious and both are provided with clothes closets and lavatories. The walls are painted in light tints, and the woodwork and doors are of birch with bronze hardware. Linoleum has been laid on the floors.

In the directors' room is a large table affording room for from twelve to fifteen men to gather for conferences.

Secretary George E. Riz and his assistant, Miss Edythe Schultz, will be "at home" to visitors after tomorrow noon.

FUNERAL OF MRS. JENNIE C. FINDLEY

Funeral services for Mrs. Jennie Carlson Findley, who died yesterday will be held from the home of her sister-in-law, Mrs. Sherman Duffy, 63 Summer street tomorrow afternoon at two o'clock.

Rev. Chester F. Austin of the Church of the Nazarene, of which she was a member, will officiate. Mrs. Findley was also a member of Helen Davidson Lodge, Daughters of Scotia and Manchester Camp No. 2640, Royal Neighbors.

Burial will be in the East cemetery.

DANCING AT RAINBOW

Another of the popular modern dances will be held at the Rainbow tonight with Bill Tasillo's famous string orchestra playing the music. The Rainbow's advantages as a dance pavilion are being broadcast so generally that it is now quite usual to see automobiles in the big parking space from towns and cities many miles away.

Tomorrow night the old time fiddlers will be at the Rainbow to play for the old fashion dancing.

WEAVERS PLANNING FOR ANNUAL PARTY
Dinner, Entertainment and Dancing on Next Week's Program.

The third annual party of the employees in the Weaving mill of Cheney Brothers will be held in Cheney hall Thursday evening Feb. 24. Committees have been named and each one is striving to make the banquet and social events most successful. Harry White of the Weaving department is chairman of the general committee, and Miss Emily Kissman is secretary.

One of the features of the events that will follow the dinner will be a Cinderella dance. The particulars are not disclosed by the committee planning this dance, but they are advising all ladies who plan to attend to be sure and wear their best stockings.

John Bissell, chairman of the dinner committee, guarantees a menu worth while. In fact, he has already decided what the Weaving mill employees must eat that night whether they want to or not. His menu is: fruit cocktail, olives, celery, roast Vermont turkey, cranberry sauce, mashed potatoes, grape-berry sauce, rolls, coffee, ice cream and fancy cake.

The committees which are in charge of the preparations for the party follow:

Dinner committee: John Bissell, chairman; Olive Doyle, Nellie Woodhouse, Eleanor Prentice, Simon Hilderbrand, John Sullivan, Harry Russell.

Ticket committee: George Johnson, chairman; John Tournaud, Jacob Gorzillus.

Table committee: Ernestine Daupless, chairman; Georgiana Buchanan, Katherine Moezan.

Decoration committee: Mary McCluskey, chairman; Mary Hayes, Rose Schendel, Mary McVeigh.

Entertainment committee: Irene Brennan, chairman; Emily Pillard, Earl Ballinger.

Dance committee: William Brennan, chairman; Bernard Schubert, John Hilderbrand.

POST OFFICE SITE NOT REFERENDUM SUBJECT

Outside Newspaper Gives False Impression of Question Already Decided.

A Hartford newspaper, evidently not well informed on the subject, asserts under a Manchester date that the local post office prospects are complicated by the circumstance that there is a division of sentiment in this town as to the proper location for a federal building here.

The impression conveyed is that the matter is one of settlement by the people of Manchester. As a matter of fact the subject is one in which the citizens have no voice. The Treasury Department of the United States government habitually makes its own selections of sites for federal buildings and does not hold local referendums on the matter. It long ago selected the site at the Center, bought it and in every likelihood will build there, if anywhere.

ANTI RED MANUALS

A. N. Potter, local Americanization director, values highly the manuals for immigrants which the national organization of the Daughters of the American Revolution has had printed. Mr. Potter has in use 42 of these manuals in his evening school work, 12 in German, 12 in Italian and the others scattered over the six other languages. The manuals have been printed in eight different languages and it is estimated that a total of 1,350,000 copies have been already given out to steamship companies at Ellis Island.

The manual explains facts about the American government, constitution, flag and ideals and is designed as an antidote for "Red" propaganda.
