The art of acting perfectly natural before the camera is the biggest asset for the aspiring screen hero or heroine. Young and old alike will be picked for many character parts so that age will make no difference. At the present time the directors are looking for women to take mother parts and the one that can do them best is the one that knows the tug of the tiny fingers at the heart strings, and the anxiety for the growing boy and finally the empty place at the table where love has entwined the heart strings of two souls, one her boy, who faces the future together as man and wife, these are the things that only a mother can know, and understand.

SHIPPAN.

A carefully prepared, handsomely printed brochure has been sent to the newspapers of Connecticut and presumably to all legislators and many others by the residents of Shippan Point, arguing their case in their pleas for separation from the city of Stamford and for a charter as an independent town.

In an orderly and highly capable way are presented the arguments that there is no unity of interest whatever between Shippan and the rest of Stamford; that the former is isolated geographically from the city; that it is essentially a residential community whereas Stamford has become a purely industrial and commercial body; that its population and grand list are larger than those of many existing towns in Connecticut; that its property valuations are appraised for taxation purposes at eight million dollars, on which it pays nearly a quarter of a million a year; that it obtains no benefits whatever from the money it pays into the Stamford treasury, having almost entirely built its own roads and laid its own sewers privately; that it could run its own affairs as a town for probably half the present taxation; that its per capita assessment is several times as large as that of the rest of the city; that it is fairly and equably entitled to a separate corporate existence.

One cannot help but be impressed that Stamford has had, in its Shippan district, an extremely good thing—a source of large income and very little expense. And it is conceivable that political life might well be happier for the Shippan community if the Legislature would grant it its separate charter. Probably it could, indeed, run Shippan better than Stamford runs it, at least cost.

And the same thing with equal justice might be said of any one of several wards of other Connecticut cities or of cities anywhere. It is not in the costly, highly assessed, residential sections that a city's money is largely spent, but in the congested parts where there must be more schools, more policemen, more fire apparatus—where the wear and tear is greater and where the human equation enters in.

It would seem to the outsider that Shippan residents are thinking altogether about themselves and not at all about the rest of Stamford. If it is true that Stamford takes a quarter of a million or so from Shippan and spends nothing there, then it is evident that that income is a highly important matter to the city—that if Shippan should pull out it would mean that what would be left of the community would have to meet the loss by still higher taxation, which a great many of its people, according to the Shippan argument itself, are not sufficiently well off to bear.

And there is another point. The Shippans have in their possession one of the loveliest shore front spots on the American east coast. They have, a handful of them, monopolized a coastal area to which the ruck of Stamford's population is denied access. Perhaps there is not so much unfairness after all in their having to pay something to the body of Stamford's citizenship for that very high privilege.

Possibly there are special conditions which even the clever advocates of Shippan secession have failed to develop. But on the face of their own argument it would appear to the outsider that there is not only a trace of snobbishness but a little of sheer injustice in their desire to dance in a possession of sheer beauty and delight, and then balk at paying the piper.

We don't know anything about the way the Legislature is going to vote on this proposition but we know how we would vote—we'd vote against it.

THE CROW WAR.

We will leave it to the Herald readers if the New Jersey crow war isn't a subject of more active, wholesome interest than the Peaches-Daddy case ever began to be. Here's the whole of Salem county confronted by the presence of an enormous colony of crows, established in a forest rookery near Yorktown, that threatens, if not driven away or exterminated, to make agriculture in that section of the state as impossible as in the middle of the desert of Sahara fifty miles from any oasis. Two hundred thousand of the gaunt feathered appetites there are said to be. And two or three hundred farmers are waging a seemingly futile offensive against them.

One night last week the embattled farmers stole stealthily upon the great roost and opened fire on the sleeping birds. They are said to have slain between 1,500 and 2,000 of them. It cost a lot of ammunition but the farmers were encouraged, for a couple of thousand crows makes a fine big pile. So two nights later they tried it again.

This time the farmer army was bigger than on the first occasion—no less than 300 aggrieved agrarians rallying for the slaughter. But now the crows, having seen their dead, were no longer to be caught napping. They had their sentinels out by night, just as they habitually do by day, and when the shotgun warriors came sneaking in skirmish formation the sentinels caw-cawed—and away went the horde in the night. Only a few over-fed, lazy fellows or conceited daredevil young ones remained on the roost when the barrage opened. The crows sustained not more than a few dozen casualties, all told.

Now the farmers have organized a strategy board and have planned some new mode of attack, to be delivered tomorrow night. They refuse, however, to give out their plan of campaign, for fear that somehow or other the news will leak into the camp of the enemy. There are plenty of those farmers who wouldn't bet a nickel a crow can't read a newspaper.

Those who know—what is true—that a crow will sit on a tree and let you pass within fifty feet of him when you carry a walking stick but won't let you get within a furlong if you have a gun; who believe what is current belief in the country—that a crow can smell gun powder before it is burnt; who are aware that a crow knows more than a parrot and a parrot more than most men; who have any knowledge of the system of sentinels that the crows set up around a corn field—these folks will find the New Jersey crow war a subject for supreme wonderment as to how in the dickens those farmers are ever in the world going to get rid of those crows so as to get even a small share of next spring's chicks and next summer's crops.

Poison gas bombs dropped from air planes may help, but we doubt it. The crows would probably fatten on lethal gas.

BLUE LAWS.

There are probably more gunshots, in proportion to the population, in the state of South Carolina than in any other state of the Union, east of the Mississippi. That commonwealth runs a close race with Georgia in the number of its mob assassinations of Negroes; guilty or innocent of crimes. It is the state which started the war of the rebellion. It is today the least completely "reconstructed" of the secession units. Its people pride themselves on their readiness to answer injury with personal violence. It is the state which sent Col. Bleasie to the United States Senate.

It is also a state where you cannot now buy a newspaper or a cigar on Sunday. Where a gas station dare not supply a stranded tourist with gas enough to get to the next town on that day. Where it is an infraction of the law to go fishing or to a picture show or to anything but sit at home or go to church or ride the roads—if you have fuel for your car.

South Carolina is as good an example as any of the capacity for swallowing camels and choking over goats. Communities, like certain individuals, sometimes go too far lengths in donning the outward robes of sanctity to cover a lack of the cardinal virtues.

JAZZ RELIGION.

Almea Sempie McPherson says, in a formal interview: "I've been preaching for four years about the night life of great cities but I had never seen it. Now I've seen it." She had been out on one tour of Broadway supper clubs.

One has to be rather especially inspired to talk for four years about a subject which one has never seen, never experienced, knows in fact nothing about beyond the knowledge, such as it is, as is the common possession of all his hearers.

Perhaps it is the sketchiness of Mrs. McPherson's equipment as a guide which made every church in Boston decline to open its doors to her. Boston, like New York, has its night clubs, but unlike New York it hasn't yet adopted the jazz variety of religion.

WASHINGTON LETTER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

Washington, Feb. 21.—Here in Washington, where men live to govern the nation, the matter of avoiding war and doing things to eliminate it is given a comparatively infinitesimal amount of attention.

President Coolidge declares against construction of three new cruisers and the Senate goes right ahead and votes appropriations for them.

Such a piece of legislation as that, of course, concerns adequate national defense rather than a general apathetic attitude toward insurance of world peace.

The apathy, however, becomes more clearly demonstrated when President Coolidge asks for an extension of arms limitation which would extend the 5-5-3 ratio to cruisers, destroyers and submarines, which nearly everyone has been building according to the desires of their hearts.

This proposal, made in a presidential message to Congress, seemed nowhere to be considered purely from the peace-seeking viewpoint. Some referred to it as a "good thing," but the idealism that hampered for awhile with Wilson has been replaced by a hard-boiled frame of mind which permits no spontaneous awakening of humanitarian interest.

On the same afternoon of delivery of the message, officials and members of the Congress began to figure out the political effect of the president's move. All hands immediately began to speculate as to the president's motives in terms of practical domestic politics. All sorts of theories were advanced.

Nowhere did anyone jump to his feet and raise the flag of idealism. It is only on the rarest occasions here that one hears of idealism any more.

One idea was that Mr. Coolidge sought to force Congress to do his will and defeat the cruiser amendment to the appropriation bill—that he had accepted the cruiser question as a political issue.

It was suggested that Mr. Coolidge hoped to nip the budding presidential boom of Speaker Nicholas Longworth. Longworth had fought for the cruisers in the House and only the night before had made a hot speech demanding more battleships.

Or wasn't it that Mr. Coolidge sought to squelch all the talk against a third presidential term? Didn't it mean that Mr. Coolidge was serving notice on the country that he wanted that "third term"?

The next theory was that Mr. Coolidge sought a "mattress" to land upon following his expected veto of the McNary-Haugen bill. With this issue like disarmament, which he does not expect to modify this year, the farm bloc and its conservative allies to maintain his position as the most likely candidate to succeed him?

Or was it merely that he realized his foreign policy was rather in need of bolstering and sought by single blow to reestablish prestige lost at home and abroad in recent months?

It had become more or less apparent during the Mexican and Nicaraguan embroglios that the mass of the people were for peace rather than war. Would not this strong stand for naval disarmament carry an effective appeal to the mass of the people?

Thus the speculation ran. The voice of idealism was utterly silent.

Your Income Tax

Pensions paid by a corporation or individual to retired employees for services rendered are taxable. Pensions paid by the United States Government are also taxable, except as provided by the revenue act of 1926, which exempts "amounts received as compensation, family allowances and allowances under the provisions of the war risk insurance and vocational rehabilitation acts, or the World War veterans' act, 1924, or as pensions from the United States for service of the beneficiary or another in the military or naval forces of the United States in time of war, or as a State pension for services rendered by the beneficiary or another for which the State is paying a pension."

Allowances, whether paid by Federal or State governments, or private individuals to one who performs no duties as, for example, a widow in recognition of services performed by her husband, are regarded as gifts and are not taxable. A bonus paid by a State to its residents who served in the military or naval services during the war with Germany does not constitute taxable income.

Benefits paid by a labor union to members while on strike are to be included in the income, subject to tax, of such members. An allowance paid a retired clergyman by the governing body of a religious denomination is taxable income.

Annuities paid retired civil-service employees of the Federal Government are subject to the tax to the extent that the aggregate amount of payments exceed the aggregate amount withheld from the salaries of the employees.

ABOUT TOWN

Members of the auxiliary to Dilworth-Cornell Post American Legion are reminded of the meeting this evening at the state armory, which will be an important one. New members who are eligible will be welcomed. Refreshments and a social hour will follow the business.

Isaac Bell has moved his family from Myrtle street to 99 Ridge street.

The teachers of the Eighth District by their recent card party at the Hollister street school, cleared $130 for the Educational club's milk and corrective fund.

Sunset Rebekah Lodge will open its business meeting in Odd Fellows hall this evening at 7:45 sharp. A public whist will be held at 8:30, when six prizes will be given the players and refreshments served.

Miss Madeline Smith of Golway street is spending a few days with friends in Philadelphia.

The Junior choir of St. Mary's Episcopal church will meet tomorrow afternoon at two o'clock at the parish house for rehearsal.

Mr. and Mrs. John McGowan of Bristol spent the week-end with Mr. McGowan's mother, Mrs. Ellen McGowan of 82 Garden street.

The Women of Mooseheart Legion will have a whist party tomorrow evening at the home of Mrs. Thomas Dowd of 165 Eldridge street, and it is expected there will be a large number of the members and their friends present. Worth while prizes will be awarded and refreshments served.

Rev. and Mrs. Chester F. Austin of the Church of the Nazarene left today for Everett, Mass., to attend the New England convention of Sunday schools and young people's societies which is being held there Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday. Rev. Austin will assume the pastorate of the Church of the Nazarene in Everett this spring and plans to move there in April.

Mr. and Mrs. Josef Skoneczny of 411 Main street were surprised at their home Saturday evening by about fifty of their friends hereabouts. A merry evening was spent by singing, dancing and playing games. Their guests not only provided the essentials for a buffet lunch, but presented to Mr. and Mrs. Skoneczny a handsome vase lamp.

Mrs. Fred Trowbridge entertained the Harmony Whist club at her home at the Green this afternoon.

SCHOOL TRANSPORT TO BE THRESHED TONIGHT

Double School Board Meeting Of Interest to Sections Other Than the Green.

The result of tonight's special meeting of the Town Board of Education at the Hollister street school, called to consider the problem of school children, is awaited with keen interest, not only by residents of Manchester Green, who are immediately concerned, but also in other outlying sections of Manchester where the question of school transportation has been discussed. The meeting will be called to order at 8 o'clock sharp.

It will be a busy night for the members of the school board, as they will have to sit through two separate sessions. The first will be with Mrs. Harley W. Miner, who lives opposite Finlay street on the road to Bolton. She has gone over the head of the local board and petitioned the state board of education, which ordered a special meeting of the Manchester board with G. P. Sturges presiding. Then, after the first matters is threshed out, the board of education will sit in another session with a committee of three persons representing the Manchester Green Improvement club. This organization, like Mrs. Miner, is seeking transportation to and from school for children living far from the Green school.

MEET MANY MANCHESTER FOLKS ON FLORIDA TRIP

Dr. D. C. Y. Moore, chairman of the town board, with Mrs. Moore, arrived in Manchester late Saturday night from a vacation spent in Florida.

Dr. Moore told a Herald man yesterday that during his stay in the South he experienced only the very best kind of weather. A week ago Sunday Dr. Moore and his wife were guests at a dinner party given by Dr. W. R. Tinker at the Hotel Ovasso, St. Petersburg, where Doctor and Mrs. Tinker are guests. In the party besides Doctors Tinker and Moore and their wives, were Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Watkins and their daughter, Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Ellis and Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Williams. On that day the weather was so warm that coats and wraps were uncomfortable.

Doctor and Mrs. Moore met many of the Manchester people who are spending the winter in St. Petersburg, and they all wished to be remembered to their home-town people.

Dr. Moore on his way across made stops at Washington and New York City where he visited some of the hospitals.
