

WITHDRAW BILL ON CITY NAME FROM ASSEMBLY

Chamber of Commerce Committee Makes Recommendation as Fight for Passage Seems Lost.

The Manchester Chamber of Commerce committee on City Classification voted last night to recommend that the bill now in committee in the present General Assembly be withdrawn before a hearing is called.

Representative Miss Marjorie Cheney was present at the committee meeting last night and said she would abide by the committee's wishes.

The committee felt that it was a hopeless task to attempt to get the bill through the Legislature since both Representative Raymond A. Johnson and Senator Robert J. Smith were opposed to it.

Miss Cheney reaffirmed her belief in the proposition. She said she had promised to work for the passage of the bill and would continue to do so if the committee desired.

The opinion was quite general however that the selection themselves could bring about a complete codification of the town's charter rights without further authority from a town meeting.

TROTSKY STILL POWERFUL

Moscow, March 1.—Leon Trotsky, although cast out of the high circles of the Soviet government, still wields a power over the mass of Russian peoples.

Trotsky, emerging from retirement, was greeted by a huge and wildly demonstrative audience when he made a speech here advocating the "downing of foreign imperialists in China."

"We not only sympathize with the Chinese Nationalists, but if we could we would gladly drown in Shanghai water all so interested," he declared.

Tomorrow

is Ash Wednesday, the beginning of Lent. From then until Easter Sunday, all Christians will give special thought to religious subjects.

A picture story of the life of Christ starts in The Herald tomorrow. A prominent religious writer and an able artist have collaborated to make this a really valuable contribution to the spirit of the season.

Its brevity and simplicity convey the story as does no other medium. Events are chronological and, through Holy Week, deal with Christ's life during those respective days.

Start the feature tomorrow and introduce it to the children. Suggest that they cut out the installments and make scrap books for their Sunday School classes.

Remember that this strip is to be found only in The Herald.

CHAPLIN OWES U. S. A. MILLION

Treasury Officials Start Probe of Film Comedian's Income; Back Taxes Due.

Washington, March 1.—Charlie Chaplin's meteoric flight to fame from the slums of London to a pinnacle of film-comedy is being written into the records of the Treasury Department.

Special federal investigators have been sent to New York and Los Angeles to conduct an exhaustive probe of Chaplin's affairs in order that his federal tax liability may be determined, it was learned today.

Chaplin already is under bond of nearly a million dollars to meet a huge tax assessment levied by the Bureau of Internal Revenue immediately after the sensational divorce suit was started against the film funny man by Lita Gray Chaplin.

After the examiners reports are considered by Commissioner of Internal Revenue D. H. Blair, Chaplin will be handed a bill by the Treasury for probably a million dollars, alleged to be due on back taxes.

Chaplin then will be given an opportunity for hearing before the appeals division of the revenue bureau, where an effort will be made to adjust the assessment to prevent a subsequent appeal to the courts.

BROTHERS BATTLE OVER LOVE TANGLE

Wealthy Men Fight In New York Street—Figure In Million Dollar Suit.

New York, Mar. 1.—Edward C. Carrington, 55-year-old millionaire publisher of New York, was arrested today in the City Club and locked up in a police station on a charge of assaulting his brother, Campbell Carrington, 52, a wealthy New York City lawyer, last night.

Campbell Carrington is defendant in a $1,000,000 suit for alleged alienation of affections of Edward Carrington's wife.

Campbell Carrington, his face and head staggered into the Hotel Ansonia last night and said he had been assaulted by a man with a cane. He was sent to a hospital, where it was said this morning that his condition was not serious.

Detectives Called
Detectives were summoned and they arrested Edward Carrington in the City Club where he was in bed.

A friend of Edward Carrington told police that late last night Carrington received a tip that his brother was being with his wife, Edward's wife. They hurried to her home to investigate, the friend said, and as they approached the house, Campbell Carrington emerged.

Beaten With Cane
Then, according to the friend, Edward used his walking cane on his brother, and then disappeared. The alienation of affections suit came as a sequel to a divorce contest in the Chicago courts in which Edward Carrington and his wife made charges and counter-charges against each other. Papers filed in the suit charged that Mrs. Carrington and Campbell Carrington maintained a "love nest."

Edward Carrington is president of the Encyclopedia Americana, Inc. He has been active in politics.

SHOT BY MISTAKE, AUTOIST IS DYING

Policeman Thought Man Was Robber Fleeing With Load Of Stolen Goods.

Boston, Mass., March 1.—Albert M. Gear, an innocent autoist, and well-known citizen of Beverly, was in a critical condition at Haymarket Square Relief hospital today, victim of a bullet from the pistol of a Charlestown policeman, who thought the motorist was a thief.

Driving home shortly after midnight with a truckload of merchandise, Gear's car developed tire trouble. Observing a taxi following him and thinking he was to be held up, the Beverly man tried to find an open public garage. Suddenly, he was shot in the back.

EXPLOSION IN ENGLISH MINE BURIES 52 MEN

Nearly 100 Others Rescued; All Hope Abandoned For Entombed Miners—Roof Falls Blocking Exits.

Ebbw Vale, England, March 1.—At least fifty-two men are entombed in the CWW mines, with all hope of their rescue abandoned.

Nearly a hundred other miners have been brought to the surface suffering from gas.

The tragedy was caused by the explosion of gas in one of the chambers of the mine, and the presence of "after damp" made it necessary to stop rescue work at 1:30 this afternoon.

85 Men Rescued.
A hundred and thirty-five miners were known to have been in the mine at the time of the explosion. Of these, 85 were brought to the surface, all alive though badly gassed, and fourteen bodies were recovered. The others still are missing and it is feared that they have perished.

Roof Falls.
The explosion which was not heard on the surface, occurred in one of the main galleries of the mine and brought down much of the roof, thus blocking the exits. The whole town of Ebbw Vale was immediately mobilized for rescue work, but clouds of poisonous gas arising from the wrecked shaft seriously impeded the workers.

The rescue squads worked heroically, the general manager of the mining company himself descending into the pit with the rescuers. He was overcome with gas and brought to the surface unconscious.

Harrowing Scene.
There were many harrowing scenes at the pithead as more than two hundred women gathered to wait for news of their men-folk who were trapped in the mine.

At 1:30 this afternoon rescue efforts had to be abandoned due to the presence of "after damp." Eight more bodies were located.

All hope of rescuing the entombed miners is abandoned.

London, March 1.—Sixteen miners were killed today in a shaft accident at the Billis-Thorpe mines, in Nottinghamshire.

The disaster at Billis-Thorpe occurred when a staging upon which the men were at work sinking a new shaft collapsed and threw the men to the bottom of the shaft.

DOHENY WILL ASK $12,000,000 REBATE

That Is Amount He Spent On Oil Storage Tanks and Oil Furnished to Navy.

Washington, March 1.—The celebrated oil leases which ex-Secretary of the Interior Albert B. Fall made to companies of Edward L. Doheny and Harry F. Sinclair will become the center of a new fight in future Congresses, it appeared today.

Friends of Doheny are expected to present a demand to Congress for repayment of $12,000,000 which Doheny's companies spent on oil storage tanks at the Pearl Harbor, Hawaii, Naval Base and for oil actually furnished the navy.

The Supreme Court, in its sweeping decision setting aside the Doheny leases to the Elk Hills naval oil reserve on the ground of fraud and illegality, held that the question of reimbursement was solely one for Congress to decide.

Should the high court, as many legal experts now predict, also set aside the Teapot Dome lease to the Mammoth Oil Company, Sinclair also will face a big loss.

More than $20,000,000 was invested by Sinclair interests following the Teapot Dome lease, government attorneys estimate. This included approximately $1,000,000 on storage tanks at the Port-of-mouth, N. H., navy yard.

How much of this expenditure would be lost under an adverse court decision is a matter of speculation. Because of other interests of Sinclair companies in the Wyoming field, it is safe by government attorneys that Sinclair's loss probably would be small.

JUDGE BOWERS'S CONDITION

Reports from the Manchester Memorial hospital this afternoon at 2:30 are that while Judge Bowers had a very restless night last night, his condition this afternoon was just about the same as yesterday. He is losing rather than gaining strength.

BRING ON YOUR MUSTANG!

Now that he's got the hat, all President Coolidge needs is chaps and a mustang. Pretty Miss Cody Allen, granddaughter of William F. Cody ("Buffalo Bill"), presented the hat when she called at the White House to invite the President to attend the opening of the Cody Museum at Cody, Wyoming.

A Story About A Little Girl Who Swallowed An Eagle

TIRED DAD HARD LUCK FOR BABE

Wee Ina Price Proves More Brittle and Less Stolid Than a Cushion.

Mrs. William Price, of 91 Ridge street, placed her little daughter, Ina, six months old, on a couch in the kitchen and covered her with a blanket.

Shortly after 5 o'clock, William came home from work. He was tired. Supper was not quite ready, so he picked up a newspaper and plumped himself down on the couch.

The first he knew about Ina was when he heard her scream. Today, baby Ina is slowly recovering from a bad fracture of the left leg just below the hip. She doesn't feel half as badly as Daddy.

HUSBAND IS SUSPECTED OF SLAYING HIS WIFE

Her Naked Body Found In Hotel Bathroom; Marks on Her Indicate Violence.

Chicago, Mar. 1.—Carl Wood, hotel employee, was being held today pending the inquest into the death of Mrs. Mabel Wood, his eighteen-year-old bride.

Mrs. Wood's nude body was found in a hotel bath room at the end of a hall, thirty feet from her own apartment. Several marks on the body indicated violence.

Giving weight to the theory of foul play is the fact that no clothing, not even a bath robe, was found in the bathroom.

Police, summoned by the young husband who found the body, believed the woman had fainted.

Her heart was still beating when they arrived, the officers said. A revolver was applied but efforts to revive her failed.

The Supreme Court, in its sweeping decision setting aside the Doheny leases to the Elk Hills naval oil reserve on the ground of fraud and illegality, held that the question of reimbursement was solely one for Congress to decide.

KERENSKY IS ON WAY TO THE UNITED STATES

Chicago, Mar. 1.—Rumors current for several days that Alexander Kerensky, leader of the original Russian revolution which opened the door to Bolshevism in Russia, is coming to the United States upon the White Star liner Olympic, were confirmed this afternoon. The Olympic will dock tonight or early tomorrow morning.

A message from Captain W. Marshall of the Olympic definitely stated that Kerensky was on board. The purpose of the Russian's visit is not known.

Kerensky came into power in Russia in 1917 but his way was brief. When the Communists gained control Kerensky became an exile and has lived since then in Berlin, London and Paris. He is a lawyer and was one of the leaders of the moderate Socialist party in Russia.

DRYS JUBILANT OVER VICTORY IN THE SENATE

Marshal Their Forces at Capital Today to Put Stronger Teeth In Volstead Act; Stop Filibuster.

Washington, March 1.—Flushed by a major victory for prohibition on their closure petition, Senate drys pushed forward with determination today in their fight for reorganization of the enforcement unit under the civil service code.

The Anti-Saloon League looks upon the measure as the most vital implantation of teeth in the dry act since passage of the Volstead Act six years ago.

Efficiency Increased
By removing prohibition appointments from the category of political patronage, sponsors of the measure assert, administrative efficiency will be increased, temptations removed from the path of field agents, and the whole structure of the enforcement unit reorganized for maximum results.

The new force, all selected under civil service rules, would be administered by a commissioner of prohibition, under the secretary of the treasury. The treasury always has had the dry law administration as one of its duties, but heretofore it has been handled as a side line, partly by the customs bureau, and partly by the internal Revenue Bureau.

Drys Gather
The crucial parliamentary struggle incident to the last phase of the senate fight drew to the galleries the dry marshals of the dry legions. General Lincoln C. Andrews, grand titan of enforcement, Roy A. Haynes, prohibition commissioner, and Wayne B. Wheeler, generalissimo of the Anti-Saloon League, were among the most interested spectators at the death struggle of the languishing wet filibuster.

Republican insurgents from the dry country joined hands with Democrats and administration supporters to clamp on the closure rule. They rolled over the wet bloc by the startling margin of one vote, 55 to 27 on a two-thirds proposition—and that with the help of three avowed wet Democrats.

Both camps were jubilant over the test of strength; the wets rejoicing that without the closure votes of Senators Copeland, New York; Walsh, Massachusetts; and Hayes, Missouri, all Democrats, the bill never could have gotten through the filibustered legislative jam; and the drys found votes to spare in a roll call on a parliamentary situation which turned out for the re-organization bill seventy to twelve.

Closure Role Call
The closure roll call, which came only after every possible parliamentary maneuver to prevent a vote had been frustrated, placed the measure irrevocably before the Senate for final action.

Both camps were jubilant over the test of strength; the wets rejoicing that without the closure votes of Senators Copeland, New York; Walsh, Massachusetts; and Hayes, Missouri, all Democrats, the bill never could have gotten through the filibustered legislative jam; and the drys found votes to spare in a roll call on a parliamentary situation which turned out for the re-organization bill seventy to twelve.

WOMAN BREAKS RECORD IN MARATHON RACE

Runs 45 Kilometers In Four Hours and 56 Minutes In Mexican Tryouts.

Mexico City, March 1.—A woman Juanita Paciencia, ran 45 kilometers in four hours and 56 minutes during the official Mexican tryouts for the Austin to San Antonio marathon, according to reports of the contest received by Mexico City promoters today.

Thomas Zafire, who last year established the record in the Pacheco to Mexico City 100 kilometer race, covered the same distance at Chihuahua, as part of the 150 kilometer race, in 7 hours and 35 minutes, closely followed by Josef Torres. Both continued on toward the 150 kilometer mark, running strongly.

Senorita Paciencia's victory at 45 kilometers was earned after stern competition with several other women.

SILVER ON TRIAL
New York, Mar. 1.—Captain Mark I. Silver, one of those tried with Charles W. Morse on a charge of using the mails to defraud some months ago, went on trial before Federal Judge Anderson here today on a charge of violating the Volstead Act.

Silver is alleged to have engaged in extensive rum-running between New York and New England cities, under the guise of maintaining an alcohol exportation business.

DRYS IN SHANGHAI CAUSE PANIC IN CITY

SOCIETY GLITTERS AT MASONIC BALL

Premier Social Affair Here Attended by Largest Crowd—List of Gowns.

Shanghai, March 1.—An outbreak of fire near the Lugwa arsenal on the outskirts of Shanghai caused panic conditions in part of the native city today, detracting from the general tension of the military situation.

Fusing of an electric wire is believed to have been responsible for the fire, which destroyed ten out-of-buildings of the arsenal. Fears of explosions, from the huge stores of munitions in the arsenal, caused a panic among the native residents near the arsenal.

The fire was under control after four hours of arduous labor, firemen being forced to work amid a rain of exploding bullets.

Situation Unchanged
While the military situation is unchanged the Fongtian troops continue to stream down from the north and Kankiang, by way of Chanchow, to Sunkiang, apparently planning an attack on the left flank of the Cantoneses. There are reports here that the Cantoneses are planning a counter drive in the direction of Nanking thus hoping to split the northern armies, cutting off the southern flank from its base of supplies.

The northern armies now have approximately 40,000 men on the Sunkiang front and with better weather the decisive battle may begin at any moment.

General Chang Tsung and General Sun Chuan Fang have left for Nanking following a conference with the Ankuochun military leaders who have decided to campaign actively against the Cantoneses.

Fongtze reinforcements are now being brought to Shanghai by water. Four Chinese warships are now steaming towards Shanghai from Singapore bringing five thousand reinforcements.

The foreign defense forces were considerably augmented today. The Spanish warship Blas De Lezo arrived here and dropped anchor in the harbor.

The transport Radnja arrived from Bombay bringing 610 officers and men of the Royal Artillery, with mules and horses and portion of a heavy battery. These troops were disembarked and proceeded to the Yang Tsopoo district. The border battalion has been disembarked from the oceanic and is encamped in the Yang Tsopoo district while the Bedfords and the Hertfordshires are encamped on the race course.

BLOODLESS VICTORY
Peking, March 1.—American bluejackets on the U. S. S. Pigeon today gained a bloodless victory over a band of Chinese soldiers at Hankow, who had seized a Standard Oil steamer, the S. S. Melhorn. The Chinese were disarmed without a shot being fired.

One hundred Chinese soldiers seized the Standard Oil vessel at Shast and brought it to Hankow. On the Melhorn's arrival three American bluejackets from the gunboat Pigeon boarded her and piloted her alongside the U. S. S. Pigeon. Another American river gunboat, thus caught between the two American gunboats, the Chinese soldiers allowed themselves to be disarmed without a fight. They were marched ashore and the American consul sent notice to the local Chinese officials that the arms would be turned over to him.

The refusal of the British shipping companies operating on the Yangtze to meet the labor demands of the Ichang labor unions keeps American interests here involved in Mexico making plenty of work for the American bluejackets on the upper Yangtze.

20,000 R. R. WORKERS ASK WAGE INCREASE

Say They Are Receiving 59 Cents an Hour Less Than Other Union Men.

New York, March 1.—The United States Board of Arbitration today took up cross-examination of data presented by representatives of 20,000 railway clerks, freight handlers and station employes of the New York Central who are asking a twelve per cent increase in wages, which would amount to about $3,000,000 annually.

The employees, who are all members of the clerks brotherhood are represented on the board by former Secretary of Labor William B. Wilson. The Central is represented by D. W. Dinan, general manager of the eastern division, while Victor Selden Clark of Boston, chairman, is the Central member.

The employees case was presented to the board yesterday by E. H. Fitzgerald, president of the brotherhood, J. A. Robertson and W. J. Winston, chairman of the east and west divisions of the Central respectively. They contended that the scale now being paid was about 55 cents an hour lower than the average wage paid union labor in general, and that the men had not received a "reasonable" increase commensurate with the increase in the cost of living.

Police of several countries allege they have discovered a Communist plan for a general uprising.

STATES PLAN TO CONSERVE FISH IN GREAT LAKES

Game Commissioners of Bordering States Have New Program.

Columbus, O.—Conservation of the rapidly dwindling fish supply in the Great Lakes is sought by members of the Lake Erie International Conservation Council recently organized here.

Charter members of the council include fish and game commissioners of the State of New York, Ohio, Michigan and Pennsylvania and Canadian officials representing provinces bordering on the Great Lakes.

Pollution and indiscriminate fishing are held responsible for the steadily diminishing amount of fish taken from the Great Lakes. The annual catch from Lake Erie, it was stated, fell from 76,058,662 pounds in 1915, to 37,628,056 pounds last year.

Although millions of fish are planted annually in Lake Erie, the Federal and Ohio fish hatcheries at Put-In-Bay and from the artificial propagation plant operated by the Canadian government across the lake, this output is small when contrasted with the results of natural propagation. The fish are unimpeded on their spawning beds and if pollution is prevented.

Rockville

PETITION OPPOSES AFRICAN CHURCH Council Will Receive Objections Tonight—Claim Site Is Hazardous.

(Special to The Herald) Rockville, Mar. 1. The Rockville city council will receive a petition from residents in the School, Mountain and Prospect street section tonight asking that the African Baptist church congregation not be allowed to build their proposed church on property recently purchased on School street near Mountain. The property was recently purchased by the colored people from E. A. Serber through a real estate agent.

The petition sets forth the argument that a church at this point near the fire house and in a congested territory would be hazardous. The council will be asked to refuse a building permit to the African Baptist church.

Herbert Sharpe, Chet Godfried and Jack Keeney of this city will play with the orchestra of the South Manchester at Princess Ball Room Tuesday evening for the last big dance of the pre-leten season. Baseball managers of several teams are negotiating for the services of Rockville's star player, Dick Graf but as yet no team has signed any team for the coming season.

Mrs. Fred Yost of Union street is spending two weeks in St. Petersburg, Florida. Mr. and Mrs. Edward Sims have rented a tenement in the Fitch block. DIRECTOR OF RECS RESIGNS POSITION

Earl H. Chaney to Return to Midwest; No Successor as Yet Chosen.

Earl H. Chaney, director of the Recreation Centers, has tendered his resignation to the recreation committee, to take effect on April 2. Director Chaney came here last September to succeed Walter Olson, who resigned on the first of that month. He came from the middle west and is a graduate of the University of Indiana. While at college he was a prominent distance runner and a member of the Indiana University track team.

He will be located in a town about 100 miles from his home, he said last night, and will make the trip west by automobile. Mrs. Chaney has been with her husband during his stay in Manchester. It is understood that the Recreation committee has not met to consider Director Chaney's resignation and no successor has been appointed as yet.

LEGISLATOR SENTENCED

Perth, Ontario, March 1.—Francis William Hall, former member of the Ontario Legislature, today stands convicted of a theft of $1,000 from William Linton, for which he must serve eighteen months in the reformatory. Judge Scott in passing sentence late yesterday said that the case was one of several involving misappropriation of clients' funds. The penalty for such a crime is normally fourteen years, the judge said, but the fact that the theft was committed ten years ago caused him to impose the comparatively light sentence.

HOLD LOCAL BOYS ON BREAK CHARGE

Confess That They Entered Bunce School; Nothing of Value Missing.

Five Manchester schoolboys ranging in ages from 13 to 15 were taken into custody by Police Sergeant William Barron and turned over to Probation Officer Edward Elliott in connection with breaking into the Bunce school last week. The five boys live at the West Side and attend school in the Ninth District. On Friday morning they decided to go for a stroll and visit the Bunce school which they formerly attended.

But the boys were not satisfied with "standing on the outside looking in," and there being no school sessions last week owing to vacation period, decided to go in and see what they could find. The janitor, coming to the school later in the day, found all the desks rifled. The papers and books had been removed from many lending belief that the boys were searching for money. The teachers formerly left their money in the desks at night but this practice has been discarded.

The matter was turned over to the police and the case assigned to Sergeant Barron who secured sufficient evidence to round up the guilty boys. Sergeant Barron said one of the boys confessed his idea about breaking into the school was gained from watching motion pictures.

SEVENTY TIMES SEVEN CHANCES FOR A LAUGH

Town Players' Production Will Be Above "Amateur" Grade. No one who waits an evening full of laughs should fail to see "Seven Chances" the well known three act comedy by Roi Cooper Megrue. Those who attend will see a production superior to the usual amateur performances. It is being presented at the Circle Theater March 9th by capable local talent associated with the Town Players organization.

There is a laugh with every line of the play. Jimmie Shannon is to get the twelve millions left by his grandfather provided he is married by the time he reaches his thirtieth birthday. Just a short while before the end of the fateful term he receives news of the old man's death. And Jimmie doesn't care much about marriage and he isn't particularly handsome.

His friend Billy Meekin decides that he must get married whether he likes the idea or not. So Jimmie has a chance—in fact he has seven of them—and it is with these that the rest of the play is concerned. A delightful romance is woven with the comedy and more than one surprise awaits the audience up to the fall of the last curtain.

The cast consists of seven men and eight girls. Louis Smith is taking the part of Jimmie Shannon, the would-be-millionaire. Mr. Smith, besides being an actor, was for several years associate director to Michio Ito of the Music Box Review and the Greenwich Village Pollies. Beatrice Johnson plays opposite Louis Smith presenting the part of Anne Windsor—one of the Seven Chances—in a natural and appealing manner.

Albert Addy portrays the part of Billy Meekin, Jimmie's best friend. Those who saw Mr. Addy in Dulcy will know what to expect from him in this play. ABOUT TOWN Delta Chapter, Royal Arch Masons, will work the Most Excellent Master degree tomorrow evening. Silastine Gardner who was before the local court early in January on four charges, intoxication, breach of the peace, resisting an officer and injury to public property, and who was fined and given a jail sentence, and who took an appeal to the Superior Court, today decided to vacate his appeal and take his ten days in jail, in addition to which he had a fine and costs of $62.32. Thomas McNally of 192 Woodbridge street entered the Memorial hospital yesterday. He is seriously ill with diabetes. The South Manchester Camp No. 9280, Modern Woodmen of America will meet tonight at 8 o'clock in Tinker hall. KIDDIES PARTY. Nearly 50 Present at Unusual Social Held at the Rec. Forty-six members of the School street Rec women's gym class attended the first of the series of socials, a kiddies' party, in the gym last night. Children's games were played and refreshments in the form of lollypops, eskimo pies, bottle of pop, and animal crackers. On the program were groups of games, kids' polka, a peanut hunt, hoop relay, roller skate relay, and a Swedish clap dance. The role call was answered by members of the class who recited nursery rhymes as their names were called. This is one of a series of special parties which will be held once a month for members of the class.

THE OIL CASES.

The looting of the United States Naval Oil Reserves has been forever blocked by yesterday's decision of the Supreme Court.

The one thing that Churchill overlooks is that, under such conditions, Germany would already have won the war.

But in the flat statement that all of former Secretary Fall's proceedings in Elk Hills the oil reserve affair were fraudulent, that Admiral Robison (who has never before been directly charged with wrong doing) was a conspirator with Fall, and that former Secretary of the Navy Denby was not a victim of a misapprehension but actively in collusion, comes about as close to being sensational as a United States Supreme Court decision can well be.

The court does not, however, charge Denby with intentional fraud, but leaves his status in the transactions rather singularly vague. Not so in the case of Admiral Robison. That persistent defender of the leasing policy and active promoter of a Japanese war scare has heretofore escaped being put on the defensive as a party to the cabal for the looting of the oil reserves. And now all at once he is accused and convicted in a quarter where there is no appeal.

What the effect of this decision will be on the criminal prosecutions remains to be seen. But it is difficult to see where the defense has a leg left to stand on in its denial of fraud when the Supreme Court has definitely established that there was fraud.

The case decided yesterday, being an equity proceeding, was of course altogether separate from the criminal charges brought against Doheny and Fall. It was ordered by the Senate and was instituted on March 17, 1924, for the purpose of obtaining the cancellation of the leases to and contract with the Doheny companies.

While the civil cases were being tried and appealed the government brought both Doheny and Fall to trial on criminal charges of conspiracy to defraud the government and Fall, in addition charged with bribery.

That trial lasted several weeks and at its end a Washington jury returned a verdict of not guilty against both men. The jury decided that there was nothing fraudulent in the $100,000 loan made by Doheny to Fall or in the entire transaction—a view directly controverted by the Supreme Court decision.

Fall and Sinclair are due to be tried in April. In order to obtain acquittal they will have to find a jury willing to render a verdict in direct opposition to the Supreme Court.

ILL-TIMED. If anything could have been more ill timed than the publication by Winston Churchill at this juncture of a book attacking the French military strategy during the World War we can't imagine what it would be.

The British politician, whose own policy as First Lord of the Admiralty during the great struggle is probably as open to criticism as that of any other leading figure, takes this unsettled period for the expression of the most provincial of all possible views of the war—that we are entitled to all the credit and the Other Fellow to all the blame. Churchill makes a set business of putting the responsibility for the huge losses of the Allies during the had years of the war upon Joffre and Foch, whom he accuses of adopting a policy of "attrition" that wore out the allies far more than it wore out the Germans.

He has the effrontery to assert that if the main objective in 1916 had been a "surprise attack on the Dardanelles" the interests of the allies would have been served, ignoring the fact that British naval policy absolutely precluded efficient ship support in such a campaign.

It is characteristic of the man that he dismisses the "physical" assistance of the United States on the field of battle as of no importance, and loftily declares that if the Allies had merely dug in and let the Germans do the attacking, after the first drive was stopped, France and England could have won the war comfortably.

The one thing that Churchill overlooks is that, under such conditions, Germany would already have won the war. She had what she wanted—the industrial heart of France and a strategic military position from which she could attack England at any time in later years.

The book is egotistical, injurious and most unfortunate as to the period of its appearance.

CLOTURE.

We may love our state's senators with a brotherly love and we may hate like the dickens to utter words of criticism that may even indirectly reflect on them. But to save our souls we cannot see why a senator should vote against cloture on a measure like the Boulder Canyon Dam bill, which had already gone far beyond the limits of legitimate debate and had become the object of a deliberate and calamitous filibuster, and then vote for cloture on a measure or measures which had not been under discussion at all.

This notorious filibuster against the Boulder Dam bill has probably done more to injure the United States Senate in the estimation of the average citizen than anything that has transpired in twenty years. It has been made possible by allowing a perhaps estimable thing—called senatorial courtesy—to run stark mad.

What kind of system of government is it where it is possible for two or three or half a dozen members of the national legislature to completely block the operation of the whole legislative machine whenever such a group is sufficiently determined to defeat the will of the majority?

How long is it going to be a workable thing, to tell the people that they have the best government on earth, when they see such proceedings going on under their very eyes?

Failure to enforce cloture in the interest, not of the Boulder Dam project, but of a fair and honest decision on it, was a serious mistake and one that may come home to roost.

MARCH.

It was a perspicacious old dorky who said: "Yassir, yassir! I done noticed, ober and ober agin, dat ef I lived tro' March I lived tro' de rest of de year; yassir!"

Month of wind and watering of the eyes; month of freeze-ups and pussy willows; month of wondering whether you'll need one more ton of furnace coal or two more tons or no more tons at all; month of going to spring millinery openings in fur coats and of getting frostbitten noses while spading up the gardens; month of tricky near-summer days that land you in bed with the grip; month of both mud and dust; month of hope deferred that maketh the heart sick; month for getting plucked because you forget to get your motor-vehicle license renewed; hybrid month that is neither of one season nor another but a cocktail of all seasons. But a month glorious and lovely in the sure knowledge it brings that, in any event, the cussed old snowy, zero winter is blamed near over, anyhow.

But yet a little while stick to the thick clothes, no matter how the found roaster tries to kid you along. Paraphrase a bit; for "Beware of the Ides of March" read, "Take care of your hides in March." This may be March but March isn't May.

LICKED.

One wonders whether Samuel Insull, political financier, realizes that when he says "I'm finished with national politics; I'll never give another cent to a senatorial campaign; I won't go through this again for anything in the world," he crystallizes the very purpose of the laws under which he has been tortured. Mr. Insull has had a terrific time trying to avoid being sent to prison for contempt of the United States Senate and at the same time to "play the game" in a sporting way and cover up his political associates. And he is good and sick of it.

Now if these Senate probes are to do any good it is not in the way of sending somebody to jail, to be forgotten, but through the realization that practices heretofore regarded as perfectly all right are not so regarded any longer; and that even a big public utilities magnate cannot ignore both law and ethics with impunity.

If the Senate has got Insull licked it has got a couple of hundred other big fellows like him licked—and that is a very good thing indeed.

QUEER QUIRKS OF NATURE

THE WHITE OAK

BY ARTHUR N. PAKK

President, American Nature Ass'n. All of the oaks may be grouped as either white or black. The white oak properly belongs, of course, to the former group and is the most important hardwood forest tree native to North America.

The wood is heavy and strong, used generally for flooring, interior finish, furniture and sometimes for fuel. The leaves are from five to nine inches long and from two to four inches wide. They are deeply divided into from three to nine (usually seven) blunt-pointed, fingerlike lobes. The mature leaves are deep green above and light green beneath.

Aside from these features the white oak holds a prominent place among trees from the historic standpoint. The most notable is the chestnut oak at Hartford, Conn., of which I am sure we have all heard. Between Marietta and Mount Joy in Pennsylvania, in front of the historic Donegal Presbyterian church, stands the white oak witness tree. About 150 years ago this tree, then already past middle age, witnessed an impressive expression of national patriotism. A tablet near the foot of the tree tells us that on a Sunday morning in September, 1777, a new patriot found expression.

An express rider came to tell the congregation of Donegal church that the British army, under Lord Howe, had left New York to invade Pennsylvania. This news demanded from all a new attitude toward facts which challenged them to show proof of their patriotism. Their pastor, Rev. Colin McFarquhar, had been accustomed to offer prayers for the king of England. Pastor and congregation gathered under this historic tree and together joined hands under its shade and pledged their loyalty to the cause of liberty and the founding of a new nation in the western world.

Send a stamped, addressed envelope and questions of fact having to do with Nature will be answered by the consulting staff of Nature Magazine of Washington through arrangements made by this paper.

WASHINGTON LETTER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

Washington, March 1.—Henry Ford is known as a strong Coolidge man. He has said frequently that he thinks Mr. Coolidge is a good president, and it has been assumed that he would like to see him re-elected in 1928.

Yet, by a strange trick of fate, Henry Ford is going to be very instrumental in putting the name of Senator James A. Reed of Missouri very prominently before the country. Reed is nursing a husky presidential boom of his own and, apparently, has a good chance of capturing the Democratic nomination; unwittingly, perhaps, Ford is about to boost his cause tremendously.

Ford has been sued for a million dollars libel by Aaron Sapiro, and has retained Reed to defend him when the suit comes to trial. And anyone who thinks that the nationwide publicity Reed will receive during this trial won't help his presidential candidacy can think again.

Reed will be the central figure in the trial. He is bound to cut such a courtroom figure as to overshadow even his billionaire client. For days he will be on the first pages of every newspaper in the country.

The issues themselves are sensational, for Ford is accused of charging Sapiro, the famous cooperative organizer, with being in league with Jewish bankers who sought to dominate the world's food supply. Sapiro brought his suit, which begins in federal district court at Detroit March 7, against Ford and the Dearborn Independent Publishing Co.

Whatever the outcome, this trial will serve to keep Reed in the public eye for a good part of the period between the end of the exploring Congress and the opening of the Seventieth. There is nothing more pleasing to a budding presidential candidate than this privilege.

And Reed is such a brilliant criminal lawyer that the trial will be a worthy spectacle as well as an excellent opportunity for him to display his gifts to the country. The country undoubtedly will hear even further from Reed before next December. It will be recalled that he was charging about the country at the head of his campaign funds investigating committee, digging up dirt by the shovel-ful during the interim between the sessions of the Sixty-ninth Congress. He has stood head and shoulders above the other Democratic senators during the short session. His activities during the next session will be of enormous political interest, for the national conventions will then loom in the nearly immediate future.

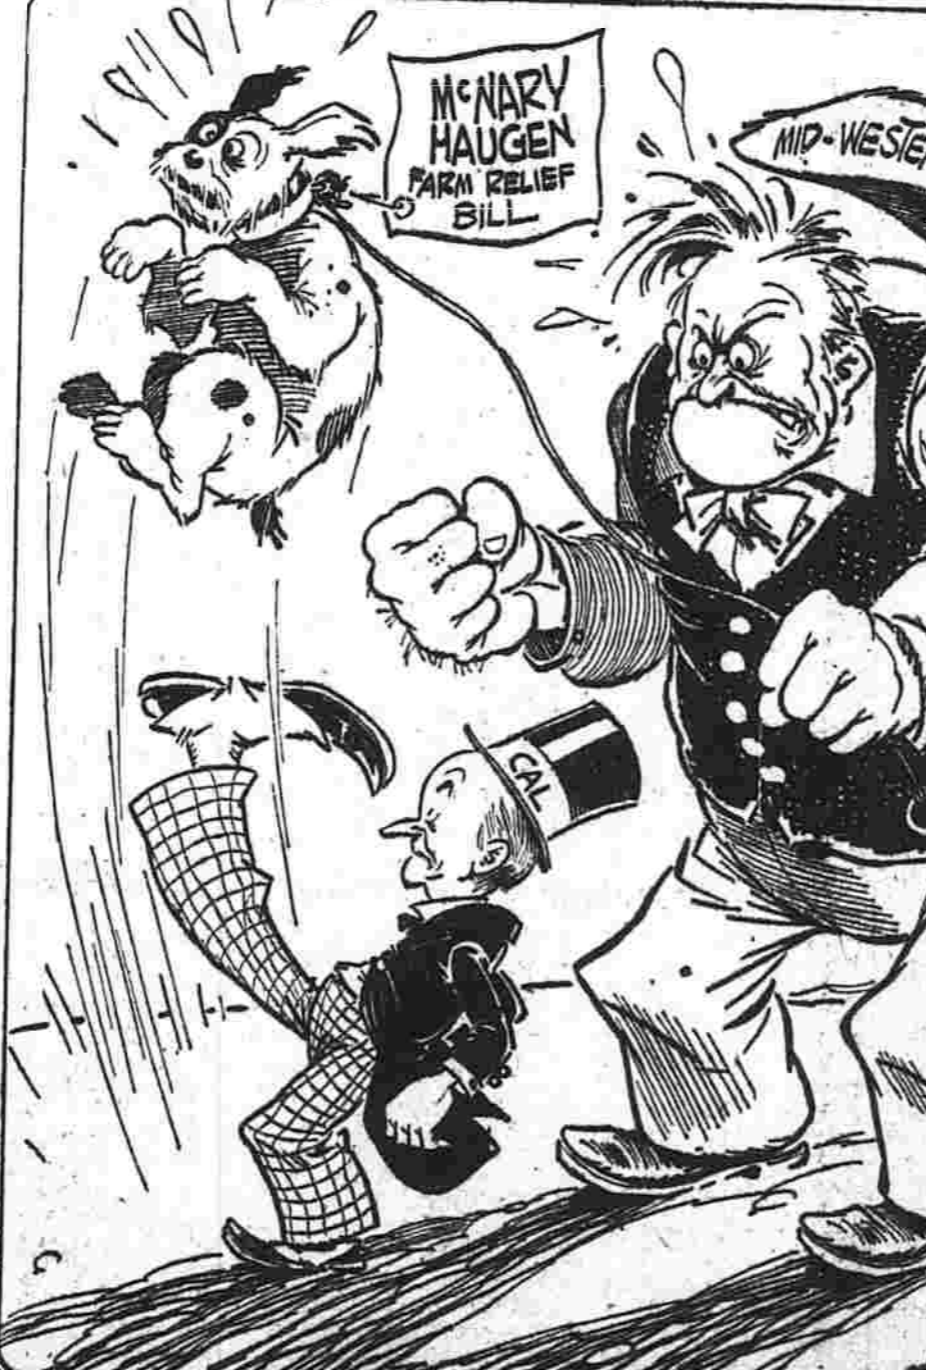

Of course the president of the United States has an overwhelming edge on all rivals insofar as publicity is concerned. He is the one man whose every word and every movement is news. Consider the columns of news and feature stories that flood the nation whenever Mr. Coolidge takes his summer vacation. Consider the multitudinous times his picture is to be seen in your newspaper.

No more need to be said, but an interesting example was recently furnished when Speaker Nicholas Longworth made a hot "big navy" speech and the president smothered him next day with his naval disarmament message. Longworth's appeal to the average citizen as goes with the Coolidge, Reed, McAdoo or Smith publicity. That is indefinitely and in a vastly larger and more effective way.

SACASA FAVORS AMERICAN HELP FOR NICARAGUA

U. S. Assistance Welcome Says Liberal Leader In Outlining Program.

Puerto Cabezas, Nic.—American aid in the solution of Nicaragua's many problems will be welcomed by Dr. Juan Bautista Sacasa, should he succeed in establishing himself in control of the country, he stated exclusively to International News Service today.

Dr. Sacasa asserted that, very far from wishing to isolate his country from American influence he earnestly desired to effect a closer and more cordial contact with "Nicaragua's Big Sister."

"American inspection, criticism and assistance are desirable and would be welcomed by my administration," Dr. Sacasa declared. "We want closer trade relations and long for a better understanding. But American armed intervention, oppression of the population is not wanted and will be resented to the extent of our weak ability."

Dr. Sacasa's Program Among the things Dr. Sacasa would have the United States do in Nicaragua are the following: 1. Supervision of the next general election. This to be done in such a manner that the fairness of the election shall be assured in advance. Dr. Sacasa does not deem it sufficient that the supervising officials should confine themselves to a statement after the event that it was not fair, and Nicaraguans told "Wait until the next election."

2. Immediate construction of the Nicaraguan Canal. Dr. Sacasa says that, far from being opposed to its construction by the United States, he favors it, and would like it done as early as possible. He believes it would be a great benefit to Nicaragua and points to the prosperity which has come to Panama from its canal.

3. American advice in financial matters. The United States government, in Dr. Sacasa's opinion, should be consulted when Nicaragua wishes to contract a loan. When an American banking firm makes a loan proposal, he thinks it should be submitted to the State Department for study and that Nicaragua should be told either: "We think this is a very fair offer, with certain slight modifications," or "This is not a good offer. You can get easier conditions and a lower rate of interest elsewhere. Why not try Blank & Company?"

4. American advice in reorganization of the school system. Dr. Sacasa deplors the existing decay in popular education in Nicaragua, and thinks the school system should be overhauled from top to bottom. He would like the assistance of an American expert in doing it.

5. American advice in the collection of taxes and elimination of graft. Taxes are too heavy in Nicaragua, Dr. Sacasa believes. He holds that they can be lowered and the burdens of business made lighter, with the national revenues increased at the same time; this is to be done by a scientific revision of tax schedules and methods of collection, and the erection of safeguards to make sure that the money thus collected shall be actually paid into the government.

6. The revision of the police system. The Liberal claimant to the presidency find difficulty in expressing full measure of his disapproval of the present system. He denounces it as oppressive and corrupt, asserts the fines collected for infractions of law frequently go into the pockets of officials, and that "police agents," especially in eastern Nicaragua, are expected to "live off the country," and do so. Many, Dr. Sacasa asserts, are worse robbers than thieves who are caught in the act and thrown into jail.

Radio Fans' Champ Is Now In The Ring

Sol Bloom

The future of the world is in the air. I would educate every boy and girl in aviation and broadcasting. No one has paid any attention to the listener.

Representative Sol Bloom of New York, who's fighting for a square deal for Washington. — Representative Sol Bloom of New York has arisen to champion the cause of the listening radio public. "We're not getting a square deal in the proposed radio legislation, he declares. We may find ourselves pinned into submission to a radio trust if we permit the new Dill-White bill to go through without an amendment such as he has proposed, Bloom says.

"No one has paid any attention to the listener, in Congress or elsewhere," says Bloom. "He has never been represented at any hearing any place and any time. "No provision whatever is made to save the listener-in from being charged for what he receives on his own set."

That's the great fear that touches the heart of Sol Bloom. He's afraid the large radio broadcasters, combining with the telephone companies, will install a receiver tuned for a particular series of concerts, will set a definite weekly or monthly charge for such service and thus control not only the broadcasting but the receiving end. This bill, he says, leaves this possibility open.

Wants Free Reception. Therefore Bloom has offered an amendment to the Dill-White bill, to prohibit radio stations from broadcasting in such a way that only special sets could receive. "There are patents which permit any station to broadcast and pick its listeners," Bloom charges. "The listeners have to buy or license an attachment to get the programs."

"If you don't pay for your telephone they take it out, and that will probably be the plan of the broadcasting trust." To forestall such a likelihood Bloom suggests not only a legal injunction on the part of his rider to the present Dill-White bill, but the separation of radio in all its forms from all present departments in Washington.

Wants "Secretary of Air." Bloom would establish a "Department of the Air" with a secretary in the president's cabinet, equal in power to the secretaries of other departments. In this department he would unite control of all subjects relating to the air—radio, aviation, everything that soars in the ether. "The future of the world is in the air," Bloom declares. "One of the biggest things to be foreseen is the development of pilotless airplanes. And we'll get our power, heat and light and operate our trains by radio."

That's too much of a job for a subordinate departmental official. A "secretary of the air" must be appointed. Bloom wouldn't stop there either. "I would educate every boy and girl in aerial navigation, aviation and broadcasting," he says, "so that in the next generation we would have the greatest mass of people educated in the biggest thing of the future."

POPULATION OF RUSSIA SHOWS GREAT GROWTH

Twelve Million Increase Since the War Makes Up Estimate of 143,500,000.

Moscow.—Russia is still the colossus of the white race. Semifinal estimates made as a result of the census just concluded show the total population of the Soviet Union to be 143,500,000.

Thus the Russian people, who numbered 133,442,065 on the territory of the Soviet Union before the war, and who at that time made up 7.8 per cent of the world's population, now have multiplied until they constitute a major fraction under 8 per cent of all the people in the world.

They make up one-fourth of the total population of Europe. The increase of approximately ten million since 1914 is considered all the more remarkable because the Russian losses from war, famine and disease during the years 1914 to 1923 were estimated at more than 20,000,000 and in 1926 the Central Statistical Bureau counted the population at but 131,500,000. If this estimate were to be taken as correct, then the population would have increased 12,000,000 during the six years just passed.

One-Sixth In Cities. It probably will be impossible to ascertain during just what period the increase occurred. Other facts, however, are established with more accuracy, as for example, that one-sixth of the population now lives in cities, and that the Soviet Union now boasts thirty cities with populations of more than 100,000 each.

The rapid growth of the urban population is illustrated by the fact that some of the cities which now have more than 100,000 inhabitants did not exist at all at the time of the census of 1897. Novo-Sybrsk with 120,000 and Stalin with 106,000, fall in this class.

Although the urban population of the Soviet Union has increased remarkably, it is yet significant of the essentially rural character of Russia that its first ten cities have but 506,000 more population combined than has New York City alone.

Ten Largest Cities. The ten largest cities in the Soviet Union are Moscow, 2,518,000; Leningrad, 1,611,000; Kiev, 494,000; Baku, 447,000; Odessa, 411,000; Kharkov, 409,000; Tashkent, 323,000; Rostov on Don, 302,000; Tiflis, 276,000, and Saratov, 212,000, making a total population for these ten cities of 6,506,000.

One striking result of the census was its revelation of the fact that there are about 5,000,000 more women than men in the Soviet Union. The consequences of this situation have already been felt in the new attitude toward marriage, the tendency toward any union, however fleeting, as legitimate, and the movement to make maternity independent of matrimony. Soviet socialists are inclined to give the chief role in these changes to the excess women over men, although they had already been advocated as desirable by the communists.

CITIES BEWARE! Narrow Streets, Tall Buildings, No Zoning, Congests Traffic

The narrow streets of New York, most congested city in the country, point a lesson to other communities on the wisdom of planning possible city growth years ahead of time and of controlling its expansion in the future.

In this city, more than elsewhere, two opposites have met to the detriment of traffic—the narrow streets and the tall skyscrapers.

For the width of the streets, present city administrators can't be blamed. But other cities are being warned against imitating New York in the construction of skyscrapers.

Here are veritable cities in themselves, sticking up into the sky alongside streets usually too narrow to handle the ordinary run of traffic. They're built in the hearts of cities, where streets were laid out years ago without the knowledge, or forethought of future possibilities.

Million Lost Daily The result is a situation like New York's, in many other cities striving to become great. E. P. Goodrich, traffic authority, figures that New York is losing $1,000,000 a day due to traffic congestion, and that it would cost billions in reconstruction to avoid this loss in the future. Elevated and surface car lines would have to be abandoned, two and three tiers of roadways would have to be built, tunnels would have to be dug and, most costly of all, buildings would have to be sliced off and arced to make room for the increasing traffic. While he estimates the presence of about 835,000 vehicles in New York by 1930, his curve of figures goes sharply up until by 1960, he estimates New York's traffic to run up to 2,100,000 vehicles, almost twice the number of vehicles in the entire state today.

Since automobiles will increase elsewhere as fast as they will in New York, a jump of almost 300 per cent in their number would cause considerable traffic difficulties in many cities of the country. Goodrich figures this jump on the contemplated basis of five persons to each motor vehicle.

Three Preventatives To avoid this possibility of congestion here, as well as most other traffic authorities, points to three preventatives: First is the limitation in height of future buildings, to conform with the width of streets they face. Second is the provision of adequate platting and zoning laws, for future spread of the city. Third is the planning of future wide arterial highways.

Lack of these three is what caused present congestion, it is said. Even the adoption of these principles has to be such as to allow for flexibility in the future. A street that may appear ridiculously wide today may turn out to be sorrowfully narrow tomorrow.

GO GUNNING FOR LAME DUCKS IN OHIO'S POLITICS

Urge National Movement to Change Constitution Election Provisions.

Columbus, O.—Ohio legislators led by State Representative R. R. Cross, Dayton, are gunning for "political lame ducks," and with this in mind have initiated a national movement to change the constitution of the United States.

A resolution now awaiting action in the Ohio assembly would revoke provisions of Article V of the constitution and pave the way for a convention to be called by Congress for the submission of amendments.

The Ultimate Aim The ultimate aim of Representative Cross and his associates is to provide for a constitutional amendment which would eliminate the long period between the election of congressmen and the time they actually begin work—thirteen months—and suspend the session of "lame ducks" held shortly after the election.

The Cross resolution declares that "the enactment of popular will into laws is delayed, hampered and prevented by reason of the hiatus between the expression of popular will by congressional elections and the first session of Congress."

The resolution concludes: "Be it resolved by the general assembly of the State of Ohio that we hereby apply to the congress of the United States of America, to call a convention for proposing amendments to the constitution of the United States of America and that a copy of this resolution be sent to the governor of each of these United States for transmission to the respective legislatures thereof."

It is required that the legislatures of two-thirds of the 48 states unite in such a memorial to obtain action. This provision has never been invoked before in the manner set forth in the Cross resolution.

THE ROMANCE OF AMERICA: James J. Hill (6)

Hill and Morgan moved quickly and bought the Burlington outright. Then came Harriman's master stroke of 1901, purchase of a majority of Northern Pacific. He would reach the Burlington through Morgan himself! Hill and Morgan were caught napping. But when they began to fight, the world's financial centers were rocked. Northern Pacific reached $1000 a share.

Then came Hill's great move, formation of a holding company. With the railroad stock thus held, a raid such as Harriman's never could happen again.

On June 30, 1907, Hill resigned as president of the mighty system the Great Northern had become. His son, L. W. Hill, succeeded him.

The "Empire Builder" remained as chairman of the board until 1913. In his final report as chairman, with a backward look, he wrote: "Most men who have really lived have had, in some shape, their great adventure. This railway is mine." Serenely he put his house in order, awaiting the end. He died May 29, 1916. ©1927 by NEA SERVICE, INC. (Next: The Life of Christ)

SEE HULL AS NEXT 'WELTER' CHAMP

Texans Brag About His "No-Decision" Victory Over Pete Latzo Recently.

Dallas, Tex., Mar. 1.—Down here where men take orders from men once more, the natives are hailing Clyde Hull as a future wearer of Pete Latzo's crown.
 Hull is the lad who trounced the welterweight champion in a ten-round, no-decision battle here a few nights ago.
 Latzo was so badly punished by the Texan that he was forced to cancel a fight in another Texas town two nights later.
 The only thing that saved him his crown was, as said before, the fact that no decision was given. Newspaper men awarded Hull the decision on points.
 But they're going to fight again. With the title at stake!
 They're going to fight in Scranton, Pa., home of Latzo, late in March.
 That should let the rest of the world know whether Hull is the fighter that he is said to be. The Texans say he will be the champion after the battle!

They say he will beat Latzo again, just as he beat him here before 5000 home-folks.
 Hull's danger is in his left. He has a sock in both hands, but the dynamite is in his left mitt.
 He used his left here so often and so fast that most folks forgot Latzo had one.
 Latzo and his brother-manager, Mike, sang sweet praise of Hull's ability.
 "He deserves a chance at the crown and we'll give it to him," said Mike. "That fight the other night was great! Fans at Madison Square would have gone nuts over it."
 Hull built his back in the wheat fields of South Dakota, which is as good as the way Latzo built his, in the coal mines of Pennsylvania.
 Perhaps he will be the next welterweight champion. No one knows. At any rate he is standing now on the threshold of fame and big money because he beat Latzo in Texas.

JACK LOCKWILL'S SPEEDBOAT

by Gilbert Patten

"Salute!" called Bull Madison, who had been chosen to referee. Lockwill and Winthrop made the salute. "On guard!" cried Bull. "Fence!" The clashing foils made a steely, hissing sound as they slid one against the other. The duellists advanced, retreated, circled, both of them in correct fencing form. Suddenly Betty screamed and dashed forward, flinging herself between them. "Look at your foil, Jack!" she cried. "I saw the button fly off!"

"Shall we use these?" asked Winthrop. Jack bowed. Lockwill's fencing instructor, thanks to "Buck" Judge, the boy's guardian and mentor, had been a master of the art. Now, to the dismay of the upper-class lads, the freshman outpointed Winthrop. He was much the better swordsman. At last, with a lightning lunge and a flashing, twisting movement, he snapped the foil from the Grand Vizier's hand. ©1927 by NEA SERVICE, INC. (To Be Continued.)

She was right. The button was gone, leaving a ragged, dangerous point. "Dirty work!" exclaimed Winthrop. "Somebody filed it so the button would come off!"

"This discovery produced indignation. The act was denounced as that of a sneaking coward. Another pair of foils was brought and found in perfect condition.

"Shall we use these?" asked Winthrop. Jack bowed. Lockwill's fencing instructor, thanks to "Buck" Judge, the boy's guardian and mentor, had been a master of the art. Now, to the dismay of the upper-class lads, the freshman outpointed Winthrop. He was much the better swordsman. ## "REDHEADS PREFERRED" IS SCREAMING COMEDY

Here at Circle for Two Days; Marjorie Daw and Raymond Hitchcock in Leading Roles.

The much maligned redhead has been a subject for discussion and research for many years. According to her critics she is impulsive, rash, hot-headed, and has many other faults too numerous to mention. But she goes on serenely and ignores her critics. Once in a while she gets just credit and one of these "once" occurs in the picture "Redheads Preferred" which is showing on Oak street today and tomorrow.
 Scientists have puzzled over the question from time immemorial. They have tried to find out why and whence of red hair. They say that Cleopatra was a red-headed siren and they point to many red-headed women of history. Queen Elizabeth was red-headed, and they say that Helen of Troy, who "launched a thousand ships," was also a Titan blonde.
 So it goes up to the modern times when we remember the immortal Sarah Bernhard and her crowning halo of tawny hair. Mrs. Leslie Carter, who is now writing her experiences in "Liberty" is also a redhead, and there are many others.
 So there was some reason for John Morgan preferring to go to masked balls with red-headed girls. The fact that the girl was his wife and had a red wig did not bother him in the least. He wanted the hair, that was all.
 Raymond Hitchcock, he of musical comedy fame, plays the leading role and is one of the drollest figures ever seen on the screen. He is ably supported by Marjorie Daw, who plays the title role; Theo Von Eitz, Clary Fitzgerald, Vivian Oakland, the moderns A. Post, Leon Holmes and Geraldine Leslie. The picture was more than ably directed by Allan Dale and was from the pen of Douglas Bronston.

RICARDO CORTEZ HAS NEW ROLE AT RIALTO

Ricardo Cortez, famous for his dilapidations of fiery Spanish lovers, is playing a new type of Spaniard—the one he says is the true type in the new production of "Ibáñez Torrent" which leads a double feature program at the Rialto today and tomorrow. This time Cortez plays a young Spaniard who is a breezy student, runs for office and is elected—and on the whole is very much like any earnest young man in any other country. He can be a fiery lover too, when he rises to the occasion. "The Real Spaniard," says Cortez, "is an earnest worker and student and probably never, in all his life fights a bull." The new production has Greta Garbo in the feminine lead and is highly spectacular and thrilling. "Atta Boy" appears on the program with "Ibáñez Torrent." It is a breezy story with an excellent cast and affords the jaded film fan some brilliant entertainment. Selected shorter subjects will round out the program.

"THESSA GUY, UMBERTO HEESA NO BLOFF!"

BY JIMMY POWERS
 Signor Umberto J. Fugazy most assuredly doesn't fool, if you gather the impression I intended to convey in the words of Antonio, his volatile and valuable valet.
 The non-buffaloe signor is going to be very much in the fatiguing bit during 1927.
 Gunge Tenny ran into a panic when the alert-eyed Italian waded $300,000 under his caustic nose. Announcement was made of a $6,000,000 sports arena to be built in Brooklyn in Mar'ch.
 Who was the owner? Signor Umberto Fugazy.
 Who leased the Polo Grounds for outdoor boxing in 1927? Signor Umberto Fugazy.
 Who staged the Delaney-Berlenbach, Delaney-Gorman, and Sharkey-Willis bouts? Signor Umberto Fugazy.
 Vive l'Italia, if you will, and a bottle of crimson wine, vulgarly and perhaps too familiarly called dago red.
 The signor is whooping it up here and, as the aforesaid Antonio would have it, and as many dubious others are at last beginning to acknowledge—he means a business that is far removed from the monkey variety.
 And now a little "poisonal" stuff on the signor.
 He is of medium height, broad shouldered, given over to neatly pressed blue suits, starched white collars and cuffs, and bright color-ties. He has shining, alert eyes that denote keenness of mind and decisiveness of action.
 He used to work in his father's bank but ran away and entered the ring under the name of Jack Lee. He managed Freddy Welsh and Jimmy Goodrich into championship bouts. He owns a New York movie house that cost him $500,000 to build. When he heard Tex Rickard had taken over the Garden at a cost of $3,000,000 he said laconically: "Huh, that's very fine—I think I shall build myself instead of a $3,000,000 one a $5,000,000 one."
 And that's just what he did and his leasing the Polo Grounds for all outdoor boxing in 1927 made the same Mr. Rickard nothing if not sick at the tummy.
 A total eclipse of the midnight sun is scheduled for northern Sweden on June 29, 1927. At that time the sun is visible all night north of the Arctic Circle.

Doeg Grahame of Mobile, Ala., has started a cross-country golf tournament of his own. Across the 3000 miles from Mobile to the Pacific coast Graham is trekking, driving a golf ball in front of him. Washington, March 1.—The first shots have been exchanged between American marines, now occupying the principal cities of Nicaragua and manning the trains on the government railroad, and the Nicaraguan Liberal forces, according to advice at the Navy Department today.
 Liberal snipers fired on a train between Managua and Oroquieta, and the marines returned the fire. The train did not stop and no damage was done either side, according to reports.
 Bellonking is the method of migration used by many species of spiders. The spider projects a line of silk which continues until the spider feels the pull of the wind. It releases its hold as it is borne along.

ART FROM ADVERSITY

Persecuted Habima Is Seen as Greatest of Theaters.

By the NEA Play Jury

New York.—Of all the rich dramatic imports of the past several seasons, none is so gifted with romance and adventure as the Theater Habima, just come from Moscow for a season in Manhattan and, mayhap, way points.

Here, we are told, is a group of players that spent something like 20 years bringing to perfection a repertoire of a half-dozen plays. Weigh this against the fly-by-nights of Broadway production and draw your own conclusions! Perhaps there has been no similar demonstration of art for art's sake in the theatrical history.

Theater Habima, a Russo-Jewish band which recites its lines in the ancient Biblical tongue, was born mid the heat of the historic revolutionary tempest of 1907.

Its birthplace was a tiny house on an obscure Moscow cross-street. Its first audience less than hundred people. One N. L. Zemlich had the idea of a theater in Hebrew. Anna Rovina, a school teacher, was the "leading lady." Vactangov, who directed "The Dybbuk," was carried to final rehearsals on a stretcher within a few weeks of death. Six years after its birth, the little group began to feel the heel of the czar. In 1911, the persecutions were such that they presented plays in an underground theater, attended only by a few friends. The great Steadnik came to their aid and brought the support of many notable men. Attention was attracted to the genius of the performers and the theater became known throughout Europe.

Visiting critics from France and Germany went back to shout their praises of the great Anna Rovina. None since Sarah Bernhardt has been so greeted.

For six years it grew and flourished, playing "The Wandering Jew," "The Dybbuk," "Jacob's Dream" and one or two other classics. Their stage was upset all traditions and their mass movement upon the stage was hailed as a theatrical revelation, particularly in the "beggar's dance" in "The Dybbuk."

Then came the rule of the Soviet. Again the theater faced persecutions. The Soviet ruled they could not play in a language not understood by the mass of the people. Again the great men of Russia came to their defense, headed by such as Chaliapin, Ivanoff, Dantschenko.

The fight was made on the ground of art, untouched by tongue or place or circumstance. The theater was continued. Such struggle was certain to bind the little company as none has ever been bound in the history of the theater.

Europe has called it the world's greatest theater.

And finally, it has been brought to America to give its mystical glow over to the commercial theater and, perhaps, to teach a much-needed lesson. It is quite the most interesting and important event of the theatrical year.

Love, accustomed to triumph, loses out in Henry Fisk Carlton's Harvard prize play, "Up the Line." Inevitably, love's loss leaves one with the inescapable sense of disappointment inherent in the ending other than happy. The ending because a true love ending would have appeared as natural.

Here is "Slug," inveterate vagabond, roustabouting through the North Dakota grain fields at harvest time. At Jarvis' ranch, he finds Effie, the hired girl, dreaming unfulfilling dreams of freedom from her environment.

For a year, "Slug" endures sedentary married life with her, succumbing to his wandlust just before the birth of the baby, of whose coming he was not informed. When he returns eight years later, Effie has just resigned herself to wedlock with Neze, the hired Swede. And although her pleas to leave are only half-hearted, the open road calls "Slug" on his way, abandoning her to the life she abhors.

As Effie, Florence Johns, an accomplished tragedienne, shares the honors with Louis Calhern, "Slug," J. Malcolm Dunn's characterization of the heavy-headed, imperturbable Nels, who can't for the life of him pronounce "j," is superb.

The season's first version of "Mozart," with Irene Bordoni, none other, wearing the scarlet breeches and powdered wig of the composer, makes us eager for the Gully production of the same play before we believe the worst. It is promised for early appearance.

Gully, the author, played in the French version as Baron Von Grim, and Yvonne Printemps, that ravishingly slender creature, his wife, has played the role of Mozart. We shall not turn again, then until we get their side.

As for Irene Bordoni as Mozart—we'll remember her kindly as Naughty Cinderella or Little Miss Blue Beard, or any of these I'm-just-a-pretty-little-French-girl-trying-to-get-along roles. She and

Irene Bordoni (left), who appears in "Mozart," and Anna Rovina in "The Wandering Jew."

Mozart missed each other by several generations and this play could not bring them together. There is a thinness in the translated and much adapted, augmented and denatured version which cannot be disguised in spite of as lovely costumes as have ever been seen on any stage, the exquisite dancing of Martha Lorber, and fine acting of Lucile Watson, the haunting music of Mozart—and a harp-

10:00 P. M.—Weather.
Program for Wednesday.
10:40 a. m.—Piano solos—Laura C. Gaudet.

10:45—Thirteenth of a series of WTIC's Course of Music Appreciation for Public Schools—Part One.
"Pussy Willow Song"—This song will actually be taught to a class of children in the studio. Care will be taken so that children listening on the air can learn the song as it is taught. Its origin is unknown, but it was used in school at least thirty years ago and probably much longer. Perhaps some teachers know the music. The words are:
Pussy Willow down by the brook Swinging away to and fro, On a bending willow bough like pussy-cats All in a row.

If I put you down by the fire You pussy so cunning and shy, I wonder if you will turn into pussy-cats Bye and Bye.

Oh! No! The Pussies say! We couldn't and we wouldn't do that, We belong to the fairy folk And are their pussy-cats! The words should be taught as a poem before the broadcast. This will simplify the teaching of the music.

II. "Of a Tailor and a Bear"—The music is by Edward MacDowell and is taken from a collection called "Forgotten Fairy Tales." It tells of a poor little tailor who is condemned to spend a night in a barn which also houses a large ugly bear. Luckily the tailor has brought along his fiddle or violin, and in order to keep up his spirits he plays a sprightly tune. The bear becomes so interested that he forgets to eat the tailor and instead begs that he may be taught to play the fiddle, but the tailor says his claws are too long and must be filed. The bear, very willing, puts his paws in a vice that his toe nails may be clipped. The tailor quickly screws it tight and then lies down and sleeps through the night in perfect security. Meanwhile the bear grows his anger as he realizes how he has been tricked.

Part Two.
Suite for Orchestra "In Holland" by Christian Kriens—The composer is a modern Dutch musician at present living in New York. The first movement "Morning on the Zuyder Zee" might be said to describe the rather lazy motion of the water in the early morning as the sun rises and before the wind becomes very strong.
II. "The Dutch Windmill" is supposed to picture the great windmill as the paddles roll ceaselessly round and round.
III. "Evening Sounds" gets back into a quiet mood.
IV. "Dance of the Wooden Shoes" is a rather noisy, fast moving piece rather grotesque as wooden shoes would have to be in order to dance without having somebody's feet in them.
In preparation children should be told something of Holland and its quaint characteristics—the windmills, the canals, the peculiar clothes, the wooden shoes, etc. Perhaps some children of Dutch extraction would be able to bring wooden shoes to school that other children might see them. Pictures of the windmills, the Dutch people and the Dutch cities would be interesting.

Part Three.
Rhythmic Music—
"La Czarna"—A mazurka, music by Louis Ganne—A Mazurka is a lively Polish dance of a skipping character in triple time. There is a strong accent on the first beat of each measure and its speed is about the same as a waltz.

II. "Gavotte" by Handel—A Gavotte is quite light and frequently begins on the third beat of a measure, which results in the suggestion of syncopation. It is in quadruple rhythm—that is, four beats to the measure. The first two notes, usually the 3rd and 4th beats are frequently short and staccato, giving the idea of suggesting light tripping steps.
III. "March" from "Turlyand" by Victor Herbert—it is sometimes called the "March of the Toys."
IV. "Polish Dance" by Scharwenka is triple rhythm, but unlike the Ganne Mazurka there is a very strong accent on the second beat of the measure, particularly in the first and last section of the piece.
Explain the difference between rhythm and time. Time is the regular recurrence of beats or pulsations. Rhythm is the grouping of beats in a characteristic movement. We may have time without rhythm but not rhythm without time. Rhythm is produced by the use of accents at regular recurring points. 11:45—Farm Flashes. 11:55—Time Signals.

12:00 Noon—News, Weather, Emil Helmlinger's Hotel Bond Trio.
II—Ghost Dance ..... Salisbury
III—Princessita ..... Paladine
III—Pale Moon ..... Logan
IV—Excerpts from "Robin Hood" ..... de Koven
V—Bass Solo—Schumann
a. Ich Grolle Nicht ..... Magill
b. Duna ..... Earl Barr Hanson
VI—Kamenoi Ostrow (Cloister Scene) ..... Rubinstein

TY COBBIS GETTING SALARY OF $60,000

Speaker Receives $49,000; Yankee Owners Prepare To Argue Ruth Out of His $100,000 Idea.

BY DAVIS J. WALSH
I. N. S. Sports Editor

New York, March 1.—Ty Cobb and Tris Speaker will be paid exactly $60,000 and $49,000 respectively for permitting themselves to be identified with the national pastime this year, it was revealed today through guarded inquiry by officials of the New York Yankees. Necessity rather than the idle curiosity of the nation's fans prompted another "transom," prompted our men to don the rubber heels.

They mean to use the information they gleaned against George H. Ruth, the prominent right fielder, when he comes to town in a day or two loudly calling quarterback signals during a discussion of his 1927 salary.

DISCUSSING TUNNEY'S OPPONENTS

SHARKEY'S START.
New York, March 1.—It was a rainy night in Lisbon, Portugal. Two American sailors, one drunk (task-task!), the other sober, eased into a saloon along the waterfront. The drunken one picked up an overripe banana and hurled it at the bartender's right eye.

A fight started. In an instant the drunken sailor was lying in the sawdust, blood dripping from a knife wound in his back. His pal was over in the corner whaling away at the bartender.

"He was just a little shrimp," says Jack Sharkey, "and I was surprised at his speed and cleverness. I thought he was pretty good, but I found I had the light of my life on my hands."

"I went down twice and, before he could knife me, I was up on my feet again swinging away. Finally, a sneezing right clobbered my chin and he took a dive into a cuspidor."

"I determined then and there to take up boxing. I couldn't ever afford to have a smaller man make a mugg out of me."

And that's how a Lithuanian sailor flashed in an incredibly short space of time from a Portuguese dock to the bright light of Madison Square Garden.

He has worked as a shoemaker, taping on laces in a Binghamton (N. Y.) factory. He later swung a pick and shovel building a dike in the river bed there. He went to Bridgeport, Conn., and shoveled coal on a coal barge. He has done practically every job possible under the category "unskilled labor." One day in Boston he breezed into Harry Kelley's gym. A friendship was cemented then that lasted. Kelley is now his trainer.

John Buckley took him under his wing and under his skillful guidance and aided by the wise counsel of Jack Conway, Sharkey started punching a path that soon attracted national attention.

He met and defeated Floyd Johnson in May, 1924, and that was before Johnson had started to slip. The odds were 10 to 3 against him. This defeat put him in a cocky mood, and he trained but two days for Romero Rojas. The Chilean knocked him out in the eighth. It taught him a lesson and ever since he has worked like a Spartan.

That is the club's story today, anyhow. Just what it would be a month from now, with Ruth playing golf and the Yanks trying to collect their annual exhibition shake-down without him, is not very difficult to imagine. Ruth is sitting behind four aces before the draw.

His salary, even if he signed tomorrow for a hundred dollars or a hundred thousand, will not start before April 13, the first day of the regular season. He, therefore, can afford to out-wait the boys. Meaning, they must have him in the line-up before the team starts north, if they expect to cull the customer through the provinces in the manner to which they have become accustomed.

WILL MISS SPEAKER

Cleveland is going to miss Tris Speaker in center field. Unquestionably the filling of Speaker's shoes is the biggest task Manager Jack McCallister faces. Center field is by far the most difficult of the three outfield positions. There are any number of reasons that do not appear on the surface.

In the first place, a greater number of balls are hit to center field territory. There is considerably more work to the position. To play it well, speed is essential. The ability to go to either side or in and out on a ball with equal ease is also essential.

That's asking considerable. There is a greater outfielder than Speaker. Even now, past the peak of his game, he compares favorably with any of the stars of either league.

True, he has slowed up a trifle, but, considering the severe test that he has put his underpinnings to these many years, he is still a wonder at covering territory.

Aside from the hole in center field because of the loss of so remarkable a player, his absence is sure to be felt to a great extent by Jamieson and Summa.

Speaker's judgment as to fly balls and the amount of territory he is able to cover always struck me as bordering on the uncanny. For that reason playing on either side of him had a distinct advantage.

Aside from this will be the loss of his coaching. Whoever a ball was hit to right or left field, Speaker was always backing up the play and offering words of advice to the man about to make the catch.

George Leness, Harvard student representing the New York A. C., defeated Alan Helfrich in the 600 yard run to set a new record of 1:13 1-5. Another new record was made by Herbert Schwarz of Wisconsin who successfully defended his 16 pound shot put title with a heave of 48 feet 5 inches.

Five other champions retained their titles—George Guthrie, Illinois A. C., in the 70 yard high hurdles; Hans Hedberg, Chicago A. A., in the standing high jump; Harold Osborne, Illinois A. C., in the standing broad jump; Willie Goodwin, New York A. C., in the two mile run; and the Illinois A. C. Medley relay team.

Edwin Wide, Sweden's star runners extensive handicaps in a special 1,500 meter race and finished fifth. He proved to be something of a "bust" in his New York debut, covering the distance in four minutes 2-5-5, which is 6-25 seconds slower than Nurm's world's indoor record.

When and against whom did Benny Leonard fight last before he retired?—F. U. A. He fought Ed Moran in 1924 in his final bout.

What is the longest distance ever ran in one hour?—T. F. J. Rouin of France, on July 6, 1913, ran 11 miles 11 1/2 yards in one hour.

GLASGOW CELTICS CANCEL U. S. TOUR

Scottish Football Association Fails to Approve Trip But Gives No Reason.

Followers of the soccer game who had looked forward with anticipation to the forthcoming tour of this country by the Glasgow Celtics will regret to learn that the proposed tour has been cancelled, the reason being that the Scottish Football Association withheld its approval of the project and thus compelled the Glasgow club to cancel all negotiations. No reason has been advanced for the refusal of the Scottish F. A. to permit the trip but it is assumed, that the Scottish body preferred to await the outcome of the meeting of the International Football Federation to be held at Helsinki, Finland, next June, before sanctioning any proposed tour of the United States.

The Bethlehem Steel Soccer club and the New York Soccer club have jointly applied to the United States Football association for permission to conduct a tour of this country by the Hakoah Sport club of Vienna, Austria. The tour is contemplated for the months of April and May next, and the tour would include New York, Boston, Fall River and additional cities not yet definitely decided upon. Dr. I. H. Koerner, president of the Hakoah club, arrived here two weeks ago to complete all arrangements.

Uruguay Invasion
At a meeting of the Foreign Relations committee of the United States Football association, held in New York city last week, permission was granted to the National club of Uruguay, a majority of the members of which are United States citizens, to invade the Soccer championships at the 1924 Olympic games, to tour the United States.

The team sailed from Montevideo on February 25 and is expected to arrive in New York about March 15. The itinerary of the tour which will be conducted by the Brooklyn F. C., Inc., has not yet been completed but it is possible that it will open in New York on March 20 and that games will be played in Brooklyn, Newark, Philadelphia, Boston, Fall River, Bedford, Providence, Detroit, Cleveland and Chicago. The Uruguayans are rated among the cleverest exponents of the soccer code and in addition to gaining Olympic honors they also hold the championship of South America; they have also made several foreign tours, meeting with uniform success. Almost all of the Olympic players will make the trip including Andrade, the sensational colored forward; Petrone, the brilliant center forward; and Scarone, the famous inside right.

Touring Mexico
The Colo-Colo club of Santiago, Chile, now touring Mexico, is due to arrive in New York on its way to Europe, about the middle of March. It is possible that a game may be arranged between the Chile team and one of the Metropolitan clubs if its stay in port is of sufficient length to permit of arrangements being completed.

The results of first round, National Challenge Cup Competition Proper, games last week were as follows:
Bricklayers S. F. C., Chicago, 2; White Banner Malt F. C., St. Louis, 0.
Ben Miller F. C., St. Louis, 5; Pants Store F. C., St. Louis, 4.

600 ASKED TO RELAYS

McGraw Believes Giants Got Edge In Recent Deal

New York, March 1.—George Kelly of the New York Giants for Ed Roush of the Cincinnati Reds. It's the biggest trade of the winter, the Hornsby-Frisch deal excepted. Who got the better of the trade?

John McGraw, because he is sure Roush will be more valuable than Kelly to the Giants, believes New York got the edge. McGraw's outfield is weak, while in Bill Terry, he has a capable understudy at first for Kelly.

Cincinnati fans are of the opinion that Roush should strengthen both clubs. It looks like a 50-50 proposition.

Kelly passed the peak of his game. McGraw thinks the change to New York scenery will rejuvenate the player of Roush, who was once the property of the Giants.

performs and as batsman as Roush he is mighty dangerous. During the 1924 world series against Washington, Kelly played first base, second base and outfield for New York, starring in all three positions.

Both Kelly and Roush are still highly capable.

WANTS PLAY FOR ALL
If the University of Wisconsin builds a new Recreation Hall and field house so as to provide "athletics for all," it will be mainly because of the untiring efforts of George K. Little, Badger athletic director. From the looks of present plans, Little's dream, which has also been the dream of thousands of Wisconsin students, may soon be realized.

So Figures Billy In Case Mc-Tigue Is Whipped Thursday Night But Praises Jim.

By Billy Evans

Jim Maloney is temporarily at least sitting on the top of the world. His victory over Jack Delaney keeps him in the spotlight as a probable contender for Gene Tunney's title.

It is said that Jim Maloney received $35,000 as his end of the meeting with Delaney. Maloney would have had to sell a lot of fish, fresh or otherwise, to have accumulated that profit.

The career of Jim Maloney, at least his comeback, is more or less a fish story and what is more surprising, it's true.

A year ago at this time Jim Maloney was peddling fish in the cultured city of Boston and he wasn't making anything like $35,000 a year out of it.

Turns Fish Peddler
After a sensational start as an amateur, Maloney turned pro and for a time met with the same success. Then came a series of reverses.

First was a knockout by King Solomon, never regarded as a stiff puncher. A decisive trimming at the hands of Jack Sharkey followed.

Disgusted with his showing, Maloney came to the conclusion that he was nothing but "fish" for the other heavyweights, so he figured he should be a success in that business.

Getting himself a booth in one of the Boston markets, he began selling his peddling fish in the city.

A new manager in the person of Dan Carroll, who boasts a persuasive line of chatter, talked Maloney into believing that as a fish he was nothing short of a whale and got his consent to return to the ring.

In giving thought to the unearthing of an opponent for Gene Tunney, Tex Rickard never considered Mr. Maloney of South Boston. He was positive he had discovered such a person in Harry Persson, one of those foreign champions, who would give the bout an international flavor.

A match with Jim Maloney against Persson was regarded as mere building up for a championship contest, just a little Rickard ballyhoo.

It happened, Maloney completely upset Rickard's plans by decisively defeating Persson, thereby forcing recognition from Rickard and cutting himself in for a lot of dough.

It looks as if his next bout would be at the Yankee Stadium with Jack Sharkey, who is soon to meet Mike McGraw, the rejuvenated Irishman. Sharkey should win. Sharkey, by the way, has twice beaten Maloney.

Berlenbach's Career
It is surprising how some of these near champions and champions get their inspiration as ring performers.

Take the case of Paul Berlenbach, former light heavyweight champion. No fighter ever acquired fame as quickly. He dropped it nearly as fast.

Berlenbach before taking up the fight game as a business was a taxi driver. There doesn't seem to be any connection between the two, but for Paul there was.

"I used to drive a taxi," explains Berlenbach. "Pares were hard-pressed. I slip slightly when I talk. Possibly the passengers couldn't understand me. Anyway I got into a lot of fights trying to collect the money due me. I finally decided if I was going to fight once a week I might as well do it in the ring and get paid for it."

He did and became a champion.

The NUT CRACKER

In response to a general demand from our many friends that we refrain forever from so doing, we herewith present our own intelligence test on sport.

The questions:

2—What great outdoor sport hasn't been investigated this year?
3—What champion of the world was defeated recently?
4—What star covers the most territory?
5—Where will the 1927 world series most likely be played?
6—Who never got to first base?
7—Who did get to first base?
8—Why are grandmother's ears so large?
9—How much will Babe Ruth have at the end of this season?
10—What is boglogna?

Here, pupils, are the answers:
1—Marble.
2—Texas Guinani.
3—Peggy Joyce.
4—Atlanta and Leavenworth.
5—A radio soprano.

DERBY PRIZE CUT

The winner of the American Derby at Washington Park will receive only $25,000 this year. Last year, Bradley's winner was paid $100,000. Washington Park officials hope that the glory of winning the race will make up for the loss of $75,000 in first-place money.

Her Show Was Raided, But Star O. K.'s Censor

Dorothy Hall

By VIRGINIA SWAIN
New York.—Dorothy Hall rode in the black maria to the station when police raided the play in which she was the leading woman. But Dorothy Hall believes in censorship.

"It's reached the place when lovers of the theater must look even to the theater's most dreaded foe, censorship, to rescue it from destruction. If censorship will rescue the drama, I'm for it."

Mae's Attitude
Miss Hall had resigned from the company of "The Virgin Man" and was playing her last week, to save the manager from loss of the rent when raiders swooped down on the play. The stimulated public interest so that the closing notice was withdrawn and the play prospered.

In contrast to this attitude is that of Mae West, buxom blonde author and leading woman of another of the raided plays, "Sex."

Mae has flung down the gauntlet for an open stage—any kind of play that will bring in the cash customers. She accuses other playwrights and producers of bringing about the police raid, through jealousy of her success.

Certain producers and theater-owners had openly announced that Miss West's next opus "The Drag," would never be able to get a New York theater. It is an exposition of psychopathic conduct which they feared would bring down government censors upon the entire New York theater.

Is Mae West chastened by her recent visit to the police station? She is not! She says she is going to go right on talking out loud in the theater, giving the people what they want.

"Sure, I know what audiences like," she says. "And when it comes to sex portraiture I know my onions. My play is true to life. And how can anybody suppress truth?"

"I believe that whatever is, is fit material for the theater." And just here, Miss Hall, just as golden-haired and possibly preferable, has a word to say. "The truth is no excuse. Many things are true which are not entertainment. Even when a play is sincere and restrained, it may be dangerous.

Vulgar and Crude
"And I consider most of the sex plays now on Broadway merely vulgar and crude. Their only purpose is to demoralize, while dragging in the money."

"But even such a play as 'The Captive,' a marvel of good writing and staging, is out of place in America. It deals with an unhealthy topic which should be treated by doctors instead of playwrights."

Miss Hall believes that audiences are just as glibly as producers in choosing the roles they will play. The daughter of a staid Methodist family in Bradford, Pa., Miss Hall was allowed to come to New York only on the pretext of studying interior decorating.

After about five months, she got work as an "extra" in a motion picture studio, and triumphantly wrote an astonished family that it could view her work in the local movie house.

"Just think how I felt when I learned that the whole sequence in which I worked had been cut out!" From movies, she went to the speaking stage.

"I'm one of the lucky girls who don't have to take a part they dislike," she says, glancing at the handsome manufacturer husband who is her insurance against economic pressure.

"But this winter I turned down so many roles that at last, in desperation, I decided to try 'The Virgin Man.' The title was the worst of the show, anyway. And when they let me out of some of the 'dams' and some of the vamping, I thought the play was harmless though amateurish and dull."

The solution of bad plays is yet to come, Miss Hall says. Certainly police censorship is inefficient. "Unless the public revolts and turns a cold shoulder on the sex plays, there must be censors. But where to find wise, cool, unprejudiced persons to do the work, I don't know."

SIX INDUSTRIES SAVING MILLIONS BY SIMPLE RULE

$233,400,000 a Year In Profits Resulting From Simplified Practice.

Washington—Statistics showing that in six industries studied, application of the principles of simplified practice laid down by Secretary of Commerce Hoover, have saved more than $233,400,000 annually, have been made public by the commerce department.

Hundreds of other industries are employing simplified practices to cut down their production costs. While estimates are not available as to actual dollars and cents savings, this figure would pass the half billion mark, in the opinion of experts.

Savings in industries reporting were shown to be: paying brick, 11,000 per cent; steel, $2,400,000; steel reinforcing bars, $4,500,000; warehouse forms, $5,000,000; range boilers, $5,500,000; inquiry, purchase order and invoice forms, $15,000,000 and lumber $200,000,000.

"The increasing rate of consumption of natural resources as a result of enlarged demand on the part of the public for improvements in the comforts of life; increased costs of raw materials, labor, production and distribution; and the need for effective stabilization of the social structure are given as some of the primary reasons for simplified practice," the commerce department said.

Factors contributing to the increased cost of production and distribution, which can be eliminated through the adoption of simplified practices were enumerated as follows:

- 1.—Production of excessive varieties of items based on a desire to market novelties or other goods with an individualistic stamp.
- 2.—Age investment in special machinery and equipment, often accompanied by large stocks of raw materials and finished goods, which become slow-moving or obsolete and result in "freezing" of assets.
- 3.—Slow-up production and purposeless motion resulting due to seasonal operation and to losses from changing machine adjustments or machine set-ups for variations.
- 4.—Meaningless Competition.
- 5.—Competition with meaningless variations, or substitutes often causing a lack of interchangeability of parts and lack of uniformity in specifications prevents practiced avoidance of waste by means of adequate control or stock and planned production.

Lack of uniformity in packing, wasted shipping space, losses from misunderstandings between the user and handicapped fulfillment of orders.

A large program of standardization and simplification in industry will be carried out by the commerce department this year. Many industries have applied to the department for information as to the elimination of excessive sizes, types and qualities of products, looking to cheaper production.

NOTED ENGLISH JOKER IS DEAD IN LONDON

London (United Press)—England's most notorious "practical joker" is dead.

Living the so-called simple life in a small town near here, W. A. H. Bernard Smith, was known to some people merely as a studious scholar and clever poet, but with others he achieved notoriety as a practical joker.

Sometimes his practical jokes mystified scientists and alarmed the people of the town where he lived, even arousing the newspapers at times to comment on their audacity and cleverness.

In January, 1923, a statue at the British Museum was found drenched with raspberry jam.

In May 1919 a joke was perpetrated at Ramsgate, when the window of a magistrate's house was smashed by a thunderbolt. Bits of the thunderbolt were picked up and sent to the best laboratories here for examination, but the "window-smashing thunderbolt" remained a mystery until Smith sent the following letter to London newspapers:

"I bought the meteor for sixpence and was assured that it was a real thunderbolt. I threw it at the window and to my amazement the window broke the thunderbolt."

For this joke Smith was fined $10 and $7.50 costs.

During the war Smith dressed in a grotesque costume and lived in a cave on the coast and caused some alarm among the coast residents who thought him a German spy. The authorities put an end to that joke.

Smith kept a large circle of London friends constantly wondering when one of them would become the subject of one of his jokes.

The longest river in the world is the Nile, which runs for 3,670 miles.

Possibility of Miss Mary Elizabeth Ferguson of Boonville, Ind., being Prom King at the University of Indiana is the talk of the campus. Miss Ferguson, as vice president of the Junior class, assumed the presidency this semester when Henry Claywell, of Worthington, Ind., did not return to school. Now the Junior president is Prom King, according to the rules, so what's to be done? Co-ed says, "Nothing! It's the women's day."

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE Death strikes GARETT FOLSON while swimming at Ocean Town, N. J. Investigation shows he has been stabbed to death under the water.

ANASTASIA FOLSON, eccentric and masterful sister of the dead man, arrives and takes command. At the inquest it is learned that the death weapon was a pocket-knife, and it had been bought on the boardwalk.

It is also learned that one CROYDON SEARS, who was in Barron's party, had a pocket-knife. Anastasia engages TITUS RIGGS, an architect, to work on the case. DAN VELTON, the dead man's nephew, arrives and is intrigued by some curious French dolls in Folson's room. He believes his uncle had been blackmailing several people and he and Riggs discover suspicious documents in Folson's effects, some bearing the initials of Crocydon Sears.

Riggs questions Sears and is answered curtly. Others act suspiciously, including Ned Barron's wife, MADELINE.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXXII "ANGEL," and Robin Sears looked at her with a sort of dumb misery in his clear young eyes.

"Yes, Robin; and I suppose that serious tone betokens a hint of new trouble."

"Hit it first time, my discerning young friend."

They sat on the sand, the girl in her modish and very charming bathing costume, wrapped in a beach cape to match, and young Sears in his swimming suit.

"Well, what is it, dear?"

"Only that I can't find the man with the green bathing suit."

"That all? Then, we'll have to pull through without him."

"Yes, that's what we'll have to do. But it's going to be hard pulling."

"What's the new development?"

Angelica Fair, with all her blue-rose loveliness, was no empty-pated doll.

They sat on the sand, the girl in her modish bathing costume and young Sears in his swimming suit.

him over to going, she changed her mind and wanted to stay.

It was unlike her to be whimsical or dissatisfied. Devoted to her husband and her baby, Madeline Barron stood, one would have said, for a high type of normal, modern woman. And it was only of late that the faintest wave of unrest had been observable on her sunny calm.

Angelica pondered over it and wondered if she ought to speak to Ned.

For Barron worshipped his wife, but he was the sort who assumed everything was all right and quite as usual.

But Angel saw, and with quick intuition knew that something was wrong, and set about finding out what it was, though so far without success.

And now, Robin, too, was stirred up.

He had confided to Angel that his father was bothered.

"Bothered, that's what he is," Robin had said. "And when my dad gets bothered it means there's something gone wrong."

"Yes," said the girl, "I've understood that was the significance of that word."

Robin flicked a handful of sand at her and went on.

"You see, I know him so well that though he looks and acts just the same as ever, I can see the difference. And it's so queer. I'd as soon look for upsettiness in the Washington monument."

And there's a fine short story title for you!

"Isn't it! Sounds like a detective story."

"We're in a detective story. You know that Tite person is working very hard on the Folson case."

"I know it—I should say I did know it! That's where the trouble began. And, Angel, he—well, I won't say suspects—but he is what I believe they call 'looking into' my Dad!"

"Much good that'll do him, for you and I know he can't find anything there but the best."

"We know it, but he doesn't. And if that's what's upsetting Dad, then—well, then, I've got to find the green suit man."

"You've tried?"

"In the few ways I can think of. I've asked all the life guards, and all the bathhouse keepers, but of course, only the ones around here and then went back."

"Yes, of course. What about advertising?"

"I don't know. It doesn't seem very practicable. Men who wear green bathing suits don't read the papers much."

"Naturally not. In fact, they're not much worn. And that ought to make it easier to find him."

"Ought to. But it doesn't seem to. Let's walk along the beach and see if we can't spot him ourselves."

"Have you asked your father much about this eccentric dresser?"

"He's funny about it. He says 'Don't know any more than I've told you. Inquiry closed,' or something like that. Laughingly, you know, yet decidedly, too. There's something at the back of his mind, dear old chap, and Little Robin is going to work it out."

"With Angel's help," the girl said, rising, "Hello, there's Mr. Riggs."

"Fits came alongside. He was in civilian dress, for he never went in the surf, and he dared the damp sands to speak to the pair."

"I say, youngsters," he called out cheerily, but Robin detected the hesitant note in his voice, "just a minute, eh?"

"All the time you can use," said Robin, looking at him keenly.

"Yes, boy," Riggs said, quietly, "you've guessed it. I have something to say. And I may as well speak out. There is a definite feeling of what may at least be called suspicion forming toward your father, and I thought you'd rather I'd tell you than not. I know you don't mind my speaking before Miss Fair."

"Rather not!" Robin braced himself as for a blow. "What's the new clue?"

"The police finally dragged it out of the suction room people that night and found there a third dagger. As we know, he admitted two, but said nothing about a third."

(To Be Continued)

Things look blacker and blacker for Crocydon Sears. And where is he said he saw near Folson before the murder?

The Woman's Day

Irene Hanesek of New Jersey is only 13, but over a week she posed as the Countess Irene Marie Ladjeff, exiled from Russia, and an intimate friend of Prince Carol of Rumania. "The Countess Irene" conversed in fluent French with a woman in the big hotel where "the countess" engaged the royal suite, displaying an accurate knowledge of Russian and French history.

While it might be trying to have an Irene in the home, many parents will envy the home or school system which gave the young lady her social poise and confidence. Any mother knows that Irene "will see the world" while what most parents want for their children, regardless of the method. No, they don't all admit it.

For Antique Hounds "I am lost," writes one who signs herself "Grandmother's Clock." She explains her "lostness."

"Yesterday I saw an early American fireside bench. I am launched. My entire house shall be refurnished in antiques. But where and how do I begin?"

I can only say, "Lady, get a book! It's called 'The Collection of Antiques,' by Esther Singleton." Spring Dishes

You've heard of rainbow weddings. But did you ever give a rainbow luncheon or tea? It's considered quite the smart thing to mix your "rainbow" dishes with one guest's chicken and mushroom salad, for instance, on a jade crystal plate, while the guest next to her eats from a rose plate, and a third from amber, and so on. Even small cakes may be mixed. And gift shops are displaying candy sets of harmonizing crystal, amethyst and jade, gold and rose.

"I Do!" The European marriage of convenience, rather than the American marriage of "romantic passion" is somewhat eulogized by Rebecca West, one of the greatest of living women novelists. Miss West writes:

"Marriages of convenience may give the persons concerned all the happiness they can get out of companionship and children. Why, then, do women insist on feeling that a romantic passion? It may be because it is a kind of dope that makes all sorts of things about a man beautiful which are not true; which glides him with all the virtues and charms she has wanted since she was a girl, whether he has them or not. Men find women so attractive that they can't take them as they are. Women, however, find men so unattractive that they can't accept them except in a state of emotional bemusement."

If your Skyscraper Furniture book cases, your desks, your chairs, your dressers, are almost as tall as they are wide; if they tower into the air, but take little space on the floor, it's in the newest note of house furnishings. Decorators explain that the skyscraper idea has necessarily invaded the home, because of their limited space today. Compactness is the keynote. Paul Frank, an outstanding furniture designer, has designed a combined bookcase, and filing cabinet, in a series of rectangular forms, growing smaller until the top is reached.

"Out of the Dishpan" "Never again need a woman's tender hands touch 'sreasy' dishwasher," reads an ad broadcast throughout the land. The thing is a magic looks something like one of those attachable bath showers. It costs less than $7. It screws to any faucet, and it guarantees to even take off dried egg gods. And, reading the ad, one wonders if the cure isn't worse than the disease. You screw on and screw off five different do-funnies!

This attractive sport costume seen at Palm Beach exemplifies the new untrimmed neckline and the almost normal waistline—very much like our old friend, the "shirtwaist suit" of several seasons back.

A RARE DISH—ESTELLE'S EGGS A LA JACK DEMPSEY

Her Simple Recipe and How It Came to Be Named for Her Famous Husband.

Estelle Taylor, the beautiful, has two careers. As a moving picture star she is widely known although it is as the wife of Jack Dempsey, once king of the prize ring, that she has perhaps gained greater fame.

As the latter, too, she achieved distinction in the kitchen. This is how it came about.

Nameless Delectable At a dinner party in the handsome Dempsey home in California the hostess served a unique dish. So delectable was it that one of her guests asked what it was called.

"I have no idea for a name for it," Estelle replied.

"Here's one," suggested another guest. "Call it eggs a la Dempsey!"

How It's Done Cool and peel three hard-boiled eggs. Slice into halves, topping the rounded end of each half so that it will stand yolk end up. Remove and mash the yolks, adding two teaspoons of anchovy sauce, one teaspoon cream, half a teaspoon of dry mustard.

Work together and when thoroughly mixed, fill in the whites with the mixture. Cut a French olive around the stone into lengthwise strips and place one strip across the top of each egg to resemble a basket handle.

Good Nature and Good Health

WOMAN IN INDUSTRY MUST KEEP WATCH ON HER HEALTH

By DR. MORRIS FISHEIN Editor Journal of the American Medical Association and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine.

The Medical Research Council of Great Britain has completed an investigation of the physique of working women in an attempt to determine what limits should be placed on their physical work.

Over 3000 women employed in factories were studied and compared with 400 women who had formerly worked in factories but who had been out of work for a long period. The final group for comparison included 500 healthy women who were attending a college for teachers.

Among the tests applied were lifting, the grip of the hand, and a crushing forward movement. The heaviest work done by any of the women was that in the chemical works and in the brick works, but others were occupied in steel trades and in potteries. Many of the women also worked in industries which merely required them to watch activities of various machines.

It was found by the observers that the most perfect specimens of womanhood in industry were the girls in the chemical works in Glasgow. Practically all of the women had been born and bred in the slum districts of Glasgow and their mothers and grandmothers had done the same kind of work before them.

One of these girls had shoveled from twenty to twenty-five tons of raw material in one day; lifting the shovel to a height of 2 1-2 feet.

The girls who worked in the brick works carried as much as one hundred pounds at a time, a distance of from seventy to eighty yards.

About half the girls were between the ages of 17 and 22. The average weight of the women studied was found to be 109 pounds; the average height was 62 inches; the average pull of the body upward was 183 pounds; the grip power was 59 pounds.

The teachers, who ranged from 18 to 22 years of age, were in general, in height, weight and strength superior to both groups of working girls. In an attempt to account for their physical superiority it was found that they underwent a medical examination before employment so that they were really picked women. All of them had regular physical training, and during their training regular physical examinations.

As a result of this inquiry it was not possible to decide on any tests that should be applied in determining particular fitness for industry

Home Page Editorials Four-Flushing

By Olive Roberts Barton

I have tried to remember where I saw the wise and witty remark recently that the trouble with people nowadays is that too many live on hope and too few on reality.

At any rate we have the sentiment and let us consider it. What happens to the youth who meanders along with his head above the clouds and who forgets to keep one toe on terra firma?

I shall take as a concrete example one man I know of, thirty-six years of age, who did not believe in preparedness.

He graduated from high school and went to work. His parents offered to help him with his education if he could work out the rest of it himself. He laughed a sure and worldly little laugh beyond his years. I can see him now cut the air with his hand, saying, "Bunk! That's all bunk about the fellows wasting years on school to get good jobs. I tell you the whole world is four-flushing. I can try it as well as the rest. I guess. It's the fellow who isn't afraid and

Sour Stomach

"Phillips Milk of Magnesia" Better than Soda

Instead of soda hereafter take a little "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" in water any time for indigestion or sour, acid, gassy stomach, and relief will come instantly.

For fifty years genuine "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" has been prescribed by physicians because it overcomes three times as much acid in the stomach as a saturated solution of bicarbonate of soda, leaving the stomach sweet and free from all gases. It neutralizes acid fermentations in the bowels and gently urges the noxious waste from the system without purging. Besides, it is more pleasant to take than soda. Insist upon "Phillips."

Twenty-five cent and fifty-cent bottles, any drugstore. "Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. Registered Trade Mark of The Charles H. Phillips Chemical Co. and its predecessor Charles H. Phillips since 1875.—Adv.

Lift Off—No Pain!

Doesn't hurt one bit! Drop a little "Freezone" on an itching corn, instantly that corn stops hurting, then shortly you lift it right off with your fingers.

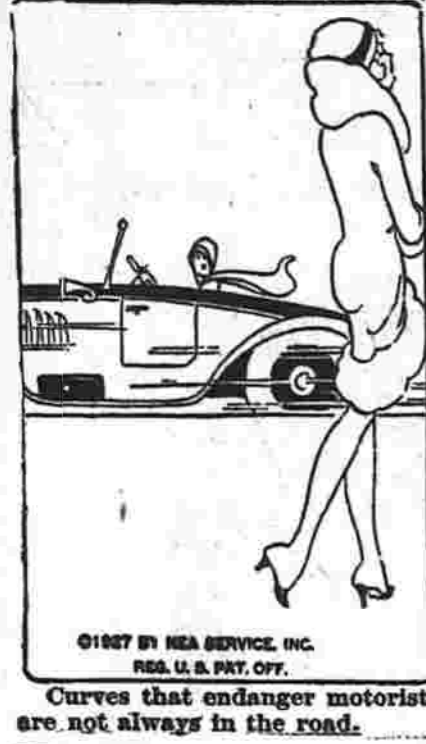

Your druggist sells a tiny bottle of "Freezone" for a few cents, sufficient to remove every hard corn, soft corn, or corn between the toes, and the foot calluses, without soreness or irritation—adv.

FLAPPER FANNY SAYS:

NOW YOU ASK ONE CHILD'S TEST

This intelligence test was especially designed for children—although adults, as well, can get a bit of mental exercise by seeing if they can answer the questions. The answers are printed on another page:
1—What's wrong with this picture?
2—What is the chief food of the ordinary spider?
3—What two states have large cities named Portland?
4—In what year did the Civil War end?
5—What are the two largest rivers that flow into the Mississippi?
6—Where and how did the Confederate general, "Stonewall" Jackson, get his nickname?
7—On what river is the famous "Grand Canyon"?
8—What famous book tells the adventures of a boy who floated down the Mississippi on a raft?
9—What is the name of the old frigate that is known as "Old Ironsides"?
10—Who succeeded Roosevelt as president?

SENSE and NONSENSE

At this time of year a detour is the middlest distance between two given points.
Auto Tourists—"I clearly had the right of way when this man ran into me, and yet you say I was to blame."
Local Officer—"You certainly were."
Autoist—"Why?"
Local Officer—"Because his father is Mayor, his brother is chief of Police, and I go with his sister."
Motoring Rhymes
Hickory, dickory, dock,
The car ran up the block—
'WAS a one-way street—
The cop was fleet—
And they all walked into the dock.
Jack and Jill went up the hill
At sixty miles or better;
A cop unkind
Was right behind—
They're seeking bail by letter.

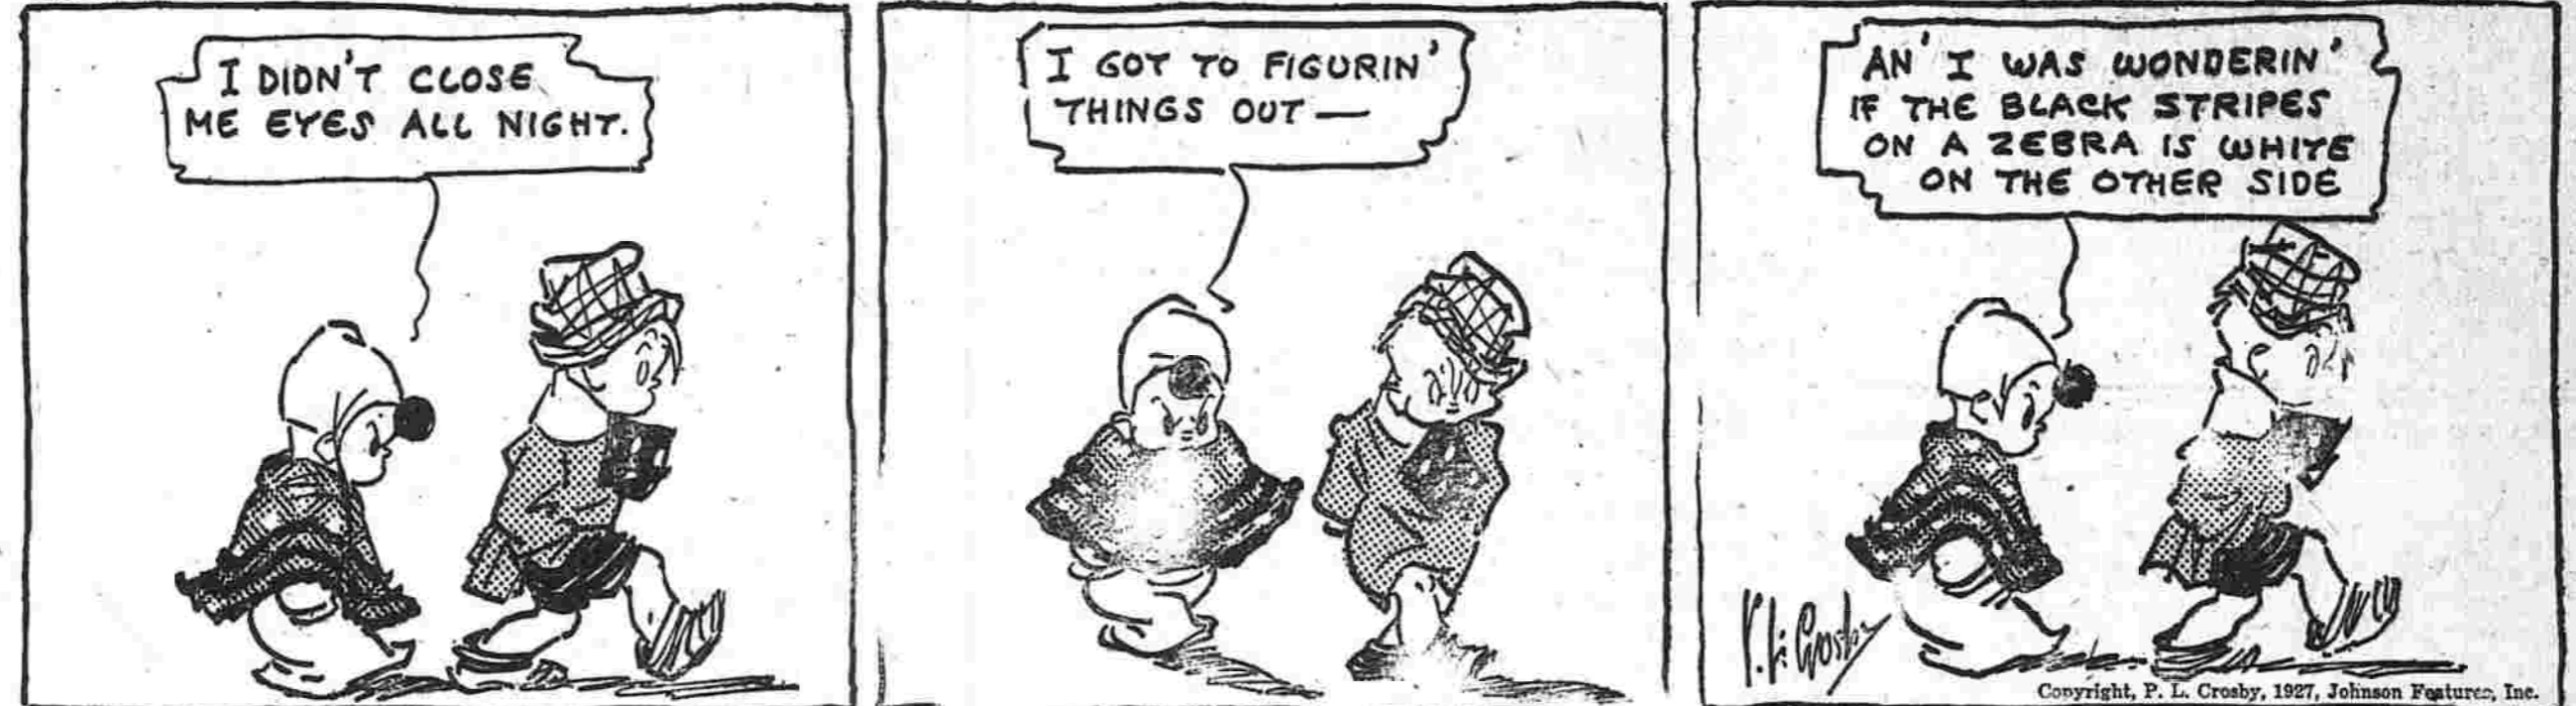

Mary had a little Ford
It wasn't white as snow
But everywhere that Mary went
The Ford was sure to go.
She stopped before the school one day
Not holding out her hand;
A truck was speeding right behind—
She's in the Promised Land.
There's a tax on everything but atmosphere and there'd be one on it if the fliiver could be run with it.
When gasoline tax equals the price of gasoline people may learn to walk again.
The auto came to a sudden stop near a dark, dismal detour.
"You are going to make me get out and walk?" asked the little flapper, tremulously.
"Worse than that," exclaimed the sheik brutally. "We're out of gasoline. You've got to get out and help me push this car to a filling station."

The tank was full of gasoline
The driver full of Jake.
And when the coroner arrived,
They had to use a rake.
Justice: "How did the accident happen?"
Defendant: "Why, I dimmed my lights and was hugging the curve."
Justice: "Yeah, that's how most accidents happen."
Correct this sentence: "When I pass other cars," said he, "it's because I'm in a hurry and I feel no relaxation."
All Said And Done
The speedometer said sixty miles an hour.
The constable said it was ninety.
The natives said it was a crime.
He said it was the life.
His friends said it with flowers.
Judge: "What's the matter with your headlights?"
Driver: I used wood alcohol in the radiator and the darn thing has gone blind!
There's always room for one more tax on automobiles.
Auto drivers don't seem to have any horse sense.

THE TINYMITES BY HAL COCHRAN

(Read the Story, Then Color the Picture)
The little smoke bowl drifted 'round, and finally settled on the ground. The Tynites grew quite dizzy 'cause it seemed to rock, and then, they felt it slowly stop dead still. They all climbed out in quite a spill. Said Scouty, "Gee, how good it seems to be on earth again."
When all the bunch had left the bowl, it changed its form. They watched it roll away just like a great big ball and finally disappear. Wee Clowny waved his funny hat, and said, "I'm glad we're rid' of that, and lets look around and see what we can find down here."
Said Coppy, "It should be real grand, if this is Mother Goose's own land. I wish that we could find her.
Maybe she would show us 'round."
And then another voice replied,
"Well, nothing's gained, if nothing's tried. Lets start to look 'cause that's the only way she can be found.
And so the bunch began to walk,

mid smiles of cheer and heaps of talk. It really was a wondrous treat to be down from the air. At first their legs seemed rather weak, and Clowny even felt his squeak, but after 'while they picked up strength, so no one seemed to care.
A little hill was just ahead. Before they reached it Scouty said,
"Look! Somebody's coming, it's a little girl and boy. Perhaps they'll gladly let us stay upon this isle of fun and play. Let's run right up and ask them." 'Course this filled them all with joy.
The girl and boy soon reached the band, and each put out a welcome hand. "We're glad to see you," said the boy. "And who are you?" asked Clowny, loud. "To meet you we are very proud," and then the little girl replied, "Why, we are Jack and Jill."

SOUTH M. E. SEEKS TO RETAIN PASTOR

Conference Votes Unanimously For Sixth Year For Rev. Joseph Cooper.

Rev. Joseph Cooper, for the past five years pastor of the South Methodist Episcopal church, was recalled to that pastorate by a unanimous vote of the Fourth quarterly conference, held at the church last night. The invitation will be presented to Mr. Cooper through Rev. Myron E. Genter, superintendent of the Norwich District, who presided at the conference.

The fourth quarterly conference is the final meeting of the church preceding the annual New England Southern conference, which is held in April of each year. At the church conference all recommendations to the district superintendent regarding pastors are made. Reports of the various organizations connected with the church were offered to the meeting last night and all were accepted.

Here Five Years Rev. Joseph Cooper came to South Manchester five years ago from Brockton, Mass. He was largely instrumental in the erection of the new South Methodist church edifice and it is the wish of his parish that he be allowed to remain in the pastorate until the remaining outstanding on the church fund may be collected. It is understood that about $29,500 in pledges remains to be paid up.

Resolutions of appreciation for the work done during the year by Miss Mabel M. Pollard, director of religious education, were presented by A. L. Crowell and unanimously approved by the conference. Another resolution was presented in regard to the trust fund of $10,000 created by the late A. Willard Case, and now being held by the Manchester Trust Company. The Southern New England Conference will begin on April 20 at New Bedford. Miss Pollard, who will be married this spring, will leave the church at that time.

MINUTES PRECIOUS IN THIS ACCIDENT

Had Train Arrived Ahead of Time, Hayden Griswold Would Have Had Different Story to Tell.

Less than five minutes separated a Manchester man from what might have been a serious accident yesterday at the Main street railroad crossing at the north end. Hayden L. Griswold, of 122 Oakland street, was on his way to work at Cheney Brothers where he is engaged as a civil engineer in the main office department. As he drove his Chevrolet touring car across the railroad crossing, the front axle broke. Griswold looked both directions quickly. No train was in sight, but he did not know at what moment one might appear. It was then 7:46. A west-bound train was due at 7:50. Realizing he must act quickly Griswold hurried to Gibson's Garage which is nearby and in a few moments, the crippled Chevrolet had been towed into the garage. Shortly afterward the train sped over the crossing.

CITY ENGINEERS TAKE ON WARLIKE ASPECT

Embark On Campaign Against Invading Mouse Who Is Threatening Maps.

First it was a rat, now it is a mouse which is making life miserable for the members of the Town Engineering department in the City hall. The rat was short-lived but its smaller cousin is still prowling around the vaults in which the maps are kept.

To kill the rat took the combined efforts of the engineering and building inspection department some time ago. They chased the animal around the room in which it was cornered and after they had it tired out they dispatched it with a broom.

They broke one broom when they hit the floor instead of the rat. Now the report comes that a mouse has made its home just over the vault. It is in an almost inaccessible place and the members of the department are wondering how they can get it.

Plans have been talked over and strategy discussed. They plan to fight it out on this line if it takes until spring and they point out that the mouse may be starved to death for it has nothing to eat except a number of old musty maps and charts.

Adolph Wennert of Hartford has bought from Joseph and Frances Tocinis the property just off North Main street known as the McCabe place.
