

HALF AN INCH OF LAND MADE DEED SUBJECT

Dewey-Richman Take Title To Tiny Strip to Correct Building Line of Neighbor Lot.

It just came to light today that legal papers have been exchanged involving half an inch of land, so that the new Dewey-Richman building on Main street could be erected according to plan. The land was owned by the firm of Fradin & Kemp, owner of the adjoining property.

Just Off Line. It transpires that the Fradin-Kemp building was built exactly on the true line of the lot at the Main street front but at the rear of the block there was a tiny gore caused by a very slight deviation from the line. This half an inch gore lay between the Fradin-Kemp lot and that of the Dewey-Richman company, who intended to build.

When the second block was erected it was necessary for the Dewey-Richman company to take title to this half-inch so that the walls could be built in contact with each other. It was for this purpose that the papers, covering probably the smallest real estate transaction ever recorded in this county, were passed.

PEIFFER THE POET TRIES TO KILL SELF

His Love Unreturned, Troubadour Slashes His Wrist at Midnight.

New York, March 11.—Arnold Pfeiffer, Greenwich village troubadour, lies in the hospital today from self-inflicted wounds because his love for Mrs. Francis B. Boyer, estranged wife of Boston's famous "unfrosted curate," was unreturned.

The poet with a thousand loves, as Pfeiffer describes himself, slashed himself in the wrist with a razor in Mrs. Boyer's apartment as the clock was striking midnight.

"The sheer futility of my love made me do it," he explained. Mrs. Boyer was the former Lucille Macomber, of Nova Scotia, and Brooklyn, Mass., when she met the poet. He was then 28 and she had just divorced him after the beautiful Bernice Boucher had killed herself because of love for the pastor of the fashionable Episcopal Church of the Advent in the Boston Back Bay section.

The present Mrs. Boyer married the curate in 1923 at Portland, Me. Boyer is now selling automobiles in Roslindale, Mass.

EPISCOPAL CALLED TO CHURCH AT YALE

Breaks Long Line of Congregationalists Who Formerly Held Post.

New Haven, Conn., March 11.—Yale has called an Episcopal minister to be pastor of the University church, thus breaking the long line of Congregationalists who have held the post since 1882. The new candidate for the post is the Rev. Elmore McNeill McKee, formerly of Waterbury, rector of St. Paul's Episcopal church here. No announcement is made as to whether Mr. McKee will accept the post.

The call to Mr. McKee comes close upon the announcement that Berkeley Divinity school would be moved here from Middletown and operated independently of Yale but under Yale's general guidance.

DRY AGENTS GUILTY IN SMUGGLING PLOT

Eight Others to be Sentenced Soon by New Bedford, Mass. Court.

New Bedford, Mass., March 11.—Ten men, including two former New York prohibition agents, were found guilty today in Superior Court by conspiracy to steal a quantity of smuggled liquor valued at $250,000. Passing of sentence as delayed until later today.

The liquor was owned by Max Fox of this city and was taken from the Durfee farm at Somerset in a hi-jacking raid.

The former prohibition officers found guilty were Alex Westerlund and Clarence Lovatt. They were recently suspended from duty in New York. The others found guilty were Arthur Ryan and John J. Tuttle, both of this city; Manuel Ferreira, Roger Ferreira, Frank Amaral, William S. Peters and Edward Pignello, all of Fall River.

According to testimony introduced during the trial of the ten men, the liquor was of a choice assortment and had been smuggled ashore at Somerset by Fox.

SLANDER IN SERMON PRIEST LOSES SUIT

Hull, Quebec, March 11.—Judgment of $2,800 has been rendered in court here against Rev. Father Chamberland, charged with slandering Notary Charles Cresspeur and J. Laverpiere. The court granted $2,800 to the notary and $500 to the other plaintiff.

The charges grew out of a sermon preached by Father Chamberland, parish priest of Montebello, in which he referred to the friendship existing between the plaintiffs and the widow at whose home they lived. Following the sermon things became so uncomfortable for the men that the notary moved away from the village. Justice Martineau ruled that the priest exceeded his rights and acted with malice and intention of hurting the plaintiffs.

FATHER AND 5 CHILDREN DIE IN EXPLOSION

Starts Fire With Kerosene; Mother and Two Other Children Escape But One Is Dying.

Brown's Mills, N. J., March 11.—William Stevenson, laborer, and five of his seven children were burned to death early today when their home was destroyed by fire which followed an explosion when Stevenson poured kerosene into the kitchen stove.

Clara Stevenson, 20, is expected to die from injuries received when she jumped from a second-story window. She is in the hospital with two broken hips.

Mother Escapes. Mrs. Rebecca Stevenson, the mother, together with William Stevenson, Jr., 15, escaped but Mrs. Stevenson's husband, by a tragedy, could not remember how she got out.

The children burned to death were Ernest, 11; Shinn, 12; Alfred, 9; Mildred, 6, and Lillian, one month old. She is in the hospital with two broken hips.

It was necessary for firemen to use long poles to extricate the bodies from the burning embers.

Clara, from her hospital bed, told the story of the fire. She said she lit the gas stove and went to the kitchen to heat a nursing bottle for Lillian the baby. Used Kerosene. The coal fire in the range was only flickering so Clara awakened her father to help her. She said Stevenson poured kerosene from a can into the stove.

An explosion followed which shook the house. The clothing of Stevenson and Clara caught fire.

Each tried to help the other but became excited when the kitchen burst into flames, Clara said.

Warms Family. Stevenson attempted to go upstairs and warn his family but he collapsed. Clara said she finally succeeded in getting up the stairs but at the top she became weak and leaned out a window to get air.

The entire house was afire by this time and flames from the burning stairway were licking her. She screamed and leaped from the window. She was found unconscious on the ground and taken to the hospital where doctors held out small hope for her recovery.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Stevenson had awakened and tried to carry her two youngest children down stairs. She tripped and fell on the stairway, dropping both children. Her hands and face were severely burned. She was unable to relate how she escaped.

William, Jr., the third survivor, jumped from an upper window but escaped injury.

THE LIVING DEAD MAN PASSES AWAY

NEA Service Photos, Transmitted by A. T. & T. Wires. How Albert Frick had been kept alive and conscious at St. Francis Hospital, Evanston, Ill., ever since last Sunday despite his inability to draw a single breath is shown above. Frick, pictured at the right, was a victim of complete paralysis of the respiratory organs. In one of the most amazing feats of medical history, doctors and other resuscitation experts kept air flowing to his lungs by rhythmic compression of his chest. With Frick lying helpless in a wheel chair two men at a time alternately compressed his chest and then released the pressure, in the manner illustrated by the group photo. This photo was posed especially for The Evening Herald and NEA Service by members of the resuscitation squad to demonstrate just how the young man's life was prolonged. At the left of the group is the patient's employer, John S. Reesman, and next is his father, H. C. Frick. The others, reading on to the right, are C. F. Balnecki, J. B. Pangburn, John S. Steppe and L. C. Thayer. Telephone wires were used by NEA Service in pushing both pictures from Evanston to The Evening Herald.

SUFFICIENT LAWS FOR MOTOR BUSES

State Senate Rejects Bill to Have Machines Insured Before Registered.

Hartford, Conn., March 11.—The State Senate today rejected a bill which would have compelled public service motor vehicle owners to insure their vehicles before the machines were registered. Senator Spencer, of Suffield, reporting unfavorably for the committee on motor vehicles.

"Sufficient restrictive laws already are provided for public service vehicles," the Senator said.

A bill was reported favorably to the Senate which gives the public utilities commission authority to limit the number of passengers which may be carried in a public service vehicle.

The House passed a bill which gives the state tax commissioner authority to disclose to the Superior Court information in his possession gained through the filing of reports by corporations.

Favorable reports received in the school janitors' funds at New Haven; authorizing New London's sewage assessment; providing for a tax on tangible property of estates.

Unfavorable Reports. Two unfavorable reports were returned to the House on bills proposing amendments to the succession tax law.

Bills passed from the House calendar included: authorizing a million-dollar water bond issue in Danbury; authorizing a $450,000 refunding bond issue in Middletown; authorizing towns to sell property belonging to school districts which have been consolidated; including in the trunk line system stretches of highway in Suffield and Windsor Locks which will eliminate two bad curves and shorten the highway between Springfield and Hartford by one mile.

JUDGE BOWERS'S CONDITION

Dr. Burr reported this afternoon that Judge Bowers's condition shows a slight improvement over that of yesterday. However, he has not regained consciousness.

Solve Stroller Mystery When Carl Fesses Up

It was Carl Reimer, two years old, who hooked the baby carriage. Carl is the son of Peter and Olga Reimer of 192 School street—and has a checkered past. A year ago or more, when he was young, a perfectly strange woman whom he had never seen in all his life seized upon the baby carriage in which he was slumbering in front of the Manchester Gas Co.'s office on Main street and trundled it away. He was rescued by Mrs. Reimer, who rushed out of the office and claimed her own, not at all caring to accept as substitutes the similar baby carriage and more or less similar baby left behind by the stranger—who almost collapsed when she learned what a frightful blunder she had committed.

No Interview. Carl refused to be interviewed on the subject, but the suspicion is that that taste of adventure may have developed in him an appetite for more and similar.

Yesterday Mrs. Reimer did some shopping at Hale's, leaving Carl outside in his year-old stroller. When she came out of the department store there was Carl seated as usual, blue blanket about him and all. And, the day's errands done, (Continued on Page 2)

PROSPECTORS RUSH TO GOLD FIELDS

Two Youths Uncover Rich Ore in Nevada Assayed at $78,000 to Ton.

Tonopah, Nevada, March 11.—Frank Horton, father of one of the youths who unearthed the rich gold strike at Weepah, was back in Tonopah today after a trip to Los Angeles. He said development of the section where his son and Leonard Traynor found the ore, would be started at once. He will leave here today for Weepah, the scene of the strike.

Sleepy Weepah was fairly humming today as prospectors continued to pour in. Many tents have been erected and wooden shacks are being hastily thrown together.

Have Dance Hall. No mining camp would be complete without a dance hall, therefore one is being built. Claims have been staked out for miles around the original strike, but whether or not the discovery will "pan out" big is still a matter of conjecture.

Experienced mining men declared there is no question concerning the richness of the ore brought out by young Horton and Traynor. Their specimens assayed $78,000 to the ton.

THINK SHIP LOST

Tokio, March 11.—Destroyers sent to search for the missing training ship Kirishima Maru, returned to port today without having found trace of the vessel. It is feared the ship foundered in a gale off Cape Inubo. The vessel carried a crew of 22 men and thirty cadets.

PLENTY OF SHAMROCKS

Boston, March 11.—Shamrocks will be plenty on St. Patrick's Day. There is no bar against the shamrock this year and every ship from England carries thousands of boxes of the flower dear to the hearts of the Irish.

STRIKERS ARRESTED

Boston, Mass., March 11.—Disobeying a police order to peacefully picket in pairs, eleven striking neektie workers gathered in a group on Kingston street today. Patrolman John McNeil, single-handed, immediately arrested the whole group. Herding them into a doorway, McNeil called a traffic policeman and ordered a patrol wagon.

SOUTH CAPTURES COTTON INDUSTRY

Textile Mills Operate Day and Night—New England Below Normal.

Washington, March 11.—The south has captured the American cotton textile business. Census figures made public by the Commerce Department today, and private advice to government textile experts, indicate that within a few years a large per cent of the industry will be concentrated in the cotton growing states.

Mills in the south for the last two months have been operating at 130 per cent capacity through double shifts. While there is not a market for cotton goods in the United States with the mills working overtime. Reports show that there is a fair prospect of placing much of the output in foreign markets.

Unusual Activity. Unusual activity of the southern mills has pulled the entire national industry to an average operation of about 100 per cent. New England mills are operating below normal capacity.

Despite low prices commanded by cotton goods officials here anticipate that the production in the southern states this year will reach close to a billion dollars. Although definite figures for 1926 are not yet available it was said to be doubtful whether the last year's production equaled the $1,714,000,000 of 1925 for the entire country.

Economic Salvation. Movement of the cotton manufacturing business to the south is seen as the economic salvation of that section of the country, which in the past has been hampered by a lack of diversity of industry and agriculture.

North and South Carolina are leading the south in building up a textile manufacturing business.

Official Figures. Official census figures for 1925 on cotton goods production showed the following distribution:

Cotton growing states ... $929,000,000 New England states ... 332 $607,900,000 Other states ... 225 $117,338,000 In 1925 the south had 768 mills compared to 357 for New England.

North Carolina in 1925 continued to dominate the southern cotton manufacturing business, according to the census, with 384 mills which accounted for $318,069,000 of the total national production.

Massachusetts cotton mills numbered 178, ranking next to North Carolina, but led all states in output value with $345,864,000. Massachusetts employed 21 per cent of all persons working in cotton in 1925.

DEATH, VICTOR IN 108 HOURS BREATH FIGHT

Tense Human Drama Closes When Alfred Frick Passes Away—Speaks Just Before End.

Evanston, Ill., March 11.—Fifty seven tight lipped men were back on the job at the Illinois Public Service company today—the tragedy in their hearts written on every face. Alfred Frick, their buddy, the man for whom each had given his full time and energy since last Sunday morning in an effort to save his life, will sit among them no more. The tense human drama closed with death the victor.

Living Dead Man. Frick, who had come to be known as the "living dead man," died at St. Francis hospital, last night at 10:10 o'clock after his fifty-seven fellow workers had kept him alive 108 hours by pressing the walls of his chest to give him the breath of life.

Death came quietly. Shortly before the end, the brave youth—he was only twenty-two—looked up at his father and mother and smiled, a faint smile that seemed to say "farewell." He was too weak to talk. A moment later he lapsed into a coma and did not regain consciousness.

Friends Mourn. But tragic as was his death, even more tragic was the grief of his friends—the "crew" of loyal men who had labored day and night, in teams of two, and in fifteen minute relays, in the hope that life would win. Many of the men, unsmiling, broke down and wept. The two who were on duty when Dr. H. H. Conley pronounced the patient dead, refused to quit the task, hoping against hope that they could revive the spark of life.

When Frick was stricken early last Sunday with Landry's paralysis, a very rare disease. It cut off the nerve supply to the diaphragm and chest walls, causing the lungs to collapse. Breathing stopped. Technically the youth was "dead." But it was found that by pressing the sides of his chest, bellows fashion, artificial respiration could be induced.

Speaks Few Words. Several hours before his death, Frick rallied and was able to speak a few words to members of his family. He used the breath that his friends forced in and out of his wasted lungs to whisper words of good cheer to those he loved. "Don't worry, Mom," he said to his mother. "I've got a fighting chance."

Frick had been in ill health most of his life. Several years ago he went to Colorado and lived in the mountains, but believing he had regained his health, he returned to his home. Until forced to give up his studies on account of his health he was a student at Northwestern University.

SAWED OFF SKULLS FOUND IN BACKYARD. Possible Murder Mystery Facing Authorities—Clew Lead To This State.

Hartford, N. Y., March 11.—A possible murder mystery faced the authorities of Westchester county today with the finding of the top halves of two human skulls, which had been thrown in a yard in the back of the bank building here.

One of the skulls was that of an adult and the other of a child. They had been sawed from their bases. The skulls had been wrapped in a bath towel, and around this had been placed two copies of the Philadelphia Inquirer, one issue of November 17, and the other of January 27. The entire package had been wrapped in a piece of heavy brown paper. An almost obliterated postmark on the paper indicated that the package had been mailed in Norfolk or Norwich, Conn. for only the first three letters of the name were visible.

The address of the person to whom the package had been mailed was torn off.

NEW HOTEL OPENS. Boston, Mass., March 11.—Following a regal housewarming last night, attended by 3,000 persons, Hotel Statler, Boston's new "wonder" hotel, was thrown open to guests today. The new hotel stands in Park Square on the site of the old Province depot.

Wife of Soviet Envoy and Three Red Diplomats Seized By General Chang Tsung Chang—Soviets Demand Instant Release; Battle Before Shanghai Begins.

Peking, March 11.—Soviet Russia today bulked large and menacingly on the Chinese horizon as a result of the complicity arising out of the arrest of Madame Borodin, wife of the Russian adviser to the Cantonese government, and three Russian diplomatic couriers recently seized by General Chang Tsung-Chang, of the northern forces.

Besides handing a second note of protest to the Chinese government, declaring that any violation of the safety of Madame Borodin or the three couriers might bring about serious consequences, the Soviet charge d' affaires held a lengthy discussion with the Peking minister of foreign affairs today. The foreign minister assured the Soviet charge that all the prisoners are alive at Tsinan.

Must Settle Question. General Chang Tsung-Chang has personally advised the Peking government that it must settle the question growing out of the Russian arrests.

Wounded Fengtien soldiers began arriving in Peking today from the Honan border where General Chin Yi-Pao's forces attempted to prevent the entry of the Fengtien into Honan province en route to attempt the recapture of Hankow from the Chinese. Chin was routed after a battle which lasted three days.

CANTONESE START DRIVE. Shanghai, March 11.—The Cantonese have opened a drive against Sunkiang and have been forced back in their first rally.

The long expected battle in the Yichang sector for Sunkiang and also in the Taping Chen region of Anhwei now appears to be in full progress, with all reports here indicating that the Cantonese have had to give some ground.

The first Nationalist thrust against Sunkiang was thwarted when sentries spotted thirty boatloads of Nationalist troops, dressed as civilians, proceeding to the city. The Shantung forces opened a heavy fire and the Nationalists were forced to retire.

Heavy Fighting. Heavy fighting continues in the Chusan Yichang sector where the Nationalists are receiving reinforcements, including major Russian detachments. A major engagement looms on this front.

General Chang Tsung Chang has arrived at Peng Fu and established headquarters, planning to personally direct the defense against the Cantonese.

Tomorrow is the second anniversary of the death of Sun Yat Sen and it promises to be a critical day. Chinese workers have laid plans for a one-day general strike and foreign authorities fear there will be attempts to enter the foreign settlements.

Agitators and terrorists are still active here. A cotton mill detective and a foreman were killed this morning during an altercation with agitators who were working in behalf of a general strike.

United States Consul Lockhart at Hankow, acting on instructions from Washington, today lodged an official protest with the Nationalist government against the destruction of American missionary property at Wuhsi yesterday, by Nationalist soldiers and citizens. He demanded immediate evacuation of the property concerned by the Nationalist military.

8,000 SHOE WORKERS FACE UNEMPLOYMENT

Two Hundred Niggerhead Operators Walk Out in Sixty Plants.

Haverhill, Mass., March 11.—Between eight and ten thousand shoe workers faced unemployment today as the result of the unexpected walkout of two hundred Niggerhead operators in sixty factories. Twenty-five returned to their work today but the absence of 175 Niggerhead operators threw 1,000 other hands temporarily out of work.

The Niggerhead operators are unionized but under a peace pact signed with other unions in the city agreed not to strike. Their walkout was heralded as "an outrage."

The Niggerhead operators it was learned today want more wages. They claim that operators in Boston are receiving higher wages for work on cheaper grade of shoes than the operators here working on a high grade. No formal wage demands have been made, however.

Another In Popular Series Held at Second Congregational Church.

Mr. and Mrs. Millard Park's group of Second Congregational folks put over the March "church night" supper and entertainment last evening perhaps bigger and better than those which preceded it. Between 250 and 300 were in attendance.

The series of five church night programs began in December and will end with the April event for which Mr. and Mrs. Alexander are general chairman and attendants of the church living on Hilliard, Cumberland, Hudson, Woodland, Grove and Main from the railroad to Woodland will furnish the supper and entertainment.

Decorations of the supper tables last night indicated the approach of spring, such as vases of pussy willows, yellow crepe paper, yellow candles and yellow shaded lights. The most appetizing meat featured scalloped salmon. Other items were carrots and peas, cabbage salad, rolls, coffee and home-made cake. The nominal charge made for each dollar has been made, for each dollar and each committee has been able to turn in a neat sum.

At the close of the meal there was singing of popular songs from Watkins' Bethers' list. Will Taylor led the singing and Carl Borst played the piano. Cards were at each plate with letters spelling "Church Night" and prizes were given to the first two who finished the cards. Mr. and Mrs. R. K. Anderson were sub-chairmen in charge of the entertainment and Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Ellis with a corps of willing workers, but on the supper.

Andrew Rankin, cornetist, played a number of the favorite tunes, accompanied on the piano by his sister, Miss Nan Rankin. The young player pledged to respond to several recalls.

After a few words by the pastor, Rev. Frederick C. Allen, Mr. Anderson introduced the church soprano, Miss Nettie Herrick, of Hartford as the organist, accompanied by Mrs. Paderewski. The latter was the organist, Mrs. R. K. Anderson, Miss Herrick sang twice during the program and gave encore numbers. Charles F. Marshall played over his music glasses and later in the evening on his glassophone. His hobby is to make his own musical instruments and his contributions to the entertainment were heartily applauded.

Rev. Truman H. Woodward gave the address of the evening, choosing for his interesting talk Elbert Hubbard, from the biography by the author very man and world-traveler, Felix Shay. He outlined briefly Hubbard's life as a business man, who at the age of 35 had made $75,000 as a partner in a soap factory. His lack of an inheritance led him to leave Harvard at this age to enter Harvard. He found that was not what he wanted and gave up the study at college for world-travel, his wealth making that possible as well as securing him entrance into the highest circles of society, literature and art.

While in England he visited a printing shop where work was done for the King of England. This gave him the idea of his kingmaker or Roycroft shop at East Aurora, N. Y., in which Elbert Hubbard succeeded where 150 other failed in similar enterprises.

The speaker gave a number of amusing instances of Hubbard's practical jokes on his employees, whom he treated with the utmost kindness and consideration. He loved to tell witty stories, even at his own expense. When Mr. Woodward gave several examples of the following: He said one very hot day Harry Lander, Jim Corbett and Hubbard happened to meet in a New York drug store. They all ordered milk shakes and as files were numerous at that season one landed at the same time in each glass. Jim Corbett blew the top out of his glass, Hubbard with his thumb and finger lifted his out, while Harry Lander wrung the top out to get all his drink.

Mr. Woodward briefly referred to Hubbard's publications, one of them, "The Philistine." This small magazine was written entirely by himself and had a tremendous circulation. His "Message to Garcia" was printed in many different languages. "Little Journeys," biographical sketches and other books have been very widely read. The author's writings today are read five times as much as in the heyday of his popularity. Some of his sayings and self-helps are as pointed and witty as those of Benjamin Franklin, remarked the speaker.

ASK US TO SHOW YOU Dupont Tontine The Wonder Shade Cloth.

Our Shade and Drapery Department is prepared to take care of advanced Spring orders right now. What is more important than the shades you put up? A cheap shade has, of course, a cheap roller and the cloth soon cracks and frays at the edges. We are featuring the Tontine shades that will not crack or fray and can be taken down and washed at any time. Also a full line of Columbia shades that are nationally advertised and come in any color you may wish. Let us estimate your shade job for you.

ASK US TO SHOW YOU Antex Window Shades 59c

They are low in price to be sure but the quality is there just the same. If you have never seen "Antex" window shades there's a surprise in store for you. "Antex" shades are the newest window shades on the market. They cannot crack nor develop pinholes! The surface is non-porous and does not soil readily. They can be easily cleaned with a dry rubber sponge—a hot iron and damp cloth will take out the wrinkles. They come 36 inches wide by 72 inches long special at 59c each.

Hoboes Are Human, Eat, Drink, Sleep

Get Together Speaker Tells the Traits of Tramps.

Two hundred and fifty "hoboes" met at six o'clock in Cheney hall at 105 Main street, for the annual meeting of the Cheney Brothers Get Together club in its talk on "Tramps" last night.

Professor Bailey has played the life of a hobo three years himself just to get the tramp's outlook on life. For 10 years he was in charge of New Haven's "hotel de gink". The tramp is a very human fellow, the professor soon learned, since he is interested in eating, clothing, lodging and drinking. The only difference between the hobo and the ordinary human is in the way he goes about to get those necessities of life.

Every hobo eats five times a day. Four times it's a "poke out" and the fifth time it's a "set up". Barely does a good tramp miss those five meals. But, most hoboes are discontented with the meals they get. Every housewife seems to think a tramp wants pie and cake. What they want is a good thick sandwich. Why, the highways of this country are lined with pastry, said the professor.

What the hobo really needs is roads signs and a bluebook. Some of them carry maps with them, and they have a system of signs through which they tip off one another on the type of locality they are in. It is not easy to get in a certain town, there is usually some sort of a mark to let the other fellow hoboes know about it.

The easiest thing a tramp does is get food. The hardest thing in a tramp's life is to find a place to sleep. Many of them resort to the town houses with the meals they do it unless they know what kind of a jail the town affords. One town up north gives the tramps lodging in jail and in the morning the judge tells them that the last to cross the town line will get thirty days.

10 Cent Beds
Professor Bailey told of his experiences in the Hotel Bismarck, a tramp lodging house in New York City. A bed costs 10 cents the first

FIX MARCH 27TH FOR COUNTY LEGION

Manchester Vets to Entertain Visiting Members at Sunday Gathering.

March 27 has been definitely settled on as the date on which Dilworth-Cornell Post No. 102 will act as host to Connecticut Legionnaires and formally entertain the Hartford County Association of the American Legion. The meeting will be called at 2 p. m. and will be held in the Knights of Columbus hall.

The custom of having each Legion Post entertain the County Association has proven so successful that when Manchester was asked to take over the March date Commander Victor Bronke broke all speed records in extending the invitation.

The Sunday afternoon sessions of the County Associations are for the express purpose of bringing home to the local units the work that the Legion is doing. Often the meetings are held in towns of small population and are attended by both Legion and non-Legion ex-service men. Such matters as pertaining to the benefit of former soldiers are explained, especially the care of the disabled veterans and the sick members of ex-service men's families and the orphan children of such men.

Whenever possible the State and County officers co-operate with the post acting as host. Commander Bronke promises an excellent program of talks by men active in the Legion. Following the business session refreshments will be served by the Ladies Auxiliary of the Legion.

The Auxiliary is composed of mothers and wives of Legionnaires. Dilworth-Cornell Post is fortunate in having a live wire auxiliary and one that already in the short time of its existence has shown that it intends to be best Manchester. Know more of it before many months have passed.

Commander Bronke urges every Legion member to reserve the afternoon of the 27th and be present when the county officers call the meeting to order. As this is the first time Manchester has entertained the County Association no effort is being spared to make it a success.

ARREST ELOPERS

Stamford, Conn., March 11.—Mrs. Nettie Reynolds, 40, of 106 North avenue, Wakefield, Mass., and Thomas McDonough, 28, of 257 Norwell street, Dorchester, Mass., were arrested here today for Massachusetts authorities who say Mrs. Reynolds left her husband and three children to flee with McDonough who left his wife and four children. Local police say the couple had been living together here for three weeks.

Rev. and Mrs. Duane Wain attended the banquet of the Senior class of the Hartford Theological Seminary Monday evening.

The town schools were closed Tuesday afternoon that the teachers might attend a Teachers' meeting in Hebron.

Mr. and Mrs. George Champlin and Mrs. Jennie Hunt motored to Manchester Tuesday afternoon and called on Miss Ida Holbrook, formerly of Columbia.

Henry Isham went to Hartford hospital Wednesday for treatment. He will remain there for some time.

Mrs. C. A. Holmes and Mrs. John Fuller attended the fashion show at Tubridy Wedsons in Willimantucket Thursday afternoon.

The Ladies Aid society was entertained by Miss Anne Dix Thursday afternoon, 27 ladies being present. Two new members were added to the roll, making 50 members in all. The ladies voted to give another coat of varnish on the church floor and to purchase more carpeting for the front aisles.

CHECK SOUGHT UPON FEDERAL AID HIGHWAYS

Connecticut Department Asked For Report on Status of Roads in System in This State.

Figures showing the part played by federal aid in the construction of highways in the various states of the union are now in the process of compilation by the American Association of State Highway Officials, to which organization Highway Commissioner John A. Macdonald has forwarded the following figures on the status of federal aid highway construction in Connecticut at the close of the department's last fiscal year:

Total road mileage in Connecticut	12,000
Total mileage approved for federal aid	835.4
Federal aid mileage completed or being constructed	823
Federal aid mileage completed or being constructed by state financing	618.5
Federal aid mileage completed or being constructed with federal aid	209.5

The above figures indicate that although Connecticut has completed or was in the process of constructing at the close of its last fiscal year 823 miles of federal aid system highway, only 209.5 miles of this roadway construction was financed through the Bureau of Roads of the Department of Agriculture. In order to maintain its high record for highway efficiency, Connecticut has proceeded with federal aid construction although government funds were available for only about 25 per cent of the construction. When government funds are available for application to the rest of the federal aid roads in Connecticut, the state will have completed the greater part of its share of the system and the funds will then be used in further extension of federal aid roads. In the meantime, the state's construction program is not in any way delayed.

GREY'S "FORLORN RIVER" COMING TO RIALTO

"Fig Leaves" heads the double feature program which closes its engagement at the Rialto this evening. It is a lavish production and depicts woman's craving for adornment from Eve's time down to present day needs. George O'Brien and Olive Borden have the leads in this entertaining picture whose plot seems to literally breeze along through one merry scene after another. Bob Reeves also appears on the same bill in a western drama that is a veritable cyclone for action. It is called "Cyclone Bob" and is quite aptly named. Selected shorter subjects will round out the offerings. The special program being shown tomorrow only is headed by Zane Grey's famous novel "Forlorn River" which has been adapted to the screen. Jack Holt appears in the stellar role and gives his customary fine performance. The plot is typical of Zane Grey and it can be heartily recommended to those who like this popular author's work.

Another western drama also appears on the same program. It is "The Show Cowpuncher" and stars Edmund Cobb. Although it cannot approach "Forlorn River" in its entertaining value it has all the requisites necessary for a successful drama of this type and Cobb appears to excellent advantage. Another chapter of the current serial as well as a comedy and news reel will also be shown.

CIRCLE BILL TOMORROW HAS MYSTERY PICTURE

"Going Crooked" is Creepy Affair—Western on Same Program.

Mystery and a galaxy of Western thrills are the keynotes of the Circle theater's big Saturday program which will be shown continuously tomorrow afternoon and evening. "Going Crooked," a gripping mystery story, holds the screen with "Loco Luck," in which Art Acord rides and shoots to another success.

"Loco Luck" is a picture that will cause the blood to tingle with excitement. It has a good supporting cast, thrills, romance, and cleverly built up suspense. It is a thoroughly enjoyable picture made from a good story and bettered by forceful direction.

The story opens in the midst of an oil boom which is in the stages of fading out. Several with inside knowledge to the contrary try to foster this idea when Acord arrives on the scene.

The action then becomes furious and speeds through the picture to a whirlwind finish.

Acord is given ample opportunity to show his skill with his fists and his unparalleled horsemanship. Hard riding and a race feature the picture with the photoplay teeming with virile action.

"Going Crooked," the companion feature, is an entertainment that is sure to please every one from the youngest member of the family to the oldest. It contains a story in which mystery, thrills, suspense and humor are important ingredients.

The story concerns a gang of international jewel thieves headed by Mordant, Master Crook, a part played with sinister realism by Gustav Von Seyffertitz, famed European star, and shows Tessie Love as an adventuress who revolts at the life she is leading. But that only after she has met the young district attorney, as played by Oscar Shaw.

Bessie Love has the leading role. These two pictures, "When the Wife's Away" and "The Texas Streak," the latter starring Hoot Gibson, will be seen again for the last time this evening.

PAY FOR POORS' ILLS

LONDON—Lord Chief Moore has ruled that a doctor is not entitled to charge a wealthy man more than a poor one. But Secretary Cox, of the British Medical Association, said: "That is all wrong. I cannot see the heart of the public bleeding for a millionaire who must pay big fees so the poor may receive the highest medical skill at small cost."

GARDEN CLUB MEETS

ON NEXT MONDAY

Professor Patch of Connecticut Agricultural College to Be Principal Speaker.

The program committee of the Manchester Garden Club has engaged for its speaker at their next regular meeting Monday evening, March 14, Prof. Roland H. Patch, horticulturist of the Connecticut State College.

His topic will be divided into two parts: "The sowing of annual and perennial flower seeds" and the raising of "Hardy Lilies." These two subjects will naturally interest all who have a small garden. Prof. Patch is well known in town and a very interesting talker. The program committee considers itself fortunate in having Prof. Patch as a speaker at this time of the year. The meeting will be held in the hall at the East Side Recreation Center and a cordial invitation is extended by the Garden Club to all who are interested in flowers and flower growing to attend.

The attendance prize at this meeting will be (Lilium Auratum) the Golden banded Lily of Japan. The officers of the Garden Club are Miss Mary G. Chapman, President; Mrs. Robert K. Anderson, secretary; and Miss Mandoline M. Smith, treasurer.

U. S. SUPERVISION FOR NICARAGUA

Washington, March 11.—Despite Secretary Kellogg's reported opposition to a United States-Nicaragua 100-year protectorate agreement, it was learned today that negotiations will be undertaken in the near future looking toward a treaty that will provide for American supervision of Nicaragua's fiscal affairs and for an American-official constabulary to ensure peace in the Central American republic.

Kellogg's opposition is directed principally against the 100-year protectorate plan, the terms of which are considered entirely too drastic, and which it is feared, may be misinterpreted as meaning permanent occupancy of the country by the United States.

However, in the view of the State Department there remains the necessity of obtaining definite and permanent guarantees of peace and good order in Nicaragua so that the Panama canal and the potential canal rights in southern Nicaragua may never be menaced and to afford protection to American lives and American investments.

This can only be done, it is asserted, by the maintenance of an American-controlled police force and of a staff of American advisers attached to the Nicaraguan government.

THE LIFE OF CHRIST

Interviews With Jesus

To Nicodemus, "a ruler of the Jews," who came to him by night, Jesus expounded the doctrine of the new life: "Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God." (John III: 1-21)

To the Woman at Jacob's Well, Jesus gave his great teaching: "God is a spirit and they that worship him must worship him in spirit and in truth." (John IV: 24)

As Jesus came again into Galilee a nobleman besought him to heal his son, who lay sick at Capernaum, and Jesus assured him of his son's recovery. (John IV: 46-53)

At Nazareth, his boyhood home, Jesus entered the synagogue, and preached. His townsmen were at first astonished at his knowledge and eloquence, but later were stirred to anger and sought to kill him. (Luke IV: 16-30)

SAFE BARRACKS

FOR U. S. ARMY

IN TEN YEARS

Concrete and Brick Will Replace Fire Traps Now Housing 40,000 Men.

Washington—With $12,000,000 already made available by Congress for the work, the War Department has planned into the task of getting 40,000 soldiers out of their fire-trap barracks by Christmas, 1937, and into modern concrete or brick buildings.

These troops are now living either in tents or in the wooden cast-iron buildings that were built during the war, most of which are now falling to pieces. Under the housing program, which is expected to be completed in ten years, the Department hopes to provide safe and sanitary quarters for every man in the service.

The work now under way was made possible by an appropriation of $7,020,000 and to this will be added more than $5,000,000 for new construction to begin a year from now.

First Year's Program
 Fourteen projects are included in the first year's program. The biggest is at Fort Benning, Georgia where $1,575,000 is being spent to house the 2,140 enlisted men permanently stationed at the Infantry school there. At the present time these men and 480 others are under canvas. A new hospital, laboratory building and mess hall are also being erected at Fort Benning.

At Fort Sam Houston, Texas, $300,000 is being expended for barracks to house one battalion of infantry (349 men). Permanent buildings at this post already care for 2,500 doughboys while the remaining 5,000 stationed there will have to await future Congressional appropriations before they can leave the wooden shacks they now call home.

About one third of the 133 officers and 2,332 enlisted men with the 2nd and 17th Field Artillery regiments at Fort Bragg, N. Carolina, will benefit by the $787,000 job under way there.

The Seventeenth Tank Battalion and one battalion of infantry, totaling about 350 men, will be provided with new homes of Camp Meade, Md., under the $710,000 contract awarded for barracks at that post. The permanent personnel is composed of 2,995 men and 152 officers.

Half a million dollars are being spent at Camp Devens, Mass., for barracks for one battalion of infantry, and $400,000 for a hospital of 105-bed capacity. At Camp Lewis, Wash., $128,000 is available for continued work on a hospital; $72,000 is being spent on officers' quarters, and $30,000 for non-commissioned officers' buildings. There are no permanent quarters at Camp Lewis. An item of $260,000 is being used to complete the hospital at Woodbine Barracks, Hawaii.

Officers' quarters costing $72,000 are being erected at Fort Riley, Kan. There are sufficient barracks at this post to house the 2,050 enlisted men stationed there. At the signal corps school, Fort Monmouth, N. J., however, $865,000 is being spent for barracks for enlisted men and for a hospital building the $72,000 officers' building.

The armies of the army are also being provided for. At the air corps station Selfridge Field, Mich., barracks, and officers' quarters, costing $620,000 are now under construction; while work on other buildings at this post will bring the total expenditures well over $1,000,000. At March Field, Calif., $652,000 is being spent to house 75 officers and 888 enlisted men; $490,000 is being spent at Kelly Field, Texas, to house 600 enlisted men and $512,000 at Brooks Field, Texas, for 614 enlisted men.

HE'S CHAMP DESERTER

Boston, Mass.—Louis Sanders wanted to see the world, but joined the army instead of the navy. He conceived the idea of deserting and enlisting elsewhere for a good change of scenery. Finally arrested at Fort Andrews, Sanders is held by army officials to have enlisted and gone A. W. O. L. 48 times in the past two years.

The petrel, which obtains its food by apparently running along the surface of the sea, is named after St. Peter, who, through faith, tried to walk on the Sea of Galilee.

JACK LOCKWILL'S SPEEDBOAT

by Gilbert Patten

During found the Bad Egg, who had chosen the big dam as the foot of the lake as a point from which to watch the race. "If anything serious happens to Jack today," Willis told Mottally, "I'm going to have you arrested at once. I can give testimony that ought to hang you." As he uttered the threat the starter's gun sounded again, and once more the five speedboats roared over the line.

The second heat became a thrilling contest between the "Mystery" and "Spitter." Jack drove like a demon, out-manoeuvring Magovern and beating at the finish by half the length of his boat.

As Jack and his mechanic, were getting ready for the third heat, Betty Darling appeared. She tossed Jack a rose. "Wear it as an amulet, Jack," she urged. "I feel that you are in danger."

Jack let Magovern set the pace in the final heat until they entered the last lap. Then he opened the throttle and fought to beat the man passing Magovern when his steering wheel broke loose from the post. Watching tensely, Betty Darling uttered a sharp cry of horror as she saw that Jack had lost control of his boat.

'Farthest West' Boy Scouts Are Farthest North, Also

Seattle, Wash.—If you will look at the map of Alaska, you will see that the American continent draws close to Asia, you will see the "farthest west" point of the continent. And there it stands Uncle Sam's farthest west school.

The children who attend this school, all are Eskimos, Indians or combinations of the two, with here and there a trace of white blood. The boys of the school have just organized the Farthest West Boy Scout troop in America.

If you have imagined Alaska as a land of perpetual ice and snow, with maybe a few reindeer and polar bears swimming through ice-strewn seas, you may wonder what these school children and Boy Scouts had to do. As a matter of fact, they are kept busier than most American school children. They learn a great many things besides the three R's.

Nothing But an Idea
 It was to help the boys along in their studies that Clark Garber, government school teacher, decided to organize the troop.

Then, for uniforms, he got hold of some old army belts and packs from an Alaskan army post. Nimble fingers of native women and school girls reduced the equipment in size until it fitted the sturdy, stocky frames of the Eskimo scouts. Then Garber was ready for work.

He taught the scouts that the first secret of commercial success is health and that health comes through clean living. That is the main lesson the bureau of education, Alaska division, tries to teach the Eskimo. It seeks to make him independent and comparatively rich. And it is coming along very well with its plans.

They Polix the Village.
 Twice monthly the scouts hold village meetings, at which problems of the community are discussed. They work with the Eskimo village council and it is their particular job to keep the community clean and sanitary. They look after the needs, police the village, see that the courts are obeyed and act as official welcome and hosts to visitors.

Go to School at Night.
 As in the United States, the "farthest west" school works hard in winter and "lets out" in summer. Then most of the boys and girls help the grownups with the fishery. In boat building, in tanning hides and in doing the work of the settlement, they help which is a time of perpetually night school is held every day under artificial light. Sometimes school lessons and lectures, broadcast by United States radio stations, are picked up and listened to via loudspeakers, by the entire village, gathered in the school room.

The cape school is run as a miniature republic, as are all the bureau's northern schools. When the children have learned the principles of republican government, the idea is extended by them to the whole village.

BRIGHT OUTLOOK

IN BRITISH TRADE

SEEN IN REPORT

Leadership and Goodwill Needed Says Government Committee In Review.

London—"It cannot be doubted that in British industry there lies latent a great power of energetic co-operation and response to changing conditions."

"But it needs the exercise of the highest qualities of imaginative leadership and of loyal goodwill to evoke and mobilize this reserve power and direct it to the common benefit."

These are the salient passages in the interim report the British Government Committee on Trade and Industry, furnished over by Sir Arthur Balfour.

But throughout the report refers to many cheering points in regard to British trade. It points out the marked growth in the number of "joint stock" companies, and the widening distribution of working capital.

Analysis of Business.
 There is an analysis of the holding of capital in the five great banks and in 18 large manufacturing, trading, shipping and insurance concerns.

The total capital of these concerns—$1,060,000,000—is distributed over 3,895,000 holdings, the average being only $1.360. Nearly 98 per cent of the capital in the 18 large concerns are worth $25,000 or less. In the four great railroad companies 56 per cent of the holdings do not exceed $2,500.

Recent industrial depressions, according to the Committee, account for a reduction in national savings. In 1925 these were in the year, $750,000,000 less than in 1913.

On the other side of the account, there is the great increase in all kinds of taxation. But while direct taxation and municipal assessments have risen about $1,650,000,000, about $1,600,000,000 in interest on internal debt is returned to members of approximately the same classes which pay income tax.

Savings Decrease
 The general conclusion is that it is the middle class which are saving less. There is no sign that wage-earners' investments have decreased. Post Office and trustee savings bank deposits have steadily increased since the war.

Figures are given to rebut the talk about the growth of working class extravagance and self-indulgence. The total expenditure on amusements is not much over $260,000,000 a year, and is against that the consumption of alcoholic liquors in 1924 was 40 percent less than in 1913. Membership of co-operative trading societies has more than doubled between 1914 and 1924.

In spite of long-continued trade depression the Committee strikes an optimistic note in regard to the future. "But," says the Report, "there is pressing need to cultivate initiative and flexibility of temperament, lack of which will mean increasing rigidity and ossification."

ASKS GOVERNOR TRUMBULL FOR ARMISTICE BILL PEN.

Hartford, March 11.—Governor Trumbull was today asked to present to the American Legion the bill which he will use in signing the Armistice Day bill, providing for the day of remembrance. The suggestion came through Kenneth Cramer, department commander of the Legion. Commander Cramer wrote the governor that the legion had taken great interest in the bill and would appreciate the pen as a memento. He also said:

"The thought has occurred to us that it might be desirable to arrange somewhat of a ceremony in connection with the signing of the bill."

ASK MORE MARINES FOR NICARAGUA CITY

Managua, Nicaragua, March 11.—The cities of Masaya and Cuidad Darío were occupied today by 250 marines each. Citizens of the towns had asked for the marines, and large crowds gathered at the railway stations to accord the foreign fighters an enthusiastic welcome.

The United States marines are here in such numbers now that they have become a real factor in the daily life of Nicaragua. This was given evidence today when the telephone girls of Managua issued a statement "enthusiastically" welcoming phone service. They had been because they are kept busy "telling it to the marines."

The girls published an explanatory letter telling the public that the had telephone service which Managua has experienced recently has been due "to the necessity of the girls spending so much time with calls of the American "teacher necks." It seems the marines speak Spanish so awkwardly that their telephone calls average fifteen minutes each.

An announcement was made that $125,000 monthly will be deposited in the Nicaragua National bank for payment of the marines' wages. The newspaper, La Prensa, pointing out that the greater part of this sum will be spent in Nicaragua, says this is but one of the many benefits according to Nicaragua from American occupation.

WORLD'S BIGGEST THEATER RISES TOY OF EX-UNDERTAKER'S AIDE

By GENE COHN

New York, March 11.—A young man who started his theatrical career by borrowing chairs from an undertaker parlor in a small Pennsylvania town and used them to seat his first audience, guests in the evening of the world's most elaborate and extraordinary toy.

It is the new Roxy Cinema theater which, according to accepted standards, is the last word. And S. L. Rothafel, who became nationally known as a radio announcer rather than as a dispenser of theatrical entertainment, is the grown-up youngster who left the undertaker without chairs for a funeral service.

Amly enough, he picked the street of an old car in the heart of Manhattan upon which to build a theater which combines every development that has found its way into the cinema or the playhouse.

Within a fortnight after its March opening, I venture to say, it will be pointed out by the theatergoers and drivers even in the Greenwich Village arch and the Statue of Liberty.

Just a few pointers about this new home of the cinema for those who sneer at the galloping celluloid.

First—the largest theater in the world, seating more than 6,000 persons. Back stage a six-story section with private projection rooms, dressing rooms, clubrooms, tailor shop—and all this for the performers and theater attaches.

And a periscope which carries up in a miniature to the manager's office everything that is going on up on the stage. Since Roxy intends to take up broadcasting again there is a special station equipped with a special broadcasting organ.

Also elevators to the balconies, an orchestra of 110 musicians and a chorus of 300. A staircase on each side of the proscenium arch, styled after the ancient Greek theaters, for ballet and tableaux.

A music library of 15,000 compositions. . . . A gymnasium for the house staff. . . . The world's largest searchlight flashing from atop the playhouse. . . . Separate rehearsal rooms for chorus and ballet.

A sky arrangement for a backdrop on which stars and planets are placed with astronomical accuracy so that any desired star can be made to twinkle at any desired moment.

School rooms for young dancers and entertainers. . . . A 20-ton cyclorama on the stage holding 30 men each. . . . Two over stage light bridges. . . . Two years of experiment went into the comfort of the seats, or something like that. . . . There is standing room for 4,000 persons. . . . A hospital with doctors, nurses. . . .

And all this, if you please, created by a man who began life in this metropolis as a cash boy, ran away to join the marines, was an undertaker's assistant in Pennsylvania, later borrowing the funeral parlor furniture to give his first show—and thus up into the moving picture business as manager of a couple of Broadway theaters, branching into radio and becoming one of the nation's best known announcers; dreaming the while of the most amazing toy a man has ever succeeded in possessing.

Leads the World in Motor Car Value

A cheerful willingness to answer your hand on the wheel is one of the very first things you notice, when you drive a Nash. Nothing has been spared to build a more delightful car to drive. This steering mechanism is, beyond question, the most expensive type built today for cars in the Nash price field. Like the steering, every detail in the car reflects the Nash determination to lead the world in motor car value. Another instance of the outstanding excellence in Nash design is the 7-bearing motor—without a doubt the smoothest type in all the world.

STYLE · QUALITY · PERFORMANCE
Comparable to the Costliest Cars

Never was the supremacy of Fisher craftsmanship so evident as in the new Fisher bodies on the Most Beautiful Chevrolet. Panoled, beaded and finished in striking tones of Duco—graced by distinctive, new, full-crown, one-piece fenders and bullet-type lamps, they represent an order of style, beauty and luxury unique in the low price field. Chevrolet has long been famous for powerful, smooth performance, rugged dependability, long life and economical operation. Yet, in the Most Beautiful Chevrolet these qualities have been enhanced as the result of numerous mechanical improvements. AC oil filter, AC air cleaner, improved transmission, larger radiator, sturdier frame, new tire carrier and gasoline gauge—these are typical of the highly modern design which is winning the world to the Most Beautiful Chevrolet. Because it provides elements of style, quality and performance comparable to the costliest cars, and because it is offered at amazingly reduced prices—the Most Beautiful Chevrolet is everywhere acclaimed as the greatest triumph of America's great industry. Come in! See and learn this greatest triumph of the world's largest builder of gearshift automobiles. Learn for yourself what amazing value is offered in the Most Beautiful Chevrolet—how closely, in style, quality and performance, it compares with the costliest cars.

THANKS! AND A PROMISE

Every industry is ultimately made or unmade by public opinion. Witness the raising of Chrysler by public approval in three years time from 27th place to 4th place among exhibitors in the National Automobile Shows. Twenty-three long-established motor cars supplanted because the public found greater value in Chrysler. By the spontaneous action of public opinion Chrysler engineering and manufacturing principles were crowded up into fourth place. In business at least democracy works,—and all things are possible to the independent manufacturer functioning at the head of his own independent company, unhampered by old traditions or obsolete equipment, and giving brains, experience and new ideas full swing in development and achievement. The amazing advance of Chrysler in public esteem has rocked the automobile industry from top to bottom. At first the attempted competitive explanation of Chrysler was that it was a new and probably a one-year car. Now the wish to give the public cars like Chrysler has become almost a rout and a panic of emulation and imitation. Mr. Chrysler and his organization appreciate the leadership awarded to them and realize its responsibilities. They will keep faith with the public which has shown faith in them.

FRIDAY, MARCH 11, 1927.

CLEAN BILL OF HEALTH.

When a town as big as Manchester can truthfully declare at any time, and especially in March, that it is wholly free from contagious diseases, it has something to brag about. There are probably more communities of its size in the country which never can make this assertion than there are towns which can. But Manchester, though periods of complete freedom from contagion are not exactly common, ordinarily stands high in the scale of relative immunity from the communicable diseases. The reason is not far to seek. We have no slums. We have no great tenement house barracks. Our town is uncrowded. Its people live in real homes—not all palatial but almost all comfortable and roomy enough to make herding unnecessary. There is practically no dirt poverty here. Everybody breathes pure air. We have good doctors and an adequate town nursing system. Our schools are well ventilated and heated. Our health department functions. In short, if any place has a good chance to be able now and then to tuck away its contagious disease placards and sit pretty in the consciousness that there isn't on hand a single case of measles, scarlet fever, diphtheria, typhoid or any other self-peddling ailment, it's this good town of Manchester. Hartfordites with growing families, who want them to grow all the way up, take notice.

CONTROL OF MERGERS.

When you tackle a problem as complex as the regulation of the financing of the big power companies which are just at present merging and taking over many of the home-owned lighting and other utilities of Connecticut you shoot over the heads of nine-tenths of the people. The average man and woman is not by any trick or device to be interested in such matters, even though it is just possible that they may become more concerned and years hence in the prices of electricity, gas, etc., and deplore the fact that the "corporations are bosses." Nevertheless both the Hartford Times and the New Haven Journal-Courier are laboriously seeking to promote interest in a proposal, first advanced by Governor Holcomb some years ago and now again trying to come to life in the Legislature, to give the Public Utilities Commission jurisdiction over the stock issues of these new power mergers. These worthy journals are welcome to their self-assumed task. In the first place there is a very prevalent belief not only in Connecticut but throughout the country that we have pretty well outgrown the wind-and-water epoch which in the last end of the last century brought so many public service corporations under suspicion if not to actual disrepute, and that from now on most of such corporations can be depended on to manage their affairs respectably instead of after the fashion of the thimble rigger or the pirate—which was the fashion for a while. In the next place, it would be edifying to have either of these propagandists of "regulation" point out just one solitary instance in the history of the Connecticut Public Utilities Commission which affords worthwhile evidence that that body would give to the people of this state any protection whatever from corporate avarice or mismanagement beyond what the service corporations were themselves willing to extend. You could not name on the fingers of one hand, nor yet on the fingers of a flock of hands, those Connecticut people who would much prefer to place the utilities concerns on their honor and let them operate free from all trammels, save the common law and the rules of equity, to creating a nominal control and placing it in the hands of a body which has been as negative as the Connecticut Public Utilities Commission over so long a term of years.

A MATTER OF FREIGHTS.

There are problems in railroad rate making which are well calculated to upset the brain that attempts to solve them with justice to everybody. But that of the Dakota grain farmers who demand a freight rate to the Minneapolis and Duluth markets which will place them on equal freightage terms with Minnesota growers does not seem to be in the insoluble class. If we are to establish freight rates that will make it possible for grain in the elevator or sewing machine raised or built a hundred miles from the same market then we are to attempt to reconstruct economics and upset all standards of valuation. Under such an arrangement wheatland in farthest Dakota should carry the same value per acre as wheatland within ten miles of Minneapolis, since it would cost no more to ship grain from the one than the other. Inversely, it follows that if Dakota wheat must pay several times as much freight charge as nearby Minnesota wheat, and inasmuch as the freightage must of course in every case be deducted from the market value of the grain, the crop of the Dakota farm of similar size and fertility must be less than that of the Minnesota farm. But at this point automatic compensation gets to work, because the land which raises the cheaper wheat cannot, of course, carry the same valuation, as the land which raises the higher priced wheat, and it follows that the ground rent or interest charges on the Dakota lands must adjust themselves to exactly the point where the net return will be the same for the distant farm as for the near-to-market one. For the farmer on the low priced farm—rendered low priced solely because of the distance and cost of shipment—to demand that he shall pay no more freight to get his grain to market than the grower who is shouldering a heavy rental interest for the privilege of shipping more cheaply is to ask to be doubly privileged and to be put in a position of decided advantage over his fellow farmer in the market. He wants to eat his cake and have it too. No wonder the Interstate Commerce Commission refused to sanction this kind of rate making.

CRYSTALIZED TROUBLE.

The incongruous "dry" bill before the New York Legislature, which would make it a first-offense misdemeanor and a second-offense felony to sell hard liquor but not wine, has run against a singular snag. The brewers are coming out for the bill, and the "drys" do not like that company, so that the measure may not be reported out of committee after all, although it is heavily backed by Republican congressmen who are active in the affairs of the state. In its stead the Democratic wets offer a most extraordinary law which would not only put the state into the wholesale wine and beer business and restore the licensed saloon while following the "drys" bill in the matter of penalties for hard liquor selling, but actually provides that the attorney-general shall defend all liquor dealers operating under state licenses who might be prosecuted by the federal authorities.

Of course there are not enough wets votes in the New York Assembly to put over such a law as this, for a considerable part of the wet strength is Republican, and Republican wets would go to no such length as proposed by this Cavillier bill. Just the same the proposal is not to be dismissed as of no account, for it is not at all unlikely that it may be the forecast shadow of a coming event. Sooner or later, unless other steps are taken to change existing conditions, some state will do in fact what this measure proposes by way of a gesture. Then we shall have nullification with a vengeance, and there will be talk of rebellion, secession, all the terrible agitation of slavery days over again—the opening of a Pandora's box.

REALIZATION. There is no other stake for which a normal person will fight so hard or strive so mightily as a human life, even that of an utter stranger—once his interest is aroused. One of the most dramatic contexts with death of which we have ever heard has just been lost by several scores of Chicagoans engaged in the heart-breaking business of maintaining artificial respiration in the body of a temporarily paralyzed friend. A false move on the part of one of these volunteer life savers might mean the death of the sufferer. The responsibility and the nerve strain of the undertaking was enormous. Yet an incredible number of men unhesitatingly responded to the emergency. Not one of them but fought for this individual's life as if it were his own. It is always so—in the circumstances are such as to arouse the concern of the bystander. We read of the loss of thousands of lives in a foreign country through some great disaster. We pass the scene of a fatal accident, we learn of this or that tragedy—and give none of these things a second thought. But bring the peril of a man, woman or child home to any of us, and there is something—anything—we can do about it, and there are few indeed of us who will not drop our affairs and our ease, perhaps risk our own lives, to strive for the salvation of another's. It must all be a matter of realization, or non-realization. At bottom the human family is potentially one vast league for mutual protection. Therein lies that hope for world peace which dreamers dream and scoffers scout.

NEW YORK New York, March 11.—It takes but a peep of sunshine at the turning point of winter to bring out all those colorful signs of spring native to Manhattan. The first peep of the robin does not enter into the subject, for robins are few and far between in New York. Sparrows and pigeons form the city's bird population and manage to carry on life from the precarious angles of elevated stations, the minarets of big Fifth Avenue churches and such spots. But spring in New York is heralded by the balloon and pinwheel men of Central park. They come out of hiding, even as the ground-hog, take a look at the sun and if it be bright and the snow be melting, there they are at the various park entrances and their song of spring goes something like this: "Bl'gones—Buyal'con! Buyal'con!" The reds, yellows and white of their wares challenge the first green peepings of the snow-covered grasses.

Over on the East Side it's the carrousel, on which the children may ride for a penny. It is a tiny merry-go-round, mounted upon a tumble-down wagon and hauled about by an emaciated horse. It is operated by a hand-wheel at the rear and, all through the long day, the owner grinds out the penny rides while all the East Side gathers about with its pennies waiting its turn. There is perhaps, no other place in America where this thing of the European side streets may be found, and they are fast disappearing in New York. For what thrill remains in a squeaky, slow-turning tub, when auto rides may be grabbed and steepchases indulged in at Coney Island? But the carrousel was not meant for the competition of Ford and Coney Islands.

It is a primitive, peasant device which, coming down the streets with the first spring sun, breathes of simple folk and simple countryside in faraway lands. Scissor grinders chant their strange songs up and down the byways, and around every corner come the organ grinders. There is a little orange over on an East Side street where the asthmatic tunemakers of the curbstones are stored for the winter. There are but one or two hand-organ men who make their beats come a-leep or heat, and they are doubly rewarded when their music zardly bays. Like Civil War veterans, their ranks seem to decrease each season, and familiar old faces are searched for in vain. Perhaps one winter blast was a bit too chill. And newcomers arrive with bigger and better organs. But they cannot all fill the place of the old-fashioned hurdy-gurdy men whose hand organs were seldom in tune and whose music dated back to "Sweet Rosie O'Grady."

THE ONE THAT GOT AWAY

WASHINGTON LETTER

BY ROBBY DUTCHER

Washington, March 11.—Senator J. Boonboom McWhorter has begun a movement on Capitol Hill which has as its object night sessions of Congress all the year around. Senator J. Boonboom McWhorter is the workingman's friend. He knows that the average man is all too paramount problem of bread-winning. He knows that it is in the evening that the workingman and his wife fare forth to seek their amusements. Why he asks, should this great country deny to the backbone of its citizenry that great educational and inspirational spectacle which is permitted to the idle and leisure classes by virtue of the fact that the houses of Congress meet ordinarily only in the afternoon? Outdoing the Movies "Must the vast majority of the people of Washington and surrounding bailiwicks be content with sentimental, trashy motion picture shows for their after-dark recreation?" demanded Senator J. Boonboom McWhorter in an exclusive interview, following the adjournment of Congress for the current session. "Must they be sacrificed to the rapacious maw of the theatrical producer and the ticket speculator if they are to enjoy that pursuit of happiness to which the constitution entitles them?" "No! A thousand times no! The ancient Romans believed that if they gave the people bread and circuses they would insure the safety of the state and the contentment of the masses. "What less can we do in these enlightened days than did those benighted rulers? "Let our people come into this chamber after their day's work is done and after their dinners are comfortably tucked away in their tumblers. Let them see the animals, the lams bleat, the elephants below and the snakes in the grass hiss.

See How It's Done "Impress upon them in this way the majesty of their country, the sterling calibre and ability of the servants of the people. Let the government clerks of this fair city realize how the laws are made which they are called upon to administer. Let them forsake their minds of sin and pleasure that their minds may be elevated by this high form of entertainment and instruction.

"Let the weary tourist, chugging into the nation's capital in his battered flivver and with his wife and kiddies asleep in the back seat, glimpse from afar out in the environs the beacon light in the tower of that great dome which tells him that his representatives are on the job, making this a greater, happier and more prosperous land. Let him wake up his family, let him step on the gas, and let him come chugging to our portals to sit in those galleries to drink from the font of wisdom and look with his own eyes upon the great minds of the nation, assembled." "And then, when he returns to the midst of our constituencies, he will tell those less fortunate than the greatest sight he saw upon his travels was not the pair of boa constrictors at the National zoo, stand on the Bladensburg road, set the muddy waters of the Mississippi or the gawky lightness of Pike's Peak, but rather the mighty Congress of these United States.

"Where will your boy and girl be tonight? Will they be out on lonely roads, parked in darkened automobiles up to all sorts of mischief? Will they be dancing away their young lives in an ill-ventilated, smelly dance-hall where the devil lurks behind every horn and every brass drum? Building Up Souls "What a contribution it would be if we could but lure them from these pernicious activities and bring them here—to save them from harm and disintegration and instead to give them something that would build up their souls!" Senator J. Boonboom McWhorter feels that the burning desire of the people for all-year-around night sessions has been amply demonstrated by the overflow audiences which came during the all too few night sessions toward the close of the sixty-ninth Congress. He confidently expects to obtain passage of a constitution amendment to put his plan into effect; will talk, of course, but the country will rise as one man to demand it. "And think of the laws we'll pass!" concluded Senator J. Boonboom McWhorter.

The Prince Of Wales

A Series of Seven Articles by
MINOTT SAUNDERS
Special Writer of the UNITED PRESS, on the World's Most Popular Man.

THE PRINCE AT HOME

London (United Press).—Although he is probably the wealthiest prince in the world, Edward of Wales lives modestly. He dislikes pomp and ostentation and his unobtrusive quarters in London reflect the character and tastes of the man.

York House, which the Prince calls home, is only a wing of the old and ugly St. James Palace. Since it was the residence of his father, when Duke of York, the Prince has lived there the greater part of his life. The wing faces on Ambassador Court, and backs on Cleveland Row, and viewed from the street it is a dismal looking place, distinguished only by two or three stalwart Guardsmen on duty with their beaver headgear and fixed bayonets.

The hair to the throne is listed in the phone book like any ordinary subscriber; "St. James Palace, H.R.H. Prince of Wales, York House, S.W.1, Regent 4140." Any business with the Prince must first go through his private secretary, Sir Godfrey Thomas, who is most courteous and obliging.

The entrance to York House is through an unimpressive glass lobby protruding into Ambassador's Court. There is a plain entrance hall and an unassuming reception or waiting room, on the ground floor. It is small, and contains nothing noticeable except an ordinary writing desk with some created notepaper. There are two or three similar rooms for secretaries and equestrian, a couple of clerical offices, and the Prince's dining room is also on the ground floor, adjoining the reception room. It is a very relaxed chamber, and would seem to be badly located with visitors gathering outside the door, but it satisfies H. R. H.

The private quarters of the Prince are on the next floor. They are quietly furnished and there is nothing about them any different from the quarters of any well-to-do bachelor of good taste and limited requirements. It is essentially a bachelor's home.

There are only two sitting rooms and bathroom. They are of normal proportions, comfortable but not lavish in any respect. Attention is attracted by several valuable artworks, a few curios that fall to suggest the world-wide traveler and practically no trophies. The wall and mantelpiece decorations include several photographs, but they are chiefly of relatives, such as any young man devoted to his family would have about him. What becomes of all the photographs of lovely ladies to whom H.R.H. is supposed to be "The Prince Charming" cannot be discovered in his lodgings.

One of the most interesting rooms in York House is the study. It is a study where he receives public servants and distinguished visitors. The other is his work room and his "den." It contains a large desk, usually piled with papers of a business nature, also filing cabinets and reference books. It is essentially a man's room. There are pipe racks and comfortable chairs, and one of the most attractive ornaments is a gold cigar cabinet and cigarette box which once belonged to his beloved grandfather, King Edward. Here the Prince spends his happy hours with his chosen friends, and here also he works, confers with his secretaries, and goes over his correspondence. It is quite an ordinary sort of room, but it is admitted to be one of the highest social distinctions in England.

The bedroom is the plainest in York House. It has been described as a severe but comfortable but not a man's room. The ordinary man would provide for himself, it looks more like the room of an army officer than that of a royal prince. And it is about the only place in all the vast domain of the British Empire where Edward can be alone. But even so, he spends less time in it than the average man devotes to his bedroom.

Again with the bathroom, simplicity and utility are apparent. Such is the real man behind the Prince.

The personal staff of H.R.H. is limited to actual requirement. He has a comptroller, a private secretary, an assistant private secretary, a groom in waiting, and three squires. These are all busy men. The Prince gets down to work about ten in the morning, after he has his exercise and breakfast. His correspondence is large and comes from all quarters of the globe. His secretaries sort it out, and usually draft replies, but all questions are referred to the Prince and receive his personal attention. Social demands form an important consideration, and his engagement book is filled up six months in advance. The Prince works assiduously, especially in regard to official plans.

The Prince of Wales is famous for his clothes, and in this respect he certainly is far from being an ordinary individual. He probably possesses more clothes than any other man in the world. Two or three rooms in St. James Palace are improvised wardrobes where his clothes are hung, and three valets devote their entire time to the important consideration of what he wears. From time to time they cannot say offhand how many suits the Prince possesses.

H.R.H. holds honorary commissions in sixteen army regiments. Each has its distinctive uniform. He fills as many ranks in the Royal Navy, and has uniforms to match. He dresses for all occasions. He is an honorary leader of the Boy Scouts and as such must, on occasions, doll up in knee breeches and bare legs. In Scotland he wears a kilt; in Biarritz he dons a "beret." He fills many honorary academic positions, for which he must wear the appropriate robes. He is an elder brother of Trinity House, a benefactor of Middle Temple and a chancellor of the University of Wales, just to mention a few of his obligations. His court dress alone would keep a tailor shop busy. His sporting clothes constitute another formidable item because he belongs to several hunts and each has its distinctive dress. Then he has his ordinary clothes, with his own original ideas about sox, shirts, ties and hats. Being slim and straight he wears clothes well, and carries his six and seven-eighths hat on a cocky tilt toward the left ear.

The Prince is recognized as an arbiter of fashion, but his intimates say he never deliberately tries to set a new fashion. With the matter of clothes he is himself interested and determined. He fancies a certain fashion he adopts it, and his taste is so good that he is copied. Over a dozen London tailors hold Royal warrants "By Appointment to H.R.H. the Prince of Wales," indicating that they serve him. He changes his clothes many times a day, and even when he is on a train the proper clothes go with him and he dresses en route. This obligation of always being properly dressed must be a fearful trial to him. The ordinary man would certainly raise a howl if compelled to go through what the Prince has to do as a matter of course. Yet he is always neatly turned out, with the inevitable stick or umbrella.

Before long the Prince will be faced with the prospect of moving. Marlborough House is being redecorated and he will be obliged to vacate so that the Prince could move in but he wouldn't hear of it. He said he had been lost there, and that he preferred his quarters little "digging" in York House. But Queen Mary is personally interested in getting the Prince suitably quartered, and to some this has suggested a possible Princess of Wales in the near future.

The Prince has several large holdings in the British Isles, the most important of which is his estate in Cornwall. He is taking a lively interest in his three farms. But outside of England his chief delight is his ranch in Alberta, Canada. He is looking forward happily of visiting it late this year in connection with his proposed journey to Canada. He says he wants to get on some old clothes and fish and hunt like a regular fellow.

FROSH BEAT FACULTY IN H. S. BASKETBALL

Youngsters All Ticked Up Today Because They Gave Mentors Trouncing.

Freshmen students were in royal mood today, as they went about their studies at the South Manchester High school—all because their basketball team defeated the faculty yesterday afternoon. The score was 18 to 16.

The game was supposed to have been a practice affair, but it seems that the Freshmen secretly agreed the news and at game time, the Franklin school gym was crowded. If Elmo Mantell is worrying about his future marks, his referring to it did not show it, for he called "As foul" on the faculty and 1 of the Freshmen.

Elmo is the Freshmen coach.

THIS SCOURGE WAS DRAGGING HIM DOWN

ALL-BRAN gave him new lease on life when it checked constipation.

No matter how chronic constipation has become—no one need give up hope of relief. Read Mr. Williams' cheery message:

"I am on the down-grade in life. Never had any sickness, but of late years have been troubled with constipation. Began to make up my mind that I was about done up. Have taken tablets, eaten fruits, etc. did not get much help. Began to use your ALL-BRAN twice a day and gained 5 pounds. Feel like a fighting cock. Bowels are regular. You have certainly done a lot for me."

L. C. WILLIAMS, Bushville, N. Y.

ALL-BRAN is guaranteed to relieve constipation. Eat two tablespoons daily—in chronic cases, with every meal. Doctors recommend Kellogg's because it is 100% bran—100% effective.

Delicious with milk or cream—and add fruits or honey. Ready to eat. Fine in cooking. Sold and served everywhere. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek. Recipes on package.

WORLD'S SAFEST PLACE ON RIVER'S BOTTOM

The safest place in the world will be deep in the mud and silt of the Holland river bed, when the Holland tunnels under this river will be opened to automobile traffic. The opening is expected in the early part of 1927.

Every possible means of protection to motorists has been employed, at a total cost of more than half a million dollars. This does not include safety devices originally installed as part of the tunnel system. It covers only the electrical and mechanical apparatus used there.

The entire tunnel system costs $42,000,000.

Thought for the comfort and safety of the thousands who will use this means of travel between New Jersey and New York has occupied the minds of the greatest tunnel engineers of the country, as well as scientists of the U. S. Bureau of Mines.

At the Pittsburgh experiment station of the Bureau of Mines, detailed tests on the limit of carbon monoxide that is permissible in a tunnel without injury to the motorists were made.

Apparatus Warns of Gas.

The result of these tests was the invention of an apparatus, by S. H. Katz, associate physical chemist, that keeps a constant record of the poisonous gas in the tunnel and rings a warning bell besides lighting a danger light, when the volume exceeds the danger point.

Only four parts of the carbon monoxide gas in 10,000 parts of air has been determined as the maximum mixture to which a person may be exposed for an hour without noticeable effect. The danger signals of the carbon monoxide receiver are set for this point.

Further thought for safety is expended even down to the lighting. In this regard, every other light is connected to a New York power house, with the intervening lights connected to a New Jersey power house. This is true also for the ventilating units, so that one may continue to work if the other breaks down.

Even if both power houses stop at the same time, there are auxiliary lighting and ventilating sources, to keep the tunnel safe.

Latest in Traffic Control.

Three kinds of traffic signals will keep the tunnel from accident—green for "go ahead," red for "stop" and a special "stop engine" signal for emergencies. It is part of a complicated but thorough system for directing the tunnel's traffic with the smoothest and quickest precision.

Besides a traffic officer at every 450 feet, with a traffic light at every 240 feet, there is a central traffic control board in the New York administration building, conforming with every light in the tunnel, so that the course of traffic mishaps can be followed with ease. Fire-fighting apparatus within the tunnel is supplemented by others, with wrecking trucks, at either end of each tube. If the tunnel ventilation system goes wrong, the special "stop engine" signal is flashed, to keep more poisonous gas from endangering the motorists.

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE GARRETT FOLSON is absorbed to death while swimming at Ocean Town, N. J.

Folson's bathing companions had been ROGER NEVILLE, a business partner; MRS. HELEN BARNABY and CARMELOTTA VALDON.

ANASTASIA FOLSON, eccentric and masterful player of the dead man, takes command. At the inquest it is learned that the death weapon was a picture, an Oriental knife, and it had been bought on the boardwalk.

It is learned that one CROYDON SEARS is a foot of suspicion. He admits buying two knives but not the picture. Anastasia engages TYRUS RIGGS, an architect, to work on the case. DAN PELTON, the dead man's nephew, arrives and is puzzled by some curious French dolls in Folson's room.

"The knife," said Croydon Sears, who, saying little, was listening to Stone.

Croydon Sears sends for FLEMING STONE, famous detective. He tells him Folson had been black-mailing him and he had lied at the inquest but was innocent.

Stone meets others of the circle, including MRS. HARRISON, a widow, MADELINE, and begins quietly to work. In Folson's room, Stone asks Pelton to produce the dead man's papers, and it comes to light that Carmelita Valdon had stolen some letters from them. Suspicion immediately falls on Carmelita.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XLII

"It isn't ridiculous, except that it's not wise to jump at conclusions so rapidly," said Riggs. "But I have felt all along that Mrs. Valdon knows more than she has admitted, and that she is a woman of—"

"Of murderous impulses and of desperate passions and capable of any crime!" Miss Folsom ranted on. "I knew her sort the moment I set eyes on her, and that was some years ago. She made a dead set for my brother, and they had an affair which, she thought, would end in Garry's marrying her—but it didn't. Garry was just a little too smart for that! But there was a bit of a scandal, and somehow or other Garry kept the whip hand. Since then Carmy and I have been friends outwardly, and she and Garry were seemingly friends, but she was afraid of him."

"Not afraid of him," amended Pelton, "but he had some letters of hers which were perhaps a bit indiscreet. These she naturally wanted to get back after his death. No woman wants her letters flaunted to the public. So, not unaturally, she tried to get them. She knew it would be useless to appeal to the police, and she doubted the wisdom of asking my aunt for them, so—"

"You know a lot about it, Dan," said his aunt, with an accusing glance.

"I do, Aunt Stasia, and I'm telling all I know, because—well, because Mr. Stone rather implied that openness was the best way out."

"I'm not sure I implied all that," Stone said, and his face was grave. "Much depends on the nature of those letters. If they were merely indiscreet love letters, they might bring no suspicion on Mrs. Valdon. But if they were of a threatening nature, or proved a real intent for revenge—"

"They couldn't be as bad as that," Pelton said, and was stopped by his aunt.

"Shut up, Dan," she advised. "You've fallen for that woman, as you do for every specimen of that shrew type. Given a low, wailing voice and a pair of dark, love-hungry eyes, and any woman can vamp you! Now drop her before you get in too deep. Before you get the reward your Uncle Garry got! I suppose she begged you for that packet of letters. By the way, haven't it been all the time? I haven't seen it."

"I took care of it," Pelton said, obstinately.

"I know you did. But where did you find it? In the suitcase?"

"Yes. And I just laid it aside for the moment. I knew she never killed uncle. How could she?"

"Why couldn't she?" retorted his aunt. "She stood next him at the rope; that we know. Stood at his right-hand side. So she had motive and opportunity. As to the weapon, we've no real reason to assume it must have been one of those antique things. It may have been a hotel carving knife. Any woman clever enough to plan and carry out such a scheme of murder would be quite clever enough to manage the weapon part of the business. Now, Mr. Stone, there's your criminal; go and get her!"

Had the case been less serious, Fleming Stone would have been amused at the emphatic declarations of Miss Folsom.

She was striding up and down the room, her bobbed hair, escaped from the influence of brilliant, waving in quivering tufts. Her black lace evening gown was short and the great red rose at her shoulder shook on its stem as she gesticulated with her bare arm, which was held, now aloft, like the Statue of Liberty, and now straight out, as she pointed, in emphasis, at one or another of her hearers.

Interested hearers, too, for Miss Riggs was getting a new light on the beautiful Carmelita; Croydon Sears was beginning to see a way out for himself, and Fleming Stone was hearing and weighing this information, so freely given and rapidly assigned to its true place in his collection of evidence.

"Gently, gently, Miss Folsom," he said, looking at her kindly. "I know you think you have discovered the one who killed your brother, and it excites your sense of justice, but remember we haven't proved anything, and, indeed, have little to bank on. A packet of love letters and a position next to Mr. Folsom on the rope in the ocean. I see no more than that, and that, dear lady, is not enough."

"It's enough for me!" Anastasia Folsom's eyes snapped. She snatched up one of the dolls that was perched on the mantel.

"That's the type she is!" she exclaimed as she waved the puppet in the very face of Fleming Stone. "That's the type of Carmelita Valdon; a woman with a serpent's soul!"

The doll, a superior specimen of French art, did indeed look like Carmelita, so much so that it was surprising. But it had a sly, even sinister, expression beneath the lurking smile, and the exquisite features, while fascinating, were those of a wicked, designing nature.

Fleming Stone was interested. "It does look like Mrs. Valdon," he declared.

"Of course it does," Miss Folsom said scornfully. "My brother was a fool about women, or rather, never he could find a doll who reminded him of one of his favorites he bought it. All of these represent his sweethearts."

Anastasia was a strange mixture of scorn for these amours of her brother and a staunch loyalty and love for the man himself, whatever he might do.

"Why pick out the doll, then?" Title Riggs said, thoughtfully. "Maybe the human prototype of some of these other dolls was the guilty person."

"No," and Anastasia took his suggestion seriously. "You see, I know many of these. I don't mean personally, but I happen to know more or less about them. No doll here is the image of a person down here, except that one."

"I gave a doll to the girl, Myrtle, in Pelton, thoughtfully. "She chose one herself—said it was Uncle Garry's favorite. Maybe she's the—"

"Oh, nonsense about the doll!" Miss Folsom cried, impatiently. "I'm not using that point to fasten this thing on Carmelita Valdon. I only say she had the real reason to want Garry out of the way, and she had the nerve and the wicked soul necessary to the deed."

"And the opportunity," put in Riggs.

"Those things are all required," Stone said, smiling a little at the girl's repetition of the hackneyed terms, "but there are other things to be considered. A murder case as this one we are considering is the result of careful planning and preparation. Your ordinary bather does not carry a sharp knife around in his pocket, or on the chance of wanting to kill somebody in a hurry. Nor is that such a knife easily come by or easily carried about. It means premeditation and that means a long time and definite purpose. Now, Mr. Folsom, only arrived here the night before, so whoever killed him prepared for it in a hurry. I mean, in a hurry at the last moment. To me it seems that some one, who had the murder in his heart, and rapidly assigned to its true place in his collection of evidence. Gently, gently, Miss Folsom," he said, looking at her kindly. "I know you think you have discovered the one who killed your brother, and it excites your sense of justice, but remember we haven't proved anything, and, indeed, have little to bank on. A packet of love letters and a position next to Mr. Folsom on the rope in the ocean. I see no more than that, and that, dear lady, is not enough."

"That—and I think it was bought at the auction room—is a clever dodge. I am not sure that it was one of the knives bought that night; it may have been bought at any time, or, indeed, bought here from elsewhere. But it does seem to indicate a lover or collector of the antique, and that may or may not be a clue. Probably not, for to my mind a collector would use any weapon rather than one of his own curios."

"Yes," agreed Croydon Sears. "I certainly should have done so." (To Be Continued)

Stone admits, in the next chapter, that a beautiful lady leads his list of suspects. But who is it?

GLORIA'S NEW ANKLE LENGTH SKIRT

Does Her Approval of It Spell Concealment of Exposed Hose?

By BETSY SCHUYLER.

New York, March 11.—Hooray, we have something startling to write about. Gloria Swanson has fashioned the long skirt. This sartorial sensation, almost caused the fashion writers of this metropolis to put an extra out on the street, after it happened.

For Gloria was the only lady present at the wedding of Mrs. Katharine P. Shiras to Pierre A. Bodard, who did not reveal the customary length of extra sheer, flesh colored hose. Her gown was at least 12 inches longer than that of the bride, with only the tip of her blue slippers visible.

They Took Notice.

Naturally everybody who was present sat up and took particular notice of what was happening right before their eyes. You can't miss Gloria in any gathering, but when she is the matron of honor, playing second lead only to the bride, you can't miss such details as skirt lengths.

The frock was a very effective affair of powder blue chiffon, trimmed with flowing sleeves and wispy panels of periwinkle blue, and with it she wore a very wide brimmed and picturesque hat of blue horse-hair braid. White orchids, a happy choice in flowers, were pinned to her hair.

The bride wore gray chiffon over a lovely fuchsia shade, with large hat to match, and her bouquet was of white gardenias and orchids—a very effective combination if you should ask Lois Wilson, who was there in a short lace frock, looking charming as usual.

Fashion Leaders.

It does take these film people to start things, and I always give Miss Swanson the benefit of any sartorial doubts. I saw her in a simple yellow chiffon frock the other day that was down conforming with her ankles, so I imagine she herself is in the matter, but whether she is powerful enough to padlock our knees or not remains to be seen.

Of course you know Gloria long since let her hair grow out to the shoulders, and it is colliable—and I must say that she is a real individual with a bun at the neck and than she was with clipped hair. But then much of her charm has always been the perfectly unbelievable things she could do with braids, puffs and odd bits of hair.

The Woman's Day

No matter how they yowled, one president's wife simply would NOT expose her throat and arms at an inaugural ball. She was Mrs. Benjamin Harrison whose inaugural ball gown of pearl brocade with gold embroidery had point lace at the throat and elbow sleeves. She said: "If there is one thing above another I detest it is being made a circus of, and that is what has come to me in my old age, as it were. I've been a show and the whole family's been a show since Mr. Harrison was elected. But I don't propose to be made a circus of forever!"

This story is in a new book called "White House Gossip," by Edna M. Colman. A nice book to give mothers and grandmothers and great-nephews whom it will inspire to remembrance.

This "Feminism"

Whether one, man or woman, does or does not agree with the ladies of feminism, none can fail to enjoy such lucid expression of the ideas of the modern woman as are in Leah Morton's splendid autobiography, "I Am a Woman—and a Jew." Bolder down like this—"A man decides he wants a family, a wife, and he has them. But he never forgets, while he is father and husband, that he is, all the time himself—and must live that own life of his in his career."

Be Ye Ready!

Some day a bright young man, or woman, mayhap, will approach you with a glittering look in his—or her—eagle eye and demand to know your three favorite books. Be ye ready! Everybody's doing it! It's spreading like chain letters. I wonder what mine are. When I was 12, "Tempest and Sunshine," by Mary J. Holmes came first. Today I might be induced to substitute "Les Misérables" or "Jean Christophe" or "World's Illustrious" or "American Tragedy" or "Thunder on the Lett."

Bachelors and Kitchens

Some Brooklyn bachelors who are chasing a back-to-the-kitchen movement by renting kitchenette apartments and insisting on cooking their own food, are kept up as grave rebukes with a "for shame!" to our young ladies who will not return to the kitchenettes, also, but who insist on dining out after their day's toil. Oh, well, by the time the boys have cooked for us many congratulations as the girls, they'll be ready to eat out, too—at least, ready to stop their own cooking, and perhaps by that time, the girls will be ready to take up their pristine toil!

Whose Job?

Because his wife made him cook the breakfast cereal and give the baby his bottle, a Philadelphia judge awarded a divorce to one Ralph Stalker. The question of how much if any, housework a husband would do is a real question today. It's because many wives work outside the home all day, and work as hard as their husbands do, it is rather natural for them to wonder why they, who pay their due share for the home's upkeep, should come home at night to dusting and cooking and dish-washing any more than should "He."

That's true okay, but so many wives forget that "He," too, has certain home duties which are just taken for granted as his alone—the furnace to be stoked, the clothes carried out, the screens to come off and on, the painting and hammering and piano moving to be done. After all, it balances fairly well with the domestic duties.

Share Moral Burdens

By Olive Roberts Barton

Is it fair for one parent to take all the moral responsibility in regard to the physical and mental welfare of the children?

Sometimes in a crisis, a decision has to be made. It may be a matter of operation. It may be a matter of calling upon the child to make a sacrifice. It may be a matter of reproof or punishment or any of the thousand problems that come up in his training.

When I say moral responsibility, I mean just that. Moral responsibility is the responsibility that takes courage to back it.

Often one parent is apt to dodge the issue. He or she slips out from under and allows the other one to handle the situation alone.

I have in mind the case of a child who was ailing and whose parents had been told by specialists that an operation was necessary. The father refused to give his consent. The mother also refused.

Time went on. The child got worse—still a refusal.

In time it became a matter of the child's very life—the focus of infection would have to be found and removed.

The father still refused because he knew in his heart that the mother would give her consent in the face of his opposition. Hers would be the responsibility if things went wrong. He was too cowardly to back her up.

The child did have the operation—and died. And the mother is laid up to this day, by the father, as a murrain. Where he should have shared the responsibility, he refused and now he is being cruel about the consequences.

It is of course not always so drastic. It is not always a case of life and death. But the principle is there.

Parents should stand shoulder to shoulder in a crisis. They should talk things over and if things do go wrong, there is no one to blame.

The Lovely Paris Girls

By Edna Wallace Hopper

I have made 25 trips to Paris in my quest for beauty. I go there as regularly for beauty aids as dress-makers go for styles.

Every year I find girls prettier, women younger. And I know the secret for myself and you the latest ideas and helps. All Edna Wallace Hopper's beauty aids, supplied by the best counter-ers, are kept up to date. I want them the best in existence.

My Youth Cream is one of them. It is more than a face cream. Several great complexion aids are embodied in it, including products of lemon and strawberry, and other important factors.

Youth Cream comes in two types—cold cream and vanishing. I use one at night, the other in the morning. Never is my skin without this cream to foster and protect it. My complexion at which millions marvel is largely due to that.

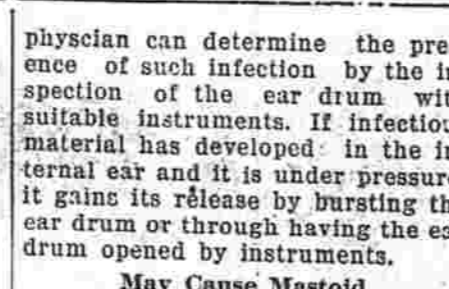

Please learn what my Youth Cream does. It will bring you an entirely new conception of face cream. Ask at any toilet counter—Mrs. Edna Wallace Hopper, 327 North Dearborn, St. Paul, Minn.

Good Nature and Good Health

INFECTION OF EAR TUBES MAY CAUSE DEAFNESS

This is the fifth in a series of articles on personal hygiene by Dr. Morris Fishbein, one of America's foremost medical authorities. Other articles in this series will appear daily in succeeding issues of this paper.

BY DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN

Editor Journal of the American Medical Association and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine.

The proper care of the ears ordinarily involves special attention to the nose and throat.

When infected, the infection usually comes from the nose or throat by the way of the eustachian tubes. The purpose of these tubes is to keep the air pressure equalized on both sides of the hearing apparatus. Adenoids growing near the openings of these tubes sometimes shut them off, preventing them from draining and encouraging infection.

The wax in the ear is a normal substance if it is secreted in ordinary amounts. Sometimes it seems to develop in excess and it may cause sufficient blocking to produce deafness. Almost any specialist in diseases of the ear can rectify numerous instances in which persistent deafness from five to thirty years have been instantly healed by the removal of hardened wax.

Easy to Clean

The canal of the ear may be cleaned by carefully syringing it with warm water, wiping the walls later with a bit of cotton. On the other hand, the best advice is never to put anything into the ear smaller than one's fist.

The use of hairpins, ear spoons, or other homemade instruments should be deprecated because of possible damage to the lining of the external ear canal or to the ear drum. If the lining is damaged infection may occur and one of the most irritating, the meanest, and the most difficult of infections is a boil in the internal ear.

Small babies are likely to put playthings into the ear. These should be removed by an expert, since awkward attempts result in laceration. Insects sometimes fly into the canal and become fixed in the ear wax. An incident is recorded in medical literature in which a man carried a cockroach in the internal ear for twenty-four years, during which period he was completely deaf in that ear. Washing out resulted in immediate improvement in hearing.

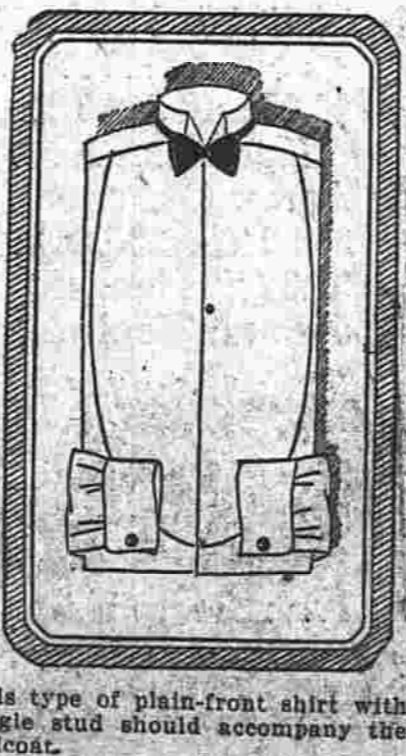

Babies who are too small to indicate the place of their pains sometimes develop high fever and other serious symptoms because of infections of the ear. A competent

PRIZES AND DEATH

Bloomfield, N. J.—Tony Lungo, truck driver, who achieved fame by eating meat balls at a sitting, won a $100 bet here by devouring 25 frankfurter sandwiches in two hours. He drank two glasses of water, one of orangeade and went home under his own power. At Middletown, N. Y., on the same day, Sidney Condichini was running and beating a frankfurter, strangled and died.

Lone Stud

There are dozens of different dark, medium and pastels colored felts at The J. W. Hale Company which are being sold in the domestic department. These are cut in quarter-yard pieces for making felt hats, or you can buy them by the yard, if you would like to make embroidered articles.

Incubator Hatches 75,000 Chicks Daily

Leo A. Bourke (inset), is the founder of what is believed to be one of world's largest chicken hatcheries. A view of the interior of one of the plants shows an aisle of 18,000 eggs.

Petaluma, Calif. — Seventy-five thousand new orphans every 24 hours are hatched here.

That reads like the start of some gigantic catastrophe, but in reality it is quite constructive.

The 75,000 is the total of baby chicks hatched each day in the peak season of an incubator plant costing a half million dollars which has just been opened here. The plant has a hatching capacity of 1,800,000 chickens every three weeks.

Man has harnessed electricity to do the work, so that it may well be said that electricity has become "the greatest mother of them all."

Plant Is Enormous
The capacity of this plant is said to be nearly double that of any other hatchery in the world. It represents the rapid progress made by Petaluma, already famous as "the world's egg basket," since 1925, when Leo A. Bourke, head of the hatchery, erected a plant of 900,000 chick capacity.

Bourke is one of these "single-track" men you often hear about. Ten years ago he started with the idea that electricity would be a better and more faithful mother to chicks than would the brood hen or any other heating agency previously used for artificial incubation of eggs.

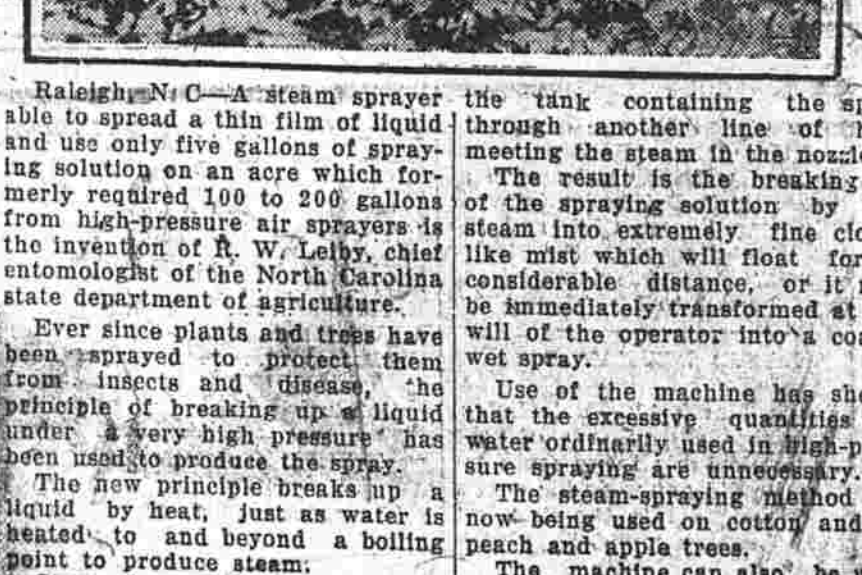

His first hatchery handled 100,000 chicks each three weeks. By 1923, when fire destroyed the plant, its capacity had gone to 400,000. Bourke rebuilt on a scale of 600,000 capacity, but in less than four years has grown to three times that size.

High Voltage Stepped Down
Electricity is brought into the plant over 4,000-volt wires and stepped down in voltage and amperage to meet hatching needs. None of the great manufacturing plants of the San Francisco bay region use as much electricity as this egg hatchery.

Here are the statistics revealing the extent of the enterprise: 225,000 hens laying eggs for the hatchery.
100,000 eggs set each day.
75,000 chicks hatched each day.
1,800,000 eggs to each of 10 aisles of incubators.
3,750 separate incubators.

Nothing is left to chance. The eggs are turned each 20 minutes by helpers who work all around the 24 hours of the clock.
Not only is his the largest hatchery in the world, but similar plants also located here turn out an equal volume of newly hatched chicks.
All but 1 per cent is of the White Leghorn variety, to be raised both for food and laying purposes.

STEAM SPRAYER HELPS FARMER FIGHT PESTS

Raleigh, N. C. — A steam sprayer able to spread a thin film of liquid and use only five gallons of spraying solution on an acre which formerly required 100 to 200 gallons from high-pressure air sprayers is the invention of R. W. Leiby, chief entomologist of the North Carolina state department of agriculture.

Ever since plants and trees have been sprayed to protect them from insects and diseases, the principle of breaking up a liquid under a very high pressure has been used to produce the spray. The new principle breaks up a liquid by heat, just as water is heated to and beyond a boiling point to produce steam. Steam is passed from a boiler through a rubber hose to a nozzle. The spray is conducted from the tank containing the spray through another line of hose meeting the steam in the nozzle.

The result is the breaking up of the spraying solution by the steam into extremely fine cloud-like mist which will float for a considerable distance, or it may be immediately transformed at the will of the operator into a coarse wet spray.

Use of the machine has shown that the excessive quantities of water ordinarily used in high-pressure spraying are unnecessary. The steam-spraying method is now being used on cotton and on peach and apple trees.

The machine can also be used to paint buildings, disinfect utensils by live steam and cleanse farming machinery and autos.

NEW PEST HITS WHEAT
Walla Walla, Wash. — A new pest is claiming in England this year have led many poultrymen to install elaborate systems of artificial sunlight in their coops to increase production. The lights are switched on at 3 o'clock in the morning, making the hens think it is time to be up and laying.

DUTCHMAN IS LAIRD
Glasgow — Chieftain of the Clan Mackay is Alexander, a young man of many titles. He is Baron MacKay in the Netherlands, the thirteenth Baron Reay in the British peerage, and is a baronet in Nova Scotia. He also is the world's tallest peer, being 6 feet 9 1/2 inches and carries it all well.

SHIPS CREW ALL WOMEN
Rome — The Russian freighter Kard Marx recently arrived at the port of Leghorn manned by a crew composed entirely of women. They wore men's uniforms and had short hair. The ship's captain, a man, said he never had sailed with a more diligent and active crew.

DOG FASTED TEN WEEKS
Springfield, O. — Sappo, 11-year old setter, was trapped for ten weeks in the sub-cellar of a barn. She disappeared and was given up for lost when found by wreckers. The dog weighed 54 pounds normally, but, without food or water, shrank to only 19 pounds during her imprisonment.

LOVE BIRDS TO JAPAN

TRY S. C. FARMER
THIRD TIME FOR MURDER OF FIVE

Twice Convicted Slayer of Family, Bigham Now Gets New Trial.

Conway, S. C.—Edmund D. Bigham twice convicted slayer of his family of five goes into the prisoner's dock here again on March 16. The Florence County farmer, middle-aged and well-to-do, will stand trial for his life a third time here on a charge of venue. His second trial was held here in September 1924. For six years he had been under the shadow of the electric chair while his counsel waged one of the longest legal battles on court records to save him. Twice Bigham has heard the death sentence fall from the lips of a judge. On six separate occasions he has watched his fate go to the state's highest tribunal, the Supreme Court. Bigham's third trial has been postponed on several occasions, the last time because his wife, the prosecution's star witness, was unable to attend the trial due to illness.

Remains Silent. Throughout his six-year career in the South Carolina courts, Bigham has maintained an almost stoical silence, gave to intermittently protest his absolute innocence of the wholesale manslaughter, and to decry the state for "sending up an innocent man." Bigham maintains that his brother, Smiley Bigham—one of the five victims—wiped out the family of five on January 15, 1921, in a characteristic "fit of madness" and then ended his own life by suicide. The state, on the other hand, will demand a death penalty for Bigham for a third time, contending that the one-armed prisoner murdered the Florence County family in order to become sole heir to an estate, which at the time was estimated to be valued at around $100,000. Bigham is accused of the slaying of his aged mother, Mrs. M. W. Bigham, his brother, Smiley Bigham, his sister, Mrs. Margery Black, and her two little adopted boys, John and Leo McCracken.

The murders occurred on the Bigham plantation near Pamplico, S. C. A discharged pistol grasped loosely in the hands of Smiley Bigham at first led the officers to believe that Smiley Bigham had committed the wholesale slaughter and then killed himself. However, Edmund Bigham was arrested a few days later and was charged with the crime. He stood trial in the Florence County court and was convicted. After months of vain effort, counsel for Bigham obtained a new trial. He was convicted again, and for a second time sentenced to pay the extreme penalty. On the date for the third sensational trial approaches, this little South Carolina town is preparing to take care of the colorful circus crowds that are expected to witness the trial here. More than 200 witnesses from Florence County alone will testify. In some parts of Greenland, when a child dies, a live dog is buried with it to guide it through its journey to the other world.

Chicago Sports Putting Money on Long Shots in Kentucky Derby

Chicago, March 11.—An international thing will add color to that hectic afternoon of May 14 when the wild mob gathers at Churchill Downs, Louisville, Ky., to witness the big renewal of the famed Kentucky Derby. Five entries, which first kicked a stable wall in dear Old England, have been entered in the classic, and one of these, The Satrap, is regarded as a certain starter. The Satrap is owned by William du Pont, Jr., who set down in his trousers for $100,000 last year to purchase this English-bred colt, by The Tetrarch out of Scotch Gift. The du Pont entry is attracting wide attention among Chicago's future book betters and is rated by many to win or place. Bets in the future books are being made. The Satrap at odds running from 10 to 1 to 15 to 1. Justice F. and other English-bred Derby entry, is also a hot favorite with Chicago track followers. This horse is owned by William Daniel. Many Chicago track players who bet heavily on Justice F in the New Orleans Derby hope to get even by following Daniel in the Kentucky scramble. Enthusiastic Edward, another English horse entered at Louisville, was a winner last year in England and is now said to be ready. Osmond, owned by J. E. Widener, is first choice in many of the future wagers—bookmakers. Odds on Osmond are ten to one but these are expected to shrink sharply as Derby Day approaches. Osmond is the winner of the Flash Stakes, Eastern Shore Handicap, Grab Bag Handicap, National Stakes and Nursery Handicap. He was third in the California entries in the future books. Only a few of the big books are in operation at this time but shortly after April 1 a large number of books, large and small, ready to cover any future book bet, will be in operation.

FINAL TONIGHT IN A. AND N. PINOCHLE

The final sitting of the Army and Navy pinochle tournament will take place tonight with Shields and Harry McCormick leading by something more than 100 points. Next in line to the leaders are Mathiason and McNally, who are followed by Lamprich and McCaughey. The last sitting produced McNally and Mathiason as winners with 1147 points. Harriet and Quish were second with 1129 and Lamprich and H. McCormick third with 1093. Following are the scores of the leaders: Shields, H. McCormick—5396. Mathiason, McNally—5242. Lamprich, McCaughey—5099.

MAN AND WIFE WIN F. D'AMICO'S SWIM

John D.'s Maid Finishes Fourth and Frank Is Invited to Celebration at Rockefeller Home.

A letter received today from Harry Flavell, formerly a resident here, from Ormond Beach, Florida, states that the recent ocean marathon arranged by Frank D'Amico, well known Manchester litigant, was a success. The five-mile swim from Daytona Beach to Ormond Beach, in which a large number of well known southern swimmers participated, was won, strange to say, by a man and his wife, the latter finishing first. John D. Rockefeller's maid finished fourth, the letter stated. After the swim Frank D'Amico was invited to a congratulatory party at the Rockefeller summer home. Florida papers praised D'Amico highly for the success of the marathon. Pigeons in search of gravel are damaging the masonry of some of London's public buildings.

YOUTHS' HOBBIES

EXHIBITS IN FAIR

Unusual Show Planned For Hollister Street School Next Week.

For several weeks the Eighth School District pupils have been hearing the word "hobby." This morning at the Robertson School, Director Washburn of the Manchester Community Club addressed the assembly on the subject of "hobbies." He said a hobby may be said to be a favorite plan or pursuit. It is something that one takes to naturally, or is particularly adapted for, and which is a source of genuine pleasure and enjoyment. It may be one of hundreds of useful activities which provide means of diversion from daily duties or studies which tend to become monotonous. To sum up briefly it may be said that in a hobby, whether for child or adult, will be found a recreational outlet for these ideas which are constantly springing up in one, yet have no place for expression or development in one's regular duties. It has well been put that in the hobby of the boy, you find the big idea of the man.

Mr. Washburn and Mr. Bentley with committee of teachers have been working on a novel scheme called a Hobby Fair which will be held at the Hollister Street school on Monday afternoon and evening of March 14.

Briefly stated, the purpose of the Hobby Fair is to assist juveniles to develop useful talents, to encourage them along lines of constructive effort and provide a medium by which they may receive some recognition for time spent in honest endeavor.

Just as one person becomes famous as a collector of art, another a collector of coins, a third a collector of rare stamps, so every boy and girl shows a penchant for making or collecting some articles which he or she prizes. And since the boy is father of the man, these hobbies often make a lasting impression of the future lives of the collectors, sometimes yielding material profit as well as enjoyment.

Some boys or girls are "born collectors" carefully filling away and treasuring each object in its proper division or class, others have constructive turn of mind and prefer to make their own prized possessions such as bird house, dog kennel, knitted sweaters, flowers, etc. Then, too, it gives parents an opportunity of learning what the children's likes and dislikes are and reveals what such children can do.

By promoting healthy competition it provides not only encouragement to the boys and girls but provides them with an opportunity of learning from the experience of others.

Such a fair provides the key to what line of human work and endeavor a boy or girl is best suited. It reveals where the boy's or girl's heart is—for which occupation they would best be suited.

The general director of the Hobby Fair will be as follows: 1—Hobbies made at home by yourself. 2—Hobbies collected at home by yourself. 3—Hobbies or things made in school. 4—Hobbies or things your parents have collected. 5—Things that you think might be of interest to other people from the European countries.

Among some of the entries are birds, butterflies, stamps, sea shells, bugs, specimens of different kinds of wood, books, historic newspapers, sera, books, antique furniture, old china and many other things of interest both to the older folks and young alike. Many specimens of beautiful needlework will be shown. The community at large is invited to show articles that may be of interest. Each exhibitor has been asked to have each of his or her exhibits tagged with his or her full name and address on it. All articles will be taken care of carefully by the committee and exhibitors need not feel hesitant in the care of their exhibits.

Joseph Dean will have charge of plotting the floor space and the arrangements of the exhibits. The Boy Scouts of Troop No. 1 will be on duty during the fair. Mr. Imeson will be in charge of the scouts. Information by prospective exhibitors may be had by calling either Mr. Bentley at the Eighth District school or G. H. Washburn at the Manchester Community club.

Men's Mode

By WALTER J. BROOKE

New York, March 11.—That there can be distinction in hats is an accepted fact with the better dressers. Although the American public attires its head with the greatest uniformity, certain little differences are always noticeable in the headgear of those who place faith in the axiom: "Be well dressed and you will be successful."

A shape in felt hats that is receiving the commendation of the carefully attired man who wishes to escape uniformity with the average, has a slightly tapered crown and a brim that is a little narrower than that which has been current on soft hats.

The snap brim hat has won a strong position that this spring will see the majority of men's heads covered with that type. That is the reason for the shortened brim on the hat mentioned.

The type of snap brim hat that has been in vogue has a brim deemed too wide to lower in front to the best effect. Although the new brims are only slightly narrower, the difference is effective.

because even a slight change in hat proportion is noticeable when the hat is worn.

Gray and Tan Best Gray and light tan are considered the best shades in felt hats for spring. Pearl gray is the favorite. A new color that holds promise of real popularity is a beige, or something the shade of a chamouis glove.

The felt hats for spring have a plain edge, a welted edge or a bound edge. The first is the logical hat for wearing in the snow down manure, although the bound edge gives practically the same effect.

The Welved Brim When a welted brim is worn, it should have an even finish with no raw edges showing. The welt should be very narrow—not more than one-eighth of an inch wide, or preferably, one-sixteenth.

Another thing about these new spring hats that should be understood by the better dressers is not shades that are being worn. If you can stand color on your head, if you are willing to get the once-over at every turn, if you can stand your wife's or best girl's bickerings, if you are aware of the commotion you will create, and still think you look well—then wear a pastel shade. Otherwise do not.

STOLEN; ONE CHURCH

Dallas, Tex.—A colored Baptist preacher and one of his deacons engaged in controversy with the congregation. So the preacher took hammer and axe and tore down the church, while the deacon stood off the members with a gun. Now the two are charged with theft of the church, its value quoted at $45.

This year the United States will allow 154,667 immigrants to enter the country.

9 BURNED TO DEATH

Salisbury, Pa., March 11.—Nine persons lost their lives in a fire of undetermined origin which destroyed the home of Clarence Marsh, in Tunnelton, near here today.

The dead: Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Marsh and their five children Mrs. Harry Montgomery and one child. Only one occupant of the house, a frame structure, escaped with his life. He was Harry Montgomery, whose wife and child perished in the flames. Montgomery leaped from a window.

The fire is believed to have started shortly after one a. m., when discovered it had gained such headway that it was impossible for neighbors to attempt to save the victims trapped behind curtains of fire.

Less than twelve hours before the Marshes had attended the funeral of Marsh's sister-in-law. They returned to their home late last night.

While authorities could not ascertain definitely the cause of the fire, because of the charred condition of the ruins, they believe an overheated stove may have been responsible.

A British surgeon declares that fat-haired persons are more able to ward off disease than dark-haired ones.

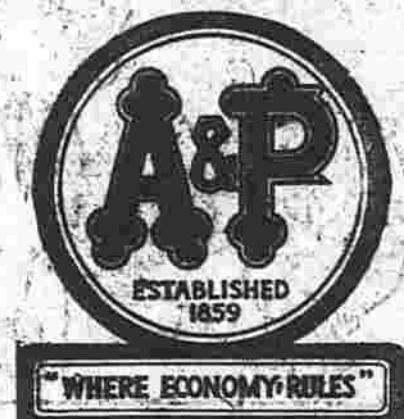

PLAN OLD MAIDS' HOTEL

Washington.—To aid in eliminating the housing problem for government employees, a hotel exclusively for "old maids" has been proposed for this city. The plan includes the building of a number of small, cozy "courtin' parlors" where guests may entertain their friends.

WINE TRADE IN FRANCE INJURED BY PROHIBITION

Champagne Makers Hard Hit With Loss of Sales in United States.

Paris.—Three-fourth of the so-called French wines, champagnes and liquors distributed by American bootleggers are poor and sometimes harmful imitations.

Bootleggers prefer to handle liquids of strong alcoholic content because a little goes a long way in the fabrication of concoctions resembling slightly in taste and color many pre-war and pre-prohibition delicacies.

The American market is almost a total loss to French wine producers, nor are other markets taking sufficient additional supplies to make up the deficit.

Count Bertrand De Mun, member of the French Chamber of Deputies and creator and secretary of the French Wine Exporters' Commission, thus sizes up present conditions in the French wine industry in so far as America is concerned.

American Orders.—"Occasionally we have a big order from Canada, Mexico or the Bahamas, which we believe may be destined for the United States," says Count de Mun. "But the consignment is always paid for on delivery at Havre or Bordeaux where it goes from there doesn't interest us."

"French exporters have no dealings with American bootleggers. The bootleggers prefer to work through intermediaries, thus dividing the risk.

"I doubt if much of the French product ever enters the United States. Bootleggers' profits on stronger spirits are so much greater and their risk is less since the quantity can be less but still appreciable."

The champagne industry in which the Count de Mun is particularly interested, since he is connected with the Veuve Cliquot Ponsardin Company, has been especially hard hit by prohibition.

The United States took four and a half million bottles annually of a total production of thirty million bottles.

The Count de Mun has only faint hopes that the prohibition amendment will ever be repealed. But he expects the Volstead Enforcement Act to be modified permitting importation, sale and consumption of French wines.

France To Stay Wet.—"America will realize eventually that the prohibition, experience is based upon formidable error," he declared. "The error is the prohibition of healthful products with those which are injurious and harmful. French wines, which have proved themselves beneficial over several countries, eventually will be admitted."

Asked if he believed France would ever adopt prohibition the Count replied with an explosive, "Certainly not."

"France is a nation of old culture," he said, "which has always produced wine and has always known how to appreciate and consume the wines she produced. She does not suffer from the inconveniences of not knowing how to use wine."

"France knows perfectly well that the consumption of wine prevents alcoholism."

NEW COAL "SILOS" HERE COMPLETED Manchester Grain and Coal Company Now Possesses Latest in Equipment.

The Manchester Grain and Coal Company announces today the completion of its new, modern coal unloading and distributing plant at Apol Place in the north end.

This equipment consists of four large concrete silos holding five cars of coal each with mechanical apparatus that unloads and screens coal from the railroad hopper under the track by just pulling a lever.

The loading of the coal from the silos to trucks or wagons is done by gravity by just pulling a lever. At the same time the coal runs over a screen and again the coal is cleaned. This eliminates all dust dirt or small coal.

SHIPS CRASH IN FOG, FREIGHTER IS SUNK

Most of the Crew Rescued But Several Are Reported Missing.

New York, March 11.—One freighter was sunk and another badly damaged today in a low-on collision in the fog near Robbins Reef, off Greenville, New Jersey.

Members of the crew of the sunken vessel leaped into the water with life preservers. Most of them were rescued by tugboats but it was reported several men were drifting in the fog.

The freighter which sank was the El Sol, of the Southern Pacific line, bound from Galveston to New York with cargo of cotton.

The other vessel is the Sao City of the American Diamond line bound for Annapolis.

The El Sol carried a crew of forty-six. Captain Knoels was in command. It was reported there were several passengers on one of the freighters.

PHONES Pinehurst "GOOD THINGS TO EAT"

3 PHONES CALL 2000

In The Meat Department

Allyn Avery and Walter Gorman have ready for you selection (and please remember that whether you come to the store or telephone 3000, your order will receive the same careful attention) an attractive display of Pinehurst Quality Meat Products.

Just received a fresh shipment of Honey Butter). PINEHURST QUALITY CORNED BEEF

To meet the constant demand for extra lean pieces of corned beef to slice; this week we have a number of Boneless Rumps, Shoulders and similar lean cuts. Of course we also have the regular ribs for hash at 12c lb.

SHOULDERS OF LAMB Each week the call continues for Shoulders of Lamb, boned and rolled, to bake and serve with baked potatoes and brown gravy. We can cut them any size from 3 1/2 to 6 lbs.

PINEHURST STEAK "Oh Boy! What a peach of a steak you gave me this noon," remarked a customer to Mr. Avery yesterday. "Can you give me some more just like it to serve tonight? I am giving a little party tomorrow night and steak like that will tickle the boys." And we can give him some just as good, because Pinehurst steaks are cut from heavy beef, aged long enough to be right—so they just must "be different." Nice sirloins tomorrow at 51c lb. Remember we cut our sirloins short. Tender tip minute or Porterhouse steaks. Mushrooms to go with them—69c lb.

PRIME RIB ROASTS Boned and rolled or standing Rib roasts make a dandy meat course for your Sunday dinner.

POT ROASTS Boneless Chuck Roasts, top cut 25c to 30c lb. Bot- tom cut 35c to 40c lb. Cross Rib Pot Roasts, Lean Tender Rump Roast or Sirloin Tips. PINEHURST SAUSAGE MEAT

The same Pinehurst Quality—fresh ground Brightwood Pork seasoned with pure spices and iodized salt. Satisfaction guaranteed. PINEHURST HAMBURG

Makes a good Meat Loaf, meat balls, or is mighty tasty baked in the oven covered with bacon and onions.

DO YOU KNOW that we will have Corned Tongues weighing about 3 1/2 lbs. each. Corned Spare Ribs, Corned Pigs Feet, Honeycomb Tripe, Fresh Spare Ribs, Fresh Brightwood Pork Shoulders, Boneless Shoulder Hams, Daisy Ham and Beef Liver.

LARGE FRESH EGGS, ONLY . . . . . 37c dozen POULTRY Quality guaranteed. Fresh Roasting Chickens weighing from 5 1/2 to 6 pounds each. Fowl for fricassee—the tender milk fed kind—any size you wish from 4 to 5 1/2 lbs.

BACON IN THE PIECE, Special 3 lbs. for $1.00 Leg of Lamb for roasting, Boneless Veal Roasts, Lean Salt Pork, Liverwurst, Jellied Corned Beef, Pimento Veal Loaf. PURE LARD . . . . . 2 lbs. 29c SUGAR . . . . . 10 lbs. 87c TUB BUTTER . . . . . 55c lb. Waldorf Tissue, 7 rolls . . . . . 51c Royal Lunch Crackers, 2 lb. box . . . . . 33c No. 2 Cans Tomatoes . . . . . 2 cans 29c Quart Jars Sweet Mixed Pickles 49c jar Again tomorrow we will run the special on 3 boxes Sharkor Salt for 25c.

TALKING ABOUT FLOUR Try a 5 or a 2 1/2 lb. bag of King Arthur. There's a difference. Again Saturday (we have about 3 cases left, and the special will be "on" when this is sold out). Large cans 1/2 slices Sliced Pineapple, 2 cans 49c, limit 4 cans to a customer.

Fruits and Vegetables With Mr. Nelson in charge of this department, we are showing larger sales each week. Mr. Nelson not only "knows his Vegetables" but he realizes the importance of selecting stock for telephone orders just as carefully as for personal selections. Telephone 2000, you can depend on us for quality vegetables. 4 lbs. Sweet Potatoes . . . . . 25c Hothouse Cucumbers . . . . . 25c Green Peppers . . . . . Tomatoes . . . . . Celery Green Peppers . . . . . Fresh Leoberg and Powell's Lettuce Hard Heads of New Cabbage . . . . . Bunch Carrots . . . . . Beets (If the shipments reach Hartford in time we will have fresh Cauliflower and Spinach.) Parsnips . . . . . Red and Yellow Onions Grape Fruit are at their best—we have them 2 and 3 for a quarter—special prices on dozen and half dozens. Ripe Bananas . . . . . Nuts . . . . . Florida and Navel Oranges Figs

DELIVERY SERVICE To speed up Saturday deliveries we take telephone orders until nine Friday night and run a special early delivery out as soon as Fresh Bakery, Milk and Cream is received Saturday morning. If it is convenient, will you please help the delivery men by phoning 2000 tonight. FRESH BAKERY Raisin, Rye, Whole Wheat Bread, Parkerhouse and Hawk Rolls, Cup Cakes, Crullers and Doughnuts. ## Ten Moving Picture Leaders To Address Harvard School

Cambridge, Mass., March 10.—The lectures will be open only to members of the regular course in business policy in the school. Mr. Kennedy will open the course on Monday, Mr. Hays will appear on Tuesday.

This is believed to be the first time that a large institution of learning has taken up the study of the motion picture industry, an unusual field for intensive study inasmuch as within a short space of time it has gone through processes of organization, financing and improvements of methods that normally require several generations. Men with the industry at its beginning are still in active control.

The Men's Society of the Swedish Lutheran church will have their meeting this evening at 7:30.

Prof. Roland H. Patch who is to address the Manchester Garden club on Monday night will address the Connecticut Gladiolus society at the Hotel Bond tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 on the subject "Fertilizers best suited for the Flower Garden."

The executive committee of the Town Players will meet in the School Street Recreation Center on Monday evening at 8 o'clock. The committee is composed of the organization and the chairman of the extension committees.

Mrs. Roy G. Hapgood of Whitefield, Me., is visiting her mother, Mrs. Coleman Kelley of 130 Center street. Mrs. Hapgood is accompanied by her little daughter.

Mrs. John Doggan of Pearl street will attend the flower show in North Bergen, N. J., next week.

POLICE COURT

Edward Duplase, who is employed at Tinker's garage, was before the Manchester town court this morning for driving a truck with improper brakes. He was placed under arrest by Patrolman John J. McGinn, who testified that both the foot and emergency brakes were absolutely of no value. Duplase maintained both brakes were looked over in the forenoon and were in good condition.

W. R. Tinker, Jr., was present and said he would be willing to take an oath that the car had not been touched and he would like to have anybody go down and test it. As there was no damage done and there was a question about the condition of the brakes, Judge Johnson suspended judgment.

John Carlson who lives at Highland Park was found helplessly drunk on Porter street yesterday afternoon. He had apparently fallen in the woods and could not get up. Some of his neighbors called the police and Chief Gordon had him brought to the police station where he was detained for the night. This morning he pleaded guilty to intoxication and paid a fine of $10 and costs. Carlson claimed he had broken some of his ribs and went to see a doctor after leaving the police station.

NOBODY HOME WAS THE RULE LAST NIGHT

Theaters, Trade School, Auto Show and Other Things Called Most Folks Out.

Varied entertainments kept Manchester folks away from home last night. It is roughly estimated that fully 4,000 spent the evening in some place of amusement. It was one of the busiest nights Manchester has had in a long time.

A capacity crowd jammed the State theater and State Trade school, the latter attracting over 600 for its Parents Night. The Auto Show was another major attraction which drew a large crowd. Other places which were well attended were the Circle and Rialto theaters, Get-Together club meeting at Cheney hall and Chamber of Commerce meeting. Many Manchester persons also attended the benefit boxing show at the State armory in Hartford.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to thank our many friends and neighbors for the kindness and sympathy shown us, in our recent bereavement in the death of our husband and father; also for the beautiful floral tributes.
