

SPEED LIMIT CHANGED TO REASON RULE

Senate Bill States That No Auto May Be Operated At a Rate That Endangers Life.

Hartford, March 16.—The Senate today passed a bill which would repeal the thirty-mile speed limit and establish in its place "the rule of reason." The new bill states that the operation of a motor vehicle at a rate of speed to endanger life shall be prohibited. Then the Senate passed a bill which would allow persons sixteen years of age to operate a motor vehicle, the present law reading that persons must be at least eighteen years old.

The House has a controversy today over the amount of fees a town clerk shall receive for issuing fish and game licenses. The matter was referred again to the fish and game committee for more consideration. J. Howard Roberts, of Thomaston, objected to an unfavorable report on a proposed increase and his motion to refer was carried despite a statement that a bill was coming in that would allow an open season on deer, using shot guns and bows and arrow in hunting, were rejected by the House.

Salary Increase.

An increase in the salary of the insurance commissioner, boosting his pay from $5,000 to $7,500 a year, was recommended in a favorable report from the appropriations committee of the Senate. Two claims for damages against the state were allowed under suspension of the House rules, the first being reimbursement to Edmund Singer, of Danbury, to the amount of $1,450 for injuries received while in the National Guard and the second was reimbursement to Lena Bryan, of Norwich, in the amount of $1,000, for injuries received while at work in Long Lane farm, Middletown.

Bills Rejected.

Repealing all game laws on quadrupeds, and bills reported unfavorably and rejected by the House today included: reimbursing Joseph Antonelli of Norwich, for damage to his automobile on a highway; repealing all game laws on quadrupeds.

DEADLY DRUGS LOST; LONDON IS EXCITED

Police Search All Night For Tubes—Fear That Children May Think Them Candy.

London, March 16.—Following a frantic all-night search police today recovered 170 of 240 tubes of deadly drugs which vanished yesterday while enroute to a hospital in the crowded east end district of London.

The tubes contained Novars-Gobillon, one of the most potent of drugs, and were being transported by a man in a motor car. Police today searched for the remaining seventy tubes of the poison. Children, it was said, are especially in danger of being poisoned by the drug, as the tubes in which it is contained are packed in pretty orange-colored boxes similar to candy boxes.

Some of the tubes which were recovered were taken from children who had found the tubes in the gutter and were playing with them. The police today issued a warning to the public not to break any of the tubes if found.

Teachers in all schools read the warning to their pupils.

PROBES TO MEET

Detroit, March 17.—Senator James Reed, Democrat of Missouri, today sent telegrams to all members of his primary fund investigation committee calling them to Washington for a conference Saturday.

The slash fund committee will consider the Pennsylvania situation at the meeting, it was learned. Senator Reed said he planned to leave Detroit Friday night following the week-end adjournment of the Ford-Sapiro libel suit.

PIONEER DIES

Key West, Fla., March 16.—Dr. J. Y. Porter, Sr., who made the first demonstration of the mosquito law of yellow fever transmission, died here this morning at the age of seventy-five following a lingering illness.

He served in the regular United States army from 1875 to 1907.

ENTOMBED IN WELL OVER 13 HOURS.

Corlith, N. C., March 16.—After thirteen hours of toil, a crew of workers early today rescued Jeff Ashworth, farmer, who was entombed forty feet down in a well.

Ashworth was lifted to the top of the well early this morning, after the rescuers, working in shifts of three throughout the night, had removed one by one the big stones on the side of the well, which had caved in and imprisoned Ashworth.

FIVE WOMEN DIE; DOCTOR SUSPECTED

Last One Names Physician On Death Bed—Expect an Arrest Today.

Portland, Me., March 16.—Deaths of five women, victims of illegal surgery, were being investigated by the authorities of Cumberland and Androscoggin counties today and indications pointed to the quick arrest of a Lewiston physician.

The physician over whom the lead of suspicion hung was implicated when Nellie Seaton, of Richville, died following an illegal operation. On her deathbed she told police sufficient, they said, to support their arrest of the doctor, whose name was withheld.

Four Others

Investigation of the deaths of four other women revealed information which police said points strongly to illegal surgery. Sheriff King F. Graham, who opened the investigation of the Seaton girls' death also has been investigating the deaths of the other women.

Deceased statements, only can be used as evidence against the physician excepting for more conclusive proof from others who may have knowledge of the operations or witnessed them. In several instances the four deaths other than the Seaton girls' statements were obtained from the dying girls but while they were unaware that they were about to die.

Have Clear Case

In the absence of the required evidence, although the information furnished to the office has been sufficient to lead them to believe they have clear cases against the doctor, further investigation will be required.

In the death of Miss Seaton, however, Sheriff Graham is satisfied she died of illegal surgery and armed with her lying statement, the arrest by Androscoggin county authorities is expected momentarily.

REBELS OUTNUMBERED

FIGHTING DESPERATELY

Diaz Troops Trying Today to Finish Civil War in Nicaragua.

Managua, Nicaragua, March 16.—General Moncada, commander of the rebellious Liberal forces, today desperately attempting to pit his scanty fifteen hundred men against nearly four thousand better equipped and better armed Diaz troops who are attempting to administer a final coup de grace to the rebel forces and thus bring an end to Nicaragua's civil war.

In the fighting yesterday the government troops captured the town of Tierra Azul and occupied May Muya after overcoming stubborn rebel resistance.

Another six hour battle occurred at San Jeronimo in which the rebels gained an initial success, but later retired with the loss of two machine guns and a number of rifles. These activities all occurred within a radius of thirty miles.

DIVES UNDER WATER

TO SAVE TWO WOMEN

Policeman in Full Uniform Ex- tricates Women Trapped in An Automobile.

Atlantic City, N. J., March 16.—Trapped when their sedan plunged over an embankment into the cold waters of the canal here, Mrs. Charles Doolin, wife of the former manager of the Philadelphia National League baseball club, and a woman friend, were saved from death early today by a policeman's heroism.

Mrs. Doolin, who was driving, apparently mistook the location of the bridge, and the car plunged into the water after tearing away a length of guard railing.

Faustmann, William Coleman, on his beat near the scene, heard the car inside the water without waiting to remove his uniform. The car was lying on an angle in nine feet of water. Breaking one of the windows, Coleman fought his way inside the car, and dragged out the women, both of whom had lost consciousness. They were taken to Mrs. Doolin's home here, while Coleman was taken to a hospital.

EMPTY AUTO RUNS AMUCK ON MAIN ST.

Without Driver It Rushes Through Traffic For Sev- eral Blocks—Local Youth Stops Runaway.

Many tales have been written in the past about daring feats of men who stop runaway horses, but it is seldom that a runaway auto figures in such tales.

Yet this rare opportunity presented itself last evening and but for the alert eye and speedy action of Edward A. Williams, of the Waranoke hotel, a serious accident might have occurred. It seems that a Chevrolet sedan, which Joseph Then, of 143 Franklin street, Meriden, the owner, said he left parked on the west side of Main street across from the Salvation Army citadel, broke loose and started on a rampage down Main street which at that time was in the midst of the 9 o'clock traffic.

Escaped Collisions

How the runaway, and pilotless, automobile dodged its way through the heavy traffic until it reached Park street, no one seems to be able to explain. When Williams saw the car, it was rolling back north again toward Birch street, and was heading straight for a brand new Paige sedan parked on the east side of the street.

Williams hastened to the runaway machine, reaching it just in time to put his hand through the open window and turn the steering wheel enough to prevent a collision.

Reported to Police

Williams then brought the car to a stop, drove it across the street, and reported the matter to Patrolman Michael Fitzgerald. The owner of the car, when he learned of the incident later in the evening, was surprised as he insisted he left the automobile parked across from the Salvation Army. Mr. Then is boarding at present on Summit street.

NORTH END SPLITS AT REC HEARING

Bowers Plan For Eighth Dis- trict Privileges Boosted and Opposed at Hartford.

(Special to the Herald)

Hartford, March 16.—About twenty Manchester people, most of them North Enders, appeared before the Cities and Boroughs committee at 1:30 at the State Capitol today when a hearing was given on the bill which would allow the Eighth School and Utilities District to go into recreational work.

The bill in question was drawn up by Judge H. O. Bowers, who has been seriously ill at the Memorial hospital for weeks, and Attorney William S. Hyde represented Mr. Bowers at the hearing and spoke for the bill. He explained just what it would mean and said it was nothing more or less than a copy of the bill which gives the Ninth District Incorporated the same recreational privileges.

Among those who favored the bill were Wells A. Strickland, W. W. Robertson and Scott Simon. Some Opposition

Those who appeared in opposition to the bill were Dr. F. A. Sweet, president of the Eighth School and Utilities District, and Police Commissioner Edward J. Murphy, who is also a member of the Town School Board.

Dr. Sweet maintained that there should be a referendum clause whereby it would come back to the people of the district before final passage.

Mr. Murphy was opposed to it because he said it meant that maintenance of the Manchester Community club would be thrown on the district.

In rebuttal Attorney William S. Hyde stated that not one dollar could be spent for recreational work until the voters of the district voted in favor of it.

PROBING JAIL BREAK

Joliet, Ill., March 16.—The Will County Grand Jury today was ordered into session next Monday to hear evidence in the spectacular jail-break of three Mexican convicts, under sentence of death for the killing of Deputy Warden Peter Klein of Stateville Penitentiary. While Judge Frederick Hill was issuing his Grand Jury call, Warden Elmer Green of the penitentiary went to question Nathan F. Leopold, Jr., about his alleged connection with the plot to poison the guards and effect a wholesale delivery of 1,200 convicts.

FLOATING UNIVERSITY NOT A GRAND SUCCESS

One Fourth of Students Ab- sent at Paris Roll-Call

Prefer Night Clubs to See- ing the Battlefields.

Paris, March 16.—Roll-call of the students of the "Floating University" on board the S. S. Ryndam was a scant affair today.

When the roll was called at 8:30 this morning at least one-fourth of the students failed to answer "present." The report was spread that the large number of absentees were due to many of the students attending "night classes" at the Montmartre cafes last night.

The Ryndam arrived in Havre yesterday. The spirit of "flaming youth" was very much in evidence today. The faculty had arranged to take all of the students on a tour of the battlefields, but a good many of the students seemed to prefer Paris to seeing the scenes of the World War.

This sightseeing is boring, said one student who admitted he had no intention of visiting the battlefields. The same student bragged that he hadn't attended a class since the tour started.

"Because of trouble we had in Japan we were notified four months ago that we probably would not receive university credits for the tour, so what was the use," explained the student.

Henry J. Allen, former governor of Kansas, who is dean of the "Floating University," still believes the idea is a good one, although he admits that probably the next attempts will not be co-educational.

Got Education

"Two-thirds of the students have received a liberal education," said Gov. Allen. "The remainder have failed to profit by the tour. It was a great adventure in education and like every other initial step, had many faults."

Governor Allen said that due to the co-educational arrangements there had been some "normal" "floating university" aboard the ship. "The students were eager to talk of their adventures and their high spots seemed to be the report that one male student had committed suicide at Batavia by jumping overboard and the burning out of the ship's dynamo by excessive use of electric toasters and hot-plates."

Most of the students did not appear to be greatly impressed by the sights they had seen on the world tour.

The students will travel to Belgium by land and rejoin the ship at Amsterdam, being due in New York in the first week of May.

JUDGE BOWERS'S CONDITION

At the Manchester Memorial hospital this afternoon at 2:30 it was reported that Mr. Bowers was about the same as he was yesterday. He appeared to be just a little more restless today.

RUNAWAY GIRL OFFERS JUDGE A CIGARETTE

Yonkers, N. Y., March 16.—Sixteen-year-old Anna Hollister's stage dreams are squelched today, and a lack of respect for the Yonkers judiciary is partially responsible.

Arraigned before City Judge John J. Broderick on a charge of running away from her home in Beunington, Vt., the girl calmly offered the judge a cigarette. He told her she needed a spanking. She will be sent home.

CHINA'S CIVIL WAR NEARING CLIMAX TODAY

Cantonese Have Cut Railway Near Shanghai—Cheng- chow Captured by Chang; Other War Fronts.

China's civil warfare seems to be approaching a climax today. Reports that the Cantonese have cut the Shanghai-Nanking railroad are again current, although official confirmation is still lacking.

In Honan Marshal Chang Tso Lin has captured Cheng Chow from his ancient enemy Wu Pei Fu, who has been forced to withdraw to Leyang. Thus the Fengtien troops have cleared the obstacle in their way for drive against the Cantonese in Hankow.

General Chang Tsung Chang, present defender of Shanghai is reported to have demanded that the city pay him a tribute of $5,000,000 by Friday. If this tribute is paid it is anticipated that Chang Tsung Chang will withdraw to his own province and let Shanghai fall to the hands of the Cantonese. If his demand is refused it is said he has hinted that he will return to Shanghai's doors with consequent looting and disorder as a menace.

Marshal Chang Tso Lin is quoted as stating that he is prepared to issue a statement to the Chinese people urging a rapprochement between the north and south, providing the Cantonese rid themselves of their alleged Bolshevik influences.

CHEN CHOW FALLS

Pekin, March 16.—Marshal Chang Tso-Lin has dealt a severe blow at his ancient enemy Wu Pei Fu and has put himself in a position to menace the Cantonese control of Hankow by capturing Cheng Chow.

An official communique issued today states that Cheng Chow fell to the Fengtien troops last night. General Chin Yunao who was defending Cheng Chow is in retreat to the west and Wu Pei Fu has fled.

Fengtien adherents now predict that Honan will pass completely under Fengtien control and that they will be able to strike a blow at the Cantonese in Hankow.

First Success

The fall of Cheng Chow is the first success which the forces of Chang Tso Lin have gained since the Pekin war lord decided to force action against Wu Pei Fu, who refused to co-operate in the Pekin efforts to open an offensive against the Cantonese.

Wu Pei Fu was reported to have been willing to co-operate with Chang Tso Lin, but his subordinates were opposed to such action and permission was denied to Fengtien troops to enter Honan in

MARIE, PEACEMAKER FOR PRINCE CAROL

Queen of Jugo-Slavia Trying to Have Prince Visit Father in Bucharest.

Paris, March 16.—Queen Marie of Jugo-Slavia is to attempt the role of peacemaker between King Ferdinand of Rumania, her father, and Prince Carol, her brother, according to information reaching Prince Carol.

Prince Carol told the International News Service today that there has been no development in his negotiations for permission to return to Bucharest to visit his father, since he rejected a proposal that he leave Mme. Lupescu and return for a reconciliation.

"I am not worried," said the exiled prince. "My father and I are slow at making decisions."

There have been some intimations to Prince Carol that unless he accepts the conditions offered him—the abandonment of Mme. Lupescu—his allowance may be cut off. This apparently does not worry either Prince Carol or Mme. Lupescu.

"We'll take a less expensive place in the country and get along without servants altogether," said Mme. Lupescu today. "I can go to work. I have worked before and I can do it again."

MISS AGNES WEHR WINS $100 CHEST

South Main Street Girl Takes Xmas Chest Off Hands of Bank.

"I'm so surprised! No, I don't know what I will do with the money. I haven't had time to think yet. But you can bet I'm happy, though."

So said, this morning, Miss Agnes Wehr, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Conrad Wehr of 128 South Main street, who last night was the lucky member of the Christmas Club at the Manchester Trust Company to win the $100 chest of gold the depositor's key to which has so persistently failed to show up.

Miss Wehr is employed in the office of Dr. John J. Allison, dentist, at his office at 2 Pearl street.

White Elephant Gone

With the departure of the chest of gold, bank officials breathed a sigh of relief for they have had a hard time disposing of it. Early last December, after the close of a campaign for new Christmas Club members, each of whom had been given a key to the chest, the trying of keys began. In the months that have followed, although many tried their keys, several hundred holders neglected to do so—and among the ones that fitted, somewhere, is the one that fits the lock.

At last, after due notice, the bank officials announced that the chest would be disposed of otherwise, every keyholder having an equal chance.

Last night the names of each of the some 3,000 odd members was placed in a box and, with Mayor Robert V. Treat and Thomas Ferguson, managing editor of The Manchester Evening Herald, presiding, a small boy was called from the gathering at the bank to draw out the winning stub.

Bank officials were pleased that Miss Wehr won because she was one of those who at least tried to unlock the chest. There has been a superstition that some one too indifferent to try his key would win, after all.

Police Find Body; HINT AT MURDER

Man Terribly Beaten and Left In Park—Is Identified Quick- ly.

Worcester, Mass., March 16.—The body of George N. Flagg, 35, of Holden, identified only after several hours investigation by police was found today in Hadwen Park. Murder is the theory which police give as the manner of death, for the man had been terribly beaten.

Medical examination revealed that the chest had been crushed, struck upon the face and head. The latter induced bleeding which contributed to death.

Police believe that Flagg was kicked and beaten as he lay on the ground. Appearances indicated that his body was then dragged to the park borders near the Boston & Albany railroad tracks.

APPROACH TO PARK SOON TO BE FINISHED

Stone Work at Center Springs To Be Resumed Within Short Time.

Included in the work of the Park Department for the coming few weeks will be the completion of the stone approach on Main street to the Center Springs park. It is expected that the work, once resumed, will take about two weeks to finish.

Work on a new plot at the junction of Woodbridge and Mather streets at the North End is planned. Curb has been laid around this plot and the surface of the land must be graded and planted with grass and shrubs.

The park department is going to get along without the $5,000 which was cut from its appropriation for there remains a surplus of $2,300 from the appropriation of last year. This amount, however, will not allow the department to do a great deal of work.

A good deal of the park department appropriation was used up this winter in cleaning walks in the Center park and around the little plots which are located in various parts of the town.

HARTFORD CONTRACTOR TO SERVE TWO YEARS

Hartford, March 16.—A defense based on the fact that he was in the "dangerous age of the forties" failed to save Charles E. Johanson, 42, Hartford builder who has confessed to bigamy, in Superior Court here today. Johanson was sentenced by Judge Newell S. Jennings to serve from one to two years in state prison.

Johanson was first married in Hartford, June 12, 1918, and has a four-year-old daughter. He married Miss Catherine Hansen, of Hartford, last June in New York after a whirlwind courtship. Joseph M. Frieman, counsel for Johanson, entered the "dangerous age plea" saying that Johanson and Miss Hansen were madly in love and planned to marry after the first wife had secured a divorce.

THE LIFE OF CHRIST

Doing Good on the Sabbath

Jesus, seeing Matthew, "sitting at the receipt of customs," said, "Follow me," and Matthew left his place, and followed Jesus, becoming one of the Twelve. (Matt. IX: 9)

Jesus, healing a paralytic, on the Sabbath, at the Pool Bethesda in Jerusalem incurs the anger of certain narrow Sabbatharians. (John. V: 2-8)

Jesus also offends the narrow Sabbatharians by plucking and eating the ears of corn on the Sabbath. (Luke VI: 1-5)

Jesus also heals a man with a withered hand on the Sabbath, saying to his critics: "Is it lawful on the Sabbath days to do good, or to do evil? to save life, or to destroy it?" (Luke VI: 6-11)

GRABBING THE SEASHORE.

While the financial condition of Connecticut may be such as to render the purchase of seashore property for state park purposes impracticable at the moment there is another argument brought against the purchase of Gardiner Point, in Groton, with which we have very little sympathy and not too much patience. Interested persons from Groton told the Committee on State Parks and Reservations yesterday that the land in contemplation was "too good for a state park" and destined to be "developed into one of the finest summer resorts in the United States."

There is already a pitifully small amount of all desirable sea frontage in this state to which the people as a whole can gain access. Year by year the beaches and lands along the Sound are being dedicated to the exclusive use of cottage owners—a class large in fact but extremely small compared with the whole population of the state.

A quarter of a century ago this would have meant little to the dwellers in the inland towns and cities, for their opportunities to reach the salt water were too infrequent to seem worth protecting. Now, however, the automobile has changed the whole aspect of the situation. Tens of thousands of persons living at considerable distances from the sea can reach it—it they can find any point of contact with it. And it would seem to be an inherent right that they be not debarred from access to the seashore by the unrestricted private ownership of what ought to be a common heritage!

To argue that the hundreds of thousands of Connecticut's inland folks should be excluded from an especially beautiful shore spot merely because it would make a pleasant place for a few scores of families to monopolize is to lose sight of the whole purpose of the state park idea.

No acre or hundred acres of ground on Long Island Sound, from Barum Point to the Pawcatuck river, is too good or too lovely or too desirable to private owner or development company or golf club to be dedicated to the free use of the men and women and children of Connecticut—if we can manage to get hold of the money to pay for it.

And the interests of individual towns that greedily hope for more and more taxes from private owners of shore property, and fear beyond anything the loss of such taxes should the state take over the property, are entitled to mighty little consideration as against the well being and interest of the entire population of the commonwealth.

PART TRUTH.

Rear Admiral Frederick C. Billard, commandant of the United States Coast Guard is a gentleman and a sailor of the finest type. He renders an old fashioned thick-and-thin loyalty to his service that would be wholly admirable did it not, perchance, lead him into paths of speech that must be extremely uncomfortable for an upstanding, forthright man of his stamp to follow.

Admiral Billard unquestionably adheres absolutely to the technical truth when he declares that the "paramount, historic work of service in saving life and property at sea" has not been sacrificed to the business of chasing rum runners, as has been charged. But we very much doubt if Admiral Billard would go so far as to say that the notoriously scamped and impoverished and handicapped Coast Guard service is now, or ever has been, anywhere near as efficient in that paramount purpose as it would be if he or any of his predecessors had been able to get, for the purposes of that paramountcy, one-tenth of the appropriations that have been spent in equipping it as a prohibition enforcement unit.

Nobody knows better than Admiral Billard—because he has been all through it—the impossibility of getting from Congress, from any Treasury Department or from any

President, the recognition that the Coast Guard has merited for decades—or anything like sufficient, appropriations for adequate ships or sufficient personnel—for the Coast Guard of "service in saving life and property at sea." Nor, latterly, with all the money that has been spent on speed boats and rum chasers, has anything adequate been done in the interest of the Guard's major purpose. The most that Admiral Billard can say—for he would not lie about it—is that the major functions of the service are no worse handicapped than they have always been. And this in the face of enormous special appropriations for the rum hunting job that has been put upon it.

The question that might be asked of the Coast Guard commandant, which would really be to the point, would be: If you could have had a tenth of the money spent on the prohibition enforcement work of your service, to employ instead for the purposes for which the Guard existed seven years ago, how many sailors could you have saved this winter who have been drowned?

We would give something to hear the Admiral's answer to that question.

IT FITS IN.

It is difficult to think of any spot into which the Presidential prerogative of increasing duties under the flexible tariff law would fit any better than in the schedule on Maraschino cherries, which Californians are asking Mr. Coolidge to increase by 40 per cent.

California's competitor in this commodity is Italy, and Italy under Mussolini is producing heavily and at very low labor cost—so low that the present duty of about two cents a pound is claimed by the Californians to be insufficient to protect them against ruin. Also the policy of Fascist Italy being to buy nothing abroad that by any possibility can be produced at home, while selling abroad everything that can possibly be spared from home consumption, there is no necessity of considering any give-or-take quality as needing to enter into our tariff relations with the "New Rome."

Maraschino cherries are not exactly a staple of existence and if the price goes up a little as the result of raising the duty nobody will be hurt—unless it may be some of the Fascist farm owners and the Fascist exporters of Italy; while on the other hand the addition of a little protective duty may make all the difference between prosperity and bankruptcy to a considerable number of California orchardists.

DODGING.

Isn't it often that anybody, in or out of public office, leans quite so far backward as has United States Senator Frank L. Greene of Vermont in refusing to accept $7,500 voted to him by the Senate for medical expenses incurred as the result of his being shot by a prohibition officer who was blazing away at a bootlegger in Washington.

For weeks Senator Greene was desperately ill from his wound and his life was long despaired of. He never wholly recovered from the injury as he walks with difficulty, suffering from a partial paralysis.

Under the circumstances there would not seem to be anything out of the way in his being compensated for the tremendous money cost of such a siege, but this particular senator appears to have "ideas of his own on the subject and politely declines the money."

Senator Greene is not at all a rich man. He was a newspaper editor in the little city of St. Albans before he went to Congress. Perhaps, however, that may account for things. Getting hit by a bullet is something for which almost any newspaper editor is more or less philosophically prepared. Getting a windfall of $7,500 all in a lump, however, is another matter. Perhaps Senator Greene thought, he had had shock enough.

MOVIE TAX.

The proposal to raise about half a million dollars a year through a state tax on the gross business of moving picture theatres, which seems to have been born in the Finance Committee of the Legislature, is one which will stand a lot of examining before being accepted.

Possibly the cinema theatre business as a whole can stand an assessment of something like $1,500 a day. But if we are to raise money by an amusement tax we are prepared to single out one department of the amusement business alone to bear the burden—is such a proposal entirely just?

One thing is reasonably certain: A new tax on the movies, if laid, would have to be paid by the theatres—it cannot successfully be passed along to the public. The motion picture houses are already charging all the admission that the traffic will bear. It is highly probable that the addition of a state tax to the price of the tickets will antagonize enough patrons so that the total intake at the ticket win-downs will be no larger than it is now.

The Finance Committee could hardly have thought up a more unpopular measure if it had set itself about the job with that intent.

DISARMAMENT.

France, in refusing to send an observer to the coming three party naval disarmament brought about by President Coolidge, has at least made it conclusively evident that neither now nor later does she intend to acknowledge marine disarmament as a separable proposition from land disarmament. This position is puzzling enough to those who still believe that France is essentially militaristic and that she would be about the last of all the European nations to consent to the abandonment of a strong army establishment. It is not, as a matter of fact, easy to reconcile, with the peculiar strategic position of that country, which might be expected to be willing enough to rid herself, if possible, of the great financial burden of a large navy while still feeling that her land frontiers must be kept secure by a great army.

There is only one obvious basis for France's position—and that is that she is genuinely anxious for a bona fide disarmament all around. It would be a new thought to a good many Americans if they were to accept the conclusion that just this may actually be the case.

QUEER QUIRKS OF NATURE

THE BEAST WITH THE BAD HABIT

By ARTHUR N. JACK
 President, American Nature Ass'n.

One of the most interesting phases of Nature study is the way Nature has provided various animals with a means of defense.

We are all acquainted with the skunk's only and very efficient weapon, of the wily opossum's trick of playing dead, of the glass snake which obligingly breaks off its tail to escape the enemy's attention while it glides to safety, and many more, but here is one that perhaps you do not know about.

The llama serves as beast of burden, food, and even clothes the natives of some of the South American countries. Long before the Spanish conquest of South America there was a small group of closely related animals in Peru and Bolivia and other parts of South America, of which there were two domestic breeds, the llama and the alaca.

Their hides, their meat and their wool, which is of very fine quality, are of great value, and added to this the fact that they are beasts of burden, often ill-used and overworked may serve as some excuse for their manner of protesting when goaded too far.

If they are urged and abused beyond a point which they consider reasonable, they simply turn their heads and spit full in the face of their oppressor.

Send a stamped addressed envelope and questions of fact having to do with Nature will be answered by the consulting staff of Nature Magazine of Washington, D. C., through arrangements made by this paper.

GILBERT SWAN.

NEW YORK

New York, March 16.—In the vast pageant of starch-faced office workers, over-stuffed papas of the cloak, suit and business world, gaudy figures of the hunger belts and snappy dressers of the avenues, one is certain to be halted by the hint of adventure that lies behind the leather-bronzed skin of an unknown passer-by.

Here in Manhattan the restless of the world halt for a moment between exploits, whether their goal has been the arctic circle or the South American jungles.

For a few days the city swirls around them and often its touch with life and color holds them over a winter. In this interval they generally seek to rediscover the world they have left behind while tapping other civilizations and climates. Frequently they are grabbed for lectures or efforts are made to build them into social lions.

Yet, exploring the side lanes of Greenwich Village, one finds the huge and colorful Stearnson Hotel, a quiet Village side street, where in New York, living in one of those many rebuilt tenements that squat beside the last of the old Italian and Irish residences of the East.

Again one encounters the lean and taut Beebe in from the Gallapagos or some deep-sea adventure. To his studio he attracts artists, writers, musicians, the clever young men and women of the town, and an atmosphere far removed from floating laboratories in strange seas.

Or on an uptown side street, caught between monotonous stone fronts, one comes upon the young and old men of the Explorers' club, whose land have stretched over every land and sea. Some have been caught by the city and bound again to the routine of existence. Here they can come and ease their itching feet with recollections of zebra hunts or honeycombed coral reefs.

A ship-board new arrival from the South Seas calls to their attention the new arrivals from the South Seas.

Famous ones and the known vagabonds of the world drift in and drift out again upon the streets and cast a halo of the far away upon a city intent upon its million little affairs.

Now and then in the midst of the gaiety of a night club a glimpse of this far away is caught. Sometimes it is an unfamiliar uniform. Gugging the handsome figure of a visiting hero from abroad, sometimes an evening coat paraded to display the flowing emblems of a consular attaché. Or in some cafe of foreign name and flavor the alert eye and fevered cheek of a young soldier of fortune betrays the hatching of some romantic plot. Once I saw such a fellow who seemed to have stepped from the pages of Richard Harding Davis. His presence, I was told, meant a slumbering scheme to do a little upsetting in a tiny South American republic.

CUSTOMS PROBE SAID TO SHOW SMUGGLING PLOT

Shoes, Clothing and Autos Sent Across Border On Faked Invoices.

Winnipeg, Manitoba.—A wide-spread conspiracy between American shoe exporters and Winnipeg retailers by which the Canadian customs has been defrauded of thousands of dollars; the scheme of a Chicago clothing house which meant a loss of thousands of dollars in duties evaded; and clever tactics of the disloursers-made at the recent sittings of the federal customs and smuggling probe here.

Shoe firms in Chicago and Boston were charged by officials with deliberately sending fraudulent invoices to the firms in this city to aid them in evading duties and thereby hold a lucrative Canadian trade. One claim against a shoe company totals $12,000 and there are others.

How It Was Done
 Testimony disclosed that the Canadian shoe man would go to the United States, make a large cash deposit on a shipment of shoes and present the invoice of the balance to the custom department as a statement of the total value of the shipment. It was charged that one Chicago firm invoiced a shoe, which they got for $3.75 in the United States at $1.75 to a Winnipeg firm.

Cyril Knowles, assistant inspector of customs, offered the bulk of the testimony in the shoe fraud. When the practices of the American shoe exporters became known to the customs authorities they cut off future shipments, he stated, but the "black listed" exporters sought to evade the law for a long time by shipping goods into Canada under the names of American firms in good standing.

The manager of a local storage company described how he had been the unsuspecting accomplice of a Chicago clothing company in defrauding the customs department.

Foiled Storage People
 Under his arrangement with the United States firm, he accepted shipments for Canadian distribution, received the U. O. D. money orders and remitted them to the clothing exporters. Customs officials discovered that the figures on the invoices were far below the U. O. D. prices collected and notified the storage company of the fraud. Admitting that he had never thought to compare the U. O. D. and the invoice prices, the storage company manager claimed, that he was innocent of intentional wrongdoing.

Chief Justice Brown of Saskatchewan, who was chief commissioner of the probe, severely rebuked the customs brokers who passed the invoices on the imported clothes. W. G. Bell, head of a customs brokerage firm here, declared at the probe that he believed brokers did not expect to be able to tell the exact value of goods they did not know much about. This admission drew a condemnation from Commissioner Brown.

Deacon Flint—Jane, if I die I wish you'd marry Deacon Smith.
 Mrs. Deacon Flint—And why, Amos?
 Deacon Flint—Well, the Deacon beat me on an automobile trade once.

WASHINGTON LETTER

Washington, March 16.—President Coolidge is not at all bashful, personally, about posing for photographs. In fact, it is generally suspected that he is rather fond of it. But you may recall that you have yet to see a picture of the interior of the president's new temporary home, the Patterson mansion on Dupont Circle.

It is very likely that you won't. And it's the president's fault. As soon as it was announced that Mr. and Mrs. Coolidge would reside in the home of the former Countess Giszka, now Mrs. Elmer Schlesinger, a great many bright young men engaged in the business of taking photographs bent every effort to obtain photographs inside the temporary White House.

Mrs. Schlesinger herself had no objection, it appeared. She was rather proud of the old home, in fact. But Mrs. Schlesinger was powerless. Orders had come from the White House that it was not desired to have such pictures appear in the newspapers.

No reason was given for this reluctance, officially. The president of the United States seldom has to give explanations for anything of such a nature.

As the time approached for the president to desert the White House pending repairs, and to move into the Dupont Circle place, efforts were redoubled to obtain the interior views. These efforts likewise came to naught. The camera boys could stand outside and shoot as much as they desired, but they couldn't step inside.

The only suggestion of an explanation, which comes from persons who have been inside the house, is that the president feels the interior would hardly square with the Coolidge tradition of Vermont simplicity. Anyone who has ever been inside the old Coolidge home in Plymouth, Vt., with its huge, lengthy stovepipe bisecting the sitting room, will get the point.

A desire has been manifested from the direction of the White House to stigmatize the simplicity of the Dupont Circle place. But, under the circumstances, that is a rather difficult task. The mansion is vastly more ritzy than any private residence your correspondent has ever seen in the state of Vermont.

It is hardly likely that publication of interior views of this little palace would have any effect on the popular conception of President Coolidge, and the chances are that the president's objections are due to a feeling of modesty. If it were his own, personal dwelling, it might be different.

Photographers are popular with the president and the president's popularity with the photographers. In the first place, he is nearly always glad to oblige and in the second place he seems to know so much about the technique of photography that the boys say he himself would make an excellent photographer. He knows just how to stand to get the best benefit of the light and always helps pull groups together when it's that kind of a picture.

Mr. Coolidge always moves promptly one way or the other, on demand, and he makes sure that all the photographers in sight get a good position on the firing line. Whenever one comes running up late, he is ready to wait for a minute until another picture can be taken.

Photographers are allowed to function in the House of Representatives at the opening and close of a congressional session and when the president comes to make an address, but never in the Senate.

Speaker Longworth, strangely enough, it seemed at the time, ordered all the camera men out of the House chamber by noon when the Sixty-ninth Congress expired. There was to be a celebration, consisting of band music, singing and other high jinks. The supposition was that Longworth feared the scenes would be too undignified for publication.

At any rate, it was rather novel to find the speaker addressing the photographers in the gallery from his chair, while the House was still in session and having attendants chase them out when they tried to secrete themselves in the crowd.

As soon as it was announced that Mr. and Mrs. Coolidge would reside in the home of the former Countess Giszka, now Mrs. Elmer Schlesinger, a great many bright young men engaged in the business of taking photographs bent every effort to obtain photographs inside the temporary White House.

Mrs. Schlesinger herself had no objection, it appeared. She was rather proud of the old home, in fact. But Mrs. Schlesinger was powerless. Orders had come from the White House that it was not desired to have such pictures appear in the newspapers.

No reason was given for this reluctance, officially. The president of the United States seldom has to give explanations for anything of such a nature.

As the time approached for the president to desert the White House pending repairs, and to move into the Dupont Circle place, efforts were redoubled to obtain the interior views. These efforts likewise came to naught. The camera boys could stand outside and shoot as much as they desired, but they couldn't step inside.

The only suggestion of an explanation, which comes from persons who have been inside the house, is that the president feels the interior would hardly square with the Coolidge tradition of Vermont simplicity. Anyone who has ever been inside the old Coolidge home in Plymouth, Vt., with its huge, lengthy stovepipe bisecting the sitting room, will get the point.

A desire has been manifested from the direction of the White House to stigmatize the simplicity of the Dupont Circle place. But, under the circumstances, that is a rather difficult task. The mansion is vastly more ritzy than any private residence your correspondent has ever seen in the state of Vermont.

It is hardly likely that publication of interior views of this little palace would have any effect on the popular conception of President Coolidge, and the chances are that the president's objections are due to a feeling of modesty. If it were his own, personal dwelling, it might be different.

Photographers are popular with the president and the president's popularity with the photographers. In the first place, he is nearly always glad to oblige and in the second place he seems to know so much about the technique of photography that the boys say he himself would make an excellent photographer. He knows just how to stand to get the best benefit of the light and always helps pull groups together when it's that kind of a picture.

Mr. Coolidge always moves promptly one way or the other, on demand, and he makes sure that all the photographers in sight get a good position on the firing line. Whenever one comes running up late, he is ready to wait for a minute until another picture can be taken.

Photographers are allowed to function in the House of Representatives at the opening and close of a congressional session and when the president comes to make an address, but never in the Senate.

Speaker Longworth, strangely enough, it seemed at the time, ordered all the camera men out of the House chamber by noon when the Sixty-ninth Congress expired. There was to be a celebration, consisting of band music, singing and other high jinks. The supposition was that Longworth feared the scenes would be too undignified for publication.

At any rate, it was rather novel to find the speaker addressing the photographers in the gallery from his chair, while the House was still in session and having attendants chase them out when they tried to secrete themselves in the crowd.

Beautiful Teeth

Are very easily stained
 Magnesia removes that stain

There is always a coating on your teeth, called plaque. It clings and stays. Fruits, coffee, tobacco, etc. stain that plaque just as they stain napkins. That is why teeth grow dingy.

Phillips' Dental Magnesia tooth paste removes that plaque in the quickest and best way known. Then those cloudy teeth will gladden the prompt results will amaze and delight you.

But, Phillips' Dental Magnesia does far more. Acid is the cause of tooth decay. It is formed between the teeth and in crevices by fermentation of sugar and starch. It is the greatest enemy of the teeth and gums.

Phillips' Dental Magnesia tooth paste penetrates those crevices. It neutralizes acids instantly. It contains Phillips' Milk of Magnesia—a powerful alkali—in concentrated form. Dentists have recommended it for 50 years to make mouth acids harmless.

Here is the greatest tooth paste men have yet created. It does all things needed in the most efficient way. You should learn how much it means to you, and find that out at once. You will never again go to sleep at night without this matchless tooth protection. Go prove this now.

CIRCLE FEATURES

ANNA Q. NILSSON

Popular Actor in Mystery Picture Tomorrow and Friday; Other Feature on Bill.

Mystery that baffles, mystery that enralls and keeps one wondering. That is the thing that there is most of in the Anna Q. Nilsson picture, "Easy Pickings," which comes to the Circle as one-half of a double feature bill for tomorrow and Friday. The other half, just as good, is "The Final Extra," a newspaper story that tells of the work behind the scenes of a big plant.

Tonight for the last time that wonderfully sweet story, "The Life of St. Genevieve," made in Italy by an Italian company, will be shown. St. Genevieve is the theme of one of the most delightful romances ever thrown on the screen and in this picture the theme has been done full justice.

Anna Q. Nilsson has a new sort of screen vehicle in First National's "Easy Pickings," the mystery thriller that comes to the Circle tomorrow.

The gifted Swedish actress has never been seen to better advantage. From the time she first appears in the picture—in masculine costume—through beautifully-governed participation in series of thrill scenes, to the altogether pleasing romance at the end, she is delightful. Kenneth Harlan plays opposite her.

In addition to the leading man, the supporting cast consists of Philo McCullough, in an unusual "villain" role, Billy Bevan of comedy fame, and Zack Williams, giant negro comedian, as purveyors of a great deal of hilarity; Jerry Miley, Charles Sellon and Gertrude Howard.

George Archambaud, director and Frank Griffin, who produced the picture, keyed up the tense mystery story by William A. Burton and Paul Cruger with inventions of their own for making audiences shiver and gasp. The picture outdoes the most spooky, nerve-tingling stage plays so popular nowadays.

"The Final Extra" is the companion feature. The story moves in a straight line from the start to its stirring climax and the attention interest builds up in increasing tempo as the picture progresses. The plot relates how a club reporter takes up the assignment of an older man who is killed while covering a story for his paper. The results are startling and the denouement makes for some very vigorous action.

One of the most interesting features of this picture is the manner in which several contemporary happenings have been woven into the story. The famous New York "bath tub" affair has been used as an angle and most cleverly burlesqued. The tracing of the man "higher up" in a notorious ring may also be traced in several directions to recent news events; the method of gang warfare as demonstrated in Illinois and many other incidents are cold, hard facts these days and while, in the picture they are pure fiction they bear the stamp of reality.

HERE is the newspaper serial of the year—"Daughters of Midas," an understanding story of life and emotions, of love and ambition and intrigue, written by one of the most unusual women in America.

A young man who gives up his birthright to millions to prove to his father, and to the woman who spurned him, that he can make his own way, three department store girls who are suddenly elevated to luxury; a scheming Lothario who ruthlessly plays with women's hearts in his quest of riches.

These are the main characters in "Daughters of Midas." Its theme, an old one but an ever new one, is the theme of the ancient story of King Midas and the Golden Touch; it deals with the curse of gold.

Wealth builds false gods for the three girls who suddenly find themselves the beneficiaries of a millionaire's strange generosity. Character is blighted, ambitions forsaken, hearts are broken. Only one of them survives the test and finds love and happiness in the end.

"Daughters of Midas" was written by Anne Austin, who at 31 is the mother of a remarkable 13-year-old daughter, now in college and already well launched on her own literary career by her writings for Vanity Fair magazine. It is Anne Austin's best story.

"Daughters of Midas" strikes another high note in serial illustrations. Pictures were posed at the Theatre Guild School, Inc., of New York, a nationally known institution.

Characters were portrayed by Elaine Basil, William Boren, Roger Bennett, Margaret Gaillard, Arline Kazanjian and William Lovejoy, student actors at the school.

Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Ward and daughter, Janice of Hartford, were visitors on Sunday at the home of Mrs. Ward's parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. Clinton Porter.

Chickenpox has put in an appearance in the family of Stephen Stanek, his little daughter, Olga, having been taken down with the disease. The town has suffered much through epidemics of mumps and grip among the children through the winter, and it was hoped that no other contagious diseases would gain a foothold here for some time.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Mono, their son, Henry and daughters, Micheline and Mary of New London, visited the town on Sunday, calling on former friends. The Mono family were former residents of Amston. Miss Micheline is now a teacher in the New London public schools.

Matilda, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Morris Rackmilowicz is one of the latest victims of mumps. The epidemic has nearly died down, as practically every child in the town has had the disease.

The Misses Ruth and Gladys Rathbun, of Hartford, were weekend guests at the home of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Rathbun.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Warner of Suffield were weekend guests at the home of Mrs. Warner's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank R. Post.

Mrs. Mary E. Cummings and Mrs. Roger W. Porter went as delegates to a meeting which took place at Supervisor Charles M. Larcomb's office in Willimantic on Saturday. Mrs. Porter represented Hebron and Mrs. Cummings represented the other towns under Mr. Larcomb's supervision. The principal business was to appoint a delegate to a State Teachers' Association convention to be held in Hartford, March 25.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Worawick and Mrs. Janet Hanna of South Manchester were Sunday guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Francis H. Raymond.

Mrs. Anne C. Gilbert was called to Bridgewater on Sunday by the illness of her daughter, Miss Helen Gilbert, who is suffering from an attack of grip.

The Rev. T. D. Martin announced at the Sunday morning service at St. Peter's church that the church has contributed to missions during the past year the sum of $87.74. The quota allotted to the church was $150.00, but the pastor said that the church in filling more than 58% of its quota has done better than many of the large-city churches in that respect.

Mrs. Paul Jurovaty of Andover is visiting this week at the home of Mrs. Robert Bollow.

Word has been received of the serious illness of Mrs. Abbie Smith of Hartford. Her sister, Mrs. Frank R. Post has gone to Hartford to be with Mrs. Smith. Mrs. Smith was a former resident of this town.

There was long and earnest discussion at the town meeting which took place at the town hall, Hebron, on Saturday, March 21st. After the laying of a 25 mill tax to defray expenses for the coming year, and after voting down a proposition to raise the salary of the tax collector, the principal business of the meeting was taken up, and arguments pro and con were heard on the question of whether the new federal road from Marlborough to connect with the Willimantic highway should go through the middle of the green or a little to the south should follow much the line of the present state road and cut only a comparatively small slice from the central green or park.

Mr. Dugan, representing the state highway department, and Mr. Starr, official engineer, spoke earnestly in favor of the plan for the road going through the center of the green. Mr. Starr tacked up a map showing the green cut into six or seven pieces with linear beds here and there, looking fine, but failing to carry conviction to the hearts of the "embattled farmers," who bitterly opposed having their green "cut up into a checker board." Complaint was made that by the dividing of the green into these small plots the citizens of the town would be deprived of a place for public gatherings, school and field meets, and the like. The claim was made that a slight curve to the south would make it possible to leave the green practically as it is and would not add to the dangers of traffic. It was also pointed out that the approach from the Amston road to the Congregational church as shown on the map could not be made except by dodging about one of the proposed flower beds.

Mr. Dugan and Mr. Starr urged the greater safety of the through-the-middle-of-the-green plan, admitting that the present policy was to eliminate all unnecessary curves however slight, as adding to expense, and finally delivered a sort of ultimatum to the effect that state and federal authorities had practically decided the matter anyway, and that there was nothing much for Hebron to do but to sign on the dotted line.

In spite of this, however, a vote was taken protesting against the proposed plan and respectfully requesting that the new road go to the south of the green instead of through the middle.

STOMACH UPSET

Get at the real cause. That's what thousands of stomach sufferers are doing now. Instead of taking tonics, or trying to patch up a poor digestion, they are attacking the real cause of the ailment—clogged liver and disordered bowels. Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets arouse the liver in a soothing, healing way. When the liver and bowels are performing their natural functions, away goes indigestion and stomach troubles. Have you a bad taste, coated tongue, poor appetite, a lazy, don't-care feeling, no ambition or energy, trouble with undigested food? Take Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel. Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound mixed with olive oil, now them by their olive color. They do the work without griping, cramps or pain. All Druggists. Take one or two at bedtime for quick relief. Eat what you like. 15c, 30c, 60c.

Representative Robert E. Foote of Gilead acted as moderator, and Clarkson Bailey of Amston was clerk.

The new road will be part of the trunk line between New Haven and Boston. This road, it is said, will eventually be one of the most important in the state.

NOVEL DEFENSE
Montreal, March 16.—Sam Stapleton, pleading guilty to a charge of holding up the manager of the Rialto theater, has offered a novel defense. He told the court that he knew nothing of the robbery until he woke up at home the next morning and found $400 in his room which he supposed was the proceeds of the hold-up. He "supposed" he committed the crime under his father's inspiration while drunk, he said. After listening to the story with apparent interest, Judge Cusson sentenced him to six years' imprisonment.

A co-defendant, Leo Gibson who pleaded his own case, was acquitted.

"STRANDED IN PARIS" COMING TO RIALTO

Have you heard the news? Bebe Daniels is "Stranded in Paris." Yes, sir, she's stranded without a cent. But she has plenty of laughs to keep her company and a handsome hero to rescue her from trouble. It all happens in her latest feature length picture which heads a splendid program at the Rialto theater tomorrow and Friday. Fashion shows in which lavish costumes are used and a startlingly different plot makes this photoplay one of the outstanding releases of the year. James Hall and Ford Sterling have important roles to portray in the supporting cast.

Another feature which closely rivals "Stranded in Paris" appears on the same bill. It is "Heartbound," a typical romance of an Eastern heiress who goes West to forget and falls in love all over again. There is a real landslide and cyclone in the picture that for sheer thrills will be hard to surpass. Ranger Bill Miller and his intelligent horse "King" have leading parts to enact. Select shorter subjects will round out the program.

The two features, which will

Budgeting Your Advertising

SINCE advertising may be a new venture with many merchants, naturally they are lacking in experience when it comes to preparing a budget for the year. In other instances some merchants have no set plan, no definite appropriation for advertising. For these two classes some sort of system is necessary. We have prepared figures which show what percentage of your total receipts should be spent for advertising. These are based on what successful stores throughout the country have done in your particular line of business. Let one of our representatives call on you and give you this information which has required years of research.

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

GARRETT FOLSOM is stabbed to death while swimming at Ocean Town, N. J. It is believed that the death weapon was a pichag, an Oriental knife, and that it was purchased on the boat.

Folsom's bathing companions had been ROGER NEVILLE, a business partner; MRS. HELEN BARNABY and CARMELITA VALDON.

ANASTASIA FOLSOM, eccentric and masterful sister of the dead man, takes command, and it is established that one CROYDON SEARS is a fanatic of various weapons. Sears admits buying two knives but not the pichag.

Anastasia engages TITUS RIGGS, an architect, to work on the case. DAN PELTON, Folsom's nephew, arrives and is assisted by the curious French dolls in his uncle's room.

Croydon Sears sends for FLEMING STONE, famous detective. He tells him Folsom had been blackmailing him and he had lied at the inquest but is innocent. Stone meets others of the circle, including NED BARROW and his wife, MADELINE, who puzzles him.

It is learned that Carmelita Valdon has stolen some letters from Folsom's room. Stone, believing her innocent, yet accuses her of withholding some information.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XLV

CARMELITA VALDON stared at Fleming Stone.

Her great dark eyes seemed to grow luminous with fear, and then they became sphinx-like and inscrutable.

"You startled me," she said with a light laugh. "I thought you meant it."

"I did mean it—I do mean it. You learned something that you have kept to yourself. You discovered something that leads you to a definite suspicion. This thing you must tell, or you will find yourself in serious trouble."

"Oh, no, not so bad as that."

Carmelita Valdon was again mistress of herself. Her instant of fear had passed; she had come through the inquisition about her letters, and it had caused her no alarm.

"Yes, Mrs. Valdon." All at once Stone found himself on the losing side of the argument. "Yes, serious trouble," he ended up, a little lamely.

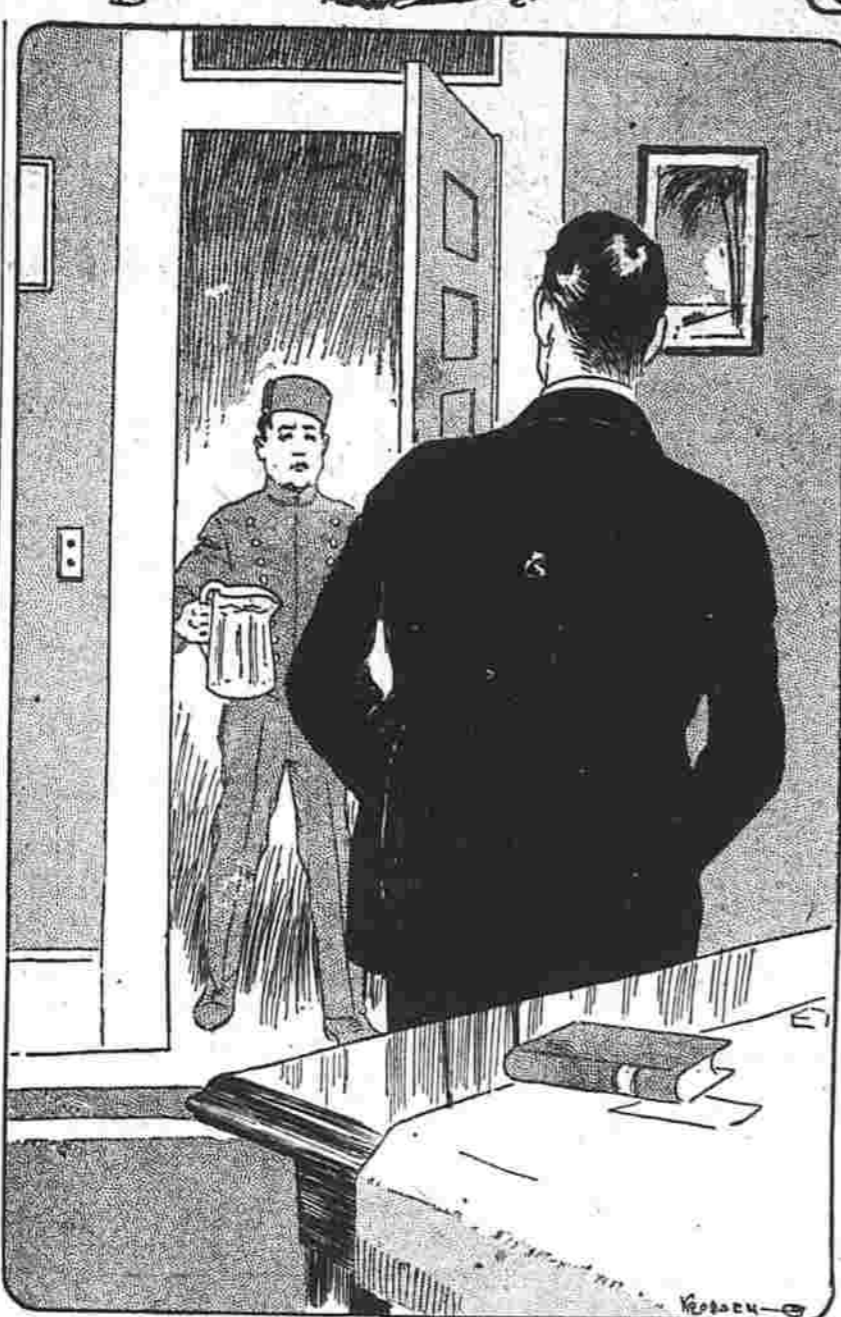

She looked at him and smiled. "Shot all your arrows, have you, Mr. Stone?" she bantered. "Well what next?"

Stone wanted to shake her. Never before had he felt so baffled by a woman's wit. He was certain that she had no connection of any sort with the death of Garrett Folsom. But he knew, too, that she had a clue of some kind, however slight, that he would give worlds to learn.

But it was so vague, so purely imaginary on his part, that he couldn't think, at the moment, of any way to force her hand.

And she was so impossible. She was a different person from the sad-faced woman who had confessed to stealing her own letters and had admitted her relief at the death of Folsom.

Now her eyes shined, her red lips smiling, her whole being full

"You wanted me special, Mr. Stone?" he asked.

of vivacity and charm, she leaned closer to him and whispered: "Don't shoot any more arrows at me. I haven't done anything wrong."

"But you know who has!" he said sternly, angry at himself for being away by her beauty and lure.

And then, with another of her sudden changes, she became wistful, even pathetic, and tears actually appeared in her eyes.

"No. Merely a faint, slight possibility. Nothing that I can tell you."

"Very well, Mrs. Valdon," and Stone gave himself a mental shake. "I take that statement as a true one, and I shall say nothing more to you about it, until I, too, discover that same slight possibility."

And at that he had the satisfaction of seeing her look very perplexed indeed.

They returned to the hotel, and as it was the bathing hour, Carmelita hurried away to keep an appointment, and Stone sat on the deck by himself to think things over.

As a result of his cogitations he went up to Dan Pelton's suite.

Ross, the valet Pelton had inherited from Folsom, was just leaving the rooms, having finished his work there.

"Going in the surf?" Stone said pleasantly.

"No, sir," Ross returned. "I can't seem to bear the sight of edge or real reason for what you might call suspicion. If I had I should have told it at first, sir."

"Yes, that's right. I say, Ross, you don't think it was one of his lady friends did it?"

"Killed him?" Ross looked amazed. "Good Lord, no, sir! Why there wasn't any of 'em down here."

"Oh, you mean his chorus girl friends. I suppose he had lots of those."

"Not so many, but now and then one. He was no saint, Mr. Folsom wasn't."

"No, though his sister thinks he was."

"She does that, Mr. Stone. Miss Folsom thinks Mr. Garrett was almost a Puritan, and—he wasn't, sir."

"No," agreed Stone. "Well, go along, Ross. I see you can't help me. Call me when you have some water, will you, and tell them to send that fat child with it."

"Tubby? Yes, sir."

Ross did Stone's bidding and departed, and shortly the rotund bellboy appeared with the water.

"You wanted the special, Mr. Stone?" he asked, with the air of importance that he loved to assume.

"What I'm getting at is this, Tubby," the detective said, straightforwardly. "I want to get all the details I can on Mr. Garrett Folsom. I've learned a lot from his friends and from the police and all that. But there may be some bit of information you can give me that nobody else could. Think so?"

"I wish I could, sir, but I'm darned if I can think of anything. Got anything particular in mind?"

"No, I'm just floundering. Did you see Mr. Folsom when he arrived here? When he first came in?"

"Yes, sir, I did. I was near the desk and I seen him arrive. Oh, yes, he came in very important like."

"Swaggering?"

"Not fool swaggering, sir. Just like a man who's big and knows it. No shoddy work. And his man, Ross, you know, looking everything quiet and proper."

"I suppose you mean he made an entrance such as one of the best people might be expected to do."

"Just that, Mr. Stone. I know all that, entrance; I've seen thousands."

Tubby stood waiting, hoping he could tell something of importance, but utterly at a loss to do so, and well knowing that nothing fictitious would go with this man.

"Well, that's that," Stone informed him. "Did he look about at the people before he went up to his room?"

"He did just that, and Tubby saw a chance. He stood quite a few minutes looking at the crowds in the lounge. He hadn't been here in some time and he was awfully interested."

"Did he notice anybody in particular?"

"Well, he did. You see, his own crowd, Mr. Neville and those ladies, weren't around just then, but just as Mr. Folsom was about to go up in the elevator the Seases and Barrons came down in the next elevator and Mr. Folsom looked at them like he was surprised all to pieces."

"Why," said Stone, "he didn't know any of them, except Mr. Sears, slightly."

Fleming Stone sees the doll that was Folsom's favorite—and gets a shock. Read the next chapter.

The WOMAN'S DAY

By ALLENE SUMNER

"How I envy men!" said the girl with whom I dined last night, as we saw 30 or 40 fraternity lads invade the dining room, grab seats at their reserved table, and begin to have the time of their lives what back-slapping, doing the arvil chorus on their glasses, singing school songs, and kidding the blue-eyed waitress.

"Men," continued my philanthropic friend, "have such better times in big groups than do women. They have Allene Sumner's barriers of reserve to smash down, and pipe organ and even broadcast her music on the radio. But Helen shot herself. We've grown almost accustomed to our wave of college suicide as one young man or woman after another has 'ended it all,' leaving notes to explain that life seems but a snare and a delusion, or that curiosity urges them to learn 'what next?'"

But any hint of an infantile wave of suicide is quite ghastly. What's wrong with the elders that we can't make life worth while for the kids? In the beginning of the wave of nervous insanity which doctors and psychologists have prophesied for some time as the result of this complex day?

"Hired Girls"

American "hired girls" are much better off than those of Europe, according to Jessie Stephen, Scotch socialist leader of England, and organizer of the first domestic workers' union in England, now in our country. She says that organized "hired girls" of England receive a minimum wage of $150 a year and board, an 8 hour day, a half-day of a week, and freedom after 2 p. m. on Sunday. She is working for organization of American domestic workers.

"Won't Do It"

"We won't do house-work." That, says employment officials, is what 96 per cent of all girls applying for jobs say right off the bat. And not only girls. Older women will fight for 9-hour-a-day factory or store jobs where they will work on their feet all day long, when they could, as housekeepers, have a few afternoon hours to sit down with a book or sewing. At least, that's the argument of "the quality" who want housekeepers. But housekeepers themselves say that "it gives any girl a terrible pain to see her help sit down. Women are stingy. They won't pay $10 a week without having such a chronic pain about it that they insist on getting $30 worth a week."

Yes, nice girls we are!

Men's Modes

By WALTER J. BROOKE

New York, March 14.—A noteworthy fabric for spring and topcoats has three highly desirable qualities:

It provides warmth in the chilly mornings and evenings of the vernal days, leaves the wearer comfortably cool in the warm midday and, because of its unwrinkling weave, need never know the pressure of the tailor's heavy goose.

Goat Hair

It is Kashmir, a cloth woven from the hair of the East Indian goat. As light, warm and wrinkle-proof as grandmother's shawl, it is as near the ideal topcoat material as man has yet devised.

When unseasonable heat unexpectedly follows the cool spring morning, it may be carried on the arm without discomfort. And worn, it drapes the figure in soft, easy lines. Should a shower come up, it will shed water better, perhaps, than any fabric artificially proofed against the rain.

Extraordinary as is the fabric itself, many of the topcoats into which it has been fashioned are modeller along extremely conservative lines—in coats designed for wear in both town and country, for various purposes.

Sumner's successions of spring does not handicap the topcoat's usefulness for it is an agreeable, comforting companion of late evening in the mountains, at the seashore, motoring or afloat. Smart enough to meet the requirements of the most fastidious man on the avenue, it slips with equal ease into the niche reserved for topcoats upon sporting and other outdoor occasions.

Attractive Models

In one of its best conceptions, this coat is a three-button, single-breasted model with patch pockets. A plain box coat or a raglan shoulder model are equally good and even the double-breasted affair, with light colored buttons, has its place.

The raglan shoulder in recent seasons has become popular among men who are sharp observers of the trend of continental and domestic fashion.

The box model is a straight-hanging garment; the raglan is slightly skirted.

Shades that will be featured this spring are oxford gray, blue oxford brown, beaver, natural camel, and light tan checks. The raglan, particularly, looks well in a brown or light tan check.

Good Nature and Good Health

INFECTED TONSILS OFTEN HARM ENTIRE SYSTEM

This is the first of a series of articles on personal hygiene by Dr. Morris Fishbein, one of America's foremost medical authorities. Succeeding articles in the series will appear daily in this paper.

all medical procedures claim that removal of the tonsils may cause injury to the voice, or to the ears, or even be responsible for a greater likelihood of infection. There is not the slightest reason to believe that any such dangerous complications are likely to result. Hundreds of thousands of persons have had their tonsils removed without damage of any kind to their general health during the past twenty years and the majority of evidence indicates that the general effect has been good. In most instances persons who have had their tonsils removed have suffered to a less extent with colds, with infections of the ears, or with infections of the sinuses.

Sometimes children who have been unable to gain weight and who have been generally illing have improved in their nutrition and in their strength following the removal of their tonsils. A few physicians have even urged that the tonsils should be removed routinely from all persons. There does not seem to be any reason to urge such a routine method. If the persons suffer constantly with sore throat, if the tonsils are greatly enlarged, if there seems to be reason for believing that the tonsils are acting as foci of infection and setting up disturbances elsewhere in the body, these glands may be removed without question.

Home Page Editorials Coolidge Soul-Lonely?

By Olive Roberts Burton

I do not know what kind of a person we expect to see when the President of the United States walks into a room. We know what he looks like—we have seen his picture thousands of times—but it is peculiar that each one of the three times that I have met him I have had a singular feeling of surprise. "Why, he's just a man like every other man," remarked a gentleman with an amused smile when I confided this vague but no less positive impression to him.

One finds a gentleman of something under six feet tall with a quiet wistful smile, very smooth reddish hair, and blue gray eyes that are the most modest eyes I have ever seen—and friendly. "A man like every other man?" His eyes seem to say, no, they seem to sigh. "I am lonely. I want to step out of my shell of glamour and be one of the boys. I can't break through and come to you, but won't you please come to me!" (The President is permitted to accept very few social invitations: a ball for a public benevolence, for instance, and dinners given by members of the cabinet.)

I am not eulogizing nor lobbying. What I am saying concerns only a man—and a lonely man, I am positive. We live in a complex time—an age of cross-purposes in which a thousand things are diametrically opposed. What we may call wrong today, we may insist is right tomorrow, and vice versa. It is not less complex than vacillating. This age of ours. Do we know what we want? Aren't we likely to agree with the last convincing magazine article we have read? And change our minds two and a half times? Really informed enough to know? The thing that strikes you as you gaze at the statue of Lincoln in the Lincoln Memorial is the brooding loneliness in the eyes. A wistful, lonely spirit that knows not loneliness of office, but loneliness of soul. A rock in the seething surge of events around him.

CARDINALS JUST AS CAPABLE WITHOUT HORNSBY SAYS EVANS

Bob O'Farrell and Frish Jointly Shoulder Former Pilot's Burden.

BY BILLY EVANS

Avon Park, Fla., March 16.—Bob O'Farrell of the St. Louis Cardinals, making his debut as manager, inherited the toughest job that was ever handed a big league pilot.

The quiet, rather soft-spoken leader of the Cards takes over a world's championship team. It is minus its biggest star, the outstanding player in the National League, Rogers Hornsby.

When St. Louis received Frankie Frish in return for Horne, the club acquired the only second baseman in the National League capable of filling the gap.

But it is all back again. From the brush and dirt have come forth a group of batters that are more than a match for the Boston colts up with the topnotchers.

The flowers in Boston's garden are bearing names that spell action. Jack Sharkey, Jim Maloney, Dick "Honeyboy" Finnegan, Johnny Vaca, Al Mello, Red Chapman and Chick Suggs are but a few of them.

Of course, the entire collection of Maloney and Sharkey have garnered the front row in this little exhibition of ringside horticulture. When Tex Rickard decided to put on his elimination contest of champions, the Boston contribution loomed up big.

Today the show is nearly all Sharkey and Maloney. The Boston boys are going to give a little exhibition of their own in Rickard's New York Garden on May 19. The winner of that battle will stack up against the winner of the Jack Dempsey-Paulino show and then the prize beauty of them all, Gene Tunney, will meet the survivor.

The writing tab has sent forth its choicest from the other classes. Johnny Vaca took the blue-ribbons away from Fidel LaBarba, the California flyweight.

"Honeyboy" Finnegan is weighing the toga of the featherweight group. Al Mello is knocking weight group Al Mello is knocking at the garden walls of those who claim the premiership in that class.

It's cauliflower time in Boston, and the Hub's pugilistic flower is in full bloom. Years ago the Boston blossom went to seed. And at seed it remained.

It has been hinted by certain National League managers that Alexander is a "good-time Charley," hard to handle, but his actions in the training camp certainly belie it.

There is no getting away from the fact that Alexander is the inspiration in the camp of the Cardinals. The players, from the youngsters to the veteran stars like Jim Botley, look up to Alex.

It has been broken several times by Bobby Jones, who has been wending his way down its fairways for approximately 20 years.

At Albany, N. Y.—Danny Cooney, of Philadelphia, won decision over Tony Vaccarella, of New York, 12 rounds.

Last year had anything happened to Catcher Bob O'Farrell, the club would have been seriously handicapped for the want of an experienced receiver.

Snyder, who served under John McGraw for a number of years and helped the Giants to several pennants, is back with the Cards, looking mighty fit.

Snyder was out of the game last season with two broken hands. Strangely enough, they came from a fist encounter rather than a diamond accident.

So, to my way of thinking, the Cards are just as good, if not better, than last season. This puts the Cardinals entirely up to bob O'Farrell's ability to get from his men the baseball they are capable of playing.

There is no denying that Hornsby got every ounce of power out of the Cardinal machine. He pushed the very limit and won, despite the fact that the experts conceded his club only an outside chance.

The success or failure of the Cardinals to repeat in the National League is a problem that Bob Farrell must solve. If he can handle the tough job, it will be a different story.

Bob O'Farrell can catch. He was the most valuable ball player in the National League last year. The fact that Missouri are waiting to be shown on the manager proposition.

Chicago Bruins' Owner Sees Great Future For "Intiguing Sport."

BY CLARK B. KELSEY (United Press Staff Correspondent) Chicago, March 16.—(United Press).—Professional basketball has passed the experiment stage and is now a successful business enterprise as well as an intriguing sport.

Halas, an owner of the Chicago Bears professional football team, entered the basketball field two years ago, and while his teams have stood at the bottom of the league they have made money.

Cleveland attracts the largest attendance, with a record crowd of 11,900 attracted to two games during the present season.

Chicago's attendance in 1926-1927 has averaged 2,200. Halas said, and this turnout has made money for the promoters.

ST. LOUIS BROWNS NOT SO GOOD, SAYS WALSH; SISLER BRACES UP

WORLDS RECORD BROKEN IN "AIR" CHESS GAME

LONDON, March 16.—(Unit. Press).—The "world's fastest chess-game" has just been played by two London women.

It was played on an Imperial Air-liner flying from London to Bagdad. They called their games, "hundred-mile-an-hour chess."

Great interest is being worked up over the play-off match next Monday night at Murphy's alleys between the O'J Mill and the Weaving Mill, both of which are highly confident of turning the tables on their rivals and point to the fact that they have trimmed them in 13 out of 21 games this season.

Sports Editor Finds Lots of Broken Down Players In Training Camp—His Opinion.

By DAVIS J. WALSH. Tarpon Springs, Fla., March 16.—Hear no evil, say no evil, know no evil may be all well enough but, as I understand it, Confucius, or whoever wrote the proverb never visited Tarpon Springs, Fla., this being one of several respects in which Confucius and the writer happen to differ.

The Browns are not a very good ball club. The state of the ball club isn't news to any one. But the fact that it has a new first baseman is.

Meet Mr. Sisler. His name is George Sisler and, when I refer to him as new, I do so with the bland implausibility of an automobile salesman who speaks of a reconditioned car as new when he means almost Sisler at the age of thirty-three, doesn't figure to be the man he was when he hit over .420 some five years ago.

He has been reconditioned, in that his vision now is normal, making it highly unlikely that he will repeat his 1926 batting average of .289. Sisler, in fact, will be one of the stars of the game again this year, a probable .340 hitter, and agile in his movements around first base.

Ordinarily, this fact might make a lot of difference to the ball club but unfortunately the rebuttal testimony has not been compiled. Part of it centers around Oscar Melillo, the infielder who did rather well in 1926 for a first year man. He has turned out to be another of baseball's pale and interesting invalids and hasn't given any indication that he expects to come to the camp.

A second item of the bad news is an injury to Bill Mullen's knee, necessitating the withdrawal of the Toronto entry from third base, and the besotted state Ken Williams' cranium which served to cause a .280 hitter last year of a normal .350 man.

Otis Miller, also of Toronto, is filling in for Mullen at third base while Frank O'Rourke, ex-Tiger and about everything, including Toronto, is playing second base vice Melillo.

When all the fallen arches are raised again, O'Rourke will be used as a late inning substitute for Melillo, Melillo and Walter Gerber, still round and still pretty good.

Other Players. Williams' place in the outfield is being shared by Bing Miller and Hershey Bennett, both of them in right field. Steve O'Neill will be the first string catcher. Steve is back on the big time after a season at Toronto.

The club also bears the 1926 Toronto manager, Dan Howley. Daniel thinks very well of his men. He thinks often and with great pleasure of Ernie Nevers, former Stamford backfield star, and Fred Schultz, the $50,000 recruit from Milwaukee.

Schulte, Mullen, Otis Miller and Walter Stewart, left-hand pitcher from Toronto, seem to be the only young players in camp who figure in Howley's plans. The other pitchers—Gaston, Vangilder, Wingard, Ballou, Falk, Nevers, Zachary and Sam Jones—are veterans. So are the outfielders while O'Neill's first assistant will be that young fellow, Schang, and his second will be Lee Dixon.

BILLY EVANS SAYS

OLD ALEX: Grover Cleveland Alexander, who for nearly 20 years has vied with Walter Johnson for pitching honors, is still a very active young man.

During my tour of the training camp at Avon Park shortly after Alexander's birthday, it was the occasion for a town holiday. After a party in the evening in honor of Alexander's 40th anniversary.

There is no getting away from the fact that Alexander is the inspiration in the camp of the Cardinals. The players, from the youngsters to the veteran stars like Jim Botley, look up to Alex.

It has been hinted by certain National League managers that Alexander is a "good-time Charley," hard to handle, but his actions in the training camp certainly belie it.

"Great pitchers always are the easiest to handle," said Manager-Catcher Bob O'Farrell, when I mentioned the name of Alexander.

Alex will be a bit harder to manage than catch and that is a sort proposition, for his control is well-nigh perfect.

been as a respite from the hard grind, the fear of going stale.

"You know college coaches and trainers break the training routine at times when their players are on the verge of going stale," explains Alexander with a smile.

"A major league campaign is the toughest of all competitive sports, because it extends over a period of six months and is filled with many tough battles that taxes a player to the limit, mentally as well as physically.

"Critics who say I fall to keep in condition at all times are unfair to me. I point to my 17 years in the majors and the fact that I have always been a hard worker, to refute any stories that I am a bad actor and hard to handle.

"Of all the managers I have played under, only one has so considered me. I don't count him a big leaguer, yet."

Hopes Big Season There is no doubt as to the important part Alexander must play if the Cardinals are to repeat.

Should Alex have one of those bad seasons, that is every now and then come even to as great pitchers as Johnson and himself, the entire team will react to his failure.

The new air mail west-bound schedule gives Manchester folk their first opportunity of watching the regular passing overhead of a lighted plane at night.

Last evening observers who scanned the starlit and moonlit sky at close to 7:30 o'clock to locate the flying machine whose humming caught their attention were rewarded by glimpsing the three lights, red, white and green, of the mail plane on its way from Boston to Hartford. One got scarcely more than a glimpse, at that, before the swiftly moving illumination turned into a mere glowing star, sweeping across the heavens and fading into the horizon.
