FLOOD QUOTA HERE PASSED THIS NOON

Manchester Meets First Call For Relief Fund But More Money Will Be Needed; Receipts at Midday Reported as $1,141.59; Collections to Continue as Fresh Quota Is Expected To Be Called For.

Once more Manchester heard the call and responded nobly. The quota of $1,000 assigned Manchester by the American Red Cross for the relief of flood sufferers in the Mississippi valley was oversubscribed at noon today.

Treasurer Lucius Pinney of the Manchester chapter announced today that he had received $986 in checks so far. This, added to a total of $177.59 collected by the Chamber of Commerce and $38 received at the offices of The Herald, brings the amount collected up to $1,141.59.

Went With a Rush A little slow in starting, the campaign for funds was only in progress three full days before the quota was exceeded. On Monday at noon the local Red Cross chapter met and accepted its quota of $1,000 allotted by the national chapter. The campaign received wide publicity in The Evening Herald and by night on Tuesday the money had begun to flow in.

The first returns published in The Herald yesterday gave the total as $490. In the number of checks received by Mr. Pinney was one for $100. The Kiwanis club pledged $250 at its meeting yesterday afternoon, bringing up the total to $740.

The only publicity the campaign received was through the medium of the newspapers and a circular letter sent out by Supt. F. A. Verplanck, publicity chairman brought the matter directly to the minds of several hundred people here.

Collections to Continue Today Mr. Pinney announced the receipt of checks to the value of more than $900. The Chamber of Commerce and Evening Herald subscriptions had not been added to this.

It is not the plan of the local chapter to send all of this money to the national chapter right away, it was said. The quota of $1,000 will be sent but the collections will be kept up and when the second call, which is expected, comes, this town will be well on the way to its second quota.

Contributions hereafter should be made at the Chamber of Commerce office and checks sent to the treasurer, Lucius Pinney, Prospect street.

PICK 5 JURORS FOR TONG TRIAL

Three Chosen Today In Hartford Court — New Panel Called.

(Special to The Herald)

Hartford, Conn., April 28.—After two days hard work selecting two jurors for trial of Ching Lung and Loo Hoo Wing, accused of the murder of a Manchester laundryman, three others were selected this morning. The prospects of a full jury today appears certain. The selections are being made from small towns of the county where excuses against services are not so numerous as in the cities. The jurors chosen this morning were Harry W. Chase, 66, a farmer of East Granby; Howard S. Bidwell, 38, tobacco grower of Glastonbury and Jasper W. Bidwell, 43, farmer of East Granby.

Five jurors have been selected thus far, the others being Henry C. Adams, Canton, and Willis W. Hall, of Marlboro.

YESTERDAY'S PROCEEDINGS

(Special to The Herald.) County Courtroom, Hartford, April 28.—Because it was a month ago that Manchester was started by the announcement that On Jing Hen was murdered in the laundry on Oak street, it seems to have passed out of the minds of many Manchester people, but to the residents of Hartford county it is different. Tuesday and Wednesday the

REPRIEVE FOR MADEIROS FOR FOURTH TIME

Governor Fuller Again Postpones Execution of Man Connected With Vanzetti Case.

Boston, Mass., April 28.—On the heels of the postponement of the execution of Celestino Madeiros, Wrentham bank cashier slayer, today came steps looking to a review by Governor Alvan Fuller of the case of Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti.

Madeiros confessed to the paymaster holdup and double killing in South Braintree for which Sacco and Vanzetti were convicted and sentenced to death in the Massachusetts State Prison at Bridgewater. In Dedham jail, however, the two condemned men were reported to have drawn up such a petition. Vanzetti, it was learned, did not wish to ask for a pardon on the ground that both he and Sacco were innocent.

No Formal Petition No formal petition had been presented asking executive consideration of the Sacco and Vanzetti case when the respite was granted Madeiros. In Dedham jail, however, the two condemned men were reported to have drawn up such a petition. Vanzetti, it was learned, did not wish to ask for a pardon on the ground that both he and Sacco were innocent.

This was the fourth reprieve granted Madeiros in the strangest case on record in the criminal history of Massachusetts. For the fourth time today the New Bedford man walked from the death house in state's prison back to the Cherry Hill section. The respite is until the week of July 10th, the date set for the Sacco-Vanzetti execution.

Another convict stepped into the tangled picture today. William Weeks was reported to have told counsel for Sacco and Vanzetti that Madeiros, with whom he was involved in several holdups, spoke to him several times of the South Braintree killings.

The alleged confession of Madeiros was discounted by the courts however.

More Letters Letters and telegrams continued to arrive at the governor's office today from all quarters of the world, some for and some against executive action.

Cardinal O'Connell told the annual dinner of the Holy Cross Club last night that the statutes give the governor power to review the Sacco-Vanzetti case and that he can use every human aid that he can gather to assist him. Governor Fuller arrived after the cardinal concluded and was assured by speaker that whatever his decision that all would stand behind him.

Vanzetti, it was learned today, has been writing a story about his mother, who died when he was a boy in Italy and who influenced his life by her remarkable character. His father a well-to-do man, still resides in Italy.

GIN AND JEALOUSY CAUSE OF TRAGEDY

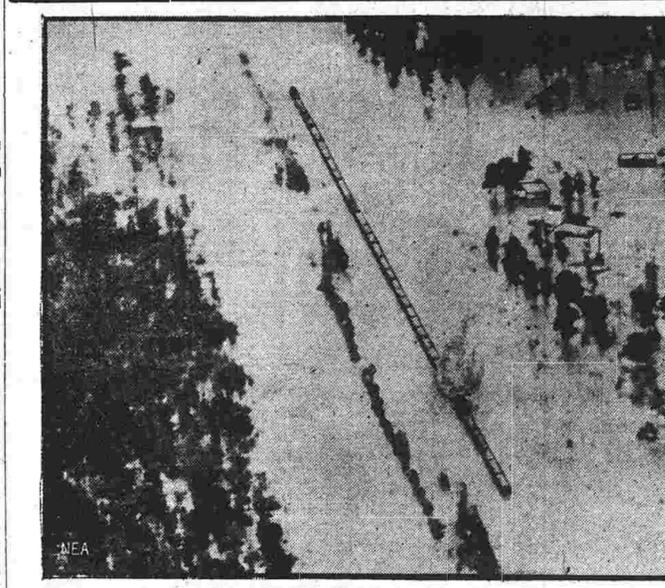

Wife of Film Actor Held In Hollywood For Killing Her Husband.

Los Angeles, Calif., April 28.—Gin and jealousy. This combination together with a convenient automatic, according to police, resulted in the death of Tom Kerrick, 32, film cowboy. His wife, Sarah, occupied a jail cell today, charged with shooting her husband—the climax of a gay party in Kerrick's Hollywood home.

Four other persons, all motion picture "extras," are held as material witnesses. The county Grand Jury will sift the facts in the case when it meets today. So far questioning has produced nothing but a mass of conflicting stories.

Police said all those quizzed were so intoxicated no coherent story of the shooting could be obtained. Kerrick had been in motion picture for about three years, playing minor parts, always of the cowboy variety. He appeared in several pictures with Helen Holmes, an actress identified with the "thriller" type of picture. Kerrick rode the range in Arizona for many years and at one time was a deputy sheriff at Florence, Ariz.

REFUGEE TRAIN MAROONED

The photograph shown above is probably the most remarkable flood picture ever taken. It shows a Missouri Pacific refugee train, trying to get several hundred of the homeless in the Mississippi valley to refugee camps at Memphis. For nearly a day, the train was reported lost. A flying cameraman for NEA Service was one of the aviators who discovered it, creeping very slowly through the flooded areas. The flood water kept extinguishing the fires of the engine and threatening a boiler explosion, but the engineer and fireman courageously stuck to the task until all the refugees were brought to dry land. This airplane picture was taken near Simsboro, Ark. The roofs of a few houses of the inundated villages can be seen at the right.

State Rests Case In Snyder Trial

Haddon Gray, Pal of One of the Defendants Tells How He Helped Friend to Make Alibi.

Courthouse, Long Island City, N. Y., April 28.—The state rested its case at 12:27 p. m. today, the ninth day of the trial. The state had placed forty-four witnesses on the stand.

Haddon Gray, nattily dressed Syracuse, N. Y., instance man, who helped Henry Judd Gray arrange an "alibi" in Syracuse while the latter was in Queens Village on the gory business of slaying Albert Snyder on March 20, last, took the witness stand at the Snyder-Gray trial today and related his connection with the case. Haddon Gray was an old school chum, but no relative of Henry Judd Gray.

Mrs. Ruth Snyder, co-defendant with Judd Gray, watched the witness closely through narrowed eyes. Haddon Gray did not look at his former friend and Judd Gray did not even raise his bowed head to glance at him.

Examination Starts District Attorney Richard S. Newcombe questioned Gray. Q. How long have you known the defendant Gray? A. Twenty years. We were boys together, attended the same school. Gray said he was married and is a father.

Q. Do you remember Saturday, March 19? A. Yes. Q. Did you see Gray that day? A. I did—in my office that morning. He asked me to go to lunch.

CAPE COD THREATENED BY BOOZE SCANDAL

Federal Grand Jury Probing Conspiracy Charges Involving Big Men.

Boston, Mass., April 28.—An alleged liquor conspiracy that threatens to rock historic Cape Cod, from the canal to Race Point, was under investigation by a federal Grand Jury here today.

The Grand Jury was expected to report late this afternoon. Hubert C. Thompson, assistant United States attorney, admitted that the probe was under way but stated that any indictments, if found, would be secret. It was understood that a former chief of police and several prominent business men on the cape were involved. Mr. Thompson admitted that the town of Hyannis was near the center of the alleged rum smuggling activities.

LOWER HOUSE REJECTS BILL TO AID TOWNS

Middletown and Cromwell Must Pay Cost of Constructing River Bridge Between Municipalities.

Hartford, Conn., April 28.—A proposal to reimburse the towns of Middletown and Cromwell for cost of construction of a bridge over Little River several years ago was rejected by the Lower House of the State Legislature here today.

The Senate at the same time authorized the New Haven General Hospital society and the Grace Hospital society of New Haven to merge. The merger is at the discretion of directors of both institutions.

Among favorable reports received in the Senate were: authorizing a $150,000 water bond issue in Waterbury; providing a penalty of $1 for failure to pay the personal tax; and providing for reimbursement to towns for loss of taxes on property owned by the state.

The House today approved payment of $3,410 to Cass, Lockwood & Brainard Co., of Hartford, for printing the manual and roll, and $500 to Max M. Wild, of Hartford for compiling the document.

Rights Restored to Ernest S. Witham, of Burlington, after Representative Sisson, of Hebron, had quoted Scriptural passages for fifteen minutes to prove that there was biblical precedent for restoration of rights.

His oration stopped only when the applause of the House, which was thunderous, kept him from continuing.

A favorable report was received on a bill reimbursing the town of Union on tax payments amounting to $130. Unfavorable reports in the House included: reimbursement to John S. Cullen, of Danbury, for injury received while in the service of the state; reimbursement to Mrs. Belle M. Leonard for injuries received on the state highway at Niantic; providing compensation for Edward Shea, of Middletown; and amendments to Shelton's city charter, the bill being withdrawn.

Bills passed from the House calendar today were: appropriating $100,000 for the care of disabled soldiers, sailors and marines; including the highway between Cornwall bridge and Sharon in the trunk line system; including the highway between Andover and Franklin in the trunk line system; appropriating $170,000 for erection of trade schools at Hartford and Willimantic; appropriating $50,000 to the State Board of Education for trade schools; appropriating $350,000 for maintenance of trade schools; including a highway in the town of Westport in the trunk line system; authorizing a $200,000 bond issue for a sewer system in the village of Forestville, Bristol; releasing the owners of motor vehicles from responsibility for injuries to passengers unless in the case of gross negligence or heedlessness.

Favorable Reports The discovery of the six millions caused many favorable reports to be submitted to the Legislature today. Included were the following: New Haven armory, $500,000; Bristol armory, $150,000; New Britain Normal school, $350,000; state office building site and construction, $525,000; trunk line highways, $100,000; disease control work, $175,000; state fair exhibits, $14,000; public health nursing, $50,000; Hammonasset Beach extension, $100,000; other state parks, $60,000; Guilford harbor, $20,000; wild life and forest commission, $100,000; Putnam memorial camp ground, $21,000; land at Long Lane farm, Middletown, $22,000; supplemental maintenance budget, $72,600.

Not Yet Passed These bills still must run the gauntlet of the two legislative bodies before expenditure of the money can be commenced. Their total is $3,270,100. If the bills are passed the state expenditures for the next two years will total somewhat less than $39,000,000.

CREST OF WATER NOW AT VICKSBURG—DANGER POINT AT ANGOLA, LA., AT MOUTH OF RED RIVER—5,000,000 BAGS OF SAND USED TO REINFORCE LEVEES—DYKES TO BE BLASTED NEAR NEW ORLEANS TOMORROW—THAT MAY SAVE CITY; ARMY ENGINEERS MORE HOPEFUL TODAY—RED CROSS FUND REACHES $3,000,000 MARK.

New Orleans, La.—Renewed hope that further disaster might be avoided came to hundreds of thousands in Louisiana today as the crest of the Mississippi flood reached Vicksburg, 400 miles above New Orleans. Army engineers who are directing upwards of 50,000 men engaged in a heroic struggle to keep the river within threatened levees along its lower reaches, believe that barring heavy rains within the next three days, the last and most critical phases of the devastating flood may pass the city and spend itself through the artificial levee to be opened tomorrow at Poydras, ten miles south of here.

Danger Point The most threatening situation today was at Angola, Louisiana, opposite the mouth of the Red river where the supreme effort of the defenders of New Orleans is being made to save the weakening levees. A break at Angola, would unleash the Mississippi river in unmeasured stretches of Louisiana flats. Twelve thousand men organized in military units are employed in strengthening the levee lines, repairing wave washes and capping low stretches near Angola. Fifty barges are concentrated in the region to carry materials to the threatened sections. Millions of Bags More than 5,000,000 bags of sand already have been placed in position along some 23 miles of dyke and millions of feet of lumber have been used in reinforcing walls. There is reason to be hopeful, said Major W. H. Holcombe, in charge of levee operations south of Vicksburg. "There is still possibility of breaks in the line above New Orleans where in some spots the levees are not quite so strong as those protecting New Orleans, but every hour that passes brightens the prospect that the weakest point may hold."

Red River Rising The Red river is rising between Shreveport and Alexandria, La., but the army engineers anticipate this swell will reach the Mississippi eight or ten hours before the crest of the upper valley flood. State engineers made final preparations today for the blasting of the levee at Poydras, La., ten miles below New Orleans. The crasse is expected to carry off sufficient water to reduce the level at New Orleans at least by thirty inches. "Very material relief will be afforded by the Poydras opening to all points south of Baton Rouge and there is therefore practically no cause to fear trouble below that point," Major Holcombe said.

TOWN WAITS DOOM New Orleans, La., April 28.—A green and fruitful countryside lay hushed in the sun of this April morning, waiting for the doom that has been decreed for it. A bill of dust, beaten up from the highway in the hasty flight of its people, by their trucks, their trudging feet, the shuffling pace of their herded cattle, has settled over Poydras, where the engineers will break the levee at noon tomorrow and open a course over fertile fields for the pent and raging waters of the Mississippi.

Must Be Sacrificed Poydras and its surrounding country is being sacrificed that the Greater New Orleans may be saved and its air today was that of a lonely place, wistfully and inarticulately resigned to a dire fate. Most had gone to New Orleans, where a teeming refugee camp has been established in the International Trade Exposition building.

Since Tuesday night the Poydras pike had been a stifling course of heavy dust, jacked up by the exodus of the fugitives. The neat homes are closed and shuttered. Charming Country Not all of these homes were deserted placidly. There is about Poydras and its neighborhood a charm and grace of antiquity which shows that many have lived, labored, loved, and died there. A cluster of crumbling brick huts, the former dwelling place of slaves of the great plantation that was destroyed the Williams store at Superior, stands not far from the spot of willows and smooth-cropped grass on the levee bank where the way is to be blasted for the flood. And not far away are the red brick ruins of the old Versailles plantation home, which seem hardly less ancient than the water oaks and their festoons of gray moss. Poydras is old.

Some Protests And it was accordingly not easy to win the agreement to all persons in the settlement to desert their homes to the flood. Some of the most deeply rooted inhabitants in a flare of defiance refused to move. For the most part these have been won over to reason through intercession by influential neighbors, but it is known that there are many old irreconcilables, particularly in the parts of St. Bernard parish away from the settlement.

"There has been some talk of danger of shelling when the engineers go to break the levee," said a prominent New Orleans city leader. "We are hoping that everything has been worked out, and that with our assurances of ample indemnities, and of every possible means of relief, our friends in Poydras will be reconciled but we are not sure that this is completely so."

Fund of $150,000 An immediate relief fund of $150,000 has been raised among fifty New Orleans bankers and business leaders. This matter of indemnity is necessarily unofficial at this stage, and it will be largely defrayed by private purses.

Some of the Poydras irreconcilables are known to be flabbergasted about the situation. One of the interesting points is the levee at Poydras which is being blown to save New Orleans. It was constructed by Poydras people. It is all theirs, and it is a good one. As a matter of fact, it rises ten to twelve feet above the at flood level, while the levee top at New Orleans is barely three feet above the rising water.

Poydras is a community of numerous churches, some of them quite old, and a fine school. The school is being moved to New Orleans, where the children will be assembled to continue their instructions as far as possible.

SAVING REFUGEES Memphis, Tenn., April 28.—Boats to rescue hundreds of marooned persons, whose homes were washed away yesterday when flood waters swept across four more Mississippi towns, left here today for Belzoni, Miss., and surrounding territory. These boats and other craft from Vicksburg will bring food to the refugees.

Grave danger of a break in the Arkansas river levee at Pine Bluff was felt today. A trainload of sandbags were enroute to strengthen the weakening point. The situation at Greenville, Miss., was reported to be improving.

The amount of water pouring over the city levee was gradually growing smaller and flood waters were receding.

3 MILLION RAISED Washington, April 28.—The Red Cross flood relief fund passed the $3,000,000 mark today. Contributions totaling $2,085,600 have been received thus far. Of this figure $1,997,600 came from Eastern states.

'BABE' RUTH CALLED TO ANSWER CHARGE

Bambino Swept For $7,000 By Man Hit By His Auto In 1916.

Cambridge, Mass., April 28.—George Herman Ruth, the "Babe" of baseball fame, was scheduled to make a bow before the judiciary of Middlesex county in Superior Civil Court today.

The cause of Ruth's scheduled appearance in court was an automobile accident which occurred on June 23, 1916. Michael Cunningham, of this city, claims that at the time Ruth's automobile struck and injured him, as the Bambino was driving through the city. He asks $7,000 damages. The case has been dormant for several years and was specially assigned to today's docket because of the appearance of the "Babe" in Boston with the New York Yankees for a series with the Red Sox.

"LOLLY POP DAY"
AT LOCAL THEATERS

State and Circle to Give Kids Candy and Practically a Free Show.

Saturday afternoon must be set aside by every child in Manchester for a trip to either the State or Circle theater, because the management is treating the youngsters to big five cent "lolly pops." At the State theater a special inducement is being offered the boys and girls in that a "Kiddie Theater Coupon" is being inserted in The Herald today which entitles the bearer to see the big vaudeville and picture show for the small payment of a dime.

The "lolly pops" which will be given away at the State and Circle theaters Saturday afternoon are now on display in the State Soda shop display windows. The big "lolly pops" cost the State and Circle theaters a nickel each. They will be given away to every child attending the Saturday matinee absolutely free.

At the State theater with the free coupon appearing in The Herald and with the five cent "lolly pop" given away youngsters will practically see the big vaudeville and picture show for nothing.

A SERVANT PROBLEM

A hostess gave a big party for which a number of extra servants were engaged. Seeing one young man standing alone, she asked, "Shall I find you a partner?" "No, please don't trouble," he replied. "I'm afraid it might make the other waiters jealous."—Tit-Bits.

BOY SCOUTS STICK TO TREE PLANTING

Have Put in 800 Little Pines This Week and Plan to Stay on Job All Week.

More than 800 Scotch pine seedlings have been planted during the past three days by Boy Scouts working under the supervision of John Y. Keur, park superintendent. Most of the planting has been done on the almshouse grounds on Middle Turnpike east though about 150 trees have been planted at the entrance to the Center Springs park on Main street.

The trees, of which 2,000 in all are to be planted, are from a foot and a half tall and were purchased by the park department from the Connecticut State nurseries at Simsbury. They are bought for a nominal sum, for the state nurseries do not operate for profit and all trees and shrubs produced are sold at cost.

24 Boys on Job
Twenty-four Boy Scouts have been engaged in the work this week. They have put in three hours every morning from 8 until 11 o'clock, and according to Superintendent Keur, are a crew of willing workers. Other Boy Scouts of Manchester troops are at the Mohawk State Park in Litchfield county where they are planting trees.

Mr. Keur said today that he expects the work to be finished by Saturday. The boys go back to school on Monday and will not be available after this week. More trees will be planted at the entrance to the Center Springs park and when that is finished those left will be placed at the almshouse.

How many of the trees will live will be determined next spring. Weaker trees will die during the summer or fall but those that survive the winter can be considered good trees.

"THE GINGHAM GIRL"
AT HARTFORD THEATER

Playgoers, who delight in musical comedies have a rare treat in store for them at the State Theater in Hartford next week, when "The Gingham Girl" will be shown there on Monday as the first of a series of weekly presentations by W. A. Ellis and his company, of more than thirty prominent Broadway musical comedy headliners.

The story is presented with more than the usual dashiness and charm. The book of "The Gingham Girl" is by Daniel Kussell, the music by Albert von Tilzer, and the lyrics by Neville Flessner. Staged at the State under the personal direction of Eugene Carey, "The Gingham Girl" is an entertainment that for good taste, sprightliness and merit leaves nothing to be desired.

In preparing for these weekly musical comedy presentations at the State, Mr. Ellis has gathered together a group of players who have all proven their ability in previous successful engagements on Broadway. The entire task of staging these offerings is in charge of Eugene Carey, who is known as one of the country's foremost directors of musical comedy presentation.

Acting upon the principle of giving its patrons the utmost in entertainment at a minimum cost, the State Theater will operate at a top price of fifty cents per seat at night and thirty-five cents in the afternoon, while matinee prices for children will be ten cents, and twenty-five cents at night. The theater will open for the showing of motion pictures at twelve thirty o'clock each noon and the show will begin at one o'clock. The musical comedy will start at three o'clock in the afternoon and again at eight thirty in the evening. In addition, there will be a third showing of the musical comedy every Saturday during the supper show.

HIGH SCHOOL PARTY
HOMEWARD BOUND

Tired But Happy Tourists On Way Back as Herald Goes To Press.

(Special to The Herald)
Washington, April 26.—The Washington tourists were dragged out this morning at 6:30 a. m. 6:30 is early enough in Manchester but in Washington it means getting up in the middle of the night.

Our host, Mr. Manuel, however, had a good breakfast waiting for us. Some of us had just about time to eat the grapefruit before the warning horns of the buses announced that we must hurry to the Union Station.

We were whisked through the station so rapidly that we scarcely had time to admire one of the most attractive buildings in the city.

We were almost lost in the big waiting room, so large it is said that ten thousand soldiers have been drawn up in military formation in that one room.

Back to Philly
The Rockville crowd, which has been stopping at the Lee House in another part of the city, were in acquaintances with us for a few minutes before the train started. Many were still rather sleepy eyed, but most of the crowd enjoyed the trip to Philadelphia through some of the historic towns of Maryland and Delaware.

At Philadelphia two diners were again put on the train and the same menu tempted us as our noon day meal. We ate in relays of thirty-six each, that is three groups went into the diner at a time. Fortunately groups of six and seven and eight got the first call this time, but it was only after vigorous protest.

City our party began to break up a bit. Miss Nolan left to visit her sister; Gladys Rogers was met by relatives, and others of the party had plans for New York, but our party got on board the special car reserved for us on the New York, New Haven & Hartford. There were only seventy-five of our original one hundred. More intimate stories will be told tonight when the tired but happy travelers get to their homes.

SUITS WITHDRAWN
FROM COUNTY COURT

A suit brought by Wilson Richardson of this town against Howard Murphy, also of this town, for $250 and a counter suit brought by Mr. Murphy for the same amount were both withdrawn from the Court of Common Pleas today when Mr. Richardson failed to appear.

Mr. Richardson's suit was brought to collect a bill due him for coal and ice. Mr. Murphy's counter suit was to collect cash commissions due him for orders he took for coal and ice for the Richardson company. When Mr. Richardson failed to appear in court both suits were dismissed and an attachment on Mr. Murphy's account was ordered released.

TRADE STUDENTS
SEE IRON FLOW

Thirty Local Boys Watch Foundry and Shops Work in Hartford Factory.

For the purpose of affording the students an opportunity of receiving first hand impressions of the most modern methods of manufacturing and to show them that the instructor on they are receiving in the State Trade school here is similar in every respect to the methods followed in commercial practice, Director A. A. Warren, arranged for the various departments in his school to make annual visits to plants where this line of work is put to practical application.

Yesterday afternoon, in accordance with this custom, thirty boys from the mechanical drafting and machine departments including eight high school mechanical drafting students, went to the Pratt & Whitney Machine Company's plant in Hartford. During its four hours visit, the party was guided through the engineering and drafting departments, pattern shop, foundry, machine and tool departments and the big assembly rooms where all machinery is finished and tested before shipment.

Robert Taylor, mechanical drafting instructor, was in charge of the Manchester visitors.

The schedule of the tour through the plant was so arranged that the boys were in the foundry at the time the cupolas were opened. The boys had a chance to see how furnaces are charged and the molten metal poured into the flasks. Mammoth castings weighing many tons were castings in the foundry for a considerable time and their stay there proved the most interesting.

FRIENDS GIVE SHOWER
FOR MISS ALICE NYQUIST

Miss Alice Nyquist of Linden street was the guest of honor at a miscellaneous shower given last night at the home of her sister, Mrs. Carl Anderson of Edgerton street. Mrs. Algot Johnson, another sister, and Mrs. Charles Olson, also assisted in making the arrangements.

Thirty-five relatives and friends attended. The living room and dining room were both decorated with yellow and green streamers. On the table was a unique centerpiece in the shape of a half moon on which sat a doll holding an umbrella under silver rain—symbolic of April.

Miss Nyquist received a supply of cards on which were rhymed directions telling just where she would find gifts scattered all over the house. Games, music and refreshments occupied the balance of the evening.

Miss Nyquist's engagement to Arthur Hoglund of New Britain was announced a short time ago.

The French have adopted the use of the English word "home," their nearest approach to a word of this meaning being "foyer," a hearth.

WAPPING

Miss Majorie Felt and her friend, Miss Lucille Grant, from Manchester, are spending a few days of their spring vacation at the home of Majorie's aunts, the Misses Winnie and Grace Smith of Hartford.

Although it was a rainy night, there were about fifty people at the open meeting of Wapping Grange last Tuesday evening and listened to a very interesting address by Mr. Lewis from Storrs Agricultural college, taking for his subject, the four "H's," which was "Head, Heart, Hand and Health."

There was also a piano solo by Mrs. Franklin Wells and a duet, violin and piano, by the Misses Dorothy and Helen Frink. Also another interesting address by Rev. Truman H. Woodward, and the program closed with a pantomime. The Grangers are all reminded that at our next meeting, which will be on the tenth of May, each one is to bring a small remembrance for Miss Gertrude Maynard, who has been ill for several months. These are to be placed in the May basket and taken to her.

William Felt has rented his tenement house to a Mr. and Mrs. Jackson and family from Hartford.

The reports from the Manchester Memorial hospital are not very encouraging in regard to Henry Sweeney, who was taken to that institution a few weeks ago.

The April Sunday School social will be held at the Parish house next Friday evening. There will be games for all and Walter N. Foster's Sunday School class will provide the refreshments for everybody. All are cordially invited.

EVERY DIME COUNTS.

As this is written it seems certain that Manchester will promptly meet her quota in the nation-wide subscription to the Red Cross food relief fund. This, of course, was to have been anticipated. Our town is not one of those that lag in such crises.

But the $1,000 quota is a very small one. It was based on the President's estimate of a $5,000,000 requirement, made a number of days ago, since which time the flood disaster has multiplied in extent and gravity. There is not the slightest doubt that a great deal more than five million dollars will be needed. So there is no likelihood whatever that Manchester will have done its share by contributing so relatively small a sum as $1,000 to the relief of the vast number of sufferers—now estimated at 200,000.

It always takes a little while for any community to get into the giving spirit—not because of reluctance but because it takes almost any of us a few hours to become acutely conscious of the justice and urgency of the demand. And now that Manchester has hit its stride in the business of extending aid to the flood sufferers it would be too bad if she got the impression that there was no longer any necessity for keeping up the good work.

Of one thing we may be sure. There will not be a ten dollar bill, a dollar, a quarter or a dime, given to this cause, either within or in excess of any quota, that will not go straight to work for the relief of the most widespread destitution and misery that this country has ever known—either in war or peace.

NEEDLESS TIMBER WASTE

More than 15,000,000,000 cubic feet of wood out of the total of 22,000,000,000 cubic feet removed annually from the forests of the United States is wasted, according to estimates made by the Forest Service.

The waste begins in the woods. Trees are unnecessarily broken in logging. Felled trees are often poorly divided into log lengths. Small trees and poor trees are left to rot in the woods. The waste continues in the sawmill. In order to get high-speed sawing, saws with wide kerf are often used, with the result that good material goes into the sawdust pile. About one-third of all lumber is cut by circular saws with wide kerf. The use of thoroughly efficient portable band-saw equipment in small sawmills would effect vast economies in lumber manufacture. A large proportion of the contents of logs is lost in slabs and edgings some of which might be utilized. The development of machinery to handle small pieces would aid in the use of large quantities of material that now goes to waste.

There is waste in the remanufacture of lumber. Approximately half of our total cut is remanufactured into such products as sash and doors, boxes and crates, furniture, vehicles, tanks, silos and agricultural implements. Much waste could be prevented in such remanufacture of lumber by selecting raw material especially suited to making the finished product and by better methods of seasoning and manufacture.

There is waste also in the use of lumber in general construction. Clear stock is demanded by consumers for purposes for which lower grades would be entirely suitable, or even lengths and widths for purposes for which odd lengths and widths would do as well, or long lengths for uses for which short lengths are just as good or better.

The preventable waste does not stop with the finished product; every year great quantities of timber that could be saved by the use of preservatives or by better methods of building construction are lost through decay.

Out of the total annual waste of 15,300,000,000 cubic feet, it is estimated that by the application of present knowledge to commercial operations 5,340,000,000 cubic feet could be saved. The biggest single item of saving estimated to be possible under present conditions is the 1,750,000,000 cubic feet of wood that by preservative treatment could be saved from decay. Other estimates of possible savings are 670,000,000 cubic feet in logging, 600,000,000 cubic feet in milling operations, 750,000,000 cubic feet in seasoning, 750,000,000 cubic feet in the use of small dimension stock, and 1,000,000,000 cubic feet in miscellaneous ways.

STANDING ON "RIGHTS."

The individual most certain of all to "stand on his rights" and oppose to all lengths any intrusion on what he considers his vested interests is the one of least general knowledge and of the most complete selfishness.

Safety of the city of New Orleans, with its 425,000 people and its hundreds of millions of dollars worth of property, demands that, in case there is no unexpected let-up in the flood stress, a levee be blasted in the east levee of the Mississippi river ten miles below the city. To provide a spillway through which the force of the inundation may expend itself.

Immediately that this decision was announced the few hundred marsh farmers and muskrat trappers inhabiting the great, sparsely populated area that would be overflowed, grabbed their guns and hurried to the levees prepared to murder any servants of the state of Louisiana who might undertake to make the breach intended to save the city.

On that tract lay these homes; there they lived their lives; there they earned their keep. Not more than a couple of thousand persons altogether would be affected—and these not in their persons but in their property and in their allocation, because there would be ample warning and time to get everybody out of the spillway region. But to these people nothing that might happen to New Orleans mattered. All that did matter was what threatened to happen to them. The disproportion between 425,000 and 2,000 persons and between hundreds of millions and a few hundred thousands of money did not interest them. So they were ready to take their guns and start killing.

It is entirely possible to have every sympathy with these folks in their distress over their prospective eviction, without having any at all for their wholly selfish disregard for the well-being of another group of people 200 times as large as their own.

But they are a good deal like a great many other persons, elsewhere, who will, if they can, hold on to their own property, their own cash, their own habits of life and their own prejudices, though by doing so they wreck everything and everybody in sight.

BEVERIDGE.

Albert J. Beveridge, former senator from Indiana, whose sudden death comes startlingly to a country unprepared for such news, was a type of man never wholly absent from the politics of the United States yet always rare. He was primarily a scholar and an intellectual. He was one of those persons who have profound convictions and who are far too honest and too proud to sacrifice them to expediency. How such a person ever attains to high public office is a puzzle to the ordinary student of public affairs—but the fact remains that they sometimes do.

Albert Beveridge was of Presidential timber. He was for years in the thoughts of many Americans, in politics and out, as a possible incumbent of that office at some time or other. Yet he never became an active probability. Most likely he never would have even had he continued in active politics.

There are a good many citizens, members of his own political party and of the opposing as well, who have always felt that Beveridge was the strongest factor, in an intellectual sense, in the Progressive Republican movement of which Theodore Roosevelt was the titular head. And the kind of man who devotes himself to such movements as that, without standing to win the glory in case of success, is not the kind who, as a rule, attains to Presidential nominations.

An uncompromising, honorable thinker, Albert Beveridge was an outstanding example of the intellectual in American public life—and of what even the most brilliant of them may expect.

"VILE LIQUOR."

A Bridgeport clergyman hired a spotter to spy on the police of that city as to their relations with bootleggers. He got, of course, the kind of report he was after. One can always get any kind of a report one wants from a spotter. The details are not particularly interesting, with one exception. On the strength of the spotter's finding the minister declares that a "vile" variety of liquor is dispensed in the blind tigers and hole-in-the-wall groceries, which, he says, are frequented by the police.

The good pastor seemed to be a little surprised and shocked to discover that the bootleggers are not selling 1903 Canadian Club, Old Hermitage or Parr, but rectified denatured, with prune juice, moonshine greasy with fuel oil and low grade German-made Scotch spilt with H2O and bolstered with red pepper.

Why there should be any astonishment about the one outstanding achievement of the Volstead law is not clear to any person of imagination. It was always entirely possible to prevent general dealing in genuine distilled and malt liquors. It was never possible to prevent general dealing in the horrible concoctions which are the logical and inevitable substitutes.

Good liquors are obtainable to those who can afford excessive prices but the Bridgeport minister could hardly expect to find them on sale in places where the ordinary wage earner gets his drunk material.

One need not doubt even the word of a spotter in this particular connection.

Old Master's

This woman lived and wore life as a sword To conquer wisdom; this dead woman read In the sealed Book of Love and underscored The meanings. WASHINGTON LETTER

By RODNEY DUTCHER

Washington, April 28.—One of these days the telegraph wires may tell us of the arrest of the villains who are said to have fished and altered certain important documents of state with a view to fomenting serious trouble between the United States and Mexico.

The most unfortunate phase of the mystery is that although there have been all kinds of indications to convince one that certain papers passing from the State Department to the American embassy in Mexico City fell into the hands of President Calles, there have been nothing but unconfirmed rumors, dark and deep, to show that the papers had been tampered with to the point of alteration or forgery.

A definite declaration from the State Department might clarify this situation, but it hasn't been forthcoming. It may or may not be significant that there has been no condemnation of the Mexican government because it bought secret American papers from someone supposed to have pilfered them. Although this sort of espionage presumably is practiced throughout the world, its discovery during a period of strained international relations might have been expected to call forth a shout of holy horror at such immoral practices.

On the contrary, it is generally understood that the relations between the two nations are sweet and peaceful compared with what they were a couple of months ago, and it is even added that the discovery of the forgeries or whatever they were has brought a new understanding and a certain sympathy where little but discord had previously existed.

Reports of what happened are so vague and conflicting, however, that the whole atmosphere is foggy. This same foginess enables numerous persons here to suggest that if the documents in question really did prove an unfriendly attitude toward Mexico or an unseemly interest in revolutionary activities, Mexico might have been able to play them as trump cards.

Meanwhile the Sphinx of Sixteenth street, Mexican Ambassador Telles, is more silent than ever. All he admits is that he has read about the "forgeries" in the newspapers. But he grins like a Cheshire cat is supposed to grin.

Your correspondent saw Telles shortly before he left for Mexico City on a trip now supposed to have been connected with the pilfered documents. Telles was agitated. He was worried. He was working late into the evening in his office, sending and receiving cablegrams. From what he said there was not the slightest question that he feared the smallest development might tip over the apple-cart of international relations.

Back from Mexico City Telles was again his suave, urbane and humorous self. At times he was almost hilarious. If he wasn't sitting on top of the world he was at least sitting pretty. A mind reader might have learned a great deal.

CHAPTER XVII

Who won the war? Some said it was the MPs—some others said it was the boys who fought the Battle of Paris—But—credit should go where it is due. In Rheims is M. Albert Floquet. M. Floquet is an assistant manager of a large champagne establishment. He was in Rheims in 1914, when the Germans first came through. You understand, the Germans had little opposition in their first drive toward Paris. Marshal Joffre adopted tactics involving an elastic retreat. Marshal Joffre knew about the wine caves of Rheims and Epernay and many other cities in the Champagne sector, now known to thousands of Americans who fought through them. So the Germans came on. They shelled Rheims, and they shelled Epernay. Capture was a simple matter as the terrorized citizens fled. Then, for three or four days, the offensive slackened. This slackening gave time to the harassed French and English troops, who stabilized a line on the Marne. And when the Germans took up their work of going on to Paris—Well, as M. Floquet expressed it: "They went on with a wine bottle in one hand and a rifle in the other." The caves at Epernay were looted of vintages up to 50 years of age. So also were the caves around Rheims. And, according to tacticians who know their drill regulations, champagne and offensives cannot be conducted together. General Mangin did some heroic work at Verdun. The Americans crashed through the Argonne Forest. The English were catapulted at the Scheldt Canal. And, no doubt, everyone helped to win the war. But—the wine caves of Rheims and Epernay, in which millions of bottles are stored away today, delayed the German offensive in 1914. So—Who knows? Who knows? Maybe—Tomorrow: The Chemin des Dames.

As each day goes by Mr. and Mrs. Sherman have more reason to be proud of their home... and why not! Almost everyone who has visited them made some complimentary remark either about the attractive arrangement or about the furniture itself.

Wouldn't compliments about your home from your friends make you proud? Of course!

The reason why the Sherman home is so attractive, is because Mr. and Mrs. Sherman chose their furniture carefully and thoughtfully.

And we are proud of the Sherman home, too... because the furniture is Garber Brothers' fine quality, and we helped them plan the home.

Mr. and Mrs. Sherman have not been a bit bashful to tell their friends that the furniture came from Garber Brothers and how we helped them furnish within their budget. Their friends came here, too. And so we have benefited considerably through the service rendered the Shermans.

We go a long way to make a satisfied customer. While we are interested in getting many customers for our store to-day, we are more interested in our reputation of to-morrow. To treat customers well to-day is to benefit through their satisfaction to-morrow.

"WE OUGHT TO PART," SAYS RONALD, "NOT AT ALL," REPLIES VILMA

By DAN THOMAS
Hollywood, Calif., April 28.—Should two stars work together in a series of motion pictures? The most famous team in movie-dom disagrees on this subject. Ronald Colman says "no." Vilma Banky says "yes." And the disadvantages cited by Colman are the very things pointed out by Miss Banky as the most helpful.

Ronald Colman and Vilma Banky

It is so helpful to work with the same man all the time, the blonde star told me. "One soon learns just what he will do in practically every situation and it makes our own acting much easier. I would like always to have the same leading man but I know that can not be." "I think the public likes to see the same combination on the screen, too. People get used to seeing a man and woman play together and they don't like to have them separate. Then, too, it is sometimes hard to find types that are suited to each other."

THE ROMANCE OF AMERICA: Andrew Jackson (10)

In the bitter presidential campaign of 1828, Jackson found himself faced continually with the opposition's use of his wife's name in derogatory gossip. That made Jackson more determined to win—to lift Rachel above those who slandered her. The fact that she and Jackson were married before she was divorced was made an issue.

Jackson, man of the people, was swept into office by an immense majority, scoring 178 electoral votes to Adams' 83.

One of Jackson's first acts was to discharge every ally of the opposition from the public offices under his control.

Jackson thus was blamed for inaugurating the "spoils system," but many of his biographers insist it was his love for his wife who died just after his election, that caused him to remove from office those who had badly used her name. Jackson was a pure democrat, sprung from the people, and his presidency promised a stormy story. (To Be Continued.)

New York, April 28.—The latest of yesterday's vogues to totter in Manhattan is the Little Theater movement.

The Provincetown—once an old barn in the heart of Greenwich Village—where Eugene O'Neill's plays were first given would have shut its doors after two disastrous seasons but for some up-town money invested in a present try-out.

And the Neighborhood, which had become the final word in artistic expression, announced from its obscure location in the turgid center of New York's east side that it had given up the ghost after philanthropies of half a million had been spent.

The Cherry Lane saw but one or two productions during the season and an attempt at French Grand Guignol failed, despite the presence in the cast of a banker's son.

The Triangle tries to carry on the "horror" tradition, but its spectators are lured largely by the fact that they can sit about at tilted tables, with considerable "pecking" possible among youngsters at the rear of the tiny place.

Meanwhile, the vogue having captured great sections of the nation, the smaller cities show great strides and, to the best of my recollection, Dallas, Texas, and not Manhattan, holds the trophy for the best little theater company. When the annual tournament was held last season New York was not even in the money.

Those figures who figured in this theatrical tradition have grown many years older and drifted away. Few of the originators still apply themselves. Up in Provincetown, on the cape, some of the oldsters rejuvenate their once bright idea during the summer vacation season at the old theater on the wharf where it first started.

Susan Gaspell, who contributed some of the finest one-act plays that came out of the early days, has long since been widowed and remarried and has not had a new play in many a moon.

Frank Shay has abandoned his Village bookshop, edits a play anthology now and then and has even succumbed to short-story writing.

Pierre Loving now writes for the American papers out of Paris, Vienna and way points.

Floyd Dell has long since "gone popular," writing novels from his Hudson river cabin.

Harry Kemp alone has stayed "literary vagabond," going about from garret to garret, penning rhymes, memoirs and what-not and making gestures over on the East Side now and then toward little theater revivals. Edna St. Vincent Millay now composes grand operas and has settled down to marriage. Roscoe MacGowan long since moved "up-town" and contributed to the welfare of a Broadway and Chicago movement. Eugene O'Neill grows a bit skeptical of the Broadway producers and let Chicago try out his last presentation, while his "Marco Millions" establishes a precedent by coming out in book form before seeing a stage production.

And so the story goes. . . . Many, many new faces and names have come, but none have touched the spark of the pioneers, who made theatrical history.

The new little theater reputations will be made by Dallas, New Orleans, Duluth, Cleveland and other cities.

Manhattan starts many a movement that other places finish. GILBERT SWAN.

Five Superb Acts Back Up Douglas McLean in "Let It Rain"—Here For 3 Days.

So good is this bill that the booking office has told Manager Jack Sanson that it is the best that could be offered at any price, and some of the better acts are scheduled for engagements in Hartford next week.

Madoza Revere heads the bill. This is a combination of flashing scenery, wonderful dancing and beautiful girls. It has made a hit wherever it has appeared this season and is considered one of the very best of the circuits just now. Davis and Darnell have a comedy act with a full sized automobile to

"At first I refused the advice of friends to try Tanlac," he says. "At last I agreed to give it a fair trial. My appetite and digestion showed marked improvement in a little while and my nerves grew steadier. Soon I was eating normally and feeling strong enough to get back on the job. DAUGHTERS OF MIDAS

THIS HAS HAPPENED
BILLY WELLS, NYDA LOMAX, and WINNIE SHELDON, department store employees, are mentioned in the home of their employer, T. Q. CURTIS, for one year, because he wants to help them further their ambitions. Billy, who wants to become a concert violinist, is the only one of the three who is sincerely ambitious, the other two having led to enjoy T. Q.'s generosity.

Her voice betrayed her terrible disappointment. "Oh, hello, Ralph."

A battle starts between the girls when they learn that T. Q. intends to give one of them the year in which they have learned his instruction. Billy, who does not know they have learned his instruction, is unwillingly drawn into the battle, and this, together with her infatuation for DAL ROMAINE, nephew of Mrs. MEADOWS, the hostess, causes her to lose interest in her violin. Through everything, she tenderly remembers CLAY CURTIS, son of her father, who has just inherited himself and is living with the Welles family in the best part of town, working in the Truman factory.

Now go on with the story CHAPTER XXXIV

DURING the week that followed

Delhart Romaine did not give Billy Wells much opportunity to forget that she was in love with him, but he took care that no one else should know their secret.

She was so absorbed in her love for him and in her crying, desperate need of him, that she hardly realized that she was neglecting her music. On Wednesday, when she had explained to Professor Navratil, haltingly, shamefacedly, that it had been impossible for her to come for her violin lesson on Monday, the music master had curtly informed her that it did not matter, that she had been taking more lessons than were good for her.

"Once a week," Navratil had told her firmly. "I have more pupils now than I can manage."

She despaired herself for the swift runoff of relief she felt as she calculated how much the new schedule of lessons would save her. She—Billy Wells!—she who had prayed on her knees for a chance to study violin under a real master!

But Dal Romaine filled her heart and mind too wholly to allow her much time for brooding over her undeniable loss of interest in her violin. She did promise herself to practice religiously four hours a day, but Dal came every morning and her violin was laid down with scarcely a sigh so that she might give herself to his arms. And so there was little violin practice in the mornings. The afternoons were delightfully home, with bridge parties, shopping parties in gay little parties of two or three well-dressed, easy-spending girls; with matinees, concerts and drives, with receiving callers and making calls.

One afternoon when Winnie had been called to the phone and had been dressed in a fury of haste, to rush away to some unmentioned appointment, Billy stood in the hallway of the third floor, holding on to the staircase for support. The look which Winnie had cast at her had been charged with malicious triumph; her lips had been curled in a mocking, secret-revealing smile.

As Billy stood there, looking dizzily down the well of the circular staircase, winding clear to the first floor, Mrs. Meadows came out of her own room, rustling soft draperies of lilac silk.

"Has Winnie gone, dear?" she asked gently, but her pale brown eyes were frowning with worry. "I wanted to give her a message for Dal. I should have spoken to him when I answered the phone."

She went on, in her soft, complaining voice, but Billy did not hear her. She leaned far over the stair railing, and the only coherent thought in her mind was that if she flung herself into that deep well her heart would never hurt again.

"Oh, dear! There's the phone again! Having three girls in the house—"

"Mrs. Meadows trailed her draperies into her room to answer the telephone, which had extensions in the bedroom of each of the girls.

"For you, Billy!" Billy drew back, dazed, nauseated at the thought of what she had almost done. She ran to her room, thought in her mind with a gasp of astonishment, her heart pounding with hope that the call might be from Dal, that he wasn't stealing off with Winnie after all!

"Hello! Billy Wells speaking!" Her voice was low and breathless. "Hello, there! This is Ralph, Billy."

"Oh!" Her voice betrayed her terrible disappointment. "Oh, hello, Ralph! How are you?"

"Great! Listen, Billy, you've been promising to go through the factory with me, and if you're not doing anything else, you might as well come along with me today. What say? I'll call for you in half an hour. You can see 'em assemble an automobile, and if you like the bus, you can take it home with you under your arm. Will you come, Billy?"

Her first thought was that, if she went to the Truman Automobile

Factory, she would see Clay Clay! She hardly remembered his existence this dreadful, ecstatic, nerve-tearing week, but now she knew she needed, more than anything else, for the sake of her sanity, a sight of his dear, kind face, with its wistful, boyish black eyes—open, frank eyes, that were never filled with anything more sinister than music-begotten dreams.

"I'd love to, Ralph!" she cried, her voice breaking on a note of tearful gladness.

The Truman factory buildings sprawled over two acres of valuable ground on the north edge of Colfax. Factory laborers reached it by buses, operated without cost to employees by the Truman company. It had given her a queer shock of pride and grief and anger one day to see Clay Curtis, reared in luxury and natural heir to millions, hanging to a strap in one of those crowded coaches.

Ralph Truman hung out bits of amazing information on the magnitude of the industry. Billy scarcely listened; her nerves were too tense, her head too light and dizzy from lack of sleep to concentrate, but she caught phrases, tried to make them mean something.

"Here we are, Billy dear," Ralph told her, as he swung his car along a curving driveway to park it before an imposing building of white marble, with magnificent Doric columns. "This is the main office building. We'll take just a peep in the plant, and let you see how automobiles are made."

The vastness of the offices bewildered her. It seemed to her that hundreds of stenographers and clerks paused fleetingly at their desks to smile upon good-looking Ralph Truman and the small, boyish figure that he was escorting with such evident pride.

They crossed to the factory building.

Boys will be boys. They've thrown a barbed wire entanglement about St. Hilda's College, one of the women's colleges of Oxford University all because the male undergraduates insist on serenading the girls on co-ed property, and even invading their sacred citadel. To be sure the boys did not begin the invasion until they were forbidden to serenade. Then they began serenading water-spouts, sneaking up fireescapes, and taking any means to send cold chills up and down a matron's spine. Now the barbed wire is up. "Away! bad, vile men!" which is just one more reason why I have no patience with middle-aged women of Victorian ideas having jobs with girls. Nothing can so injure a girl as exposure to the idea that men are evil, strange creatures whose serenading must be staved off, even with barbed wire, if necessary.

Male "Step-Ins" Not a few he-haws have been spent on the fashion note that males, stalwart, doughy males, will wear "step-ins" on their manly forms this year. The "step-ins" must be fashioned of charming pastel shades—orchid, apple green, lavender, flesh, mauve, baby blue and perhaps even vampy black georgette with lace edgings and insets. Peach, I believe, is said to be the favorite shade. And why not, and what of it? There is tradition, I believe, that women like the conventional, ugly, uninteresting, drab, plain clothes that men wear—that they are masculine, et al. Well, we don't. And if the males think they can make us mad by matching our peach step-ins, they have another guess coming. Haberdashery windows will be interesting places to gaze.

mother wouldn't let him play with matches. When the corner came, Tommy got the family bread knife and almost stabbed him. When they said, "Poor baby! you can't blame him, he doesn't know what he has done!" Tommy yelled, in rage, that he did, too, know what he had done that; he was glad he'd killed her—now he could play with matches. It takes a psychological authority to say just what ails Tommy—just how abnormal he is. He is precocious, certainly, to even know that guns and sharp knives mean death. But I am inclined to think that Tommy really performed an act of mercy to his mother when he killed her. She has been spared much.

It's the Eyes, Says Coffin, That Are an Index of Woman's Inner Life.

It is in eyes such as these that Haskell Coffin sees greatest beauty.

By HASKELL COFFIN

Eyes often speak more eloquently than lips. Therefore, eyes are vastly important in the scheme of beauty.

Expression is all-important to eyes. For eyes are an index to the intellect and the soul. They register a woman's inner life. They speak of her sweetness and understanding. They betray her selfish character.

But, of course, certain rules apply to beauty of the eyes. Perfection of eyes depends on spacing, contour and expression—perhaps in the reverse order in which these factors are mentioned.

Wide-spaced eyes often intrigue and create the impression of restfulness and peace. Alice Joyce, for instance. Narrowly spaced eyes may suggest nervous temperament, restlessness. The eyes that give the same satisfaction that a perfectly-proportioned art object instinctively gives are just an eye's distance apart.

The perfect pair of eyes has well-shaped, full and well-formed sockets. The upper lid's formation is especially important. Too full-shaped eyes suggest voluptuousness. Pr protruding eyes are distinctly unpleasing, while deep set eyes are the most beautiful.

Color usually has much to do with the beauty of a pair of eyes. Sometimes a pansy-violet or some strange amber tint may intrigue. I happen to prefer gray-blue eyes. Some warm to the snappy, black eyes of Spanish origin. Others have their pulse quickened by green or sky-blue tints. The form of the eyes and the lashes that fringe them are as important as color.

Certain cinema actresses have become famous because of their eyes. Colleen Moore's baby stare, Viola Dana's innocent look under long lashes! Often a good actress can express her whole emotion by a closeup of the eyes. Sometimes the light in them appeals—Norma Talmadge is remembered for the light in her eyes.

Delicate Creation To me the texture and construction of the eye is a marvel of delicate creation, one of God's masterpieces, as fine as a flower, and expressing most of the moods of humanity.

A sidelong flash of eyes, laughing or soulful flirting or pleading are all charming—the very action and flickering changes intrigue—express in to paradise, many times. Behind them is a real soul with happiness and sorrow—many trials endured—and many triumphs win.

Good Nature and Good Health

AVOIDING DISEASE

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN

The highly contagious disease, German measles, usually affects children or young people. Apparently it is transmitted from one person to another by secretions of the mouth, and possibly of the nose.

These may come into contact with a child who has not previously had the disease. In from 14 to 21 days he begins to feel ill and breaks out with a very red eruption, not so raised as the eruption of measles, but of a much brighter color. This usually occurs first on the chest and face, and then gradually spreads over the body.

The temperature is not usually high. The lymph glands, particularly in the back of the neck, swell into hard nodules.

Ordinarily the person with German measles is not so sick as to require much treatment. He should, however, stay indoors until the eruption has disappeared, and should remain away from other persons in the family, particularly children, for at least three weeks.

Of course, the discharges from the nose and throat of the patient in any article soiled by these discharges must be treated by boiling

Job Losing Fear

By Olive Roberts Burton

"If I'd do that I'd lose my job!" "I can't say anything or I'd lose my job!" "I'll have to hurry or I'll lose my job!"

What's the matter with everybody? Well, that's one thing that is the matter, the spectre of fear that haunts the great army of the employed. It has turned into a national disease and is one of the great contributory causes of nervous breakdown and other things as serious.

It is all right for me to sit here at my desk and tell people not to worry. The school teacher without a dependent mother, the saleswoman who faces old age and is saving every cent, the widow with a family to support! I speak only of women, for although men have the complex one, I have noticed it usually in a lesser degree. Except in a very few cases at least, I have not heard men give much voice to the fear of job-losing.

But all the advice I may broadcast about not worrying about jobs will go for nothing, there isn't a doubt, because I cannot make women over nor the thing in their natures that makes it imperative for most of them to worry about something. But I can tell them that it is useless.

Naturally to those who are employed the job comes first. It isn't really the case of the worrying, as might appear, but the result. The more tired we become, the greater the pressure of responsibility, an illness, a thousand outside troubles—all reduce our morale, and the job is the goal usually.

Somebody said, "Thank God for work!" I say, "Amen." And why not let it go at that? If the jinx of job-losing gets you, it's hard to shake him off. Jobs are lost, true! But houses burn, earthquakes occur, people get run over, and trains get wrecked. We can't worry about all of them!

PAULINO AND HIS ADVISERS TO FACE BOUT WITH DEMPSEY

Basque Woodchopper Himself Says Only Reason He's Barred Is That Jack Is Afraid of Him.

By DAVIS J. WALSH

I. N. S. Sports Editor New York, April 23.—Paulino Uscudun and his managerial board, a body of men completely surrounded by one prize fighter, will advance by forced marches on the New York boxing commission tomorrow and when the random oratory has happily ceased, it is intimated that all but one possible barrier between a Dempsey-Paulino meeting on July 1 will have been prostrated. Paulino himself, not a song and dance, did the intimating in person today and the only conception in the way of barriers he could visualize was that Dempsey might be afraid to meet him.

The gentleman was as serious as a broken leg when he made the pop-off in question. He had been informed that Dempsey privately had sneered broadly at his pretensions as an opponent and Paulino figures he can "rap" to the right answer on that one.

"Fear," he observed through Al Mayer, his interpreter, pal and unsevered critic. "What else am I to think?"

The writer could have given him several suggestions, even exclusive of the one about thinking again, but didn't.

Anyhow, Paulino and his bodyguard have jumped to the conclusion that the first thing to do about fighting Dempsey is to have the cause taken off Paulino's suspension in this state and they will attempt to do tomorrow. They intimate that this action is nothing more than a formality.

Reason for the suspension I seems that the gen was set down some days ago at the request of the Massachusetts board because of his marked reluctance to frolic in Boston, as per reputed contract, with Ed Keely. The Boston promoter, Ed Mack, claims that Paulino signed for the Keely fight for April 15 and then thought better of it, for which he is not to be judged too harshly. Keely is a left handed heavyweight, which means aromatic spritz of ammonia to a sap like Paulino.

Mayer claims that no contract was signed with Mack; that he merely told the Boston man that Paulino would fight any satisfactory heavyweight for him. He hastens to add that Keely is somewhat unsatisfactory. That is the story he will tell the New York commission tomorrow and then there will be nothing for it but for the commission to up and apologize like little gentlemen.

At this point, Paulino made sounds like a singing water. "He says: 'After that, Dempsey,'" Mayer interpreted.

Local Sport Chatter

The St. Mary's will organize a baseball team tomorrow night at the West Side playgrounds where a practice session will be held at 5:30 sharp. Outsiders are welcome to tryout as well as clubmembers. The best players will get the call.

Pat Carlson, backstop on the S. M. H. S. baseball team a few seasons ago, plans to enter Springfield College next fall. Two years ago Pat went to Mercersburg Academy but was forced to leave college because of an injury. Pat will play baseball this season with the Saints he says.

Manager Lester Bronkie has called a practice for the Aces baseball club tonight at the stadium and says all members must be present. It is not too late for new candidates, he also states. A game will be played Sunday, but the opponent has not been announced.

"If Tommy Conran and Joe Canade don't cut out the squabbling and start bowling pretty soon, they won't find many fans watching them when they get down to business," was the remark of a well-known follower of the pin-topping game last night.

Schoolboy baseball will start next week, both the High school and the Trade school being slated to open tough schedules.

Promoter Jack Jenney is planning on Waterbury and Springfield boxers for the amateur boxing tournament which will be held at Cheney Hall next Wednesday night, but there will be many others.

Portland (Oregon) goes in for big pitchers on its ball club. The club of Tom Turner has two slab-artists on its payroll who are several pounds over the 200-pound mark. One is Tomlin, who weighs 225, and the other is Kinney, who weighs 214 pounds.

EFFECTIVE HITTING PRINCIPAL FACTOR IN JUDGING BOUTS

That Is Advice Jack Sullivan Gives Manchester Fight Fans and Judges.

By the Sports Editor It appears that often times when boxing fans at Cheney hall take exception to decisions given by the judges, the merry razzberry is entirely uncalled for. Then again, there are times when it is just the opposite. All of which leads to the moot question of just how should a boxing contest be judged.

Fought fans the country over have argued long and loudly disputing the victory or the defeat, as the case may be, of their favorite ham-and-egger on the hoof. Of course, when said ham-and-egger is being fried in the warm rays of the arc lights in a horizontal position, there is obviously a sad chance, we are sorry to relate, to go the limit.

So, I am going to turn over a little space to one of the country's cleverest referees—Jack Sullivan—and let him spill the inside stuff for you on how he calls the turn so expertly in the bouts at Madison Square Garden. Sullivan is cheered as often and boomed as little as any other official in these more or less critical United States.

O'Sullivan says: "I decide the winner on effective hitting, boxing skill, defense, attack and generalship. 'Here's the way I pick the winner of a round. I emphasize EFFECTIVE hitting. Blows perfectly timed and aimed. I don't give a man any credit for landing a 'lucky' blow no matter how hard it hurts. If he's a wild swinger he's not a classy boxer—excepting, of course, a K. O. There is no arguing then."

"Showy jabbing does not mean anything to me either. And remember, the referee is the ONLY man who is in a position to see just how badly a man has been struck on a knockdown. Aggressiveness counts for nothing, unless it is accompanied by effectiveness."

MANCHESTER MAY HAVE A BASEBALL LOOP ORGANIZED

Saints, C. B. A. A. and Community Club Expect to Compose Twilight League.

With the information that the St. Mary's are going to put a ball club on the field again this season, it seems highly probable that a town league will be formed. While nothing definite has been accomplished along this line, it is understood that the matter will be considered at length within the next fortnight.

The league, if it is formed, will, in all probability, be a three-cornered affair with the Community Club, Cheney Brothers and the St. Mary's being represented. The Rev. Virgil Elliott will decide to organize the Sons of Italy or Redmen in which event, the league would have four entrants. Virgil has not yet, however, made any announcement to the effect that he will again pursue the thankless role of a manager this summer.

If a town league is formed, undoubtedly the games will be twilight affairs. This would mean that if three teams competed, two games would be played every three weeks; if four teams were entered, there would be at least one game per week and maybe more.

OVER 3,000 ATHLETES TO COMPETE IN PENN RELAY

National, International and Olympic Champions Start Activities Tomorrow Morning On Franklin Field.

Philadelphia, Penn., April 23. (United Press).—Wearers of the spiked shoe, from national, international, and Olympic champions to the plain everyday schoolboy competitor, were gathering here today to compete in the Thirty-third University of Penn Relay, Carnival tomorrow and Saturday.

Franklin Field, scene of the annual carnival, will be dusty with the feet of more than 3000 athletes from 500 institutions, who will compete in the two day program of more than 100 events. Harvard University, which last year did not compete at the carnival, has entered four teams this year, adding to the largest aggregation in the history of the event.

One of the features of a many-featured program will be the 100 and 200 yard special races, in which an effort will be made by three of this country's greatest sprinters to break the existing records for the distance.

Jackson Scholz, graduate of Missouri; Henry Russell, Cornell's greatest sprinter and Roland Locke who established many marks while a student at Nebraska, will race against Father Time in the special events.

Scholz is joint record holder of the 200 metres dash Locke holds the 220 yard world's record of 20.5 seconds and Russell is the joint holder of the intercollegiate century mark. Russell also broke, unofficially, the 220 yard intercollegiate record, breasting the tape in 21 seconds.

In addition to the sprint starts, a complete relay team from Cambridge University will compete against America's best. Lord David Burghley, who was a star performer here two years ago, will again lead the British athletes. The titled Englishman, victor in the 400 meters hurdles in 1925, will again run

In that event. Burghley is also entered in the 120 high hurdles, an event in which he is English champion. Along with his teammates he will compete in the shuttle hurdle race and in several short distance relays.

In addition to Burghley, the following Cambridge athletes will run: G. C. Weightman Smith, T. C. Livingstone Learmonth, H. F. Bowler and John O. Richardson.

In the decathlon, then ten-event grid which starts tomorrow morning and concludes late in the afternoon, the best all-round athletes in the country will vie for supremacy. Among the decathlon competitors is a minister, the Rev. Virgil Elliott, pastor of a church at Bethany, W. Va., who is also studying theology at a seminary there.

The Western Conference has six of its teams entered in the various events Iowa and Ohio State principally in the relays and Indiana, Chicago, Wisconsin and Michigan in the special events, will represent the Mid-west.

From Alabama, Georgia, North and South Carolina, Virginia, Maine and the New England states and from as far west as Utah have come athletes for the competitions.

Judging by the indoor marks hung up this winter and the improvement shown by many of the contestants in the past year, it would not be surprising to see a number of new records established during the carnival.

New rules for the high jump, the pole vault and hurdles recently adopted by the I. C. A. A. A. will have their first baptism in competition at the carnival. In the pole vault Sabin Carr, Yale's ace, holder of the world's indoor record of 13 feet 9 1-4 inches will meet a great field of vaulters including Glenzer of Marquette; McAtee, of Michigan State; Harrington, of Notre Dame; and Williams of Cornell.

A brace of muzzle-loading pistols, a silver mold for making bullets and a wooden ramrod used by Napoleon I have been presented to West Point Military Academy.

NOW YOU Ask One

A LITTLE NATURE

The first five questions in this list deal with nature; the rest are more or less scatterbrained. The answers await you on another page.

- 1—How does a lobster swim? 2—What animal can close its ears and nose under water? 3—How does a whale feed its young? 4—In what part of the world are found spiders so large and strong that they often ensnare birds in their webs? 5—From the wood of what tree is most artificial silk produced? 6—What day is the Mohammedan Sabbath? 7—Why is Mussolini called "Il Duce"? 8—From what nation did the United States get Alaska? 9—What constitutes a verse in poetry? 10—Who is editor of The American Mercury?

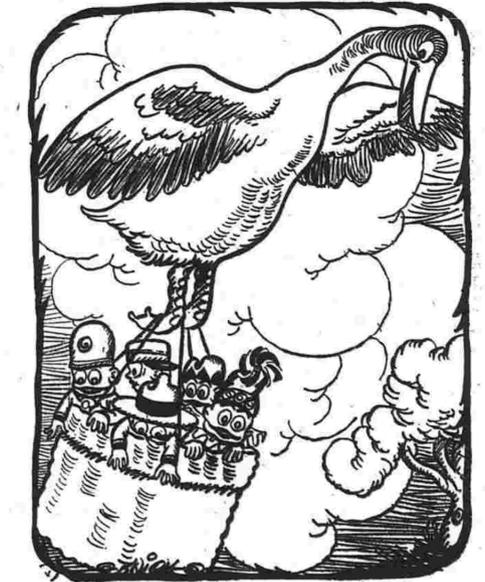

In order to put any money in the savings account, it's getting so the modern family man is compelled to resort to trickery.

A real estate salesman of West Texas had just finished describing the glorious opportunities of that part of the country. "All West Texas needs to become the garden spot of the world," he said, "is good people and good water."

The first real circus, aside from the games of the ancient Romans, was the show started by Phillip Astley in London in 1770.

THE TINYMITES

(Read the Story, Then Color the Picture)

Said Mother Goose, "You Sleepy heads had best run off and find some beds. I think a very good night's sleep is just the proper thing. Upstairs a lot of cois I keep. Just crawl right in and go to sleep. Then jump up in the morning when you hear the 'arm clock ring." Then came the merry cry "Good-night," and every little Tinymite went scampering to the second floor to crawl into a cot. Said Glorvay Tinymite, "Oh, gee! This bed's as soft as it can be. I hope I don't disturb you, 'cause I'll snore as like as not." The others laughed, and crawled in, too. A very proper thing to do, 'cause they had all grown very tired from tearing all around. At mid-night, Mother Goose peeked in and what she saw just made her grin. The bunch were all so sound asleep you couldn't hear a sound. And then they heard the 'arm clock hum, which told them that the morn' had come. "Get up," said

(More excitement or the Tinymites in the next story.)

MAKE BIG CHANGE
IN TROLLEY TRACK

Love Lane Switch Crossover
Goes to North Side of Road in Widening.

Widening of the Hartford road near the Love Lane switch at the foot of Twin Hills by the State Highway Department has made it necessary for the Connecticut Company to start moving its crossover track for the Rockville trolley nearer to the sandbank at the north side of the highway. Connecticut Company workmen have already begun this work and when it is finished the track leading from the crossover will have been straightened considerably and the rails will be over at the extreme north side of the road.

Linemens have been at work moving poles for some time and the track gang will start shifting the rails immediately.

Further up the concrete road on the Twin Hills the State Highway department is finishing the work of surfacing with asphalt. This road is being widened about four feet and when the work is done there will be an excellent asphalt surfaced road from the terminus here to Woodland.

JITNEY PLAYERS TO COME HERE JUNE 9

Performance For Kiwanis Camp to Be Given on a Changed Date.

The Jitney Players, who will come to Manchester again this summer under the auspices of the Kiwanis Club Fresh Air Camp Fund, will play at Educational Square on June 9, instead of June 10 as was previously announced.

The fresh air camp has been conducted by the Kiwanis club at the Hebron Game Club and every year a crew of under-privileged boys and girls have two weeks at the camp. The movement is expensive and the Jitney Players are one of the means used to raise funds.

In the event that stormy weather comes on the date of the scheduled appearance of the traveling actors, the performances will be given in High school hall.

GIRL SCOUTS SEEK
BADGE OF ECONOMY

There will be a decrease of worries for the head of the house over bills and extravagant households if the record of the economist badge for Girl Scouts is significant. More than 1,500 applicants were awarded the merit badge in the past year, according to the Research Bureau of the national Girl Scout headquarters.

Saving of ten per cent of her earnings or allowance covering a period of three months, and itemizing accounts, showing receipts and expenditures during that time, are a few of the requirements for the economist badge.

A daily account of one week's marketing and menus, noting use of left overs, preparation of cheap meat cuts and thrift in the uses of milk are also requisites.

The applicants must be qualified to darn stockings, sew on hooks, hem skirts and belts. Qualifications to select and purchase wearing apparel for the appropriate occasion and keep the wardrobe in good condition must be evident. This means that shoes must be kept in repair, stockings darned and the proverbial makeshift of pins avoided.

In addition to this, before the Girl Scout is awarded the Economist badge she must also be the owner of the Needle-woman's merit badge.
