

SOLONS PLAN ON FIVE MORE WORKING DAYS

State Legislature to Start Monday Next Week and Adjourn on Friday, Week's Resume.

Hartford, Conn., April 30.—The General Assembly of 1927 will adjourn after five more working days, starting its week on Monday for the first time during the session. The Legislature will meet through long hours each day until Friday when it is expected that the vast amount of legislation submitted will be cleared away and adjournment without date ordered.

Both Houses are almost definitely committed to the plan of adjournment on Friday. Unless some unexpected occurs to delay proceedings the schedule arranged by leaders should go through. This will mean much hard work as over 150 matters remain to be acted upon, many of which are still in committee and must be submitted to the House in final form. The bills, printed and separate consideration by each House after being reported. Expect no Upsets.

No particularly important upsets are expected, notwithstanding that some of the most important legislation of the year will be considered during this last week. Committee reports have been uniformly upheld, thus far, although a few of the bills were changed almost beyond recognition before final adoption. There is no strong alignment against the leaders which might swing the usual support given to committee chairmen.

Financial Affairs.

The method of stabilizing the financial affairs of the state is still the main problem before the Legislature. Governor Trumbull's plan, incorporated in a bill which would set up a new board of control and finance, has been reported favorably and will be considered early in the week. Final action should come early enough to allow sufficient time for the governor to appoint the commissioner of finance, proposed by the bill, and for the Legislature to approve this appointment as it must be before the commission may take office.

Raising Revenues.

Recommendations by the legislative finance committee as to possible means of raising revenues will also be looked for early. This committee has been diligently at work in the past but its major proposals regarding the state's finance are still awaited. Executive sessions are planned by this committee for the first three days of the next week, and by Wednesday evening the committee should be able to write "finals" across its records.

Six or seven committees still have bills pending on which reports must be made. Beside the regularly introduced bills, a few more are expected to be raised in committee, and in days past a number of judgeship nominations by the governor must be acted upon.

Rejected Bills.

Among the rejected bills were those giving jurisdiction over amateur boxing to the State Athletic Commissioner, various tax exemptions and claims against the state, and a proposal to increase the appropriation for the Mansfield training school and hospital. Then there were favorable reports on the compromise workmen's compensation act amendments, the new finance control plan, a new control board for the soldiers' home at Noroton, and a change in the existing law releasing autoists from liability for injury to guests unless gross negligence is proved.

Many Problems Concerning Appropriations.

Many problems concerning appropriations were successfully ironed out, and the appropriations committee found it possible to go beyond its original estimates of how much might be spent on new construction. The discovery of a large surplus in the state's treasury interested the legislators, it seemed, more than anything else and as a result there is today more or less satisfaction among those who made requests for money from the state.

E. L. G. HOENTHAL HOME FROM EUROPE

E. L. G. Hohenthal Sr., arrived home late yesterday from England. Mr. Hohenthal has been touring Europe during the winter months in the interests of world-wide prohibition. He has not yet returned to Manchester remaining a few days with his sister-in-law in Hartford.

While in England, Mr. Hohenthal presented to the Lord Mayor of Manchester a copy of the Centennial History of Manchester, Connecticut.

RECEIVES ONLY $1,500 MONTHLY

Mrs. Charlie Chaplin Must Skim Along on This Sum, Court Rules.

Los Angeles, Calif., April 30.—Lita Grey Chaplin, wife of Charlie Chaplin, movie comedian, planned today to skimp along on $1,500 monthly alimony.

Judge Walter Guerin decided that sum was sufficient even for the wife of an internationally-known motion picture star. Mrs. Chaplin testified, however, that $3,275 was a meagre monthly budget.

The award was made retroactive to January 10. The judge also granted $5,823 for attorney's fees and other legal expenses, and a payment of $320 a month on her automobile.

Although Chaplin's attorneys closely cross-examined the young wife regarding items in her household budget, there was no indication today that the comedian will contest the award.

LIGHTNING STRIKES PLANE; FOUR DEAD

Other Flyers Following Think Full Tank Was Hit; Bodies Not Found.

Norfolk, Va., April 30.—The loss of a naval seaplane with four men, two officers and two mechanics, was written into navy records today as "an act of God."

A bolt of lightning struck the plane in mid-air late yesterday and caused it to crash into the choppy waters of Chesapeake bay, carrying to death Lieutenant Victor F. Marinelli of Washington, Lieutenant George W. Lehman of Warsaw, Ind., and George M. Michaels and L. E. Poyner, aviation machinists mates. None of the bodies had been recovered today.

Ruin Into Storm

The plane was one of a V-formation flying to Norfolk from Philadelphia, over Matthews, Va., a typhoon storm was encountered. Suddenly there was a flash of lightning and the plane tilted to the choppy waters of Chesapeake bay, carrying to death Lieutenant Victor F. Marinelli of Washington, Lieutenant George W. Lehman of Warsaw, Ind., and George M. Michaels and L. E. Poyner, aviation machinists mates. None of the bodies had been recovered today.

The other planes dived and circled over the spot where the stricken plane crashed but only saw some splintered wreckage, which soon sank.

The tender Teal was sent to the scene and was still searching the waters this morning.

Lieut. P. J. Byrne, who was flying in a plane immediately behind the stricken one, declared the lightning bolt must have hit the tanks. There was a puff of smoke, he said, and then the ship went into a straight dive.

FRAWLEY PLEADS GUILTY OF THEFT

Pays $15 Fine—Appeals Sentence For Assault; One Other Case.

John Frawley of Ridge street pleaded guilty in the Manchester police court this morning to the theft of silk from Cheney Brothers' and was fined $15 and costs. Mr. Frawley was defended in court by Attorney William S. Hyde. He was also charged with assault on his sister, Mrs. Louise Frawley. The row took place on Good Friday at Mr. Frawley's home. The witnesses were Mrs. Louise Frawley, J. R. Fogarty and Mrs. Jennie Fogarty and David Carson. It was because of the row that Mrs. Louise Frawley informed the police of the theft.

Frawley was found guilty of assault and a fine of $10 and costs was imposed. Through his attorney, William S. Hyde, an appeal was taken to the superior court and a bond of $100 was fixed for his appearance.

Harold Wilson of Stockhouse road was in the police court this morning on the charge of non-support. The chief complainant was his wife, who testified that he had not contributed to her support since February. They have one child, and have not been living together since last December.

The court suspended judgment in his case on condition that he pay his wife $7 a week for the support of their child.

POTATOES BARRED.

Ottawa, April 30.—The importation of potatoes from Europe, the Azores, Canaries, Newfoundland, St. Pierre Miquelon, and the state of California, has been prohibited under an order issued by the council and published in the Canada Gazette today.

160 Families Here Change Residence

Spring Flittings of Manchester People Make Many New Addresses; Some Leave Town But New Residents Take Their Places.

The annual spring moving fever has struck Manchester. During the month of April, ending today, more than 160 changes in locations of homes have been made. To most persons this fact is surprising but those who come into contact with moving work say it is nothing out of the ordinary for this time of the year. In the spring and fall of each year such changes are frequent. Last April there were even more changes.

What is the cause of so many packing up their duds and changing venue? Let Royal D. Webster, manager of the Manchester Electric Company, who has to do with almost all the movings, advance his belief:

"There are three primary causes which I have come to take for granted during the many years I have been in connection with people who move from one place to another. First, there is the eternal desire to change; second, the wish for gradual improvement in living conditions; third, the moving made necessary by changes in localities and characters. Then, of course, there are the more or less trivial reasons such as raise in rents, squabbles with the landlord or neighbors, even moving into new homes to avoid house cleaning, and countless other minor reasons. A family often lives in one house until the children become of high school age. Then the children many times get 'bigger and better' ideas and these influence the parents to make a change for the better."

Mr. Webster, through whose courtesy a list of the removals in Manchester for the month of April was secured, says that this list represents more than 98 per cent of the changes in Manchester. The list which follows gives the removals in the order of their occurrence, the last few taking place today.

Henry Le Duc, 27 Woodland to 418 Center.
L. N. Emmons, 19 Florence to 10 Birch.
J. M. Radigan, 54 Chestnut, out of town.
Hortense L. Kleinfelter, 14 Cambridge to 54 Chestnut.
Frank Chetelat, 827 Main to 170 Eldridge.
Fred H. Newcomb, 364 Bidwell to Buckland.

FLYING BAT BREAKS HALL BOY'S NOSE

Other Lads Watching Ball Game Dodge, But Johnny Is Out of Luck.

"All the other boys ducked but Johnny wasn't quick enough. That's why the bat struck him in the face and broke his nose."

Johnny is the 14-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. James Hall and he lives at 65 Wadsworth street. Yesterday afternoon he was watching other boys play baseball at the old golf links. The bat slipped from a player's hands, sailed through the air, missed several other boys and hit Johnny squarely in the face.

The doctor says Johnny's nose is badly broken and he will be unable for some time to return to the Lincoln school where he is in the fourth grade.

ROBS ALTAR BOX THEN DROPS DEAD

Brooklyn Church Thief Ex- pires as Lone Worshipper Surprises Him In Act.

New York, April 30.—The Roman Catholic church of Our Lady of Angels in Brooklyn, was empty yesterday about noon when a heavily built man of medium height entered, took off his brown felt hat and walked to the altar.

The man made sure he was alone and then, taking a wrench from his pocket, unscrewed the nut which locked the offering box. He scooped up the $15 in change, replaced the cover and started toward the church door.

He had taken only a dozen steps when a woman entered. The altar thief gasped as the woman started toward him, then fell dead in the church aisle.

The thief had an expensive watch and a gold ring in which an amethyst was set. He was about fifty-five.

Detectives hope to establish his identity by his eyeglass case, on which was stamped, "Dr. John B. Scott, Philadelphia."

QUICK ARREST FORCED SHIFT IN TONG ALIBI

Accused Chinese Tried to Make New York; Defense Will Now Blame Ong Jing, Herald Learns.

Hartford, April 30.—The exclusive announcement in The Herald last night that the defense would claim that the shooting was done by Ong Jing, proprietor of the laundry on Oak street where early in the morning of March 24 Ong Jing Hem, who worked with him in the laundry was shot, although the state is claiming that the shooting was done by Ching Lung, assisted and abated by Loo Hoo Wing, resulted this morning in further developments.

The official interpreter, Harry Dow of Boston, who is also connected with the federal immigration department in that place, has made it known that Ong Jing has talked with him. He laughs when questioned on the subject and said that the original defense was to prove by an alibi that both men were in New York on March 24, but that the quick capture made necessary some other defense. Ong Jing is in the court building each morning. He seldom appears in the halls and has not as yet been in the court room.

Sam's Life

As he was coming through the hall to the lower part of the building to be taken back to the jail, where he sleeps, he recognized the correspondent and waved his hand. He looks to be less worried than on the morning of the shooting and wears a blue suit, a white shirt and collar and a black bow tie. He dines in one of the restaurants in the vicinity of the court house and is accompanied at all times by a member of Sheriff Dewey's staff.

The Jurors

No. 1, Harry C. Adams, the first juror selected is thirty-three years of age, runs a garage, sells automobiles and does some farming and comes from Canton, that part known as Collinsville.

No. 2, William Hall of Marlborough was at one time town clerk and held several other offices in that town and is the oldest of those selected, being over sixty years of age. No. 3 is Harry E. Case of East Granby, No. 4 is Howard Bidwell of East Hartford, No. 5, Joseph Bidwell of Granby, No. 6, George Duncan, East Granby, No. 7, William Berne, Avon, No. 8, William Nevil, Avon and No. 9, W. T. Jamerson, Bloomfield.

From this list it will be noted that not one of the larger towns or cities in the county has been selected. Bristol had representations in each panel drawn. New Britain has also failed to get a representation, mostly through the efforts of the men themselves and so noticeable was it in the afternoon session yesterday that James Gorman of Thompsonville, after being questioned.

BLASTED LEVEES OF LITTLE HELP

Great Acadian Tragedy Enacted in Flood Area

BY BRUCE CATTON
NEA Service Writer

New Orleans, April 30.—The exile of the Acadians has been reenacted. Fate has repeated its cruel trick of two centuries ago. The people of Evangeline and Gabriel once more have had to bid their homes goodby and taken up the heart-breaking trail to the land of strangers.

When a mighty charge of dynamite ripped open the great levee between Poydras and Braithwaite, 15 miles south of New Orleans, and sent the flooded Mississippi boiling and swirling over the green fields and pleasant homes of St. Bernard and Plaquemine parishes, the Acadians were made homeless again.

For those two parishes were people largely by French-speaking descendants of the Nova Scotians whom the British removed by force from their northern homeland more than 200 years ago—the people about whom Longfellow wrote his immortal poem, "Evangeline."

History has repeated itself.

But whereas the first migration was caused by the wars of Britain against French, the second came as a result of the war of man against nature.

The levee was dynamited so that New Orleans might be saved. The Acadians were in the way. They had to go—and leave to the destruction of the flood the homes they and their fathers had inhabited for many generations.

Prior to the destruction of the levee the exodus of the Acadians went on. It was a tragic sight; a sight to be compared with the frightened flight of French peasants in 1914 before the advance of the field gray armies of Von Molke.

The Modern Acadia

Five thousand people lived in this modern Acadia. The two parishes they occupied were well watered by the name, Acadia.

Homes were banked with bright flowers of blue and gold and crimson and creamy-white, such as a Louisiana spring brings forth in abundance. Their fields were green with sprouting corn. The garden little gardens of the truck farmers were prolific with early vegetables for the big cities to the north. On the horizon was the flat, sodded line of the levee—the great earthen wall that held back the Mississippi and enabled the Acadians to live in peace.

Water Drops Only One- Tenth of Inch at New Orleans— Break In Arkansas Makes Situation More Serious—Hope Waters Will Widen Breach at Poydras.

New Orleans, La., April 30.—Despite the blasting of the levee at Poydras yesterday and continued dry weather over the entire flooded area, little improvement was noted today in the official reports of river workers throughout the five hundred mile stretch of stricken Mississippi delta country.

The Poydras crevasse opened a new channel south of New Orleans but this morning, fifteen hours after 800 pounds of dynamite had been exploded in the river wall, the spillway was only a little more than 150 feet wide. No further blasting will be necessary, engineers in charge said, but the cut will be watched carefully for several days in the hope that the rushing waters will sweep out a wider channel.

Small Drop

The river fell one-tenth of an inch at New Orleans during the last 24 hours. Virtually offsetting whatever relief had been gained at Poydras, however, was a break in Arkansas at South Bend which added thousands of acres to the 11,000 square miles of inundated territory throughout the Mississippi delta. The South Bend break had been fought off with sandbags and emergency abutments since Monday.

Red River Rises

The continuing rise of the Red river at both Shreveport and Alexandria, Louisiana, warned the levee defenders above Baton Rouge that the crest of the Red river flood still was above the weakened levees at Angola, where a critical situation in the Mississippi delta Wednesday. Shreveport recorded a rise of three-tenths of an inch and Alexandria five-tenths during the past 24 hours.

Crest of Flood

The crest of the Mississippi main channel passed Vicksburg Friday afternoon, recording a rise there of more than half an inch and confirming river engineers in their apprehension that the Mississippi and Red river crevasse would meet in the vicinity of Angola. Fears for the Angola levees caused former Governor Parker, director of Louisiana relief activities to call for 200 flat boats for possible use in that vicinity. They were enroute to Baton Rouge at daybreak. Levees south of Baton Rouge were reported holding well.

More Guardsmen

Five additional companies of Louisiana National Guardsmen were ordered out for relief work and levee patrol, brought about the first complete mobilization of the state forces since the World war. The arrival of two additional Coast Guard craft made five of these swift federal boats available at New Orleans today.

Fate was against the city of New Orleans in the Poydras blasting enterprise. The section of levee selected for the operation was an unusually tough one and held so firmly against three successive dynamite blasts that engineers were manifestly disappointed at the size of the crevasse there were able to blast out.

Several hundred persons remaining in St. Bernard and Plaquemine parishes when the Mississippi began to cascade into the new territory were being carried out of the danger zone today by a special river patrol under the direction of New Orleans civic organizations. More than 4,000 citizens of the territory sacrificed to the security of New Orleans were encamped here today.

EVACUATING TOWNS

Pine Bluff, Ark., April 30.—Evacuation of practically every small town in southeastern Arkansas was under way today as motor boats and trains rushed people to safety before the rushing torrents of the Arkansas river, let loose by a levee break near South Bend.

Five counties—Chicot, DeSha, Ashley, Lincoln and Drew will be flooded from the new break, as will three Louisiana parishes—East and West Carroll and Moorehouse.

Hundreds fled their homes today. A relief train left Goulet, Ark., a few hours after the break, loaded with flood refugees. The already flooded towns of Duman, Tillar, McGehee, Arkansas City, Gould and Lake Village will receive from three to five feet more of water.

ANOTHER DIKE BREAKING

Memphis, Tenn., April 30.—The main Mississippi river levee at Glasscock, La., was near breaking this morning, according to a report received here by government engineers.

If the break occurs it will relieve the situation from Baton Rouge southward, it was said.

TRANSFUSION FAILS TO SAVE McNAMARA

Stamford Football Captain Dies From Effects of Kick Received in Contest.

Stamford, Conn., April 30.—Funeral services for J. Howard McNamara, former captain of the Brunswick school football team will be held here Monday afternoon and the body will be taken to Brooklyn, N. Y., for burial in Evergreen cemetery. McNamara died late yesterday after a long struggle for life in which his school companions gave their blood. McNamara was kicked in the abdomen in a football game at Greenwich last fall and developed gland troubles which led to his death.

Miss Anna Schade, a Stamford friend, was among those who gave blood to the boy. An aunt also was on the list. Every member of the Brunswick school team also was listed as ready to aid him and several were chosen.

Mr. Gray Did It. I Had No Hand In Murder At All!

She Told Court—Is Very Tired.

Long Island City, N. Y., April 30.—Mrs. Ruth Brown Snyder, the nervy, blonde co-defendant in the sensational Snyder-Gray murder trial, was resting in her cell in the Queens county jail today confident that her story told on the witness stand had made a good impression on the jury and steeled herself for the ordeal of cross examination on Monday. This relentless grilling which is to come will test her mettle to the limit.

"I'm Very Tired"

"I am very tired but expect to pick up strength over Sunday," she told her attorneys this morning. "I feel bad that I had to interrupt the court twice by breaking down in telling my story yesterday."

"I couldn't restrain my emotions when I had to describe the killing of my husband. My inner self cared me to break. I also felt badly when I had to bring my baby's name into it."

There was no session of court today. Direct examination of Mrs. Snyder will be concluded Monday and then the direct attorney will launch the cross examination.

Gray To Take Stand

Henry Judd Gray, co-defendant, who is also charged with the brutal slaying of the woman's husband, Albert Snyder, art editor of "Motor Boating," will take the stand later in the week and attempt to shoot holes into the story told by Mrs. Snyder.

"Mr. Gray did it—I had no hand in the murder at all"—that was her version, told from the witness stand in a voice which, for the most part, was cold and metallic as it came doubly intensified through the amplifiers.

She testified that not only did she take no part in the beating of her husband to death with an iron sashweight but that she fought to save his life. But Gray, pistol in hand, threatened to kill her if she interfered while he chloroformed the unconscious man as he lay in bed in her home and strangled him with picture wire, she claimed. She was marked with blood from her fight with the little corset salesman and circumstances were so much against her that she agreed with Gray's statement to try and deceive the police by saying burglars had broken into her home and attacked her and her husband.

A Different Story

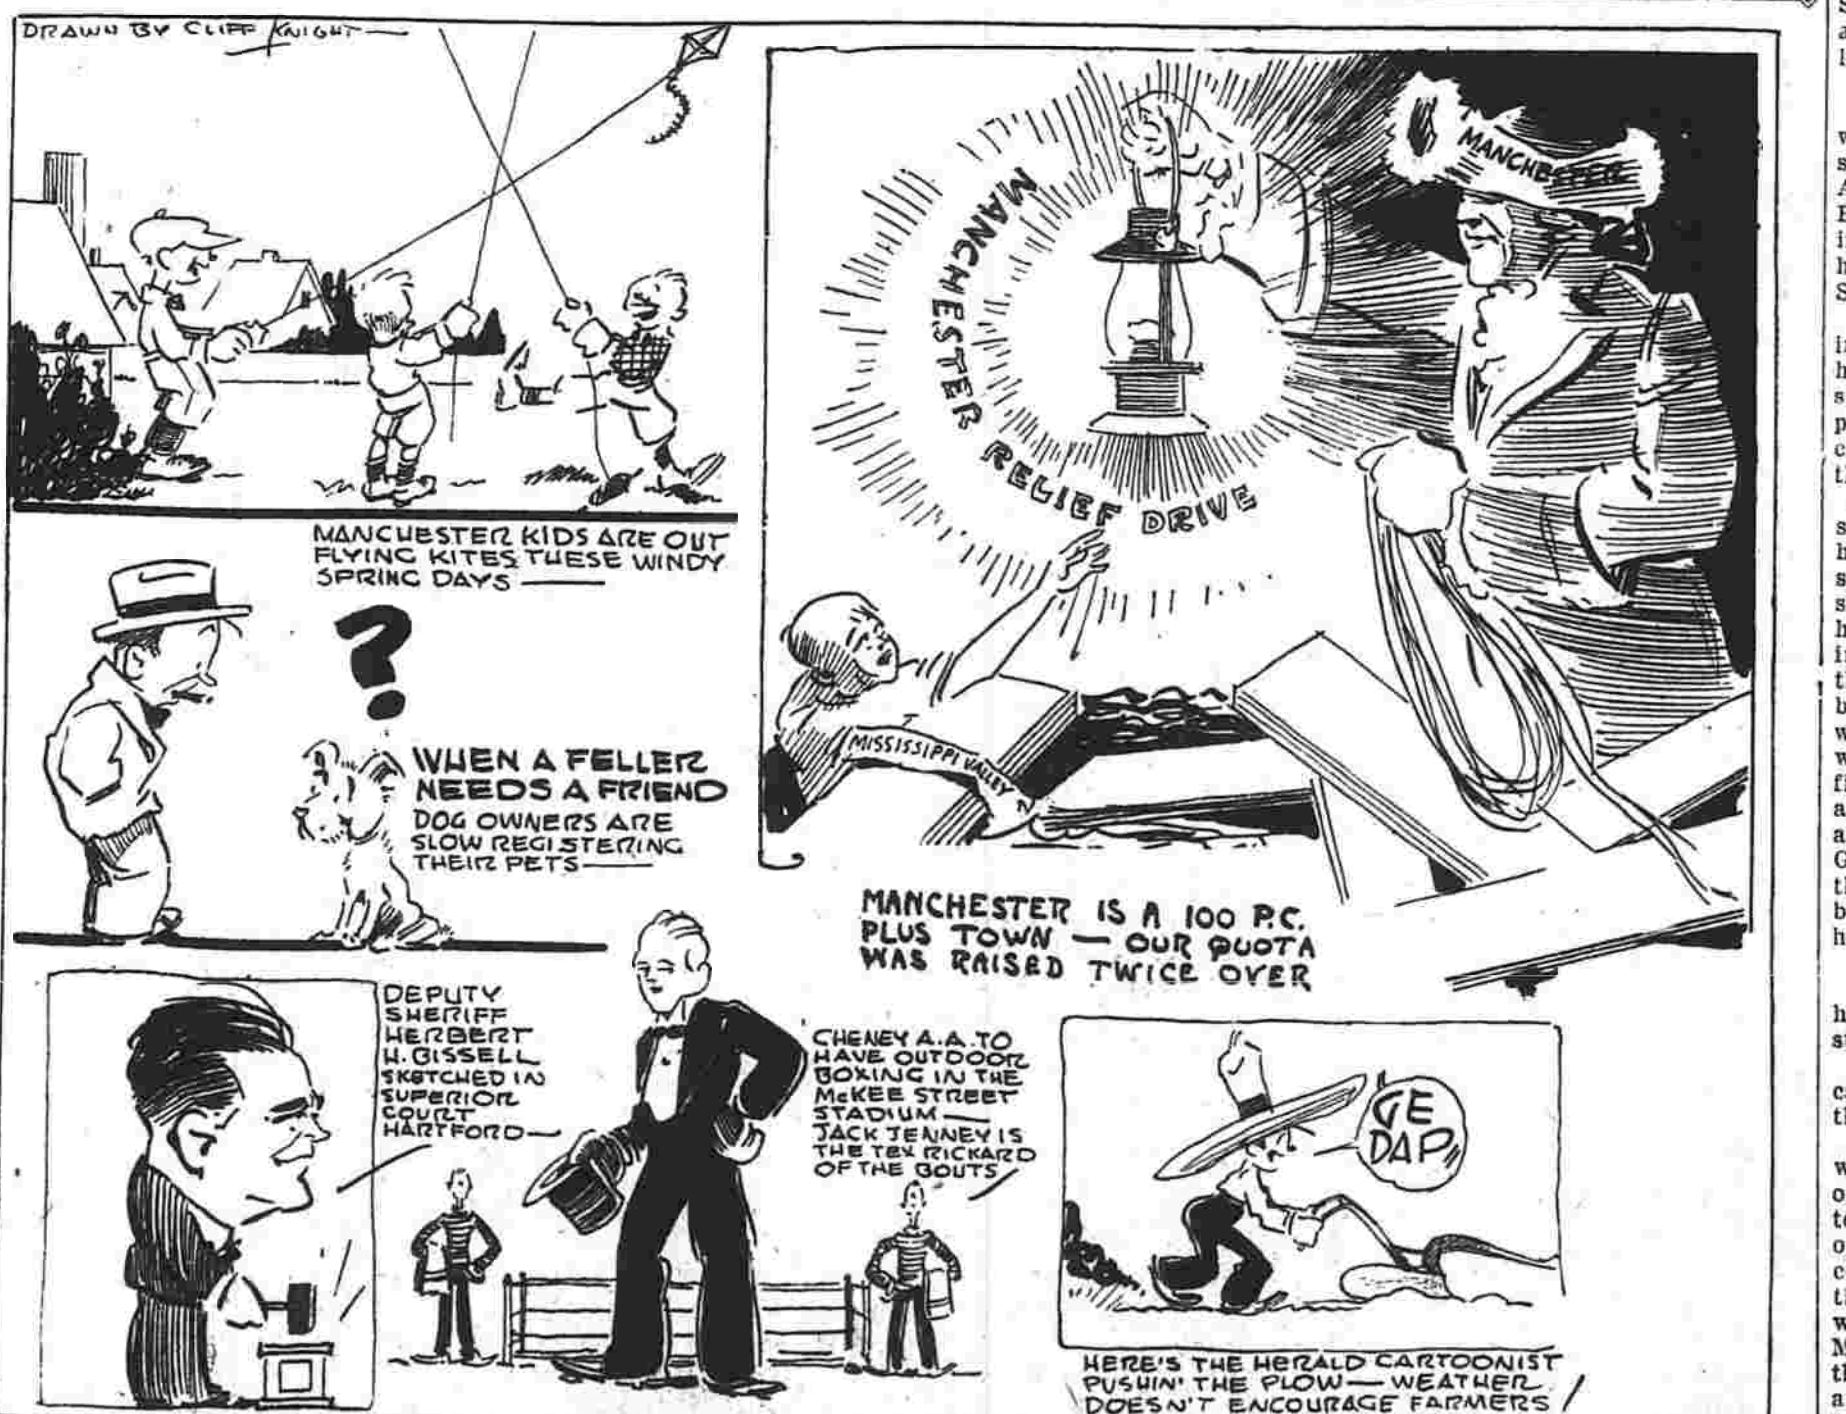

But when Gray goes on the stand he will tell an entirely different story.

"Ruth (or 'Momsie') as he may call her) helped me do it," will be the burden of his story.

Gray will try to show that he was the victim of a master mind, or, as his lawyer, Samuel L. Miller, told it, "a serpent in the guise of a woman." Miller claims Gray could not have been rational when the crime was committed; that he was struggling to free himself from Mrs. Snyder's "domination" and that he was drawn into the bloody affair "when his mind, will and manhood were gone."

QUICK ARREST FORCED SHIFT IN TONG ALIBI

tioned for "some time replied with much heat, "I would not vote for the capital punishment anyway." To the Judge Jennings remarked: "Clerk, notify the jury commissioner that the man who has just been examined be taken off the jury list. It's hard to see how he got on at all."

New Men for Monday

In selecting men for the list to be brought in on Monday Judge Jennings has given instructions to Sheriff Dewey to have 150 men called, who need not be on the jury list, but who will be over twenty-five years of age and who have not been called to do jury duty within the past five years. This list will be drawn by 9 o'clock this afternoon and in this way do away with losing a lot of time.

This will give the deputy sheriffs on Saturday afternoon and Sunday a chance to make their service and have the list all ready for Monday morning at 9 o'clock, standard time.

The witnesses in the case will probably be called to report Monday afternoon. There will be no service on any Manchester resident, a Hartford resident, as the list shows that they are not anxious to service on the jury or have a set opinion. On one occasion during the examination of sixty men, twenty-eight all gave the reason as being opposed to the capital punishment and with exception of three, all lived in Hartford or West Hartford.

Changes Question

In order, too, to add speed to securing the remainder of the jurors State's Attorney Alcorn has started with the question: "Are you opposed to the death sentence?"

His usual question has been to ask the man's name and if he lives in the laws of the state of Connecticut and would he support them. Then he would add: "Two Chinese, Loo Hoo Wing and Ching Lung are being accused by the state, on an indictment of having hired a taxicab in Hartford early in the morning of March 24 where one of them shot to death a fellow countryman. The automobile then took them to Meriden where they were changed to another automobile and were apprehended in New Haven, indicted and now are to be tried in this court for the charge of murder in the first degree." He seldom changed it, but these were personal reasons that the one having been questioned would reply that they did not believe in the death penalty, which carried with it an excuse from the court.

On Monday morning there seems to be little doubt but what three more will be secured to fill the jury box and there will be no time lost in getting the trial underway.

The nine jurors who have been selected appear each day but do not sit in the jury box. They are given a special room by themselves, taken out at recess and later discharged at night. Judge Jennings has informed the correspondents that with the completion of the that with the jury of twelve men that they would be provided with meals and hotel lodging, as was done in the Chapman case.

It is expected that the state will use about twenty-five witnesses, but the defense will use many less. Longer periods will be taken up in the examination and cross examination of Ong Jins.

HALE'S BABY PARADE ATTRACTS ATTENTION

All that is needed is fine weather for the big baby parade scheduled for Friday afternoon, May 6, and sponsored by the J. W. Hale company.

Mothers are urged to register their babies now at the Baby Shop on the main floor of the store. All babies between the ages of six and eighteen months are eligible for the parade.

Cash prizes will be offered by the Hale company for the baby making the best appearance, as well as the best looking carriage.

The names of the judges will be announced later, unless the store decides that it is safer for them to remain incognito.

It is a long time since a baby parade has been staged in Manchester, and it is expected there will be a small army of entrants.

"THE CANADIAN," BIG FEATURE AT RIALTO

The main attraction on the Rialto's big double feature bill today is alone worth the popular price of admission. This is "The Canadian," Paramount's big super-play, starring the always popular Thomas Meighan in a vibrating and pulsating story of the great northwest. But in addition to this worthwhile production the Rialto presents additional attractions which include a western play, "Double Trouble," "Scoty of the Scots," a two reel comedy and Kinograms. Today's shows are continuous, the prices being 10 and 20 cents.

"Casey at the Bat," starring Wallace Beery, assisted by Ford Sterling and a cast of favorite Paramount comedians is the attraction for tomorrow evening and also Monday. Popular prices of 10 cents for the matinee and 10 and 20 cents for the evening showings will prevail. The picture will be shown tomorrow evening at 7 and 9 o'clock, and there will also be added features, including "Aces of Action," a two reel comedy and a News.

Everyone remembers "Casey at the Bat" as DeWolf Hopper's most celebrated recitation. It is the humorous story of America's best known baseball hero and it is told with all the realism of Wallace Beery, than whom there is no funnier. As the small town diamond idol in love with the village belle and as the heaviest hitter in the big league he certainly smacks "Old Man Gloom" over the highest fence.

YE ANCIENT FISHERS GET THEIR LICENSES

Four Old Timers Whose Ages Tot Up to 322 Years Are Legalized Anglers.

That angling is not entirely a young man's sport is indicated by some of the licenses recently issued here. Four men, their ages totaling 322 1/2 years, have obtained fishing licenses during the past few days.

The youngest of the quartet is James M. Burke, retired grocer, who is a mere 70 years old. Joseph Albiston of Manchester Green is a little older, being 78, while C. B. Ellsworth of Marble street is 86 and the oldest of the four is John M. Allen of Hudson street, who is 88 1/2.

Most of the other licenses issued here have been issued to much younger men.

Another interesting fact is seen when one looks in vain for the name of a woman on the license book. Not one woman has obtained a fishing license at the town hall this year. This does not prove that no Manchester women have licenses, however, for the books at Barrett & Robbins show that at least one has and there may be others not yet returned to the town clerk.

MADE WEIRD GUESSES ON SPEED OF MACHINE

Estimates of 1 to 2,400 Revolutions Filed on Brush That Traveled 527.

A high school girl's conception of speed and that of Mrs. Margaret R. Bolin, of 167 Highland street, were the best of the thousand Manchester persons who took part in a guessing contest as to the revolutions per minute of a motor-driven brush of the Electric Sweeper-Vac at the Manchester Electric Company. The student, Miss Marjorie Etkin, of 58 North Elm street, was the first to guess nearest to the correct number of revolutions and will receive a handsome standing Miller bridge lamp, valued at $20. Mrs. Bolin gets an eight-dollar Miller vanity lamp.

The contest opened April 12 and lasted two weeks during which time over one thousand persons watched the revolving of the brush in the display window of the store on Main street at the south end and tried their luck. Many attempted to time the revolutions by the watch, but in vain. The regular speed is 1,350 revolutions, far too fast for the eye to follow, and so it was purposely reduced to 527. Both Miss Pitkin and Mrs. Bolin guessed 513. Manager Royal D. Webster says that he had guesses from 1 revolution to 2,400, but that the majority were around 800.

P. Frawley and Leo Spandau who have been visiting Mr. and Mrs. John Frawley of Ridge street, will return to New York tomorrow.

CHICKEN COOP FIRE CALLS OUT NO. 3 HOSE COMPANY.

A still alarm was answered by Hose Company No. 3 this forenoon. The fire was in a chicken coop in the rear of Raymond Chartier's home on Oak street. It was caused by the oil burner in a brooder and as the chicken coop adjoined a garage the alarm was rung in. The firemen used a tank of chemicals in extinguishing the blaze. Mr. Chartier lost the coop and 18 baby chicks a few days old, shipped here all the way from Pennsylvania.

PALACE OF HIGH PRIEST NOW SITE OF NEW CHURCH

The International Sunday School Lesson for May 1 is, "Peter's Denial and Repentance"—Mark 14:53-54; 66, 71; Luke 22:61, 62.

Guides do not show casual tourists in Jerusalem many of the most interesting sites. Only residents and students are familiar with the wonderful new excavations and erections outside the walls, to the south of the city. One of the most notable of these is the new church, now in course of erection by the Assumptionist Fathers, on what they, and many others, believe to be the site of the Palace of Calapas, high priest of the Jews who Jesus was first tried and condemned.

Certainly here was once an ancient building. Below it are a succession of cells and dungeons, in one of which, the fathers say Jesus was imprisoned for part of the night between His arrest and His daylight trial before Pilate, the Roman governor. I examined the whole place with deepest interest, especially the traces of Roman days. The church that the monks are slowly building is to be one of more than ordinary beauty.

We know of a certainty that the Roman trial of Jesus was held in the Praetorium, by the Tower of Antonia, near the northeastern corner of old Jerusalem; and the place of the Crucifixion and burial is not far away. The Garden of Gethsemane, too, is near this part of the city. But the traditional house of Calapas lies diagonally across the city, on the southwestern corner; and there are touches in the Gospels which seem to imply that the captive was led a considerable distance from His arrest. At present, the ruins of the palace of Calapas, over which the new church is rising, lie outside of the present wall, on the slope formerly called Mount Zion.

To walk through this church, and then to go in to have the imagination kindled. Here the New Prophet, the very Son of the Father, once stood bound before the Established Hierarchy of the Church of His fathers; misjudged a criminal, jeered, spit upon, beaten and buffeted. The speakers of the day are Rev. W. F. English, Mr. D. H. Zi of Swatow, China; Dr. L. H. Dorchester of Hartford and Dr. R. A. Hume, famous veterinarian missionary of India. A number of our members will go delegates, and all are invited as guests.

Some of those who will teach in the vacation church school in July attended a part of the Institute at Hartford Seminary last Thursday and Friday. Mrs. William Eells, Miss Gertrude Carrier, Miss Leone Palmer, Miss Ruth McMenemy and Rev. F. C. Allen.

The pastor spent Tuesday at the Convocation at Yale Divinity school.

THE REPORTER WHO TOLD IT ALL

Something of a sidelight upon the ripper character of Peter is shed by the fact that it was he who supplied Mark with the material for his story. This earliest of the four Gospels, written by John Mark, a younger man who had his own bitter memories of unwillingness to endure hardness for the Name's sake, when he turned back from Paul, conceals and softens nothing of what he saw and heard. A good reporter was Mark, and a brave historian was Peter. Neither tried to suppress the facts.

Can't you see Mark looking up questioning at the gray-bearded apostle, while Peter, the bold, says, "Put it all in. I denied my Lord. I denied Him thrice. I cursed and swore, and declared that I never knew Him—my own Master, whom I loved! Put it all down; so that every other weak and foolish disciple who comes after may know that, since then, there is no forgiveness and restoration for even me, there is always hope for the fallen. The Christ who forgave and took back Peter is the Christ whom stumbling, sinful men want to know."

So Mark wrote the whole tale, with vivid, personal touches, of that darkest hour in the career of his friend, the fisherman apostle; when, in the courtyard of Calapas, Peter profanely repudiated his Lord. And that passage in Mark's Story is more precious to the reader than the enumeration of all the wealth and wisdom of King Solomon. Few may fellowship with Solomon's experiences; but all of us know somewhat of Peter's black hour.

When Churchism Runs Wild Our thoughts, as we stroll about the grounds that may once have echoed to the stately step of Calapas and his associate ecclesiastics, as well as to the weary footfall of the manacled Prisoner, and Peter, throaty curses and denials of faith are thoughts of the incredible contrast—Jesus, the kindly Helper of men, the Teacher of the loving truth about God, standing a prisoner, arraigned before the highest religious officials of His own faith and nation. This was the supreme instance of Churchism versus Religion; of ecclesiasticism and of institutionalism degenerated into lifeless literalism and formalism.

These horrible haters, who were willing to stoop to low political chicanery, and dared to prostitute justice and truth, represented orthodox gone mad. Strange though it may seem, there is no bitterness and blindness to match the bitterness and blindness of ecclesiasticism. Even out of the simple brotherhood of the friends of Christ has emerged in our own day a Churchism that is liken to the furious institutionalism which plotted against Jesus in the palace of Calapas than

CHRYSLER WINS THIRD TRIUMPH IN AUSTRALIA

For the third time in three successive week advices have reached the Chrysler Corporation of fresh triumphs won by its cars in Australia.

According to these reports Chrysler has been meeting all rivals in a series of grueling tests and have consistently demonstrated their pre-eminent ability in every branch of automobile performance—in speed, reliability, endurance and economy of operation.

The latest message received is a cable telling of a clean Chrysler sweep in what is regarded by the sport-loving Australian people as one of the leading events on their calendar, the Victoria reliability trial. This fixture is held at Melbourne and always brings out a throng of spectators to watch the large field of cars and drivers undergoing the strenuous ordeal imposed by the schedule of the trials.

Chrysler not only took first and sixth places in the chief event of the day, the cable indicates, but was tied for first place in dependability and won the teams trophy. In addition, the Chrysler entries scored the fastest time in all events in the D class and the fastest time in all scoring events during the trial.

Only a week ago the Chrysler Corporation was advised in another cablegram of a signal victory for its cars in the Queensland annual petrol consumption test. In this event, Chrysler captured first, second, third and sixth places, and when a question was raised as to mileage by the Automobile Club officials, who declared that no automobile ever made could possibly have covered so much distance with the small amount of gasoline consumed, the winning Chrysler "60" went over the course a second time and actually bettered its original figures.

A few days earlier the Chrysler Corporation received from the Royal Automobile Club of Australia the official certificate of its record breaking achievement on the Maroubra speedway at Sydney, where a stock Chrysler "70" made the phenomenal speed of 1,000 miles in 95 minutes and covered 1,465 miles in 24 hours—smashing all marks for both events in the Commonwealth of Australia.

This striking feat was performed by a stock Chrysler "70" car with no changes except the addition of an extra leaf in the springs and a free exhaust. The driver was Norman Smith, who a few weeks previous had broken the record between Brisbane and Sydney, using the same car. He covered the distance between the cities in 16 hours and five minutes, a record which is likely to stand, according to Australian experts, due to the extremely bad road conditions which hamper any attempt at sustained speed.

CONFIDENCE

BY GEORGE HENRY DOLE

International Sunday-School Text, May 1. Let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall.—1 Cor. 10:12.

"To succeed in business one must have faith in himself." "He who does not believe that he will succeed is defeated from the beginning." "No one is beaten until he thinks that he is." These popular maxims are both superficial and erroneous. They are the conceits of the natural man. They are the exact opposite of the real power that wins a permanent victory, and is to be desired.

It is not self-confidence that is most worthy, but confidence in the truth; not faith in one's own power, but faith in doing right and in the presence, guidance, and power of God within us. Confidence in self contracts the soul, and makes one's spirit like the scorching winds of a desert. Confidence in truth, good, and God expands the mind, lifts it into the realm of increasing power, and gives living joy.

The more we have of confidence in God and His truth, the less we need of self-confidence. Confidence in God is so comprehensive that it finally renders self-confidence unnecessary. Confidence in the truth and right doing accomplish more than self-confidence can, and in a better way.

3 BURNED TO DEATH.

New York, April 30.—Three persons were burned to death in two fires in Greater New York early to day.

Anthony Richel, 47, and Eugene Richel, his 47-year-old nephew perished in a fire in a Brooklyn apartment house, and five other were seriously injured. John Monague, 46, was burned to death and two men were injured in another fire in a packing box factory in Manhattan.

Alaska, bought by the United States from Russia in 1867, has in the last 60 years yielded 183 times the amount paid for the territory. Salmon, gold, copper, furs, halibut, herring and cod are the principal products in the order of their importance.

WHAT A WHALE OF A DIFF'ERENCE

You know how that cigaret ad runs, about th' whale of a diff'rence a few cents makes. Well, it's funny how they kin git folks t' noticin' a little thing like that—just a few cents diff'rance in a pack o' cigarets—and it's so blamed hard fer so many folks t' see how much more diff'rance they is in buyin' furniture.

They ain't any place I know of where there's more room fer short measure an' low quality an' poor service then they is in furniture. You kin easy take $50 off the price of a parlor set, er a kitchen range—er $10 out of a floor o' linoleum by poor layin', er $5 out of a house full o' shades by cheap fittin'—an' anywhere's down to a few cents worth in th' price of most anything. But it sure makes a whale of a diff'rance in what you get for your money.

Leastwise that's how we figger it—an' we believe in givin' full service an' full quality first, last an' all th' time, even if it costs us something t' do it, er even if the customer pays a little more. Let th' other fellar cut his own neck fer th' few cents diff'rance in price.

But when y' come right down to it, y' don't pay no diff'rance anyhow—not even a few cents t' get the extra service an' satisfaction that goes with out way of doin'. As far as payin' goes, in th' long run an' on th' average, y' probly pay less—'cause in choosin' bargains y' take yer own chances on th' price ez well ez th' quality. If you get a bargain, somebody else gits stuck, an' it might be you.

Yes sir, they's a whale of a diff'rance in sellin' furniture, but it ain't that few cents in th' price.

FRANCO-AMERICAN PACT.

Aristide Briand proposes a Franco-American compact forever outlawing war between the two countries. Such a treaty might be described by some more or less cynical critics as a sentimental gesture. But there are worse things than sentimental gestures. There are worse things than pledges. Many a drunkard has been redeemed by the taking of a formal pledge who, without it, was unable to redeem himself.

A war between the United States and France is about the most unlikely eventuality that could be imagined. At no point do the interests of the two nations conflict in such a way as to promote active ill feeling. At no conceivable point are they ever likely to so conflict. There could be no imaginable profit for either in a war. There are no conditions and no circumstances likely to lead to war.

Yet France would like such a compact. She doesn't want it by way of assurance of peace between the two countries, for that is not needed. She does want it for the sake of its effect upon the rest of the world to assume that such a pledge of amity means more than its surface meaning. She wants all inquiring friends to get the impression that America would again be ready to go to the defense of France if the latter were attacked. She wants to create "atmosphere."

There has been no reaction whatever in this country to the Briand proposal. Yet there may be. Much water will have run under the bridges by the time Congress meets again. And by that time it would seem to be about as likely as not that something in the way of a special compact, forever taboing war between this country and France, may have been signed and ready for submission to the Senate. If there is anybody in this country who can think of any good reason why we should not be willing to enter into such a deal with a country that we would never fight, anyhow, he must be singularly gifted with the capacity for objecting. Aside from Mr. Borah or Jim Reed we can't at the moment think of such a person.

STILL A STUNT.

Aside from the sportsmanship displayed by Bert Acosta in voluntarily withdrawing from the field as a candidate for pilot of the Belanca monoplane Columbia, which is to try the New York-Paris flight next week, leaving the job to Clarence D. Chamberlain, the impressive thing about the Acosta action is that it brings home to the public the slight margin of safety in such undertakings. It was to relieve the plane of sixty pounds difference between his weight and Chamberlain's that the famous aviator sacrificed his ambition.

Sixty pounds would not seem to be much in comparison with the weight of the load which any trans-Atlantic flying machine must pick up, in gas and oil alone, but evidently in the mind of the deeply air-wise Acosta it is a vitally important matter.

It is important enough, perhaps, to give pause to those untechnical enthusiasts who are continually forecasting that by next year, anyhow, we shall be flying across the Atlantic in commercial planes and taking our planes and maybe our fliers with us.

Heavier-than-air aviation has a long, long way to go before it becomes a rival of the sea-going ship—and the lighter-than-air variety a longer way yet.

Many years ago a man named Blondin walked a tightrope across the Niagara river at the Falls. But that feat has not resulted in swarms of people chasing each other across that chasm on a two-inch hawser.

FORESTS MORE THAN TIMBER.

The use of forest land should not stop with the growing of timber. We can, as well as not, derive from it large additional services of several kinds. Forest lands are natural recreational areas, many of them occurring in the more remote and mountainous districts, and forest cover constitutes one of their greatest charms. They can be made to better the national health, through outdoor recreation, and to supply food in the form of game. Wild life of all kinds will add to their appeal. The water power which is now, and will be even more in the future, one of our outstanding resources, depends largely upon forest growth for the regulation of stream flow and the prevention of silt in reservoirs. Water supplies for irrigation also depend upon a permanent forest cover.

The forest problem of the United States is one of our outstanding social and economic problems. It is not too much to say that we must have timber and that we must use the land. Fortunately the solution of both these phases of the forest problem lies in one and the same measure, the growing of timber on this land. Magnificent virgin forests have shown the possibilities; our task is to help nature repeat what she has done and improve upon it. We can also produce game for food, create opportunities for recreation, and insure the maximum utility of streams for navigation, water power and irrigation.

WRONG REPRESENTATIVES.

There is a perfectly understandable tendency on the part of white men in Asia to stick together. It is the instinct of the pack, and the individual who does not in some measure yield to it must either be an unusual sort of person or else actuated by a very special definite purpose. It is not to be wondered at that American consular officers, and even members of the American embassy at Peking, including Minister MacMurray, have in the course of time come to feel themselves to be part of a Caucasian solidarity in China.

Inasmuch, however, as it is now the settled policy of the American government, under President Coolidge's administration, to preserve complete independence from all entangling European alliances in China, it would really seem that this country ought to be represented in that disturbed area, at this extremely crucial time, by diplomatic and consular officers animated by their own government's policy rather than by the policy of the All-Caucasian entente which has just naturally grown up over there among the foreign representatives.

It would be no disgrace to those persons who find it so difficult to adjust themselves to the Coolidge policy in China if they were to be transferred to some other posts of service and replaced by new men who have not undergone the drugging of independent American responsibility that comes through the inter-association of white diplomats in the Orient. And it would simplify matters greatly.

GET THE GUNS.

Temperament, gin and lethal weapons constitute a trinity that is operating to reduce the population of Hollywood. And make room for more movie-struck youngsters from the provinces to acquire the gin and gun habits that seem to essentially complement the temperaments out there.

It has become so common a thing for a Hollywood matron to get subject of her wifely adoration that these Movieland murders sometimes fail to make the first page, nowadays.

Will Hays would probably have the dickens and all of a job to keep either the gin or the temperament out of Hollywood, but how would it do for the motion picture industry to put it in all contracts that the home of the actor should be held subject to search by a Movieland detective force and that any gun found there should be confiscated.

It is easy for a person who associates with tragedy while on the job to revert to the trigger as a method of remonstrance while the white mule is kicking. A gunless Hollywood might produce a lower death rate.

QUEER QUIRKS OF NATURE

By ARTHUR N. PACK, President, American Nature Ass'n.

Of the origin of some very common things the average person knows very little. To a great many city dwellers witch-hazel is just something that comes from the drug store in a bottle or that a barber sometimes sops on ones face.

The witch-hazel, under ordinary conditions, grows to be a shrub from six to twelve feet high, but has been known to attain a height of twenty feet. Witch-hazel, or to use its scientific name, Hamamelis virginiana, is found from Nova Scotia to Minnesota, and southward to Florida and Texas. The flowers appear in October and November, often after the shrub is entirely bare of leaves, and dressed in its gay little streamers of yellow the shrub brightens the autumn woods.

Like maple sugar, succotash and many other things which we prize highly, the Indians taught the white man the use to which the fresh leaves and twigs of this shrub could be put and the healing qualities of its extract for cuts and bruises and chapped and sunburned skin.

Superstitious people at one time placed much confidence in the use of divining rods made from the forked twigs of the witch-hazel for locating water and also precious metals.

One queer quirk about witch-hazel is the manner in which it shoots its seeds upon the bursting of its seed pod, these seeds being expelled with such force as to fly from five to twenty feet away. It takes an entire year for these seeds to develop from flower to maturity.

WASHINGTON LETTER

By RODNEY DUTCHER. Washington, April 30.—The Hon. Frank L. Smith of Illinois and the Hon. William S. Vare of Pennsylvania are now, to all legal and technical purposes, just as good senators as the other 94 and with just as many prerogatives as any of the new senators.

This means that both are now occupying large and comfortable office buildings, with bright and shiny new name plates on the doors. Or rather, their office staffs are occupying the offices, for there is not a deal of work to be done and neither Senator Smith or Senator Vare is often here.

Both gentlemen are on the federal payroll and so are their secretaries and clerks. However, unwise either or both may have been in making the large campaign expenditures for which the Senate is expected to lose them, each has shown a certain acumen in selecting a former newspaperman as his secretary. William H. Culver is secretary to Smith and W. R. Douglas is secretary to Vare.

There are also posted plants, sent, as is the custom, by the government's botanical garden. And a full quota of furpitude and a couple of electric fans and all the rest. Vare has numerous books and government documents which he moved over from his office in the House, but it appears that Smith failed to inherit anything of the sort from the late Senator McKinley, whom he defeated in the primaries.

Thus Smith has only the nucleus of an office library, thus far—consisting of Party Campaign Funds, by James K. Pollock, Jr., The Chicago Primaries, by Wooddy Rules, and Manual of the U. S. Senate, the Illinois Blue Book, the Chicago Daily News Almanac and the Congressional Directory.

The work in both offices has been very light to date, consisting of such matters as checking with government departments for constituents, taking up individual immigration cases and asking the State Department about certain Americans in China. Some questions were raised in the Department of Agriculture as whether Smith's allotment of agricultural bulletins should be delivered to him, but he's pretty certain to get them.

Senators Smith and Vare are so comfortably ensconced because the Senate accepted their certificates of election late in the last Congress. They have everything a senator has except confidence concerning the future. There is some talk in their favor, but it is not expected to be strong enough to allow them to sit with the Senate in session or to allow them to occupy their offices long after Congress convenes in December.

Observation of certain senators engaged in the homely occupation of eating lunch in the Methodist building about the Senate office building blasts the thought that our Republican statesmen are abandoning democratic institutions although the position of the Democrats is doubtful.

Your correspondent sat within tiddley-winking distance of Senators Borah, McNary, Ashurst, Bayard and Swanson as they went in for the famous 50-cent Methodist lunch. Borah and McNary sat together, and the three Democrats congregated by themselves on a nearby bench, with backs to the wall as usual.

Now, said your correspondent, who is sometimes known as Old Eagle Eye, we will see what stuff progressive Republicans from the west are made of. Sure enough, Borah and McNary ordered corned beef and cabbage. Let the farmer remember that! And when they were done it was corned beef that was left on the plate and not cabbage!

ENGLISH MUSIC CRITIC PRAISES MEN'S CONCERT

Miss H. L. Burchell, Oxford Graduate, Pleased With Last Concert Here.

Editor, The Herald: I wish to congratulate South Manchester on the rare musical advantages which it is enjoying. I was privileged to attend the concert of the Men's Choral Club on Thursday night, April 21st and enjoyed a splendid performance.

The program was finely constructed. Composers native and foreign were represented, moods grave and gay, tender and heroic. There was also the contrast between accompanied and unaccompanied singing and occasional passages for solo voices. It was an exemplification of the fact that a satisfying variety can be obtained without descending to the cheap or sensational.

The chorus sang with fine vigor and unanimity, shading and expressing the program with excellent cleanness of line in the polyphonic compositions. These things do not come about by chance, therefore Mr. Sessions merits sincere congratulations on his work as conductor.

Armenian Couple Here Tell Of Massacres by the Turks

Mr. and Mrs. Simon Paoeian, Of Maple Street Had Almost All of Their Relatives Murdered—Paint Vivid Picture of Atrocities.

Straggling in a long line across the arid plain there goes a curious company. Flanked by mounted soldiers, the principals in this drama move on—to where they do not know. But they must go on and on, because there is the lash of a leaden-tipped whip for stragglers.

Now and then an aged woman, sapped of her strength by the blazing heat of the desert and worn out by the continual march, falls by the wayside. Even the fear of the whip has at last been overcome and she cares not for the threats of the cruel faced soldier who flourishes it over her body. She has come to the end of the road and all she wants is the opportunity to die in peace.

No excess baggage on this trip. Last Farewell. The aged sufferer says her last goodbye to her loved ones. They crowd around loath to leave her but they are torn away by their guards. Staccato commands are barked by the leader of the train and once more the line resumes its tortuous way. Occasionally a shot is heard and a body sinks to the earth, to move no more. A laugh from the guards dismisses the incident.

For more than 600 years this sort of thing has been going on in that unhappy country of Armenia, according to Simon Paoeian, of 15 Maple street. He knows for he has had almost all of his relatives killed by Turks.

The straggling line is composed of Armenians, driven from their homes by the Turks and headed for God knows where. The able bodied men shot down, the young women taken possession of by soldiers, the forced migration starts. By the time the column has been under way for a week or two it has decreased in size.

Old men and old women have fallen to the ground, to gasp out their last breath. Skeletons at the side of the road, picked clean by the carrion birds of the air, show the line of march. The road is shunned by the desert dwellers, for a taboo has been placed on it by the superstitious priests.

But along these roads has gone the flower of Armenia, held by the Turks in a bondage infinitely worse than that which held the Israelites in Egypt.

In Religion's Name. Done in the name of religion, these crimes to the Turks are sacred duties, acts for which they will receive special privileges in heaven and the personal favor of the Prophet.

For Mohammedanism is not a religion of love. Rather than try to conquer an unconquerable people with kind words, the Turk tries to kill all who will not embrace Islamism—and an Armenian rarely turns against Christianity.

Simon Paoeian and his wife know this. They come from Armenia and Mrs. Paoeian herself lived in that country during some of the most troublous times it has ever experienced. She did not come to America until after the World War and it was not until then that civilized nations began to take notice of what Turkey was doing.

Paints Vivid Picture. Mrs. Paoeian paints a vivid picture of the hardships which are borne by Armenia. She was in the thick of the whole business and was at one time picked out by a Turkish officer for his harem. Her tears and the pleadings of her three sisters and her aged father softened the heart of a Turkish pasha with the result that the officer was persuaded to go elsewhere for a companion.

They live now in a small flat over a store on Maple street. Just a tiny flat with a few rooms but it is home, a home where security and safety are things so natural now that Armenia and its hardships seem like dreams. No more now will they quake in fear when they hear the sound of horses' hoofs. There are no red-freighted leering soldiers to threaten them or drive them out of their home.

Saw Many Atrocities

Seated are Mr. and Mrs. Paoeian and their small son. The man in the background is a cousin of Mrs. Paoeian. He is fatherless and motherless, for his parents and most of his near relatives have been murdered by the Turks.

and somewhat excitable. When he elaborates upon the wrongs done his country he becomes vehement and his English is a bit garbled. But he comes through with flying colors when his wife hears him. His wife is not so excitable. She talks easily and does not gesture with her hands. Nothing seems to break her unruffled calm and she tells of the atrocities in a way that would lead one to feel that it had become an old story. Probably that is the case. In any event, she has seen enough to turn one's heart to stone.

Her father, who once was a prosperous hotel keeper in their native town, died in 1923 at the age of 83 years. He had seen plenty in his day and some of his daughter's stories are those which have been handed down from generation to generation. For this has been going on for many years.

"Religion lies at the root of the whole situation," they say. "In Armenia, as you have read there are the same kind of Christians as in any other country, different only because of the fact that Christianity in Armenia is older than any other and that country was one of the first to embrace the religion."

Controlled by Turkey. "But Armenia has been controlled by Turkey for hundreds of years and during that time life for its people has been one continual persecution by fires and the sword. And all because Armenians are Christians and will not turn to the Mohammedan religion."

Mrs. Paoeian tells this simply as though it were nothing unusual. She sees nothing unusual in it, for it is no more queer to her than an automobile is to us.

"The Armenians are driven out, tortured, killed, their women stolen, all because they will not become Mohammedans. Mohammed said that his religion must be spread by means of the sword, and in this way he has made it the second greatest in the world."

Armenia Christian. "Armenia, however, is Christian and will always be so. That is why we have endured endless suffering for 600 years. We are faithful to our beliefs and torture and death do not sway us from our stand. The Turks know this and therein lies the reason for their unquenchable hatred toward all Armenians."

"We have our Protestants, Roman Catholics and Greek Orthodox Catholics. In that respect we are like this country but here we can worship as we please and nobody has a right to say what we shall do in regard to religion."

She says this proudly for already she has become almost completely Americanized. With the traditions of 60 years of loyalty to Christianity behind her, she is proud that she is a Christian. And this pride is shared by her husband, who loves Armenia as he loves life. He is an American for he saw service with the United States army in France during the World War. It was this service, he says, which is responsible for the rheumatism with which he is afflicted.

"Change or Die!" That is the command given by the Turkish officer when he comes with his soldiers to raid a village. Knowing full well that the Armenians will not change, he has his opportunity and an excuse for pillaging the place. Soldiers enter the houses, tell the inmates to go to the public squares and there they are separated into groups.

"Old women on one side, old men on another side, young men on the third side and young women apart from the others."

With these commands the popular soldiers stand the young men up against the nearest wall and they are shot. Whether they are dead or not makes no difference. They are left where they lie.

Other reason that she is a Christian. It seems like a description of persecutions in Roman times or in the Middle Ages. It is hard to believe that things of that sort could happen in this civilized age, but Mr. Paoeian points out that the Turks are not civilized. They are barbarians, he says; beasts who have no pity, no sense of chivalry, honesty or fair play.

Die On the March. Any excuse is sufficient to start them on tour of the villages, burning Armenian homes, killing Armenian men and driving the women and children to some far off destination which they rarely reach. Fatigue, induced by the relentless driving march, kills some of them. Others die of hunger and thirst, while still others, their spirits utterly crushed, die of broken hearts.

It is a systematic and well thought out plan on the part of the Turks. A wholesale massacre might look too atrocious on an occasion unpleasant action on the part of the bigger nations. Public opinion is against the slaughter of human beings and the Turks do not dare face it.

Their idea is to get the Armenians on the move, and if some of them die on the way, so much the better. And if some are found dead with bullet wounds in their bodies, who cares? And again, if a large number of them are driven into the sea to drown, who can say it was not an accident.

Press Censorship. It is in this way that the Turks get around public opinion. Their press censorship is so strict that many massacres, some of the most brutal and revolting in history have never been heard about. There was no chance that anybody would hear about them for the entire villages and towns were wiped out to the last man.

Families are systematically separated and the members scattered to all corners of the Turkish possessions. A well developed system of slavery exists there, says Mr. Paoeian, and many Armenians are in servitude to cruel Turkish masters.

Young women are captured and sold to rich Turks for their harems. Children grow up in slavery and in a good many cases are made to become Mohammedans. But the race hatred still exists and even though these forced converts are of the same faith as the Turks after a while, they may never become accepted as one of their masters. The nationality counts and an Armenian will always be treated like a dog by the Turks.

Blood curdling tales of torture and cruelty are brought back by Mr. Paoeian. Mrs. Paoeian says that her uncles and aunt, the parents of the man in the background of the illustration of this article, were brutally massacred by the Turks. First they were tortured for the enjoyment of their captors, then when life had almost died they were flung to one side, there to languish and die, their bodies to provide food for the cultures and the wild dogs of the country.

Women Crucified. Young women, stripped of their clothes and crucified, were familiar sights in the worst districts. Untold shame, misery and torture were inflicted on them. Exposed to the jeering soldiery, they stood out as sacrifices to a faith—martyrs in the truest sense of the word.

Clever men, some who had risen to the heights of the professions of medicine, law and teaching, were not spared by the Turks. They were dragged from their homes, shot as soon as possible, and their bodies left in the streets mute testimony to man's inhumanity to man. In this way the Turks hope to uproot all Armenian culture, one of the few things that has stayed with the race through hundreds of years. Turkey knows that the Armenian is superior in intellect and education to herself and is jealous to some extent. That is why the learned men were murdered.

Are Fiendish. "The Turkish mind is a fiendish affair," says Mr. Paoeian. "Plain out and out murder does not always satisfy the Turk; he must have torture and he must see a body writhing in pain before he has had any enjoyment."

"Mohammedanism, as I have said before, is a religion of bloodshed and the Turk believes that if he dies in battle while waging a holy war, he will be brought right to Heaven without undergoing any of the formalities. He believes that killing and it never occurs to him that killing is a sin."

Even the Turkish flag, Mr. Paoeian says, was developed on the field of battle. The great Mohammedan hero Osman, or Ottoman, had fallen, his body slashed and torn by numerous swords.

Origin of Flag. His flag, of pure white, had fallen and on the flag lay his curved scimitar and his crown. Falling on the flag, his blood stained the cloth a deep, rich red all over except for the places that were covered by the scimitar and the crown. These were white.

Superstitious. Turks thought that this was an omen from Allah himself and from that time on their flag was a red field on which were the scimitar and crown. This later developed until it became the star and crescent, the emblem of Mohammedanism the world over.

Emblem of Cruelty. "It is a flag emblematic of cruelty, of bloodshed and torture. It is a flag feared and hated by Armenia; something to shrink from and to dread."

Mr. Paoeian came to the United States 19 years ago and save for one trip back to Armenia, has lived here ever since. He is of the Protestant faith and goes to the Methodist church. His wife is also of the same religious belief.

Mrs. Paoeian came here seven years ago. Her worst experience she tells in a few words.

"The Turks came to my father's house one night while we were having supper. sat with my four sisters and the soldiers came to the door. They walked right in, demanded the cash box and announced that they were going to take the girls away. They were about to lay hands on us but I appealed to the mayor or pasha of the town. It was a long time but he finally ordered the soldiers to go away and not to molest us."

A few years after this experience Mr. Paoeian went back to his native land and brought his bride to this country. They have one child, Albert, who is five years old.

LARGE GATHERING AS CHAMBER DINES Nearly 100 Attend Meeting At Rainbow Inn—Fine Entertainment.

With the exception of the annual banquet of the Manchester Chamber of Commerce the monthly meeting last night held at the Rainbow Inn was the most successful session the Chamber has held in a year. The pleasant evening and the ride out to Bolton, attracted 103 members including a few guests.

The Chamber members enjoyed a first class chicken dinner put on by Landlord F. Pinney for half an hour laughed at the wit of Frank Hyde of Torrington who impersonated a country doctor and told the audience how it was possible to live to be 160 years; dispensed with the business in hand and then adjourned to the dance hall to see the five or six reels of moving pictures of wild life in South Africa experienced by Ostram Enders of New York City.

Austin Cheney, president of the Chamber, presided and after the supper had been served outlined some of the present activities of the Chamber. Town planning in Manchester will soon be a reality. The Chamber directors had taken the matter up with the board of selectmen and Mr. Cheney believed the matter would be brought before the voters of the town at the annual meeting in October. This is a subject that has been before the people of the town for several years.

The same project in which the Chamber was interested was an industrial survey for the town. The committee in charge of this work was represented by Scott Simon who gave the gathering an idea of what a survey would mean. A number of meetings have been held at which manufacturers, as well as business men have expressed themselves as being favorable to the proposition. It is now up to the committee to find some way of financing the project. It is estimated that the initial cost would be in the neighborhood of $3000.

John P. Lamb, who is at the head of the local Red Cross, in a talk told what had been accomplished since last Monday when the appeal came for aid for the flood sufferers in the lower Mississippi valley. The quota for Manchester was $1000. Mr. Lamb said that a check for this amount was sent to headquarters on Tuesday, with the knowledge that Manchester people would raise this amount in a short time. By Thursday morning the first thousand dollars was secured and yesterday morning another check for a thousand dollars was forwarded. It is expected that Manchester will at least send $2500.

Mr. Hyde, the entertainer, sat at the head table and his make-up was so good that many supposed it was genuine. He wore side-whiskers or "Burnsides" as they used to be called and not only looked the part but acted like a country doctor. His advice to those who cared to live to be 150 years and his recipes were such that his audience was kept in a fit of laughter all the time. Mr. Hyde belongs in Torrington and was secured through a Hartford entertainment bureau.

President Austin Cheney complimented Frank Pinney for the fine dinner he had served the Chamber. He then invited the gathering to the dance hall to see the pictures and hear Mr. Enders tell of a recent hunting trip. The trip was to South Africa, with a party of men and the pictures shown were taken on the scene. It was a wonderful exhibition of the wild life and was very much enjoyed. The members of the Chamber were outspoke in their compliments not only for Mr. Pinney but for the whole program.

Local Woman Describes a Miracle, Dead Girl's Ashes Turn Into Rose.

The age of miracles is past, someone has said. Mrs. Simon Paoeian does not believe it, for she saw one with her own eyes.

"It happened in my town. A beautiful young Armenian girl was snatched from her home by a powerful pasha. He took her to his house. Angry at her, the pasha killed her, throwing her body into the yard and setting fire to it.

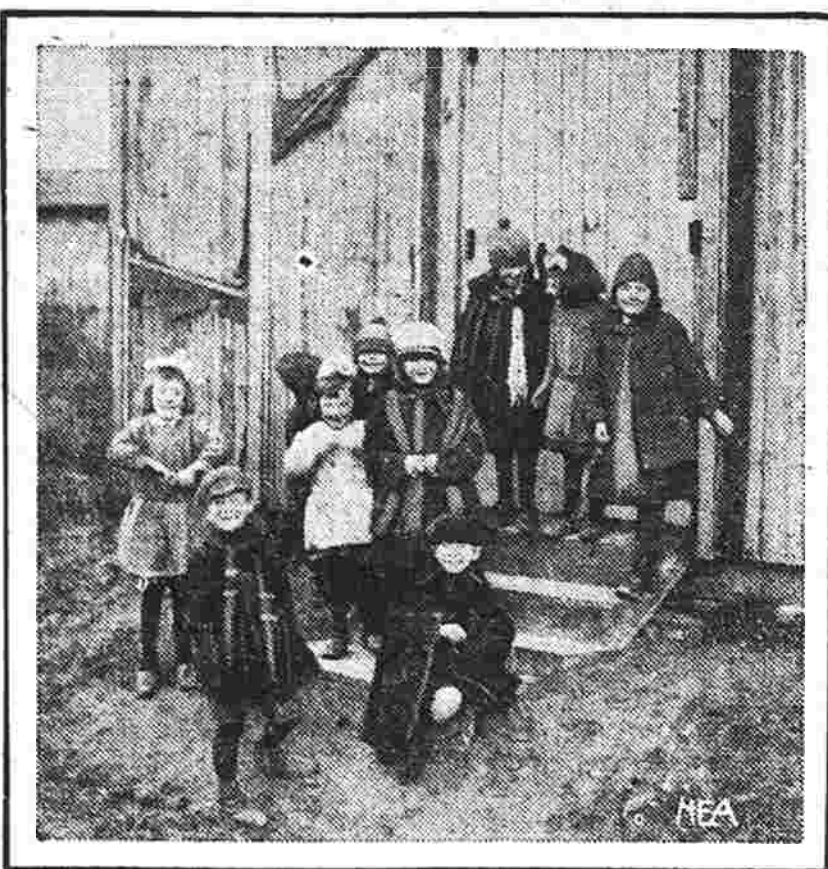

"From the spot where that poor girl's ashes lay there sprang a beautiful blood-red rose."

You can believe it or not. Mrs. Paoeian says she saw it.

Interviewer Welcomed. The interviewer was welcomed to the home by Mr. and Mrs. Paoeian and in a few minutes was listening to almost unbroken stories. But they were told sincerely and with the truthfulness of one who has seen the incidents described.

An Ex-Buck PRIVATE goes back to FRANCE

PAUL ADAMS
by N.Z.A. Service

Children waiting for teacher at a school door in Craonelle. Both school and church were destroyed by German shells; the old American army barracks shown in the picture is being used for both.

This is the 19th chapter in the story of a former doughboy who, going back to France as an advance guard of the "Second A. E. F.," is revisiting all the scenes he and his buddies saw during the war.

CHAPTER XIX

Of course, in some of the war-wrecked regions, there are signs of safety. In the cities the recovery has been magnificent. While traces still remain—a shattered wall here—a crumbling house there—commercial and social conditions are almost normal. But—

While this may all be true of Chanteau Thierry, of Rheims, of Soissons, of Fismes, and of Bazoches—ponder for a moment on Craonelle, on the Chemin des Dames, on Pontavert and on the Bois de Beaumarais.

The peasants are working. They are tilling fields. But everywhere are the faint, dead trees, matted brush and crumbling masonry.

Desolation!

Kilometer after kilometer goes by. Not a human soul can be seen. Down in a valley there's a wisp of smoke rising. Over there two women are spading on a side hill.

ways the effort that a heart-breaking, seemingly endless task for those who have chosen to try! Those peasants do not smile. They plod stolidly ahead at their work. There could be no joy there—it is all sadness. And all so lonely.

You see the cemetery at Pontavert where 20,000 English soldiers are buried.

You see the cemetery at Fereen-Tardenois where almost as many Americans lie.

There's a monument in the dark recesses in the Bois de Beaumarais erected on a spot where a chapel once stood—a monument to all Allied soldiers.

The Second A. E. F. will be a sacred pilgrimage, indeed. Those who go back will find their joys in meeting those they knew during the war. Paris has its pleasures. But up through the fields of battle, from St. Quentin and Verdun, everybody will know a great, all-powerful sympathy. It will be a sacred pilgrimage, indeed.

LON CHANEY AT STATE ESTHER RALSTON STARS ON SUNDAY AND MONDAY AT CIRCLE ON SUNDAY

"Mr. Wu" is Latest Starring Vehicle of Noted Make-up Star—Vaudeville Tonight.

Thrills of a new kind; the haunting mystery of the mysterious Orient, with codes and philosophies that almost pass Occidental belief; these, garnishing a romance delicate as the lotus flower, mark Lon Chaney's new triumph on the screen.

"Mr. Wu," playing at the State tomorrow and Monday, displays Lon Chaney in a new angle to his old arts. As is usually the case in his outstanding plays, Chaney uses intricate make-up for an intricate character; but this time he goes beyond his usual portrayal.

He invades another race for his character, as the silent, subtle and sinister mandarin, versed in the knowledge of ages, almost uncutting in his insight into human character and his enormous power, pursuing his relentless program of revenge against a family who wronged him.

The dramatic climax, in which woman's intuition is pitted against the wisdom of the Orient, in a resolute duel of wits between Chaney and Louise Dresser, with the life of her son as the stake, is one of the most astounding pieces of dramatic action ever given the screen.

The new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer feature is a lavish filmization of the play Walker Whiteside made famous on the speaking stage, directed by William Nigh, creator of "The Five Grapes." It is laid in spectacular surroundings, depicting the mysterious Orient, Pagodas, gardens, and strange temples of old China are the backgrounds for the gripping drama of life, love and revenge.

The cast is a notable one. Louise Dresser plays the English mother, battling the mysterious Oriental for the life of her son, Renee Adoree, the Chinese daughter, whose wrong precipitates the dramatic situation. Ralph Forbes, the English son, Claude King as Muir, the old Scottish governor, Anna May Wong, Gertrude Olmsted, Holmes Herbert, Mrs. Wong Wing and other well known players appear in a great cast in the production.

ESTHER RALSTON STARS AT CIRCLE ON SUNDAY

Appears in "Fashions For Women" With All-Star Cast; Picture Is of Paris.

Women again! The Circle theater had gone in to the woman theme rather heavily during the past few weeks and the latest offering that will be made to Manchester fans tomorrow and Monday is "Fashions for Women," starring Esther Ralston and others.

Embellished by a wonderful cast the picture itself has the four-fold attraction of humorous situations, fairy tale romance, the fascination of a dual role and styles enough to touch any woman's heart.

Just because she resembles a famous mannequin, the most talked of woman in Paris, Esther Ralston, an impish devil-may-care cigarette girl, is selected to impersonate the noted model at a huge fashion show. The double role is particularly well filmed and the different personalities of the two women, the cigarette girl and the model, is exceedingly convincing.

For, being the same person, only a careful differentiation of mannerism—a stride or tilt of the head—can serve to distinguish between them.

Tonight and this afternoon George O'Hara's funniest comedy, "Yours to Command," and the thrilling animal picture, "The Outlaw Dog," will be seen for the last time. O'Hara is one of the most popular of the younger film stars just now and this latest picture of his is better than ever. Plenty of serious comedy is provided in "Yours to Command." O'Hara, as a wealthy New Yorker driving through Oklahoma, meets an attractive girl, who believes him to be merely a chauffeur. When the girl's father strikes oil and the family move to New York O'Hara arranges to continue his role of a gasoline jockey, and from this point the story moves rapidly forward to an exciting climax. A thrilling fight, a breath-taking auto race, and an ingenious method of obtaining a police escort, to pass through the jewel-thieves' ambush, are features that will stand out in the spectator's memory.

THE ROMANCE OF AMERICA: Andrew Jackson (12)

In his war on the United States bank as a citadel of privilege, Jackson was opposed by his own cabinet and the Senate. When Jackson ordered William J. Duane, secretary of the treasury, to stop depositing public money in the bank, Duane declined and was displaced. Jackson appointed Roger B. Taney who carried out the order.

Feeling ran so high that the Senate passed a resolution of censure against Jackson, the first such proceeding in American history.

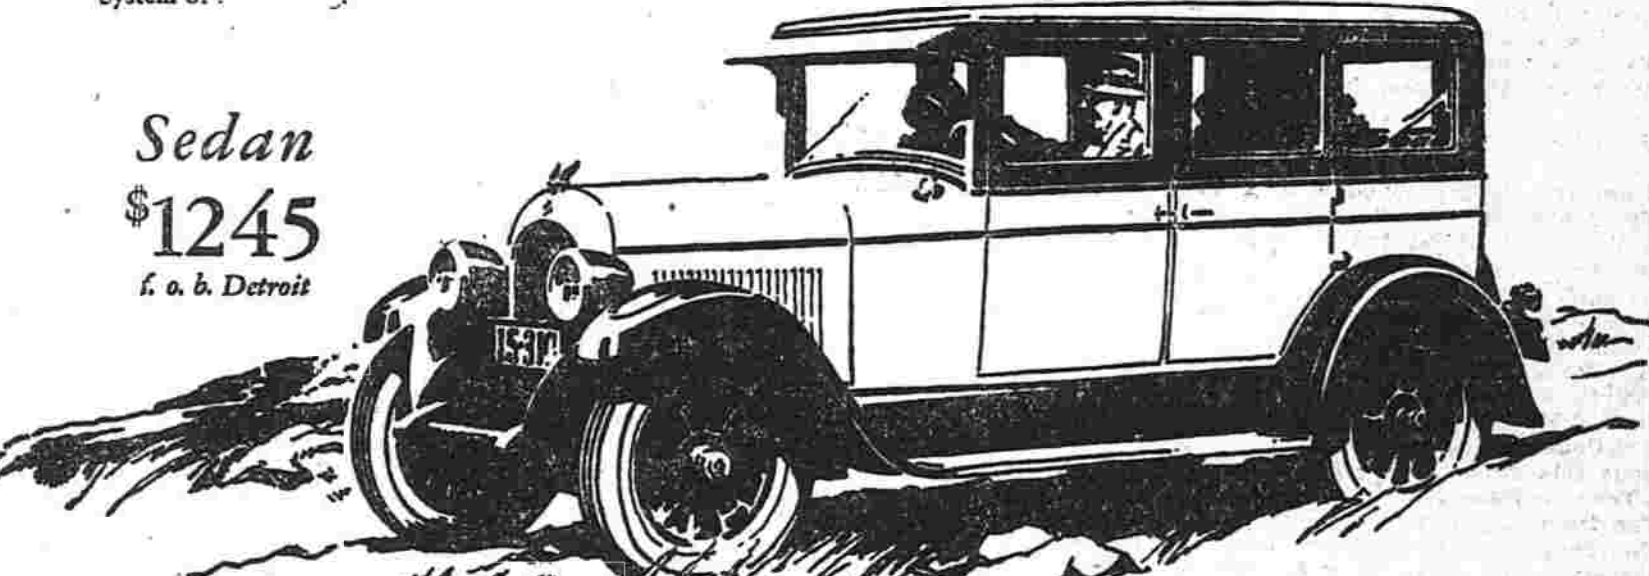

Jackson carried on his fight undaunted, and the old bank was not rechartered. The sub-treasury system was established.

Jackson, his two terms ended, retired to seclusion at the Hermitage, his place near Nashville. Before his death friends offered him the sarcophagus of the Roman emperor Severus, but he chose to share the plain tomb of his beloved Rachel. He died in 1845. (Next: John Jacob Astor.)

Handicap Tournament to Start Soon; Links All "Polished Up" Ready For Action.

Prospects for a very successful season at the Manchester Country Club are unusually bright according to the reports emanating from the links where many of the old-timers, rookies and what-not are beginning to polish the ball again despite the cold and disagreeable weather of late.

A season replete with activities is the plan of the officials of the club and accordingly several tournaments will be arranged not to mention numerous matches.

The grounds at the Country Club have been put into splendid shape. New tees have been added as well as several traps so that the playing surface might be the best possible under existing circumstances.

SENSE and NONSENSE

Elegy Written in a Tourist Camp
The klaxon sounds the knell of parting day,
Some late arrivals through the dust crowds creep.
And three hours after we have hit the hay,
The noise calms down so we can get to sleep.

Save where, from yonder pennant-clad sedan,
The radio set emits its raucous squeal.
And, underneath a near-by light, a man
Pounds until daylight on a busted wheel.
Beneath those tattered tops, those patent tents,
Where falls the dust into each sun-burned pore,
Each on his folding bed of slight expense,
The rude explorers of the highway snore.

Let not ambition mock their creaky cats,
Their khaki clothes of vintage obscure,
Nor grandeur view, with hauteur like a czar's,
The short and simple flivvers of the poor.

The boast of shiny paint, the pomp of power,
And all that charms the motoristic fop,
Await alike the inevitable hour—
The paths of tourism lead but to the shop.

Can streamline hood or silver-plated hubs
Back to its mansion call the missing spark?
Can plush upholstery foil the clumsy dubs
Who bang in your fenders in the dark?

Full mant a boob of purest ray serene
Succumbs each summer to the touring itch,
Full many a car is doomed to blush unseen
And waste its sweetness in a western ditch.

THE TINYMITES

STORY BY HAL COCHRAN—PICTURES BY KNICK

(Read the Story, Then Color the Picture)

The parachute sailed on through space. A smile spread on each Tiny's face. They surely thought it lots of fun to ride upon the air. Then slow but sure, the wind grew strong and, with much speed, took them along, and kept the funny basket ship bobbing here and there.

"They drifted in a cloud ere long and there the wind was not so strong. But, when they reached the middle everything was out of sight. Said Clowny, "What a funny place. I'll bet 'twill get dirt on my face, for everywhere I turn to look, it's just as black as night."

And then the cloud was left behind and Coppy shouted, "Fate is kind. I thought perhaps we might be lost in blackness all day long." Just then a crash of thunder broke and Coppy said, "This is no joke. It sounds like war up in the sky. Now something must be wrong."

Then Scouty looked and heaved a sigh. Said he, "There's rain up in the sky. I always know because I see a raincloud overhead. I fear we'll all get soaking wet. Where is some safe place we can get. I wish that I was down on earth tucked in a cozy bed."

Just then the rain came falling down and made each Tiny sadly frown. But Clowny changed their blues right quick and made them loudly hoot. "Let's climb the ropes. Come on," said he. "I'll keep you dry. Just follow me. We'll hide away from raindrops underneath the parachute."

So very little time was spent, 'cause up the ropes the whole band went. They huddled neath the parachute and kept themselves real dry. An hour or so went by and then, they quickly all slid down again, for now 'twas safe because the wind had blown the rain on by.

(The Tinymites have another thrill in the next story.)
