THE END OF LINDBERGH'S TWO AND A HALF MILE NIGHT PARACHUTE DROP; AND HE WASN'T HURT

CLARK FOR NEA SERVICE

LINDBERGH DOVE FROM HIS PLANE INTO WIRE FENCE

Hero of New York to Paris Non-Stop Hop Tells Another of His Thrilling Experiences.

"I landed directly on top of a barbed wire fence," writes Lindbergh of his two-and-a-half-mile parachute drop. But he wasn't injured. Below, Lindbergh the time he was commissioned as an Army Air Service flyer, in 1923.

after sliding along for about 75 feet it had piled up in the pasture beside a hedge fence. One wheel had come off and was standing inflated against the wall of the inside of a hog house a hundred yards further on. It had gone through two fences and the wall of the house. The wings were badly splintered but the tubular fuselage although badly bent in places, had held its general form even in the mangle. The parachute from the flare was hanging on the tailskid.

There were three sacks of mail in the plane. One, a full bag, from St. Louis, had been split open and some of the mail oil-soaked but legible. The other two were only partially full and were undamaged. I delivered the mail to Maywood by plane to be dispatched on the next ship out.

DE PINEDO LANDS

Lisbon, Portugal, May 27.—Commander Francisco De Pinedo, Italian inter-continental flyer, arrived at Horta, Azores, last night on the Italian steamship Lucerna after he had been forced down by a storm, according to a message from Horta today. De Pinedo's hydroplane remained afloat on the water and was not damaged.

The Last Chance

The main tank went dry at 7:51 and the reserve at 7:59. The altimeter then registered approximately 14,000 feet yet the top of the clouds was apparently several thousand feet higher. I rolled the stabilizer, cut the switches, pulled the ship up into a stall, and was about to go out over the right side of the cockpit when the right wing began to drop. In this position the plane would gather speed and spiral to the right, possibly losing my parachute after its first turn. I returned to the controls and after righting the plane dove over the left side of the cockpit while the altimeter registered about 70 miles per hour and the altimeter 13,000 feet.

I pulled the rip cord immediately after clearing the stabilizer. The Irving chute functioned perfectly. I had left the ship head first and was falling in this position when the rigging whipped me around into an upright position and the chute opened.

Down Through the Snow
The last I saw or heard of the D. H. was as it disappeared into the clouds just after my chute opened. I placed the rip cord in my pocket and took out my flashlight. It was snowing and very cold. For the first minute or so the parachute descended smoothly, then commenced an excessive oscillation which continued for about five minutes and which I was unable to check.

The first indication that I was near the ground was a gradual darkening of the snow below. The snow had turned to rain and although my chute was thoroughly soaked its oscillation had greatly decreased. I directed the beam from the 500-foot spotlight downward but the ground appeared so suddenly that I landed directly on top of a barbed wire fence without seeing it.

He Wasn't Hurt!
The fence helped to break my fall and the barbs did not penetrate the heavy flying suit. The chute was blown over the fence and was held open for some time by the gusts of wind before collapsing. I rolled it up into its pack and started toward the nearest light. Soon I came to a road which I followed about a mile to the town of Covell, Ill., where I telephoned a report to St. Louis and endeavored to obtain some news of where the ship had landed. The only information that I could obtain was from one of a group of farmers in the general store, a Mr. Thompson, who stated that his neighbor had heard the plane crash but could only guess as to its general direction.

I rode with Mr. Thompson to his farm and after leaving the parachute in his house we canvassed the neighbors for any information concerning the plane. After searching for over an hour without result I left instructions to place a guard over the mail in case it was found before I returned and went to Chicago for another ship.

Flare Falls to Work
I flew northeast at about 2000 feet for thirty minutes then dropped down to 600 feet. There were numerous breaks in the clouds this time and occasionally ground lights could be seen from over 500 feet. I passed over the lights of a small town and a few minutes later came to a fairly clear place in the clouds. I pulled up to about 100 feet, released the parachute, shipped the ship around to get in to the wind and under the flare which lit at once but instead of floating down slowly, dropped like a rock. For an instant I saw the ground, then total darkness. My ship was in a steep band and for a few seconds after being blinded by the intense light I had trouble finding it. I then tried to find the ground with the wing lights, but their glare was worse than

KILLED WHEN HE AMUSES THROGS.
Lynn, Mass.—A motorist on the North Shore Motor Road the other day noticed a seal swimming and diving in a little pond by the roadside. He stopped and watched it. Other motorists stopped and watched it. Dozens deserted their cars and stood around the bank applauding the antics of the seal.
There was a hopeless traffic jam.irate patrolmen threatened, pleaded, but the throng of nature-lovers took no heed. Meanwhile the road became more thoroughly blocked.
A riot call brought an extra detail and Sergeant Lyons, crack rifle shot, and his rifle. Bang! A few bubbles appeared where the seal had been. Nature-lovers returned to their cars; traffic went on.

ADVERTISE IN THE HERALD. IT PAYS.

THE ROMANCE OF AMERICA: P. T. Barnum (15)

Barnum's woolly horse sham was exposed, but after thousands had paid to see the curious animal. Barnum sent the horse to his Bridgeport (Conn.) home. Here the horse munched grass among the reindeer and elk and was pointed out by crowds who came to see "Iranistan," Barnum's unique Oriental palace.

Barnum's wine cellar was his pride, but he destroyed it and signed the pledge in the fear that in his old age he would become a drunkard.

In 1849 Barnum conceived the plan of bringing Jenny Lind to America. He figured to lose $50,000 but to gain that much in prestige.

The expense of bringing to America the Swedish Nightingale, who was to get $1000 for every concert, and who was accompanied by an expensive European band, was tremendous. Barnum mustered every resource at his command. The famous singer finally arrived in New York Sept. 1, 1850, and was welcomed at the pier by cheering thousands.

CIRCLE THEATER ENDS THE SEASON TOMORROW

Closes For Summer on Saturday Night—Two Features Scheduled.

Tomorrow's programs close the Circle theater for the summer season and the Oak street playhouse will not reopen again until early in September.

So the Circle will celebrate tomorrow with two big features, "The Fighting Hombre" with Box Custer, and "Pleasure Before Business," in which are featured Pat O'Malley, Virginia Brown Faire and Max Davidson.

In "Pleasure Before Business," Mr. Branch has woven his story about the pleasures in which an old cigar-maker spends an enforced vacation and unlooked for "inheritance." He has brought into the tale the love between the winsome Jewish daughter and young Irish doctor, which gives it a Jewish-Irish flavor.

Max Davidson is a hard-working Jewish cigar manufacturer out to obey the doctor's orders to play; Pat O'Malley, the young Irish doctor who loves the cigar-maker's daughter, and Tom McQuire, a Scotchman who introduces Davidson to horse-race betting.

Frank R. Strayer, well known director of "Sweet Rosie O'Grady," handled the megaphone on the picture, whose cast also includes Virginia Brown Faire, as the daughter; Rosa Rosanova, the mother; Lester Bernard, Henri Menjou, Jack Raymond and Charles Meakin.

"The Fighting Hombre" is a thrilling romance of the West with the popular star cast as a ranch foreman whose love for the daughter of his employer causes him to become involved in a rapidly moving series of startling adventures. The role makes unusually heavy demands on the well-known ability of Custer as a horseman and typical son of the West. His adroitness with the rope and six-shooter are given frequent tests in this highly entertaining picture.

Tonight will see the last showing of "Sensation Seekers."

SALVATION ARMY TO HONOR DEAD OFFICERS

The Memorial Day services at the Salvation Army new Sunday will be conducted by Brigadier Henry Taylor, who will be assisted by Captain and Mrs. Roy Smith of Utica, N. Y. Captain and Mrs. Smith have charge of the Army's social center in Utica, and are well known to Manchester people. In the afternoon Brigadier Taylor will dedicate the infant son of Captain and Mrs. Smith, and special songs in keeping with the occasion will be sung by children. The night service will be a memorial service for officers who have fallen on the field, and tributes will be paid to the memories of departed comrades. Among that number are two former officers of Manchester who served as leaders years ago—Commandant Alfred Ayres of Waltham, Mass., and Field-Major Frederick Bartlett who recently died at Pawtucket, R. I. The afternoon service will begin at three o'clock and the night service at 7:30.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur V. Linde and sons of Hartford were weekend visitors at the home of Mrs. Linde's sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Horton.

Mrs. Lulu M. Lord and daughter Esther, of Manchester Green, were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. Francis H. Raymond, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Worcester of South Manchester and Richard Charles Worcester of Boston were Sunday guests at the Raymond home.

Among those attending the 105th convention of the Willimantic C. E. Union at the First Baptist church in Willimantic were Mrs. E. A. Raymond, Mrs. F. H. Raymond, Mrs. Della Porter and Miss Victoria Hilding.

Elder C. P. Little preached at the Seventh Day Advent church at Hopewale at its last service.

Mr. and Mrs. Leroy Benzinger and the Misses Broome attended the commencement exercises at Union college, South Lancaster, Mass., their sister, Miss Estelle Broome being one of the graduates in this year's class. The Misses Broome spent a few days at the school before returning home.

A meeting of the Hopewale school board was held Sunday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. George Lord of East Hampton and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Palmer of Gildersleeve were Sunday callers at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Waldo.

The American Legion is planning an interesting Memorial Day program. Coates's Drum Corps will furnish music for marching. At 11 a. m. the Legion will go to Columbia and assist with the exercises there, returning at 1:30 p. m., when there will be exercises in the town hall at the Center. Representative Ames W. Sleson has been engaged to make an address, and the Rev. John Deeter will also speak. There will also be recitations appropriate to the occasion by some of the school children. After the close of the exercises a banquet will be served to the members of the Legion and other invited guests. The Hebron orchestra will furnish music during the afternoon exercises.

Mrs. Nellie Little, her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Wolcott, all of West Hartford, were recent guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edward A. Smith.

Mr. and Mrs. Randall Tennant during the week-end spent at their Hebron home entertained as their guest John Domesko of Bloomfield. Mr. Domesko was at one time a member of the Hebron dramatic club and took active part in its activities, while teaching in Columbia.

Mrs. J. B. Tennant, her son Jared, Jr., and her daughter Barbara, were Sunday visitors at the home of Mrs. Tennant's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Dwight Kelsey in Montville.

Miss Margaret Daneby, school nurse, visited this locality recently looking into suspected cases of mumps. The latest victim to this disease is Ellsworth Porter, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Porter.

Mrs. Mary E. Cummings plans to have the baseball game between the Columbia and Hebron school lines take place Saturday afternoon on the park at Hebron Green. The Columbia students were unable to come last week as planned.

ACADIANS.

Since the vast Mississippi flood has moved into the "Sugarbowl" of Louisiana occasional mention has been made in the dispatches of the Acadian residents of that region.

These Acadians constitute one of the most distinctive and segregated groups of native Americans in the whole country. Their story is faintly sketched in Longfellow's "Evangeline" but outside of the immediate neighborhood in which they have lived for almost a century and three-quarters next to nothing is known about them by their compatriots.

It was after a hundred and fifty years of dispute between France and England as to the ownership of the Nova Scotia country in which the French colonists had settled, calling it Acadia, that the then British governor, Charles Lawrence, seized some 6,000 of the settlers and drove them into exile. A few eventually returned, some moved to Cape Breton while hundreds found their way, after extreme hardship, to the distant Louisiana country where their descendants now live.

That was in 1755. And yet after a hundred and seventy-two years there are innumerable Acadians in Louisiana who speak no English, knowing only the French patois that their forebears brought with them from far off Nova Scotia.

Hundreds of their young men, drafted into the American army in the World war, had to be taught the English words of command in the training camps before they could be put to any use as soldiers. Living as they have among themselves, speaking a language foreign to the land of their birth and long descent, these strange folk are now faced by the necessity of merging with the great mass of flood refugees, in many cases no doubt of founding new homes, of abandoning the aloofness and the tribal organization in which they have persisted for generations.

It is little wonder, perhaps, that they are difficult folk to deal with.

GAIN FOR TEMPERANCE.

A substantial gain has been made in the fight for reform in the prohibitory laws when so large a proportion of the Episcopal clergy come out boldly in disapproval of the eighteenth amendment and of the Volstead act.

It is to be freely admitted that the prohibitionists have been buttressed in their position by the fact that church organizations and ministers of the gospel have very generally aligned themselves on the dry side. The great majority of Americans are extremely reluctant to put themselves in opposition to any movement sanctioned by the churches of the country as a whole, which in nine cases out of ten, at least, is a good thing since the influence of the churches is almost always on the side of right.

Because of the general acceptance of the theory that the churches are pretty sure to be found in support of what is just and what is moral, it has been an easy matter for the clerical advocates of prohibition to convince their followers—after first convincing themselves—that anti-prohibitionists occupy a lower moral plane than prohibitionists. Those persons who have had the courage to openly oppose the eighteenth amendment and the Volstead laws have, therefore, been rather easy to besmirch as to motives and character.

It is one thing, however, for the churches to pin the tag of "retrograde" on an editor or other layman, in this connection, and another to discredit the purity of motives and the morality of so important a group of clergy as have now come out for prohibition reform. When the leaders of religion become frankly and openly divided in the morality and virtue of prohibition, then there is a decidedly better chance for public opinion to get unfettered expression.

It would take a good deal of temerity for anybody to charge that the Temperance Society of the Episcopal church was made up of bums, booze lovers and saloonists. The members of that body must at least be given credit for sincerity. And acknowledgment of sincerity on the part of prohibition reformers, by their bone dry friends, is all they ask.

Get the controversy down to a basis where decent people of varying beliefs on prohibition but with a common desire for temperance can sit down together and figure out how to beat the liquor habit; and this battle will be more than half over.

HEROIC.

Some very brave men have been bombastic. Some very great ones have been lacking in every grace and admirable attribute. The Lindbergh boy, flying the lonely heavens above the Atlantic, was a strangely inspired creature, animated by an uncanny bird sense and absolutely empty of fear. He might have been that and still marred by vain-glory, or availed of many another unpleasant characteristic, for the gifts of the mind and the nerves may not always be matched, in the same entity, by gifts of the heart.

So that it is entirely possible that young Lindbergh's manner of bearing his triumph since his marvelous landing in France may in itself be a greater triumph than the physical feat he accomplished.

He is no rich man's son, ignorant of the value of money. His mother earns her living and he has always earned his own. Yet when a French woman, anxious to express her people's enthusiasm over America's ambassador of the air, made a gift of 150,000 francs this remarkable boy, graciously appreciative of the honor and the value of the gift, replied:

"I could not take that money out of France. I should like to have it devoted to the families of the intrepid aviators of your country who have lost their lives."

Nothing could have been finer. In Lindbergh America has a hero who is heroic.

NEW DEFENSE.

Clarence Darrow, defender of Loeb and Leopold, has expressed astonishment that Henry Gray and Ruth Snyder were put before the jury as two normal persons who deliberately planned and carried out the murder of Albert Snyder.

The intimation is that had the defense attorneys been clever enough, they could have secured an acquittal for their clients, because, as Darrow says, this "atrocious crime" was the act of two persons under pressure of some tremendous nervous excitement.

What was this outside influence, this nervous excitement which caused their action? Gray and Mrs. Snyder were in love.

Now here is a new line of defense for criminal lawyers. It will not take much of a nerve specialist to give expert testimony to the effect that people in love are not responsible for their actions. Let the person charged with no matter what heinous crime but admit that he was in love, and the way will be paved for a speedy discharge from the bar of justice.

This "in love" plea will beat the insanity plea all hollow. By all means, Mr. Darrow should be given a chance to try his novel defense plea in some murder trial that has had plenty of publicity. Establish one court precedent in the form of an acquittal on the grounds that love is a form of insanity, and the jails of the country can be emptied in a jiffy.

It is surprising that no criminal lawyer ever thought of this before.

WORDS.

Thomas J. Spellacy of Hartford made a plea for race tolerance in an address in that city, declaring that "it is time that bigotry and greed should be done away with forever and the Negro allowed equal privileges with other men."

Very pretty of Mr. Spellacy, but it is to be noted that the speech was made in a Negro church to a Negro congregation. If the Hartford politician wants to put some teeth in his demand for equal rights for the colored people let him make a similar speech on the floor of the next Democratic national convention, which he will doubtless attend, and demand of his party brethren from the South adherence to the fourteenth and fifteenth amendments to the United States constitution.

"FURRIN" CHILDREN

Seven prizes were awarded to Hartford school children in a city-wide spelling contest. The victor in the contest is named Zetoff. Second honors went to a contestant by the name of Peiss. A Shaw got in on third place and a Canny achieved fourth position. A Dolan landed the fifth prize while the sixth and the seventh went to a Pencoek and a Balukinas respectively. And six of the seven prize winners are girls. More than half of the pupils to achieve honors in this simple study test obviously are the daughters of "furriners." And surely much less than half of all the children in the schools of the Capitol city can be so classified.

There is a problem here, somewhere. Perhaps there is an answer to it—also somewhere.

WASHINGTON LETTER

BY ROONEY DUTCHER

Washington, May 27.—If you must have triplets instead of mere twins or singletons, don't count on any consolation from your Uncle Sammy.

Such warning is obviously only fair to many ambitious parents, for one of the great American delusions is that the federal government offers a prize reward or compensation for every set of triplets.

There is hardly a member of Congress who hasn't heard at one time or other from proud and triumphant parents who wanted the money sent right along and enclosed birth certificates to prove title.

And of course all the congressman can do is to send back his heartiest congratulations. Nobody seems to know just how the story started that the government made awards in case of triplets, but it is a companion yarn to the old one about the government offering big money for buffalo nickels.

One letter that arrived recently on Capitol Hill came by express and was insured for $50. The reason for this, according to the writer, was that the postoffice department was dominated by the Pope of Rome and that the letter never would get through if sent in the regular manner. The first four or five pages were of similar tenor and no one has yet read the rest of it.

When a correspondent doesn't ask for legislation or information, he often asks for money. It seems to be a favorite trick in some congressional districts to send the congressman tickets to every clam-bake, beefsteak orgy, Sunday school picnic, Black Bottom marathon and American lecture that takes place in his absence.

Sometimes six or eight tickets are enclosed with a word of assurance that it's a splendid cause. If the senator or representative doesn't dig down and do his stuff, he's an egg. As often as not, he does. And with some of the unhappy boys on the hill this is a considerable item of annual expense.

Applications for hard cash, no tickets enclosed, are numerous. Sometimes it's a cause—such as a world-shaking invention—and sometimes the only trouble is that the applicant is dead broke. Very often, the writer has figured out just how much the congressman collects from the government each week, each day and each hour. The formula is then to point out that inasmuch as the great man—let's say it's a Senator—makes about two cents a minute, he will only have to give up his pay for anywhere from .25 minutes to eight hours to produce from 50 cents to $100.

Other correspondents ask advice in domestic differences or what the great man thinks about the value of certain land which he never saw. Now and then a writer puts his black finger prints on the bottom of the letter as if to prove authenticity.

One senator recently was requested by a constituent to go to the Union Station and meet the constituent's young daughter, who was coming here by train alone. The senator's secretary did the job and guided the little lady's footsteps to the Y. W. C. A.

WHOLMIG ACHIEVEMENTS. RENAMING STREETS. This is another article in the series telling how American cities have met their problems in civic growth. Succeeding articles will appear on this page daily. BY DON E. MOWRY. Secretary, the American Community Advertising Association. Any number of growing American cities, taking in outlying suburbs, have found that a duplication of street names results from the incorporation. The problem of renaming streets to avoid this confusion is worthy of immediate attention, wherever it is found. They had the problem in Clinton, Iowa. Tourists were always twisted. There was lack of system. Subdivisions were added without regard to a general or future plan. The problem was definite, but difficult of solution. Each time the matter came up the common council did not act. Differences of opinion in group meetings resulted in no progress.

New York, May 27.—"Apple Mary" has suddenly disappeared from the Wall Street bet and this slight incident in the hectic round of a day's events has caused almost as much fuss as a bear raid or a heavy drop in steel. Mary—nobody knows the rest of her name—has become a financial zone institution second in importance to Trinity Church only. For years on end she has appeared on the streets and in the offices selling apples and little sacks of candy. The king of finance knew her and she knew them, but she was not impressed, for to "Apply Mary" the office boy and John D. Rockefeller were just potential customers. Her daily rounds were systematic and thorough. In the late afternoon she has appeared in the newspaper offices of the Park Row district and everybody knew her, from the newest cub reporter to the oldest pensioner. It is interesting that, in a place the size of New York and in a zone as commercial as Wall Street, there can come out of the tenements of the East Side, an anonymous personality and, by dint of nothing more than peddling apples, can become known to more people than George Baker, the multi-millionaire banker. There are several such personalities, identified by time and habit to certain districts. There is the blind news vendor of the Times Square district, whose uncanny ability for picking out the right paper and making quick change from his ill has made millions stop to watch. . . . to say nothing of the customers it has brought him. There is a certain boot-black in a building occupied chiefly by millionaires. There is a pretzel dealer in Union Square and another in City Hall Park, though these are not so widely known. But "Apply Mary" was queen of them all. And here is the point that makes the story so typical of Manhattan—though Mary has dropped from sight for many days, and though one asks another where she is, not one in the whole parade knows her name, knows where she comes from or where she goes. It is a casual way that Manhattan has with its children. A New York woman, upon the celebration of her 100th birthday, the other day, told reporters that never in her life had she been farther west than Pittsburgh. "And were I to live life over again, I would be content to settle right here in New York and stay." This, of course, is the typical Manhattan viewpoint. To them any-

BOBBY JONES ALREADY FAVORITE AT OAKMONT

Jimmy Powers Calls Him the "Inhuman Recorder of Consistency;" Many Dangerous Opponents.

By JIMMY POWERS
New York, May 27.—Before a single shot is fired at Oakmont, scene of the U. S. open tournament this June, Bobby Jones will rule a favorite against the field.
The odds in this most variable of games should be 10 to 1 against Bobby, but they won't be.
There are other dangerous men. There is Walter Hagen, if anybody should ask you, Jones is the antithesis of Hagen. Where Walter is the colorful showman, the D'Arctagnan of the links, alternately brilliant and mediocre, always intensely human—Bobby is the merciless impersonal machine, grinding out par figures like an automaton.
That is the Jones brand of golf, we are speaking of, not Jones the man. It is Bobby who walks up and down in his carpet slippers the night of a championship, smoking innumerable cigarettes. It is Bobby who squirms inwardly when he dubs a shot. It is Bobby who cannot forget his mistakes but must play a hole over and over again in his mind when he should be sleeping.
Hagen will make a greater percentage of sour shots in a given round than most of his brother stars, but he has the priceless mental gift of being able to forget said shots as soon as he makes them and concentrate on getting out superbly, which he does quite often enough to stay on top of the heap.
Then there are the Messrs. Duncan and Mitchell.
They have yet to produce the true form in the national open. The heat wits them. They cook to a crisp in their woolen jackets, but if they strip to shirt sleeves they feel, as one expert has expressed it, like a polar bear in Siam. What price an English golfer without his coat?
And then there is the bouncing little barrister, Bobby Cruikshank. Oh, it's a pleasure to watch him send a long iron screaming straight to the pin or stand by as he takes out a great driver, almost as tall as himself and whip a long drive off the tee. The pint sized thistle will be a ver' ver' dangerous mon, don't ye forget it.

And there is also the tense, introspective Leo Diegel who seems to be unable to conquer his twitching nerves. He can play like a Vardon until the reflection of champhionship silver, just within his reach, dazzles him. Then his fingers become over eager and his game collapses like a deck of cards.

But of them all, there's Bobby and the odds.
If Bob doesn't win at Oakmont, he ought to be among the first five. You can't go back on his record—first at Scioto, 1924; second at Worcester, 1925; second at Oakmont Hills, 1924; first at Inwood, 1923; second at Skokie, 1922.

Cold statistics tell a story of inhuman consistency.
Who is going to say he'll beat it?

98 P. C. AUTO DRIVERS CARRY THEIR LICENSES

Check Up Shows Few Fail to Have Necessary Document With Them on Road.

That the great majority of Connecticut motor vehicle operators see to it that they have their license on their persons whenever they drive is indicated by a check-up made by the state motor vehicle department with respect to 49,147 operators who reported accidents during the past year.

Of that number 33,485, or more than 68 per cent were found to be carrying operator's licenses. Only 238 proved unable to produce their licenses after the accident. Nine of them had neither operator's licenses or registration certificates for the cars they were driving. The other 229, while without their operator's licenses, were able to produce registration certificates. Twenty-six operators had their operator's licenses but no registration certificates. Insufficient data for a classification was furnished the department in the case of 28 operators.

The importance of carrying both certificates is emphasized by the motor vehicle department. In some municipalities of the state, the police make it a point to find out, every now and then, whether every operator has a license by stopping every car that passes a given point. After an accident, any one has the right to demand to see the license of an operator who has been involved.

Inability of an operator to show a registration certificate frequently leads to prompt arrest under suspicion of having stolen the car. The state law requires that the registration certificate be carried in the car which it describes, when operated on the highways, except in the case of cars of dealers, manufacturers and repairers. It is one of the laws designed to make it more difficult for people who are in possession of stolen cars to operate them and has led to the apprehension of many automobile thieves in the state.

It is also important to notify the department of any change in the appearance of the car registered, so that the description given on the registration certificate will tally.

ONE OF AMERICA'S GREATEST CHAINS OF FURNITURE STORES

Ex-Buck PRIVATE goes back to FRANCE by PAUL ADAMS

When the First division of the A. E. F. dashed through Cantigny, it picked up large numbers of prisoners. Here is a detachment being taken back to a military prison.

This is the 42d chapter in the story of an ex-soldier who is re-visiting France as a correspondent for The Herald.

CHAPTER XLII

The war has many unwritten stories. . . . Take, for instance, the tale of Jean Fleurus, 16 Rue Hartbise, Compiègne, France. He has a telephone, too. No. 6.78.

Fleurus is a taxi driver now. But in 1918 he was a Poilu. Among the other duties assigned to him that year was to participate in a drive on a German stronghold in Tracy, a village on the Oise river. He worked well, and, with other soldiers, captured a German officer—a major—in the church of that village.

They Meet Again
Late in August, 1926, Fleurus was at the depot in Compiègne looking for fares. A tallish, well-dressed gentleman emerged from the depot accompanied by a comely woman. He dickered with Fleurus in very bad French and, when a price was agreed upon, directed that he be taken to Tracy. Fleurus drove on . . . out through the forest of Compiègne . . . over the Oise at Rethondes where the British blew the iron bridge . . . and on into Tracy. There the man and the woman got out. Fleurus remained close by. The gentleman talked volubly—in German—pointing here and there with a cane and evidently describing an incident of considerable importance.

Fleurus was inquisitive. At an opportune moment he asked a few questions. The explanation was scabbed somewhat—owing to the difference in the tongues—but he learned that his fare was none other than the major whom he had helped capture in the church in 1918. He had returned, with his bride, to go over the ground and reminisce on his outstanding war experience.

Drank His Health
Fleurus didn't recognize the German major. Nor did the German major recognize him. But, after each had related his story, there was a mutual recognition . . . to the keen enjoyment of both. And, after they had returned to Compiègne, the once-captured major bought a glass of wine and his one-time captor drank to his good health.

That's the story of Jean Fleurus who lives at 16 Rue Hartbise, Compiègne, France. He has a telephone, too. The number is 6.78. Try and get it.

A cheap tube can cost you 10 times its price

THIRTY-NINE YEARS of tube-building experience has proved to Dunlop that "cheap tubes" do not pay.

That is why Dunlop tubes are made casing shaped. It costs a little more than to build them on a straight pole, as cheap tubes are built.

But a casing-shaped Dunlop tube is strong everywhere. The outside edge is not weakened by excess stretch. The side next to the rim has no wrinkles to crack with age and blow out. A Dunlop tube protects your casing, because it fits. And your casing is worth ten times the cost of the tube.

We strongly recommend a Dunlop tube for every casing

FLAPPER FANNY SAYS

Never make light of your heavy.

SENSE and NONSENSE

"No, ma'am," sighed Mrs. McGinnis to the church visitor. "I can't seem to keep Johnny from swearing, now. He's only 3 and you wouldn't believe the things he'll say. Here, Johnny, swear for the lady."

And what did your wife have to say when you stood at the Pyramids? "Wanted to know if I had locked the kitchen door."

Maritime Legend A sign on an ocean bar sang thusly to a passing tar, "Come hither, come; behold my charms; Come rest upon my lovely arm."

The sailor, say and debonnaire, Gazed coldly on her streaming hair And thus replied the base job, "Betake yourself, and get a job."

Music Merchant—"Do you know that you have been late three mornings this week?" New Office Boy—"No, sir, I ain't one of them guys who watches the clock."

Do the Thing Right (Since the Coolidges have vacated the White House for repairs.) Take rattles out of executive bed-chamber window.

Fix roller on shade that always shoots to top of window when chief executive starts to undress. Plane off closet doors so they won't stick.

Take squeak out of back stairs. Elevate warm-air pipes of furnace so chief executive will not scald self after banking fire for night.

Install enough electric base plugs to suit chief executive's wife, or as many as Congress will allow. Anchor dining-room buzzer under rug so chief executive's wife can find it with her foot while talking to distinguished diplomat.

And—Wash, paint and place the fly screens. Mother—Why are you crying, Bobby? Bobby—I have a toothache and there's no school today.

Yeh, moaned the old-timer, dining in a restaurant; yeh, this is a spring chicken, all right, I just bit into one of the springs.

STORY BY HAL COCHRAN — PICTURES BY KNICK

(Read the Story, Then Color the Picture)

The trip across the fallen tree was not as bad as it might be. The Tinies scurried through the limbs and reached the other side. When Scouty reached the other shore, he breathed a sigh of thanks once more. "I really thought that I would fall right in that stream," he cried.

We've time to burn. Right now I think we ought to find a place where we can hide. I think a storm is drawing near and storms are one thing that I fear. Let's seek some sort of ground hole, where we all can sneak inside.
