

SERVICE FIRST DEAN'S ADVICE TO GRADUATES

Head of Yale Divinity School Tells High School Class To Make Themselves More Useful In the World.

The idea of profit subordinated to the idea of service, the solution of one's own problems and the contribution of worth, more useful lives to the world, were the aims Dean Charles E. Brown, of Yale Divinity School, urged high school graduates here to strive for. Dean Brown was the speaker at South Manchester High School's 34th graduation held last night in the High School assembly hall. Service first, sums up the advice Yale's famous educator gave the graduates.

The two essayists of the class, Miss Gertrude M. Rogers, valedictorian, and Miss Louise Phelps, salutatorian, reflected, by their brilliant work, the quality of the class as a whole, since it is one of the best, from many viewpoints, that has yet gone out from South Manchester High.

The demands of General Feng Yuh Siang that the Hankow government disassociate itself from the Communists have been received here as an indication of possible attempts at a peace or truce with North China.

Drive On Peking

The action of General Feng in insisting that Communists be eliminated from the Hankow government, coupled with the alliance between General Feng and Shiang and Kai Shek and their joint plans for a drive on Peking on July 1, may be the forerunner of important political developments it was thought in some well-informed circles here.

Marshal Chang Tso Lin, generalissimo of North China, has steadfastly declared that he would not treat with any Nationalist faction until the Southerners had disassociated the Communists. The action taken by Feng would seem to be disavowed and may be attended as opening the way for Chang Tso Lin to enter into some sort of an agreement with Chiang Kai Shek and General Feng, which would eliminate the possibilities of a siege of Peking.

Bridgeport, Conn., June 24.—The memory of the late Justice John E. Keeler, retired member of the State Supreme Court of Errors, received the tribute of the Fairfield County Bar Association here today. Justice Howard J. Curtis, of Stratford; Judge Frederick C. Taylor, Homer Cummings, and John C. Durey, all of Stamford, were named a special committee to draw up resolutions to be entered on the court records as well as sent to the family. Justice Curtis and Judge Taylor delivered eulogies.

Received and unusually interesting. She, too, delivered her address brilliantly. Her voice carried very well and her entire salutatory essay was given without hesitancy.

Both Miss Rogers' essay and salutatory and Miss Phelps' salutatory address are printed in full later in this report.

CHURCH BOMBED; MANY ARE SLAIN

Refugees Tell Tales of Horrible Brutalities Charge Against a Serbian Captain.

Sofia, June 24.—Tales of horrible brutalities, charged against a Serbian captain and his troops, with a heavy loss of life have been received here from Kustendil, where a group of terror-stricken men, women and children have arrived from Bessilegrad, Serbia.

The Serbian troops are alleged to have rounded up the church in Bessilegrad, which is just across the Serbian frontier from Bulgaria and has a large Bulgarian population. The church was filled with refugees at the time of the bombing and many were killed. It is alleged, although the refugees are unable to give the number of victims.

Refugees also charge that hundreds were arrested in Bessilegrad and the vicinity and beaten.

Serbia militia was sent out in search of an alleged Bulgarian band of raiders and shot down many innocent persons, the reports declared.

CHINESE TO EXPEL RUSSIAN ADVISER

Soviet to Be Asked to Recall Borodin—Getting Ready For Drive on Peking.

Shanghai, June 24.—M. Borodin, Russian adviser to the Hankow Nationalist government, will be expelled from China if he is not recalled by the Soviet government, Hsiang Kai Shek declared today upon his return to Nanking from Hsuehchow.

Yang Sen Chi has called a meeting of Wuhan leaders to reorganize the Wuhan government, which it is anticipated will join in an alliance with Chiang Kai Shek and General Feng Yuh Siang.

Boatmen's Strike

A boatmen's strike has been called in Poochow as the result of tax collectors killing a boatman when they fired on a rice boat, in an endeavor forcibly to collect taxes.

LINDY DROPS BOYISH ROLE; REAL MAN NOW

Old Carefree Flying Days Are Over as Col. Charles A. Lindbergh Meets Na- tion's Big Men.

Washington, June 24.—Dropping his boyishness as one slips out of an old garment, Charles A. Lindbergh, "The Flying Kid," today assumed the role of a man of large affairs. He has a career—commercial aviation—and the old carefree flying days, the youthful abandon, and the wild celebrations that marked his flight to Paris are all behind him.

The smiling, daring youth who became the world's hero by virtue of his happy abandon now moves from conference to conference, an important factor in national projects, a companion of serious-minded men who want to have his life insured.

Conferences Today

Only six weeks ago life was an endless ray round of flying; today there is the conference with the secretary of state about a trip to Canada, a visit to the office of the postmaster general to discuss his future status in the air mail service, a meeting with the Canadian minister to the United States, and finally a conference in a deluxe hotel suite with New York interests eager to enlist a new member for a board of directors.

In Solitude

As little as a week ago, "Lindy" was still riding the streets of the land, greeting riotous multitudes. Yesterday, Col. Lindbergh steamed down the Potomac for three hours aboard the official yacht of the secretary of the navy, accompanied by his St. Louis backers and half a dozen government officials, with whom he discussed his future plans in a solitude worthy of a cabinet meeting. A week ago he came and went at will, flying now at night and now in the day, now in this plane and now in that. Today he has an engagement calendar like a railroad president and cannot tell you even when he is going to fly to New York, which he hopes to do to achieve today or tomorrow.

Last night he dined at the home of Hanford Macnider, assistant secretary of war, surrounded by high officials representing four departments of the government, and then slept in the home of the secretary of commerce—where everything was arranged for the accommodation of serious discussion.

A Career Man

Aside from the fact that Col. Lindbergh is now a "career man" in commercial aviation, the first series of conferences here settled nothing. There are hundreds of propositions to be considered before a decision is made, and these are matters for conference.

Meanwhile the graceful little silvered monoplane, the Spirit of St. Louis, whose descent from the blackness over Le Bourget electrified the world, sits riderless in a cavernous hangar in St. Louis, awaiting again the magic touch of the young man who has "arrived."

Lindy hopes to get away for New York late today or tomorrow, but his plans were not definite this morning.

GOV. GENERAL WOOD A VERY SICK MAN

Visits President Coolidge In Black Hills—Fear He Can- not Return to His Post.

Rapid City, S. D., June 24.—A very sick man arose at the Summer White House this morning to contemplate the glories of the Black Hills and to wonder whether the condition of his health was ever again going to permit him to return to the important public office he holds.

First Vacation

The man was Major General Leonard Wood, one-time candidate for the presidency and governor general of the Philippines for the past six years. He is back home for his first vacation in that time but he has returned so broken in body from two accidents and a serious operation that he can scarcely go about.

The general has said he will go back to the Philippines.

Major B. Y. Read, his aide, has stated positively since the arrival of the party here that the return voyage would be made in September. But those who have seen General Wood at the state game lodge where he and Mrs. Wood have been overnight guests of President and Mrs. Coolidge, are of the opinion that the flesh is weaker than the spirit.

British Dog Wins Debate Against Prince Of Wales

London, June 24.—The Prince of Wales lost the decision to British dogs in an acrimonious debate before the Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals last night.

While the debate was in progress, the prince, who is president of the society, was cavorting in a school-boy's garb at a fancy dress party, given by the Duchess of Sutherland.

The rumour in the Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals all arose over whether the society should support the dog protection bill now pending in Parliament.

Lord Danesforth called attention to the fact that the prince had stated he would withdraw as president.

CARTER DIES GAME SAYS HE KILLED 43

"Turn On the Juice" He Orders As He Is Placed On the Electric Chair.

Lincoln, Neb., June 24.—Apparently without nerves, Frank Carter, the "Omaha Sniper" who stalked his victims at night, went to his death in the electric chair at state prison here at 8:15 o'clock this morning. He was declared dead six minutes later.

Before going to the chair Carter told reporters he had killed forty-three people in his life.

He included in this list the unsolved Villisca, Iowa, ax murders of more than fifteen years ago, when an entire family was wiped out. Prison officials, however, scouted his story.

Ready to Die
Carter, who from the first contended he was ready to die and who laughed at the efforts of his attorneys to secure a stay of execution, showed he was ready this morning. He walked from "death row" to the execution room and chatted with the officials there as he was strapped in the chair.

His Instructions
"Be sure and fix this right," he remarked, "so that it will get me the first time."

He asked that the black mask not be placed over his head. This wish was refused. As the mask finally was adjusted his muffled voice came through the folds of cloth.

"Turn on the ju!"

It had been turned on as he spoke.

He was executed for the murders of William McDevitt and Dr. Austin Searles, both of Omaha. He shot them with a small bore rifle, equipped with a silencer.

OCEAN FLYERS STILL WAITING FOR CLEAR SKY

Commander Byrd Says That Take-Off Is Impossible For Today and Tomorrow
Morning—Is Impatient.

Roosevelt Field, Mineola, N. Y., June 24.—Commander Richard E. Byrd announced shortly before noon today after conferring with weather bureau officials, that the take-off of the tri-motored monoplane America for Paris was "improbable for today and improbable for tomorrow morning."

Storm conditions still prevail over the course of the flight across an area of about 500 miles east of Nova Scotia, Byrd said.

"I'm not waiting for ideal weather," said Byrd with a ring of impatience in his voice. "If I were alone I'd hop off any minute. But I have three associates to consider, and for their sake, I want to be assured of safe weather. Moreover, I must consider the good of aviation over my own personal feelings. I am eager to go and will go just as soon as the weather man says the word."

Discusses Situation

Smoking a cigarette in a long holder, Byrd, in his quiet manner, discussed the situation with newspapermen in his office at the hangar where he scanned weather charts and maps with his two weather advisers, R. F. Barrett and C. G. Rosby, who establish a liaison for Byrd with the office of James H. Kimball, United States weather forecaster at New York.

"The same small line that existed last night exists today," explained Barrett. "It is right across the course of the flight and is now over Sable Island and moving eastward."

"This storm covers a breadth of about 500 miles, extending from the middle of Nova Scotia eastward across the Grand Banks to longitude 45."

Start Improbable

"It seems highly improbable that the weather would be good tonight and for Saturday. It is hard to say but the chances of a take-off are improbable for the morning."

Byrd interrupted to say that in all probability the hop-off will be made in the morning as the winds usually are easterly at that time, and also because a morning take-off would land the America in Paris in daytime.

"I'm pretty much disappointed because we didn't get away this morning but it could not be helped," said Byrd. "It would hardly have been proper for me to make a start in face of the very unfavorable report on the weather from Kimball."

Byrd said the northeasterly winds sweeping across Roosevelt Field today are "extremely bad" for a take-off.

Mrs. Byrd who had come down to present at the take-off, will probably leave for Boston late today to join her three children.

Mrs. Bert Acosta, wife of the pilot, and her two children, are stopping at the Garden City hotel, as is Mrs. George O. Noville, wife of Lieut. Noville. The fourth member of the expedition, Lieut. Bert Balchen is unmarried.

FRESHMEN AND JUNIOR OARS- MEN VICTORIOUS IN PRELIMINARIES TO THE MAIN RACE.

New London, Conn., June 24.—The all-star freshmen and junior varsity crews added two more victories to Ed Leader's growing collection this morning by outrowing the rival shells of Harvard in the first two races of their annual water regatta. Yale came from behind on both occasions. Fighting with the gameness of the true bulldog, both Yale victories coming only after the finishing line was in sight.

The Yale junior varsity won by a length and half, and the Yale freshmen by one length after two inspiring duels over the classic New London course. Perfect weather conditions prevailed with smooth water under the stern and smiling skies above.

Seldom in fifty years of Yale's rowing history has New London been as colorful, never has the lordly Thames seen more watercraft or greater enthusiasm.

Most of the enthusiasm of course came from the Yale element. Although Harvard was vociferous enough at the start, both Crimson yearling and junior crews jumped at the pace from the start and made Yale row them down in the last mile in order to gather in their victory. The Yale freshmen were timed in nine minutes eighteen seconds in the two mile distance.

The unofficial time for the junior varsity race was ten minutes and ten seconds. Tidal conditions having affected the speed of the boats.

These races were preliminary skirmishing for the big event this afternoon. Victory this morning was sweet but a defeat in the big varsity race late this afternoon would make the sweet turn sour. Yale hasn't lost this race in six years, four of which have been contested under the genius of Leader.

No crew in the history of the regatta has sustained a longer winning streak and Yale today faced the opportunity in establishing a new record in this respect. However, Harvard varsity held a slight favorite, with alleged experts and laymen in the vast throng of 75,000 here for this most colorful of sport classics.

BRITAIN'S ATTITUDE AT ARMS CUT PARLEY SURPRISES CAPITAL

Officials at Washington Nettled Over Change Contrasted With Attitude of Six Years Ago—Britain Then In Ac- cord With U. S.; Now Differs on Every Major Point of Further Naval Reduction—America Already Sees Failure of Geneva Conference.

Washington, June 24.—Officialdom in Washington has been concerned, and not a little nettled, over Great Britain's attitude toward further naval disarmament, as revealed this week at the Geneva conference.

In the six years that have elapsed since Great Britain "joyously accepted" naval equality with the United States at the Washington conference, one official cynically observed today, British views on naval armament appear to have undergone a complete transformation. And another official said: "The British lion at Washington in 1921, and the British lion at Geneva in 1927, are two different beasts."

Six Years Ago

Great Britain and the United States stood shoulder to shoulder in the Washington arms conference six years ago, and it was this solidarity that finally broke down all Franco-Japanese opposition to the great world reform proposed by America, and resulted in the epochal 5-5-3 treaty. The British and American delegates at Washington spoke with the same voice.

Marked Contrast

The contrast between Washington and Geneva is so marked, however, that it is almost the sole topic of discussion in diplomatic and official circles here. Instead of mutual support each other's views, as at Washington, the American and British delegates at Geneva have collided upon almost every major point of further naval reduction, and so serious are these differences that the ultimate failure of the tri-party conference at Geneva is already snatched at the wings.

Sacrificed Ships

America threw the naval leadership of the world upon the table in 1921 and sacrificed thousands of tons of new naval construction upon the altar of world disarmament. The gesture was so magnificent that it moved Lord Balfour, chief of the British delegates, to tears, as he pledged that Britain would "loyally co-operate with America in the greatest reform ever carried out by courage and statesmanship." At the same time, Lord Balfour, in exchange for British support of the Japanese effort to secure what would amount to more than a three-to-five ratio in regard to cruisers, destroyers and submarines.

WANT JAP SUPPORT

Geneva, June 24.—Fearful that Japan and the United States may present a united front in opposition to the British proposals for the limitation of naval armaments, the British delegates to the limitation conference are holding discreet conferences looking toward a compromise move with Japan.

It was learned today that conferences are in session at the Hotel Beau Rivage, where the British are attempting to obtain the support of the Japanese delegates for capital ship proposals in exchange for British support of the Japanese effort to secure what would amount to more than a three-to-five ratio in regard to cruisers, destroyers and submarines.

The possibility of a British-Japanese approach, however, is regarded as comparatively slight, since it would be difficult for the Japanese to reverse their position stated publicly Monday, advocating the elimination of the capital ship question from discussion inasmuch as it had been disposed of at Washington.

IRISH FREE STATE ELECTS COSGRAVE

Believes He Can Carry On Even Though He Lacks Majority In Dail.

Dublin, June 24.—The Irish Free State apparently has weathered another crisis and President Cosgrave today sets forth on a new term of office with fair assurance that the policies of his government will be supported, even though he lacks a majority in the Dail.

Prior to his re-election yesterday, President Cosgrave gave warning that he would not accept office unless he was assured of sufficient support to carry out the policies which his government had already inaugurated. The vote of the Dail on the re-election of President Cosgrave is interpreted as indicative of sufficient strength to insure governmental control over all legislation of a major character.

The New Cabinet

President Cosgrave has announced his new cabinet, which is practically the same as the old with the exception of a few shifts in portfolio. Kevin O'Higgins becomes minister of external affairs and Justice Desmond Fitzgerald becomes minister of defense. Richard Mulcahy is named as minister of local government. Patrick Hogan is minister of agriculture and Joseph Walsh is postmaster general.

Merchant Marine

In particular the British are of-tended that the United States has brought up the question of the large British merchant marine and the question of this merchant marine being readily adaptable to fighting purposes in time of war.

Bridgeman advised Gibson that Great Britain was willing to discuss the possibilities of its merchant marine being converted into war vessels, but he said he considered such discussion useless since in case of war all liners and other ships would be armed for defense and every other purpose.

Committee Meetings

At a meeting of the executive committee of the naval limitations conference today, it was decided to appoint Bridgeman chairman. Decision also was reached to form groups of naval advisers to study the question of limiting the cruisers, destroyers and submarines from a purely technical point of view.

Prior to the committee meeting, the American delegation held an hour's conference at the Hotel Des Bergues. The British delegates followed from the American with their dominion representatives.

The capital ship question was broached at the committee meeting, the British delegates maintaining their previously announced stand. Great Britain requested that the matters be placed in the agenda for discussion.

American and Japanese delegates insisted that the conference begin discussion of the limitation of cruisers, destroyers and submarines immediately. Meanwhile, the delegates said, they were holding discussions from Washington and Tokyo with regard to the capital ship controversy.

Geneva, June 24.—Great Britain is not attending the naval limitations conference here to secure a distinct naval superiority, but is only asking what it feels is necessary for its defense. W. C. Bridgeman, British first lord of the Admiralty, declared today.

In a statement given to the press after a meeting of the executive committee of the conference, Bridgeman outlined his nation's stand on the question of naval disarmament.

"We cannot go home," the statesman said, "without having discussed the question of the size of future battleships, or without having stated our case carefully. We think it would be a great step forward if we could get an agreement on this point."

Size of Battleships

"The question of the size of battleships is one which we feel all should be in a large measure in agreement. We are not here to try to secure some distinct superiority for our country. We only ask what we feel is necessary for our defense."

"It would facilitate agreement at future league disarmament conferences to enable other nations not participating here to come in later. This would not be a modification of the Washington conference, but more in the nature of an extension. It would be an agreement that three powers would not take advantage of their rights under the Washington treaty."

"If we are to do away with the race for ship-building, this can only be done by agreeing to limit the size of ships in each category. The bases of the agreement may be total tonnage, but the size of each ship must be limited."

British spokesmen have made no effort to hide their annoyance at the manner in which their proposals have been received by both the United States and Japan and they declare that the United States delegates are introducing minor matters and are uttering sentiments "as thin as air."

Particular the British are of-tended that the United States has brought up the question of the large British merchant marine and the question of this merchant marine being readily adaptable to fighting purposes in time of war.

Bridgeman advised Gibson that Great Britain was willing to discuss the possibilities of its merchant marine being converted into war vessels, but he said he considered such discussion useless since in case of war all liners and other ships would be armed for defense and every other purpose.

Naples, June 24.—A tremendous demonstration was held here today when the bodies of the bodies of two Fascists killed in a recent riot in New York, were paraded through the streets on gun carriages.

ALUMNI GATHER IN H. S. TONIGHT

Annual Party Will Produce Lots of Fun—Plans For 4th Progressing.

(Special to The Herald) Rockville, June 24.—The annual gathering of the alumni of the Rockville Public High school will be held tonight and those who are entitled to attend are going to miss a lot of fun if they remain away. Today the auditorium stage was being properly set for the entertainment that is to be given and there is going to be an abundance of "decorations." The graduates who have come out and who have applied themselves seriously to their different lines of work will find in tonight's gathering an opportunity to see themselves as others see them and also to be shown how startlingly they have changed, even to be almost life like pictures of some of the heroes of whom they studied in their four years at the Rockville High.

In addition to the entertainment that is to be given in the school hall there is going to be dancing. This will be held in the gymnasium, something that the school did not have when some of the boys and girls were graduated. And there is also going to be dancing for those who tripped the light fantastic and did their waiting on their toes, hopped through a contra dance or waltz partners in the old days. There is going to be music provided and Captain Steve Tobin, who was propping when Snipps was a "fuzzler," is going to call the "fuzzers."

Assistant Town Clerk Miss Corinne Scheiner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Scheiner of Davis avenue, was graduated from the Rockville High school and has been appointed by Town Clerk Thomas as his assistant in the office.

Home From Convention Chief George M. Inc, chief of the Rockville Fire Department and Fred Wheeler, member of the local department, with Chief Poy of Middletown arrived in Rockville at midnight last night. They left Portland, Me., at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon by bus to Boston and from their motor trip back to Rockville.

Injuries More Serious Steve Slavet, who was injured by being struck and run over by a truck near the corner of West and Union streets early in the week, is not as much improved today as the attending doctors expected. It has been found by the X-ray picture that four ribs were broken and that he had an exceptionally uncomfortable night.

On Exhibition The hope chest, which is to be one of the awards made at the bazaar to be given by St. Bernard's church, was put on exhibition in the window of the Commercial-Wholesale Gas and Electric Company on Park street this afternoon. The bazaar is to open next week and run for four days.

Growing Bigger The plans set in motion by the Chamber of Commerce for a big celebration of the Fourth are growing rapidly and with Vernon, Tolland and Ellington coming in there is already assured a real field day on Monday, July 4. Already there has been an offer of two bands, both boys bands of Rockville, to take part in the parade and to furnish a band concert. The sports committee is arranging for three boxing bouts to be staged in Central park while the parade of organizations and a special division for the "horribles" is going to make the parade an exceptionally long one.

At seven o'clock there will be a band concert in front of the Town hall followed by a parade through the city by way of Memorial building to Elm street, to Prospect street, to Orchard street, to West Main and back to Memorial building. The parade will be made up of various objects of interest. There will be the "P. G.'s" and a band that won first prize at the recent Legion Convention in Philadelphia. This car will be pulled by 23 "P. G.'s" (Poor Guffs), who will later be initiated. There will be about 200 in line and torch lights, red fire and other methods of lighting will be used. From what is heard relative to the event, it promises to be spectacular as well as noisy.

It might be added that among the 28 "P. G.'s" are men of high standing such as Commander James E. Breslin of the Rau Locke Post, No. 8 of Hartford, Mr. Breslin has four citations, American and foreign, for bravery and is clerk of the Hartford Police Court. Others are James J. O'Connor, William J. Galvin and Charles R.

Taylor, noted Hartford lawyer, Police Officer O'Connor of Hartford; Leonard W. Ladd, Past County Commander of the American Legion for Hartford County.

Following the parade which is scheduled to begin at 8 o'clock, there will be initiation in Memorial building. Col. C. W. "Top" Richardson, Chief de Gausse of the active committee in charge of the big event on Saturday evening.

Golden Wedding Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Hoppe of 89 Varon avenue celebrated their golden wedding anniversary at the Rockville House last evening. A dinner was served to the members of the family, this being followed by a reception to about 25 friends. The dinner guests were the Misses Flora, Pauline, Edna and Viola Hoppe, Walter Hoppe, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Hoppe, Jr. and daughter of Waterbury; Mr. and Mrs. Otto Hoppe and three children of Putnam, Mr. and Mrs. William Leineweber and Mrs. C. W. Ludke of Hartford, Mr. and Mrs. Hugo Hoppe of this city and Mr. and Mrs. Paul Ludke of Philadelphia.

Mr. and Mrs. Hoppe received a chest of gold which was presented to them by Frederick Hoppe, Jr. Vivian Hoppe of Waterbury gave a reading, "A Father's and Grandmother's Golden Wedding Day."

Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Ludke of 195 Adelaide street, Hartford celebrated their 17th wedding anniversary at the same time.

Notes Frederick Yost, who has been employed at the Rockville office of the Belding-Hemlinway company for several years, has accepted a position with the Rockingham Mills company and will be employed at their New York office. Mr. Yost will start his new duties in about two weeks.

Notes Lester W. Martin has returned from New London where he attended the 25th annual convention of the New England Coal Dealers association.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Robinson and family have returned after spending a few days with relatives in Haverhill, Mass.

Miss Irene Marshmann of Orchard street spent Thursday in Bristol where she attended the wedding of a friend.

Miss Elizabeth Huesner of Florence street is convalescing at her home after an operation at the Rockville hospital.

Mrs. H. B. Roy and daughter are spending a month visiting relatives in Bath and Portland, Maine.

Miss Harriet Cogswell who has just returned from China, will speak on Wednesday evening, July 13 at the United Congregational church, and the public is invited to hear her. Miss Cogswell will have first hand news of the trouble in China.

Mrs. Lena Griffin of Windermer has returned from a few weeks' visit in New York.

Klowna Council, Degree of Pochontas will hold election of officers at their meeting this evening.

The men's club of the Baptist church will hold their monthly meeting this evening at the church parlors. The committee in charge of the meeting is Francis Burke, F. W. Bradley and E. W. Robinson.

SERVICE FIRST DEAN'S ADVICE TO GRADUATES

(Continued from Page 1) Marion Dorward entertained the audience was gathering. Several martial numbers were well done and the large crowd thoroughly enjoyed the music. Shortly after eight o'clock the orchestra broke into a procession and the graduates entered the hall from the rear door.

Program Smooth The class which numbered 113 proceeded to a reserved section in the front of the hall and at a signal from President Treat was seated. The precision with which the class entered and took its seats marked the entire program. All took their parts at the right moment with no hesitancy and the smooth progress of the exercises was impressive.

We wish to thank you, parents and friends, for giving us such splendid opportunities, and we are glad that you may share in our commencement ceremonies.

"The ideal educational career of an Athenian girl as expressed by Xenophon was to see as little as possible, to hear as little as possible, and to ask as few questions as possible. There were no girls in the Athenian schools. For centuries the boy alone, as the future citizen, was given the opportunities of his generation. The girl was taught by her mother to spin, weave and manage a household. Domestic science courses began in the home.

"In contrast to the Grecian woman, who was regarded by her husband as a housewife or a superior slave, was the Roman matron, who was the companion of the husband. She was the only teacher of her children until they were seven years old, when both girls and boys attended school. "Up before dawn, with a lamp to light the way, and an attendant to carry her satchel, the little Roman maiden of seven years, or over, would trudge off to the portico, where her schoolmaster wielded his rod." She learned to read, write and cipher; then, being a girl, she stopped, to learn about domestic duties.

"As the Roman Empire was breaking up, Christianity, the new religion in which all women are honored, spread rapidly over the known world. From the beginning, the Christians upheld education, combining it with their religion. Later, monasteries and convents were established, which furnished the only schools of the Middle Ages. In the convents both rich and poor girls learned to speak and write Latin fluently. The founding of the university, one of the oldest institutions that we have today, followed that of the monasteries and convents. Early in the thirteenth century co-education was begun in the Italian universities. It was only in Italy, however, that women demanded and gained the higher privileges accorded the men. Greek and Latin classics became very popular with the Italian women during the time of the Renaissance. Many young girls could speak and write Latin easily and they were almost as familiar with Greek. This period was known in Italy as the "Golden Age for Women."

"The English women quickly followed the example of their Italian sisters. Queen Elizabeth was probably the best educated of all the queens of England. However, only girls of the nobility were well-educated. It was not until public elementary schools were organized that all girls could obtain a common school training. Even in the eighteenth century, addition developed the fact that an intelligent woman had no one to guide her reading. "During the first years of our country, the Pilgrims believed that women were inferior to men and therefore did not need an education. Schools were started twenty years after the founding of Plymouth, but there were no girls as pupils until one hundred and fifty years later, when the Boston public schools opened their doors to girls for half a year's instruction in spelling, reading and composition.

on a wall and admire. But the knowledge which makes people alive makes one live more abundantly, makes one richer, worthier, and more useful to the world. It is the distance between knowledge and life and not life for knowledge.

The Three Frogs Dean Brown illustrated the value of knowledge with his famous story of the three frogs. A farmer had left a milk can filled with milk in a stream to cool. Three frogs were jumping around the stream and they tried to see how far up on the can they could hop. Finally one broke the records and crossed the brim, falling into the milk. He soon gave up the struggle and became a drowned frog at the bottom of the can. The second frog repeated the performance and it, too, was drowned.

The third frog was determined to get over the brim to see what was going on. He hopped and made the distance landing in the milk as did the other two. But, the third frog was educated. He had been through high school and had attained knowledge and knew what certain physical action on his own part would do to him. When found Mr. Frog No. 3 sitting on top of a cylinder of butter awaiting to be freed. He had churned out his life problem.

Dean Brown concluded his address upon the graduates to advise each his own problem in life to life to make his services worthier. He warned them to make themselves more useful and happier members of the life they are called upon to live.

The combined Boys' and Girls' glee clubs followed Dean Brown on the program rendering "Conquest of the Air" by Tschaiikowsky. It was well sung and the High school students injected a goodly amount of spirit into their work.

Miss Gladys Rogers, valedictorian, delivered her essay on "Friendship" and valedictory address next. Miss Rogers took her part severely handicapped. Her father, James Rogers, who is known here as a well known physician, had been taken to the hospital during the day for a serious operation. She was brave throughout the entire performance not once showing her anxiety. Miss Rogers is a second generation graduate of the High school, her father having graduated from South Manchester High. Incidentally, Superintendent F. A. VerPlanck has signed both diplomas.

The valedictory was delivered to the class as it stood upon a signal by President Treat. Miss Rogers' essay and valedictory follow:

Friendship "Those friends, thou hast, and their adoption tried, Grapple them to thy soul with Hoops of steel."

"The advice given in this famous quotation from Shakespeare's 'Hamlet' needs no explanation. The meaning is quite obvious—that we forever hold in our possession those who have proved to be our true friends. The application of the advice will vary with the individual, but it leads us all to ask ourselves the question, 'Who are our friends?'"

"To some, the word 'friend' implies a feeling of reverence and sincere devotion. Others regard it carelessly, overlooking its real importance, but no one is likely to disregard it entirely. "In speaking of friends, we first think of our parents. Because we accept this friendship as a matter of course, we do not always realize how much they mean to us. We do know that we may turn to them in time of trouble and that they will very seldom fail us. Reliability is the supreme test of friendship. It distinguishes those who are real friends from those who are not. "The friends that we have made among our schoolmates and our teachers are also important. From their friendship, we have derived much of the happiness connected with our schooldays. They have taught us the value of co-operation which is as essential in friendship as in work and play.

"Posterity has been fortunate in having numerous works which have been inspired by literary friendships. These well known, 'In Memoriam' by the great poet Tennyson is a beautiful tribute to his most intimate friend, Arthur Hallam. A similar poem, 'Lyricus,' written by Milton, is an elegy on the death of a dear friend. These are but two examples of the numerous works which were inspired by friends.

"What is friendship? The dictionary defines it as 'a friendly attachment of esteem and affection. Of course, we all honor and respect our friends and have a feeling of tenderness for them, but friendship is even more than that. We can feel it, but we cannot express it in words.

"These are two important elements in the formation of friendship—sincerity and sympathy. The enduring friendships are built on the foundation of sincerity. We must be able to think aloud before the person with whom we are dropping in his presence. We must give him entrance to our heart so that he can see us as we really are. If this sincerity does not exist, there is no friendship.

"Sympathy is of no less importance. There are many opportunities for a friend to sympathize. When we are having failure and defeat, a word of cheer and comfort from a friend, will help us to face the difficulties with new hope. Through

MULTIPLE DECK STREETS ASKED FOR LONDONERS

Express Highways In All Directions Part of New Traffic Plan.

London.—Express highways in all directions, super and multi-decked streets, and marginal express highways for city work and cross-country traffic were suggested as a means of solving the traffic problems of London and New York by Dr. John A. Harriss, chairman of the Committee on Traffic Regulation in New York and former Special Deputy Police Commissioner, during an interview here.

Dr. Harriss is on a visit to European capitals to study traffic problems.

"In New York I have estimated that traffic blocks cost us $500,000,000 a year," said Dr. Harriss.

Blames Congestion

"Over $350,000,000 of that is due to traffic congestion alone and the balance is the depreciation of the utilization of motor vehicle investments that are idle for four hours out of eight. In addition, I have estimated that by means of my highway system cure deaths will be reduced by 66 per cent, and accidents will be reduced by 75 per cent."

"The most important thing required today is the segregation of vehicles into their various categories—fast moving automobiles on their own tier, omnibuses and heavy motor-trucks on their own and so on. As for the horse, I think the day is over as far as haulage is concerned."

Segregated Vehicles

"I foresee the time when every big city—and also busy tracts of country—will have their own systems of weather-protected self-ventilated highways. Many of these could be constructed over the ways of existing railroad lines."

"By the segregation of vehicles into their various categories there is no reason why cars should not travel at 100 miles an hour in perfect safety. Surfaces would be resilient rubber. There is no limit to the number of decks a street might have."

LEARNED IN 25 DAYS.

Boston.—Illiterate, half-starved from suffering in Russia, and threatened with deportation from the United States because of her ignorance, Miss Ceril Leiderman began studying to pass the immigration tests. In the 25 days before she was to have been sent back home, she applied herself so earnestly that she passed the examination with ease.

Ex-Buck PRIVATE goes back to FRANCE

PAUL ADAMS
NEA Service

This is chapter 65 of the series of articles written by an ex-doughboy who is revisiting France as a correspondent for The Herald.

CHAPTER LXV

"From Eclisfontaine to Exermont, thence north to Arietal Farm and Sommerance."

The guide books one buys in France do not contain the above line of direction. But if any American Legionnaire desires to visit the most bitterly-contested area of the Meuse-Arnonne battlefield, and perhaps the scene of the fiercest fighting of the war for Americans with the possible exception of Berzy-le-Sec and the Missy Ravine, one should walk over those acres, and walk slowly, too.

Defended by eight German divisions, the hills and the Exermont ravine saw the collapse of three American divisions—one of the few defeats of American's greatest battle. Then three fresh divisions came in (one of which was later cited in general orders for gallantry), conquered the terrain and went on to Romagne.

To pass through the region today one must rely on memories or a vivid imagination to visualize that conflict. Most of the traces of the battle have vanished. Sommerance has been rebuilt; Eclisfontaine is a dot of a few houses along the road. The marks of machine gun bullets are on the walls of the church at Exermont and a German sign "Schlüssel" remains on one of the pillars inside to designate the nationality of the former occupants who used the church for a stable. Arietal Farm is under cultivation, but there are depressions in the rolling acres, ominous reminders of the shell holes of the past.

To go through the stillness in the evening of a warm day, it is hard to imagine that the sweet air was once drenched with gas. It is difficult to conjure up the rat-a-tat of machine guns that killed and killed. Long shadows fall across the narrow unfenced roads that merge into the fields. The peasants plod homeward. A boy and dog follow a flock of sheep. And on the way down to Charpentry, in the direc-

THE BOOK OF KNOWLEDGE: (14) Common Wonders

SKETCHES BY BESSEY SYNOPSIS BY BRÄUCHER

Wind blows in this direction

Water presses in this direction

Did you ever wonder how a ship sails against the wind? This diagram explains it. The process is known as "tacking," sailors steering a zigzag course. One side of the boat is presented to the oncoming wind. Water resistance on the opposite side combines with the wind striking the sails to "squeeze" the boat along on its path.

Certain snails can remain apparently dead for years without food, and then revive. A desert snail from Egypt slept four years, from 1845 to 1850, in the British Museum.

Light traveling from an object in the water is bent down on emerging into the air. The picture shows where we see the pebble and where it is.

This picture shows why a magnifying glass makes things look larger than they are. Rays of light, passing through a magnifying glass, bend as a stick appears to bend when put into water. The eye throws back the rays straight, as shown by the dotted lines. Thus we see the image bigger than it really is.

BOTH SHARKEY AND DEMPSEY START THEIR TRAINING TODAY

Ex-Champ To Work Out In Saratoga and Ex-Gob To Get In Condition At Garden Gymnasium.

New York, June 24.—Having scored a moral victory yesterday in top-hatting his man into a state of actual embarrassment, Jack Dempsey—the old, light-hearted, rollicking Jack of those freighting days under Kearns—was to arrive at his Saratoga, N. Y., training camp early today to finish training for his comeback match with Jack Sharkey on July 21. His program, outlined as he left New York last night with a $25,000 contract for the fight, called for complete rest until Monday, after which the open season was to be declared on sparring partners.

Sharkey probably will get into training today at the Garden Gymnasium, one floor below the spot where Dempsey got a psychological jump on Sharkey yesterday. This he did by "managing" most of the ex-gob's movements and conversation. Meanwhile, winking broadly at the open-mouthed neophyte in order to let it in on the fun.

The contracts he signed yesterday were enough to gladden any man's heart. One of them gave him $250,000 and a 2 1/2 per cent cut on the Sharkey gate. Another, in the event of victory, promised him 15 per cent for a second meeting with Tunney and a third, predicated on the assumption that he will regain the heavyweight title, guaranteed him $500,000 and fifty per cent of the gate to defend the championship next year.

Sharkey got practically the same contracts, except that he was offered 22 1/2 per cent of the Dempsey receipts.

Dempsey has engaged Leo P. Flynn, veteran boxing pilot, as business manager of his "comeback" campaign and chief adviser in his ring affairs. Flynn will lead Dempsey's training camp. He has handled more boxers than any other man in the business and the former champion will have a shrewd and experienced hand in his corner in future bouts.

Pole Breaks

Here's a remarkable action photograph depicting how Frank Glaser, Marquette pole vaulter, came down with a thud when his pole broke as he was about ready to slide over the bar. Glaser gets thirteen feet easily in his vaults. He will seek national honors against the foremost pole vaulters of the nation at Chicago in June.

The trouble with most of these "crack" pitchers is they have the nasty habit of doing just that in the wrong inning.

A Chicago wrestler admits to the Illinois legislature he has taken down in a crooked bout. Shame! Shame!

Try and tie that one—we always thought there were some things even a legislator knew.

Demetral said he had to pawn his rings and sign a quitclaim to his home as a guarantee he would lose to Strangler Lewis. Gosh! What would it cost to win.

Yale and Stanford are going to hold a telegraphic track meet but Mr. O'Goofy has the idea it's "phony."

Mr. O'Goofy was going great in his fight the other night until his thirteenth knockdown. "Along about then," he said, "I began to feel the jinx might influence the judges against me."

Fits the poor Chicago fight promoters. They certainly have their trials.

1. With bases empty, catcher interferes with batsman in striking at pitched ball, what is the decision?

2. Is ball in play if a fair hit ball strikes the umpire on foul territory?

3. Infield is drawn in, batted ball passes infield and hits umpire standing a considerable distance back, what is the ruling?

4. What happens when the umpire calls a balk?

5. Batsman strikes at pitched ball, which hits his clothing and gets away from catcher, can runner or runners on bases advance?

1. This tells it. The batsman is entitled to first base because of the interference, regardless of what happens when he tries to hit the pitched ball.

2. The ball is in play, runners advance at their peril.

3. The ball is considered in play, since the moment the ball passes the infield there is no chance for a play by any of the infielders.

4. Action is immediately suspended, runner or runners on the bases advance one base.

5. The ball is dead, no runners can advance on such a play, they simply hold their original bases.

American League Slaves Of Loyalty In Contest Today

By DAVIS J. WALSH.

I. N. S. Sports Editor.

New London, Conn., June 24.—Ancient Carthage lashed its galleys slaves until they fell in a swoon, face down on the thwarts and utterly spent, in order that the master might reach his destination. To-day, two boatloads of modern slaves, for the most part born to the purple, will go under the whip because loyalty, that sternest master of them all, has so willed it; for today, Yale and Harvard row four miles down the Connecticut river for a thousand deaths as they do it.

Romance In Sport
Romance rides with this sport from the observation train; from the bank, you see only the color and beauty of the flashing sweep, the rhythmic and pulsing of the oars, and the gripping drama of the contest. But to the men in the boat there will be nothing so beautiful as an ugly, towering railroad bridge that drags the finish and nothing so dramatic as a master in command under the head of pleasure and what are the odds if those who really are pleased happen to be confined to the gay crowd on the banks, trains and pleasure craft, combining to create as inspiring a scene as the brute force of a capable.

Yes, victory alone is the reward of the oarsmen and it is a matter of record that Harvard has gone uncompensated through six draught years and mostly through no fault of its own. Harvard has been coached by Yale, inspired by a young genius with the appropriate name of Leader, was better. It has ridden the crest since the great day, four years ago, when it decided to break away from its own traditions and adopt a new system and coach that here combined to make his Pacific coast watersmanship famous the world over.

Spell Is Broken
Leader didn't lose a race at Yale through collegiate, national and Olympic campaigns, until a few weeks ago when he was beaten by Pettit, Mitchell, 2 umpires, McCormick, Klem and McLaughlin, time, 1:40.

3.—Jonnard batted for Williams in 5th.
4.—Kaufmann batted for Mitchell in 6th.

Local Sport Chatter

The Trade school baseball team closes its season this afternoon when it plays Springfield Vocation-al in that city. The mechanics have won 6 and lost 4 games to date. Springfield was one of the teams to trip them up. Jimmy Adams, pitching ace of the local team is expected to work on the mound.

Rain interrupted the baseball game between Cheney Brothers and the Connecticut Mutual team of Hartford last night at the West Side field in the third inning with Manchester leading 3 to 1. Tomorrow the locals will go to Meriden for a game with the Instico team, leaving Murphy's restaurant at 1 o'clock. Wilfred Wiley, former high school pitcher, will work on the mound for Holland.

The selection of Ty Holland as the best all-around athlete in the Senior class in "Who's Who in 1927" in the Somanhis Events, is one of the best selections of the alma mater and the honor was a most deserved one. Holland plans to work for a year and then may enter C. A. C.

The Community club goes to Westfield, Mass., Sunday, leaving the north end shortly after 12 o'clock.

John Cervini, junior, has been elected captain of the S. M. H. S. track and field team.

Stroke Savers
By Bobby Cruickshank

Here is a little shot that will save you many a stroke if you get it down pat. It is the deadly clip shot.

As I play it, it requires a stance that brings the heels nearly together, the right foot is more advanced than the left and I stand extremely close to the ball.

If you do this you can control the body better and check any tendency toward swaying. The clubhead is swung back in the same line as the line of play, keeping it low.

Here's where you have to watch yourself. As I play it, the wrists move slightly at the same time the arms move. In hitting the ball, keep the left forearm and wrist straight.

Here's where you have to watch yourself. As I play it, the wrists move slightly at the same time the arms move. In hitting the ball, keep the left forearm and wrist straight.

Here is a little shot that will save you many a stroke if you get it down pat. It is the deadly clip shot.

As I play it, it requires a stance that brings the heels nearly together, the right foot is more advanced than the left and I stand extremely close to the ball.

If you do this you can control the body better and check any tendency toward swaying. The clubhead is swung back in the same line as the line of play, keeping it low.

Here's where you have to watch yourself. As I play it, the wrists move slightly at the same time the arms move. In hitting the ball, keep the left forearm and wrist straight.

Slaves Of Loyalty In Contest Today

By DAVIS J. WALSH.

New London, Conn., June 24.—Ancient Carthage lashed its galleys slaves until they fell in a swoon, face down on the thwarts and utterly spent, in order that the master might reach his destination. To-day, two boatloads of modern slaves, for the most part born to the purple, will go under the whip because loyalty, that sternest master of them all, has so willed it; for today, Yale and Harvard row four miles down the Connecticut river for a thousand deaths as they do it.

Romance In Sport
Romance rides with this sport from the observation train; from the bank, you see only the color and beauty of the flashing sweep, the rhythmic and pulsing of the oars, and the gripping drama of the contest. But to the men in the boat there will be nothing so beautiful as an ugly, towering railroad bridge that drags the finish and nothing so dramatic as a master in command under the head of pleasure and what are the odds if those who really are pleased happen to be confined to the gay crowd on the banks, trains and pleasure craft, combining to create as inspiring a scene as the brute force of a capable.

Yes, victory alone is the reward of the oarsmen and it is a matter of record that Harvard has gone uncompensated through six draught years and mostly through no fault of its own. Harvard has been coached by Yale, inspired by a young genius with the appropriate name of Leader, was better. It has ridden the crest since the great day, four years ago, when it decided to break away from its own traditions and adopt a new system and coach that here combined to make his Pacific coast watersmanship famous the world over.

Spell Is Broken
Leader didn't lose a race at Yale through collegiate, national and Olympic campaigns, until a few weeks ago when he was beaten by Pettit, Mitchell, 2 umpires, McCormick, Klem and McLaughlin, time, 1:40.

3.—Jonnard batted for Williams in 5th.
4.—Kaufmann batted for Mitchell in 6th.

DEAN BROWN'S TALK

In obtaining the services of Dean Charles R. Brown of Yale Divinity school for an address at the graduation exercises of the class of 1927, South Manchester High school, the authorities of the school would seem to have been almost inspired.

It is given to only a few speakers to so tell the truth that it abides with their hearers ever after. Dean Brown possesses that peculiar gift in truly remarkable degree.

There are very few Dean Browns, anywhere. But there are other splendid men and women among our advanced educators who have much the same message of responsibilities and service to carry to young men and young women standing on the threshold of higher education.

WHO'S BIGGER

One of the most interesting questions just now is whether the United States is bigger than Harry M. Blackmer and James E. O'Neill or whether Blackmer and O'Neill are bigger than the United States.

Blackmer was chairman of the Mid-West Refining Co. O'Neill was president of the Prairie Oil Co. They were among the officials who guaranteed the deal whereby the Continental Trading Co., Ltd., of Canada, purchased and later resold to the Sinclair and Prairie Oil interests 33,300,000 barrels of oil from the Mexia companies, out of the profits on which Albert B. Fall, then secretary of the interior, is alleged to have been handed $230,000 in Liberty bonds.

Both left the country at the time of the Teapot Dome trial in Cheyenne and have never returned. Because the government regarded their presence here as essential to proving the case against Sinclair and Fall, Congress passed an act providing for the service of subpoenas on any American in a foreign country by a consular officer and providing further that in case of refusal to recognize the subpoena such a person might be adjudged in contempt of court and his property, up to $100,000, seized in penalty.

Either the consular officers and representatives of the Department of Justice who sought for the two men could not find them in Europe, or pretended that they could not find them. At all events no subpoena has ever been served on O'Neill, who is supposed to be somewhere on the continent, nor was one served on Blackmer, who was living in France, until recently. Then he refused to accept service or travel money. Now the United States government has taken Blackmer's passport away from him. He is called in the dispatches a "man without a country."

We doubt if that will worry him much. He will probably become a citizen of France—or Montenegro or some other country. As for O'Neill, it may be true that he cannot be found; but there are probably a hundred Americans in Paris who could tell where he is, nevertheless.

It is going to be a bit intriguing to observe whether the government ever takes steps to collect the $100,000 penalty already incurred by Mr. Blackmer and the one which Mr. O'Neill seems quite ready to incur as soon as somebody exerts himself in the matter.

Meantime what is all this but confession?

CHEAP TOURING.

A New London woman, writing to the Day, of that city, tells about taking a two months automobile trip with another woman, in which they covered 8,000 miles of distance and a large part of the United States, saw hundreds of intensely interesting things—and spent $300 apiece on the whole expedition, counting everything.

They started from New London, took the Jacob's ladder route into New York state, visited Niagara Falls and saw a sample of Canada, took in Detroit, Chicago, Wisconsin, Minnesota, the Dakotas and Montana; toured Yellowstone National Park, visited Cheyenne at the time of the annual rodeo, tended southward into Colorado and followed the Lincoln highway back through Nebraska, Iowa, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, and Pennsylvania, to New York and home.

They lollered in Glacier park, Estes park and the Garden of the Gods; they visited the battlefield of Gettysburg; they saw automobiles made and smelled the toasted odors of Battle Creek; they went down into mines and visited the greatest copper smelter in the world; they saw Buffalo Bill's burial place. They rode from New London to Wyoming without a tire puncture. They never did have any engine trouble. They stopped at comfortable, decent but never fashionable places. They ate plentifully but never extravagantly. They had a wonderful time and they know enormously more about their country, at first hand, than the vast majority of Americans do.

With a good car and $300 one can do unbelievable things in the way of vacationing.

WARS BY VOTE.

Alanson B. Houghton, United States ambassador to Great Britain, addressing Harvard alumni yesterday on "Peace," made a suggestion which we are sure will appeal powerfully to a very great many Americans—and then qualified it by a proviso the necessity of which we are at a loss to understand.

Mr. Houghton proposed that the power of declaring war be taken out of the hands of governments and placed in those of the populations.

This idea is not original with Ambassador Houghton but we do not remember that it has ever been advocated by any person of such high authority or one who can command so respectful an audience.

And yet it is a proposal of the strongest imaginable appeal. If there is any subject in the world which by every obligation of morality and justice would seem to belong, for its righteous decision, to the people who must bear the major burden of the determination, it is this one of war.

True, there are many aspects of the problem, and it is a matter that will bear the closest scrutiny and the most profound thought. But at the go-off the idea seems just and reasonable.

But just why the matter is necessarily one for international agreement does not seem to us to be clear. Why it should not be a question for each nation to determine independently is a bit puzzling. What difference should it make to Americans, for example, whether the willingness of some other nation to fight us was the result of governmental action or the will of the people of that nation? We should have to lay our course on the facts, not on the manner of their creation.

Perhaps this is one place in which the United States might assume that leadership in world affairs of which so much has been said and toward which so little done, preserving its traditional abhorrence of foreign leagues and alliances.

ROCKET-SHIP.

Vas is dis Lindenbeger stuff—a marvel? Poof-poo! Child's play! Already it is nodding-nodding. Already has a Choiman into a cocked hat knocked it. Two hours, Berlin to New York, is a plenty.

Max Vellier, German astronomer and aviator, has the key to quick transportation as is quick transportation. Very gravely he tells of the limitations upon airplane speed. He has it all figured out. The ocean can never be flown in less than a day or two. That's a terrible waste of time. So Max proposes to do the stunt in something over an hour and a half in a rocket ship, propelled on a high arc, perhaps a hundred and fifty miles above sea level, through the ether, by driving out in a manner which he knows about the exhaust of a kind of liquid fuel engine that he also knows about.

Scientist Vellier hasn't got as far as a working model, yet. But he has the theory far along—and to the

CIVIC ACHIEVEMENTS

BY DON E. MOWRY

Secretary, the American Community Advertising Association. Creation of city foundations—funds set aside in perpetuity, the income from which is administered for the general public welfare—are valuable semi-official assets to any city. These funds are administered as a trust by a board of public spirited citizens who have the welfare of their municipality at heart.

Cleveland, O., was the first city to put over the foundation idea on a large scale. Not many cities have followed Cleveland's lead, and it is surprising that the idea has not been given wider acceptance. That the foundation can be a success in medium-sized cities is proven by Altoona, Pa., which not long ago organized the Altoona Foundation.

German mind the theory is everything. He has the most serene confidence that the rest is detail.

Meantime it is probable that the stock of aviation companies in this country will not be sold for a cent on the dollar because of the certain doom of the airplane at the hands of the rocket ship.

1924 PALES.

The Boston Herald takes quite seriously the urge of Massachusetts Democrats that the meeting place of their party's national convention next year be the Hub. It foresees in such a selection a repetition of the situation in New York three years ago where all the opponents of Al Smith were in the heart of the enemy's country.

The Herald rather underestimates it. If New York's Democracy is solid for Smith then Boston's is solidly solidified under hydraulic pressure. It was the Boston crowd, rather than the New Yorkers, who challenged the dogged resistance of the anti-Smithites, who lighted the fires of religious dissension and fanned them into conflagration.

No more certain way of splitting the Democratic party into two parties could be invented than to invite several hundred delegates from the South and from the Klan regions to come within stone throwing distance of the wild Democrats of the South End. South Boston Roxbury, Somerville and Everett.

Old Master's

I played with you mid cowslips blowing. When I was six and you were four. When garlands waving, flower-balls throwing. Were pleasures soon to please no more. Through groves and meads, o'er grass and heather. With little playmates, to and fro. We wandered hand in hand together. But that was sixty years ago.—Thomas Love Peacock: 'Love and Age.'

The annual consumption of pencils in this country is approximately one billion.

Altoona is an industrial city with many skilled workers, but little or no centralized wealth. Its foundation is a community saving fund to which any citizen may contribute. Many citizens are making provision in their wills which will leave the foundation sums of various sizes. Instead of having this money spent at once, the money is invested. The interest and income from the fund is spent. The principal never diminishes. It grows, in fact, with each additional bequest. And the entire city benefits from the expenditures for the administration of the fund, controlled by the highest type of unselfish citizens, is so handled that it is kept entirely out of politics.

Any city with a foundation such as this has an asset it can advertise and boast of to an unlimited degree.

New York, June 24.—It's a safe bet that about 60 per cent of Manhattan at some time or other makes some serious effort towards going on the stage, writing a play or backing a show.

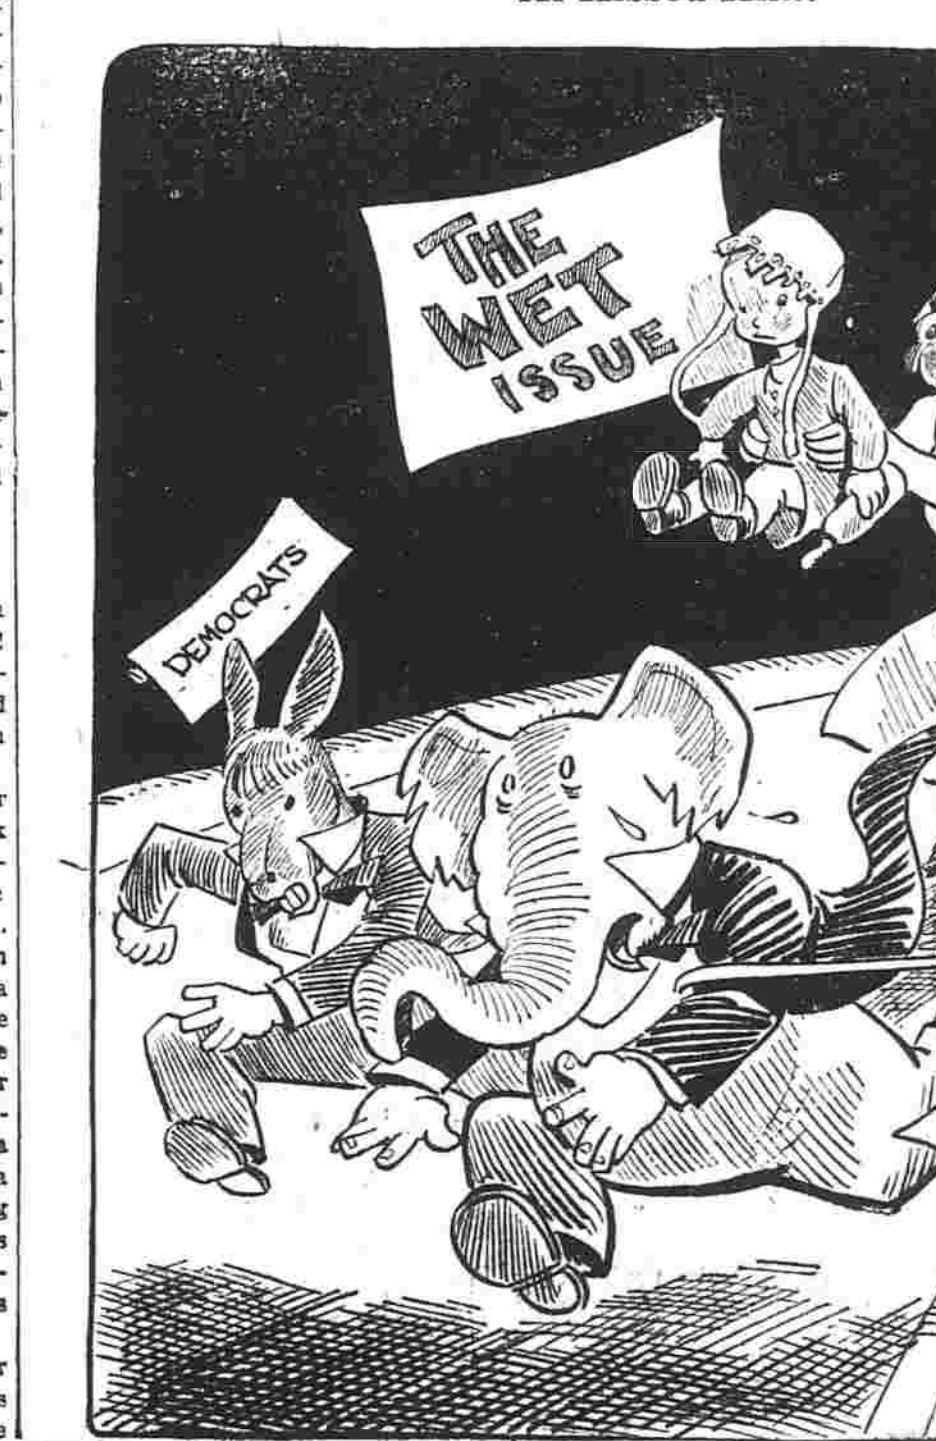

So completely is the New York atmosphere charged with theatrical phlegm that a healthy percentage of all tea-table or parlor conversations start with "Have you seen so-and-so? ... You can't miss it." Not to have attended a recognized Broadway hit becomes nothing short of a social error. Eyebrows are lifted disdainfully as you blushing admit that you haven't got around to seeing "Broadway," for instance. The good folk wonder what on earth you are doing in the town.

Millions are dropped every year by sound business men who have piled up their fortunes through careful and methodical investments, but yield to a Broadway siren song that sounds sour to the ear of any practiced theater man. A check of a season's output in Variety, the theatrical publication, shows a solid column or more of failures to a mere dozen financial successes. And to each of the failures has been contributed a fat bankroll. Many of the failures show losses that mount into the hundreds of thousands.

In the young society circles the vogue for getting on the stage or into the films grows each season. The old social barriers between society and theater seem completely broken down. Few dowagers frown at the idea of their daughters talking to the theaters, nor do the good church folk frown so much upon this one-time "sinful" profession. One of the schools for the stage invariably flanked by cars that bespeak the wealth of the youngsters attending. The little theater groups have drawn in sons and daughters, and mothers and daughters of the best families, who look upon such movements as "doing something artistic."

In one of the Village experiments last year there appeared a white-haired old fellow in his late sixties. He had made several fortunes in business, but in the "little theater" he was content to come on as the butler. When money was needed he was drawn upon and someone told him he was being used as a mere "angel" and a "sucker". The old fellow smiled and said he was quite aware of the fact.

WASHINGTON LETTER BY RODNEY DUTCHER. Washington, June 24.—It never can happen again, but the American consulate at Gibraltar has been handed down from father to son for nearly 100 years.

Richard Louis Sprague, the present consul, is the grandson of Horatio Sprague of Massachusetts, who was appointed consul in 1825, and the son of Horatio of Sprague, who was appointed consul in 1848 and served for 53 years.

The ships of war and the ships of trade have passed each day under the eyes of the Spragues. It might be supposed that the Sprague dynasty was by this time as firmly established as the great rock itself, but this is not true, first because the present consul is a bachelor and second because the practice of political appointments for such posts as theirs has been abandoned.

The first Horatio Sprague was a clerk for a Boston merchant whose ships sailed to Cadiz, Malaga, Malta and Genoa. On orders from his concern to select a good port for an office site, Sprague chose Gibraltar in or about the year 1800. He became one of the leading merchants and when the War of 1812 broke out, the authorities were forced to make him leave the fortress, nevertheless allowed him use of the harbor and gave him the chance to take with him his representative at the dock.

Made Consul by Jackson. After the war, Sprague resumed business on the old stand and in 1832 President Andrew Jackson made him a consul. During his 16-year tenure the Humane Society of Massachusetts gave him a gold medal in recognition of his services in obtaining release of the crew of an American vessel captured by Moorish pirates. President Polk appointed Horatio Sprague consul on his father's death. Sprague II established the consulate where it now stands, at one side of the Rock, overlooking Government House and the naval harbor.

This second Sprague watched warships move through the straits in the Crimean War, the American Civil War, the Egyptian and South African Wars and the war with Spain. Admiral Dewey paid extensive tribute to this Sprague for sending the most reliable information on the movements of Cervera's fleet.

State Department files show many fascinating reports from this Sprague. He tells how the great steam frigate Missouri burned to the water's edge in Gibraltar Bay, of the movements of slave trade vessels and of the attempts of American sloop-of-war to capture them, the protection of American shipping interests and of how Confederate vessels were fitted out in Liverpool to destroy Northern commerce.

Report on Marie Celeste. Most interesting of all, perhaps, is Sprague's report after the famous American barkentine "Marie Celeste" was picked up in the Atlantic and towed into Gibraltar Bay. Sprague was unable to explain this great marine mystery, and no one has been able to do so since. He reported these facts:

A British steamer bound for Gibraltar, on a bright day with a smooth sea, had sighted and overtaken an American barkentine, which had all sails set and was headed down the Portuguese coast apparently under no command. The British captain decided to board the American vessel when she failed to respond to signals. He did this with some difficulty owing to the Celeste's erratic course. A careful search was made. Everything was found in order. The hatches were down and the cargo fully protected; not a boat was missing. But there was not a soul on board!

That was more than half a century ago and no one has ever learned the fate of the crew, the captain and his wife and baby.

Letters regarding the Celeste are still received at the American consulate at Gibraltar.

Another unique thing about the Spragues is that Horatio J. for 16 years was also consular agent at Algeiras, Spain, thus representing his country before two governments.

During his long term, he entertained three ex-presidents. Fillmore, Pierce and Grant, while the present consul entertained Roosevelt when the latter was en route to Africa to hunt.

Dick Sprague, now on the job, is said to be better known to more American naval officers and an honorary member of more navy messes than anyone else in the consular service.

Gibraltar is the smallest consular district in the service, but Sprague often acts unofficially at Algeiras, And, regardless of its size, the Rock is a great place from which to see things.

NEW MOTOR TO FLY PLANE AT 300 MILE RATE

Lindbergh Given View of Engine Designed For Use In Aviation.

New York.—Two new air-cooled motors are shortly to be launched on the aviation market, according to information current here, which are expected to speed up, if not revolutionize airplane construction. One of these motors, designated the "Packard X" is believed capable of propelling an airplane 300 miles an hour.

Compact Motor.—The Packard motor, twelve cylinders, built in the form of an X, is said to produce 1,250 horsepower. It was shown to Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh during his recent visit here.

Simultaneously the development of a new 650 horsepower Curtiss engine also became known. This engine, with a diameter of but three feet two inches, is of such compactness that it is expected by its builders to exceed by far the efficiency of the present 200 horsepower Wright Whirlwind motor, which Lindbergh used on his flight to Paris.

Lindbergh, on his visit to Roosevelt Field just before leaving for St. Louis, expressed a desire to see the Packard engine and was taken to the plant at Garden City where the new motor is housed.

Much Speedier.—It was pointed out to him that if this motor had been attached to his "Spirit of St. Louis," instead of the present motor he could have traveled to Paris in approximately ten hours—in theory at least—instead of the thirty-three and a half hours in which he made his trans-oceanic trip.

The mystery motor, now revealed, was built at the suggestion of the Aeronautical Bureau of the Navy Department, especially for use of Lieutenant Al Williams, famous racing aviator of the Navy, for the purpose of capturing the world airplane speed record now held by France.

AND now for a Jantzen suit and a "coat" of tan!

It's a wonderful thing to get all tanned in the great outdoors. And the best of all outdoor sports is swimming. That's why a Jantzen means so much. Sharply differing from the "suits" that bind and drag like excess baggage, your Jantzen barely lets you know it's on you. Covers you snugly, lightly, naturally. And with modesty and warmth; for Jantzen-stitch fabric is closely knitted, long-fibred wool. It's extremely elastic. Fits without wrinkling. Color-fast, too, as Jantzens are literally dyed-in-the-wool. We have them in all sizes and popular styles and colors.

Summer Suits with Character and Coolness

Banish the old idea that a light weight suit must wilt with wear and weather. See these suits of "Palm Beach," tropical worsteds, mohairs, crashes, linens, flannels, pongees. All these are materials with character and coolness. Tailored properly, as our suits are, they assure a man's smartness, as well as comfort.

Priced $12.50 to $30

When You Go Swimming

Pick a bathing suit from our fine new stocks and you'll be ready for a swim, wherever you go. It is far better than renting a misfit, unhygienic suit, that may cause skin disorders. Besides, you'll equal our prices in just a few rentals.

Priced $3.00 to $6.50

Getting the Right Shoes on the Right Feet

The finest shoes on earth would be poor investment for you if your feet weren't comfortable in them. We're very careful to see that you get exactly the right last and size for your feet. Then we know you'll enjoy wearing the shoes. Quality is guaranteed of course. Plenty of new Oxfords and sports shoes. Priced to suit all purses.

Jungle Breath

© 1927 by NEA Service

THIS HAS HAPPENED

Attempts have been made on the life of ELISE MARBERRY, an American girl who owns and lives on property adjoining the queer little jungle-bordered town of PORTO VERDE, in west-central Brazil.

Several mysterious deaths have occurred, including that of one of her foremen. Her two-year-old orphaned nephew is kidnapped but is found again, largely through the efforts of VILAK, her cousin and protector, who is known in Porto Verde as ATTORNEY DAVIN. Elise's lawyer, Vilak has sent for LINCOLN NUNNALLY, elderly American chemist, to help him get at the bottom of the mystery.

They are ignorant of the cause of this hostility toward Elise but suspect that a man named "CYLORD PRENTISS, a reticent and forbidding character, is somehow involved.

Word is brought to Elise that the manager of her property at VILLAPA is desperately ill and must see her at once. Vilak suspects a trick and he insists that he and Nunnally accompany her.

On the road to Villapa they are ambushed by a band of ruffians in the uniforms of soldiers. They tell Vilak that he and his companions are wanted for murder. The charge is obviously a fake. Vilak is convinced their captors are in the pay of Elise's enemies.

Nunnally and Vilak are thrust up and thrown into a damp cell of a room. Elise is guarded outside. The room swarms with tortoise ants. After several futile attempts to break his bonds and persistent driving off of the ants, Vilak finally lets the ants swarm over him. Presently they have eaten nearly through the thong. He is free.

NOW BEGIN THE STORY CHAPTER XXIV

THRUSTING off the thongs from his cramped limbs, Vilak scrambled to his feet, quickly untied the cords which held the old man, then, picking up a small stone wine bottle which stood upon a rotting shelf and was the only weapon the room afforded, put a pellet of betel on his tongue and began watching at the window.

He waited until he saw the cooks begin to dish out huge portions of the hot mixture in the pot into the pans of the soldiers who came forward. Only two men were now left in close proximity to the house, the guard at the front door and the guard at the back.

"This is our chance," he whispered to Nunnally. "They're confident, hungry, and off their guard. Don't make a sound."

He crawled to the door, opened it inch by inch, so that it would not creak, then stepped into the shadow of the doorway. The sentry was greedily watching his companions at their meal, his back to the door he was certain needed none of his guarding.

Clapping his hand over the sentinel's mouth to prevent an outcry, Vilak brought the wine bottle down upon his head. The guard, stunned into unconsciousness, started to fall. Vilak caught him and dragged him inside. Quickly he stripped off his prisoner's blue-striped coat, trousers and hat, donned them himself, strapped his pistol around his waist, took his rifle, then bound and gagged him in case he should recover consciousness more quickly than Vilak expected.

Once more he silently opened the door, and with the other's hat pulled far down over his eyes, took his post outside it, prepared to grunt in Portuguese to any of the soldiers who might approach. But they were too occupied with their suppers. He stepped noiselessly inside the room again. "Come on," he whispered to the old man.

Creeping along the edge of the house and then into the tangled vegetation which instantly swallowed them up, he led the way to a clump of trees a hundred feet behind the fire where the troopers' horses were tied. Here another soldier was on guard.

Crawling up behind him, he rendered him unconscious by the same effective method he had used a few moments before, now employing the butt end of his pistol instead of the wine bottle.

He took his new victim's revolver and gave it to the old man. Quickly he unfastened the leashes of the three horses which had brought them from Elise's fazenda and gave these to the old man to hold. Then with a knife which he had found in the soldier's uniform he slashed at the bridles of the others so that a slight pull would sever them instantly. "Wait here," he whispered.

He began crawling through the underbrush toward the fire. The mustached captain had now taken a place beside Elise on the log. Vilak stealthily crept up behind him.

"Don't turn, my capitaz," he said quietly as he pressed the muzzle of his pistol against the other's back. "else I shall be compelled to kill out when you're ready."

He watched her move off to the shadows, heard her low shout, then picked up a blazing ember of the fire and began walking, thrusting the captain constantly before him with his pistol.

He reached the clump of trees. Elise and the old man were in their saddles, Nunnally clutching the bridle of Vilak's restless stallion. Vilak tied the bridle around one arm, then with the captain still in front of him and the horse trailing behind, walked to the mounts of the soldiers tied to the trees.

He raised the flaming ember he had in his hand and dashed it close to their heads, shouting loudly. The frightened animals whinnied, snorted, and tugged frenziedly at their halters to escape the flaming enemy. The weakened leather snapped, the panic-struck beasts dashed wildly into the forest.

Vilak put his foot into the stirrup of his own steed, whinnying nervously as it witnessed its fellow creatures' terror.

"Adios, amigos," he called cheerily to the captain, and springing into his saddle, raced off toward the road. His two companions followed. They gained the highway. Vilak turned his horse to Villapa. They sped on through the darkness, hearing behind them a few futile shots and volleys of passionate curses as the soldiers searched blindly in the woods for their vanished steeds.

Vilak listened and laughed. Elise gazed at him thoughtfully, then leaned over and kissed him. Their horses did not slacken their headlong pace.

In half an hour they had reached Villapa. Quickly they found Wilson, the superintendent. His face, long and tapering like a carrot, was gaunt, his eyes hollow, after effects apparently of a long attack of fever. Judging, however, by his quick active movements, he was well on the road to convalescence.

His astonishment on seeing them for a few moments was so great that he could only stammer out a few broken sentences; then quickly he told them, as Vilak has suspected, that he had sent no message. Though the river was rising hourly and a bad flood now very likely, if not certain, he said that he felt so much improved that he was perfectly able to cope with any emergency. Unless, of course, the dam broke at Avila, in which event no one could do anything.

To their dismay, however, when they asked him for guns to take the place of those which had been stolen, he apologetically replied that he could lend them only the two pistols which he had in his own cabin. The Villapa fazenda never had more than a few rifles, he went on; and only the day before an Indian laborer had taken them to the paint shed to oil them and carelessly lighting a cigarette, had set the whole shed on fire.

The flames had consumed everything in it, the workman himself barely escaping with his life. He had discharged the workman, of course, he added, but that didn't bring back the guns.

(To Be Continued)

Imminence of flood is added to the other dangers that beset Elise and her friends in Porto Verde. Meanwhile, there is much of mystery to be solved.

Home Page Editorial Keep Promises Made Your Child Olive Roberts Barton

"Mary, we're going to spend the day with Aunt Edith. Isn't that fine. You're going to wear your new blue coat and hat. Aunt Edith wants to see them."

"But, mother," says little Mary. "It is raining and I'd like to wear my rubber raincoat and take the little umbrella that matches. If I go to Aunt Edith's I'll want to walk over to Grandma's by myself. You said I could next time. And if I have to be out in the rain shouldn't I have rain clothes on?"

"Oh, hush, Mary! I get so tired arguing with you. Do as I say and wear your blue coat and hat. That's partly what we're going for. And about Grandma! Why are you so possessed to walk over there by yourself? It's two blocks and something might happen to you. No, you can't do that today."

What's wrong with this picture? I'll tell you. To begin with, when Mary made a wise and sensible choice, her mother snipped off a promising bud of initiative. When will parents learn how important and necessary a thing this quality of initiative is?

Mary was not being disobedient. She was exercising a child's right to analyze something for herself and justify a perfectly reasonable and justifiable statement to her mother. Children learn the phrase, "Mother knows best" or "Father knows best" usually with a mental reservation. Being sensible, reasonable, and not at all stupid little people, they know that as many times as not either mother nor father actually do know best. In this case Mother didn't. She should have recognized, to begin with, a symptom of initiative when she saw it, even so simple a matter as a coat. And there was the element of common sense.

Unquestioning and blind obedience a parent has a right to demand and must demand in fundamental things, which the child must understand and recognize. But without any right to voice his personal opinion becomes a puppet.

Another thing! The mother put fear into Mary's mind by auto-suggestion. She was "afraid" to let her cross a street. She should not have said so. To caution her about being careful in crossing a street would have been different.

Third! She broke a promise. She had told Mary "next time," and now she was hedging.

Psychologists will tell you the far-reaching results of misstatements or broken promises by parents to children.

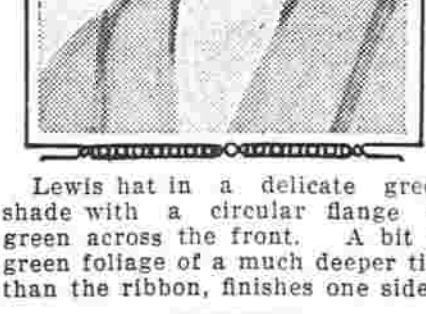

Is a child to set his earliest and most startling example of untruth, equivocation and broken pledges all examples of dishonesty? from the very parent who has told him it is a sin to lie?

Can we expect him to grow up with a hole-proof code of honor and a set of principles that won't stretch upon occasion, when from sheer imitation at first, and a sense of justification later, he has followed the example of a parent?

Here's a sensible man! Fortunately he's head of a girls' college where his sensibleness can be well utilized! He's President Henry Noble MacCracken of Vassar, who addressed his sweet young things in this wise in his commencement address:

"Bury yourselves for a time in an entirely different atmosphere. If you have majored in literature or philosophy, spend the summer with a cook book!"

"The real danger of college is not that there is too much contact between people of a kind, but that there is not enough real contact in the wide varieties of intellectual experience afforded."

"The duty of colleges is to give some training in that deeper sort of communication between personalities—all personalities, not just college personalities."

SUZANNE COLLECTS COINS

Countless wise-cracks will be made of course, over the fact that Suzanne, Queen of the Racquets, has taken up the hobby of coin-collecting. Most of the wise-cracks will take the slant, of course, that everybody knew that she started that when she turned professional. Suzanne, making a feverish tour of Parisian stamp houses, has collected more than $4,000 worth of old and rare coins.

HOBBIES

Garden variety people who are not Suzannes, and who complain of their boring and monotonous lives, might well follow her example of acquiring a hobby. If she, with all her resources for abundant living, needs a hobby, how much more do we? GENIUS—BORN OR MADE?

This is the last of four articles telling what science has discovered from studying the childhood of the world's greatest men and women.

BY DR. MORRIS FISHBEN

Editor Journal of the American Medical Association and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

"Youths who achieve eminence are characterized not only by high intellectual traits, but also by persistence of motive and effort, confidence in their abilities, and great strength or force of character."

This conclusion of the physiologists of Stanford University, who studied the characters of 300 eminent men and women of history to determine the factors that make for success, is most significant. The superior young men pursued high ideals, developed significant interests, and created new expressions of scientific and philosophical thought before they had reached the age of manhood.

Among the examples cited to prove this contention is the fact that Milton had written an ode pronounced by an eminent critic as perhaps the most beautiful in the English language, before he was twenty-one years old. Hume had defined his views before he was twenty-five. Peel was chief secretary for Ireland before he was 24,

Mary McAllister has wanted to have her hair bobbed for some time, and now she is going to give some barber a job. Mary was playing with a toy balloon filled with gas when someone playfully touched it with a cigarette. The balloon instantly went up in flames, which burned one side of Mary's hair. Now she has no choice about having her long tresses shorn—and is really thrilled over the prospect.

Blue Cornflower

If anyone ever so much as hints about a divorce between John Bowers and Marguerite De La Motte, there is apt to be quite an argument. They seem to be celluloid's perfectly matched couple. They haven't been apart since leaving Hollywood.

Speaking of divorces, there are rumors floating about that Marie Prevost is soon to go to Paris to secure a decree from Kenneth Harlan. Marie refuses to commit herself but does admit her intention of going to Europe as soon as her next picture is finished.

And then there is talk of the coming engagement of Juliana Johnston to Charlie Paddock, famous on the cinder path. In support of the rumors, Juliana has received several letters from Sir Charles.

One of the season's favorite colors, navy blue, is exploited in this large milan with a large navy blue silk cornflower posed at the front of the crown.

How Heroes Get That Way!

Personal Attributes Stir the Public More Than Achievement, Says Expert; Cites Lindbergh.

By GILBERT PATTEN.
Creator of Frank Merrillwell; Author of "The Adventures of Jack Lockwill."

Overnight, Aviator Charles A. Lindbergh found himself a hero. It is not surprising. He typifies a great many of the qualities of which heroes are made.

Personal attributes go very far toward fashioning heroes out of this person and that. Generally, they go farther than mere achievement.

Lindbergh, flying alone, traveled from San Diego to New York with only one stop. From San Diego to St. Louis, he flew across the Rocky Mountains in the dead of night.

Personality Popularized Him
That was a distinct achievement. But this achievement alone would not have created one-tenth the public interest in him that Lindbergh suddenly found himself enjoying.

What stirred the popular fancy so deeply was the achievement in combination with Lindbergh's remarkable personality—his attitude.

Study the modern heroes, and you will discover some interesting facts. A hero generally has both physical and mental qualities which set him apart from his fellows. Bravery and loyalty are the most universally admired characteristics; physical prowess comes next.

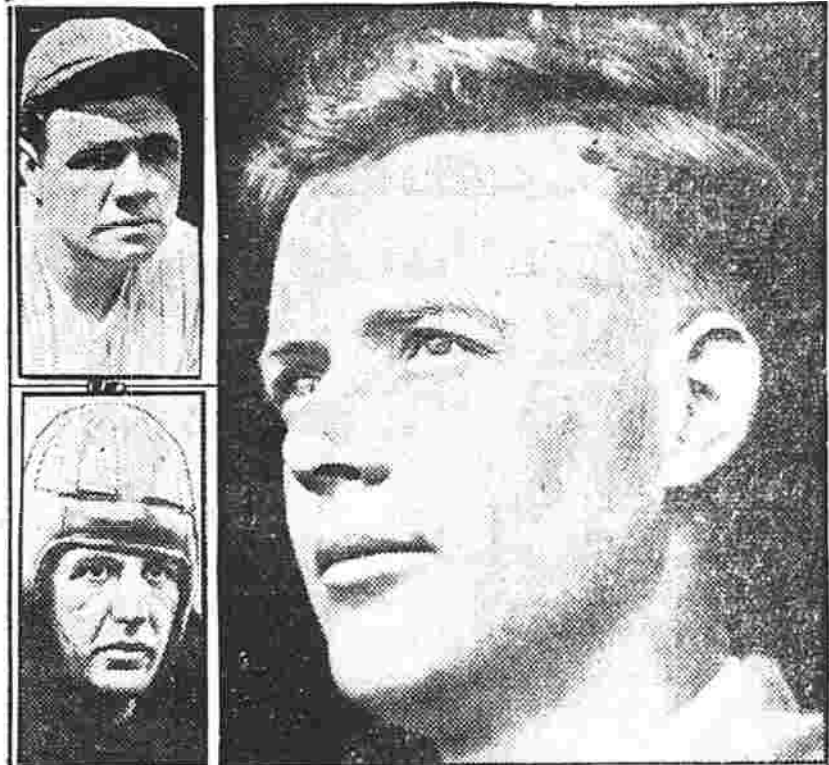

Unselfishness a Factor
Loyalty includes unselfishness. The public is quick to discard a hero who openly turns his prestige to personal profit. Witness the case of "Red" Grange.

Self-confidence and tenacity of purpose also are essential attributes of the hero. No vacillating person ever is greatly admired for any length of time, no matter what remarkable deeds he may perform.

Generosity and kindness are lacking from some heroes, but the greatest ones usually have these qualities to a marked degree.

Weaknesses Mustn't Be Vicious
A hero may have weaknesses if they are not vicious. Sometimes such weaknesses make a hero seem more human. John L. Sullivan had weaknesses, but was admired, even respected, in spite of them.

One thing the public resents is for any hero to attempt to step out of character. Today Jack Dempsey is more generally admired than his successor as heavyweight champion. The reason is that Tunney is Heroes—heroines—past and present—they are cut to no one pattern, but study these and you'll find the same possessing many similar traits of character. The larger photos: Charles A. Lindbergh and Helen Wills. The smaller: Babe Ruth, "Red" Grange, Mary Pickford, Jack Dempsey thought by the public to be "high hat."

Luck often figures in the making of a hero. Lindbergh has been extremely lucky as an aviator, having escaped several serious plights in a sensational manner. The public likes that.

And As to Heroines
So much for heroes. When we study heroines, we find personal attractiveness nearly always contributes to feminine popularity. Witness the cases of Mary Pickford and Helen Wills—or, to go farther back into history, Joan of Arc.

Otherwise, the same personal attributes that make for the creation of heroes usually make for the creation of heroines.

Sport gives us most of our heroes save those who owe their fame to war. The latter necessarily are classed separately. You seldom ever hear of a hero coming from the business world.

About business affairs, we refuse to get excited.

WAPPING

The Federated Workers held their annual picnic on Tuesday, June 21, at Lake Pocotopaug, East Hampton. About 30 women and children attended. Some of them in bathing and others took a ride around the lake in the motor-boat. A fine dinner was served, and all report a fine time.

The Girls' Business Club held their regular meeting on Tuesday evening at the parsonage. They first met at the school ball grounds and enjoyed a fine game of base ball, after which they held their business meeting, and decided to assist the Y. M. C. A. boys with their lawn fete next month.

Little Miss Joan Woodward celebrated her second birthday by attending a little birthday party at the new home of her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. William D. Woodward of Manchester.

Howard H. Spencer of Avery street, who has been spending the winter with relatives and friends in Sarasota, Florida, left there for home last Monday morning by automobile. He is expected to arrive home either on Saturday or Sunday.

Miss Esther Welles and brother, Phillip M. Welles, of this town, are among the young people who will graduate from the South Manchester High school Thursday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Franklyn G. Welles Sr. of Avery street entertained Mrs. Welles' cousin and wife, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Whitehead from Pennsylvania recently.

The Oakland school will close on Friday of this week and they will enjoy a school picnic on the school grounds. Mrs. Louise M. Dart, who has taught this school for several years will retire, and the pupils presented her with a gift of a white gold brooch pin. She is much beloved by all her pupils.

Among the recently added new books of fiction at the Ladd Memorial Public Library are—Cherry Square by Grace Richmond, The Chinese Parrot by Earl Biggers, The Penfold Adventure by Ralph Paine, Professor How Could You, by Harry Wilson, Gallant Lady by Margaret Wildemer, The Way to the West by Emerson Hough, North Star, by Rufus King, The Twisted Foot by William P. ### FLYING TWINS IN PRAGUE

Vienna, June 24.—Mrs. Clarence Chamberlin and Mrs. Charles A. Levine and Senator Lockwood of New York today motored to Prague where they will join the two flyers of the trans-Atlantic Bellanca plane.

Chamberlin and Levine arrived in Prague last night in the midst of a storm, after thousands of Czechoslovakians, who had gathered to welcome them, had gone to their homes believing the flyers were not coming.

Mrs. Levine and Mrs. Chamberlin have postponed their proposed trip to Paris in order to be with their husbands prior to their taking off for Warsaw.

ANIMAL ACTORS MAKE BETTER COMEDIANS

Akka, Syd Chaplin and Ruth Hiatt in two scenes from "The Missing Link." Inset at right—Bimbo, the animal comedian, in "Chang."

By GENE COHN

New York—The hunt for natural comedians carried on by cinema researchers over a period of years, seems to have led right back to the jungle.

In several recent pictures the laughs are "stolen" by animal actors, whose antics have a delightful unpremeditation.

Perhaps the best natural-born comedian to be discovered for the screen is Bimbo, found in the Siamese jungle by Ernest B. Schoedsack while filming "Chang." Bimbo, a Gibbon, had previously acted only for his jungle audience yet he achieves more laughs through his antics than 9 per cent of the comedians.

In Chester Chaplin's latest Warner picture, "The Missing Link," it is Akka, a chimpanzee, who steals the picture. Akka was brought out of Leona, West Africa, about ten years ago and got his first experience in entertaining as a vaudeville actor. His capacity for registering is extraordinary and, but for him, the picture would be flat indeed.

Bimbo was brought out of the forests by Schoedsack who felt, perhaps, that he might be developed into a regular performer. But civilization was not for this latest comic find. With his natural haunts behind his prankings lost much of their originality and it appears that he must behave naturally or not at all.

BRITAIN'S LABORITES AGAINST UNION BILL

Designed to Prevent General Strikes—Country-Wide Demonstrations Planned.

London, June 24.—The Labor party today is making plans to continue its fight against the trades union bill, passed by the House of Commons last night.

Since the Labor Party representation in the House of Lords is small little chance of creating any opposition to the bill there is likely.

The bill was originally designed to prevent general strikes and although it has been considerably amended, labor leaders declare it is a barrier to the progress of the labor movement.

Country-wide demonstration against the bill are being organized for Sunday.

The Daily Herald, labor organ, today attacks the bill and declares it gives evidence of the need for the passage of the pending bill for the reform of the House of Lords.

The conservative Morning Post calls the trades union bill "one of the most useful bills of modern times."

Motorcycle taxicabs are used in several American cities.

Why we sell the DUNLOP TIRE

FOR 39 YEARS Dunlop has been building the world's supreme tire. Dunlops wear longer because Dunlop knows how to build better at each vital point.

Take the hidden carcass beneath the tread. Dunlop owns its own cotton mills for no other purpose than to spin the best long-fibre cotton into the famous cable-twist cord that goes into this carcass.

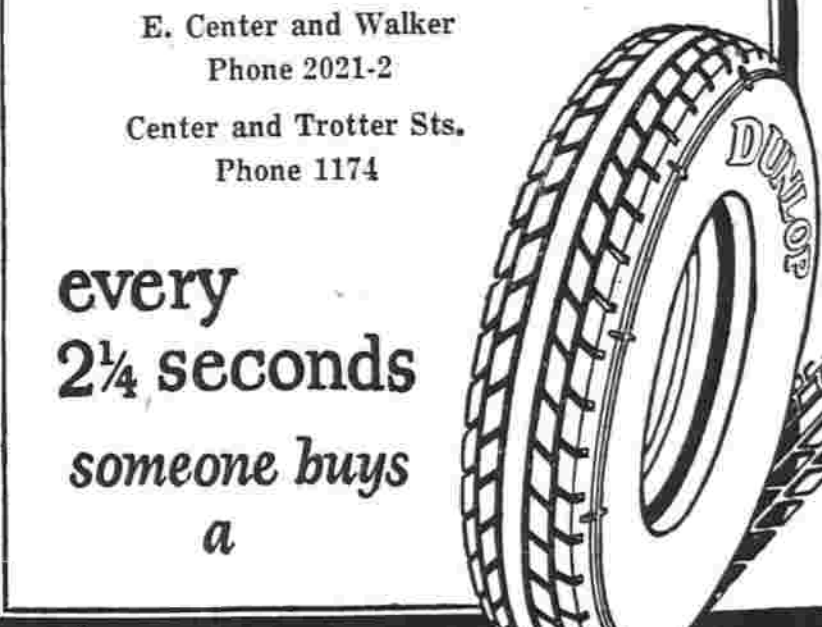

The extra strength in these cords means an added factor of safety against constant load and pounding of roads—longer life and greater mileage.

The extra "stretch" enables the carcass to give under severe blows, and to come back into its original position without internal injury.

The Dunlop tread—the toughest rubber development known—wears slowly and smoothly, making sure that you get out of your Dunlops, all the extra mileage that added care and longer experience have built into them. We recommend that you put Dunlops on your car.

Risks His Life On $25,000 Spree

"Death Valley Scotty" Hits Pay Dirt and Hires Train to Go from Los Angeles to Chicago in 38 Hours.

"Death Valley" Walter Scott

Los Angeles, Calif.—"Death Valley Scotty" is coming down from the mountains once more, a wild gleam in his eyes and an unquenchable desire for an old-time hauler in his breast.

"Death Valley Scotty," otherwise known as Walter Scott, is one of the best of the old school of prospectors.

He lives in the desolate crags up behind the famous Death Valley, where he has a modest ranch that serves as his base of operations. Civilization sees him only at very rare intervals, most of his time is spent on secret prospecting trips through the wilds of eastern California and southwestern Nevada, where, from time to time, he makes a fabulous strike.

At such times he checks off his isolation and heads for the flesh pots of Egypt, which all the west marvels at. This is one of those times.

Scott proposes to travel from Los Angeles to Chicago on a special train in less time than any other train ever covered the distance. He has chartered a Santa Fe train, consisting of locomotive, baggage car, diner and Pullman, and inside the trip he made in exactly 38 hours—25 hours less than the fastest time on record.

The trip will start at 2 p. m. on July 4. At 11 in the morning of July 6 it will reach Chicago, providing that the unpromising speed has not been made to leave the rails and deposit its passengers in another and more distant destination.

Railroad officials didn't want to agree to a 38-hour schedule, but Scotty held out.

"If you wanted me to make the trip as fast as I can," Scotty explained, "there's no point in doing that. It wouldn't be any fun. Why, if I wanted to ride as fast as I can I could ride like a gentleman in one of their regular trains for $100."

This little trip will cost Scotty $25,000. He will ride alone, unless, as he says, "any newspaper reporters are crazy enough to travel with him."

The distance from Los Angeles to Chicago is 2,265 miles. To cover this in 38 hours the train must average 59.6 miles an hour, including stops. This means that most of the runs must be made at a speed of 50 or 100 miles an hour.

Higher. Considering that more than half of the route lies over mountains where the tracks wist and turn dizzily, such a speed is pretty nearly suicidal. But Scotty must have excitement.

"I'm not promoting anything and I'm not trying to sell anything," he says. "I'm going to make this trip just for the fun of it. Living up in the desert, as I do, I have to have a little excitement once in a while."

An Epic Trip

Some 20 years ago Scotty did the same thing. That time he made the run in a little over 44 hours, dipping nearly 24 hours off the regular schedule. That trip has become an epic among old-timers on

SURPRISE AND GOLD FOR PASTOR AND WIFE

S. M. E. Prayer Meeting Turns Into Party on Anniversary of Coopers' Marriage.

Rev. Joseph Cooper wondered last night why such an unusually large number of parishioners had attended his prayer meeting. He found out the reason later when he and Mrs. Cooper were called to the banquet hall where they were presented with a purse of gold on the occasion of their 34th wedding anniversary.

Mr. and Mrs. Cooper were delighted after the meeting and when the lights were flashed on in the banquet hall they found about 150 members of their congregation there. The place was decorated with red and white streamers and each table held bouquets of red roses.

The presentation of the purse and an envelope of money was made by William E. Keith. Mr. Keith welcomed the gathering and expressed the appreciation of the church membership for Mr. Cooper and his wife. He said that they had endeavored themselves to those present and he emphasized their worth to South Manchester.

Mr. Cooper, replying, said that the affair was a complete surprise, both the presentation and the attendance at his prayer meeting. He said it argued well for future meetings and hoped that the attendance would keep up. He said he had never hesitated to believe that he held the affections of his church people and said the affair only showed how dear the people of this town could be to those they loved.

Mrs. Cooper also spoke briefly, expressing thanks for the gift. Personally she had received a handsome electric waffle iron.

Entertainment consisted of vocal solos by Mrs. Eunice Case Hohenbush, Mrs. Bertine Lashinsky and Fred Bendall. Pianoforte solos were given by Miss Grace Adams.

Mr. and Mrs. Cooper became acquainted in England and when Mrs. Cooper's family came to this country, Mr. Cooper followed. She was Miss Edith Ellen Parker. They were married in Worcester, R. I., on June 22, 1893, by Rev. J. T. Docking. They have four children, Mrs. Carl H. Kahlquist of Perth Amboy, N. J.; Mrs. Ralph H. Bailey of Philadelphia, Miss Helen Cooper, who lives at home, and Frank C. Cooper of Boston. They have also three grandchildren, Parker C. Cooper, Marjell Kahlquist and Ralph Cooper Bailey.

The affair was informal and had been planned only during the past few days by a number of interested members of the church.

F. J. GROEHL'S WIFE COMMITS SUICIDE

Groehl Was Counsel For Gerald Chapman, the Bandit, Tried In Hartford.

New York, June 24.—With a bullet through her heart, the body of Mrs. Mae J. Groehl, wife of former Magistrate Frederick J. Groehl, was found in the bedroom of their home here early today. A note of farewell was found nearby.

Groehl, who attained nationwide legal recognition through his defense of Gerald Chapman, the notorious bandit, found his wife's body when he returned from a political dinner. Mrs. Groehl had been in ill health for two years and had threatened to take her own life. A verdict of suicide was returned.

ACTRESS ON STAND.

Los Angeles, Calif., June 24.—A savage cross-examination awaited Dorothy Makaye, emotional actress, as her trial on charges of attempting to hush up circumstances of the death of her husband was taken up today after a one-day adjournment. Miss Makaye's husband, Ray Raymond, musical comedy player, died following a fist fight with Paul Kelly, with whom the actress was said to be intimate.

Testifying on her own behalf, Miss Makaye told of her reconciliation with Raymond just before his death. She denied attempting to "cover up" the fact that he had received a terrific beating from young Kelly.

FORGOT HIS NAME

Topeka, Kan.—"Dear sir: Will you please look up my birth record. I have lost my name and age. I was born in 1902 or 1906 and my name is Clarence George Cox or George Clarence Cox." That is the letter that reached the secretary of vital statistics recently. But Kansas did not register births until 1911, so Cox may never learn his name and age.

Only one stronghold of aristocratic tradition has so far withstood the onslaught of Big Business and builder. That is Park Lane. Here the "die-hard" aristocrat—or plutocrat—is securely entrenched. But already plans have been made to turn the stately Dorchester House—here Ambassador Whitelaw Reid used to entertain the Royalties of Europe—either into a national theater or super offices.

The "City," the business center of London, is inexorable, and Mayfair will be swallowed up.

ABOUT TOWN

All hot water at the School street Recreation Center will be shut off on Monday and Tuesday because of a leak in the pipes which serve the building. The hot water will be available again on Tuesday evening. The shower baths and the swimming pool will be open as usual.

Charles J. Pickett of the Pickett Motor Sales company, has been appointed assistant worker at the Cottage street playgrounds for the summer. Mr. Pickett has had a wide experience in this work.

Nathan Marlow, proprietor of the Twenty-five Cent Store, has been taken to St. Francis hospital suffering with what is believed to be acute appendicitis. The diagnosis of his case has not been made definite.

The Center church and Sunday school will not go back to its regular noontime schedule in September, it has been decided by a vote of Sunday school workers and trustees. The Sunday school sessions, beginning in September, will start at 9:30, in the morning. This will make necessary a change in the starting time of the regular church services and it will be held at 10:45 instead of at 10:30 as heretofore.

Kings Heralds of the South Methodist church will have their annual party at the church tomorrow afternoon at 2:30. The mite boxes are to be brought in at this time and the child having the largest amount will be presented with a gift. All boys and girls of the church between the ages of eight and fourteen who are not already members are invited to join at this time.

Every year in America 45,000,000 pounds of maple sugar are obtained.

SERVICE FIRST, DEAN'S ADVICE TO GRADUATES

the interpretation of a friend, our accomplishments appear greater and our faults less.

"Let us not confine our friends to those with whom we usually associate. Let us have the spirit of universal brotherhood.

"The only way to have a friend is to be one."

"By giving love and happiness away, we can keep them for ourselves. The more we share, the more we possess.

"These thoughts are beautifully expressed by Foss.

"Let me live in a house by the side of a road.

"In behalf of the Class of 1927, I wish to say a few words of sincere thanks and farewell to those who have made our high school education possible.

"Tomorrow we shall enter the broader school of 'life,' which is full of opportunities. The world will be exacting in its demands upon us.

"We can show our appreciation to you only by our future accomplishments. In 'deeds' not in 'words' can we repay you for your generosity and thoughtfulness.

"Members of the Class of 1927, our work here is completed. We shall soon be traveling on our separate journeys through life. We have been given high ideals and excellent training; we cannot fail to succeed. We will either find a path or make one.

"Classmates, whatever our ambitions are, let us remember— 'We can't all be captains, we've got to be crew.'

"There's something for all of us here. There's big work to do and there's lesser to do.

"If you can't be a highway, then just be a trail.

"If you can't be the sun, be a star; It isn't by size that you win or fail— Be the best of whatever you are."

The Boys' Glee club followed the valedictory address rendering very capably McGillis' "Diana" and the famous English hunting song "John Peel."

Howell Cheney, chairman of the school committee, went to the stage immediately after the boys left to present the diplomas to the graduates.

Mr. Cheney said that he had thought Dean Brown's presence and inspiring address would relieve him of his duties in addressing the graduates. But Principal C. P. Quimby had asked Mr. Cheney to deliver a message from the citizens of Manchester to the graduating class.

Mr. Cheney warned the students that they could not like "Lindy," wing their way to fame through the stars of the night. He said fame and success were attained only through hard work.

A different plan of receiving diplomas was followed at last night's exercises. The school orchestra played a procession and the students filed past Mr. Cheney who presented to each graduate a diploma without announcing names.

Tuesday's Herald. The honor pupils of the class were as follows:

- Mary Emma Albani, Ephraim Cole, Dorothy May Gates, Margaret Barbara Hassett, Grace Craig Hood, Marion Harriet Kasulki, Dorothy Anna Krah, Emma May McCormick, Esther Margaret Metcalf, Elin Christine Nielsen, Myra O'Connell, Margaret Alfhild Parson, Dorothy Elizabeth Pentland, Louise Phelps, Gladys Mae Rogers, Helen Frances Stanfield, Esther Sutherland, Elizabeth Margaret Vennard, Steven Day Williams.

DOUBLE FEATURE BILL ON AT STATE THEATER

Western and Society Play on Program Today and Tomorrow.

Two features are offered for the edification of Manchester movie fans by the State theater today and Saturday. In the first Gary Cooper appears in his first starring vehicle, "Arizona Bound," and the program is filled out by Florence Vidor in "A Fraud to Love."

As Katherine Silvertown, the impoverished aristocrat, Miss Vidor deliberately sacrifices the orchid loveliness that has made her renowned and appears as a spinsterish old owl with triple-thickness glasses, dowdy clothes and cross-eyes.

Paradoxically she does this to win the love of Sir Reginald Belzize, whose uncle has just left him a neat fortune on condition that he forewear the charms and lure of one Helen de Semiano, a lady of siren tendencies with whom he is enamored.

Mme. de Semiano is willing that her gentleman friend marry some one else in order to salvage the inheritance, but only a homely bride is acceptable and Katherine Silvertown, in her disguise, appears homely enough to fill the bill.

Complications ensue when it is discovered that the homely spinster is in reality a beautiful and cultured gentlewoman against whom the adventures shows to poor advantage.

Particular interest attaches to the showing of "Arizona Bound," since introduces to the screen a new star in the person of Gary Cooper, elevated to the ranks of Paramount luminaries after a comparatively short term as a member of the organization's famous stock company.

NORTH END PLAYGROUND TO OPEN ON MONDAY

North End Grounds to Be Under Direction of G. H. Washburn—The Rules.

Announcement was made today that the North End Playground will open Monday, June 27. Director G. H. Washburn of the Manchester Community Club will be in charge, assisted by Miss Helen Moriarty. The hours announced for the playground are 10:00 a. m., 11:45 a. m., 1:00 p. m., to 4:45 p. m., 6:00 p. m., until 8:30 in the evening.

The program will include the regular playground activities: games, and story-telling for the small children, organized club work and games for the older girls, organized athletics for the boys according to age, and handwork for all the boys who register for it. In addition there will be horseshoe pitching for boys and girls and in the evening hours the same sport will be devoted to young men and the men who work in the factories during the day. The baseball diamond will be open to teams of boys until the afternoon session closes it will then be devoted to the older young men. All teams must make application for the diamonds for games.

So successful was the special events last year, Director Washburn has decided to set one day aside each week for one of these special events. The present baseball diamond will be regraded and much improved in the next two or three days so that both the out and infield will be in first class shape.

CLASHES IN SHANGHAI
Shanghai, June 24.—Landing troops from foreign warships and Nationalists have clashed at Chinkiang, according to dispatches received here.
Nationalists numbering fifty, under a Chinese officer, raided the Jardine Matheson hulk at Chinkiang on Thursday and fired upon a party from the warships which came to drive them away. The foreign sailors repelled the Chinese without firing, although one foreign officer was slightly wounded by Chinese fire.

The Lowest Rates For Herald Want Ads

are given on orders for SIX DAYS and that is the right order to give to secure the most satisfactory results. Advertising is cumulative in its effect and an ad that is published for six consecutive days has greater result producing power than one published for one, two, or three days and then repeated after a lapse of two or three days.

REMEMBER that when you get results before the six times are up you can stop your ad, by mail or telephone if you wish, and you will be charged ONLY for the actual number of times the ad appeared in the paper, charging at the rate earned.

This is a service arrangement for the benefit of our advertisers.

EXPLODING SHELL MAIMS SMALL BOY... Plaything, Exploding, Takes Part of Hand of Little Frank Deptula.

A shiny copper cartridge was a nice plaything for a while for Frank Deptula, 11, of 11 Kerry street, yesterday afternoon but the plaything will cause him to lose two fingers and a thumb. Frank found the cartridge on the street and took it home. In his yard he proceeded to examine the thing and then decided to open it. He struck a hammer and a nail and started to hammer the nail into the cartridge.

Of a sudden the thing went off in the boy's hand. The bullet went one way and the shell another but the bullet carried with it part of the boy's hand. A piece of copper from the cartridge flew over into the next yard where Bernice Yeworski was playing, striking the little girl on the leg.

Motorcycle Policeman Rudolph Wintala was called and the boy was taken to the Memorial hospital where his fingers and thumb will be amputated. The little girl was not badly hurt.

Life cannot be altogether dull and monotonous so long as one can look forward to the next publicity stunt of Sinclair Lewis.

JOHN GRAHAM FOLLOWS SON IN SUDDEN DEATH

Succumbs to Illness This Morning—Was Well Known Here as a Painter.

John Graham, aged 63, died at his home on 31 Wadsworth street at 9:30 this morning after a lingering illness. The recent sudden death of his son, George, is believed to have had an effect in hastening the termination of the father's life.

Mr. Graham was born in Carlisle, Cumberland County, England on May 16, 1864 and came to this country shortly afterward. He lived at Rockville for many years. He was a resident of Manchester for 27 years and well known here. He had many friends.

He was a member of the General Kitchener Lodge, Sons of St. George in Rockville; Manchester branch of the Knights of Macabees and past president of the Painters' Union here.

Mr. Graham leaves his wife, two sons, Thomas W. and Francis M., two daughters, Mrs. Katherine Smythe and Miss Eleanor Graham, both aged 10, and a friend, Mary Enoch Wilson, of Pawtucket, R. I., a brother, William Graham, of Beacon, N. Y., and several grandchildren. He also is survived by several other brothers and sisters in England.

Funeral arrangements are incomplete but burial will be in the East cemetery.

ODD FELLOWS ELECT OFFICERS TONIGHT

Annual Meeting—Will Attend Church Over North With Rebekahs Sunday.

Kind David Lodge of Odd Fellows will hold its annual election this evening in Odd Fellows' hall, Sunday, the Odd Fellows and Rebekah members, will attend the morning service at North Methodist church.

The Rebekahs will decorate graves in the Buckland cemetery at 7 o'clock on Saturday evening and on Sunday a committee from King David lodge will see to the decoration of the 140 graves in Manchester and immediate vicinity. A blue print of the Center cemetery has been marked so that the graves may be readily found, and this year it has been decided to use potted plants.

CAT NURSES WOLVES... Miller, S. D.—Six baby wolves were found by a farmer who dug out a den on his place. Remembering that the kittens of his house cat had been killed, he took the cubs to the mother cat, who adopted them on the spot and seems just as fond of them as she would be of her own offspring.

VETERAN SALVATION ARMY MEMBER DEAD

Thomas Jackson, One of Corps' Oldest Workers, Succumbs to Lingering Illness.

Thomas Jackson, one of the oldest members of the Salvation Army in this town, died at his home at 50 Winter street at 5:30 this morning following a lingering illness. He was born in Portland, Ireland and had been a resident of Manchester for the past 42 years. He would have been 69 years old next Wednesday.

He is survived by his wife and two children, Albert and Miss Edith Jackson, both of this town. Three grandchildren also survive him. The funeral will be held on Sunday afternoon with a short service at the home at 2 o'clock and a service later at the Citadel. Brigadier Taylor of Hartford, an old time Salvation Army officer, will assist Commandant Abbott in this service.

The bearers are all Salvationists of long standing. They are Thomas Doyle, Thomas Smith, Samuel Fox, Ralph Jones, William McCabe and Samuel Richardson.

BROOKLYN, N. Y. CAR TURNS TURTLE HERE

No One Badly Injured In Accident On Center Street Last Evening.

A Buick car driven by Mrs. Edward Higgins, of Brooklyn, N. Y., turned turtle on Center street last evening about the time of the light shower. In the car besides Mrs. Higgins was her daughter, Elizabeth, aged 10, and a friend, Mary Porter. All three were injured but not seriously. They were taken to the office of Dr. Holmes where they received medical attention. The car was badly damaged.

Mrs. Higgins and party were on their way from Providence to Hartford, and at a point near the Schaller garage the car skidded on the slippery pavement, struck the trolley tracks and turned over. The occupants were all able to return home last evening by train.

GAS BUGGIES—The Love Letter

"DEAR AMY, HECTOR AND I HAVE BEEN THINKING ABOUT YOU AND HEM A GOOD DEAL LATELY, AND IT SEEMS SILLY FOR US GROWN-UP FOLKS TO KEEP ON ACTING LIKE CHILDREN, SO IF YOU WILL FORGIVE ME, SISTER, AND COME AND PAY US A VISIT, WE CAN MAKE UP FOR ALL OUR LOST TIME."

"LISTEN TO THIS PART, IT SOUNDS JUST LIKE IDA. SHE HAD TO GET IN HER DIG. 'IT'S HAD A TIME WITH HECTOR. LIFE HAS BEEN ONE LONG HONEYMOON FOR ME. I HOPE YOU HAVE BEEN HAPPY WITH HEM TOO, AND NOT FOUND LIFE ALL AN UP-HILL BATTLE. YOUR LOVING SISTER, IDA."

"I THINK IT WAS WONDERFUL OF IDA TO WRITE US SUCH A SWEET LETTER. LOOK AT ALL THE NICE THINGS SHE SAID ABOUT YOUR BROTHER, HECTOR, AND HE CERTAINLY WAS NO SAINT WHEN I KNEW HIM. WHERE IS HE THESE ANY DIG? I DON'T SEE IT!"

THE TINYMITES STORY BY MAL COCHRAN - PICTURES BY KNICK

"Oh, tell us 'bout the deep blue sea," said Clowny. "Gee, it seems to me, you ought to thrill us through and through with tales of down below." And tired out Scouty said, "All right, I surely will, but not tonight. It's getting pretty late and so to bed we ought to go."

thrill. They'd never heard a weird tale like the one he told, before. Then, when he told them, "That is all," the Tynmites began to call for him to tell it o'er again. They really wanted more.

Jack's mother, having heard the shot, came running from the house. "Here, mother," he called. "Take Thor away! Go with her, Thor, old fellow. It's all right. Go!" The animal, seeming to understand, let Mrs. Lockwill take him toward the house.

ABOUT TOWN

Invitations have been issued for the wedding of Miss Mary Etta McMenemy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John McMenemy of Marble street, and Walter David Crockett of New Rochelle, N. Y., formerly of Manchester. The ceremony will take place on Saturday, July 2, at 4 p. m., at the home of the bride's parents.

Mrs. J. W. Goslee of Madison street is entertaining the ladies of her bridge club at her Bolton lake cottage today.

Mrs. Oscar Johnson and Mrs. Carl Hultin, head a large committee from the Ladies' Aid society of the Swedish Lutheran church, in charge of arrangements for the sale of Swedish baked foods to begin in the church basement tomorrow afternoon at three and to continue through the evening. Strawberry shortcake and coffee will be served at a reasonable rate. The committee is hoping for a large patronage and ladies of the church are invited to donate food for the sale.

The Swedish Congregational Sunday school will picnic tomorrow at Albin Peterson's in Ellington. The children should report at 1 p. m.

Epworth Leaguers of the North Methodist church will hold their monthly business meeting in the church parlors this evening at 7:45. A social hour with refreshments will follow.

Miss Hazel Ferrell entertained a party of sixteen of her friends at her home on Delmont street last evening. The young people present represented for the most part her former associates in the office of the Lunt-Jillson company and a number from the Keith Furniture company with which Miss Ferrell is now connected. The evening passed pleasantly with music and storytelling. The hostess served a delicious supper of salads, cold meats, strawberry shortcake and other good things which all enjoyed.

Center Congregational church committee and Sunday School working board have voted that in the fall, when the school resumes regular sessions, the Sunday school hour will be changed from 12 to 9:30, bringing the church service at 10:45 instead of 10:30.

REDMEN, HAYMAKERS ELECT NEW OFFICERS

Red Men and Auxiliaries Plan Big Outing at Coventry Later in Summer.

Irving Keeney was chosen last night as sashen to head Minatomoh tribe of Red Men at the annual election of that lodge. Following the meeting of the tribe the Hayloft, auxiliary organization, elected Frank Diana as chief haymaker.

Other officers of the tribe are William J. Leggett, prophet; Fred Warnock, senior sashen; Sherwood Pfan, junior sashen; James J. Foley, keeper of wampum; Joseph Ferguson, Jr., keeper of records; William C. Scheldge, collector of wampum.

Other officers of the Hayloft are Walter Montie, assistant haymaker; Joseph Coffel, past chief; George L. A. Bailey, overseer; William J. Leggett, boss driver; Francis Tournaud, hornblower; John Wilson, guard of hayloft; Harry Gustafson, guard of barndoor; Irving Keeney, collector of straws; Joseph Ferguson, Jr., keeper of bundles; Walter Gustafson, assistant collector of straws.

Delegates to the state convention of Haymakers in Middletown on September 3 are Joseph Coffel and Anthony Tournaud with Walter Gustafson and James Foley as alternates. A committee was appointed to arrange for an outing to be held in Coventry in August. The personnel of the committee follows: Joseph Barton, chairman; William Leggett, James J. Foley, Joseph Coffel, Frank Diana, George Bailey, Sherwood Pfan, George Wilson, Francis Tournaud, Claude Truax and Joseph O'Brien. The outing is for Red Men, their wives and members of visiting tribes.
